Poetry.

For the Oxford Democrat.

By LANCE.

There's a gentle motion and perfume rare In the breeze from the balmy South, The breath of the slumbering goddess there,
Which is wafted abroad on the summer air From her scarcely opened mouth.

Cool and wild and cold
Is the breath of the North wind god, Powerful, swift and bold;
And it sings sharp as a raid.

The wind from the bright young West Is cheerful and brisk and gay, Tis the wind I love the best;
'Tis ready for work or play.

Cheerless, sullen and fell Is the breath the East wind sends, Wailing, it sounds a knell,
And gloom to everything lends.

Over the spirits of men on earth, Breathings come and go,
What thought each spirit breath brings to birth, Smiles or tears soon show.

Just as the winds which sweep o'er the plain, Carry joy or woe,
So, mixed with happiness or with pain, Spirit breathings blow.

Selected Story.

For the Oxford Democrat.

A CRAZY DOCTOR.

The three greatest misfortunes which can befall a man is to be born indolent, rich, or with a good appetite.

I had all these accomplishments, and hence my misery was complete. My parents resided in the city when I was born and I was an only child, petted and adored.

The first occupation in which I engaged was eating; the second was doing nothing and in these two I faithfully employ my time during the first twenty years of my life.

Then, of course, I suffered from indigestion and general debility, and could do nothing.

My hands had never been soiled by labor, nor had my brain been burdened with a heavy load of facts, though a good common school education had permeated my cranium.

The doctors said I must have air and out door exercise, so the old folks bought a country seat and I sat on it. Good air soon increased my appetite, and a good supply of pork fat increased the pangs of indigestion.

One day as I lay groaning, the old housekeeper came in, unbidden, and was greeted with a good supply of epithets and invectives. You know indigestion makes one very good natured. But did you ever try to get an old country woman out of your room when you were in pain or trouble? I will give a fortune for a recipe which will accomplish that object. They are so sympathetic, and have so many remedies at their tongue's end, and on you too, if you are not of a very determined nature.

She wanted to know where I was took, and after vain endeavors to avoid the point in issue I finally allowed that it was in my stomach, that organ so fearfully and wonderfully made.

At once she left and prepared mustard and hot flannels.

But to the application I rebelled.
Thinking I must be crazy she sent for the country doctor, and soon a tall, slim, bald headed, straight collared old gent sought admittance to my room.

He had been warned, and came not in his official capacity, but called to see the new occupant of Misery Mansion.

Finding me in pain he drew forth an account of my habits and history, and then revealed his professional capacity; called me a lazy dog, and recommended the old remedy of saw-dust pills, the ingredients of which were to be manufactured by the patient.

I was really sick and hence ready to try any remedy which did not look or seem like doctoring.

The next morning I borrowed a saw and buck, which exertion I presumed would be sufficient until after dinner,—at least I took no more.

Five minutes after the noonday meal was swallowed, those old and well known pains began to shoot. I went for the saw and the wood pile, and sawed until perspiration had run from me in quantities sufficient to moisten a bushel of the other pill material. Then I pulled my hat over my eyes and lay myself down upon the shaded grass.

But in a moment I was at it again; and as I sawed, I saw a figure stealing around the house and woodpile. Then the wild chuckle of a crazy man greeted me. Close by stood my friend the doctor, raving mad.

I started to run, but my limbs refused to move, and in a moment he had seized me. His looks and breath were terrible, but I was speechless and immovable.

He tied my feet together, pinned my hands to my sides and rolled me upon the woodpile. Then he commenced sawing.
Log after log was cut in two, until he came to where I lay.

I was rolled over and pronounced "seasoned enough," and then, imagine my horror, as he carried me to the saw-buck and laid me in its crotches.

He had carried his saw,—my saw—ruther, the saw I borrowed, with him, when he came for this log, and left it where I was.

As he looked wildly around for his implement, I hoped there might some help arrive before he found it.

Vain hope! In a moment an intelligent look passed over his face and he went directly where it was. Taking it in one hand he walked to me and passed his fingers over its teeth. They did not seem sharp enough to suit him, and taking out his pocket-knife he proceeded, with the nail blade, to file them.

