VOYAGING IN MANY SEAS

Yarns of a Knox County Mariner Spun at His Own Quaint Fireside.

craft, but certainly it was not so far as one of my friends thought it, when he asked if it would take time to make the voyage, and if I did not dread Cape Horn!

All Fools day, 1878, the cargo began to come down the wharf and was quickly disposed of by the stevedores employed for that purpose. The cargo was various, consisting of case oil, corn in bags, hay, tobacco in casks, beans, hams, large quantities of perfume, chiefly "Florida water," besides many other things below deck, and a small deckload of lumber. In a few days it was on board and properly secured and the vessel towed through Hell Gate and went to sea by the way of Long Island Sound. A strong breeze was blowing from the northwest. When once clear of the land our course was set so that all sails would draw well, and the favoring gales drove us on our way with more than ordinary speed. This, continuing for five days, ended at last by the wind hauling to the northeast, giving us a heavy storm, which broke up our deckload and swept the deck of many moveable things, but did little damage otherwise. The rest of the passage was pleasant and in nowise remarkable.

As the welcome islands arose out of a wilderness of waters they were greeted, if not as a new world, at least as a wonderful creation of divine will. Making our way towards Gran Canaria, the most important of the group, as it affords better anchorage than any of the other islands, we were greatly surprised, being over seventy miles away, to see the grand mountains of Tenerife, which rises over 12,000 feet above the sea.

Its top was covered by the ever-passing clouds; but the more we approached, the more the clouds lifted from the peak, and with feelings of awe we beheld in all its sublime grandeur and grandeur the lofty rock-aria, the most important of the group, as it affords better anchorage than any of the other islands, we were greatly surprised, being over seventy miles away, to see the grand mountains of Tenerife, which rises over 12,000 feet above the sea.

lea, stopping at this place for water and supplies of fruit before their final embarkment for unexplored America. Though not as noted as when they were the outer boundary of the known world, the islands still remain famous as historical reminders of the past. Then the population of this island was but a few hundred. Now the Palm City alone numbers 18,000 and the whole island over 40,000 inhabitants. This island is the headquarters of the group and contains the capital, court house and many other public buildings.

In May of every year the law courts are held, when laws are enacted for each island, which has its governor and other officers; but unlike most countries some of the islands are not troubled with custom house or officers. Everything is said to go free; but if they support no schools, customs, or manage by post and internal revenue collectors to add a large sum to the first value of all articles they import. My little girl was with me on this voyage and she, like me, asked many questions as to what we should see, about the people and many other things. When she was told that they had camels there she wanted to buy her one. After being told that there was no place to keep a camel on board, she enlisted the good offices of the first mate, who agreed to keep in his room for her until we got back to New York. She all the time imagining a camel to be not larger than a small dog. A few days after our arrival at New York, we went on shore one morning, and a train of camels had just come down from the mountains, each laden with two small casks of water strapped to their backs. Some were lying down to be unloaded, some standing about gazing with their sorrowful looking eyes at the crowd, all chewing a big wad of hay. Most of them had their hair worn off in spots and in other places graying with their sorrowful looking eyes at the crowd, all chewing a big wad of hay.

As our anchor splashed in the water a short distance from the shore and we had time to think where we were—that the African coast was but a hundred miles away and Cape Bojador, upon which Capt. James Riley was wrecked and from which came he and his crew traveled across the burning sands of the great Sahara, suffering untold tortures inflicted by their cruel captors, and from which he still traversed by Arabs and scourged by the fierce Bedouins—we could hardly believe so short a time could suffice to carry us thus to the extreme limits of civilization, and that we were so near the wild, untamed Arabs of the desert.

The earliest authentic account of the discovery of these islands was made by De Bethencourt, a Norman, about the year 1400. They were purchased from his descendants and annexed to Spain some eighty years after. When first discovered they were called the Fortunate Islands, on account of the delightful weather and splendid climate which seemed perpetual. This island was thickly covered with palms and for that reason to this capital city was given the name Las Palmas, or Palm City. Looking back over space we find that in 1492 Columbus sailed from the little port of Palos in Spain, directing his course for this island, which then lay on the frontier of the known world. Here he encountered the unequal contest till night overtook them, when he drew off in a crippled condition and reached England in safety. He next, in company with Newport and Goncalves, sailed for America.

A foul breath is one of the greatest afflictions that a man or woman can have. An affliction not only to themselves, but to those with whom they come in contact. A foul breath is a great discourager of affection. It would probably be more so if people only realized just what a bad breath means. A foul breath is one of the symptoms of constipation. Some of the symptoms of constipation are, loss of appetite, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, heartburn, indigestion, flatulence, and a general feeling of uneasiness. They lead to dyspepsia and worse things. They all start with constipation. Constipation is a curable disease, and it can be cured—easily, quickly and permanently. They give to nature just the little help that she needs to get rid of her waste. Pleasant laxative, "Bile Beans," or any of the best of the night-mare breeding brood, that these little "Bile Beans" will not cure. Send 25 cents in one-cent stamps to World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. ### PLAYS AND PLAYERS

The Coming Season Will Be a Notable One In Theatrical Circles—New Plays.

George C. Tyler, the executive head of the theatrical firm of Liebler & Co., has completed an arrangement with Marion Crawford to write a play for Viola Allen to be produced in New York in the fall of next year. Mr. Tyler went to Europe three weeks ago and met Miss Allen and her mother, Mrs. C. Leslie Allen, in London. These ladies accompanied Mr. Tyler to Mr. Crawford's home, Santagnello, Sorrento, near Naples, Italy, where the deal was completed on Monday. Mr. Tyler had been in correspondence with Mr. Crawford for some months in reference to this matter, and went to Europe expressly to consummate the contract.

