SOJOURNING IN EUROPE

Edward B. MacAllister Attends Bull Fight Staged Amid Historic Surroundings and Visits Battlefields Where the Americans Won Glory.

(Third Installment)

Mr. MacAllister spent several days in Vienna and visited "Schonbrunn," the royal residence of Francis Joseph, which, in its shabbiness, showed marked contrast to the luxuriousness of Potsdam and Berlin. He attended an open air opera where a presentation of "The Merry Widow" was given. To him Austria seemed the poorest and most miserable country he visited. There was very little in the daily life there to suggest the "Second Paris of Europe," which it was once called.

In visiting Rome one must necessarily see the Coliseum, the Catacombs, the Pantheon and St. Peter's. The Rockland attorney was most cordially received by the archaeologist who for 35 years has been directing the excavations and restoration of the Forum. The gardens have been restored to much of the beauty which they exhibited centuries ago, with the original flora and fauna. The archaeologist is partially paralyzed, but it is his mind which still directs the work.

A day in Genoa, and several days in Nice. From the latter city Mr. MacAllister motored through the surrounding territory. In a little Roman village between Nice and Mentone, known as Eze, he met a tourist named Robinson, who is an instructor at Colby College, well acquainted with the late A. S. Littlefield.

Bucked the Tiger

In common with all other tourists Mr. MacAllister visited Europe's famous gaming place, Monte Carlo, and just for the experience of the thing twice tried his luck. He broke practically even.

A day in Marseilles and the traveler then went to Arles, one of the three cities containing the best preserved remains of the old Roman Empire.

An Ancient Cemetery

Mr. MacAllister also visited the old Roman cemetery known as Alibedon, where he was shown the remains of the great distances to this burial place, which is mentioned in Dante's "Inferno."

Sunday, Aug. 24, Mr. MacAllister motored to Nîmes, visiting en route Pont du Gard, part of the old Roman viaduct which conveyed water from the mountain to Nîmes. It is in a perfect state of preservation.

Nîmes is richer in Roman relics than any other place in Europe, except Rome.

The amphitheatre has a circumference of 1200 feet, and on this August afternoon contained 30,000 spectators, after packed to the utmost tier of stone. The occasion was a bull fight. There is said to be no other place in the world where a semi-gladiatorial spectacle can take place in such historic surroundings. The exterior of the structure is practically complete.

The grand entry of the bull fight participants was spectacular in the extreme. The principal matador was a Spanish marquis, Antioch de Warren, who was accompanied by a retinue of 12. The bulls were magnificent specimens from the estate of a Spanish duke. Seven were killed, and one of the bulls killed a horse.

"It was all very interesting," said Mr. MacAllister, "but I don't know that I should care to witness a repetition of it. It carried me back to the days of the Caesars, and at the same time made me think of a modern ball game, for the spectators would hoot and cheer if a 'misplay' was made and when the matador accomplished something especially brilliant they would throw their hats, canes and capes into the arena, the women being as much excited as the men."

When The World Was Young

Nîmes has many other ancient relics, including two old gates, one of which is the inscription, "Augustus Caesar B. C. 23." There is also a ruined temple known as the Nymphæum, which was dedicated to the Nymphs.

Arles has many narrow streets, many of them not wide enough for two carts to pass abreast. They are

At Chateau Thierry

During two days' stay in Cologne Mr. MacAllister visited the beautiful Cathedral, and by special permission gained admittance to the Art Gallery, which is open to the public.

Mr. MacAllister's final days in France saw him an interested visitor on battlefields which are now as world famous as Gettysburg is to America.

He went completely over Chemin des Dames, a ridge which runs from the ruins left behind, there is still much of interest to be seen in the towns and villages included by the Marne, Aisne, and Chateau Thierry battlefields.

At Munns Mr. MacAllister was shown through the wine cellars and factory. Eight million bottles of champagne are kept in storage at all times. Five years are required to develop a bottle to the proper strength and flavor. A German corporation formerly controlled the industry, but it is now in the hands of a private company.

The Rockland attorney visited the Marne-Aisne cemetery, located at Chateau Thierry, and had a very late luncheon at Meaux, the limit of the German advance.

A celebration was in progress there, and a special train was run to accommodate all Americans who cared to go. Among the dignitaries present were Gen. Joffre and Gen. Foch, who play such a prominent part in history's pages as the result of their brilliant achievements.

Mr. MacAllister also improved his stay in France by looking up the coat of arms of the Torcy family from which he is directly descended on his mother's side. The Torcy family is allied with the Colbert family and they have the same coat of arms. A Marquis of Torcy was Foreign Minister for the Colbert family in the Cabinet of Louis XIV.

Mr. MacAllister sailed from Cherbourg Sept. 10, and one week later, after another mild trans-Atlantic crossing was back in New York harbor more appreciative of the benediction which the Statue of Liberty seemed to be offering.

In this interview extended though it has been, Mr. MacAllister has given only the salient points of his two months' vacation trip. In the storehouse of his memory are many more interesting incidents and recollections of a summer which has afforded so much pleasure and so many unusual advantages that he purposes to repeat it in the not too distant future.

UNION'S TWO BIG DAYS

Holiday Crowds Enjoy Races, Pulling and Other Events—Ruby D. Does a Half Mile in 1.04 1/4—Rockland Horses Win Sweepstakes.

Stormy weather on the opening day, which caused many persons to think that the fair had been set ahead was the only fly in the ointment of the North Knox Society this year. Wednesday dawned clear and fair, and there was scarcely a cloud in the sky to mar the two days' event. It was a bit crisp Thursday morning, and The Courier-Gazette reporter has the word of Will Luce of Washington that ice formed up in northern Knox to the thickness of a window pane. It is barely possible that Bill had not thawed out since the frost which nipped the Democratic party on Sept. 8, but he is a man of buoyant spirit, and it takes more than one defeat to dampen his Democratic ardor.

The foliage was beginning to respond to the frosty atmosphere, Thursday, and the ride from the city to this week's capital of Knox county was a source of unending pleasure. But the present conditions are only a hint of those which are to come, for Nature has only begun to set the stage for its most gorgeous scene of the year.

The automobile has replaced Old Dobbin to such an extent that folks have ceased to marvel at it, but this week it was more than ever impressed upon observant persons who saw the harvest which was being reaped by the man who owns the bridge and fair grounds. His field and yard were turned into parking spaces at a quarter a park, and when somebody multiplies 500 by 25 cents he will see that it yielded a pretty good crop considering that the soil was being cultivated only two days.

This year there were no squashes or pumpkins of inordinate size, but A. C. Cabaner of Washington exhibited 10 cucumbers which weighed 45 pounds. Mr. Cabaner raised three acres of cukes and sold 13 barrels in Portland the other day. Last year he raised 15 acres of cucumbers, but this year planted only five acres because he saw more money in the long green tummyaches.

The women folks were exceedingly proud of the fancy work and directed attention to a pair of mittens made by Mrs. Joseph N. Glidden of Jefferson, aged 87; a quilt containing 701 pieces made by Mrs. Moody of Warren, mother of Willis Moody, master of Knox Pomona Grange; ancient woven spreads made 75 years ago by the late Mrs. Nathan Bachelder; and some very beautiful crocheting done by Mrs. George Oliver of Union.

"Some of the Aid of the Union Congregational Church and the Ladies' Aid of the Appleton Church conducted sales of fancy articles and realized tidy sums toward the year's budget."

Among the many business exhibits presented more attention than the Hunter Machine Co.'s light and water plant of the Kohler brand. It could do everything but talk, apparently.

Haves Bros. and G. W. Bachelder exhibited herds of Holsteins, C. T. Burgess had a number of thoroughbred Jerseys and Mank Bros. showed a herd of Herefords—all fine sleek cattle.