Now, you know, a country physician does not carry any of these delicate little knives such as you see in cutlers' windows in the city, but a regular instrument manufactured especially for his use.

It is big enough to cut off a limb, and has a crooked blade for pruning, and a hooked iron for cleaning horses' hoofs, and a long wire for clearing borers out of trees, and a pair of pinchers for pulling teeth, and a lancet for bleeding horses, and a nail blade big enough to smooth a hip bone if roughly amputated.

I will also remark that countrymen have very large nails, so large that a small knife would make no impression on them, hence the necessity of so heavy a blade.

I make this explanation that you may not think it strange my doctor had a tool at hand large enough to file a saw.

As he filed, every scream of the afflicted tooth—did you ever think it hurts a saw to file its teeth, and that is what makes it emit such fearful sounds during the operation?—was echoed by me internally, though the power of emitting sound had left me.

I thought this noise must bring the old housekeeper to my aid, but she came not.
Then it flashed across my mind that she was leagued with the doctor for my destruction. Did she not send for him "unknownst" to me and had he not prescribed a remedy which gave him this opportunity to accomplish their evil designs upon me?

He seemed to read what was passing in my mind, immediately stopped filing, and looked around carefully to see if any one had been disturbed by the sound.

Seeing a team in the road approaching, he hastily cast me behind the chopping block and went industriously to work upon a log, until the danger of detection was passed.

Then he again placed me upon the buck and proceeded to saw me in two.

Placing one foot upon my left side near the heart, he drew the saw across my stomach. With the first stroke of the saw I screamed and awoke to find my old housekeeper endeavoring to fasten a mustard plaster upon my stomach.

She said I lay groaning awfully, and she thought I must have had a fit, as she rolled me over several times, and I did not come to. In the goodness of her heart, she had determined to rescue me without the aid of a physician.

But I thought I did not even need her assistance, and wandered off to the woods, feeling wretchedly. I mentally vowed I would never touch a saw again, and resolved to write home for permission to return to the city. But before night I felt so free and happy that I letter was burned, and a new resolution to "fight it out on that line" was formed.

I continued to do some physical labor from that day forth, and now instead of being weak, pale and sickly, I am a healthy, and, consequently, a happy man. I own a good large farm, and when tired of the cares and routine of my profession, I visit it for a few days, and return refreshed and strengthened both in body and brain.

A Famous Class.

The Bowdoin Class of 1825—The Living and the Dead—Reminiscences of an Old Boy.

One of the Bowdoin boys writes to the New York Tribune, giving some entertaining reminiscences of that famous class. He says:

In the latter part of the summer of 1825 there passed through the turn-stiles from the College grounds in Brunswick, Maine, 37 young men, namely:

Charles J. Abbott, John S. C. Abbott, Thomas Ayer, Elisha Bacon, Samuel P.
Benson, Alden Boynton, James W. Bradbury, Richmond Bradford, Horace Bridge, Geo. B. Cheever, Jonathan Cilley, Cyrus D. Coolidge, Jeremiah Dummer, Nath'l Dunn, Joseph J. Eveleth, David H. Foster, Patrick H. Greenleaf, Wm. Hale, Nathaniel Hawthorne, John D. Kinsman, Josiah S. Little, Stephen Longfellow, Alfred Martin, Alfred Mason, Frederick Mellen, Mark H. Newman, Hezekiah Packard, George W. Pierce, Edward D.
Pierce, Cullen Sawtelle, David Shepley, Charles Small, William Stone, Edward J.
Vose, Eugene Weld, Seward Wyman.

They went forth in the vigor of youth, with strong hearts and high hopes, to be their own masters, and to act their part in life, after having been under tutors and governors for four years within those college bounds. Thirty-seven of us went out in 1825, and now a call has been made for us to assemble again on the college grounds, on Tuesday, July 6, after the lapse of 50 years. Mason fell in three years, Martin and Vose in five, Mellen in nine, Pierce in ten, and Cilley in thirteen years, and others have been dropping off, one by one, ever since. J. S.
C. Abbott, the Rev. Dr. G. B. Cheever, the Hon. S. P. Benson, the Hon. J. W.
Bradbury, C. J. Abbott, Horace Bridge,

C. H. Coolidge, M. D., Prof. N. Dunn, Joseph Eveleth, Wm. Hale, Esq., Henry Wordsworth Longfellow, the Hon. Cullen Sawtelle, the Rev. Dr. D. Shepley, Wm. Stone, and one or two others have been spared. We went forth with elastic step and youthful glow, but return slow in pace, timeworn in visage, and whitened with age. There is no resisting the work of half a century. And he is fortunate, or rather is providentially favored, who even lives so long: he must not complain if Time has set his hand pretty heavily upon him during the course of those years.