The play will probably be called "In Old Madrid." The locale of the story will be in this Spanish city, time 1570. The drama will be founded on a new story by Mr. Crawford, the publication of which will be begun in serial form in Macmillan's magazine in London next January. At the same time it will be printed in a prominent magazine in this country.

This arrangement will result in substantial benefit to both Mr. Crawford and Miss Allen, the story creating pre-eminence in the coming play, the announcement of its production in the dramatic form also attracting special attention to the story. Mr. Crawford was very anxious to meet Miss Allen that he might have the opportunity to talk with her and to discuss her personality as an aid to him in the creation of the heroine of the story and the dramatic character into which this personage will be subsequently changed. This is the first instance where a story has been written with a personality of an actress in mind by the author, with a view to its subsequent production in dramatic form.

Robert Drouet will be the John Storm in support of Viola Allen in "The Christian." and her father, C. Leslie Allen, will play Archdeacon Wealthy.

James M. Colville will play John Storm in the special "The Christian" the company in which Edith Ellisler will appear as "Gloria Quayle." This company will appear in season in Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 11th.

James O'Neill in "The Musketeers" will open his season at Trenton, N. J., Sept. 15. Mr. O'Neill's support will include Maude Odell as "Miliadi," Nora O'Brien as the Queen, Edmund Brees as Richelieu, Edige Forrester as Rochefort, J. W. Bankson as the King, Gertrude Bennett as Constance, Jacques Kruger as Benedicux, George Johnson as Buckingham, Mark Ellsworth as Aramis, Jefferson Lloyd as Athos and John W. Thompson as Porthos.

Liebler & Co. will have five attractions under its directing next season—the two "The Christian" companies, "The Children of the Ghetto," James O'Neill in "The Musketeers," and James A. Herne's new play, "Sag Harbor Folk." The company presenting "The Christian" headed by Viola Allen will play only in the principal cities. The special company in which Edith Ellisler plays "Gloria Quayle" will cover the territory not visited by Miss Allen as far west as San Francisco.

Viola Allen's company presenting "The Christian" next season will have an entirely new set of scenery, even more elaborate than the equipment of the original production. Miss Allen opens her second season in "The Christian" on Sept. 4 at Syracuse. On Sept. 10 she begins a six weeks' run at Powers' theatre in Chicago, following the same engagement by appearances in Detroit, St. Louis, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

Israel Zangwill, the author of "Children of the Ghetto," which will be first presented in Washington at the National theatre, Sept. 18, sailed for America last Saturday. He returns to the stage on August 21 under the direction of James A. Herne, the well known actor and author of "Shore Acres" and other plays. Mr. Zangwill will spend two weeks as Mr. Herne's guest at his summer home, Heine's Oaks, Southampton, Long Island, during which time they will arrange the new piece together, arranging the "business" of the characters and developing the effects.

M. Zangwill, the brother of Israel Zangwill, a London artist of wide repute, has sent to Liebler & Co. sketches of the principal characters and scenes in "Children of the Ghetto," which will be one of the leading productions of the coming theatrical season. These sketches have attracted not a little attention among New York artists. They were made from original types in the Ghetto of London.

Blanche Bates, who will impersonate the principal heroine of "The Children of the Ghetto," is now playing with the Frawley company in San Francisco, where she has greatly added to her reputation as an actress by hits in several productions. Miss Bates is destined to become a leader of the American stage.

James A. Herne is at work on a new play to be called "Sag Harbor Folk," which will be produced by Liebler & Co. in November. In this effort Mr. Herne will introduce a new type to the stage—the shore folk of Long Island. All the scenes will be laid in Sag Harbor, Long Island, once famous as one of the three great whaling centers of the country—New Bedford, Nantucket and Sag Harbor.

Viola Allen will return to America the latter part of August. She sailed for Europe June 21 and since then she has been in London, Paris, Naples and Rome, spending two weeks in the mountains of Switzerland before she returns to America.

A ROCKLAND GIRL'S ROMANCE

She Married a San Domingo Don and Sorrow Followed It.

Many of The Courier-Gazette readers will recall a romantic episode that furnished food for local society gossip back in the seventies. There lived in Rockland at that time the family of a well-known pedagogue, who were prominent in the social life of our city. The family consisted of the mother (since deceased) and two daughters.

One day the town became deeply interested in the arrival here of a large, distinguished looking gentleman of foreign appearance. Horan by name, a native of the island of San Domingo. He was known in New York business circles, possessed wealth, was of good address and created no small sensation here. There was a Rockland man who had known Senor Horan in San Domingo, and esteeming him greatly and knowing of his desire to carry home an American wife, introduced him to the elder of these girls. Senor Horan's plans were quickly disclosed. He declared himself, was accepted, and the town rang with news of hasty wedding arrangements. The little house on Park street became the scene of a merry bridal—adeum were hastily said to old friends and the bride was whisked rapidly away to her new—and strange—San Domingo home. To the sober and prosaic people of Rockland, the dazzling movement of the incident, the stories of the stranger's fabulous wealth, made a stirring page out of romance.

Inducted into her foreign home the Rockland girl speedily fell upon strange experiences. The father of her husband appeared to be a precious old rascal, with the husband under his thumb and a determined purpose that the American wife should receive none of the wealth of the family, which he destined for Senor Horan's son by a former wife. The life of the stranger was made very unhappy—it even appeared that an attempt was made to poison her. Alone, surrounded by plotters, her very existence menaced, the young wife, whom her husband, now seldom saw, fell into a terror. At this juncture she was befriended by a good padre, who enlisted himself in the cause of the wronged American lady, and was able to make life for her at least a little more endurable. Finally she made her escape from San Domingo and returned to her Rockland home. Afterwards she went to California, where she now lives.