What constitutes a herd? asks the police. And Secretary Grinnell says that five cows will qualify for North Knox Fair purposes.

Some of the steers were shown by Charles Vannah, Glidden Bros. and Weeks Bros. O. B. Libby of Warren attracted attention with his crate of German police dogs.

There was just one vacant tenement in the long midway. The manager of it, fair watchman, apparently, was not so much interested in the games of chance did not flourish. They were aided by State officials who closed four places of a suspicious nature.

Wrestling and boxing shows and ready made landing alleys did quite a thriving business. The man with the weighing machine made some poor guesses, but everything was fish that came to his net, and he won when he appeared to lose. The Peabody Indian arrow game developed quite a number of experts in archery. The venerable souse clam kept pace with the hot dog, and the oyster stew merchant found that the dull atmosphere was just the thing for his business. All the way from the Head of the Bay came Mrs. Everett with her delicious ice cream, so that extremes met. Bill Bailey, who manufactures popcorn while you wait, and sings while you listen, was one of the busiest persons on the midway. Charles Cook, who is doing the fairs for his 38th year, had his familiar booth.

The hay-rick had overlooked three straw hats, but the wearers looked quite comfortable as the hot sun beat down—much more so than did those over-cautious persons who were toting around winter overcoats.

The writer saw just one person Thursday who noticeably showed the effects of intoxicating liquor, and he marvelled at the contrast with the old days when there used to be knock-down and drag-out fights over around the sheds. Prohibition may not prohibit, but something has happened.

The Paragon Bond of Waldoboro, named for and representing that town's thriving industry, furnished music for the two days, and its popularity is shown by the fact that it has many calls every year during the fair season.

The vaudeville was extra good this year.

No Climbing For Him

Mr. MacAllister's ascent of the Jungfrau was not accomplished, as some might think, with a rope in the hand, and an alpenstock in the other, and his heart in his boots. Here too the good old cog railway and viewed the scenery without disturbing thoughts.

Several persons had lost their lives while climbing the Alps this season, and while Mr. MacAllister was at the hotel above mentioned he was trying to pacify a lady tourist whose husband had been missing for several days.

From Interlaken Mr. MacAllister journeyed to Luzerne over the famous Yungfrau Pass, where the Swiss have erected a memorial to their soldiers who died during the French Revolution. The memorial was designed by the famous sculptor, Thorwaldsen.

Thence to Frankfurt, Cologne, and down the Rhine, a memorable steamboat trip, an eight mile run, where American soldiers, killed during the Revolution, were buried in the famous cemetery, Thurnwaldsen.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Clem Shaver's Admission—Fool Promises of La Follette and Wheeler.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—Clem Shaver, John W. Davis' campaign manager has thrown a bomb into the Democratic camp. "If the election were held tomorrow no one of the three Presidential candidates would receive a majority of the votes in the electoral college," said Shaver this week in a burst of frankness, talking to a group of newspapermen. Chairman Shaver's assertion is a flat contradiction of the numerous statements put out in his name by the Democratic publicity men, in which they claimed everything in sight for Davis and insisted he was as good as elected. Naturally there is havoc in the Democratic machinery. No doubt, Chairman Shaver told the truth, he sees it when he spoke for himself, and not through his publicity bureau.

Only a week ago attention was called in this correspondence to the folly of the Democratic publicity men claiming everything in sight, and while it is hardly to be supposed that influenced Mr. Shaver to tell the truth for once, it is at least refreshing to get the honest opinion of a national chairman, even if it disrupts his party machine. Of course the truth is that no one believes in extravagant claims, least of all those who, through paid publicity agents, make them. And the further truth is that no one knows how the election would go were it held tomorrow. That Davis is making no converts is obvious. But how can he be expected to make any? That no one knows the truth is making? That no one knows the truth is making? That no one knows the truth is making?

All day long Thursday, big crowds formed a parallelism in the western end of the enclosure, where proud owners of horses and oxen demonstrated their ability in pulling contests. The frequency of the applause showed how deeply interested the spectators were. The results:

Clem Shaver's Admission—Fool Promises of La Follette and Wheeler.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—Clem Shaver, John W. Davis' campaign manager has thrown a bomb into the Democratic camp. "If the election were held tomorrow no one of the three Presidential candidates would receive a majority of the votes in the electoral college," said Shaver this week in a burst of frankness, talking to a group of newspapermen. Chairman Shaver's assertion is a flat contradiction of the numerous statements put out in his name by the Democratic publicity men, in which they claimed everything in sight for Davis and insisted he was as good as elected. Naturally there is havoc in the Democratic machinery. No doubt, Chairman Shaver told the truth, he sees it when he spoke for himself, and not through his publicity bureau.

Only a week ago attention was called in this correspondence to the folly of the Democratic publicity men claiming everything in sight, and while it is hardly to be supposed that influenced Mr. Shaver to tell the truth for once, it is at least refreshing to get the honest opinion of a national chairman, even if it disrupts his party machine. Of course the truth is that no one believes in extravagant claims, least of all those who, through paid publicity agents, make them. And the further truth is that no one knows how the election would go were it held tomorrow. That Davis is making no converts is obvious. But how can he be expected to make any? That no one knows the truth is making? That no one knows the truth is making? That no one knows the truth is making?

All day long Thursday, big crowds formed a parallelism in the western end of the enclosure, where proud owners of horses and oxen demonstrated their ability in pulling contests. The frequency of the applause showed how deeply interested the spectators were. The results:

CIRCULATION AFFIDAVIT
 Rockland, Sept. 27, 1924.
 Personally appeared Frank S. Lydell, vice on oath declares that he is president in the office of the Rockland Publishing Co., and that of the issue of The Courier-Gazette of Sept. 25, 1924, there was printed a total of 6,334 copies.
 Before me, FRANK R. MILLER,
 Notary Public.

The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.—Phil. 4:7.

Governor Baxter hits straight from the shoulder in his denunciation of pulling contests at some Maine fairs. "I can conceive of nothing more cruel or unfair to patient, hard working horses and oxen than to drive them under the lash and goad until, as sometimes happens the blood spurts from their nostrils or they drop from exhaustion," says Gov. Baxter. The custom is condemned even by many who annually witness it, and they admit the justice of Gov. Baxter's remarks, but there have been pulling events from time immemorial, their popularity with the public was shown Thursday at Union Fair, and mere expression of sentiment will not stop it.

The action of the California Supreme Court in barring La Follette electors from the November ballot brings forth a vigorous note of protest from Senator Hiram W. Johnson, who denounces the Court's opinion as "unjustified by law, contrary to public policy and of the most harmful consequences." Not having seen the document in question, and not being disposed to criticize a Supreme Court finding in any event, we are unprepared to discuss the justice of Senator Johnson's stand. It does not appear quite plain, however, why the La Follette ticket should not have the same rights that are accorded to the Republicans and the Democrats, such as we dislike to see it there.

There seem to be conflicting statements in regard to the character of the summer business in Maine the past season. To those communities which did not have the customary rush there occur two reasons for the lack of it, one being the uncertainty of the political situation, and the other the rush of European travel. Down here in Penobscot Bay it sizes up as a rather satisfactory season as a whole, although brighter in some spots than it was in others. But with charms like those which the Penobscot Bay resorts possess you cannot drive tourists away with a batstick.

Mark Sullivan whose daily observations on the political situation are syndicated from one end of the country to the other, was at first of a mind that the German vote would go to La Follette. A more careful investigation leads him to express the opinion that the ultimate destination of the German vote is an uncertain factor, with a tendency to pull away from La Follette in the direction of the Republicans. And, mind you, this is not Republican propaganda, because Mark Sullivan's articles are for all newspapers without political bias.