As to rank, Little took the first part and delivered the valedictory, and I think it was the general belief that he would take that rank even before the Senior year. He always seemed to be master of his lessons, and he had a remarkably happy faculty of expressing himself in the recitation room; for let it be remembered, in those days there were no blackboard demonstrations. If there had been, unquestionably the grades would have been somewhat changed. Everything was oral. Little was fluent in speech, but not rapid; distinct in articulation, and happy in his choice of words. Cilley was the reverse of this in some respects.

He hesitated, and although he always came out right in the end it not unfre-quently seemed as if he would inevitably fail; but in debate he was more fluent than Little. Cilley ranked among the best debaters in college. Little has shown a goodly amount of talent that stood below Little. It is likely he took his rank from his faculty of delivery in the classroom, and not simply from his better knowledge of his studies. That was doubtless the peppercorn that turned the scale in his favor. He studied law, but I am not informed what his success in his profession was. He finally became President of a railroad company. The truth is, eminence in any profession implies close application and hard toil; and for these there is nothing better than the spur of need. Little lacked this incentive. He was "the manner born," reared in affluence, and I am told, he inherited wealth. He died in 1862.

The class of 1825 is called a famous class. It has given to the world Hawthorne and Longfellow. I think it was regarded as a marked class in college.
Even its number was unusual. It was larger than any class that had ever before been graduated at that college, and larger than any that was graduated there for twelve years afterwards. The one which immediately preceded it contained only 13 members. Our class at one time numbered 42 men, but two died before the course was finished, and three left college. John S. C. Abbott was a good scholar, amiable in disposition, and comely in manners. George B. Cheever, besides being a good general scholar, possessed the ability to put upon a seven-by-nine scrap of paper more ideas than any other man in the class. Longfellow was accounted a good poet before he left college, and Cilley and Hawthorne gave promise of what they were to do. In college, Hawthorne was a quiet, thoughtful, honest young man. I can remember my surprise when I heard that he was in a Custom House; but Salem was not the whole world. The old philosophers explained the falling of a stone by saying that "everything went to its own place," and so it was in the end with Hawthorne.
He went to his own place—Literature.

Cilley, there are tears for him—so promising, so popular. Tears for his death, and tears for the manner of his dying. He fell, as it is well known, in a duel while a Representative in Congress.
Pierce was a literary man and would have made his mark as a writer, had he been spared.

Samuel P. Benson had an excellent standing in the class. He studied law, and was elected to Congress. He is still living.

James W. Bradbury was one of the best scholars in the class. Having had the advantage of Judge Shepley's instruction in the study of law, he came to the bar under favorable circumstances, especially as the Democratic party were ready to receive such a recruit with open arms. He took high rank as a young lawyer from the start, and in a few years acquired an extensive and lucrative practice. In 1835 he was appointed County Attorney, and held the office for three years. He was always an active and efficient member of the Democratic party and his culture and character led his political friends to elect him to the U. S.
Senate in 1846. He has always been a warm friend of his Alma Mater, serving for many years in the Board of Overseers, and since 1860 as a trustee. And in 1872 the college, in acknowledgement of his fidelity to its interests, as well as to his learning in the law, conferred upon him the degree of LL. D.

Richard Bradford practiced medicine and died in Auburn in 1874. He was a man of positive Christian character, and retained his love for the classics to his dying day.

Horace Bridge is in the naval service.
Hawthorne wrote a "Journal of an African Cruiser" from his journal.

Stephen Longfellow, the poet's brother, died in 1850, at the age of 45.