This hasty recollection of an episode whose details were familiarly known to our people a quarter of a century ago, is prompted by the perusal of a book recently issued by Lamson, Wolfe & Co., in which the romantic adventures of the Rockland girl are set forth in a very entertaining story. The book is entitled, "Don Luis' Wife, a Romance of the West Indies, From Her Letters, and the Manuscripts of the Padre," the Doctor Caccavelli, Marc Aurele, Curate of Samana." The author is Lillian Hinman Shuey, a Californian author and poetess of considerable reputation. The narrative is very cleverly told. A certain amount of license has been taken with the story of the Rockland bride, to bring the tale into proper context and preserve its dramatic interest.

"The story," says the author in the preface, "contains the true account of the experience and adventures of a New England girl as the wife of a gentleman of fortune on the island of San Domingo. It illustrates some of the intricacies that entangle the fate of an American woman who marries a foreigner, especially one of rank and fortune, and introduces to public attention several persons from actual life, whose noble qualities I have in no way overrated."

The end of Horan as set forth in the book is a poetical refinement of what were actually the facts. On his wife's return to this country her friends took steps to assert her rights. Horan put all his property into the hands of a business house in New York, to which she soon afterwards made a visit. The late A. S. Rice of this city, who was attorney in the case, had prepared for an emergency of this sort, and promptly on Horan's landing upon the shore he was laid under arrest and taken to prison. There in his cell he suddenly died. So effectually had he put his property into the hands of the New York parties that not a cent of it ever was recovered for the benefit of his wife or anybody else.

We think Rockland people will be much interested in a perusal of "Don Luis' Wife." It is a prettily printed book, in which, we fancy, the heroine of its romance has some financial rights of proprietorship. It can be had at the book stores.

The Courier-Gazette goes regularly into a larger number of families in Knox County than any other paper printed.

IN A CORNER OF THE LIBRARY

Madame Darmesteter's recent essay on "The Social Novel in France" will be found in full in the Living Age for Aug. 5.

Bret Harte has written a new story which he calls "The Belle of Canada City." It will not appear before next Christmas.

Seumas Mac Manus, W. A. Fraser, Ray Stannard Baker, and three new writers contribute short stories to McClure's Magazine for August, a mid-summer fiction number with a special cover by Will H. Low and an abundance of fine pictures.

An interesting sketch of the late Robert Bonner, the New York millionaire publisher and philanthropist, is contributed to the Review of Reviews for August by E. J. Edwards. Mr. Bonner built up the Ledger by unusual methods of advertising, one of which was the payment of large sums to distinguished writers for contributions. "Richly illustrated" barely describes the August Cosmopolitan, there being in that great number one hundred and forty-six different illustrations of all sorts and sizes, and of a high degree of commonplace or uninteresting. The literary features of the magazine vie with the pictorial, the whole forming a most attractive magazine for summer reading.

The famous lighthouse on Minot's Ledge, off Cohasset, Mass., is the subject of the frontispiece of the August St. Nicholas, and of a brief description and historical sketch by Gustave Kolbe. In "Colored Suns," Dorothy Leonard tells of others than our blue suns, and red ones, and ones that bathe their planets in lights that would make a visiting stranger from this world feel very strange indeed.

Mrs. Stowe wrote her famous novel, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in the midst of domestic cares and duties. She often prepared her manuscript in her lap, sitting in the kitchen, children clinging to her skirts and crying vociferously.

The Letters of Capt. Dreyfus, written to his wife during his captivity are to be published immediately. It is said that they furnish absolute proof, if proof were needed, that Dreyfus is innocent. No guilty man could possibly have written them. Their second and greater value is that they let us see deep into the soul of a brave man, one of the bravest men that ever lived. Of these letters Zola writes: "They will stand like an imperishable monument when the works of our writers shall have passed away to oblivion."

What is the standard marvel of literature? There are some authors, we are sure, who would answer, "The fact that I am not properly appreciated." According to Sir George Trevelyan, the marvel is the fact that Carlyle should have written "Frederick the Great," a work that was a perfect treasury of delight and interest to multitudes of readers, and that, during the ten years he was writing it, he should have spoken of it as a terrible and trying task. As a rule Trevelyan holds that men are not drawn to literature from a close calculation of the world's chances; seldom from vanity; never from the advice and exhortation that they received from those who are their seniors in the work. It is the real genuine love of the calling, the pleasure that the artist feels in the pursuit of his art—a pleasure that in later life begins to fade and dim, but which in the early efforts of men and women in literature can always be relied upon.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

Here is printed the old poems that have delighted the world for generations; and those of modern times that seem worth preserving.

Our Burden Bearer.

The little sharp vexations
And the bruis that vexen, and fret,
Why not take all to the Helper
And let him bear the burden?
Tell him the longings, too,
Tell him the labored pulses,
When we scarce know what to do.
With the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden,
And carry away the song.
—Phillips Brooks.

Referring to the Harrison campaign song the words of which were quoted in our recent sketch of Nath'l Jones, the music is well-remembered by James Wright, who was 10 years old at the time the song was in vogue. Mr. Wright also recalls other campaign songs of the Henry Clay and other campaigns.

Two of the famous seven Sutherland sisters are at Donahue's store demonstrating the efficiency of the hair tonic which has made them so famous. The tonic is in every household in the land. All day yesterday their long and beautiful hair was admired by many ladies, and it is safe to say that on the whole of many a household there stands a bottle of the hair tonic or some of the other preparations the "Sisters" are representing. The "Sisters" will remain at Donahue's for two weeks and will gladly answer any questions.

The coroner's inquest in the case of the late Clement R. Sherwood was held Friday and occupied most of the day. The witnesses examined were M. A. Johnson, Mabel Rankine, H. O. Gurdy, Mrs. M. P. Judkins and Albert Woodside, and the facts brought out were substantially as given at length in the issue of The Courier-Gazette following Mr. Sherwood's death. The testimony of the physicians who performed the autopsy was to the effect that the heart, liver and lungs of the deceased were in perfect condition and death could not have been caused from any action of those organs. The report of Prof. Robinson, the chemist, to the effect that cyanide of potassium was found in the stomach left only that careful deliberation the jury made this report: "That the said Clement R. Sherwood came to his death about the hour of noon of Saturday, July 22, 1899, at his home, No. 41, North Main street, in this city of Rockland, from the effects of a dose of cyanide of potassium, administered by his own hand, whether with suicidal intent or otherwise, is unable to determine."

