REVUE NEXT WEEK

On Monday next matinee and evening the popular Jimmie Evans Revue opens a week's engagement at the Park Theatre in a musical melange of novelties. This is Mr. Evans' seventh season with his own musical revue. The opening scene is "Hello Everybody," and this production is rich comedy. The cast includes Jimmie Evans, Tom Carroll, Evelyn Parr, prima donna; Miss Cecil Bassill, another prima donna for several seasons played for George M. Cohan with "Little Nellie Kelly" and the Mary Co.; Miss Kitty Fraser, soprano; Miss Virginia Bannan, the little Russian dancer; Jimmie Mack, the strait man; Harry Flynn, dancer and Jack and Sam Ford, also dancers. The Jimmie Evans chorus will be practically the same as last season: Miss Evelyn Breen, Miss Marjorie Williams, Miss Mae Doherty, Miss Yvonne Pippin, Miss Madeline Bulgar, Miss Yvonne Pelletier, Miss Vera Bannan and Miss Viola Murphy.—adv.

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK

Expert Statistician Says Coolidge Stands Best Chance and Democrats No Chance—Political Briefs.

The most interesting feature in the first returns in The Literary Digest's poll of 15,000,000 votes is the remarkable showing made by La Follette. A total vote of 16,071 is tabulated for Coolidge, 5,596 for La Follette, and 3,792 for Davis with 307 votes for the other five candidates. Only 25,766 ballots have been returned at the date of publication but these came from the pivotal state of California, Illinois, New York, Ohio, and Pennsylvania, with La Follette running second in the first three and Davis second in the last two. In California, La Follette is running a strong second to Coolidge having 1,561 votes against the President's 1,624. "There would be an indication here," The Digest states, "that in California at least, both the Republicans and Democrats are losing heavily to the Progressive candidate, with the Republicans, as the party which polled the largest number of votes in the last election, the most serious losers." "Coolidge," it continues, "from these earliest returns, appears to be much stronger in Illinois, although here, also, a comparison of the votes cast by these same voters in 1923 would seem to indicate a fall from the large total vote rolled up by Mr. Harding four years ago. "In Ohio, these first few votes may be thought to suggest that Mr. Coolidge is far stronger today than his predecessor was in 1920. "Pennsylvania, also, would seem to be as firmly, or more firmly, planted in the Republican column. It must be remembered, of course, that the present tabulation of bal-

SOJOURNING IN EUROPE

Edward B. MacAllister Toured 11 Countries, Met a King and a Former President, and Touched Elbows With Other Famous Personages.

If you are planning a trip abroad travel independently, unless you are going into Austria and Germany, advises Edward B. MacAllister, who arrived home Saturday from a summer's sojourn in Europe. He bases his advice upon personal experience which taught him that one can travel alone more economically and follow individual tastes in a much more satisfactory manner. His qualifying statement in regard to Austria and Germany is the result of observations made with his own eyes, and the almost unanimous opinion expressed to him by tourists whom he encountered on railroad trains, steamboats and while on motor trips. The people of the two countries which so recently arrayed themselves against the Allies are unmistakably courteous in all their business dealings with the tourist, but on the street they apparently have nothing in common with the English speaking peoples, and there pervades the atmosphere a most uncomfortable feeling that hostile minds are at work. And there obtruded itself upon the Rockland attorney's vacation wanderings another subconscious thought that the Japanese are everywhere present. He met them in every city of consequence in the 11 countries which he visited—apparently well to do tourists, always seemingly on the watch, not actually spying perhaps, but always alert and watchful, and always interested in what the rival nations are doing. Mr. MacAllister does not mean by this that he scents the yellow peril to which so many writers allude; he merely sees and wonders. Has the Japanese omnipresence any significance?

Received By Royalty
Mr. MacAllister went abroad with the American Bar Association of which he has long been a member. The lawyers from the land of the free, arranged the various social events and sightseeing expeditions. The American party was so large that it was necessary to draw lots. In charge of the social side for England was a Col. West and Miss Haldane, daughter of the Lord Chancellor. It was through the latter's influence that Mr. MacAllister was enabled to participate in several important events which had not fallen to his lot in the drawing. Among these were the garden party at Lady Astor's and the Lord Mayor's banquet. At noon on the 23d day of July occurred the reception given by the American ambassador, Mr. Kellogg, at the American ambassador's residence, 10 Grosvenor place, in London. It was a most magnificent affair and the guests were in the receiving line. It was a rainy day, but several hundred persons stood outside in line, awaiting their turn to get into the reception.

A Toast in Ancient Brandy
That night the members of the Bar Association attended a dinner in the Inner Temple. Among the distinguished guests were ex-Secretary Hughes, Ambassador Kellogg, Judge Sanford and Chester Long. The banquet was presided over by the treasurer, Sir R. Wallace, who delivered the address of welcome. It was an exceedingly fine affair and the toast to the King was drunk in grandly more than 100 years old. Mr. MacAllister's companion at the table was Col. Hans Hamilton, who had been a member of the British Bar 51 years, and who, in spite of his advanced years, saw service in the World War. On the 23d Mr. MacAllister attended the presentation by the American Bar Association of the Blackstone Memorial in the Central Hall of the Royal Courts of Justice. The memorial is a life-sized statue of Blackstone, costing upward of $20,000. In the afternoon the visitors attended garden parties in the spacious grounds of Lincoln's Inn and Gray's Inn. In the evening a reception and banquet were given by the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London in the Guild Hall. This was a most gorgeous affair, and an exclusive one.

He Tries Deck Tennis
The Aquitania is 902 feet in length, has a beam of 97 feet and a gross tonnage of 45,647. She made the voyage from New York to Cherbourg in 5 days and 16 hours, her best day's run being 560 miles. She lost about 100 miles on account of dense fog. The diversions on this crossing included cards and deck tennis. Mr. MacAllister had excellent success at bridge, but playing deck tennis lamed him unbelievably. The weather throughout the entire trip was wonderful and the ocean was as well behaved as a mill pond. The first two days out of New York were exceedingly hot, and the temperature of the ocean showed 82 degrees. The lawyers arrived at Southampton July 15 and went directly to London, Mr. MacAllister being quartered at Hotel Cecil. Between sessions of the American Bar Association he visited the usual show places of the English metropolis and made a side trip into the Shakespeare country. On the first Sunday after their arrival 500 members of the American party attended special services at Westminster Cathedral and listened to a sermon which drew its text from Francis Bacon's essay on "Truth." Monday morning, July 21, the first official session of the American Bar Association was held, and the visitors were welcomed by their English brethren in Westminster Hall. Lord Chancellor Haldane and other judges of the Court were present, wearing their official robes. Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes in his capacity as president of the American Bar Association, replied to the address of welcome. It was a most impressive occasion, and this ancestral home of Common Law, where the Plantagenet sovereigns dispensed justice furnished a fitting background for it.

"Hello Mr. MacAllister!"
In the afternoon a garden party was given in honor of the visitors by Lord and Lady Philmore at Cam House, a magnificent estate in the very heart of London. The number of invitations was limited. Walking in the rose garden Mr. MacAllister met a clergyman who introduced himself as the Bishop of Jerusalem. Learning that the American came from Maine, the Bishop said that there was a Belfast lady in his party, and Mr. MacAllister had the pleasure of chatting with a Miss Haselton. On another occasion the Rockland attorney was walking in Regent street, absorbed in the interesting spectacle presented by that busy thoroughfare. His reflections were suddenly interrupted when he heard somebody say: "Hello, Mr. MacAllister."

Mr. MacAllister witnessed several fine theatrical productions in London, among them "Our Nell," and "Madame Pompadour." The latter is said to be booked for New York the coming winter. In London, Mr. MacAllister was also made an honorary member of the English Speaking Union, which he accepted with due gratitude, leaving the donors in ignorance of the fact that he had been a member of the organization several years. Visits Lady Astor's Home
July 25 was the last official day of the American Bar Association's visit. That afternoon the Americans attended a garden party given by Viscount and Viscountess Astor at Cleveland-on-Thames, a magnificent estate, where the visitors were delightfully entertained. Mr. MacAllister had a five-minute conversation with Lady Astor, whose extensive views on European politics would have made rather a sensation if they had been published. She glorified the English, who, she said, are accepting the after-war conditions with true British philosophy. The Americans were shown through the beautiful Astor home, and a small group, including, of course, our Mr. MacAllister, was shown by the housekeeper through the private apartments of the Astors. In the evening a reception was tendered the Americans by Lord Chancellor Haldane, Mrs. Haldane, Earl and Countess of Birkhead, Viscount and Viscountess Cave, Viscount Finlay and Lord and Lady Luckinister in the Palace of Westminster. "There were 3000 present, and it was as brilliant an assemblage as I would ever care to see," said Mr. MacAllister. For the first time in its history Westminster Hall was turned into a banquet hall. There were also several unofficial garden parties at Oxford and Cambridge. Saturday, the 25th Sir John and Lady Simon gave a reception and lunch in the gardens of Wadham College. Sunday Mr. MacAllister, with many other attorneys, went to Brighton Beach. Other places which he visited meantime included The Middle Temple and the Public Record Office in Chancery Lane, where may be seen the Magna Charta. He left the hospitable shores of the "light little isle," with a new feeling of reverence for the kingdom which has figured so prominently in history's pages for many centuries, and with a depth of appreciation for the gracious kindness which his English cousins had shown. On the second installment of the Courier-Gazette's interview, Mr. MacAllister crosses the English Channel, sees the capital which is called "Gay Paree," and then mingles with the people of two conquered nations. His views as to actual conditions in Berlin will be found most interesting reading.

men famous in other walks of life were seen strolling on the lawns or sitting under the trees listening to the 1st and 2d Life Guards and Coldstream Guards. He Meets King Edward
The democratic character of the function was exemplified when the time came for the King and Queen with the Prince of Wales and their suite to retire. A lane was formed and with complete absence of ceremony the Royal party smilingly accepted a mild form of hand-shaking, which as one of the English newspapers expressed it, is such a feature of American Presidential life. Mr. MacAllister was one of those fortunate enough to meet the King personally, but hundreds in the party were disappointed in not having attained that object. In the evening a limited number, about 250 were invited to a reception given by the Worshipful Company of Grocers—the oldest, and said to be the wealthiest guild in London. The Company was organized in the 14th century and claims a share in forwarding the work of the Reformation. Music for the reception was furnished by the Band of the Royal Regiment of Artillery. The Duke of Connaught and his son, Prince Arthur, whom the guests had been asked to meet, mingled freely in the gathering. Mr. MacAllister enjoyed a conversation of several minutes with the famous British field marshal and joined him in a glass of champagne. Prince Arthur also proved a very democratic personage. Mr. MacAllister counted himself exceedingly fortunate in being one of the 250 who "drew" this entertainment.

