HOPLEY MEETING OFF

Woman Prohibition Agent Cancels Knox County Dates On Account of President's Death.

The Knox County W. C. T. U. was much disappointed yesterday to learn that Georgia Hopley, the woman prohibition agent, has cancelled all of her Knox County dates because of the fact that government offices are closed until after the funeral of the late President Harding. A mass meeting had been arranged for Oakland Park tomorrow afternoon and evening. The following telegram is explanatory:

Bethel, Me., Aug. 6.

Miss Alena L. Young, County President W. C. T. U. Deeply regret to cancel all Knox County dates. Government offices ordered closed by President until after the funeral Friday. Letter following.

Georgia Hopley.

SAMOSSET MEMORIAL SERVICE

A brief memorial service was held at the Samoset Hotel Friday afternoon for the late President Harding. A large group of guests gathered to pay their respects and were addressed by Rev. Canon Gorman of St. John's church, Ottawa, Canada. Canon Gorman expressed the feelings of the guests when he said that some formal expression should be made of the sorrow and sense of loss felt in the hearts of all the guests.

As a Canadian subject he was particularly able to see President Harding not as merely an American citizen, but as a world citizen with the large spirit and the great soul which could not confine itself to one race. President Harding felt that all nations were in brotherhood and all races were mourn his loss. The speaker said that in these times of unrest, discontent and dissatisfaction the great need was for leaders and that the world had lost such in President Harding.

WHEN COOLIDGE VISITED US

Twice Within a Year the New President Has Been Entertained Within Rockland's Gates—Crossed Continent To Speak Here.

Calvin Coolidge, the 30th President of the United States, has twice favored Rockland with a visit in less than a year. The first occasion was purely political, for the future President came all the way from the Pacific Coast to deliver his solitary speech of the Maine campaign of 1922. In that speech he told what Congress had actually done since the incoming of the Republican administration, and declared that it had been "neither unwise nor dilatory." The date of this visit was in Aug. 30, 1922.

On his second visit, with little thought that he was soon to occupy the highest place in the land, Mr. Coolidge came to Maine as the guest of the New England governors and spent two days at the Samoset Hotel, Rockland Breakwater, leaving for home on the morning of July Fourth. Of his first visit, which now becomes an event of even greater historical interest, The Courier-Gazette of the next day said:

Calvin Coolidge, Vice President of the United States, who crossed the continent in order to keep his promise of delivering one political address in the Maine campaign, spoke for an hour under broiling sun on the Children's Playground yesterday afternoon and then whirled away to the afternoon train. His next stop will be in St. Paul where he is to deliver an address on agriculture at the Minnesota State Fair.

The privilege of listening to one of the most distinguished statesmen of the period, and of being the only city in the State to have that distinction, is one that Rockland thoroughly appreciated. George W. Roberts, chairman of the Republican county committee, worked early and late to land the capital prize of the campaign, and is entitled to much of the credit. Vice President Coolidge was advertised to speak in Belfast and Bangor the same day and evening, but these plans were promptly cancelled upon his arrival.

Following his address in Boston the previous night, Gov. Coolidge was obliged to summon a physician who found him with a temperature of 102, and threatened with tonsillitis. He insisted upon keeping his Rockland engagement, but the strain of speaking in the heat, with no protection for his bare head, must have been very great. Accompanied by Frank W. Stearns of Boston, long one of his staunchest political supporters, Vice President Coolidge arrived on the late train Tuesday night. He was met in Damariscotta by Hon. Elmer S. Bird, chairman of the local reception committee; County Chairman George W. Roberts; W. O. Fuller, and Clerk of Courts Milton W. Griffin. Arriving in Rockland he was met by the other male members of the reception committee, who accompanied him to the Samoset Hotel.

Here, with the refreshing breezes of the Penobscot Bay acting as a tonic, and with a delightful vista to charm the eye, he spent a very restful night.

At 11:30 yesterday forenoon Hon. E. S. Bird, F. R. Spear, Ivan A. True-worthy, Joseph W. Robinson, Mrs. W. O. Fuller, Mrs. G. L. Crockett, Mrs. E. M. Lawrence, Miss Anna E. Coughlin and Mrs. Beulah S. Oxtun of the reception committee motored to the Samoset, accompanied by Postmaster G. H. Blithen, Sam E. Connor of the Lewiston Journal and F. A. Winslow of The Courier-Gazette, and Lewis Herzog of New York and were formally presented to the Vice President. A group picture was made by Mr. Connor.

The party returned to Rockland on schedule time, and a public reception was held at the Thorndike Hotel.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

where hundreds availed themselves of the privilege of shaking hands with Gov. Coolidge and Congressman Wallace H. White, who was supported in the receiving line by Hon. A. S. Littlefield and W. O. Fuller.

The speaking on the Children's Playground was also on schedule, for Gov. Coolidge is a man who believes in punctuality and the committee, which fails to recognize it makes a mistake. His appearance on the platform was greeted with a storm of applause, the audience standing.

William S. White, a member of the Republican State Committee from Knox county, called the meeting to order, and introduced as its chairman Mrs. E. M. Lawrence. "Surely a great occasion has come to our little city by the sea," said Mrs. Lawrence. "It is an occasion of such importance that mere party lines vanish. We greet him not as partisans, but as citizens from Eastport to Kittery the State rejoices because of the distinguished citizen within our borders."

Mrs. Lawrence said that Gov. Coolidge was known and signally honored for the brave stand he has always taken, notably during the Boston police strike. "We know for what he stands," said the chairman, "and while some may not acquiesce in the principles of the Republican party, there is no uncertainty as regards Mr. Coolidge."

WILL HAVE CABLE

Swan's Island Happy at Prospect of Soon Being Able to Say "Hello" to Mainland.

The communities of Swan's Island are again to be connected with the outside world by telephone after a lapse of three years, which was caused by damage to the original submarine telephone cable between the island and the mainland at Flye Point and thence to the Sedgwick exchange of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Land connections have already been built from the Southwest Harbor exchange of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company to Lopau Point on the westerly side of Bass Harbor. The new submarine cable, which has been ordered from the manufacturers, will be of proper design for its intended use, and will extend from Lopau Point to approximately four miles on the bed of the Atlantic to North Point of Swan's Island and there connect with the land lines of the local telephone company.

The loss of the original cable was a severe blow to the people on the island. Having had telephone communication for a comparatively short time with the outside world the people quickly became accustomed to its use and to have it cut off meant a severe blow to the business interests of the communities. The undertaking is one of no mean size for the people of the island because of the great cost of submarine cable which has to be made of great strength to withstand the strains to which it is subjected. The people of the island have kept the matter before them and it is a matter of much credit to them that they will soon have their hopes materialize.

The connection will be greatly appreciated by the business interests in Rockland on one side and Mount Desert Island on the other.

Gov. Baxter who spoke at the same rally, said that had it not been for the steadfast courage of Calvin Coolidge there is no knowing where our nation might have landed, and every chief executive in every State should take a lesson from that splendid example.

Congressman White paid eloquent tribute to Vice President Coolidge when he said that amid the complexity of life, rapid changing of ideas and of a deplorable uncertainty in party allegiance the same call to principle exists as always, and that in Coolidge a man is found who has stood fast on the bed-rock of principle, regardless of self or of political advancement.

His Second Visit

On his second visit the Vice President was accompanied by his family. The party arrived Monday evening July 2. From The Courier-Gazette's Tuesday issue the following extracts are made:

"It was less than 10 minutes past the appointed hour of arrival when the five big cars with the flashing State emblems at their radiators, rolled up the Samoset drive. It seemed as though Miss Host Ricker in ordering the perfection of arrangement which greeted the travellers from their first hour within his gates had ordered the startlingly beautiful scene as a climax."

"A glance at the register showed the personnel of the party to be: Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge and their sons John and Calvin Coolidge, Jr.; Governor and Mrs. Charles A. Templeton of Connecticut, with their daughters, Nancy Medora, a student at Smith college, and Lucy Lillian, and his executive secretary, Anson T. McCook; Governor and Mrs. Channing Cox of Massachusetts with Major W. M. Pratt of his staff, and Mrs. Pratt; James J. Storrow of Boston, chairman of the New England Interstate Railroad Commission, and Governor Baxter of Maine, and his secretary, Gilbert R. Chadbourne."

"A small party of Rockland men and women visited the Samoset last evening and paid their respects to Vice President Coolidge and the other distinguished visitors."

Thursday's issue of The Courier-Gazette said:

"Gov. Baxter's memorable weekend vacation party came to an end yesterday with the departure from Hotel Samoset of Vice President Coolidge and the visiting governors with their ladies. The time since the arrival Monday night has been enjoyed to the full with a complete absence of official formalities. Monday after dinner a happy social hour was spent at the hotel with the guests and friends from Rockland. Tuesday was devoted to golf, the Vice President and his family taking a motor trip to Belfast and tea in Camden. The evening saw a larger group of friends at the hotel but still no formalities. The departure was made at 11 o'clock Wednesday. The Coolidges went to Portland as guests of Senator Frederick Hale."

STRUCK BY TRAIN

Conductor Arthur Ross Carlette Fatally Injured On the Limerock Railroad Yesterday.

Arthur Ross Carlette, a conductor in the employ of the Limerock Railroad, was run over by a train at the Five Kilns trestle on July 6, and received injuries from which he died during the afternoon.