This report is signed by Coroner Judkins and the members of the jury: C. M. Walker, foreman; A. J. Hall, J. G. Piper, L. B. Koon, A. H. Newbert and Asa P. St. Clair. Frank B. Miller was clerk at the inquest and took down the testimony in long hand with an accuracy and rapidity which comes of his experience as a newspaper writer.

Often a headache will not yield to favorite remedies which cure them for others. This is because the cause is not the one supposed. Defective Vision causes more headaches than any other cause. Nine ailments in ten come from abuse of the nervous system by imperfect eyes or other defects of the eyes. The base ball excursion to Belfast last Friday was participated in by about 80 people, and was a pleasant and enjoyable trip in every respect. The steamer Castine, which took the party, was advertised to leave at noon, but much to the chagrin of the management and annoyance of the excursionists, the boat did not arrive until 1.30 p. m., having made another excursion to Castine meanwhile. The trip was the way was a magnificent one and there were just enough people aboard to make it comfortable and convenient all around. The excursion arrived about 4.15 and there was a grand rush for the ball ground, where an announcement of the delay had previously been made. While the game did not result to the satisfaction of the loyal Rocklanders, it was a fine exhibition of base ball and none begrudged traveling so far to see it. The Castine left for Rockland at 7.30 arriving here in good season.

The Jere McAuliffe Stock Co. will open Farwell opera house Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week producing the following plays: On Monday evening, Man o' War; Tuesday evening, Southern Chimes; Wednesday evening, Escaped from Sing Sing. Jere McAuliffe is too well known to our people to need any introduction. His good work for a number of years as leading supporter to Thomas E. Shea is remembered with delight. On this visit he will be supported by a company of artists who should give pleasure to crowded houses each evening. Shea and McAuliffe have made the play Man o' War most famous all over the country, in fact the play was written especially for this company. It is a strong drama, full of action and exciting incidents with superior mechanism, and the house will be furnished by the Farwell opera house orchestra, Prof. D. W. Clark, leader. Tickets will go on sale at the box office on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. The house has been thoroughly renovated, electric lights have been put in throughout the house, including the stage and the interior has been painted in the latest and most improved style. The house will be much appreciated by the many patrons of the house.

HE HAD A GOOD PLACE.

Jimmie's Mother Thought Her Sailor Son Had Gone to Work for a Minister.

"One of the nicest, most motherly old ladies I meet in my rounds," remarked a traveling man who sells goods through the southern states, "is at the same time one of the most ignorant of everything except how to get up a good deal of vittuals and give a tired drummer a comfortable bed and clean sheets to sleep in. She has been running a little tavern in a Maryland town for 40 years, I suppose, and hasn't been five miles from home since she was a girl. Her only son, a chap of about 28, on the contrary, has not been within five miles of home for longer than six months in the last 20 years. However, he keeps her posted as to his wheeled abouts, and in all his wanderings he does not forget her. When last heard from he had got some kind of a position on board the United States revenue cutter McCulloch, the vessel that was Dewey's dispatch boat at Manila, and is at present doing duty between California and the Behring sea. About a week or ten days ago I took dinner at her place, and a fine country dinner it was, too, and I asked her about her boy."

"Oh," she responded with a smile that would make anybody glad to have her for a mother, "Jimmie is doing so well now. He don't always get into the best places, and I am afraid that sometimes he gets into real bad ones, but he is turning over a new leaf, I guess, for he has gone to work with a preacher. He didn't mention what denomination he was, but that don't make any difference, so long as Jimmie just works for him."

"I'm glad to hear it," I said. "Who is the preacher?"

"I don't know, except that his name is Rev. Cutter McCulloch. I'll show you Jimmie's letter."

"She did so, and there I read briefly, as might be expected: 'I am now with the Rev. Cutter McCulloch and doing well, and I smiled softly to myself, but I never said a word to Jimmie's mother.'"

WOMAN'S SPHERE.

An Incident of the Days of Anti-Slavery Agitation in Connecticut.

During the days of the anti-slavery agitation the women took a rather prominent part in the work. Once, after Abbey Kelly, the talented young Quakeress, had spoken publicly at Torrington, Conn., a local minister denounced her as a "Jezebel," and called a meeting in the town hall to protest against the outrage on public decency. The Listener tells what happened as follows:

A large crowd attended, the women filling one side of the hall, facing their lords and masters, who were marshaled on the other side. The minister read the chapter of St. Paul which applies to the subject, laying especial stress on the text: "Wives, obey your husbands." Then he declaimed long and loudly on the proper sphere of women, and denounced all those who departed from it to obtain education, which were not adapted to their modest duties in life, or to become public teachers or speakers. He had just finished his discourse, having clinched it with a final rhetorical flourish about woman's sphere, when suddenly the floor timbers on the women's side of the house gave way, and every woman and girl was dropped into the cellar. And there, from amidst the tangle of bruised women and rotten timbers, an elderly woman's voice was heard rising: "Well! I hope we've reached our proper sphere now! I understand that Torrington is a stronghold of advanced views on the subject of woman's education to this day. Such is the irony of fate."

ONE ON THE MERCHANT.

How It Came That the Value of His Stock Was Subject to Fluctuations.

One of the lawyers says that a client of his is the hero of this story and that it happened here within a year or two. A man from the assessors' office went into the store of a Hebrew merchant in the pursuit of his duties. The two had a slight acquaintance, so that the assessor's assistant did not think it necessary to explain his business. He was rather surprised when, in answer to his questions, the storekeeper proceeded to dilate on the value of his stock. "De finest in any store of de size in de city. It isn't 'vort a cent less than $5,000."