Meet Alden W. Allen Who Takes Charge of Rockland High School.

Principal of a High School which has 400 students, but no school-boys. That is the task which today confronts Alden W. Allen, but he has picked up the reins with a cheerfulness and courage which augur well for the success of his first term. Work is going ahead rapidly with the new High School building on Lincoln street, but there seems little likelihood that it will be in commission before the completion of the school year. Meantime the faculty

The students will be widely scattered through the city's churches, with the American Legion headquarters as the base of operations. Principal Allen's private office is in the American Legion building, formerly the Canteen. Mr. Allen graduated from Camden High School in 1912, and in the fall of that year entered Colby College. He was president of the Junior class, a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity and Upsilon Beta, the Freshman honorary society. He played on the varsity baseball team three years and was centerfielder in 1915 when it won the State championship. He also played two years on the varsity football team. He graduated in 1916 with the B. S. degree. Mr. Allen taught at Ricker Classical Institute in 1916-17 and in July of the latter year enlisted with the Naval Reserves at the Rockland Training Station. He was transferred to the Harvard Naval Academy the following month and in February, 1918, was commissioned ensign, and transferred to the Reserve Officers' Training School Naval Academy, Annapolis. He served 11 months on the U. S. S. Alabama, being discharged in June, 1919. He was physical director of Dexter High School in 1919-20; principal of Milo High School in 1920-22 and principal of Spaulding Memorial High School in Eastport in 1922-24. In vacations he has played baseball semi-professionally, being connected with some of the strongest teams in Maine and adjoining territory. He was playing with the Tacanets of Waterville in the State League last season when an accident compelled his retirement. During the past few weeks he has played with the Camden locals. Rockland High School has been so long and ably handled by a Rockland woman that it is gratifying to know that the work will be continued by a native of Knox county. Mr. Allen is a very fine type of young manhood, and backed by practical experience will not fail to "come through" with this, his most important assignment. The co-operation of parents and pupils, as usual will be an important factor in this success. Mr. Allen is married and has three children. He is occupying the Dr. Adams house on Chestnut street.

BAD UNION STREET SMASH
The ever dangerous corner at Union street and Talbot avenue was the scene of a bad smash Sunday afternoon, from which Howard Thomas of Willow street emerged with a fractured shoulder and two machines were towed home sady using up. The Thomas car, a light touring owned by Charles Staples of Willow street was proceeding upon a sedan operated by Harold Ingalls of Brighton, Mass., came down Talbot avenue and the crash occurred. Mr. Thomas received emergency treatment at the neighboring office of Dr. R. J. Wagnett. The only occupant of the sedan to be injured was Miss Virginia Palmer who was cut by flying glass. The lighter car was wrecked and the larger machine lost much glass and a running board besides suffering a damaged steering gear.

THREE TIMES A WEEK

CIRCULATION AFFIDAVIT
 Rockland, Sept. 23, 1924.
 Personally appeared Frank S. Lydell, who on oath declares that he is pressman in the office of the Rockland Publishing Co., and that of the issue of the Courier-Gazette of Sept. 23, 1924, there was printed a total of 6,262 copies.
 Before me, FRANK R. MILLER, Notary Public.

Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God.—Matt. 58.

Those who go to Union Fair this week should not content themselves with strolling the midway and seeing which horse wins. Let them spend a few moments in the exhibition hall and scan the products of the hardy husbandmen's summer toil. No where in the State do they produce finer apples than those which are plucked from the orchards of Union and vicinity; and nowhere is to be found finer produce than is harvested from the vegetable gardens of that same locality. The farmers in that section no longer drop seed into stony soil, hit or miss; they farm along scientific lines and they have a right to be proud of the showing they are able to make. By all means visit the Exhibition Hall.

Before the view of the Bowdoin had fairly set foot on American soil came the announcement that the men were eager to make another voyage to the Arctic. Loneliness, if nothing more, would seem to put a ban on these hazardous undertakings, but there are men of Donald B. MacMillan's sturdy type and heroic mold, who are ready to risk all, that they may make further contributions to science and geography. Small wonder that people came from afar Saturday to pay homage to the gallant little band which had selected Wisconsin as its starting point and terminus. Hats off to MacMillan!

That is an excellent suggestion made by James B. Felt, corresponding secretary of the Granite Cutters' Union at Clark Island. Mr. Felt would like to see a picnic held by the employers and employees, similar to the one recently held in Barre, Vt. He believes the best way to settle any grievance is to get together and talk it over, and hopes that the employers and employees will get together before the present bill of prices expires and settle things without trouble. Sentiment like this, carried into effect, will keep the wheels of industry from clogging, and will prevent idle days.

Trolley fares in Springfield, Mass., have been raised from 7 cents to 10, a story that is becoming familiar wherever the broomstick railways are found. Automobile competition has driven many companies to the wall, and the community which is able to retain a trolley system may count itself fortunate, even with the added expense of riding.

Hamilton F. Kean and Senator Walter E. Edge are waging a sharp contest for the Senatorial nomination in New Jersey today. It may be fairly said that the voters are wrought up to a keen edge of expectancy.

If you should hear anybody remark that Belfast "doesn't know beans" just refer them to that pack of 200,000 cans made by the Saco Valley Canning Co. in that city during the season just ended.

Jack Griffith aged 29 has married Mrs. Elizabeth Froy, aged 72, in Norfolk, Va. The fact that the officiating clergyman's name was Love may count for something.

TENANT'S HARBOR DAYS

I found this entry in one of Dad's diaries:
 "Thursday, Sept. 18, 1879—Alley went to Thomaston to see the ship launched today."

Forty-five years ago—and I remember it as though it happened yesterday. It was the ship J. B. Walker, the first, last and only ship I ever stood upon as she was launched. I can see that anchor plow through the field as it snubbed the launching craft and brought her stern around so she would not hit the wharf on the Thomaston side of the narrow river.

My impression is that the J. B. Walker was the last ship ever built at Thomaston. Am I right? Perhaps some reader of The Courier-Gazette can answer.

Build me straight, O worthy master, Staunch and strong a goodly vessel, That shall laugh at all disaster, And with wave and whirlwind wrestle. In the shipyard stood the master, With the model of the vessel, Covering many a roof of ground; Lay the timber piled around, Timber of chestnut and elm and oak, And scattered here and there with these The gnarled and crooked cedar knees, Brought from regions far away From Pascagoula's sunny bay, And the banks of the roaring Roanoke.

All is finished, and at length Has come the fateful day Of beauty and of strength, Today the vessel shall be launched! Then the master, With a gesture of command, Waved his hand: And at the word, Loud and sudden there was heard, And stirring with her foot the ground, The sound of hammers, blow on blow, Knocking away the shores and spurs. And see! she starts—she seems to feel The thrill of life along her keel, And stirring with her foot the ground, With one exulting, joyous bound, She leaps into the ocean's arms.

Boze.

PRISONERS OFFER REWARD

For Recapture of "Trusty" Who Escaped Saturday Night—Two Gold Teeth May Help Identify Him.

The wrath of the inmates of the Thomaston State Prison reached the boiling point Saturday night when they learned that George Kane, one of the "trusties" had gone over the wall and was still at large.

Angered at this betrayal of confidence on the very eve of the new order of things, when the prisoners and prison officials were coming to a more harmonious understanding, the men promptly subscribed from their personal funds the sum of $100, and asked Warden Eaton to add it to his own offer as a reward to anybody who would recapture the missing prisoner. The total reward is thus $150.

George Kane was sentenced from York county two years ago for the larceny of an automobile, his term of sentence being from two to four years. Within a few days he could have applied for the parole privilege, and probably would have received it. He has been employed around the deputy warden's office and Saturday afternoon was sent to the hospital on an errand. Getting another prisoner to attend the errand he crawled out of the bath-room window and went onto the athletic field. Faking an errand in the engine room he placed a plank against the side of the wall, shined to the top of that barricade and dropped over, light complexioned. An investigation showed that he had broken into the Deputy Warden's desk, and that $15 belonging to the prisoners had disappeared.

Kane is about 30 or 35 years old, weighs 165 pounds, stands 5 feet 6 or 7 inches, and is very light complexioned. Two gold teeth in front are distinguishing marks, and he may have tattoo marks.

AT CHURCH IN KLAN REGALIA

Delegation Present Methodists With Handsome Sum Toward New Heating Plant—Pastor Allen's Sermon.

With the auditorium packed to the doors with spectators and amid a hush so profound that one could hear the proverbial pin drop, Pratt Memorial M. E. church witnessed a ceremony Sunday morning that made history. Following the eleven figures, six men and five women clad in the hood and robe of the Ku Klux Klan proceeded slowly up the center aisle in measured steps and knelt before the pulpit, five on either side of the leader. The pastor, Rev. E. V. Allen, descended and from the hands of the shrouded leader received in utter silence a small white box. Then followed the impressive blessing and the white clad visitors departed as quietly as they had entered.

Mr. Allen opened the box and drew forth 15 ten dollar gold pieces and a greeting from the local branch of the Klan. The gist of the message was that the order wished to help the church toward the purchase of its new steam plant as an appreciation of the civic and religious work done by the church. The pastor's sermon on the theme "What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ," was listened to with profound attention. In part it follows:

There are times when men are confronted by questions they would gladly avoid. Pilate had such a question up for settlement. He did his best to avoid it. Jesus was sent to Herod with the hope that Herod would settle the matter and save Pilate the trouble. It would not do. The wily Herod evaded the issue and returned the accused Jesus to Pilate. Herod could not decide Pilate's question for him, it was Pilate who must make the decision and bear the consequences thereof.

There is nothing new in the principle underlying this event. The song of men, like Pilate, have the same problem on their hands. Much as we would like to evade the issue it will not leave us. We may try to pass it on to some Herod, but to no avail. It is our question, we must decide it for ourselves. Pilate is

A Three-ring Circus

Warren 9, Thomaston 5

The baseball season in Knox County came to an official close Saturday when Warren defeated Thomaston 9 to 5 on the Warren ground. The Knoxonians piled up an apparently safe lead in the first two innings, only to see Warren forge to the front while the game was still young. The visitors never scored after the 2d, and scarcely threatened. Warren, on the contrary, had a very bad first inning and then settled down to a high class performance, marred by a solitary error.