Prof. Nathaniel Dunn entered the Sophomore year in 1822. He was the first teacher in the Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, Mass., in 1815. He has delivered lectures in Rutgers Female College recently, and is still living.

Among those who entered the ministry were Alden Boynton, Elisha Bacon, Thos.

Dyer, Patrick H. Greenleaf and David Shipley. Cullen Sawtelle has been in Congress and is still living. Chas. J.
Abbott is a lawyer at Castine. John D.
Kinsman, M. D., studied law and went to Wisconsin to recover his health, but died in 1850. Wm. Hale is a merchant in Dover, N. H., and Joseph H. Newman and Hezekiah Packard were in the book trade and have both died. Chas. Small entered upon the practice of medicine in Bangor, and died suddenly in 1863.

[For the Oxford Democrat.]
Western Correspondence.

Greeley, Col., July, 12, '75.

To the Editor of the Democrat:

If you expect me to grapple with any smaller subject than "the grasshopper," you are doomed to disappointment.

The grasshopper has proved to be a burden to me;—before this letter is done he will be a burden to you.

Mr. Editor, I used to believe in the prophecy, but I don't any more. First, the prophets said we were to have no hoppers this year, because there were no eggs deposited; then the fearful winter cold was to kill all the eggs; then the snow and freeze of May was to kill the pests that had just hatched; then the little fly was going to kill them all with his hatchet; then machines were to be invented to save the crops, etc., etc.

The facts are, myriads of grasshoppers hatched out, none the worse for 40° below zero. When the abominable two days snow of May came, the hoppers curled up close to the ground and were happy. The little flies deposited their eggs in the little bodies of hoppers; these eggs hatched, producing a grub, and finally accomplished their good work. Men experimented with traps and revolving flumes of kerosene, and grew wiser, day by day. Still hundreds of acres of wheat were destroyed and men who wished to save their crops had to fight up to the time when the hoppers got their wings, in June, and flew away.

Sir, I have used my word "fight,"— There have been some of the very finest exhibitions of pluck in this colony this season. Some men would come to town and say, "it's no use," and hang their heads. But some of our men wouldn't say die: they got up before sunrise and plowed the benumbed hoppers under;— they surrounded their precious fields with water, and set gunny sacks in the water, and thus caught bushels; they saw court-less millions heading toward the wheat, and promptly scattered straw and gathering their friends, drove vast numbers up on the straw and in the cool of the evening burned straw and hoppers together, destroying so many that the stench of the decaying bodies of the half-consumed hoppers filled the air;—and this thing was kept up for weeks and weeks. Some of these men put with pride to as fine wheat fields as a man could wish to see.

Towards the close of the campaign, the inventors began to be successful. Many felt that with the improved grasshopper killers there need be no failure to grow crops in the future. A large door may be placed upon the ground, with an awning of wire netting on three sides of it. If two men draw this cage towards the grasshoppers great numbers will leap into it, and as the trap moves forwards, they will only try to escape through the meshes of the wire work. Bushels of the young creatures may be caught in this way. This principle works the best of any yet tried.

Of course the hoppers did great injury to early grain; but our people have re-sown great breadths of country. There is much corn that promises well, and we do not expect to have to call for aid outside of our own community.

A party of mountaineers once undertook to have grasshoppers for dinner.— They were all from the land of baked beans and two were from Maine. They had caught their game and placed them in boiling water so that they need not be too lively when frying. I will not say they used butter, for I don't think they had that luxury. It is safe to say they used lard. Dinner was about to be served when one of the Maine men said he "wasn't very well and wouldn't take dinner to-day." At this moment two friends from the East arrived. The Bostonian, who was acting as cook, remarked: "We haven't much for dinner and I don't know as you can put up with our fare." The jolly travellers protested that they could eat jack knives, screw drivers, or anything. "I am sorry," said the cook, "that we have only grasshoppers for dinner." Soon all were at the table.
The other Maine man was sick but he resolved to eat his part well. The dish of fried hoppers was passed. The plucky Maine man began to eat as if his life depended upon it. When the travellers saw that the dish really did contain hoppers, they gave a little start and said:

"Oh! oh! Well then! Do you—oh—really do you eat them? We thought you joking."