"Suppose I put it down at that then," said the assessors' man.

"No, no," said the proprietor. "You've got to put it down at $5,000."

So the assessors' man did it. There was lamentation in the store when the tax bill showed the proprietor that he was taxed on $5,000 personal, and he rushed over to the assessors' office with all possible speed.

"Vat iss dis? Vat iss dis?" he asked them, excitedly. "I have no personal but de stock in my store. I'm a liar if I vort $500. Come down and look it over."

They told him that the records showed that he had given the figure to the assistant assessor.

His hands went up over his head in horror. "My goodness, my goodness!" he shouted. "Vas dat your man? I thought he was from Bradstreet's."

This Design Combines Comfort and Beauty in a Marked Degree.
[Copyright, 1898, by George Palliser, 32 Park place, New York.]

"It was the greatest mistake of my life." "This we may all say at least once in our busy lives, and very often that same mistake was that the person had built a house and was afraid to impress his views on the architect as to the conveniences of his building, suited to the special requirements of his family. He has merely left the architect to his own devices, and possibly left his entire building in the hands of some indiscriminate architect, who has built it regardless of cost to the owner and has rushed it through in any old way, making as few detailed plans as possible and thus causing it to be improper and faulty in construction. This architect has captured his client through some advertisement that appeared in a fascinating manner in some local paper, and has undoubtedly stolen from some architect of repute who drew up the plans and elevations for his own use.

Therefore if you are contemplating building, study a book of plans over very carefully, consider your family in every possible way, your furniture, and, above all, the proposed site of your home, and endeavor to build the exterior of your house so that it will blend with the architecture of nature. By a little careful study in this direction you may be able to construct a home whose very first appearance will suggest coziness and comfort. How often you see a house that is located in a most charming locality, yet is greatly lacking in something—something that the uninitiated fail to comprehend, but with a practiced eye the effect is easily noticed! Especially is this the case where architects have a client who has received plans, etc., from a distance through the agency of the mails. Where this is the case care and attention should always be given to a minute description of the surrounding country and natural climatic conditions and whether a wooded or stony country. By a competent architect all these things would be carefully weighed, and he could plan a structure so that it would harmonize with the natural characteristics of that particular locality.

The building that we hereby illustrate is one of our many designs that are planned for the comfort and convenience of the occupants, the first floor consisting of parlor, dining room and library, with a large kitchen and butler's and kitchen pantries. The library and dining room each contain a large Roman brick fireplace. A large front hall, with vestibule, is also a good feature. House on first floor is partly surrounded by a spacious veranda. On the second floor we have six large, roomy chambers and bathroom. Every room is so constructed as to have one large closet. In the attic are finished two large rooms for the use of the servants, and there is another large unfinished room for use as a storeroom. In this building we have con- sidered to utilize all possible room, combining comfort and symmetry in design, and altogether it is a building that any man would be proud of as the owner or as occupant. It is also a house that is well adapted to many localities. It can be erected for $4,000, including everything complete.

Cement Mortars.

The market is today flooded with a hundred different brands and varieties of cement mortars, many of which are most excellent, particularly those made from the natural cements of South Dakota, although if strictly first class new lime can be secured and clean sharp sand, with the best quality of standard bull's hair, using a half to three-fifths of a bushel to a barrel of lime, very good results can be obtained.

JOHN BLETHEN DEAD

Prominent in Knox County Granite Circles for Many Years.

The people of this section received another severe shock yesterday afternoon, when news was received that John Blethen had died suddenly at the home of a friend in Thomaston. The fact that he had been ill at all was known only to a few of his business associates, who did not gather from the report that the sickness was of a dangerous character.

About noon, Sunday, Mr. Blethen, who was the guest of Henry Walter of Thomaston, complained of not feeling well, and Dr. J. E. Walker was summoned, who pronounced it a case of indigestion. Dr. Walker was summoned twice more during the day and evening, but when he finally took his departure he left his patient feeling quite comfortable, and apparently on a rapid rally from his attack.

Yesterday, about noon, Miss Walter, who was in the sick room attending to Mr. Blethen's wants, heard him gasp heavily, as if for breath, and saw him fall forward on his side. Considerably alarmed, she immediately gave an alarm and Dr. Walker was again summoned. He found Mr. Blethen dead, and unhesitatingly pronounced heart disease the cause, that trouble having become known to him while treating Mr. Blethen for indigestion.

Mr. Blethen was one of the most prominent figures in Knox county granite circles, and was everywhere noted for his straightforwardness in business transactions and his many deeds of benevolence. He was born at Frankfort in 1843 and came to Rockland at the age of 17. He followed the sea for a short time and then learned the stone-cutter's trade at Spruce Head. He became head cutter, and in 1873, two years after the Bodwell Granite Co. was organized, he became superintendent, succeeding Joseph Emery.

The proficiency which he had displayed in his work and the care with which he attended to the minutest detail were among the attributes which had attracted the attention of the Bodwell Granite Co. directors, and were responsible for his promotion. How truly they indicated Mr. Blethen's character, can best be told by those who have been associated with him in the last 26 years. He had to do with many of the public buildings which were "cut" by the Bodwell Granite Co. and a complaint which pointed in his direction was an unknown circumstance. He was faithful in the performance of every duty, and made a thoroughly reliable superintendent, respected alike by his employers and the men who served under his direction.

The quarries under his charge were those situated on this side of the water at Spruce Head, and at Willard's Point. He was also in charge of the Clark Island quarries for a number of years; and was a director of the Bodwell Granite Co., where he displayed the same business capacity and shrewdness that he had as superintendent.