Cross was working in championship form after the 2d inning as shown by the fact that Thomaston's would-be sluggers were able to get only two singles off him. Wentworth made two star catches for Warren and hit for a total of four bases. Bornheimer again proved a flash on the base path turning in three hits, two of which were tributes to his speed. Averill's stick work was also a timely factor. Condon had a busy day behind the bat, accepting 18 of his 19 chances.

The score:

Let us make a few applications of this to local matters. If Jesus were to come to Rockland today what would he do? I do not want to go too far around that question. I am not willing to try and ask what he would want me to do. I want to understand as best I can what He Himself would do. It is not so hard for me to understand that, since I can study his life and know what he did when in Palestine. From that record I can gain an opinion as to what he would do in Rockland, Maine. The study of his life makes clear that he ever struck against sin, entrenched and protected in high places. In the recent convictions in Westbrook County for conspiracy to violate the 18th amendment and the Volstead act it was brought out in the testimony that men were induced to enter the liquor business and were promised protection by those who were elected to enforce the laws. I have been told that this record of history had been enacted in Rockland in times not too long past, and I am wondering if my hearers think Jesus would be silent on that type of corruption of mankind. I think not. Moreover, I can not conceive that, under our form of government, He would be silent when a policeman was instructed not to see too much, and this in a place where gambling and lawbreaking were going on.

I am not in the least a pessimist about these things. I think Knox County has abundant reason to congratulate itself in some of the lessons of the recent election. The re-election for another term of a man whose only fault so far as I learn it was that he prosecuted too many violators of the law, when there was a determined effort to defeat him on that ground, is very encouraging.

It shows that there is more decency in Knox County than some people had thought. It demonstrated the fact that, to accomplish reforms, all that is needed is to unite the forces that desire clean and honest government, and it can be secured. It illustrates the value of publicity. It shows honest and law-abiding people their strength when united. It shows what people can do for themselves. It is folly to pray for reform and do nothing to answer one's prayers. God does nothing for us that we can do for ourselves. We can not only improve conditions when we are determined to do so, but we shall gain confidence and self-reliance in the struggle and shall be better able to cope with new problems as they arise.

What shall we do with Jesus? Crucify Him? No. Prevent Him from speaking His truth to us? No. Enthrone Him in our hearts. Make Him our Lord and King. Follow under His banner as He leads to victory. Declare war in His name against every evil, wherever found, lest not until we have banished wrong from the earth, and made the Kingdom of the earth be ruled in righteousness, according to His word.

I firmly believe that God wants America to be a nation that will be a world-service nation, a world servant nation in the sense that she will help the other nations and the weaker nations to their best growth and development. In the following of the program America will be blessed, and will be a blessing to others as well.

Now if this is God's thought for America, is it not again a reasonable proposition that God wants men to guard America against whatever danger that threatens her overthrow? Does it not follow that if Jesus were on earth today he would work for the preservation of the ideals and government of this, what I feel is right to call "God's Country"? Can we escape the conclusion that if Jesus were here today, and were to know a movement that threatened the existence of our nation, that He would speak out plainly and fearlessly of that danger. He did that very thing 2,000 years ago concerning Warren Beats Thomaston In Season's Last Ball Game—Other Sporting Matters.

I SAW FRANK WHITNEY

at the Warren-Thomaston game in Warren Saturday. He was enjoying the sport, for baseball is one of his particular pets, but ever and anon I saw him shiver as the chill breeze swept across the field and I knew he was thinking of Fruitland Park, Fla., whither he will be heading on one of these frost-bitten days. I have run up against the ex-merchant on many occasions and as a traveling companion where there is anything of interest to be seen or heard he qualifies 100 per cent. He is not only a patron of sports, but always a worker in their behalf.—The Sporting Editor.

Warren 9, Thomaston 5

The baseball season in Knox County came to an official close Saturday when Warren defeated Thomaston 9 to 5 on the Warren ground. The Knoxonians piled up an apparently safe lead in the first two innings, only to see Warren forge to the front while the game was still young. The visitors never scored after the 2d, and scarcely threatened. Warren, on the contrary, had a very bad first inning and then settled down to a high class performance, marred by a solitary error.

Cross was working in championship form after the 2d inning as shown by the fact that Thomaston's would-be sluggers were able to get only two singles off him. Wentworth made two star catches for Warren and hit for a total of four bases. Bornheimer again proved a flash on the base path turning in three hits, two of which were tributes to his speed. Averill's stick work was also a timely factor. Condon had a busy day behind the bat, accepting 18 of his 19 chances.

The score:

The world's series will open in the American League city winning the pennant, Saturday, Oct. 4, unless a tie in either league necessitates a playoff.

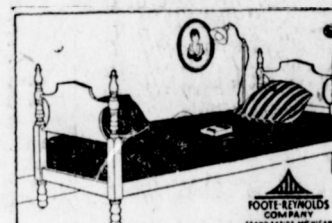

The first, second and sixth games will be played in the American League City and the third, fourth and fifth in the National League city. Games will be played on consecutive days, the teams traveling at night. If a seventh game is necessary the owners of the two contending teams will meet and toss a coin to determine in which city the deciding contest will be held. All world's series games will start at 2 o'clock eastern standard time.

If either league race ends in a tie, the president of the league in which the tie exists, will call the owners of the tied teams together to arrange for a series of three games to determine a winner. In the event this is

The good sloop Morning Star went onto the fishing grounds bright and early Sunday morning with Capt. Al Sawyer in command. Hargy W. French as mate, Daniel Snow before the mast, and "Crazy Bill" at cook. It was Mr. Snow's first fishing voyage, but nobody would ever have suspected it from the manner in which he yarned 'em in. In fact his record was up and tick with Mate French's, although the latter pulled in the largest one. Between whiles "Crazy Bill" tried his hand at the lines and while he didn't slit the fish into the cross-trees like his younger competitors, he demonstrated that he has not forgotten the art. The proceeds (although nets were not used) were 70 haddock and 20 cod.

An alarm from box 33 called the fire department and it seemed almost every automobile in Rockland to Tillson avenue last night when the pumper was hooked up and three lines laid for practice purposes. Ladders were raised on Bird block and a stream taken there. A big crowd was on hand to watch the fire ladders and give much free advice, enjoying itself immensely. The big pump ran sweetly under driver Fred Cheyne who acted in the absence of Capt. Hodgdon, who was on his vacation. The lure of the roaring engine was too much for his holiday spirit however and "Bill" was early on the scene. A 170 pound pressure was maintained handily with the engines half open. These tests are of great value to the department, showing chances for improvement here and there. They also show the public that in many instances the speed of fire apparatus was equalled if not outstripped by privately owned cars without the necessity of haste or the protection of the shrilling sirens.

Good Things for the Table

FOR those who like a substitute for meat in warm weather the nut loaf will be a suggestion: Nut Loaf.—Cook one cupful of rice in boiling salted water until tender; drain and add two cupfuls of bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, two tablespoonfuls of salt, one and one-half cupfuls of pecans and a dash of cayenne. Add a beaten egg, one tablespoonful of butter and one cupful of milk; add the bread crumbs, toasted, and enough of the milk to make a loaf to keep its shape. Mix all well and place in a baking pan with a little water. Bake 20 minutes. Serve hot with tomato sauce.

Rhubarb and Strawberry Conserve.—Cut rhubarb into three pounds of fresh, tender rhubarb; cook in water to cover until soft. Add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and one quart of berries; cook until well heated through. Add the juice of a lemon and simmer until thick. Seal in small cans or glasses.

Celery and Hamburger.—Take two cupfuls of bread crumbs, one cupful of diced celery, one-half cupful of walnut meats, one teaspoonful of poultry dressing, one teaspoonful of salt, cayenne to taste, one teaspoonful of grated onion, one teaspoonful of baking powder and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Soak the crumbs and squeeze dry; add the other ingredients. Put hamburger steak and this stuffing in layers in a baking pan, cover with the stuffing. Bake 40 minutes.

Fig Ice Cream.—Soak two pounds of figs over night in orange juice; put through a meat grinder in the morning and return to the juice; steam and cook until soft. To one pint of cream add one quart of milk, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar; boil; add a tablespoonful of lemon juice; cool; add the figs and some lemon rind and freeze as usual.

Frozen Pudding.—Make a custard of a pint of milk, three egg yolks, a cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt. When cool add a half teaspoonful of almond extract, fold in the egg whites beaten stiff and add a cupful of cream which has been whipped.

O. E. BLACKINGTON

Sudden Death of Rockland's Long-Time Merchant, In His 92d Year.

Oscar E. Blackington, who was for many years in the clothing business on Main street, died very suddenly at his home on Limerock street last night, in his 92d year. Funeral services will be held at the family residence Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Blackington was born at the West Meadows Jan. 6, 1832, son of the late Willard S. and Julia G. (Thomson) Blackington. The first 20 years of his long life were spent on the old homestead, driving a rock team and tending lime kilns. Leaving those occupations he went on the road, selling silverware and jewelry for A. K. Osmond of Lewiston. In 1861 he came back home and at North Haven bought from his brother-in-law, Hanson Mills, a general grocery store, which he conducted for three years. This was followed by three years' experience as a trader in Jonesport.

Mr. Blackington then came back to Rockland, where his future years were destined to be spent, and he bought from Oliver Wiggin the Lindsey stable, afterward conducted by the late Arthur B. Crockett. Twenty-two months later he sold this livery business to the late John F. Fogler and his brother, Oliver N. Blackington.

Then followed a five months' clerkship in the store of Cobb, Wight & Co.

The livery business still looked good to Mr. Blackington, and he built for that purpose the stable on Park street, where the Rockland Garage now stands. After eight years he sold the business to William A. Moody, and the building was subsequently burned.

With the disposal of his livery business, Mr. Blackington directed his activities to another channel—clothing business. He bought the John Fairfield Fogler store at The Brook, where he remained in trade for 16 years.

This store was located in Frye block which stood approximately where Chisholm Bros' candy store is now located. Mr. Blackington's next move was across Main street into one of the Farnsworth stores, where he remained five years. Down the street to Spear block was the next pilgrimage, the Blackington establishment being located in the middle store. The next and last change, under the veteran merchant's regime, was the removal to the northern store of Spear block which E. W. Berry had vacated.

The firm remained "O. E. Blackington" until 13 years ago when a half interest was bought by his son Lule E. Blackington, and the style was changed to O. E. Blackington & Son. Five years later the senior member retired, and the business is conducted by the son, under the name of L. E. Blackington, who has proven a worthy successor of a worthy sire.