The train consisting of a locomotive and 13 loaded cars was being pushed up to the Five Kilns trestle for which Carlette had just thrown the switch. According to Percy Brackett, who was acting as brakeman, Carlette attempted to cross the track in front of the train and was struck by the first car. The wheels did not touch the body but the understructure of the rapidly moving train caused the injuries which, with the shock, produced death.

J. W. Smith was engineer of the train. Mr. Carlette was 30 years old and was married within the month to Mrs. Katherine Kenney of this city. He was a member of the American Legion. He served a month with a machine gun company on a French battlefield, and was then removed to a hospital. He had been in the employ of the Limerock Railroad for several years, and was a valued and trusted employee, especially popular with the men.

The funeral services will be held at 81 Crescent street Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

WEAVER IS FREED

John Mealey Fails to Identify Negro As the Man Who Shot Him.

John Mealey limped into Rockland Court yesterday, white featured and breathless, but proof that a man may be shot four times at close range and live to tell the tale.

The story of the shooting, which occurred July 26, in Mr. Mealey's doorway on Winter street, has already been told in these columns, together with the details concerning the arrest and partial trial of Vivien Weaver, a colored steamboat hand, who was suspected of being Mealey's assailant.

The trial was twice continued in order that Mealey might be given an opportunity to identify the respondent.

"Did you ever see this man before?" asked Frank A. Tirrell, Jr., counsel for Weaver.

"Never in my life, that I know of," was Mealey's reply. "He is not heavy enough or dark enough to be the man I saw."

As the story was told by the victim of the shooting two colored men came to his house on Winter street the night of the 26th, and wanted to see the girls. Mealey said there were no girls there, whereupon the spokesman grabbed the screen door and tore it from its hinges. There was a scuffle in the doorway, and from his position partly on the ground the negro who had sought to force an entrance to the house fired four shots from a 22 automatic. Mealey saw the spurts of flame, but thought that the pistol contained blank cartridges until he felt blood running.

"He got me!" Mealey exclaimed. "I'll get a doctor," the other negro said, and started away on the run. He has since disappeared.

Under the State's examination—the State being represented by County Attorney Dwinell—Mealey insisted that he never saw the man (Weaver) but would not swear that he was not the man who had done the shooting.

Attorney Tirrell's motion that Weaver be discharged for lack of evidence was granted by Judge Miller.

Should new evidence be discovered the matter may be taken before the grand jury.

UNDER SUNNY SKIES

John Gustin, Back In His Native Italian Home, Thinks Salemi Fine City.

Salerni, Italy, July 18. Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

I arrived in Salerni, Italy, July 16. It is a city of about 36,000 inhabitants, a very smart and attractive one for its size. It is wonderful, and everything is very promising for the future. Although I was born here I never dreamed that I was a native of such a beautiful and interesting place as this. I spend most of my time viewing the country over, and never get tired of looking at things such as I have never seen before. If I was never going to work any more I would certainly pick this country to live in.

There is a big difference in the price of things. The foodstuffs are very reasonably, and if you have the price you can get most anything that you may desire. For instance, look at the wine that you can buy for 20 cents—two big quarts. That's going some.

Well if I had to describe the whole thing I would never finish writing. I had a splendid trip across the pond, not a single minute did it ever get rough. It was rougher on the Boston steamer going from Rockland to Boston than it was from Boston to Palermo, Italy. I was 12 days on the water and enjoyed every day of it. This is more than I wanted for a vacation and I wish that Bill Sullivan was with me so I could amuse him a little. I extend my best wishes to all of my many Rockland friends and may write again in the future.

John Gustin.

Alvah B. Clark, probation officer, and publicity man for the Rockland & Rockport Lime Corporation, is enjoying a yachting expedition on the barge Rock Harbor, with a view to spending a fortnight's vacation in Gotham and vicinity. Unless he loses his bearings when he gets among the high buildings he will probably fetch up in Syracuse for a visit with Bert. He has promised to drop postcards at regular intervals so that anxious friends may keep track of his movements. It is hoped that his innate bashfulness will not prevent Editor Clark from setting forth some of his impressions in the Bulletin.

THE BELLS OF RHYME

The Bells of Rhyme! Through measures meet, With rhythmic cadence fraught, They lead the mind, by guidance sweet, Upon the paths of thought.

Till even dreamland's happy land Beloved of hopeful youth, By fairy zephyrs ever fanned, Becomes an isle of truth.

The Bells of Rhyme—not prison bells For shackled souls are they: Within their sound enchantment dwells That drives all mist away, And, bodied forth, the brain perceives In more than earthly light The airy web that Fancy weaves Spanned by a rainbow bright.

The Bells of Rhyme—When sweetly played They ever grow more dear; Their haunting echoes never fade Upon the memory's ear: Ay, happy thoughts in rhyming words Excel all other art.

And, like the carols of the Muses, Enthrall the listening heart.

The Bells of Rhyme—it is a myth That holds them still to be Vain ornament, and puts them with The things of fable; To grandeur thought an added grace Their skilful use bestows: They gleam upon its lovely face Like dewdrops on a rose.

The Bells of Rhyme by Milton rung In merry L'Allegro, By Herrick, too, and Burns oft swung, No sweeter sound we know: O may their charm forever flow, Their music bless the earth, To soothe below our human woes, And magnify our mind's desire, Samuel Maynard Peck, in Boston Transcript.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

How thoroughly the old-time New England spirit stands portrayed in the dramatic story of the taking of the oath of office by Calvin Coolidge. In the "sitting room" of a modest little Vermont farm house, at three o'clock in the morning, under the light of a common kerosene lamp, Calvin Coolidge took the oath of office, administered by his father, a country notary public. To the prescribed official oath the new President of the United States added the solemn words "So help me God."

We may rest confident that while the spirit that laid the foundations of this government prevails our country is secure against every shock of radicalism and the strange isms brought to us from across the seas. What Calvin Coolidge said on taking office of Governor of Massachusetts discloses his fitness to serve as chief ruler of the whole people: "This ancient faith of Massachusetts," he said, "which becomes the great faith of America, she reestablished in her Constitution before the Army of Washington had gained our independence, declaring for a government of laws and not for men. In that faith she still abides. Let him challenge it who dares. All who love Massachusetts, who believe in America, are bound to defend it."

It is significant of the general confidence that the new President already had created that the leading newspapers everywhere, both in this country and abroad, and sinking for the moment all partisan politics, sound a harmonious note in praise of his exalted character and belief in his ability to deal with the great issues that he is suddenly brought to face. The New York Times, independent Democrat in politics and the country's leading paper, says: "The character and career of Calvin Coolidge are known to his countrymen. They know him modest, reticent, self-effacing, patient, firm. For nearly twenty-five years he has served his city, his State and the nation, from a humble municipal, to the greatest national post. He has won his way by his intelligence, industry, integrity and capacity. As mayor and governor he was a quiet but effective administrator. He has had to study and deal with instant problems, taxation, transportation, industrial relations." And it adds: "Besides courage, there disengages from his public life a shrewd and keen intelligence, moderation, a certain habit of independence, a reserve of quiet wisdom and power. He has had plenty of experience. He has risen high by the aid of no popular arts of personal charm, but by his solid merit. His austere Puritan simplicity and homeliness of life have been good credentials as a more 'magnetic' temperament or manner might have been. He was named for Vice President—that thankless, difficult place in which his demeanor has been so admirable—because he was eminently fit to be President. He enters upon his exhausting and perilous task amid general good will and good hope."

The New York World, another Democrat paper, noting that there is no more difficult undertaking in politics than that of a Vice President suddenly promoted by the death of a President, continues: "The circumstances present a great opportunity. President Coolidge has a blank sheet upon which to write history. Vice Presidents are never nominated with the idea of their elevation to the higher post, and the country rarely knows little about its new Executive, except that his firmness in handling the Boston police strike, as governor of Massachusetts, left a favorable impression of his force of character. He will have the sympathy and the support of the American people, without regard to party ties. Such political obstruction as he may meet will come less from Democracy than from Republican faction, but for the moment even faction is a feeble thing. The big factor in his situation is the patriotic devotion of a united people wishing him godspeed in his great trust."

"To Mr. Coolidge, as he stands," says the Tribune, "simple and erect upon the threshold of his task, the American people offer their prayers and good wishes for his welfare and success; and they pledge anew their faith in America." To which the Herald, declaring that the helm could not pass into safer hands than those of Calvin Coolidge, and quoting his views on the necessity of enforcing the laws in what he said to the police force of Worcester—"Where the law goes, there civilization goes and stays. When the law fails barbarism flourishes. Whoever scorns the law, whoever brings it into disrespect, whoever connives at its evasion, is an enemy of civilization. Change it if you will—that is to abide by it—but observe it always. That is government. And government is no less gov-

PROCLAMATION

To the Citizens of Rockland:—

In order that we may show fitting reverence to the memory of Warren G. ## AVIATOR KILLED

Sterling G. Wincapaw, Who Summered at Friendship, Victim of Peculiar Accident.

Sterling Grant Wincapaw of White Plains, N. Y., a son of Charles C. Wincapaw, who formerly resided in Friendship, was killed on Lake George, Sunday, while operating a sightseeing hydroplane.

The skirt of a woman passenger had caught on the control lever and the machine performed a nose dive, striking the water on its side. Mr. Wincapaw, who was the pilot, was instantly killed. The passengers were injured, one suffering the fracture of a leg.

Mr. Wincapaw would have been 34 years old had he lived until next Saturday. He recently visited his father's summer home in Friendship and made a number of flights in his machine while there, one of them being to Rockland. He is survived by his wife, formerly Fannie Lowell of White Plains; his parents, two brothers and three sisters.