"Oh! Very nice! very nice!" exclaimed the gentleman from Maine;—
"taste precisely like trout."

And so all said "very nice," even the sick gentleman, and all agreed they were "just like trout."

An old citizen of Vermont observes that when a post office clerk gets too high-nosed to stick a stamp on to a letter, it is time the country had a change of administration.

Fight with a Rat.

The Chief Engineer of the Navy Vanquished.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Sun tells the following story:

No less a person than engineer-in-chief of the navy, W. W. Wood, came hobbling like a wounded soldier, and with his ankles bandaged, into Welker's this morning in search of a breakfast.

"Gout, gout," said I; "too much of Robeson's old Madeira."

"No, no," he replied solemnly. "Rat, rat!" and he proceeded to tell me of a desperate combat, lasting nearly an hour, that he had with a monster rat the night before. The family being away, and the rats not getting anything to eat for some days, had become hungry and desperate. Mr. Wood was sleeping alone in a back room, the bed being near the door. About one o'clock in the morning he was awakened by a severe pain in his foot, and heard something jump heavily to the floor. A light revealed the fact that a gash had been made on the ball of his left foot, from which the blood was flowing freely.

As there was no cat in the house, Mr.
Wood at once concluded that it was a rat and that it had made its exit. After washing and bandaging the wound, he again stretched himself on the bed and fell into a doze. The rat came at him again, this time making an ugly gash in the heel of his right foot. After bandag-ing the second wound, Mr. Wood went in search of the rat, resolved to exterminiate him if possible. But his ratship had eaten his way into a bureau in the front room. A screw-driver was brought into use and one by one the drawers were opened and there in the lowest one was found, to use Mr. Wood's own words, "Mr.
Rat, half as big as the water pitcher, and looking directly at me with a pair of the wickedest eyes. Then he made a desperate jump directly in my face."

Mr. Wood had shut the door

TOWN ITEMS.

Bethel.

July 30.—We are having splendid corn weather.

Farmers are about half through cutting their hay. There will be an average crop.

Grasshoppers have made their appearance, and it is thought they will do considerable damage to grain crops.

Corn and potatoes are rallying from the effects of early frost, and if the season is favorable there will be a good crop.

On the morning of June 14, there was a frost on all low lands, and for two weeks following, the weather was cool. The first part of June was very dry, and corn planted on light soil failed to come up. The rain fall for June was 4.71 inches.

We recently received a letter from Hon. H. F. Eaton of Norridgewock, stating that it is proposed to have a reunion of the 4th Maine Vol. Battery, the present season—time and location not yet agreed upon. Lewiston is spoken of as being the place.

Bethel is well represented in the Maine Battery. I would suggest that instead of each regiment holding a reunion of its members, that all the regiments unite and hold a joint reunion. Such a reunion should be held at some central place.

The following are the officers of Mount Adams Lodge, L. O. O. F.: J. T. Chapman, P. G.; O. D. Clough, N. G.; Frank Clough V. G.; C. C. Gerish, Sec.; Alden Scates, P. S.; Charles Mason, T.; Justus Reynolds, C.; Frank Bartlett, W.; J. F. Freeman, O.; G. A. Plasted, O. G.; Benj. Clough Jr., I. G.; J. F. Leach, R. S. N. G.

Charles Douglas, L. S. G.; G. A. Burroughs, R. S. V. G.; Robbins Brown, L. S. V. G.; Ever Clough Jr., R. S.; David Brown, L. S. The Lodge is in a prosperous condition, numbering one hundred and ten members.

The new band organized here about one year ago, is flourishing finely and is nearly able to disburse some sweet strains of amateur music.

The funeral services of Mr. Moses Chandler were held at the house of his son, P. C. Chandler, on Friday, the 30th, at 10 o'clock A. M. Mr. C. was seventy-two years old, and his many noble qualities of mind and heart had won for him, a marked degree, the esteem and confidence of those he met.

Rev. Mr. Sanderson of Brunswick, son of Elder Sanderson of this town preached at the M. E. church, Sunday morning, July 30. A very interesting speaker, and his sermons exceedingly pungent and plain.

Rev. Mr. Dutton of Georgetown, So. Carolina, preached a very interesting sermon at the same place, in the afternoon, July 31.