The rod and gun were Mr. Blackington's favorite insigalia. He knew every cove and every trout stream within tramping distance of Rockland. Hunting for woodcock was his favorite recreation. "That's good enough sport for anybody," he said. Mr. Blackington always had a pronounced interest in municipal affairs, and found opportunity to exercise it in both branches of the City Government, besides serving four years as a member of the Registration Board and three years as assessor. He was a member of Rockland Lodge, F. & A. M., King Solomon's Temple Chapter, King Hiram Council, R. & A. M. and Charenton Commandery. He belonged at one time to the old Central Club.

Mr. Blackington had been twice married—June 19, 1862, to Julia Mansfield of Jonesport; and Sept. 5, 1887, to Julia M. Whittington.

Mr. Blackington is survived by his second wife, seven children—Jesse M., of North Bend, Ore.; Albert T., Lule E., and Kenneth W. of Rockland; Carl A. of Waterville; Mrs. E. Stewart O'Brien of Rockport and Mrs. Edward S. Lancaster of New Britain, Conn.; one brother, Col. Oliver N. Blackington of Limerock, Conn.; and one sister, Mrs. E. B. Hastings of Rockland.

O'Donnell-Butler

James William O'Donnell of Norwood, Mass., and Alice Scanhope, daughter of Rockport, were married Sept. 6 at the Baptist parsonage in Norwood, by Rev. R. L. Van Lennep. The bride was becomingly gowned in blue mission crepe, trimmed with white, and the groom wore a suit of blue serge. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. O'Rourke, and the impressive double ring service was used. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Augusta Butler of Rockport, a graduate of R. H. S. class of '23 and has been employed as head clerk in A. T. Harriott's jewelry store in Norwood. The groom was formerly of Gloucester, Mass., and is employed as assistant foreman in Bird's Paper Mill, East Walpole. He served two years in France, during the World War as corporal in the First Division. They will reside at 33 Cedar street, Norwood, Mass. The many Rockport friends of the bride extend congratulations and best wishes for a happy wedded life.

GREEN'S ISLAND

The sad news of the death of Fred Harmon in Bangor was a great blow to his uncle and aunt at Heron Neck Light station where he spent many of his summer vacations as well as one year. He was a promising young man of excellent habits. For several years he had been in the railway mail service. He left a father, mother, two sisters and a little niece at Jonesport. They are prostrated with grief. Only a short time before his death he visited his aged grandmother, Mrs. Eliza Robbins at Southwest Harbor. Fred was a favorite with all with whom he came in contact.

"Not until each loom is silent, And the shuttle ceases to fly, Will God unroll the picture, And explain the reason why The dark threads are so useful In the Weaver's skillful hand, As the threads of gold and silver For the pattern which he planned."

Master Harry Robbins has returned to his home at Southwest Harbor, accompanied by his aunt, Mrs. Fred Robbins, who will spend several weeks there and at Jonesport.

THE LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS

A Romance

by Zane Grey
Illustrations by IRWIN MYERS
Copyright, 1924, by Zane Grey and Irwin Myers

Zane Grey. The enlargement upon the dramatic phase of life that certainly has been dramatic, nevertheless gives a very genuine idea and a very real picture of the West as it was and as it is.

Without the leading and the pioneer instinct which he inherited, he probably would not have been the great writer of great western stories which he is today, but one may say that the spirit of the West and the spirit of the pioneer were born in him. He is a descendant of the famous Zane family which figured so largely in frontier history, and his birthplace, Zanesville, Ohio, takes its name from an ancestor of his.

Always an out-of-doors man, he has improved an opportunity to visit and spend long periods of time in practically all portions of the West. And he has gone into the out-of-doors places, into the deserts, into the more remote mountains and to the difficult spots which the average traveler does not reach. He has lived the life and found it charming and has presented it with an intimacy and accuracy touched by few writers of fiction or fact.

While gathering material for delightful novels, Mr. Grey has not overlooked the chance to familiarize himself with the charms of nature in its various manifestations. Best known to the general public for his romances, he is known to a great number of hunters, fishers and nature lovers for his books treating of the game, the fishing, the trees and other flora, the Indians, etc., of western America. Had he been raised on a cattle ranch, or a mining camp, among the Indians or with trappers and then sent away to school, he could hardly have been more efficient in presenting the charm of the West. As stated above, the reason lies in the fact that the love of it and the spirit of it were born in him.

CHAPTER I

A Gentleman of the Range.

WHEN Madeline Hammond stepped from the train at El Cajon, New Mexico, it was midnight, and her first impression was of a huge dark space of cool, windy emptiness, strange and silent, stretching away under great blinking white stars.

"Miss, there's no one to meet you," said the conductor anxiously. "I wired my brother," she replied. "He will be here presently. But if he should not come—surely I can find a hotel?"

"There's lodgings to be had. If you'll excuse me—this is no place for a lady like you to be alone at night. It's a rough little town—mostly Mexicans, miners, cowboys. And they carouse a lot. Besides, the revolution across the border has stirred up some excitement along the line. Miss, I guess it's safe enough, if you—"

"Thank you. I am not in the least afraid."

As the train started to glide away Miss Hammond walked toward the empty waiting station. She entered the empty waiting-room. An oil-lamp gave out a thick yellow light. A telephone instrument clicked faintly.

Madeline Hammond crossed the waiting-room to a window and, holding aside her veil, looked out. At first she could discern only a few dim lights, and these blurred in her sight. As her eyes grew accustomed to the darkness she saw a superbly built horse standing near the window. Beyond was a bare square. Through a hole in the window-glass came a cool breeze, and on it breathed a sound that struck coarsely upon her ears—a discordant mingling of laughter and sob and the tramp of boots to the hard music of a phonograph.

"Western revelry," mused Miss Hammond, as she left the window. "Now, what to do. I'll wait here. Perhaps the station agent will return soon, or Alfred will come for me."

As she sat down to wait she reviewed the causes which accounted for the remarkable situation in which she found herself. Madeline Hammond should be alone, at a late hour, in a dingy little western railroad station, was indeed extraordinary.

The close of her debutante year had been marked by the only unhappy experience of her life—the disgrace of her brother and his leaving home. She dated the beginning of a certain thoughtful habit of mind from that time, and dissatisfaction with the brilliant life society offered her.

There had been months of unrest, of curiously painful wonderment that her position, her wealth, her popularity no longer sufficed. She believed and fancied of a girl to become a woman of the world. And she had gone on as before, but no longer blind to the truth—that there was nothing her luxurious life could make it significant. And at last she knew what she needed—to be alone, to brood for long hours, to gaze out on lonely, silent, darkening stretches, to watch the stars, to race her soul, to find her real self.

Then it was she had first thought of visiting the brother who had gone west to cast his fortune with the cattlemen. As it happened, she had friends who were on the eve of starting for California, and she made a quick decision to travel with them. When she calmly announced her intention of going out west her of a slight quickening of her pulse. Madeline had only a limited knowledge of the West. Like all of her class, she had traveled Europe and had neglected America. She had been astounded at the interminable distance she had traveled, and if there had been anything attractive to look at in all that journey she had missed it in the night.

A faint sound like the rattling of thin chains diverted Madeline's attention. At first she imagined it was made by the telephone wires. Then she heard a step. The door swung wide, a tall man entered, and with him came the clinking rattle. She realized that the sound came from his spurs.

"Will you please direct me to a hotel?" asked Madeline, rising.

The cowboy removed his sombrero, and the sweep he made with it and the accompanying bow, despite their exaggeration, had a kind of rude grace. He took two long strides toward her.

"Lady, are you married?"

In the past Miss Hammond's sense of humor had often helped her to overlook critical exactions natural to her breeding. She kept silence, and she imagined it was just as well that her veil hid her face at the moment. She had been prepared to find cowboys rather striking, and she had been warned not to laugh at them.

This gentleman of the range deliberately reached down and took up her left hand. Before she returned the station agent will return soon, or Alfred will come for me."

"Fine spark, but no wedding ring," he drawled. "Lady, I'm glad to see you're not married."

He released her hand and returned to the window.

"You see, the only hotel in this here town is against boarding married women. Bad business for hotels to have married women. Keeps the boys away. You see, this isn't Reno."

Then he laughed rather boyishly, and from that, and the way he slouched on his sombrero, Madeline realized he was half drunk. As she instinctively recoiled she not only gave him a keener glance, but stepped into a position where a better light shone on his face. It was like red bronze, bold and sharp. Like that of all women whose beauty and charm had brought them much before the world. Miss Hammond's intuition had been developed until she had a delicate and exquisitely sensitive perception of the nature of men and of her effect upon them. This crude cowboy, under the influence of drink, had affronted her; nevertheless, whatever was in his mind, he meant no insult.

"I shall be greatly obliged to you if you will show me to the hotel," she said.

"Lady, you wait here," he replied, slowly, as if his thought did not come so swiftly. "I'll go fetch the porter."

Every issue of The Courier-Gazette is a salesman, visiting three times a week the homes of its vicinity and soliciting business for its advertisers.

She thanked him, and as he went out, closing the door, she sat down in considerable relief. It occurred to her that she should have mentioned her brother's name. Then she fell to wondering what living with such uncouth cowboys had done to Alfred. She alone of her family had ever believed in any later generations. Alfred Hammond, and her faith had scarcely survived the two years of silence.

Waiting there, she again found herself listening to the moan of the wind through the wires. Then Madeline heard a rapid patter, low at first and growing louder, which presently she recognized as the galloping of horses. She went to the window, thinking, hoping her brother had arrived. But as the clatter increased to a roar, shadows sped by—lean horses, flying manes and tails, sombered riders, all strange and wild in her sight. Recalling what the conductor had said, she was at some pains to quell her uneasiness. Then out of the gloom two figures appeared, one tall, the other slight. The cowboy entered, pulling a disheveled figure—that of a priest, a padre, whose mantle had manifestly been disarranged by the rude grasp of his captor. Plain it was that the padre was extremely terrified.

Madeline Hammond gazed in bewilderment at the little man, so pale and shaken, and a protest trembled upon her lips; but it was never uttered, for this half-drunken cowboy now appeared to be a cool, grim-smiling devil; and stretching out a long arm, he grasped her and swung her back to the bench.

"You stay there," he ordered. His voice, though husky, was brutal nor harsh nor cruel, had the uncountable effect of making her feel powerless to move. No man had before addressed her in such a tone. It was the woman in her that he addressed, the personality of the proud Madeline Hammond.