Mr. Wincapaw, senior, left Friendship immediately upon receipt of the news yesterday. The mother, who is a partial invalid, was unable to get reservations but will go today.

THE SEVEN MASTS

Not Many Sailormen Of the Present Day Can Name Them—Can You?

The reappearance of the Leviathan on the high seas caused many an "old salt" to reflect on the passing of the American sailing ship which has now virtually disappeared. The modern mariner, however, knows as little about the old-time sailing vessels as the flapper knows about her great-grandmother's spinning wheel.

The United States Marines at their seagoing school in Norfolk are familiar with nautical terms and can quote the nomenclature of a modern oil-burner from bow to stern. But when an examiner asked them to name the seven masts of a sailing vessel, only a few could recall the names off-hand.

Fore, main, mizzen, driver, jigger and spanker are the names in order, running fore and aft, of a seven-masted ship. Some authorities give them the names forecastle, fore, main, mizzen, jigger, spanker or driver and naming them from bow to stern after the days of the week, beginning with Sunday.

President Harding's death throws new complexities into the political situation within the Republican party which will undoubtedly have far-reaching reflections in the convention of next year says an Associated Press dispatch. It probably will turn what many expected to be merely a ratification meeting into a contest for the Republican presidential nomination with the stalwart conservative Republican forces aligned on the one side and the forces represented by such leaders as Senators Johnson of California, Borah of Idaho and La Follette of Wisconsin on the other.

BASEBALL NEARING CLIMAX

Camden Again Takes Gardiner Into Camp 2 To 1—Snows, With Foster In Box, Blank Knox Electric.

I SAW JOE EMERY

at the Camden-Gardiner game Saturday and incidentally made a date with him to attend one of the Maine college football games this fall. Joe is about equally divided in his fondness for football and baseball, but having done something in the line of football coaching naturally keeps a little closer in touch with the great fall sport. Whether it is baseball, football or what not, he must be credited with being an all-county fan, for he has lived in Rockland, Thomaston and Camden, and finds himself less of a partisan than he used to be before indulging in this geographical harlequin. And this young Barker is an all-around good fellow, everybody will admit.—The Sporting Editor.

Tonight—Line Company vs Snows, Thursday—Knox Electric vs Lime Company.

Note: These games were originally scheduled for Wednesday and Friday but the dates were changed out of respect for the funeral of the late President Harding.

Snows 7, Electrics 0

Billy Foster was back in his old berth with the Snows last night, and that team was altogether too many for the Knox Electric, who developed a sad case of stage fright in the fifth inning and spoiled what had been a classy game up to that moment.

Foster was in top form last night, and held his opponents to a solitary hit, the distinction of making which belongs to Perry. The festive motorist's second, went third on a passed ball, where he was forced to perch while three batters were making futile efforts to connect with Foster's shots. Wahle who made his first appearance of the season in the Twilight League, was also left stranded. He had drawn a walk after Perry's hit and in this manner did the Electrics pass up their one good opportunity of escaping the "skunk" column.

Camden 2, Gardiner 1

Camden played errorless baseball Saturday and for a second time this season defeated the Hazzards of Gardiner 2 to 1. The visitors made but one error, but it proved fatal to their chances of winning, as results proved. All in all it was one of the prettiest games that has ever been played on the Camden field, and would seem to leave the judges no other discretion than selecting the Gardiner's team as the one which shall compete for Edward W. Bok's unique and magnificent prize of $250. Of course there is a possibility that some other team may play a long extra inning contest with Camden before the time limit has expired, but otherwise the distinction would seem to belong to the gallant aggregation from the Kennebec, which has now figured in two 2 to 1 contests with Camden. However, this is a matter which rests entirely with the men selected to decide it.

Saturday's game might almost be said to be won by Bok's—not the kind that pitchers sometimes make, although in this instance a pitching Bok did much to shape the destinies of the contest.

Carey Bok was the man on the mound—inactive since the close of the Williams College schedule because of a strain received while aiding that institution in a successful baseball season. Saturday marked his first appearance in action since the lay-off began, and the results were even more satisfactory than his most sanguine hopes had led him to expect. Some pitchers depend upon their arm, and some upon their head, but Carey Bok, Saturday, made splendid use of both. He alternated fast and slow ones in a manner that was very perplexing to the Gardiner batters, and while he did not have many strikeouts he was pitching the kind of ball that befuddled the visitors to the queen's taste.

Carey Bok did other things beside pitch. He made a two-bagger in the first inning, and a triple in the seventh, scoring the winning run on the latter, after Denham had made his clever bunt. It was a similar play which had scored Denham in the first inning, although the bunt in this instance was made by "Pot Roast" Grindle.

Curtis Bok, was playing first base in the absence of Magee, who is convalescing from a sick spell, accepted all of his 16 chances many of which were difficult. His piece de resistance was a one-hand catch of Dineen's liner at the beginning of the second inning. The ball was foul by some feet, and nobody dreamed that it would be caught. Curtis Bok made a dash in the direction of the carriages, thrust out his glove hand at considerably more than its prescribed radius, and—voilà!

Camden's infield was as impervious as a concrete dam, the three basemen and shortstop accepting all of their 24 chances. You could not throw a bouquet at one of these men without hitting all of them. And the same would apply to Thomas and Morin in the infield.

The Hazzards made the same splendid impressions as ball players and gentlemen that they did on their former appearance in Camden. They brought Perry, one of the Topus pitchers, and he held Camden to five scattered hits. Kelley the shortstop was the undoubted star of the visiting team.

Gardiner's solitary run came in the fourth inning and was earned by the hits of Jordan, Dineen and McNamara. The score:

It is apparent that Knox County is not the only place where interest in baseball is temporarily languishing. Sporting Editor Arthur G. Oliver of the Bath Times recently paid his compliments to young men who prefer the perfumed atmosphere of the dance hall to the glorious national game in the open. Listen to what the sporting editor of the Portland Express says: "Are the youth of today becoming a generation of lounge lizards, movie nuts, and jazz hounds? If the answer is to be found in the attendance of outdoor sports, it seems to be in the affirmative. After talking with many sporting writers, there is evidence of a deplorable lack of interest in red blooded open air games among the boys from 16 to 21 years of age. A sport editor in one of the big New England cities declares that 90 per cent of the fans who attend the ball games are old timers, or at least men of 30 years and up." A race of lounge lizards? Perish the thought!

The Rockland Art Association has issued invitations for the "Private View" of the First Annual Art Exhibition to be held in the Public Library Aug. 15. The exhibition will continue to the 25th, but the "Private View" has particular reference to the opening day, when it is hoped that all lovers of the artistic will look in upon the exhibition between 3 p. m. and 8 p. m. Works of well known painters will be shown in the children's room.

"At the Sign of the Jack O' Lantern"

When Harlan Carr and his bride inherited the "jack o'lantern" house they were ready to believe that every cloud has a silver lining.

But almost from the start their existence in the house was made unbearable. Grim reminders of the past took form in the shape of a huge black cat, pictures that rattled against the walls, and doors that opened and closed without human effort. And then to cap the climax a horde of unwelcome relatives settled upon them for the summer.

Weather This Week

Weather outlook for the week beginning yesterday in North Atlantic states: Considerable cloudiness; moderate temperature except quite warm at beginning and occasional showers and local thunder showers.

George Hamlin is working for Carl E. Freeman.

Alfred Benner is employed at the Fernald market.

Ernest Crie has joined the staff of the H. H. Crie Co.

S. A. Burpee of Burpee & Lamb is having his annual vacation from that establishment.

Rev. Ida Bradstreet is available for pulpit supply during the month of August in any of the nearby churches.

State examination of teachers, rural, elementary and secondary, will be held in the McLean Building, Saturday at 8.30 a. m.

St. Peter's Guild will meet at the rectory Thursday evening at 7.30. Members are specially requested to be present.

The lawn party and sale recently held by the Ladies' Aid of the Littlefield Memorial church netted that association a little more than $300.

Robert A. Webster has employment with the Consolidated Lobster Co., which has lately established a branch in this city, with pounds at Friendship.

Patrolman John T. Berry is having his annual vacation which will be punctuated somewhat by constructing a garage, and standing guard now and then for other patrolmen.

A supplement of the Chronicles of Knox County, published by Robert Fillmore, is now being distributed. It contains the revisions from October, 1922, to June, 1923, and is very essential part of that useful publication.

A bit of history is often concealed in a prosaic item. From Martinsville comes the word "The old Salt Factory building has been removed to the back shore." What is the story of the Salt Factory?

The State Fair trustees recognizing the growth of horseshoe pitching, have decided to promote a State Horseshoe Tournament and have asked Philip LeBoutillier, director of Auburn Community Service to act as Tournament Manager. Matches will be held in the evenings during the fair and will undoubtedly draw many entrants as well as spectators. Official rules adopted by the National Horseshoe Pitchers' Association will be used.

C. E. Goulding began yesterday the construction of E. S. May's residence on High street. The structure will be 28x30 feet with two porches, and will have eight rooms and bath. Mr. Goulding has just completed for A. J. Thurston in Union one of the finest residences in Knox County. The structure occupies the site of the Thurston residence which was destroyed by fire, is finished in cherry, ash and white wood. It has 12 rooms, and the modern conveniences that would be found in a city home. The construction occupied eight months.