He was interested in a number of other business enterprises among them being the Livingston Manufacturing Co., of which he was president at the time of his death.

In public affairs he was equally prominent, although had it been possible to have avoided being conspicuous his modest and unassuming nature would readily have led him to seize the opportunity. He had been a member of the Methodist church in this city for a number of years, and was a member of the board of trustees at his death. He was also vice president of the Y. M. C. A., where he had served as director for many years. He was a liberal contributor to both institutions.

"I know of no one in Knox county who would be missed more than he," said G. M. Brainerd of the Bodwell Granite Co. yesterday. "He took a deep interest in religious and charitable matters and in the course of his noble and generous career gave freely to those institutions which had for their object the elevation of the human race. He will be universally missed."

And the public at large will echo this sentiment. They knew Mr. Blethen for a large-hearted, whole-souled man, and have not waited for the granite monument to mark his final resting place before paying the tribute which his many virtues so justly deserve.

Mr. Blethen married Mary Durgin, who died several years ago. Their only child, G. H. Blethen, who is now superintendent of the Clark Island granite works, survives, and to him in full measure the sympathy of countless friends is extended. The funeral will occur at 2 p. m., Wednesday from the residence of the deceased on Holmes street.

FALES WRITES FROM HUB.

He Relates News of Special Interest to Knox County People.

Boston, July 29, 1899.
Governor Wolcott has nominated Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes to succeed the late Walbridge A. Field, as chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts. Judge Holmes, son of the poet, whose name he bears, is 68 years of age and a graduate of Harvard College, class of '61. He is a veteran of the Civil War, having served until 1863, when, on account of wounds, he was mustered out having attained to the rank of brevet colonel, United States Volunteers.

Edward Carleton and Wallace Edgerton left here Tuesday for Thomaston. They will drive over the road and expect to make the journey in five days.

Miss Annie Snow and Miss Alice Burleigh were in town for a few days last week, leaving Monday for the White Mountains, where they will spend the summer.

Quite a number of city people are spending their vacation in Maine. Among them are the following: Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Drew, Mrs. P. N. Carleton, Mrs. Fred Healey, Mrs. H. D. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Piper, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Arey, Mrs. Clarence Thomas, Miss Katie Fales and Mont Pillsbury.

The largest cargo of coal ever brought to this port by a schooner is now on the way here in the big five-master, John B. Prescott, which was built at Camden last year. When the vessel left Baltimore she was drawing 25 feet of water and had 4,515 tons of coal in her hold. This immense cargo was loaded in twelve hours.

Marine

Matters.

The Italian bark Baltimore towed to Portland, Friday, to load lumber for South America.

The biggest cargo of coal ever brought to Bangor by a schooner is now on the way from Baltimore in the big five-master John B. Prescott. She left Baltimore Tuesday with 4,515 tons of coal. When the vessel left port, she was drawing 25 feet of water forward, and 25.6 feet aft.

This cargo equals that of the largest sailing ships, and is equal to the capacity of the average steamer. It was loaded in 12 hours. The Prescott was launched Jan. 12, at Camden, and is the largest five-master schooner afloat.

Capt. J. E. Creighton of schooner Susie M. Plummer was the first skipper to be examined and receive a license as master of a sailing vessel from the United States inspector of steam vessels at New Orleans under the new law. Capt. Creighton passed all the requirements of the government.

Sch. Harvest Home is at Cobb, Butler & Co's yard for new foremast.

Sch. George Perry arrived Monday from the Port Clyde railway, where she has been undergoing repairs, and is loading for New York from A. F. Crockett Co.

FAMILY REUNIONS.

The Parsons and Crawford families will hold their annual reunions at Cutting's grove, Warren, Thursday, Aug. 10.

The annual reunion of the Starrett family will be held Aug. 17 at Reunion Grove Farm in Warren. I. P. Starrett of Warren is the secretary.

The Tolman reunion is to be held at E. E. Ulmer's grove, Rankin street, Aug. 23, and a movement is on foot to have the Ulmers meet there the day following the Tolman reunion and organize an association. The Ulmers and family connections are therefore requested to attend a meeting Thursday, Aug. 24 or the first fair day following for that purpose.

SUMMER CATARRH

Catarrh of the bowels, because it is most prevalent in the summer months, is called summer catarrh.

It surprises many that bowels trouble is catarrhal. Dr. Hartman's books make this plain.

Write to the Pe-r-u-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for them. They tell all about catarrh and how Pe-r-u-na cures it wherever located.

"I had chronic diarrhoea for fifteen years," writes Mr. T. E. Miller, Grand Prairie, Tex. "I tried many medicines and doctors in vain. At last Pe-r-u-na was recommended, and it relieved and cured me at once."

Mr. John Harting, 633 Main St., Cincinnati, O., writes: "My wife and myself took your Pe-r-u-na for chronic diarrhoea and it cured us. No doctor or medicine was tried before helped us."

Mr. Edward Wormack, Ledbetter, Tex., writes: "Pe-r-u-na for bowels troubles is unequalled by anything in my experience. I owe my life to Pe-r-u-na, and shall always recommend it to those suffering as I was."

Mr. John Edgarton, 1020 Third Ave., Altoona, Pa., says: "I suffered from dysentery for three years. I took Pe-r-u-na and am now well."

Remember that cholera morbus, cholera infantum, summer complaint, bilious colic, diarrhoea and dysentery are each and all catarrh of the bowels. Catarrh is the only correct name for these affections. Pe-r-u-na is an absolute specific for these ailments, which are so common in summer. Dr. Hartman, in practice over forty years, never lost a single case of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, or cholera morbus, and his only remedy was Pe-r-u-na. Those desiring further particulars should send for a free copy of "Summer Catarrh." Address, Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

Camden Boy's Klondike.

Interesting Letters Sent Home Telling of His Travels and Experiences.