The following officers of Popplewell Lodge of the L. O. O. F. were installed by Grand Warden B. Stone:

D. D. Messier, N. C.; F. S. Thorne, V. G.; J. L. Frink, Sec.; A. Martin, Treas.; Past officers, A. C. Morrison, Warden; Thomas Leary, Con.; A. Blake, P. G.; F. S. Thorne Jr., J. G.; H. Wentworth, R. S. N. G.; Chas. Bean, L. S. G.; G. C. Cole and J. M. S. S.; Wm. Boston, R. S. V. G.; W. W. Warrenton, L. V. G.

Veritas.
Sunday morning we were called to mourn over a brother beloved—whose life was a Christian character seemed like the life of a saint. The deceased was William B. Sparrow, who was called to Helton Academy last May—leaving many of great promise—who was buried in the cemetery.

In the afternoon we met at the Lake, when cheerful disciples followed the example of their Lord. In the evening 13 of us went to the Baptist church. Husbands and their wives, mothers and daughters were among the number. A young man, that proposes to enter college, was in the fall, and give his life for the gospel, and a young lady that has been our organist for a part of the last three years, obeyed the Divine command—Lewiston Journal.

Eyeburg.
July 31.—The pedestrian party which left this place for a ramble in the White Mountains on the 29th, returned the 28th, after a most enjoyable trip. The party numbered twenty-two, nine ladies and thirteen gentlemen,—with four tents and a team to take along trappings, tents &c. They began their tramp at Glen Station, passing to the Glen House—on to Mt. Washington—riding down the mountain railway—camping at Fabyan's, at Crawford's, ascending Mt. Willard—walking through the Notch—taking the cars at White Brook for home. The party were fortunate in the weather—the rare making of the party—the freedom from accident and the general good time that followed the whole time of march. Probably the best time a detailed account of the trip will appear from several members of the party.

Hanover.
John White of a Virgin has lately erected a new woolen mill on the site of the old mill formerly owned by Col. Joel White. The new mill is thirty by sixty feet, three stories above the basement and is built in a neat and substantial manner, making a very good appearance. He has put into the mill gates a new turbine water-wheel, said to be the best and only wheel of the kind used in the State. He has put this wheel in running order and it works admirably. It is thought that it gives more power with the same amount of water than the over wheel the only water wheel that has been successfully used on the mill brook running out of Hiram's Pond. Mr. Virgin has erected this mill for his two sons George A. and Rufus I. Virgin. They have employed Allen Warner of Lewiston an experienced wood carver, and have in operation two sets of machinery for custom carding and are now prepared to do custom work. Mr. Charles Foster of Buckfield has bought a mill site on the said brook above C. W. Silver's and blind shop where he intends this season to erect a large mill for the purpose of manufacturing all kinds of mill work, including a large mill for the purpose of manufacturing all kinds of mill work, including a large mill for the purpose of manufacturing all kinds of mill work.

manufacturing those articles one hundred and twenty-five horse power and has purchased two hundred feet of fall on said brook.

All the mills and shops in this small village are doing about their usual amount of business.

Our farmers are now very busy harvesting their hay-crop, which promises to be more than an average yield this season.

Editor of Democrat:—

A rambling tour a few weeks since, carried me through this village. I was at once struck with the beauty of its natural scenery. It is one of the best locations for a village that I ever saw. The view from "Allen Hill" is splendid. From that eminence you have spread out before you a grand panorama of nature. At the foot of the hill, the village, on the right, Thompson Pond,—a large sheet of water, making a reservoir for the water power in the village, on the left the Little Androscoggin river, and in the distance the villages of Welchville and Mechanic Falls. The village contains two churches, Congregationalist and Methodist,—also a fine school building, said to be the best in the County,—also a large Cheese Factory. The Mills of the Robinson Manufacturing Company are located on the first dam, and the Shovel Handle Mill of S. Ransom & Co., and the Stave and Grist mill of Whitney & Clark on the second. There are four stores, two apothecary shops and several other smaller places of trade in the village.