Picking 12 bushels of delicious raspberries from her cultivated bushes yesterday morning and delivering them to customers "down town" before the afternoon was half done made a busy day for Mrs. Adella F. Veazie of the Highlands—the more so from the fact that illness from rheumatism compels her to get about with the aid of a pair of crutches. This handicap, which would daunt the most of us, in no wise interferes either the physical activities or joyous spirits of Mrs. Veazie, whose flower and berry gardens at her home on upper Rankin street thrive under her care and attract many callers. Mrs. Veazie is a valued contributor to the Courier-Gazette, her nature articles being of an especially entertaining character—though for that matter so is everything she writes, for she has keen faculties of observation and memory and a straightforward and breezy style of expressing the thing with which her fancy is at the moment dealing.

Your friends are but the reflection of your inner self, therefore study those who are attracted to you and see what you yourself resemble—but if you want some delicious halibut, call up Young's Fish Market or we would love to have you come in yourself and get acquainted.

RHYTHMIC, graceful manner just seems to be woman's natural heritage. In unassuming attitudes, some women seem so charming, so graceful, that they immediately become the centre of attraction.

Women today are realizing the need of correct footwear in acquiring poise and that grace of manner men call charm.

Nature made the human foot beautiful—and made it flexible to support the body gracefully. Cantilever Flexible Arch Shoes are made to follow every curve and line of the natural foot and to flex with every foot movement. William A. Murray, who formerly conducted the Brook restaurant, has entered the employ of A. D. Bird Co.

A flag staff has been erected on the Children's Playground. Highly proper that the young folks should seek their daily recreation 'neath the Stars and Stripes.

E. Howard Crockett was yesterday displaying a fine string of fish—all the law allowed, in fact—which he caught at Damariscotta Pond. Two pickerel, each 25 inches long and some perch and black bass, were included.

When the night train reached South Newcastle Saturday, on its way to Rockland, the engineer found a culvert bridge ablaze. The emergency brake was applied and the train made a very pretty stop within a few yards of the fire. The blaze was soon extinguished and the train proceeded.

Considerable attention was attracted Saturday by the first of the famous Packard "straight eights" to make its appearance in this city. It was at the Snow-Hudson Co. garage and will be there Thursday and Friday of this week for demonstration.

Miss Bicknell will have a sale of art needle work, hand weaving, hand made imported stationery, novelty and greeting cards, Friday and Saturday, Aug. 10 and 11, at her home, 12 Knox street.—adv.

The Littlefield Memorial Sunday school will hold its picnic at Oakland Thursday. Take the 10.45 car.

Mr. Tate, from the Apperson factory, arrived in the city last night with one of the Apperson closed cars for A. C. Jones' agency, and for the balance of the week will be pretty busy demonstrating the possibilities of this new member of the Apperson family.

Donors known and unknown, but equally receiving the warm thanks of the board of managers, have lately favored the Home for Aged Women with gifts of green vegetables, lobsters and clams. These donations are always exceedingly helpful to the good work carried on by the home and are gratefully appreciated.

Since the death of President Harding there have been numerous inquiries as to what Dr. Croft's prophecy had to say on this subject. Reference to our files shows this: "A ruler and two ex-rulers will pass beyond, bringing about new political and national conditions of great importance. Death breaks the ranks of leaders in great world movements and brings about critical and depressive situations. The political index shows that our President will not be a candidate for re-election, nor will any candidate in previous campaigns be a party leader in either of the dominant political parties. A new leadership will arise in America and in the world."

A. C. Jones has sold one of the Apperson Sixes—the car with the mechanical gear shift—to Ralph Southworth of Belfast.

Miss Celeste Bridges is acting as stenographer at the office of Judge Miles during the two weeks' absence of Miss Ada Barbour.

James J. O'Hara's overtures at the Strand Theatre this week are: Today, excerpts from "Aida;" Wednesday and Thursday, "Katinka;" Friday and Saturday, "Poet and Peasant."

A direct contradiction to the frequently heard assertion that Maine's outlying islands are on the decline and at that are only about half civilized, is found in the fact that for the week just passed seven "flivers" were delivered on Swan's Island.

Members of Winslow-Holbrook Post, American Legion, are looking forward to next Sunday when their picnic at Spruce Head takes place. Snow's Camp will be the official headquarters. Cars will leave the Canteen on Limerock street at 9 a. m.

C. E. Goulding has just completed extensive repairs to E. Leroy Van Dine's cottage at Ashmead. Mr. Van Dine has returned to his home in Mead, Penn., and three Philadelphia young ladies are now occupying the cottage.

Ira W. Feeney, who recently advertised Monroe Island for sale, reports a number of responses to his offer. The island lies on the seaward side of Owl's Head, contains about 250 acres, and has a very large quantity of hard and soft wood. Its advantages for a summer home are obvious.

The midsummer issue of the New England telephone directory for the Rockland-Belfast district was delivered to subscribers yesterday. It is the most expensive magazine that anybody reads in Rockland, but, as they say about The Courier-Gazette, "we simply cannot keep house without it."

Each year, about this time, there is some readjustment of the city's teaching force, due to increased salaries offered by other places, but this year all vacancies are filled but one. Carlos R. Purinton, Miss Iola Smith and Miss Aldana Coleman have secured very advantageous offers of positions in other cities and have presented their resignations.

Although Everett L. Spear's crew is now working on the second story of the new building for The Courier-Gazette, it was only this morning that the corner stone was laid. It being press morning no formal exercises were held, but through the open windows of the board of managers, have lately favored the Home for Aged Women with gifts of green vegetables, lobsters and clams. These donations are always exceedingly helpful to the good work carried on by the home and are gratefully appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Sholes of Medford Hills, Mass., who have been moving to Cushing, had a very narrow escape from the Thompson road Sunday forenoon, when their horse became frightened and threw them in front of a trolley car. Both were taken to Sibley Hospital, where it was found that Mrs. Sholes had escaped with a slight wound on the head, and that Mr. Sholes' shoulder was injured. Mrs. Sholes was suffering from the shock of the accident.

Saturday's golf at the Country Club was enjoyed by a large group of players, the tournament taking the form of a two-ball foursome, in which the winners were Horace F. Lamb and Arthur Rogers with a net of 73. Three teams tied for second place with a net of 74—J. P. Carver, Charles Sherman, Victor P. Hall and E. S. Levensaler, H. N. McDougall and Lawrence B. MacAllister, who will play off the tie this week. The coming Saturday will see staged a handicap tournament, in which members are desired to register at once.

The reconstruction project at the Northend being carried on by N. B. Cobb is well under way. What was the Merrill studio has been moved to a new location adjoining the Harry Carr market and is now occupied by George A. Shute, barber. The foundations are being set to receive the double building formerly occupied by Mr. Shute and Miss L. E. Philmore's millinery establishment. The buildings will be rearranged and put into first class condition and some changes will be made in the tenants quarters. Mr. Shute has ordered a complete new outfit for his new shop.

A. T. Thurston, the Rockland electrical contractor, has lately completed an extensive job at the Alford's Lake Camp. As the result of six men's activities that popular institution now has an isolated water supply system, an electric dish washer, bread mixer, vegetable peeler, ice crusher and ice cream freezer. Mr. Thurston still has many irons in the fire, for he is doing the electrical work for the new wing at Knox Hospital, the Camden & Rockland Water Co.'s new building, the new Episcopal church rectory, Camden, and four summer homes owned by J. J. Cooney in Waldoboro.

The automatic proofer, which has just been installed at the Consolidated Baking Co.'s plant on Park street, is the last word in the way of modern equipment, and it may be safely said that there is no finer establishment of the kind and size in New England. The new machine, which is a second cousin to a wizard, has a capacity of 1800 loaves an hour, or about double the capacity of the hand proofer upon which the concern has heretofore depended. Its cost was $3500. The company's present output is about 8000 loaves a day, and the territory covered includes Knox, Lincoln, Sagadahoc, Kennebec, Penobscot, Waldo and Hancock counties. To cover their large district 10 trucks are used. There are about 30 persons on the payroll, which now amounts to about $800 weekly. Quite a nice little industry—and incidentally it is doing much to advertise Rockland.

A Spiritualist Social will be held in G. A. R. hall the evening of Aug. 9 at 7:30. Ice cream and cake will be sold and the general public is cordially invited. 93-94

ONE ON ALDERMAN ACHORN

And It Was a Gold One, Too—Friends Show Appreciation Of His Work For the Public Landing.

The most interesting incident in connection with the August session of the City Government last night was the presentation of a handsome gold watch to Alderman George A. Achorn of Ward 6, who more than anybody else, is responsible for the great improvement which has been made at the public landing opposite the foot of Pleasant street. The gift was made by appreciative citizens and Alderman Achorn's co-workers, and the completeness of the surprise was evident to all who watched the play of emotions on the alderman's genial features.

The presentation speech was made by His Honor, Mayor Brown, who spoke of the importance of this public landing; of the fact that it had been in an unfinished condition for some years; and of the fact that Alderman Achorn's energetic work had again placed the city on the map. The mayor also complimented the City Government for appropriating the $2800 which had made this improvement possible, and the public spirited citizens who had raised about $700 toward that purpose.

Two of Alderman Achorn's characteristics are modesty and bashfulness. Because of these there was no response forthcoming, but he is now telling the boys how grateful he is and how flabbergasted he felt when the surprise was sprung.

No action was taken last night in regard to the election of an additional policeman. The new regime of one day off in seven goes into effect with the regular police today.