The success of Capt. John I. Snow in raising the steamer Sankaty, which had been under water at Fairhaven, Mass., since July 15, and bringing her triumphantly into Rockland harbor, under her own steam, and towing the very craft which raised her, directs attention anew to the capability of this wrecking master. "John Snow's luck," we hear somebody say, but it was not luck alone which brought the steamers Carolyn, Cornelia, Bodwell and Sankaty back to life. It was calm, shrewd judgment, and confidence.

It cost Fulton J. Redman, defeated Democratic candidate for United States Senator, just $7,427.83 to learn that Senator Bert M. Fernald is one of the most popular vote-getters in the State. To do Mr. Redman justice it should be said that he never made any claims that he would be elected, and that he never dispensed bunk which makes him ridiculous today.

Even the metropolitan newspapers make bad blunders. The New York Herald Tribune in Thursday's issue was advising its readers to move forward the hands of their watches and clocks Sunday on the resumption of standard time.

Wiscasset despatches say that Dr. MacMillan's exploration craft, the schooner Bowdoin, is going into winter quarters. Judging from her experiences she has been in winter quarters pretty much since she was built.

The situation in West Virginia is said to look very dubious for its Presidential candidate John W. Davis. Anyhow, he has gone there post haste for a third speaking expedition.

The La Follette-Wheeler forces have resorted to ingenious methods to raise campaign funds, but the novelty has worn off and the coffers are still far from filled.

COURT HAS ADJOURNED

Fifteen Divorces Were Granted—Mrs. Langston In Vinalhaven Infanticide Case Gets Five To Ten Years.

The September term of Knox County Supreme Court adjourned yesterday afternoon, after a session of ten days which have been particularly busy along criminal lines.

Margaret Langston of Vinalhaven, accused of drowning her infant child in a Vinalhaven pond, retracted her plea of "not guilty" and pleaded guilty, being sentenced to not less than 10 nor more than ten years in State Prison. Oscar H. Emery was her counsel, appointed by the Court.

George Fraughton of Wakefield, Mass., who was charged with killing Edward Sukeforth during a quarrel on Tilson avenue, pleaded guilty to assault and battery after the charge of manslaughter had been not pressed and was fined $200 and costs.

Other sentences not included in the list published Thursday were: E. E. Ripley, driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, a suspended sentence of six months in jail; Roy Matthews and Karl Lamm, driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, six months in jail; Ralph Sprague, intoxication, State Reformatory for Men; Lillian Breen, nuisance, six months in jail; Eugene Perry and Lucretia Perry, nuisance, four months each in jail.

Quo warranto proceedings against Harry C. Hull, superintendent of Rockland and Rockport schools, occurred.

The town of Warren may have so many skunks that they sleep on the cellar stairs, but over in Penobscot county the folks are pretty well fed up with having the critters so plentiful that they try to hold up automobiles. Frinstance, the other night the driver of a car on the road between Stillwater and Gilman Falls nearly caused his machine to turn turtle in an attempt to avoid several skunks that kept dodging in front of it.

The above item, going the rounds of the exchanges excites not the envy of Knox County folk. We don't care a hoot how much stronger skunk claims other communities may present. We almost committed the unpardonable offense of saying we don't care a cent.

While most communities are still trying to solve the problem of how to handle automobile traffic, comes the news that the American Aeronautic Safety code is being revised so as to insure greater safety of air navigation and better protection of those on the ground. When the atmosphere becomes peopled with air planes just think what might happen if there was a drunken driver careening around overhead.

The editor of the Boston Globe wants to know if it isn't about time the two Chicago murderers were asking for a pardon, which goes to show about how the average mind reacts on the leniency shown to the aristocratic young brutes.

cupied a portion of Thursday afternoon. The action was brought by Miss Lucy E. Rhodes, Ward 7 member of the new Rockland school board, who contended that Mr. Hull's election on April 17 was fraudulent. She was represented by Mr. Locke of the Augusta law firm of Pattangall, Locke & Perkins. S. T. Kimball, counsel for Supt. Hull, claimed among other things, that Miss Rhodes, as a member of the school board, was not competent to bring the action. Justice Spear reserved his decision.

Fifteen divorces were granted. The list follows:

Martha C. Thibault of Rockland from Guy P. Thibault of parts unknown for cruelty and non-support; libellant given permission to resume her maiden name of Martha C. Curtis. Payson for libellant.

Myrtle B. Favreau from Willis F. Favreau of Rockland, for cruelty. Payson for libellant.

Madelyn C. Hanson of Camden from Harold H. Hanson of Boston for statutory cause. Custody of Robert C. Hanson given to mother. Montgomery for libellant.

Ernest N. Rawley from Effie Rawley of Rockland for adultery. Custody of Caroline E. and Leroy B. minor children granted to libellant. Miller for libellant.

Harry L. Bossa of Friendship from Marion Mills Bossa of Rutland, Vt., for desertion. Custody of Donald M. and Jean, minor children, granted to the mother. Libellant to receive $15 week for their support. Smalley for libellant.

Lettie A. Eaton from Arthur Eaton of Rockport, for intoxication. Custody of Marguerite and Arthur, minor children, granted to the mother. Montgomery for libellant.

Theresa F. Humphrey from Harry H. Humphrey of Rockland, for extreme cruelty. Custody of Ruth, minor child granted to libellant. Smalley for libellant.

Carrie G. Zoppina of Camden from Vincent Zoppina of Burlington, N. J., for cruel and abusive treatment. Custody of Annie G. and Grace, minor children granted to libellant. Emery for libellant.

THE SANKATY ARRIVES

Shortly after noon Thursday a queer looking procession rounded G.W.'s Head and rumped into the harbor at a 10 knot gait. The water-front was all agog over the show—for its approach had been heralded from the conning tower of the Snow Marine Co. There was no trouble in recognizing the faithful old lighter Sankaty but the craft which was towing her outstripped the imagination.

She looked like a ghost ship, a skeleton frame of what had been a three-deck high prow—then a dim shadow of a hull close to the water's edge and camouflaged by Nature's own craftsmanship through two months' immersion in Fair Haven harbor. Every vestige of woodwork except the prow has been burned away and the deck beams and steel cross girders are twisted in all sorts of fantastic shapes. The boilers are housed in a solid metal structure and this too has been warped and bent by terrible heat. Above this rise twin stacks, painted the bright red of metal paint. Leaning is a temporary covering over the engines and forward on the deck is an improvised bridge where the ship may be navigated. The whole presents a truly awe-inspiring picture of devastation. Such is the steamer Sankaty at first glance.

The Courier-Gazette reporter clambered down the steep ladder and spent a joyous and grimy hour prowling over the wreck from stem to stern. The most amazing thing of all is that in spite of the utter ruin visible at first glance, below decks the reverse is true. Now the engines, pumps and boilers show the surface rust of their two months' bath, but it is all surface, the vital parts being protected by oil and grease, and too, the ship was not bared at low tide, so the air could not get access to the metal. The big engine, 1250 horse power, turned over as sweetly as a watch, even the steam steering gear being in operation. The fire-room will prove a revelation to the visitor, for it is exceptionally commodious and most convenient as to arrangement. The bunkers were even ready filled with coal when the vessel was floated.

The after part of the ship was used as a galley, dining room and saloon below decks and here the ravages of the flames are everywhere apparent, little being left of the ship's furnishings except charred wood.

The Sankaty, practically a new steamer, having been built in Quincy, Mass., was lying at her dock in New Bedford on July 15 when the wharf buildings took fire and before the steamer could be moved she was ablaze, her lines burnt off and she drifted over to the Fair Haven side where fire engines finally pumped her full of water, but not until she was really gutted. She was all under water and laid that way until raised a week ago by the Snow Marine Co. under Capt. John I. Snow. He bought the wreck in spite of the efforts of many salvage companies in Massachusetts to prevent it and raised the ship with ease. She made the trip to this port under her own power without a skip, and the call of her deep sweet-toned whistle as she circled the harbor was a signal for citywide congratulation of Capt. Snow on his feat.