The padre lifted his clasped hands as if supplicating for his life, and began to speak hurriedly in Spanish. Madeline did not understand the language. The cowboy pulled out a huge gun and brandished it in the priest's face. Then he lowered it, apparently to point it at the priest's feet. There was a red flash, and then a thundering report that stunned Madeline. The room filled with smoke and the smell of powder. When she opened her eyes distinctly through the smoke she experienced a sensation of immeasurable relief that the cowboy had not shot the padre. But he was still waving the gun, and now appeared to be dragging his victim toward her. What possibly could be the drunken fool's intention? This must be, she surely was a cowboy trick. Madeline no sooner thought of it than she was certain her brother was introducing her to a Wild West amusement. She could scarcely believe it, yet it must be true. Probably he stood just outside the door or window laughing at her embarrassment.

Anger checked her panic. She straightened up with a gasp, and sure this surprise had left her and started for the door. But the cowboy barred her passage—grasped her arm. Then Madeline divined that her brother could not have any knowledge of this indignity. It was no trick. Pulse, dignity, culture—all the acquired habits of character—fled before the instinct to flight.

Madeline Hammond leaned weakly back in her seat, cold and sick, and for a moment her ears throbbled to the tramp of the dancers across the way and the rhythm of the cheap music. Then in the open doorway flashed a girl's tragic face, lighted by dark eyes and framed by dusky hair. The girl reached a slim brown hand round the door and held on as if to support herself.

"Senor—Gene!" she exclaimed; and breathless glad recognition made a sudden break in her terror. "Bonita!" The cowboy leaped to her. "Are you hurt?"

"No, senor."

"He took hold of her. 'I heard—somebody got shot. Was it Danny?' "No, senor."

"Did Danny do the shooting?" "Tell me, girl."

"I'm sure glad. I thought Danny was mixed up in that. He had Stillwell's money for the boys—I was afraid. . . . Say, Bonita, but you'll get in trouble. Who was with you, 'Willie did you do'?"

"Senor Gene—they Don Carlos vaqueros—they quarrel over me. I only dance a little, smile a little, and they quarrel. I beg they be good—watch out for Sheriff Howe!"

"But how won't you put me in jail. Take my horse and ride. The Peloncillo trail. Bonita, promise to stay away from El Cajon."

"Si, Senor."

He led her outside. Madeline heard the horse snort and champ.

Many Pangs That Pass for Rheumatism Are Really Due To Weak Kidneys.

Do you suffer the agonizing pangs of rheumatism? Are you tortured with rheumatic joints and stabbing twinges and you should know that many so-called rheumatic troubles are due to an excess of uric acid and must be treated through the kidneys. When the kidneys weaken, the whole system is upset by these body poisons. Help your kidneys with a stimulant diuretic. Use Doan's Pills, the remedy your neighbors recommend. Here is a Rockland man's case:

E. C. Walker, 33 Cedar street, says: "Rheumatic pains settled in the small of my back and hips, making my miserable every time I stopped. Inflammatory symptoms developed in my feet and ankles and they were swollen. After using three boxes of Doan's Pills, the trouble disappeared."

ALMOST FOUR YEARS LATER, Mr. Walker added: "I have never had Doan's fail to do me good when ever I have had occasion to take a kidney medicine."

How strange—stranger than anything that had ever happened to her before—was it to hear that name on the lips of this cowboy? It was a name by which she was familiarly known, though only those nearest and dearest to her had the privilege of using it. And now it revived her dulled faculties, and by an effort she regained control of herself.

"You are Majesty Hammond," and this time he affirmed wonderingly rather than questioned. Madeline rose and faced him. "Yes, I am."

He hammed his gun back into its holster. "Well, I reckon we won't go on with it, then."

"With what, sir? And why did you force me to say 'Si' to this priest?"

"I reckon that was a way I took to show him you'd be willing to get married."

"Oh!—You—you! . . . " Words failed her.

This appeared to galvanize the cowboy into action. He grasped the padre and led him toward the door, cursing and threatening, no doubt enjoining secrecy. Then he pushed her across the threshold and stood there breathing hard and wrestling with himself.

"Here—wait—wait a minute. Miss Hammond," he said huskily. "You could fall into worse company than mine—though I reckon you sure think I'm a pretty drunk, but I'm all right otherwise. Just wait a minute."

She stood quivering and blazing with wrath, and watched this savage fight his drunkenness. Madeline saw his dark, damp hair lift from his brows as he held it up to the cool wind.

The cowboy turned and began to talk. "You see—I was pretty drunk." He bowed. "There was a fiesta—and a wedding. I do fool things when I'm drunk. I made a fool bet I'd marry the first girl who came to town. . . . If you hadn't worn that veil—the fellows were joshing me. Ed Linton was getting married—and everybody always wants to gamble. . . . I must have been pretty drunk."

"Explanations are not necessary," she interrupted. "I am very tired—distressed. The hour is late. Have you the slightest idea what it means to be a gentleman?"

His bronzed face burned a flaming crimson. "Is my brother here—in town tonight?" Madeline went on. "No. He'll be at his ranch."

"But I wired him."

"Like as not the message is over in his box at the P. O. He'll be in town tomorrow. He's shipping cattle for Stillwell."

"Meanwhile I must go to a hotel. Will you please—"

If he heard her last words he showed no evidence of it. A noise outside had attracted his attention. Madeline listened. Low voices of men, the softer liquid tones of a woman, drifted in through the open door. They spoke in Spanish, and the voices grew louder. Then the woman's voice, hurried and broken, rising higher, was eloquent of vain appeal.

The cowboy's demeanor started Madeline into anticipation of something dreadful. She was not deceived. From outside came the sound of a scuffle—a muffled shot, a groan, the thud of a falling body, a woman's low cry and footsteps padding away in rapid retreat.

Madeline Hammond leaned weakly back in her seat, cold and sick, and for a moment her ears throbbled to the tramp of the dancers across the way and the rhythm of the cheap music. Then in the open doorway flashed a girl's tragic face, lighted by dark eyes and framed by dusky hair. The girl reached a slim brown hand round the door and held on as if to support herself.

his bit. The cowboy spoke low; only a few words were intelligible: "stirups . . . wait . . . out of town . . . mountain . . . trail . . . now ride!"

A moment's silence ensued, and was broken by a pounding of hoofs, a patter of gravel. Then Madeline saw a big, dark horse run into the wide space. She caught a glimpse of wind-swept scarf and hair, a little form low down in the saddle. The horse was outlined in black against the line of dim lights. There was something wild and splendid in his flight.

Directly the cowboy appeared again in the doorway. "Miss Hammond, I reckon we want to rustle out of here. Been bad goings-on. And there's a train due."

She hurried into the open air, not daring to look back or to either side. Her guide strode swiftly. She had almost to run to keep up with him.

Suddenly aware that she had been led beyond the line of houses, she spoke: "Where are you taking me?" "To Florence Kingsley," he replied. "Who is she?"

"I reckon she's your brother's best friend out here."

Madeline kept pace with the cowboy for a few moments longer, and then she stopped. It was as much from necessity to catch her breath as it was from recurring fear. The cowboy, missing her, came back the few intervening steps. Then he waited, still silent, looming beside her.

"It's so dark, so lonely," she faltered. "How do I know . . . about what he had said. Any answer to her would have served if it had been kind."

As she walked on into the windy darkness, much relieved that he had answered as he had, reflecting that he had yet to prove his words true, she began to grasp the deeper significance of them. There was a revival of pride that made her feel that she ought to scorn to think at all about such a man.

"Florence Kingsley's guide turned off the walk and rapped at a door of a low-roofed house."

"Hallo—who's there?" a deep voice answered.

"Gene Stewart," said the cowboy. "Call Florence in."

Thump of footsteps followed, a tap on a door, and voices. Madeline heard a woman exclaim: "Gene! here when there's a dance in town! Something wrong out on the range?"

A light flashed up and shone bright through a window. In another moment there came a patter of soft steps, and the door opened to disclose a woman holding a lamp.

"Gene! Al's not—"

"Al is all right," interrupted the cowboy.

Madeline had two sensations then—one of wonder at the note of alarm and love in the woman's voice, and the other of unutterable relief to be safe with a friend of her brother's.

"It's Al's sister—came on tonight's train," the cowboy was saying. "I happened to be at the station, and I've fetched her up to you."

Madeline came forward out of the shadow.

"Not—not really Majesty Hammond," exclaimed Florence Kingsley. She nearly dropped the lamp, and she looked, astounded beyond belief.

"Yes, I am really she," replied Madeline. "My train was late and for some reason Alfred did not meet me. Mr.—Mr. Stewart saw fit to bring me to you instead of taking me to a hotel."

"Oh, I'm so glad to meet you," replied Florence, warmly. "Do come in. I'm so surprised. I forgot my manners. Why, you are white as a sheet. You must be tired. What a long wait you had at the station! If I had known you were coming! Indeed, you are very pale. Are you ill?"

"No. I am very tired. Traveling so far by rail is harder than I imagined. I did have rather a long wait after arriving at the station, but I can't say that it was lonely."

Florence Kingsley searched Madeline's face with keen eyes, and then took a long, significant look at the silent Stewart. With that she liberally and quietly closed a door leading into another room.

"Miss Hammond, what has happened?" She had lowered her voice. "I do not wish to recall all that has happened," replied Madeline. "I shall tell Alfred, however, that I would rather have met a hostile Apache than a cowboy."

"Please don't tell Al that!" cried Florence. Then she grasped Stewart and pulled him close to the light. "Gene, you're drunk!"

"Now, see here, Flo, I only—"

"I don't want to know. I'd tell it. Gene, aren't you ever going to stop drinking. You'll lose all your friends, Molly and I have pleaded with you, and now you've gone and done—God knows what!"

"What do women want to wear vells for?" he growled. "I'd have known her but for that veil."

THE LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS

By Zane Grey

"There had been months of unrest, of curiously painful wonderment that her position, her wealth, her popularity no longer sufficed. She believed that she had lived through the dreams and fancies of a girl to become a woman of the world. And she had gone on as before, a part of the glittering show, but no longer blind to the truth—that there was nothing in her luxurious life to make it significant."

But this New York society girl buys a cattle ranch which becomes the center of frontier warfare. She finds an object for her wealth and abilities; she finds the keenest zest in living and finally—she finds love.

VEDIE I. WILLIAMS

Vedie I. wife of John R. Williams died at her home in Clark Island Sept. 11. The deceased was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Grierson and was born in Dalbeattie, Scotland. She came to this country at the age of 11. The family settled at Clark Island where she lived the greater part of her life. Mrs. Williams is survived by her husband, John R. Williams; one son, William G.; two daughters, Winifred E. and Mrs. Leroy Jackson; and four sisters, Mrs. Mary Baum of Clark Island, Mrs. Margaret McCracken of Amnapolis, Md., Mrs. Alfred Zeender of Branford, Conn. and Mrs. Elizabeth Hinckley, Stony Creek, Conn.