Miss Dorothy Snow's resignation as overseer of the poor and special policeman was accepted, but the election of her successor was deferred until a later meeting.

Joseph Dondis, manager of Strand Theatre, was given permission to hold Sunday evening concerts, under the care of the city solicitor, the proceeds, after expenses are deducted, to go to some charitable institution.

Alderman Erskine's order for a hydrant at the corner of Traverse and Center streets was passed.

The cemetery bequest of $200, made by the late Julia Le Hills for the care of the William H. Hills' lot in Achorn cemetery, was accepted.

Tax Collector Lovejoy's busy month of July was represented by collections to the amount of $79,760.

Public auto licenses were granted to Alvin H. Arey, George B. Clark, Cleveland P. Harvey, Orel A. Pierson, A. W. Brewster, George H. Avery, Arthur Boken, Alden A. Stanley, J. C. Wiley, Arthur M. Sproul, C. F. Robbins, Fred C. Dean, Mitchell & Ranlett and Austin P. Brewer.

William J. Sullivan is having his annual vacation from M. B. & C. O. Perry's coal office. Last seen of him he was observing in Judge Miller's court by day and taking in the Twilight League games by night.

What came very close to being a tragedy at Oakland Park yesterday was averted by the timely presence and prompt action of Bert Kaler, who is employed on the grounds. The wild screams of a little girl brought him post haste to the waterfront, where he found that Gladys Pendexter, the 10 year old daughter of Melvin Pendexter of Rockland, had slipped from the ledges into deep water, while playing with her sister. She had gone down for the third time when Mr. Kaler arrived, but diving he located the child and brought her to the surface. Applying first aid services, with which he is quite familiar, Mr. Kaler was then kindly cared for by Mrs. Elizabeth Gregory and others at the Oakland restaurant.

CONSERVING EYESIGHT

Important Work Which Is Being Done For Children of the Public Schools.

Helping conserve the sight of Maine's school children by placing authoritative information on this important subject in the hands of the school teachers is one of the many activities of the Maine Public Health Association this summer. Under the auspices of the association Mrs. Winifred Hathaway, secretary of the national committee for the Prevention of Blindness, New York, has just concluded a special course of lectures at the University of Maine. Last week, with the cordial cooperation of the State Department of Education, Mrs. Hathaway lectured on Conservation of Vision at the State Normal School at Castine. Those who attended these classes do not hesitate to commend them for the practical good that they do. Many children are "backward" in their studies because of eye defects. Mrs. Hathaway points out ways in which these handicaps to an education may be removed if not entirely eliminated. The child with defective vision is to be seated in the school room in such a way that his handicap will be minimized. Often the parents do not suspect that the child needs attention given his eyes and this situation is to be met by notes to and conferences with the parents.

It was through the efforts of the Eye Section of the Maine Public Health Association that Mrs. Hathaway was brought to Maine. "Few persons realize what it means to be blind or to have the eyesight impaired almost to the point of blindness," a member of the M. P. H. A. Eye Section said today. "Nor do they realize the difficulty which the child of poor vision has in 'keeping up' with the rest of the class. Much defective vision is caused by diseases of the eye which prompt attention will relieve. Our section of the Maine Public Health Association seeks to correct the causes of these eye troubles and to impress upon the general public the need for more attention to this important phase of public health work."

WATERMAN'S BEACH

Sunday proved to be a beautiful day and the late haymakers improved it. There were a good many tons lying out doors during the long damp spell.

There were several parties dined on the beach Sunday. The Levensellers and Simmons' families from Warren and Rockport came early and got some clams and enjoyed a sea bath. They left us a large bottle of milk and we loaned them the key to the clam-bank.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hall of Hope made us a call about noon. Mr. Hall is chairman of the Hope school board and a great lover of Masonry. Mrs. Hall is better known here as Cad Wiley. She is the daughter of the late Capt. Andrew Wiley. It is always a pleasure to meet Carrie and see that same old smile. Readers of The Courier-Gazette have Mrs. A. I. Perry to thank for keeping them informed about the doings of their Hope friends.

Ernest Clark of Harvard Square, Cambridge, Mass., made me a call last week. Mr. Clark thought he would catch me napping, as he hadn't seen me for many moons, but the old boy looked to me just as he did when he was a little fat kid playing around Jones' corner at the north end of Suffolk street, Rockland. Ernest drove down from Cambridge to tell me how pleased he was at reading R. H. Burnham's letter that I sent to The Courier-Gazette some time ago. It appears that he and Mr. Burnham used to play marbles together on the sidewalk in front of the Haskell store. Mrs. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Wardwell also came in a big car to see that Ernest didn't eat too many shore dinners. Mr. Wardwell, who is of the Cambridge Insurance firm of Wardwell & Morse, had a game of tag with our boys. He appeared to be a lover of children. That made him welcome to anything in sight. A person who doesn't love children will bear watching.

Mr. and Mrs. Gonia with a carload of friends, some of them being from Westland Ave., Boston, stopped long enough to see the beach and Uncle Charles. They were friends of Carrie and John Baker and had heard them talk so much about Uncle Charles that they wanted to meet me on the beach. Another group of callers included Mrs. Katherine Overlock of Warren, Florence and Fred Overlock of East Warren and Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Percy of Springfield, Mass. Mr. Percy, who has carried the nickname of "Dandy" since he was six months old, is of genuine New England stock, tracing his ancestry back to Miles Standish of the Mayflower Company.

As I am writing this letter in my outdoor office I can see three flags flying at half-staff, reminding us of the Nation's great loss.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BILLIE BROWNIE'S CALLS

"I must make some calls today," said Billie Brownie as he brushed off his best brown suit, which he saved for calling, and his finest brown stocking cap.

So Billie started off to visit the zoo. He talked to the animals and heard of those who would have gone to sleep for the winter if they had not been in the zoo.

The snakes and the bears told him they would have gone to sleep for the winter if they had not been in the zoo, but that in the zoo they were fed regularly.

They told him that when they were free they ate a great deal in the fall and so could go without eating for a while.

And the zoo was warm, too, which made a difference, for then they did not have to look for a warm place as they did when they were free.

And the warmest thing to do in the winter was to sleep.

That was what a good many of the animals had said.

The prairie dogs told him that they slept in the winter whether they were in the zoo or not and that they dug holes and went down to sleep in them as soon as the cold weather came along.

Then, after Billie Brownie had visited the zoo animals he went to call on many of the fur-coated animals.

He talked to those who did not mind the winter, such as the rabbits and the muskrats and the squirrels.

They told of so many things they did and they seemed surprised he hadn't noticed all their little tricks before, for they weren't trying to hide them, they told him.

Then Billie Brownie met some of the little birds who were on their way to visit Miss Springtime.

"We're going further North," they told him.

He had a word with the quiet Rusty Grackle bird family and with the Robins he had a long talk.

The Song Sparrows were on their way to prepare for the springtime and so were the Blackbirds and the Bluebirds and the Meadow Larks.

"We birds," said Mrs. Robin, "flutter our wings when we're receiving food from the Mr. Robins just as the babies do."

"So many birds wave and flutter their wings just as people would jump up and down for joy or because of excitement."

"Mr. Rooster flaps his wings before he begins to crow as though he wanted to let everybody know that he was going to do something quite important."

"Oh, yes, we birds have our ways and our signs and our wings show expression just as people's faces, too, will show expression."

"But Billie Brownie," said Mrs. Robin, "you are calling almost between seasons, aren't you?"

"It's not winter and yet it's not spring."

"Yes," said Billie Brownie, "for I like to watch Old Man Winter give over the next season to Miss Springtime."

"I like to watch them do it. Sometimes they take a long time about it and they do act so amusingly."

"Old Man Winter will say to Miss Springtime: 'Oh, do take this season. I'm quite through. I really must be going.'"

"And Miss Springtime will say: 'Oh, no, Old Man Winter, I'm sure I'm in no hurry at all. Do take your time. Don't let me hurry you.'"

"That is the way they often act. Sometimes they are really in a hurry but this is usually the way they do," ended Billie Brownie as he smiled.

And Mrs. Robin looked at Billie Brownie out of her eye and then gave him a knowing wink.

"I understand, Billie Brownie. You and I understand."

THE ISLE OF LACROMA

Known As the Dark Star of the Ill Fated Hapsburgs—Part of Famous Republic.

"The little island of Lacroma on the Dalmatian coast, which the post-World War Treaty, of San Germain made Jugoslav territory, and which has just cost that new Kingdom more than half a million dollars of indemnity to its former owner, Princess Elizabeth of Austria, plays a new role by thus bringing something of value to a Hapsburg," says a bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society.

"The bit of territory might well have been known heretofore as the dark star of ill-fated Hapsburg archdukes. Maximilian, brother of the late Emperor Franz Joseph, left his beautiful retreat there to become for a brief period Emperor of Mexico—and to face a firing squad at Queretaro. Archduke Rudolph, son of Franz Joseph and heir to the imperial crown, counted Lacroma one of his favorite homes in the years before the tragedy that found him shot dead in a hunting lodge.

Part of Famous Republic

"Lacroma, only a mile long and less than half as wide, lies in the deep blue waters a little way off the shore of the Mediterranean's second Riviera, the coast across the Adriatic sea from the back of Italy's 'boot.' It is only half a mile from Ragusa, the famous medieval rival of Venice, which alone kept its independence when all the rest of the Adriatic coast was in the hands of the Turks or the Venetians. Lacroma, with the other islands of the neighborhood, was a part of the Republic of Ragusa, and came down through the centuries sheltered by that shrewd and enlightened commonwealth, and safe physically while the neighboring city suffered from its series of cruel earthquakes.