Most of the buildings in the village are well painted and in good repair, and some very fine residences, among which may be classed the dwellings of Dr. Hervey Gen. Perry, Benajah Pratt and Chas. Durell. There is a fine chance for improvement on two or three dilapidated old houses near the Post office, also new tenements, a little graving and grass plats added to the surroundings of the Robinson Manufacturing Company's Mills would add greatly to their appearance.

In traveling round the village I found a nice plank side walk on High Street, two very respectable side-walks on King street. On the other side of the stream, on Pleasant street, I saw some what surprised to find nothing of the kind. As I passed along this street, I met an old lady and inquired of her why they had no side walks. She replied, "the men living on it had not spunk enough to get one made." She said "if they had half the grit and enterprise of the women they should have had one long ago."

I found some good fishing up the Pond, and on the whole enjoyed my half day's visit to this village very much.

They have a Reform Club in this village and the "boys" are working hard to make it a success.

There is a general appearance of thrift and industry throughout the village,—although I saw some half dozen stout looking fellows very intensely engaged in knocking croquet balls, near the Post office.

Pera.
July 12.—Corn, potatoes, beans, hops, and all kinds of grain are growing fast. I never saw them better at this time of year. The grass is doing well. The farmers are beginning to cut their hay, which will be of good quality. The pastures produce good feed, and stock of all kinds is looking well.

Mr. Francis Waite of this town died a short time since, at the advanced age of 91 years. He was one of the first settlers of the town, and lived for many years on the farm where he died. He was a good citizen, and many will miss him.

The oldest person now in town is Mr. Stephen Gammon, being 85 years of age. He is quite healthy, being able to do considerable labor. Mr. G. has lived here many years, his native town being Westbrook, in this State.

The remains of Sumner R. Newell, Register of Deeds of the County, were brought to Pera on the 12th inst. for burial. The deceased formerly resided here, where he was esteemed as a useful citizen by his townsmen. He held many responsible offices in town, was once a Representative to the State Legislature, and was ever a friend of the laboring man, as he was of that class himself. He will be remembered by all who knew him well.

Porter.
July 21.—Mr. John S. Moulton of this village has built an addition to his store. Mr. M. keeps constantly on hand one of the best assortments of hardware furniture, groceries, &c., that can be found in the country. He also keeps a Grange store for Charter Oak Grange P. O. H. of this village, selling goods to them and all other grangers at grange prices. Mr. Jesse Colcord is associated with him now in business, and being smart, business men we see no reason why they should not succeed.

Maj. James French, who is seventy six years old, and his brother Wm. who is seventy-three, the veteran mowers of this town, have commenced again to cut the grass on what was formerly their father's farm as they have done for quite a number of years, as they own it together. The farm cuts about fifteen tons of hay. They are both hale and hearty, and these bright mornings they may be seen swinging their scythes like boys of twenty.

Mrs. Abby Rice, wife of Joseph T. Rice of this village, is very dangerously sick with erysipelas in the head, and fears are entertained of her recovery.

Waterford.
On the 21st: Mr. Chas. H. Sargent of South Waterford, while plowing oak stumps in Cobb & Hapgood's mill, had two fingers caught under the feed roll of the flange machine. His fore finger was badly jammed, and the middle one so fearfully lacerated as to require amputation. On the following day and in the same mill, Mr. Emerson Wilkins of this town while adjusting a belt came in contact with a circular saw which tore from his thigh a circular piece of flesh six inches long and nearly exposing the bone. Mr. W. was carried to his home and the wound dressed. He is an old man and the hurt is a bad one, but he is doing well.—Lewiston Journal.

Feeling deeply grateful for past patronage, respectfully informs the public that notwithstanding the "hard times," he will still continue to keep a good assortment of all goods usually kept in a Variety Country Store.

We need not particularize each article, as our different lines are always kept well "sorted up." A cordial invitation is hereby extended to all to call and examine our goods and prices; and as we have "nailed to the mast" our old motto, "QUICK SALES AND SMALL PROFITS," we believe that we can offer prices that will induce them to purchase from us; and on a part of our goods we shall still allow five per cent. off for cash down. Our favorite "card" will continue to be "Green Backs," and when this card is shown no "pass word" will be required.

Short credits will be given in some cases.