Mrs. Williams was a member of the Eastern Star and Rebekah lodges of Tenants Harbor. She was postmaster's assistant at the island from 1904 until her first illness of three years ago.

Funeral service was held from the residence Sunday, Sept. 14, Rev. B. P. Browne officiating. There were many beautiful flowers showing the love and respect in which she was held. The interment was in Wiley's Corner cemetery.

CLARK ISLAND BUSY

Secretary Field Reports 115 Cutters At Work—Wants Employers' and Employees' Picnic.

The current issue of the Quarry Workers' Journal contains the following Clark Island communication from James B. Felt:

"We had our regular meeting on the third Thursday of the month with brother A. Morrison in the chair, and I am pleased to report we had quite a large number of the boys present. We attended to the regular business in order. We have quite a large branch here—about 100 members' names on the books and only two that are in arrears—a good record."

"The company is doing a large business in the paving line. They are shipping a large load of paving about every week. There is something like 115 paving cutters here at present."

"I was pleased to read in the G. C. I. Journal about the picnic the Barry Vt. employers and employees had together. I think it is about time for the same thing to happen along the coast of Maine for I think the best way to settle any grievance is to get together and talk it over. My best wish is that the employers and employees will meet before our bill of prices expires and have things all settled up and avoid any trouble."

WALDOBORO

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Caswell have returned to Walldham, Mass., after spending several days in town. Paul Dusha of New York has joined his family here for three weeks.

Mrs. Theresa Keene has moved into Mrs. Frederick K. Brummitt's house on Friendship street.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson S. Mayo have closed their camp at Martin's Point and returned to Rochester. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Harris and children of Montclair, N. J., who have been their guests.

Solomon David's bungalow on Friendship street is rapidly nearing completion.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Miller, Roger Miller and Russell Benner spent the weekend in Arrostook.

Mrs. Lillian Seavey Frost and Miss Mildred C. Palmer of Bath were in town Saturday enroute to Martin's Point, where Mrs. Frost will remain for the week.

Letters have been received from Charles W. Wallace announcing the safe arrival in California of himself and family who left here by motor in July. The Wallaces had an interesting trip visiting friends enroute. Among these were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Benner and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gammagher formerly of Walldoboro.

Mrs. Lucy W. Bliss died at her home on church street Thursday evening aged 77 years. She was born Sept. 4, 1847, the daughter of Newell and Sarah Arnold Ludwig. She was married to George Bliss July 24, 1871. Solidon has a woman been closer identified with the life of the community than has Mrs. Bliss. For years she contributed with her beautiful voice to every public movement and sung in the congregational choir as long as that church remained open. Although really advanced in years her youthful appearance and active interest in present day affairs made it difficult for people to realize her actual age. She will be greatly missed not only by her many friends but by the entire community where she was well known through her former position as librarian of the public library. Mrs. Bliss was a member of the First Congregational church and vice president of the Central Cemetery Association. She leaves two children, Mrs. Louise Bliss Miller and George Edward Bliss of California, and a sister, Miss Susan E. Ludwig. The last services were held at her home Sunday afternoon with Rev. Guy McQuade as the officiating clergyman. Interment was in the family lot in the Central cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Long announce the engagement of their daughter Margaret and Earle R. Conant of Rockland.

The "Breaking Point" scored a huge success at the Star Theatre Saturday night. No smaller one is anticipated for the great story of regeneration, "The Moral Sinner" to be shown tonight. Dorothy Dalton who is a local favorite has the part of Leah Kitchina, so well known to the public through the famous novel by that name. This is the role of a daughter of one of the most notorious crooks in the Paris underworld and she herself a thief of no mean repute. The picture is based on the regeneration theme and will appeal to all classes of patrons. There's action in it, intense and dramatic, humor of the richest kind and a happy ending. James Rennie, Alphonso Ehler, Paul McAllister and Walter Perreault are associated with Miss Dalton in this great screen success.

James A. Waltz has established undertaking rooms in the Sanborn block, formerly occupied by K. L. Deymore. Mr. Waltz has passed the examination of the State Board of Examiners and is a graduate of the New England Institute of Anatomy. He had four years experience with Mr. Deymore.

Claude A. Bell, June 8, 1921.
P. O. Box 1237, Lowell, Mass.

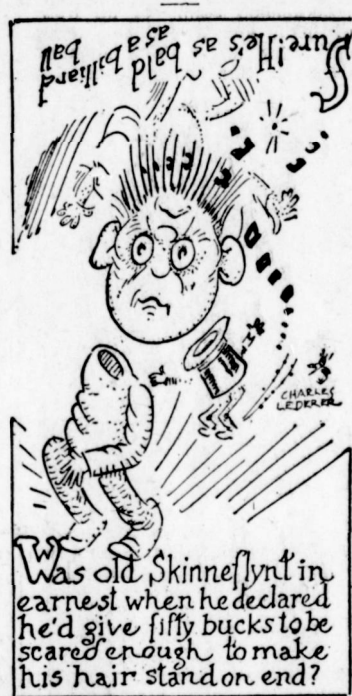

Dear Sir:—

I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. I have been an asthma sufferer for 40 years. For the past two years have been taking HERNACE'S Asthma and Hay Fever Medicine and have been free from the attacks of Asthma. Able to attend to my work and have enjoyed the best of health.

I certainly would recommend your medicine to any sufferer from asthma as I know your medicine has merit.

Yours from a grateful friend,
Mrs. Ellen E. Thayer, 7 Dean Street, Manchester, N. H.

Savory Dishes

NOW that the field mushroom is again found in abundance, let us have some delicious dishes.

Creamed Mushrooms.—Remove the stems from the caps, peel the caps and cut into small pieces; the tender stems should be cut into bits.

Put two tablespoonsful of butter into a bright saucepan, add a pint of minced mushrooms, and stir and cook for five minutes until the mushrooms are well scalded through; now add one-half cupful of cream and serve on buttered toast piping hot.

Mushrooms With Scrambled Eggs.—Break into small pieces a pint of fresh mushrooms; sprinkle with salt and let stand one-half hour. Into a saucepan put two tablespoonsful of butter, add the mushrooms and juice and cook at a simmering temperature for ten minutes. Season with pepper and more salt if needed, then add the yolks of five eggs slightly beaten, mix well, then fold in the beaten whites and serve on hot buttered toast.

Broiled Mushrooms.—Take the nice firm caps of the field mushroom, peel them and remove the stems. Into each cup put a generous tablespoonful of butter, place them under the gas flame in a broiler and cook until tender. If the caps are large, broil them first on the rounded side, then peel and turn into a vegetable dish in which three tablespoonsful of butter and one of minced parsley has been placed. Stir until the potatoes are well covered with butter and parsley, taste, a teaspoonful of onion juice, one-fourth cupful of vinegar, one cupful each of diced carrots and cooked peas. Turn into molds and chill. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Bulk of Aldebaran Is 40,000 Times That of Sun

Distance of the Hyades cluster from the earth is less than that of the Pleiades, estimates placing it between 150 and 200 light years from the earth, writes Isabel M. Lewis of the United States Naval Observatory in Nature Magazine of Washington. Aldebaran, the brightest star, is not a true member of the Hyades cluster, for it does not share in the common motion of the other stars and is only about fifty light years from the earth. Recent discoveries concerning this star tell much of its life and history.

Aldebaran is a comparatively young and a comparatively cool star with a surface temperature of about 3,000 degrees centigrade, which is low for a star. It is on the up-scale of evolution, however, and so will gradually increase in temperature and decrease in size.

Aldebaran is one of the giant stars of the universe, and it has been judged that its diameter is over 30,000,000 miles and its bulk more than 40,000 times that of our own sun.

In spite of its great size, Aldebaran contains comparatively little substance. We could, to be sure, make more than 40,000 suns from it of the size of our own sun, but they would be far lighter and less substantial bodies than the sun.

Discovery of dark nebulae regions in the Hyades as well as in other parts of the constellation of Taurus has been one of the achievements of modern astronomy and also the more recent discovery that nebulae are in general dark, rather than luminous.

Lucien K. Green of Fuller-Cobb-Davis is on his annual vacation. Miss Louise Williams, store stenographer, is back on the job after a week's outing.

Edward O'B. Gonia is on a week's trip to New York doing Christmas buying.

Mr. Edward Gonia has returned from a delightful fortnight of combined motoring and visiting which embraced eight States and took her as far off as Delaware and Pennsylvania. The trip was made with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Larrabee and his objective was their Pennsylvania home, Annapolis. Here their household goods were packed and started for Cushing, Maine, where a cottage is now in process of construction on the lot adjoining the Georges River cottage of the Gonias. It is in the pleasant environs of Cushing that the Larrabees will spend eight months of each year henceforth, going to Annapolis and Penns Grove, N. J., during extreme cold weather. Mrs. Gonia found Annapolis' quaint Dutch customs and field stone houses, set close to the street, highly interesting. A visit was made to the famous Hershey town and chocolate fame and a day spent in the Dupont owned town of Penns Grove. Prolific hours were spent in the big stores in all the cities visited and overnight stops made with Mrs. Carl Clarke, a sister, in Marlboro, and other relatives. Only one night's rain was encountered and that changed to being a stopover. The Larrabees are delighted with Knox county and plan to have their new home settled before going South.

The best man was the bride's brother, Hovey E. Slayton, Jr., and there were eight groomsmen.

The Franklin Street Congregational church never looked more beautiful than for the impressive ceremonial.

Over 500 guests gathered at the Slayton residence on North Elm street for the reception. Refreshments were served by Boston caterer, in a large marquee erected on the lawn. Hecker's orchestra provided the music. In the house a string orchestra conducted by Rudolph Schiller was stationed through the reception floor. The decorations were arranged by a prominent Boston firm. The white and gold at the church were repeated at the home.

Miss Slayton was in a gown of cream bridal satin with pearl trimmings and long satin train. Her rosepoint lace veil, presented her by her grandmother, the late Mrs. Edward M. Slayton, was from Worth's and with it she wore a chaplet of orange blossoms. The bride's bouquet was of white butterfly orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Slayton and Mrs. Straw, mothers of the bride and bridegroom, wore beautiful gowns. The former was in blue satin with gold lace and feather trimmings and wore pearls and diamonds. Mrs. Straw's gown was of white velvet with diamond ornaments.