"Legend says Richard Coeur-de-Lion was shipwrecked on Lacroma and in gratitude for having his life saved built there a chapel and monastery. At any rate, in 1023 a Benedictine monastery was founded on Lacroma, and the island contained a religious community for centuries. Through all the ups and downs of history the island remained Ragusan territory until one of Napoleon's generals captured the city in 1808 and proclaimed the Republic to be at an end. A new and unwelcome chapter opened for Ragusa in 1815 when the Congress of Vienna, tossing bits of Europe about as it wished, gave Ragusa to the Austrians.

Bought By Maximilian of Mexico
"Maximilian bought the island about the middle of the nineteenth century and converted the ruined monastery into a chateau for himself. It was after his execution that his nephew, Rudolph, frequented the island. When the second great tragedy overtook the Hapsburgs the island and its buildings were handed over to the Dominicans; but in 1911 the imperial family regained possession and it was given before the World War to the Princess Elizabeth as a marriage dowry.

"The island is heavily wooded and covered with smaller growth of semi-tropical plants: oleanders, myrtles and aloes, with here and there tall fir trees. From the high rugged mainland this dark green patch of land seems a fairy island in a sapphire sea.

"In Lacroma's made-over monastery are relics that stir unhappy memories of Maximilian and his wife, Carlotta, who has been insane since the year of her husband's execution. The view from the island shoreward inspires more pleasant thoughts of a remote past. Against gray Monte Sergio rise the campaniles and domes, the massive medieval walls and the bastions and towers that tell of the one-time power of Ragusa, whose freighted merchant ships, known throughout the commercial world of their day, live in the expressive word they have given us, 'argosy.'"

HAD QUEER IDEA OF BEAUTY

Fashionable Ladies of Seventeenth Century Surely Wore Fearful and Wonderful Coiffures.

Against the elaborate coiffures worn by the fine ladies of New England, Rev. Increase Mather launched his tirade in 1683. "Will not the haughty daughters of Zion refrain their pride in apparel? Will they lay out their hair and wear false locks and towers like comets about their heads?" The contents of the "tower" are shown in the description of an accident to a young woman, in the Boston Gazette of 1771. "In an instant moment she was thrown down by a runaway and her tower received serious damage. It burst its outer thin wall of natural hair and disgorged cotton and wool and tow stuffing, false hair, loops of ribbon and gauze. Ill-bred boys kicked off portions of the various excrescences and the tower-wearer was jeered at until she was glad to escape with her own few natural locks." Hair dressers were dated up so far ahead that ladies to have their mountainous coiffures ready for a social affair had them built up two days ahead, slept sitting in chairs, or with their heads inclosed in a box.

Archery Popular in Lithuania.

In some remote parts of Lithuania archery is still a very popular sport. Men, women and children participate in it. The bow and arrow is displayed very prominently in the farm house, and is used as a practical weapon for small and big game. Contests in archery are made the occasion for great local holidays and big wagers.

Every Lithuanian has at least two wolf-hounds. Yearly wolf hunts are held, when every farmer within a radius of 10 or 15 miles arrives on a given day at an appointed place. Some of these hunting expeditions bring home as many as 50 wolves at one time. The beasts are skinned and the skins distributed among the heads of the families taking part in the hunt. The skins are made into warm coats and covers, and the meat is good for the dogs.

Rival Parties Called 'Hats' and 'Caps.'

During the greater part of the Eighteenth century two rival political parties in Sweden, known as "Hats" and "Caps," were in constant struggle, the "Hats" representing the nobles and the "Caps" being the party of the common people. The names were slogans in some bitter battles.

Hats have often also had an important place in distinguishing sects. The Puritan wore his severe high-crowned hat over his cropped head as a rebuke to the cavalier of the time, with his hair in curls, and a great sweeping plume on his low-crowned hat. The Quaker affected a broad-brimmed gray hat, which he refused to doff to any man—only to his Maker.

Tests of an Education.

There are other ways and methods of approaching the tests of an education, but if one can truthfully say that he is year by year making progress in correctness and precision in the use of the mother tongue, in getting refined and gentle manners, which are the results of fixed habits of thought and feeling, in applying sound standards of taste and appreciation, in the power and habit of reflection, in the power of growth and in the power to do, then surely whatever his studies he may truthfully say, "Thank God, I am being educated."—Nicholas Murray Butler.

This Busy World.

There are times when progress moves so rapidly that it taxes a man's strength to keep abreast of civilization. Many of us can sympathize with an unhappy-looking Western farmer, who always shook his head when the word "progress" was mentioned.

"What are you so low about, my friend?" some one asked him.

"Why," said he, "what with new-fangled farm machinery and airplanes and nitrogen in the air and wireless in the ground and on it and above it, and what with the old earth agolng round once in twenty-four hours, I'm about muzzled and stagnated."—Exchange.

Eyesight and Marksmanship.

Some curious researches have been made by army surgeons to determine the relationship between good eyesight and good target practice. It would appear, at first glance, that the two things must invariably depend on the one upon the other. But the facts lead to a different conclusion. At least, they show that one may have very defective eyesight and yet be a very accurate marksman. Astigmatism, myopia and other defects of vision may exist in a marked degree without destroying the ability to aim and shoot straight. In various armies soldiers are permitted to shoot from the right or the left shoulder, according to their own preference, which is often guided by the superiority of one eye over the other. Accuracy of judgment counts for as much as acuteness of vision with the good marksman.—Washington Star.

CUSHING HAS SCARE

Lightning Strikes Two Buildings, Destroys One and Nearly Kills Woman.

Last Friday's electrical storm, which was so severe for a brief spell in this city, lost none of its fury as it swept down river toward Cushing.

Lightning struck W. B. Holder's barn and fire completely destroyed that structure and its contents, including valuable farming tools. Only the heroic work of volunteers saved the house, and among those volunteers were some men from Thomaston who had the ride of their lives when they went down on Bert Benner's truck in seven minutes.

There was small insurance on the barn.

High tide saved the day so far as the house was concerned, but in the belief that the structure was doomed, the furniture was removed and even the doors and windows were taken out.

Lightning also struck the house of Mrs. Lizzie Wotton, in Cushing and cut up all sorts of capers inside. Mrs. Wotton's daughter, Mrs. Emma Morse, was struck and her right foot was paralyzed, the shoe being torn from it.

Mrs. Morse's condition was quite serious for some time but she is improving.

The Whittakers Invade Society

By DOROTHY DONAHUE

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The snow, that had piled up in soft, white heaps on the doorstep, blew in with a mighty rush of cold wind and powdered the thin, drab carpet in the hallway when Pa Whittaker opened the door to admit a tiny scared little ball of white fur.

"Phew! Purty bad night, ma," he ejaculated, shutting the door hurriedly on the piercing night air and peering mildly over his glasses at the plump, brown-eyed, silver-haired woman addressed as ma. Ma, however, showing little interest in the severe weather, packed away her knitting and regarded the clock with studied boredom.

"An' I'm mighty glad," pa continued, sitting down contentedly before the crackling, blazing fire, "that we ain't out."

Ma Whittaker sat forward in her chair and regarded the comfortable picture of pa and the fire without enthusiasm.

"Not worry, Pa Whittaker," she said scathingly, "we're never out. If the weather was as mild as midsummer we'd be in—just the same. We're always in!"

Pa rustled his newspaper to denote annoyance. Ma knew perfectly well what that rustling meant, but she did not swerve from her purpose. She had had this subject on her mind for some time and now that an opening had been made for discussion she was quite ready.

"Now, there's the grange, pa," she continued, a little less vigorously, in an attempt to interest rather than reproach, "barn dances, huskin' bees—and oh, any amount of amusements. Still, we—stick here."

With a strong show of exasperation pa crumpled the paper and finally turned to peer accusingly over the silver rim of his glasses. He was a poor listener, and now another lecture was to be thrust upon him.

"All right, ma, maybe so. We'll start tomorrow night and from then on we'll be an important factor in Crayville society," and pa returned to his paper, snickering in appreciation of his bright remark and satisfied to submit at once to ma's idea and evade the usual arguing and spluttering that always ended in defeat for pa.

Ma was surprised and delighted to the extent that she forgot to regret the fact that pa's immediate surrender made it impossible for her to submit her side of the expected debate, which would have passed another hour of the long, bleak evening.

And so every night the Whittakers hastened into Sunday apparel in eager anticipation. It was some ten or twelve nights later that the attitude of the Whittakers, in regard to "going out," became vastly different.

It was pa that dressed hurriedly—with a satisfied half smile that turned up the corners of his mouth, and a vague, contented look in his eyes. It was ma that groaned wearily in preparation and that let her looking flame stray towards the brilliant flame in the fireplace, while she crushed on the little round hat with the velvet pansies with reluctant, pudgy hands.

Tonight—the big dance at Peterkins. The fifth in two weeks—and pa was in a hurry to get there. In a hurry! His ready humor and evident sociability had made him an unquestionably popular participant in all of Crayville's affairs. And then, too, pa contained an adequate amount of that sprightly concoction called "pep."

No dance, modern or otherwise, held any terrors for him. Strong, wiry, eager and boastful—a fox-trot to the tune of "Lonesome Mambo Blues" or a good old-fashioned barn dance to "Turkey in the Straw"—all delighted. In short, as young Tim Willis put it—Pa Whittaker was "there."