The Sankaty is 187.5 feet long, two feet longer than the Maine Central steamer Rangely and only 12 feet shorter than the J. T. Morse. She is 28 feet broad and carried a crew of 12 men. She was one of the speediest craft in Massachusetts waters.

The Capt. Snow in salvaging this steamer recalls the marvelous work on the Hull liner Carolyn which went ashore on Melville and was abandoned by all the big salvaging companies. It also recalls the raising of the lighter Cornelia in Boston harbor and the recent salvaging of the steamer Gov. Bodwell at Swan's Island. All honor to Cap'n John.

Plans are afoot to resurface Waldo avenue and put its drainage in such condition that difficulties in reaching Sea View cemetery will be at an end. The City Fathers feel that this road should be maintained regardless.

IN THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

KATHLEEN M. SNOW, LIBRARIAN
 A man is himself plus the books he reads.—S. Parkes Cadman.

There is something in the autumn that is native to my blood. I feel it in the rust of leaves, in the hush of the wind, in the yellow and the purple and the crimson keeping time.

The scarlet of the maples can shake me like the cry of bugles going by. And my heart is like a rhyme. To see the frosty stars like a smoke upon the hills.

There is something in October gets the gypsy blood a-tingle. We must rise and follow her—When from every hill of flame She calls and calls each vagabond by name. Bliss Carman in Songs from Vagabonds

And here is a booklet for vagabonds. Not those luck-ridden folk who either enjoy a year round vacation or else have actually saved this best month of all for it. These are the greenish hues registered for such foresight as this. Our vagabonds are those happy folk who can sit with a book in hand, dip into every art and visit every clime yet never once move from their own easy chair.

Indispensable to the stay-at-home traveler is Mrs. Waldo Richard's latest book "The Magic Carpet." Few collectors are blessed with a finer sense of discrimination than Mrs. Richards and of the more than 450 poems in the book "only a handful are gaily of mediocrity. These have been included because they are definitely reminiscent of the mood of a foreign place." (Bookman, August.)

Should the vagabond's gypsy blood be unusually stirred then there must be included in his list none other than "Pirates of the New England Coast," in which indeed these stirring tales and quaint illustrations, made by the pirates themselves if we judge correctly, do not quench his thirst for the unusual, then he is no true member of our vagabond troupe. No insignificant looking book is this. Creosote skull and crossbones glare from its cover, and its 400 oversize pages are filled with authentic records of pirate operations, carefully compiled by the Marine Research society of Salem.

Far removed from the bloody tales of New England pirates is "The Autobiography of Augustus Carp—A Really Good Man." That this epithet is justly deserved none appreciated more keenly than Augustus. Far be it from him to speak lightly of his endeavors to make the world a better place to live in. The book is written in all sincerity and dignity worthy of one with so obvious a mission. It is written in detail, too, ever to the full description of the badge which designated him a member of Peckham Branch of the Non-Smokers League as well as of the Kennington division of the society of Prohibition of Strong Drink Traffic and the Anti-Dramatic and Seditious Union. To the reader who has tired of the modern novel with its hundred and one problems of marriage and sex is most heartily recommended the story of "Augustus Carp—The Really Good Man."

Most especially for the vagabond is listed the following two books, Anne Douglas Sedgwick's "Little French Girl" and E. M. Forster's "Passage to India." So thoroughly and so enthusiastically have these two books been reviewed, little need be said as to their respective merits. Forster's book will doubtless appeal to a smaller audience since his is less of the story and more of a characterization and study of Anglo-Indian life.

In constant demand has been Hatcher Hughes' "Hell-Bent Fer Heaven." The title alone would prove sufficient recommendation for a "vagabond."

As a literary curiosity there must be added David Garnett's "Lady Into the Fox." If your mind has been so completely absorbed by materialistic values that the highly impossible no longer has charms, then, don't read this book.

For the last book on this "vagabondia list" we announce Andre Tridon's "Psychoanalysis, Sleep and Dreams." Not to the vagabond however is the following paragraph written. It is to that "sneaking, unutterable villain" who permanently borrowed without even bothering to have it checked out at the desk, the original copy of Tridon's work. For the benefit of that person is here printed a copy of the warning long displayed in the Library at San Pedro, Barcelona, which the worthy librarian of 1773 considered just condemnation for the wretch who purloins a book.

"For him that steals a book from this Library, let it change into a serpent in his hand and rend him. Let him be struck with palsy and all his members blasted. Let him languish in pain crying aloud for mercy and let there be no surcease to his agony till he sink into dissolution. Let book-worms gnaw his entrails in token of the worm that dieth not and when at last he goeth to his final punishment, let the flames of hell consume him forever and aye."

THE STRAW VOTES

La Follette Manifestly Drawing More From Democrats Than From Republicans.

All the straw votes of 1924 show the wind blowing the same way. They indicate that, outside of the Southern states and perhaps some of the border states, the real fight at the polls will be between Coolidge and La Follette. In the first returns from "The Literary Digest's" poll, covering the states of California, Illinois, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, Coolidge received 16,071, Davis 3,702 and La Follette, 5,596. The President had almost twice as many votes as his two opponents combined. These have been the results of the straw votes, all big states, normally Republican, but Coolidge's excess is surprising and testifies to his unusual nationwide strength.

Other more limited polls, such as that conducted by "The New York American" in sixteen cities, and that conducted by "The World" in two of this city's motion-picture theatres, are equally illuminating. "The Americans" canvass shows a total of 70,008 for Coolidge, 70,244 for La Follette and 32,212 for Davis. Of the sixteen cities included New York, Albany, Baltimore, Boston, Detroit, Chicago, San Francisco, Atlanta, Fort Worth and San Antonio are normally Democratic. Milwaukee is a La Follette citadel. Washington is disfranchised. Rochester and Los Angeles are Republican and Seattle and Syracuse are uncertain. Yet Coolidge is ahead in six of them, including New York, Chicago, Detroit and Baltimore, and but for La Follette.

After a quarrel
 Come, come, beloved,
 That my heart,
 Made desolate by your absence,
 May bloom again
 Into a garden of marigolds.

CHAPTER II.—Continued from Tuesday's issue

"And you wouldn't have insulted her. But you would the next girl who came along. Gene, you are hopeless. Now, get out of here and don't ever come back."

"Flo!" he entreated.

"I mean it."

"I reckon then I'll come back tomorrow and take my medicine," he replied.

"Don't you dare!" she cried.

Stewart went out and closed the door.

"Miss Hammond, you—don't know how this hurts me," said Florence. "What you must think of it! It's so unlucky that you should have had this happen right at first. Now, maybe you won't leave the heart to stay. Oh, I've known more than one eastern girl to go home without ever learning what we really are out here. Miss Hammond, Gene Stewart is a fend when he's drunk. All the same I know, whatever he did, he meant no shame to you. Come now, don't think about it again tonight." She took up the lamp and led Madeline into a little room. "Won't you let me help you undress—can't I do anything for you?"

"You are very kind, thank you, but I can manage," replied Madeline.

"Well, then, good-night. The sooner I go the sooner you'll rest. Just forget what happened and think how fine a surprise you're to give your brother tomorrow."

With that she slipped out and softly shut the door.

As Madeline laid her watch on the bureau she noticed that the time was past two o'clock. It seemed long since she had gotten off the train. When she had turned out the lamp and crept wearily into bed she knew what it was to be utterly spent. She was too tired to move a finger.