Mr. and Mrs. Straw are to spend their honeymoon in Europe and will be at home after November 1 at the residence at 309 North River road which the bridegroom has remodelled extensively since purchasing it.

MAHER-HOLDEN Miss Agnes Ruth Holden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Holden of Dexter and Francis Jarvis Maher, son of Mr. and Mrs. John I. Maher, were united in marriage Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. by Rev. Patrick Hayes of St. Thomas Catholic Church of Dover-Foxcroft.

The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of friends and relatives of the young couple. The double ring service was used with nuptial high mass. They were attended by Miss Julia Holden, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Harry Gurney of Newport as best man. The wedding march was played by Mrs. John Ganeau of Dexter and solos were rendered by Mrs. Jere Ganeau of Dexter. The bride was most becomingly gowned in powder blue imported crepe with ostrich and silver trimmings and wore a hat to match, carrying a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore peach colored georgette crepe with picture hat of black velvet and carried pink tea roses. After the ceremony the wedding party and many of the guests went to the home of the bride's parents for a wedding dinner. The house was beautifully decorated with cut flowers. Many wedding gifts were shown.

Mr. Maher is a graduate of St. John's Preparatory School of Danvers, Mass., and of the Bliss Electrical School of Washington, D. C. He is employed by the Central Maine Power Co. in Rockland. Mrs. Maher is a graduate of St. Mary's Convent, Burlington, Vt., and of the Gilman Business College of Bangor. She has been employed for seven years by the Central Maine Power Co. at their Dexter office. She is a socialist of no little merit. After a honeymoon of two weeks they will reside in Rockland.

MAGNUSON-CAMERON Miss Mabel Cameron and Axel Magnuson, both of Clark Island, were united in marriage Saturday evening by Rev. E. P. Browne, at the First Baptist parsonage, 134 Talbot avenue. The double ring ceremony was used. They were attended by Carl Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Magnuson will reside at Clark Island.

THE SEPTEMBER TERM Criminal Docket Being Rapidly Disposed of—Mrs. Langston Pleads "Not Guilty."

So much of the indictment as related to manslaughter, in the case of George Fraughton, charged with killing Edward Sukeforth, was not pressed Saturday, and he pleaded guilty to assault and battery.

Mrs. Mary Langston of Vinalhaven, charged with infanticide, pleaded "not guilty," but it seems to be the current impression around the Court House that the case will not come to trial.

Karl Lammie, indicted at this term on the charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, on the road between Bucksport and Long Cove was convicted. The jury, after being out a long time, reported that an agreement could not be reached. Justice Spear discussed the matter with the jurors, and with some of the written testimony in their possession they returned to the jury room. Fifteen minutes later they returned a verdict of "guilty." County Attorney Dwin for the State; Tirrell for the respondent.

Mary E. Gilkes (now Skinner), charged with illegal possession of intoxicating liquor, was acquitted after the jury had been out only a few moments. County Attorney Dwin for the State; Tirrell for the respondent.

Frank Black of St. George, indicted for operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor was discharged, after the jury had been out for some time. County Attorney Dwin for the State; Tirrell for the respondent.

Parker F. Norcross, indicted for operating an automobile in Owl's Head, while under the influence of liquor, was acquitted. County Attorney Dwin for the State; Tirrell for the respondent.

How to Hold a Husband Lean on him, cooes the clingy one. Dress for him, says the stylish spouse. Feed him well, hints the home-body. Flirt with him, chirps the coquette. Love him, says the tender helpmeet. Boss him, orders the hefty woman. Flatter, whispers the dear deceiver. Understand him, says the soulful one. But the wise woman knows that you have to do about all of these things to really hold a husband, and even then it is sometimes a gamble whether it is worth while.

Presence of Mind A burglar, Wales, in a place which we cannot pronounce, was undone by finger prints secured under peculiar circumstances. A maid servant was awakened in true movie style by the burglar's flashlight. She said she felt faint and asked for a glass of water, which he gave her and finding no buttons took his departure. He was traced by the finger prints on the glass and proved to be a pitman and an old offender.—Scientific American.

Memorabilia of Famous Novelist Given Museum All the memorabilia of George Sand, which were inherited by the granddaughter of the great novelist, Aure Sand, have been bequeathed to the Carnavalet museum.

Letters, manuscripts of novels and numerous articles of extrinsic worth all are now on view in a part of the building called the "Museum George Sand," and the many admirers of George Sand, most of whom apparently haven't read her voluminous romances, are tripping out to the Carnavalet.

However, the article most characteristic of the author of "La Petite Fadette," a big black cigar, isn't in the collection, much to the disappointment of the visitors and also of the museum attendants, who are constantly being asked "whereabouts the cigars are."

Aure Sand has come into the public eye not only because of her gift to the Carnavalet but also because she has just written a novel, "Encarnement." The first book to appear under her own name, it has been received with considerable approval by the critics, who do not hesitate to say Aure Sand has inherited some of her grandmother's genius.

Webster's Life Policy Had Odd Restrictions An interesting relic recently shown was the life insurance policy issued September 20, 1844, to Daniel Webster. It was for $5,000, which was considered a large sum in those days, and carried a premium of $250. The policy mentions certain restrictive clauses. If Daniel wanted to visit a large city, Washington included, or journey west of the Mississippi river, he had to get permission of the company and pay extra.

But Webster did not go into the wilds west of the Mississippi. He never had much use for that country, anyhow. The idea of the insurance company in imposing the limitations was that smallpox was likely to be epidemic in the large cities, while the Indians were the carriers of the disease.

Webster was also advised that if he died in a duel, was hanged or killed in a raid upon any city or Indian tribe there would be no money for the widow.—Detroit News.

Whence Corn Came It is generally believed that corn is a native of America. All evidence points to its having been cultivated by the Indians long before the discovery of this continent by Columbus, who is said to have introduced corn into Spain. However, representations resembling corn plants found in an ancient Chinese book have led to the belief that corn may have been indigenous to Asia also. It is also claimed that grains of corn were found in ancient ruins at Athens. But if corn has ever been known to the Asiatic and Europeans, it had not been cultivated for many centuries previous to its introduction into Europe by Columbus.

The nature of the "corn" mentioned in the Scriptures is only conjectural. It was probably some kind of small grain. In Europe various kinds of small grain, such as oats, wheat and barley, are called corn, and our corn is there always spoken of as Indian corn or maize. Maize is a corruption of the native name of corn in the West Indies.—Detroit News.

James Howell's Poetry The value of Howell's faded fiery is "that it reminds us of that many-colored world of music and idleness, and gallantry and romance, where the great Elizabethan poets have their native. Howell is one of the choristers of the days of Shakespeare's youth, when "wild music burdened every bough," when lutes and gitterns hung in every barbers' shop for the use of the customers, and when every gentleman could bear his part in a glee or madrigal. The ordinaries of London and the aisles of St. Paul's were frequented by young gallants who wore their fortunes on their backs and stuffed their heads with romances and fantasies. Every noble family maintained its journeyman versifier. If Howell deserves to be remembered as a poet, it is because there were hundreds like him, and because Shakespeare gained the better parts of his education not on the benches of an academy, but at the court, and in the tavern, and on the street.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

Letters, manuscripts of novels and numerous articles of extrinsic worth all are now on view in a part of the building called the "Museum George Sand," and the many admirers of George Sand, most of whom apparently haven't read her voluminous romances, are tripping out to the Carnavalet.

However, the article most characteristic of the author of "La Petite Fadette," a big black cigar, isn't in the collection, much to the disappointment of the visitors and also of the museum attendants, who are constantly being asked "whereabouts the cigars are."

Aure Sand has come into the public eye not only because of her gift to the Carnavalet but also because she has just written a novel, "Encarnement." The first book to appear under her own name, it has been received with considerable approval by the critics, who do not hesitate to say Aure Sand has inherited some of her grandmother's genius.

Webster's Life Policy Had Odd Restrictions

An interesting relic recently shown was the life insurance policy issued September 20, 1844, to Daniel Webster. It was for $5,000, which was considered a large sum in those days, and carried a premium of $250. The policy mentions certain restrictive clauses. If Daniel wanted to visit a large city, Washington included, or journey west of the Mississippi river, he had to get permission of the company and pay extra.

But Webster did not go into the wilds west of the Mississippi. He never had much use for that country, anyhow. The idea of the insurance company in imposing the limitations was that smallpox was likely to be epidemic in the large cities, while the Indians were the carriers of the disease.

Webster was also advised that if he died in a duel, was hanged or killed in a raid upon any city or Indian tribe there would be no money for the widow.—Detroit News.

Whence Corn Came

It is generally believed that corn is a native of America. All evidence points to its having been cultivated by the Indians long before the discovery of this continent by Columbus, who is said to have introduced corn into Spain. However, representations resembling corn plants found in an ancient Chinese book have led to the belief that corn may have been indigenous to Asia also. It is also claimed that grains of corn were found in ancient ruins at Athens. But if corn has ever been known to the Asiatic and Europeans, it had not been cultivated for many centuries previous to its introduction into Europe by Columbus.

The nature of the "corn" mentioned in the Scriptures is only conjectural. It was probably some kind of small grain. In Europe various kinds of small grain, such as oats, wheat and barley, are called corn, and our corn is there always spoken of as Indian corn or maize. Maize is a corruption of the native name of corn in the West Indies.—Detroit News.

James Howell's Poetry

The value of Howell's faded fiery is "that it reminds us of that many-colored world of music and idleness, and gallantry and romance, where the great Elizabethan poets have their native. Howell is one of the choristers of the days of Shakespeare's youth, when "wild music burdened every bough," when lutes and gitterns hung in every barbers' shop for the use of the customers, and when every gentleman could bear his part in a glee or madrigal. The ordinaries of London and the aisles of St. Paul's were frequented by young gallants who wore their fortunes on their backs and stuffed their heads with romances and fantasies. Every noble family maintained its journeyman versifier. If Howell deserves to be remembered as a poet, it is because there were hundreds like him, and because Shakespeare gained the better parts of his education not on the benches of an academy, but at the court, and in the tavern, and on the street.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

OUR GRANGE CORNER

What the Patrons of Husbandry Are Doing In Various States.

Ample evidence is furnished that the Grange fighting days are by no means over, notwithstanding the fact that some of the big projects on which it has expended its energies have been fully achieved, such as rural mail delivery, parcel post, good roads, direct election of United States senators, pure food laws, equal suffrage for women and national prohibition. In fact, the Grange as a whole is engaged in a sharper fighting program at the present time than ever before in its history, and the "militant side" of this nation-wide fraternity of farmers is well evidenced by the projects for which the Grange is fighting in a number of states.