And ma—well, ma was plump and puffy, and did not to any degree attain the popularity that pa boasted. Perhaps, because she had neglected them so long, the "sassiness" of Crayville, as pa called it, seemed to have formed a strong and well-guarded circle, and ma, it appeared, was to stay on the outside of that circle—with only an occasional peek over the top to satisfy her social tendencies. And then, unlike pa, Ma Whittaker could not dance her way into the hearts of the townspeople. Even once down the long Peterkin barn, in the throes of some strenuous, intricate dance, and ma would exit—panting.

Another week passed, and one night, as pa and ma settled down for a brief few minutes before the fire, ma decided to surrender. Outside, the wind howled angrily and soft snow pattered against frost-clouded windowpanes. Ma fumbled nervously with her knitting and glanced warily at pa, hope in her eyes.

"Purty bad night, pa."

"Uh-huh," Pa was indifferent to the weather.

"I'm glad that—we ain't out!"

Pa rustled the newspaper a second and then laid it aside.

"Oh, the Phillips' dance, tonight," he reminded her, wondering vaguely if she had forgotten.

"Oh, let's not—not go tonight, pa. I— Let's not go please."

The Moment of Need

In emergencies you run to your local drug store for a quick prescription. Or, to finish a dress before going on a trip, you find you need just a wee bit more cloth and run to the dry goods store to purchase it. Or, in numerous other ways you find your local stores convenient and ready to supply an urgent need.

But if you patronize these stores only when you need something in a hurry—if you habitually send money away to out of town concerns—the local stores cannot continue to exist. They must have your support at all times if you want them here in time of urgent need.

Fernald of East Boothbay, were married at the home of the bride's parents. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Peter MacQueen. ### BAND CONCERT THURSDAY

The Community band concert which was scheduled to be held Wednesday in Post Office square has been postponed until Thursday evening in view of the fact that Wednesday is a day on which the President's body will lie in state at Washington.

It has not been determined yet whether the lights will be installed in the Children's Playground by Thursday, so that the concerts can be held there in order that the people may have places to sit, but if so, notice will be given in Thursday's issue. The program given for this week by the Rockland Band is exceptionally good and the people of Rockland should avail themselves of the opportunity to hear it. Once again on Thursday night by request will be heard these two very popular selections, "Best Loved Southern Melodies," and "Songs from the Old Folks." The program as outlined for this week is:

March—Armistice Day Overture—Eubanker Waltz—Evening given by the Rockland Band. Popular—Carolina Mammy March—Old Circus Band Selection—Best Loved Southern Melodies. Popular—Selected Waltz—Selected Serenade—Marmala March—National Emblem Selection—Songs from the Old Folks. Popular—Circles Day Overture—Bridal Rose March—Phi-Kappa Emblem Finale—Star Spangled Banner.

The bolder the better in stripes or plaids on the new sports and travel coats. Stripes run horizontally, vertically and diagonally, it matters not which way. Sometimes the top of the coat is plain while the skirt is plaided or striped, the lower part then joining the upper with an applique treatment. They are collared with red or gray fox, badger or natural baby lynx. A plaid gray woolen coat takes a shot at cartridge pleating for its collar, cuffs and banding around the bottom. Caps still have a following, and one of a taupe, rich pile fabric encircles the throat with a scarf collar of printed crepe which also lines the cape. When coolness is the first requisite of a cape, then may green lace enshroud the wearer, providing the collar is shirred velvet.—Dry Goods Economist.

RETURN OF THE HOOPSKIRT

Suggested Revival of the Ancient Style Causes This Writer To Shudder.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

It is rumored in the ultra-fashionable circles that the hoopskirt, or "crinoline" is coming into vogue again. The idea of a hoopskirt brings up a train of thought that is not pleasant. Must it be so, I wonder? For what sin are we to be so punished? Shades of departed greatness—what are we coming to? Farewell to beautiful curves of softly rounded loveliness, to elastic step and graceful movement. Here we go into something that will be a terror, a nightmare, an incubus, that will make us loathe ourselves in our better moments when conscience comes to the front and in voice of gentle remonstrance murmurs, "Why have ye destroyed yourselves? Were ye not made beautiful?"

The lords of creation all through the past have been very indulgent to our feminine whims, very pitiful to our follies, but what will they say now? I wonder? They have overlooked our disgusting waterfalls and Grecian bends, they have pitied our weakness of the bustle, they have kindly ignored our bloomers, they have forgiven us the big sleeves which kept them at least two feet further from us than it was ever before deemed absolutely necessary to keep them; they pitied us horribly, I think, through the era of the hobble skirt—and heaven knows we needed pity—they have given only a fatherly smile of silent wonderment to our sheath gowns and abbreviated dresses; they have even "dinned" with faint praise" our loves of bonnets and daisies of hats—but what will they think now?

I imagine I see some poor fellow open his office door in a moment of leisure, just to look forth at the beauties of nature. What are those inflated balloons, these shapeless masses, the gigantic monstrosities that are moving to and fro on the earth? See that scornful smile on the kingly countenance as between set teeth he mutters "Great Scott!" and shuts the office door. Poor man, he has borne much. Who can blame him if at last patience has ceased to be a virtue and he has given up all hope of our reform? Let us hope it will not come to this—that strength will come from some source to fight this monster to the last bitter moment.

Damariscotta Paper Rightly Argues that Highway Commission Is Discriminating Against Us.

The Lincoln County News adds the following rebuke to the accumulating literature on the subject of the Atlantic Highway:

"It is certainly gratifying to be assured by members of the highway commission that the Atlantic Highway is not to be taken up bodily and carried into the interior of Maine. It is merely the traffic that is to be diverted from Sagadahoc, Lincoln and Knox counties. And moreover, this route is not by official fiat to be deprived of its name, probably because it would be a misnomer if applied to the new route. It would be like the name American House when attached to some hotels—no Americans ever put up there. No, the new route is to be dignified by the official title Route Number One and will be the one and the only route, for, on account of the geographical situation of Southern New England, this Route Number One is the only route into Maine from New York and Southern New England." But what's in a name anyway?

It is understood that the lack of a bridge at Bath had much weight with the highway commission. And when the matter of bridging the Kennebec comes before the 82nd legislature, it will doubtless be argued that a bridge is unnecessary because people from the west wishing to reach an eastern point can travel north. That is the theory that navigators worked on before Columbus discovered America. And that was less than four and a half centuries ago. Why change ideas so rapidly? And if traffic is diverted from the present popular route, how is the expense of maintaining a ferry to be met? Certainly some means must be provided for crossing at Bath for not all travelers will wish to take the inland route. Perhaps a scow propelled by a pole might be used as at some of the Lake Champlain ferries. With the present heavy traffic there is a big deficit and every year that deficit must necessarily become larger if ferry service is continued and traffic greatly reduced. The answer is that the taxpayers must foot the bill.

Another consideration that influenced the commission was that "the traveling public into Maine coming by automobile should be sent over the route"—not consulting their wishes—"by way of the largest population and the largest number of hotels." Poland Spring being especially mentioned. It might be said without any disparagement of the hostilities on Route Number One, that all along the real Atlantic Highway from Brunswick to Bar Harbor there are up-to-date hotels—including the Samoset at Rockland—where first class entertainment is provided. And summer tourists are not looking for places having the "largest population" but for the quiet and picturesque villages and the unrivaled scenery of rural Maine.

The considerations that have been advanced by the highway commission may serve as excuses they will not be generally accepted as adequate reasons for diverting the travel from the long established and popular route. The same influences are at work that killed the Bath proposition and is now holding up the construction of the section of road in Edgemoor. There may be no petty politics mixed up in it, and on the other hand there may be. Be that as it may, this section of the state that is being consistently and persistently discriminated against, should get together regardless of party affiliations and demand a square deal.

PARK THEATRE

Tomorrow and Thursday, "A Fool There Was" comes to the Park Theatre. It is dollars to doughnuts Manager Tomplin will have a chance to display the S. R. O. sign. Nothing will keep the eager public away from this vamp specialty. As a play, Porter Emerson Brown's bizarre conception of Kipling's poem made a tremendous hit; then, when Fox followed it up by a play in which the incomparable Theda Bara "shook such a wicked eye wiles locked up their husbands so that they would not be led from home."

"Ambition has killed more men than bullets." Some wise man wrote that. But ambition to have a wife never killed any man. It was the ambition to have some other man's wife or more than one that did the trick. That was the case of The Fool in "A Fool There Was." He had a wife, a beautiful child and a home. He was happy and did not know it. Then a vampire lurked himself at him, and things began to happen. He was not satisfied with one woman; he wanted another or thought he did. So the Fool "his goods he spent."

"Honor and faith and a sure intent." "And it wasn't the least what the lady meant." "But a fool must follow his natural bent." The big special feature will be played at advanced prices. Matinee prices 17 and 22c. Evening, Floor 35c. Balcony 25c. Children 10c.—adv.

EMPIRE THEATRE

Today ends the engagement of Hoot Gibson in "Shooting For Love," which has pleased Empire patrons immensely with its rich comedy and western cow-boy thrills. In it "Hoot" does a lot of things just as he used to do them back in the days when the bucking bronco was an all important bit of action in any western story.

Tomorrow and Thursday, an intensely interesting drama with an all-star cast in "The Woman He Loved" will be the featured attraction. It is an exciting recital of the emotions of love and hate with all the trimmings that go to make up a fast action play. An "Our Gang Comedy" and Screen Snapshots conclude the pleasing offering for Wednesday and Thursday.