When she awakened the room was bright with sunlight. She was lazily and dreamily contemplating the mud walls of this little room when she remembered where she was and how she had come there.

How great a shock she had been subjected to was manifest in a sensation of disgust that overwhelmed her. She even shut her eyes to try and blot out the recollection. She felt that she had been contaminated.

Presently Madeline Hammond again awoke to the fact that she had learned the preceding night—that there were emotions to which she had heretofore been a stranger. She scarcely remembered when she had found it necessary to control her emotions. There had been no trouble, no excitement, no unpleasantness in her life. It had been ordered for her—tranquil, luxurious, brilliant, varied, yet always the same.

Then Madeline heard Florence rap on the door and call softly:

"Miss Hammond. Are you awake?"

"Awake and dressed, Miss Kingsley."

Presently there were slow, reluctant steps outside the front door, then a pause, and the door opened. Stewart stood bareheaded in the sunlight. Madeline's glance ran over him swiftly as lightning. But as she saw his face now she did not recognize it. The man's presence roused in her a revolt. Yet something in her, the incomprehensible side of her nature, thrilled in the look of this splendid dark-faced barbarian.

"Mr. Stewart, will you please come in?" she asked, after that long pause.

"I reckon not," he said. The hopelessness of his tone meant that he knew he was not fit to enter a room with her, and did not care or care to much.

"I shall not tell my brother of your—your rudeness to me," she began. It was impossible for her to keep the chill out of her voice, to speak with other than the pride and aloofness of her class. Nevertheless, despite her loathing, when she had spoken so far it seemed that kindness and pity followed involuntarily. "I choose to overlook what you did because you were not wholly accountable, and because there must be no trouble between Alfred and you. May I rely on you to keep silence and seal the lips of that priest? You will spare me further distress, will you not, please?"

His hoarse reply was incoherent.

WORST FORM OF INDIGESTION

Disappeared Under the Fruit Treatment—"Fruit-a-lives"

People are often amazed when they hear of a case like Mrs. Hammond's. Yet it is the most natural thing in the world to eat plenty of fruit for indigestion, dyspepsia and other stomach troubles—and to try and overcome Constipation and Biliousness by eating figs and prunes.

"Fruit-a-lives", made of the intensified juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes combined with tonics, will relieve stomach and bowel troubles.

Mrs. E. C. Hammond, 218 5th St., Groton, N.Y., says: "Last February, I started using 'Fruit-a-lives' for indigestion and constipation of the worst kind. 'Fruit-a-lives' entirely relieved me and I would not be without your valuable 'Fruit-a-lives' in the home."

A VIENNESE STAR

Marie Jeritza Who Sings At the Maine Festival Is Wonderful Drawing Card.

As near as can be surmised the Maine Festival will offer the greatest achievement in its history in presenting Marie Jeritza, the great Viennese star, as its opening attraction. Director Chapman is naturally elated at his wonderful success in securing this sensational celebrity. She has been the idol of the operatic stage of Europe for several years. She made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, in 1920, and the able critic the late H. E. Krehbiel said on the evening of her debut, "We cannot recall a similar scene in all the history of the Opera House which has witnessed many a great artistic triumph. It was not applause, it was an emotional tumult, a tempest."

Director Chapman has been negotiating the past three years with Jeritza's managers and after patient efforts he has been able to secure this highest priced dramatic soprano in the world for the Festival this fall. Not since the days of Patti, has any prima donna been able to command $5,000 per concert. Director Chapman feels sure that Portland and the Western Maine will be glad of the opportunity to hear this marvelous artist. Mme. Jeritza's voice is thrilling in range and power. Her personality is fascinating. Her appearance is the most beautiful and queen-like of any one on the stage or concert platform. She is 28 years old and has sung very few concerts in this country. She appeared in Symphony Hall, Boston, last spring, where she drew $10,500, while 2,000 people who could not secure tickets were clamoring for admission. She has sung ten concerts since she finished her opera contract for this season, and here even every available inch of room was sold.

It will be a musical history for the State of Maine to have the 28th Festival present this great artist, as it will be the first Festival in which this famous prima donna has ever sung.

THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would take your wonderful medicine as it has done so much good to me. I had cramps and faint spells and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to lie in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. You know how badly I feel. I used to go to bed at eight and get up at seven, still tired. Now I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all I do in summer, but in winter I work in a factory. I have told so many of my friends, and I have had three come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. SAMUEL MURPHY, 219 Cecil St., Dover, Delaware.

Surprise parties were on the program among the younger set last week. Miss Dorothy Foelker was the first recipient, the occasion being a farewell party on the eve of her departure for the South. The affair took place in Mrs. N. F. Oliver's garage which was decorated for the occasion. Miss Foelker was presented with a beautiful ring and bracelet by her friends. The following evening Miss Carolyn Steele was given a party at which 20 young people were present. Every one had a fine time.

The Paragon Button Corporation Band was given a supper by the North Waldoboro ladies Tuesday night. Thirty dollars was presented to the organization. The band played at Montville Fair last week and at Union this week. Much regret is felt over the departure of Howard A. Foelker, who has been the leader of the band this year. Mr. Foelker is an accomplished musician and it is largely due to his leadership that the band is in such splendid shape. Mr. Foelker leaves this week for Florida with his family where they will spend the winter.

Many of the patrons also enjoyed the fine supper served at the hotel in Searsmont. The Paragon Button Corporation Band furnished music for the dance.

John Thibodeau and Miss Myrtle Simmons were united in marriage at the Baptist parsonage on Saturday evening by Rev. Guy C. McQuade.

Miss Simmons, who lives on Long Island is well known in town where she recently graduated from High School. Mr. Thibodeau is an employee of the Paragon Button Corporation.

The Swarthmore Chautauqua will present a fine program here Oct. 1, 2 and 3. Among the attractions will be Marchetti's Swiss Yodlers, the Victorian maids using voice, cello, violin and piano, and Vierra's Hawaiian Concert Company. This promises to be as entertaining a program as ever given by the Chautauqua. Several fine speakers will be included.

Saturday afternoon at a quiet home wedding Miss Sarah Tibbets Storer became the bride of Kelsey A. Lash of Winslow's Mills. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Guy McQuade, the double ring service being used. Only the immediate relatives were present. Mr. and Mrs. Lash left early in the afternoon for a motor trip. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy E. Storer and was associated with her father in the postoffice for eight years. The groom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dana B. Lash, is the station agent at Winslow's Mills.

S. Fletcher; "Following of the Green" by Joseph Leroude, and "In A Shanting Garden."

STRAND THEATRE

Richard Hutton and Vivian Rich are starring today in "Unblazed Trails," a photoplay with a punch. An outstanding feature of the story, which is an original, is the grand climactic battle between the heavy and victorious Dick. Unusual suspense is retained during the bout and the feeling of satisfaction is overwhelming at the finale. The climax of "The Red Lily," feature for Monday and Tuesday comes when the hero of the story, played by Ramon Novarro, recognizes a woman who has brought him from the street as his own lost sweetheart, Marise, whom he has sought for years. Finding her unfaithful, he strikes her down with his fist in a spasm of fury and anguish; and what happens thereafter concludes one of the most deeply stirring tales ever told on the screen. The story is laid, for the most part, in the Italian underworld. The boy's father is a British village, has disinherited his son on learning of the boy's love for Marise, the daughter of a humble shoemaker. The pair flee to Paris to marry, are separated by peculiar circumstances, and thrust alone upon the city.

Marise becomes first a waitress, then a scrubwoman, and finally gives herself up in despair to the underworld. Meanwhile Jean for a time keeps his self-esteem, but eventually loses it also and turns thief.