About a year and a half ago, Henry Storey of Camden, a young man who is well-known throughout Knox county, left home to seek his fortune in the Klondike. The following are abstracts of his letters sent home:

We had five hours in Montreal. On board the train before we arrived was the Canadian customs officer. His business is to look over the baggage going through to the States. He is an American, born in Vermont, moved to India, then to Montreal, and has had the office of collector of customs for Canada two years. He entered into conversation with me and I found him to be a Mason and a square man.

He asked three or four of us to go to the hotel where he lived, then he hired a "cabby" with an open sleigh—barouche style—to drive us around the city. Montreal is a city of many large business houses, private residences and Catholic institutions.

With the exception of the business center, the city is mostly on a side hill. It is quite cosmopolitan city but on every street, on all sides of me, I could hear a "jabbering" of poor French.

Many of the people, particularly the ladies, dress in fur coats, jackets and hats. Most of the fur looks very much like coon skin.

Montreal has about 300,000 inhabitants, but I could hardly realize this for I saw no more people on the streets than I did in Portland. From within forty miles of Montreal the land is about as level as a house floor, and fine as it is too.

We did not stop long enough at Ottawa and Winnipeg, the next two cities on the route, to see much. In the night we passed along the borders of Lake Superior, the largest and largest of the "great lakes."

We passed through such places as Rat Portage, Ontario and Golden, B. C., both small gold and coal mining towns. Then along farther is a place called Moose Jaw, where one can see the native Indians in native dress selling their wares. One "old buck" came through the car begging for almost anything the passengers would give him. On entering the car he said, "hullo, squaws you give me 'somin'."

One lady offered him a quarter but he refused it saying, "Oh! no good, you no fool me!" evidently not knowing the value of silver. These Indians are hard looking customers and I shouldn't want to come in contact with one or two of them if they mean mischief.

They are much afraid of the Canadian mounted police, stationed in all of the towns through Ontario and Manitoba.

The city of Winnipeg has about 40,000 inhabitants and the land is as level as a billiard table. The streets are laid out in straight lines and the main street is more than a hundred feet wide. In our travels through the city we met but one policeman, but he was large enough to take care of three or four common sized men, being six feet two with broad shoulders and weighing at least 225 pounds.

All that night and all the next day we traveled through an almost trackless prairie, and in many places as far as one can see there is not even a hummock or rise in the surface. There are many sheep and cattle ranches through this section. The stock was all turned out to get their own feed, which was cropping out through the snow. There is no much snow in the country but considerable cold weather. It must be very dreary here but I am told the people are contented and happy, many of them knowing no other life.

The next place of note is the little settlement of Glacier. It is a mining town, where the train stops 20 minutes for lunch. The town takes its name from a large glacier which is right across the ravine in the mountains and is itself a mountain of ice. The town is in the very heart of the Rockies. Snow capped mountains, many hundreds of feet high, are every side looking in shape like the Pyramids of Egypt. On some of the ranges I counted seven or eight peaks, all about the same size and shape.

The road winds around the grand old mountains in a puzzling, zigzag manner making it impossible to tell from which direction we came, or how we were going to get out. There are many snow sheds scattered along the sides of the mountains which the train passes through. Some of them are a mile and more long and very dark.

All through the mountains of British Columbia are small settlements which seem to be mining towns. On some of the buildings, made of logs with board roofs may be seen such signs as, "Maple Leaf Hotel," "Thomas Richardson, Prop.," and "Windsor Hotel, Best in Town," located only two buildings apart. Along the many small streams there would seem to be great opportunities for prospecting. The train runs very slow through the mountains, the time in many places being not more than eight or ten miles an hour. Then in a few moments we would be hurrying through a cut in the rocks in which could be seen only the narrow walls on either side and the grey blue sky overhead.

We were passing through the mountains on Sunday. The time was pleasantly passed in singing hymns, led by two ladies and four gentlemen from Portland, Me., who were on their way to Los Angeles, Calif. At 7 o'clock Monday morning we arrived at North Bend, B. C., a small settlement on the Fraser river. We passed through many short tunnels, two of them about a mile long and as dark as the bottom of a well. The river at this point is not wide, but is very swift. Opposite the railroad is an old government trail used many years for carrying mail and for general travel.

Through British Columbia are some of the grandest cedars and hemlock-trees that I ever saw. Many of them are from three to five feet through at the base and more than a hundred feet high. The trees are perfectly straight, Early in the afternoon we crossed the boundary line between British Columbia and the United States at Huntington, where the train stops about a half hour for the three United States customs officers to examine the baggage.

I arrived in Seattle, Wash., in a rain storm. A few of the streets of Seattle are very, or quite, level but most of the city is on a hill. The streets are very dirty—don't believe there is any street cleaning department—and many of the side streets are cheap plank sidewalks, some of them in very poor condition. The street cars run both by cable and electricity. Some of the streets are even paved with planks.

Mr. Storey arrived in Skaguay the last of March after a long trip up the Sound and Lynn Canal. The trip from Seattle consumed six days. The food on the steamer was all and there was plenty of it. The wharf at Skaguay is about a third of a mile long and is very narrow—only in a few places can two teams pass. Three of us took a walk, the morning after our arrival. We went eight miles and back and walked all the way. The trail was in the next morning my partner and I hired packers to take up to the summit—18 miles—the next morning. This trip is made in one day and the packers charge five cents a pound. We had a ton and a half of goods.

It is pay for everything here. One cannot even spit without paying two bits—25 cents. All the paper money seen here or in Seattle is brought by the Easterners. In giving a bill the people will look at it as though they hardly knew what it was. It is all gold and silver, everywhere through the north and west.

From the summit the way is plain sailing, so to speak. The White Pass, which we go over, is all right and the trail is in good condition, but it is liable to break up in the canyon any day and that is why we are getting away in such a hurry. If the canyon should break up we would be left in Skaguay. It would mean an additional two cents a pound, for we would then have to use the wagon road. To travel in this country one needs a good fat pocket-book for the cannot pass the Canadian police at the Summit with less than 1,000 pounds of raw provisions, to say nothing of clothing and hardware.