Friday and Saturday, Dustin Farnum—"The Man From Maine" in one of his virile western dramas will no doubt pack the Empire to its doors.—adv.

FINE SHIPPING PORT

Something About Vancouver Which President Harding Recently Visited.

"Vancouver, where President Harding was one of the Presidents to pay a friendly visit to a city beyond the borders of the United States, has one of the half dozen safest and most commodious harbors in the world," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Indeed the Vancouver citizen will tell you that it is the second finest harbor in the world, generously leaving you to pick the first for your self. Shipping news of Vancouver often is shipping history as when, recently, the 'Empress of Canada' cut down the trans-Pacific running time to a new low record, and her crew was feted by the city for their performance."

"The Vancouver enthusiast proclaims his city 'American'—and it is just that in respect to enterprise, zest and civic spirit. In loyalty, though, it is extremely Canadian and it typifies the spirit of modern Canada as vividly as our own Kansas City, St. Louis, and Omaha represent our vigorous Mississippi-Missouri Valley."

Near in Time; Far in Customs

"Vancouver is five hours from Victoria by boat; but the two are five centuries apart in some of their customs. Their feeling toward each other is not one of jealousy—they are too different for that. Victoria regards Vancouver as a growing boy, exuberant, spirited, and a bit too flushed with his own achievements; Vancouver looks upon Victoria as an experienced woman, tolerant and one bestows upon a gentle maiden aunt who is a bit old-fashioned. Victoria is frankly Victorian; Vancouver is aggressively modern."

"Vancouver considers her commercial rival the third city of this unusual water-bound civic triangle, which is Seattle. She tries to convince the thousands of summer tourists, the great majority from the States that she has sights to offer as well as Victoria; and she seeks to show the business man that she affords the best shipping facilities north of San Francisco."

Vancouver—City and Island

"Vancouver has her troubles with nomenclature, as has San Francisco. When you say Vancouver you mean the city; it is the gist of the idea she seeks to impart. If you speak of Vancouver Island, Vancouver would never know you, as would the Victorians, simply say 'the island.' It troubles Vancouver a bit to have the capital city of British Columbia located on the 'island,' but occasional suggestions of a change have never been taken seriously."

"A railroad made Vancouver. Any one who spins across prairies and mountains or an express from Montreal or Toronto to Vancouver must marvel at the vision and skill of the men who 'bridged two oceans and linked four continents.'"

"With all the comforts of your club, you are whisked among snow-capped and unclimbed mountains, across dizzy canyons, through a five-mile tunnel, and if you would stop over to see some world-famed natural beauty spot, such as peak-dotted Banff or azure and altitudinous Lake Louise, the railroad has built you a hotel and even has thoughtfully provided ponies for your children to ride."

Goblins of the Beach

"It's clean streets, new office buildings, modern apartments, brisk traffic, all are a part of its modernism. Its distinctive recreation facility is its English Bathing Beach where, until a few years ago, the women kept pretty much to one end of the beach and men to the other. That time has passed. But the custom of wearing one's bathing robe to the edge of the water survives; and when it is removed it would seem that the actual swimming costume is meant, from its brevity, for swimming. It is not voluminous enough to hamper the swimmer. There is no parading the beach in these costumes. One goes to the English Bathing Beach to get in the water."

"The Beach withholds its most picturesque aspect until nightfall. Then many driftwood fires are built along the shore at which bathers dry themselves before going home in automobiles. With eerie figures dancing around many fires one may recall the days before Simon Fraser paddled a canoe along the river now named for him, and George Vancouver arrived, to find Indians tending beacon fires along these very shores to signal the homeward way to their fishing canoes."

CORN BORER'S RAVAGES

Causing Great Damage To Maine Corn Crop—What Should Be Done.

Great damage to the corn crop in all parts of the State is being done by the American corn borer, according to the report of State Horticulturist G. A. Yeaton. Every day inquiries are received at the Department of Agriculture as to the method of combatting this pest. Mr. Yeaton says that the situation over the State is worse than ever.

Farmers finding infested stocks of corn should cut them close to the ground and burn them so that no chances will be taken of the borers breeding. The natural enemies like the birds and diseases should bring the pest under control by the end of the season, Mr. Yeaton states.

While the native corn borers are quite general in the corn crop of the State, the European borers are confined to the southern part of the State. Mr. Yeaton noticed a field of corn in Richmond in which one stalk in every 50 was infested by the native borer. Of the two pests, the European and the native corn borer, the former is by far the most destructive. They multiply rapidly. A farmer in Medford, Mass., found 264 of them in a single hill of corn.

XIX. A SIMPLE VACUUM TUBE RECEIVING SET

This set is one of the simplest that can be devised to use a vacuum tube detector and it may be set up by anyone at a lower cost than the ordinary crystal sets may be purchased ready-made. Moreover, tuning in this set is simplified to the minimum, there being but two adjustments to be made, the variable condenser and the rheostat. The whole set is plainly shown in Fig. 54. A being the aerial, B the ground, C the variable condenser, D the inductance, E the grid-leak, F the fixed condenser, G the grid, H the plate of tube, I the rheostat, J the six-volt battery, K the phone receivers and L the 22 volt B-battery.

The single inductance used is easily made by winding a pasteboard tube about three inches in diameter and two inches long with about forty-six turns of No. 26 double-covered, cotton-insulated copper wire. There should be a tap-off taken at the twenty-third turn (which is done by making a loop in the wire) and then the next twenty-three turns wound on. The fixed condenser and grid leak can be made as described in the article on "condensers" and the grid-leak, for best results, should be variable, which is easily arranged by using a paper and pencil leak and by adding lines or erasing them as described under "condensers." The fixed condenser should be of about .001 mfd. and the variable condenser of from .0003 to .0007 mfd. Be sure to place the phone receiver and B-battery in series, the positive pole of the battery being connected to the tap-off on the inductance and the negative pole being led to the receiver as shown. In setting up and tuning you will very likely find it necessary to take one or two turns of wire from the upper end of the coil, which is easily done. In operating this set first bring the tube filament to a point where the oscillations produce a squeal or howl with the variable condenser set at zero. Then, by moving the condenser pointer over the scale slowly and carefully, you can determine the best point to receive signals. When this is determined, adjust the rheostat until the filament oscillates and the decrease the brightness a little. With a little practice and by marking the knobs you will be able to readily adjust the set very accurately and quickly.

STRAND THEATRE

If you like comedy-dramas that have an air of mystery, surrounded by an atmosphere of weird and uncanny happenings, don't fail to see "At the Sign of the Jack O'Lantern" which is being shown today. "At the Sign of the Jack O'Lantern" is a story of one's relatives. It was written by Myrtle Reed, author of "Lavender and Old Lace" and many other popular novels. The story is that of a young married couple who inherit their late Uncle Ebenezer's "Jack O'Lantern house and go there to live. But no sooner than they have arrived, relatives from every section of the country pour in to pay them a visit. And then the excitement begins. Doors slam mysteriously at night, floor boards creak and phantom shadows glide through the halls at midnight. To top it all there is a romance that ends in a decidedly novel fashion. Don't miss seeing this picture if you want to experience a really enjoyable evening of entertainment."

"The Glorious Fool," one of Mary Roberts Rinehart's famous stories will be shown in the screen version Wednesday and Thursday, and we prophesy that it will be one of the most popular pictures of the year. Prohibition liquor plays funny tricks. It makes some men feel like a division of doughboys, spilling for another war. Other men like Billy Grant, become excessively polite, and delight in being kind to near-sighted old ladies. Billy Grant was taken to the hospital in a dying condition—the physicians thought—and there on his supposed death-bed persuaded the pretty probationer to marry him. He had a grudge against his relatives and didn't want them to get his fortune. With that off his mind, he fell into an untroubled sleep and awoke on the road to recovery—with a wife he didn't know and who didn't know him. It's a fascinating situation and one that Mary Roberts Rinehart handles fascinatingly in her new Goldwyn photoplay—adv.

There will be a Harold Lloyd comedy tomorrow and Thursday and a Charlie Chaplin comedy Friday and Saturday.

"It Pays to Swim with the Current"

This is about two spark plugs. At the moment they are lying on the sales manager's desk in the establishment of a large middle-western hardware jobber.

One spark plug bears a name known wherever automobiles are used, the other a name seldom heard.

Both, says the sales manager, are good plugs. On the score of quality they run neck and neck.

"But," he adds, "we are discontinuing this line"—and he holds up the plug of unfamiliar name. "Yes, and our discount on it is larger, too."

"What's wrong with it? Not a thing. It's a good plug—mighty good plug, but—no one knows about it. It isn't advertised—the other one is. The demand is for the advertised make. And we've learned it pays to swim with the current, not against it."

More and more jobbers in every line of business are learning every day that it pays to swim with the current of popular demand.

"Our job," said one jobber, "is to supply markets, not create them. Let the manufacturer make a market for his goods, and we will handle it."

Said another—"Our salesmen carry a catalog with thousands of items in it. They haven't the time to push unadvertised goods. Their work is principally taking orders."

If you go among these wholesalers today to introduce a new product in competition with merchandise nationally advertised, unless the article is exceptional, you will be met everywhere by the injunction: "First go out and get a reputation for your goods through advertising."

The wholesaler knows by actual contact with dealers how they value speed of turnover, goods which move with a minimum of effort, goods people know about and ask for.