The two meet years later. The boy, who is sought for by the police, answers the furtive invitation of a woman standing in the doorway leading to her dark and dingy room. Then, in the grim and greasy gaslight of her chamber, recognition dawns. The boy's last illusion is shattered. He very nearly kills her, and is prevented from doing so only by the sound of the police on the stairs. She hurriedly hides him, thereby saving him—for a time—from the law.

She nurses him through a period of delirium and illness, and then, when they are just beginning to find themselves, he is taken away to prison. He serves two years. Meanwhile, the girl is reclaimed by sisters of charity; and a new, different and joyous Marise awaits him outside the prison—adv.

PARK THEATRE

Monday the Jimmy Evans Revue opens a week's engagement at the Park, the attraction being a real novelty in modern high class refined entertainment. It is the most popular organization of musical revue in New England. Mr. Evans is a comedian of wide repute in Boston and New York, and has selected his own company for the present season with the idea of making a reputation in the United States beyond comparison in this particular style of entertainment. Mr. Carl M. Benson of the Park when asked regarding the attraction gave a personal guarantee that the theatre lovers in Rockland, if at all fond of music, singing, dancing and clever, pretty girls will be amply repaid for their visit to the Park next week. Seats are now on sale for the entire engagement. There will be complete changes Wednesday and Friday. The opening revue will be "Hello Everybody." In conjunction with the musical revue there will be a feature picture shown with each change. Secure seats now for the evening performance—adv.

EMPIRE THEATRE

A real Buck Jones! That was the satisfied popular verdict after the first performance of the newest William Fox attraction, "Against All Odds," at the Empire Theatre last night. Buck has a thrilling, intriguing plot of love, villainy and mystery to romp and ride through. In fact, there's a double-barrelled romance, a brace of bad men, two cowboy heroes but only one haunted house; only one Buck Jones who outdoes all his previous death defying stunts by lassoing a fast moving train and pulling himself aboard to rescue his buddy, sentenced to be hanged.

On the same program there is "The Ghost City," chapter eight, and a two reel comedy—adv.

The Fine Gravensteins Hold Steady and Wolf Rivers Are Selling Well.

Receipts of both box and barrel apples were heavy today and the market has a generally good demand, with prices somewhat lower on practically all varieties, although fine Gravensteins still hold steady. While Wolf Rivers are selling well, $1 is the outside for No. 1's, with most of the unclassified at $3 to $3.50.

Receipts of Wolf Rivers are very heavy and they are not clearing up as fast as we would like. Green apples unless they show good size and some style sell slow.

SOUTH THOMASTON BOY Who Has Won Business Distinction On the Pacific Coast.

The appended article from a recent issue of the Seattle Times relates to a South Thomaston boy who left his Knox County home at the age of 15.

George Fred Thordike is the son of the late Capt. Eben A. Thordike (the local spelling of the name) a former prominent master mariner of this section.

Mr. Thordike a few years ago paid a visit to his boyhood home. The Times article says: Following the purchase by George F. Thordike of the stock held by the Thordike-Trenholme Co., Inc., of Seattle, the Thordike-Trenholme Co., Inc., of Seattle was reorganized as the Thordike Shipping Company. It was an organization in 1914 the company's offices in the L. C. Smith building. The officers remained unchanged.

Mr. Thordike is president, with Mrs. G. M. Starr as vice president and treasurer and Elmer E. Todd as secretary.

The company handled the big tanker Sunoil, which brought a full cargo of creosote from Antwerp, Belgium to Puget Sound and Vancouver, B. C. She sailed Thursday evening for California to take a full cargo of oil for Philadelphia. Since 1883 the company has handled a great fleet of ocean carriers, including a large number of Shipping Board and French government vessels during the war period.

The Thordike-Trenholme Co., Inc., was incorporated in 1914 by Mr. Thordike and late J. D. Trenholme. Mr. Trenholme died in 1920 leaving his stock in the company to his family.

Mr. Thordike is a pioneer shipping man of Puget Sound. He was born in Maine, being a member of a family of shipbuilders and mariners. He came to the Pacific Coast in 1883, going first to San Francisco. Thence he voyaged to Tacoma as a sailor in the crew of the Lizzie Williams. From Tacoma he came to Seattle in January, 1884. During the early part of his career he served as a purser in the Puget Sound and Alaska fleets. He then became agent for the old Washington & Alaska Steamship Company in Skagway and Dyea, Southeastern Alaska. In 1908 he returned to Seattle as traffic manager of the Globe Navigation Company, organized by prominent men of Syracuse, N. Y., including the late L. C. Smith, builder of the L. C. Smith Building in Seattle.

The company built five sailing vessels in Seattle and operated them for years in the offshore routes. In 1910 Mr. Thordike was promoted to manager of the company. Four years later he retired from that position to enter the shipping business on his own account, and after another two years he and Mrs. W. L. Thordike, his wife, formed the Thordike-Trenholme Co., Inc. During his career Mr. Thordike has traveled more than 60,000 miles by water.

Mr. Thordike is a member of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, local 1111, and of the L. C. Smith Building in Seattle.

FIRST GAME TODAY

Rockland High School Football Eleven Opens Schedule in Bangor.

Rockland High School's football warriors try conclusions with Bangor High in Bangor this afternoon and local supporters are awaiting the outcome of the game with great interest. Bangor High has had eleven lauded to the skies while the orange and black has lost some of its seasoned players, yet Coach Jones is confident that the local boys will give a good account of themselves.

With school started the team has buckled down to real work and is showing the good old R. H. S. spirit. The boys have been stepping it in the finishing touches for today's mill. There is a lively scrimmage each night with plenty of pep—short and sweet, yet not so short at that.

Some fine work has been done of late by the new men. McLoon, late of Choate School, is proving a chip off the old block, for he is the son of A. C. McLoon, captain of the first football team to represent Rockland High. This youngster is cleaning up the passes in fine shape and is fast on his feet. Charles Chapin, alias "Young Chap," is working into the line like a rotary snow plow and is about as destructive.

All the old standbys are in condition and with the veterans he has to pick from Coach Jones is confident that R. H. S. will "give 'em the razzle-dazzle" long before Sept. 11. The squad is composed of exceptionally big men and the presence of many basketball stars points to pre-eminent work in the overhead game.

The public could be of great assistance to the management in offering transportation by motor to members of the squad at these out-of-town games. Great difficulty has been experienced in even finding those willing to take a few of the boys. As one youngster naively put it, "you would think that this is a two-car town with one car in the hospital by the way volunteers are showing up for the Bangor trip."

MRS. ANNIE WITHAM

Funeral services of the late Mrs. Annie H. Witham were held Thursday afternoon from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Hart, 135 Broadway. Impressive services were conducted by the Salvation Army which also held a committal service at the grave at Achorn cemetery. The bearers were Clifford Witham, John Hart, James Hurlie and Arthur Andrews. The sympathy of many friends found manifestation in the handsome floral offerings.

The deceased had been in failing health for two years. She was born in Deer Isle 60 years ago, daughter of the late Moses H. Dow. She had been a devoted worker in the Salvation Army cause, and the members of the local branch helped lighten the suffering and sorrow of her last days. She was also tenderly cared for by Mrs. Holt, with whom she had been making her home.

Mrs. Witham is survived by two children, Mrs. Lena Richardson of Philadelphia and Clayton Witham; a stepson, Clifford W. Witham—all of Rockland; and a brother, Victor Dow of Perth Amboy.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

What Our Home Artists and Others Are Doing To Forward the Interests of Musical Art.