In California Grange energies are opposing more government expenditures for irrigation, reclamation or colonization schemes; in Washington, fighting butter substitutes and in behalf of pure dairy products of every sort; in Michigan, initiating an income tax fight and in Oregon, musing all its forces to prevent the repeal of the income tax already enacted; in Pennsylvania, enlisting all Grange energies to stop trespass damage by nifty motorists; in Maine and Idaho, seeking to save the water power and forest resources from monopoly's grasp; in Ohio demanding a debt limitation law and forbidding the issuance of any more bonds; in New York, opposing an unjust inspection of public buildings and in behalf of a better school system.

All the above state projects are in addition to the national legislative program of the Grange, to whose accomplishment State Grangers are lending the undivided efforts. The Grange fighting spirit is well illustrated in Michigan, where it was necessary to secure 55,000 signatures to initiate the income tax measure. The Grange effort quickly secured over 166,000 names.

Grange housewives in Oregon are uniting in what may prove quite a far-reaching attempt to set at the bottom of the high cost of living, by appointing committees in local Granges to make a survey of the places at which their ordinary food-stuffs are manufactured, collect all possible data relative to the production and transportation of same, with comparative costs, figures on purchases in small and large quantities and other data which all housewives should know. The information gained in the various localities will be compiled in a general summary and made available throughout the state.

One of the big assets of the Grange movement of the country is the fact that it is substantially financed, which enables it to carry out many projects of rural benefit in legislative lines and otherwise on an extensive scale. The National Grange has a treasury of nearly $150,000 and many of the State Granges are equally well financed; Michigan being a noteworthy example, with a treasury surplus of more than $50,000. In the case of all these Grange funds a large portion is invested in Liberty Bonds, purchased during the stress of the war emergency.

In Oregon the Granges of Columbia county have called together the various other farm organizations and have initiated a movement to finance and send to the state legislature at its next session an active man to represent all the farm organizations and to work for whatever projects will benefit the rural interests, as well as to oppose those which are adverse to the farmer's welfare. The undertaking has been enthusiastically received by the farmers, whose response is very general.

A Grange in Saratoga county, New York, holds the record for rapid action. Organized with less than 50 charter members in a small rural hamlet, a building project was immediately gotten under way, and when the Grange was 84 days old it had the cornerstone of a substantial hall of its own, which is now rapidly nearing completion and is already being occupied for Grange purposes.

One of the youngest Granges in Oregon staged a mammoth Fourth of July celebration this year and carried out the most successful event of the sort ever held in its part of the state. People came from a wide radius, and an active program of interest was kept in progress throughout the day.

The Grange in California are widely discussing the water and power act, which is a live pending issue, and in all cases are demanding the strict conservation of the state's natural resources, instead of permitting them to fall into the hands of big corporations under long-term leases.

With the Radio Fans

(By R. W. Tyler)

Samples of fine reception that is to come have been apparent the past week and receiving conditions show a steady improvement as the evening begins to get cool and clear. The Willis-Firpo bout was the headliner of interest and from the point of perfect reception there was no disappointment. WGY faithfully served us with the whole affair which seemed unduly long and monotonous as the rounds went on and on without event.

I wish to call the attention of the readers of this column to the fine arrangement which the Boston Globe has recently adopted in publishing the radio programs. Instead of giving long lists of selections from each station for the evening the new arrangement gives the selections that will be on at the different hours of the evening and one has only to follow along the list with his watch and he knows immediately just what is going on at the different stations at that time. This will appeal to fans who have repeatedly lost a good feature of the evening by overlooking it in the long list of selections from different stations, and the necessity of reading a whole page of that tiny type to find out where the best concerts are being broadcast from is entirely eliminated. When you have finished your supper you may now pick up The Globe, take a look at your watch and know at a glance just what you can get on the radio at that time. This is a real treat and is worthy of the commendation of all serious radio fans.

I am going to cut out a lot of local stuff this week and let you in on some historic data on the growth of station CKAC, La Presse, Montreal, Canada. The premier station of the Dominion and the most powerful radiocasting station on the North American Continent. This data is furnished by J. N. Cartier, director of station CKAC and will be of interest to every one of my readers who have received the fine contents of this station.

The Growth of CKAC

Though radio stations come and go, CKAC remains constantly in operation, but grows steadily in popularity. When broadcasting was born in the industrial city of Pittsburgh, there were about half a dozen wireless amateurs in Montreal, none of whom had a license. The Metropolitan Club, capable of falling into line with the big cities across the border, in this very latest invention.

In April, 1922, Canada's largest daily, and one of the most important French publications the world over, came out with a front page article, stating that a contract had been signed with the Marconi Company for the erection of a 500 watt transmitting radiophone station.

The official opening of regular scheduled entertainment took place September 20th, when Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks faced the microphone for the first time. They startled their audience by addressing them in perfect French, recently acquired on Parisian boulevards.

The success of the station was instantaneous and congratulations poured in from all parts of the country. CKAC became one of the most active of the radio personalities in Montreal from that date, and since has carried on improvements evinced by many other cities. The winter of 1922 witnessed the increase of power to 1000 watts, and an all Canadian-made set was used. In the fall of 1923 an extra 1000 watts were added, with the result that CKAC was heard, favorable conditions prevailing, in Alaska, in Denmark, France, Italy, England, and other European lands.

The new CKAC apparatus was manufactured by the Canadian Marconi Company, Montreal. No less than fourteen tubes of the Mullard valve type, each of 2000 watts, are used; one power amplifier, three oscillators, four modulators and six rectifiers. A feature of the set is that the energy, before going to the modulators, is treated to three-phase double-wave rectification by means of the six valves mentioned. The ordinary commercial lighting energy being used to operate the transmitter, no motor generator is required, and rectification ensures absolute clarity and tone-purity in broadcasting.

Besides, no carrier-wave noise or generator hum of any kind can cause distortion or interfere with the faithful reproduction of voice and music, whether transmitted direct from the beautifully finished studio of "La Presse," or brought in, through remote control, from various points—from the biggest hotel in the British Empire, The Mount Royal, from a church—from a brewery—the entertainment is second to none on the American continent.

The six rectifying-valves are mounted on a separate panel and are operated by remote control. This unit is located two floors below the operating room. Before the converted sound energy from the magnetic type microphones gets near the actual transmitting apparatus, it is treated to five stages of voltage amplification and, also, power amplification. After passing through this amplifying apparatus, it goes into the transmitting power amplifiers, whence it is fed through modulators and three oscillators and then into the aerial. The rating of the aerial energy is approximately 25 amperes.

The set operates on choke control and is extremely simple to manage. In spite of its fourteen valves, one operator only is required to keep the set functioning, after it has been brought into action by the pushing of a single switch. With this new set in operation, it is believed that there will be practically no limit to the distance which CKAC will reach.

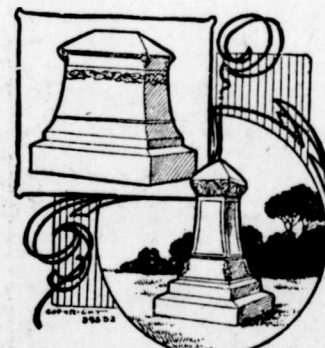

The new studio is palatial—magnificent, stately—and acoustically perfect. Celebrities such as Marcel Dupre; Nicholas Karlsk, Russian basso; Kothier of the Metropolitan Opera; H. M. Jaquet, famous Parisian composer—pianist; Balieff and his Bat Company; the Grand Guignol troupe; Cedric Riel and Albert Lambert; Defrady, of the Comedie Francaise de Paris; Monsignor Barry-Doyle; cabinet ministers, ambassadors, consuls, bishops, famous surgeons, financiers, bankers, humorists, actors of note, and over twenty thousand others have faced the microphone for the first time at Station CKAC.

STRAND THEATRE

These who saw "Revelation" yesterday were unhesitating in their verdict that it is one of the best pictures ever seen in Rockland. A Rosch of a "Thousand Years," which grew in the courtyard of a French monastery, had a legend that remained ever fresh in the minds of the brothers. It was a miracle in modern times. Years ago, according to the legend, a pious monk planted a seed. In spite of his tender care it never blossomed. The gentle monk brooded over it, considering it an evidence of divine displeasure. One day he prayed at the side of the bush that it might bloom. In the midst of his supplications a gentle voice made him "Be at peace," and looking up he saw the Holy Mother standing before him—and lo, a miracle—the rosbush had burst into bloom.

A story of humor, love and deep religious significance; a cast that includes such players as Viola Dana, Helen Blue, Francis Currier, Lew Cody, Edward Connelly, Marjorie Daw, Kathleen Key, George Siegmann, Bruce Guerin, Otto Matiesen and Ethel Wales; this combination makes Metro's "Revelation" one of the really big pictures of the year.

Harry Myers, who played the lead in "The Connecticut Yankee," turns to villainy in "Behold This Woman," which will be seen Wednesday and Thursday. Fans who appreciate the delicious comedy of Mr. Myers will not be disappointed in his latest effort, however, for he gives to the interpretations of the role of a rich idler who mingles with the Hollywood set a light touch. Irene Rich, Marguerite de la Motte, Charles Post, Rosemary Theby and Arthur Hays Sulzberger, of equal dramatic importance with that assigned to Mr. Myers. The story is an adaptation of the novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim. It has backgrounds of life on a ranch and in the smart set of the film colony in Hollywood.—adv.

PARK THEATRE

Gloria Swanson has done it again! In her new Paramount picture, "Man-handled," now showing at the Park Theatre, she has put another crowning performance on top of her three latest, "Zaza," "The Humming Bird" and "A Society Scandal."

"The Alaskan," James Oliver Curwood's stirring novel of the far north, forms the basis of Thomas Meighan's brand new starring picture. This widely heralded film will be the main feature at the Park Theatre beginning next Wednesday-Thursday.

"The Alaskan" is at the apex of the new empire which has come into being in the far north during the last 30 years. It opens with the great gold rush which mellowed the discovery of the yellow metal in Alaska.

In addition there is Jack Dempsey in "The Fight and Win" pictures. The new Dempsey stories, written by Gerald Beaumont, noted novelist, are a rapid fire combination of thrills and laughs. There is a daredevil rescue on a trestle—a plunge into a torrent—and such a battle! Dempsey and Ed Kennedy do three rounds of real fighting—perhaps the first real fight ever interpolated into a play.—adv.