For getting correct information I never saw anything like it is here. Nearly every man has a different story; and that is given only on hearsay. I cannot emphasize too strongly the amount of money a man ought to have and the amount of pluck necessary to go with it. Everybody in Seattle says Copper River is a fake for there has never been any gold taken out of that country for a month to more than three to five dollars a day to a man; and the work to get in there over the glacier is something terrible, so I decided not to try it.

The next letter sent in the spring, found Mr. Storey approaching the gold region and the following abstract is made:

I am now at Lake Linderman and am all right in every way. This camp is at Linderman, about one and a half miles from the upper end of the lake. The upper end of the lake is separated from Lake Bennett by a short canyon only three-quarters of a mile long or a portage over a slight rising ground about the same distance, neither of which carry a man ought to have and the amount of pluck necessary to go with it. Everybody in Seattle says Copper River is a fake for there has never been any gold taken out of that country for a month to more than three to five dollars a day to a man; and the work to get in there over the glacier is something terrible, so I decided not to try it.

On Linderman there are several feet of snow and till within a few days the trail has been very good. The last few days have been very warm, so much so that men are working without coat or vest and through the day there is a foot of snow on the lake, but solid ice underneath. Men are rising at 12 o'clock midday to get out to the lake while the snow is frozen, it being all impossible to get along after the sun has been up any length of time. The upper end of the lake is about gone and will last only a few days longer. Yesterday morning we arose at 2 o'clock, partook of a fine breakfast of oatmeal with milk, bacon, excellent bread, made by my partner, and coffee and started for the upper end of the lake with a load, each carrying between 350 and 400 pounds. This weight did not bother us much for the trail was in quite good condition.

While up the lake today we went over to Lake Bennett to look at boats. The same boats at home or anywhere on the coast in the States would cost from $15 to $20, but here the price was from $200 to $300. We ran across a man who is in here with his wife and going through to Dawson. He had a boat in the course of construction, and nearly finished, which he offered us for $140. We offered $100 but he refused. Agreeing to hold it for us for a certain length of time we went to Bennett City to price boats. Everything looked at was far inferior to the other man's boat so we went back and closed the bargain, binding it with paying $10. So we are all right now on the boat question. Ever since the purchase I have felt like a new man, for

SAVED BY MRS. PINKHAM.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 75,896]

"You have saved my life, snatched me from the brink of the grave almost, and I wish to thank you. About eighteen months ago I was a total wreck, physically. I had been troubled with leucorrhoea for some time, but had given hardly any attention to the trouble.

"At last inflammation of the womb and ovaries resulted and then I suffered agonies, had to give up my profession (musician and piano player), was confined to my bed and life became a terrible cross. My husband summoned the best physicians, but their benefit was but temporary at best. I believe I should have contracted the morphia habit under their care, if my common sense had not intervened.

"One day my husband noticed the advertisement of your remedies and immediately bought me a full trial. Soon the pain in my ovaries was gone. I am now well, strong and robust, walk, ride a wheel, and feel like a girl in her teens. I would not be without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it is like water of life to me. I am very grateful and sincerely thank your well-wisher, and I heartily recommend your remedies. I hope some poor creature may be helped to health by reading my story."—Mrs. Col. E. P. RICHARDSON, RHEINLANDER, WIS.

the boat question has been quite a thorn in my flesh. This boat is 22 feet long and made to carry two tons. It is the best made boat I have seen around here. We could have built our own boat, but would not have gained anything. Lumber costs 25 cents a foot and it would have taken 300 feet, making bare cost of lumber $75. Then there would be extra things that would bring the price up. The man we bought of was desirous of going to Dawson on a steamer, sailing from Bennett.

Several thousand people are camped at Bennett waiting to build boats and we are quite neighborly with them. A sight it is too. Travel by the Skaguay White Pass trail is about over for the time being. The trail is getting bare in many places. The wagon road can be used at a cost of about 25 cents a pound. The Dyea trail can be used a short time longer, owing to the fact that the elevation is greater.

The next letter was written on the Fourth of July. Henry says: "The glorious Fourth, but not a very glorious one here for there is nothing to indicate that it is the Fourth of July here. Yesterday we ran the Miles Canyon and White Horse rapids in safety. I went through the canyon twice and the rapids once. We put our camp at the upper end of the canyon and helped three other boys through with their's. These other boys came into camp with us on Lake Marsh and have been in company with us ever since. We are quite neighborly with them and like them pretty well, although I have met no one yet who seem just like the home boys. Nearly all I have met from the western states. It is comparatively smooth sailing from here and nothing further in the way of danger. We could now go all the way to Dawson with the current of the river."

We left Bennett three weeks ago but have stopped along the way to prospect, hunt and fish. We have in camp to show for our work a grizzly bear skin, a cub and some remains of moose meat, as the meat as ever I eat or want to eat. We have caught quite a good many pickerel and greyling. Two of the pickerel measured respectively 28 and 32 inches long. There are also fine trout in the lakes and rivers. Moose are very plenty but hard to get, for you have to go from three to ten miles to the water and back it over hills, through bushes and over a complete network of fallen trees. So you see we have to work pretty hard to get our fresh meat, but it tastes all the better for we realize how hard is to get it.

Another letter was received from Mr. Storey late in the fall. He was then in the gold country. We continue his interesting letters:

It really costs a man a dollar a day or better to live in this country by being his own boss. The cost of living here is $20 a hundred, bacon 50 cents a pound, coffee 75 cents a pound, sugar from 30 to 50 cents a pound, beans 15 cents a pound, window glass 10x12, 10x14, 10x16, 10x18, 10x20,