Signor Enzo Bozano, who was scheduled to be one of the soloists at the coming Maine Festival is seriously ill, according to a telegram received by Mr. Chapman from Paris. However, Mr. Chapman has been fortunate in securing William Gustafson of the Metropolitan, substitute. Mr. Gustafson, who is to be one of the soloists at the Worcester Festival during the week of Oct. 6, comes highly recommended. Judging from his picture, he is a very handsome young man—the reviews mention this fact and say that he has a stalwart presence, so probably there will be much interest manifested among the fair sex when he appears. The reviews also say that his acting is strikingly done, his deep resonant voice lending itself admirably to the roles he impersonates. His singing is said to be marked by clarity and brilliance, and reminds one in a way of the famous Chaliapin.

Speaking of Chaliapin, I learn that this famous singer has just gone under the knife for laryngitis. The operation was performed at the noted clinic, Rue Puccini, under the direction of Dr. Jacques Le Mee, one of the foremost throat specialists in Paris, who states his patient is as comfortable as can be expected, but the doctors are unwilling to pronounce him entirely out of danger. Chaliapin's illness has been of long duration, and three times last spring his appearance in Paris were postponed because of throat trouble. Although he has given his voice an entire rest this summer, the trouble finally caused him to seek relief in an operation. Dr. Le Mee assures the public that "Chaliapin will be able to depart for the United States in the middle of October, and with the trouble removed, his voice will be sweeter than ever."

Portland turned out in goodly numbers to hear John Philip Sousa and his band—bigger and better than ever. Enthusiastic applause was heard all over the crowded house when Sousa made his first appearance, for the composer-director is much admired in Portland. His departure from a staid classical music to jazz found instant appreciation by the audience, and Sousa's face wore a smile of satisfaction when he found how his first number of this type had "taken." Some of the numbers were done better than ever before. The concert, proving the rare quality of Sousa in his gathering artists about him to embellish his concert tour. Marjorie Moody, soprano, was recalled three times. The other artists, especially Miss Winifred Bambrick, harpist, and John Dolan, cornetist, were enthusiastically received.

Mme. Maria Jeritza, prima donna soloist for the opening night concert of the Maine Festival, has announced that she intends to include American songs on her program. She says that she sings American songs for two very good reasons—"Because I want to, and because my audience wants me to. A song, you see, is a unit composed of words and music. And if the public only gets the music and has no idea of the meaning of the poem than if it were Chinese, the singer is only half successful as an interpreter. I personally have struggled to achieve a knowledge of English and this year for the first time, I really feel linguistically at home in my second homeland. I am always the perpetual student, and I am always conscious that even the greatest and wisest have much to learn."

Undoubtedly many of you read the statement that Fritz Kreisler, the world's greatest violinist, made in which he said the real test for all music is in the spine, and unless a tune causes the thrills to run up and down the spine of both musician and listener, something is wrong with the tune. Now comes John Philip Sousa, the famous bandmaster, and declares that this has been his lifetime test for music. He says that he never programs any numbers unless they cause him to feel a thrill—that unless they thrill him, they certainly will not thrill his audiences. I am pretty sure that we all get a thrill when we hear that glorious march of Sousa's, "Stars and Stripes Forever," and when we hear it played by Sousa's band itself—well, words fail me!

Gloria Caruso has a new half-sister—a daughter, Jacqueline Dorothy Ingram, being born to Mrs. Dorothy Caruso Ingram Sept. 18 at "The Harbor," which is Miss Lippincott's private hospital at Madison Avenue.

Belle Isle, off the coast of Brittany, the former home of Sarah Bernhardt, is to be cut up into building lots and sold. It was here that she spent many of her vacations, developing and beautifying her estate, covering a period of more than twenty years. This change is the cause of much distress among the fisher folk, for to them Belle Isle was the home of "the good lady in white," who was a gentle giantess, like most of the coast of France, Belle Isle is edged with great rocks, on which the waves break ceaselessly. Bernhardt always said the sound of the waves rested her. In former years there was a fortress built on the seaward side of the island, but after a time it became entirely deserted and Bernhardt discovered it and realized its possibilities, bought it with an enthusiastic gesture and made it her summer home.

The building itself is a big low square structure, painted white and trimmed with green. On all sides there is a view of the sea. It was completely detached from the busy world and the throng that always clamored for the divine Sarah, and here she gathered around her only her dearest and favorite friends and relatives—the ones she enjoyed the most. She took the keenest delight in making their stay happy—bathing, boating, tennis, riding—every form of entertainment, in fact, was provided for them.

It was here she dictated her Memoirs. In 1923 a wealthy manufacturer also discovered Belle Isle and built a great chateau behind the fort and its grounds. Bernhardt soon found it out, purchased the chateau and moved in herself—purchasing the fort too, and began to rent rooms in it to passing tourists. This was a cause of despair to her friends, who considered it a dreadful thing to do, but Bernhardt was a law unto herself and would not brook criticism.

To me it is interesting to hear or read of the relatives of the people we call great. I am always wondering what they are like, how they feel about their own who have won success, and all such things. So when I came across an article about the mother of Mme. Emma Eames, I pounced upon it with eagerness. She is another Emma Eames—Emma Hayden Eames—and she is still, in spite of her eighty years, active in musical affairs in Cleveland where her home has been for nearly twenty years.

Mme. Eames senior was born in Bath, and began the study of music at the age of five. As her voice developed, she specialized in singing, but continued her studies in piano playing and along the lines of general culture. Shortly after her marriage she went to Shanghai with her husband, and there her daughter Emma and son Col. Hayden Eames were born. Mme. Eames was always a very energetic woman, with the ability to lead, and while in Shanghai she formed a small orchestra which regularly met under her hospitable roof, in addition to being active in other musical affairs in Shanghai. Mrs. Eames was a lawyer and his work took him to Paris, where the daughter Emma, first the pupil of her mother and later of Matthilde Marchesi, was chosen by Charles Gounod to succeed Adeline Patti at the Opera. The Eames made many friends among the musicians in Paris—Gounod, Jules Massenet, Camille Saint-Saens, Ambroise Thomas, and others. It was a period rich in associations, and grows doubly rich, as the years pass on, and from which Mme. Eames draws liberally in imparting to her pupils as much as they can absorb of her knowledge. However, she does not base her entire instruction on the past—no one is more abreast of the times than she. She makes teaching a pleasure, not a profession, and accepts no money for the lessons. Recently she presented her pupils in a recital at her residence. The program was given in a most attractive and interesting manner, consisted of operatic arias and duets, more in the line of a professional concert than a student one. Some of Cleveland's most prominent singers attribute their success to Mme. Eames. The picture which accompanied the article is most attractive, showing her sitting at the piano, the face in profile. The features are rather like Mme. Eames we know, yet the hair, combed in curls softly about her face, makes them seem kinder and sweeter than those of the daughter. I cannot help but wonder how the daughter can have such a beautiful old mother, whose years at the most cannot be many more.

A printer entrusted with the program for a performance of "Messiah" in a small town was not over and above particular about the details, consequently the audience was regaled with opinions and advice to the solo singers that read this-wise: "Comfort Ye Mr. Smith," "Behold and See Mr. Smith," "I Know Mrs. Brown," "But Who May Abide Mr. Robinson?" "Rejoice Greatly Miss Gray," "Behold and See Mr. Smith," "I Know Mrs. Brown," "And I will Shake Mr. Robinson."

Glancing over the list of artists to be with the San Carlo Opera this season, I see a number of familiar

Have You a Dividend Check Coming to You on October 1?

ON Wednesday, October 1, are you expecting the Postman to bring you a dividend check from Central Maine Power Company?

Over 11,000 Maine people are. They are relying upon the past record of the Company and its regularity of dividend payments.

For some stockholders—those who have held their Central Maine from the first—it will mean their 72nd consecutive dividend. In 19 years not a single dividend date has gone by without this dividend check coming to them as regularly as night follows day.

Just so long as Maine homes and industries continue to use lights and power, just so long as Maine rivers flow to the sea—then just so long, we believe, will these people always receive their dividends. These dividends are the profits that Maine rivers and streams are earning for those who have such unflinching faith in the water power development of their own State.

If you, too, would like to share in this ultimate prosperity; better still, if you would like to get in line for a dividend check on January 1 send in the coupon. At least send it in to learn more about a Company that is doing so much for the growth and prosperity of your state.

Among the newcomers is Louis Rousseau, American tenor, who is called a "Gallo find." He was "discovered" last June in Paris—unknown in America, his own land, but popular with the French. Mr. Gallo says that the Americans will like him equally as well—Mr. Rousseau has simply lacked the opportunity to show his countrymen what he could do. Mr. Rousseau is said to have a repertoire of forty-two operas and sings in French, Italian, German and English with equal facility. He was born in New York and as a youth was employed by a banking house. His early musical studies were undertaken in New York, but after a time he went to Europe to study for the opera, earning his way by continuing his relation with the bank. He made rapid progress, and became so successful that in a short time he was singing at the Opera Comique, and was invited as a guest star to Lyons, Marseilles and Nantes, singing entire seasons in each city.

With the Radio Fans

(By R. W. Tyler)

We are offering with today's column the first questions answered through The Courier-Gazette's Radio Service Bureau and we are welcoming inquiries from our radio readers. When replies are desired by mail you should enclose a two-cent stamp to cover postage.

R. T. Camden—I have a two-tube receiver using storage battery tubes and wish to change to WD 11s. What changes will be necessary?

Answer—If you already have the WD 11s you may secure adapters for them to fit your standard sockets. However the WD 12 tubes are identical to the WD 11s, with the exception of the bases which fit the sockets you are now using and will eliminate the necessity of securing adapters. Three No. 6 dry cells should be hooked up in parallel to replace your present "A" battery.

No Name, Union—Is the Super-dyne mentioned in your radio column equally as efficient with either dry cell UV 199 or WD 12 tubes?

Answer—The UV 199 tubes are especially efficient in this circuit as they are good performers on all three phases of the superdyne, radio frequency amplifiers, detectors and audio amplifiers. I have never tried the WD tubes in this circuit.

F. P.—Where is station W M A F, which uses the slogan "From the Land of the Pilgrim Fathers?"

Answer—This station is in South Dartmouth, Mass.

J. J. C. Rockland—My Haynes receiver will not tune above 400 meters. What can I do to get the higher waves?

Answer—A 60025 fixed condenser placed across the secondary so that it may be switched in or out ought to boost your wave-length. Tuning is done with the variable condenser as usual and with this arrangement you ought to get up to at least 600.

L. C. Rockland, wishes me to ask the readers if any of them have an 80 or 100 amp hour storage battery to sell cheap. Address replies to above initials, care Radio Editor, Courier-Gazette.

Radio Nut, Camden—What size rheostats will I need to operate the type C 229 tubes from a six volt storage battery without endangering the filament?

Answer—If your present rheostats are 15 ohm resistance connect your battery clips across the first two cells of the battery and alternate them with the last two cells every other night. If you wish to use the whole six volts place 25 ohm resistance units between your present rheostats and the tube sockets or replace your present rheostats with new ones of 60 ohm resistance.

K. G. Rockland—What is your idea of the most practical receiving set for a beginner to construct at home?

Answer—The Haynes DX receiver offers rather more performance, with extreme simplicity, than any other set known and as an added feature it will not re-radiate and disturb your neighbor if properly operated.

C. S. North Haven—I have always thought that the term radio frequency meant the reception of code messages. You speak of musical programs being unusually clear by this method of reception, will you please make this plain to me?

Answer—The term radio frequency is misunderstood by hundreds of radio fans, even in this day of radio frequency receivers. To explain it thoroughly would require considerable space and would even then be difficult for the beginner to understand. It is a form of amplification which invariably takes place in the unrectified signal or audible frequency and usually necessitates one or more added tubes to a receiver. It is different from audio frequency inasmuch as audio frequency amplification takes place when the audible signal is passed through a step-up transformer after detection.

E. H. Thomaston—What is the farthest station you have ever received on a single tube Haynes receiver?

Answer—I do not recall just now, but one of my neighbors worked the Oakland, California, station K G O on such a set. As a rule this receiver performs well up to 1000 miles, although many have spanned the continent with this same little set.

At this season of the year when we dust off the old radio set and start to get it into shape for the World Series games and other programs of equal importance a few suggestions as to possible trouble may not be out of place.

Those of you who use dry cell tubes should test all "A" batteries with an ammeter and if there is a showing of 10 amps or less it would be advisable to replace the batteries with new ones, and clean all connections to both "A" and "B" batteries by scraping brightly with a knife. In sets using storage batteries there are other troubles to contend with. In these sets that have been

She Threw Away Calomel and took Beecham's Pills

"I felt so miserable," said the young woman cashier in a fashionable New Jersey hotel. "A friend suggested calomel and I was about to take it."

"Another friend noticed the calomel on my desk and cautioned me against it. She said her sister took calomel and ate some fruit and the combination 'salivated' her—loosened some of her teeth and made her very sick."

"Fearing that my stomach might be in an acid condition, I bought a 25c box of Beecham's Pills and took a dose. The next day I felt fine and I haven't needed anything during the three weeks since."

"I wouldn't take anything but Beecham's now. Some of the other girls here take Beecham's and all say they are wonderful."

At all druggists—25c-50c.

batteries are made tight but some of the solution gets on the top while taking readings or when moving the battery about and if not wiped off will reach the terminals and oxidize the connections.

Look your battery connections over carefully especially the cathode or negative terminal. Clean off all corrosion and scrape to the clean white metal and also go carefully over the clips and make sure that they get a clean, bright contact with the terminals of the battery. After this is done smear the terminals generously with ordinary vaseline which keeps the solution in the battery from again creeping up and eating off the connections.

If storage "B" batteries are used take the same precautions with these and use the vaseline after you are sure the terminals are perfectly clean. Half the trouble, noise and sizzle in a set may invariably be traced to loose or poor connections which have become dirty or corroded.

With the batteries and their connections carefully attended to to your utmost satisfaction it is then a good plan to let the old antenna down for a little scrutiny. The chances are that if you had hung out in the open as long as that piece of copper wire has it would need considerable attention, so it's a pretty safe bet that you can find ample opportunity to make some improvement on the faithful old antenna. At least you will feel that you are starting off the winter right in that respect.

Antenna insulation is of the utmost importance for unhampered reception. Next to this should come the connections of the antenna and the lead-in and perhaps no little attention should be given the end ropes that hold the wire in place through all the storms of the winter.

Exposure to the elements turns the copper wire black, and this black antenna substance is an insulator to the high frequencies and causes the antenna to be less efficient. To remove this coating of corrosion run the wire through sandpaper, or better still a piece of emery cloth. This should make the wire clean and bright and you will now be all set for the fine winter program.

Alton Blackinton, who is vacationing in East Union, paid me a nice visit a few days ago and has divided his enthusiasm now between photography as a business and radio as a pastime. Since his vacation started he has had the pleasure of hearing the wire through sandpaper, or better still a piece of emery cloth. This should make the wire clean and bright and you will now be all set for the fine winter program.

usually gets the "razz" among the boys at the Herald Office when they look over some of our lists of stations received in a single night; has a staunch supporter in Mr. Blackinton who will hold out that we are actually not "fibbing" about it. Alton listened-in to Providence for the first time last Tuesday night although he is some two hundred miles nearer this station when he is in Boston.

I have tried out the improved Superdyne recently brought out in the Boston Post and I will tell you in the next column how well I liked it.

While you are waiting you had better send for some applause cards for the artists out there in the studios who are doing so much to make your programs entertaining.
