BAPTIST PARISH

Reviews Successful Year and Votes To Redecorate the Church Auditorium.

The annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church, held last night, brought from the treasurer, Joseph W. Robinson, the good news that over $11,000 had been raised by the parish during the year and $528 remained as balance in the treasury, with all bills paid. The Woman's Association reported a balance of $304, making the total balance $832.

The pastor, Rev. Mr. Browne, on behalf of the parish presented Mr. Robinson with a leather bound set of Browning's and Dickens' works, as an expression of the efficient teamwork with which the parish regards its treasurer.

Clarence S. Beverage as moderator presided and Charles H. Morey as clerk presented the records. Both were re-elected.

The parish voted to purchase from the Camden & Rockland Water Co. a strip of land measuring 200 square feet on the south side of the church edifice and to approve the movement for redecorating the church auditorium.

W. O. Fuller outlined the general scheme for beautifying the church interior and it was voted to arrange the details of decoration as soon as figures of costs should be available at a later meeting to be called by the chair.

The following officers were elected: Trustees, R. Anson Crile; finance, Fred A. Carter; music, W. O. Fuller, Mrs. Evelyn Hix, Raymond K. Greene, collectors, R. S. Sherman, chairman; ushers, Maurice Snow, chairman; janitor, Ralph Suckney; nominating committee, Axel Brunberg, Miss Eleanor Griffith and Mrs. Abbie Morey.

Salary increases were provided for janitor, organist and assistant treasurer. Altogether it was one of the best meetings of the parish.

The principal streets in the residential section have been treated with calcium carbide which is found to be a most successful agent in laying the dust and does not have the uncomfortable odor that arises from oil sprays. Many applications are being received for quantities of the carbide for private use.

NO REASON TO WORRY

From Bangor Way Comes Kind Words About the Bridge.

From various parts of the State come reassuring words in regard to the action which will be taken on the Kennebec Bridge in the special September election. Portland's friendliness has been expressed by its evening newspaper, and here is what the Bangor Commercial says:

"People in Knox, Lincoln and Sagadahoc counties are so in need of a new bridge across the Kennebec at Bath that their anxiety for the endorsement of the project at the special election in September is natural but to us there appears no reason for worry. The legislature approves of the bridge construction and the enactment as made, although subject to the approval of the people, provides for a toll bridge which will ultimately take care of the expense."

"The State simply loans its credit for a brief period and no expense will be entailed upon the tax payers. If the matter is thoroughly understood the opposition to the bridge as manifested at the polls will be slight. And we have little doubt that the people of the shore counties who are most interested will see to it that the voters have full information."

This is fine, but there must be no slackers when the final campaign comes. Off with every coat!

MAIN STREET AS IT LOOKED BEFORE THE 1853 FIRE

(SCENES FROM AN OLD PANORAMA—NO. 7)

[This is one of a series of 8 views of the west side of Rockland's Main street, made from a panorama painted about 1850. The Courier-Gazette invites communications from its readers in connection therewith.]

This middle section of "The Brook" begins at the wooden bridge leading in to where (not shown in the picture) was a fine colonial house built by Joseph Condon from material cut by him on Matineux, and a brick house built by Dr. John B. Sears, who manufactured "Sears' Columbian Balm of Life" in the little shop shown on the corner, over the top of which is a house in which Simon Trueworthy lived and which was removed to Lincoln street, and later was burned.

Here also was Jordan's Restaurant. In the next building Charles Clark kept groceries and lived overhead and H.-M. Brown had a fish market. Later Webster & Hall had a market here. In 1871 the Farwell & Ames brick block took the place of these two buildings, and was later rebuilt into the present handsome Masonic Temple, the ground floor occupied by the old house of H. Crie & Co. and Woolworth's, the second floor by the offices of the Rockland & Rockport Lime Corporation. On the third floor are the Masonic quarters.

George C. Tate owned the next dwelling house, later a harness shop and then a boarding house by O. G. Shepherd. The present Havener block took its place. The next building had as inmates in succession Comfort Keene, Thos. Day, Robert Anderson's candy factory and A. Rising's bakery—now rebuilt and occupied by W. A. Kennedy's candy store. In the next building G. Washington Pillsbury ran a grocery and on the corner (now the N. Y. Bakery) was Mrs. Lindsey's wonderful flower garden.

On the northern side of Lindsey street stands the Lindsey House, a hostelry well known to other generations, and by no means forgotten by the present one. It was enclosed by a picket fence, and inside of which the proprietor, George Lindsey, always had a beautiful garden.

George Lindsey's grandfather, John Lindsey, came from Fox Island to what is now Rockland in the close of the 18th century. He had been a soldier in the French and Indian war, and for $33 bought a tract of land which extended from the shore near "The Brook" to "The Meadows." He built a log house a few rods east of the Lindsey House and there George Lindsey's father was born in 1792. John Lindsey built and moved into the frame house on the land now occupied by the Berry-Burkmar house.

Early in the 19th century George Lindsey, senior, built a brick house with ell on the site of the hotel. He burned the brick himself back of where Crockett's stable now stands—a very pretentious structure for those days. Mr. Lindsey accommodated several boarders and after the Commercial House was burned he enlarged his establishment and opened it as a public tavern, to which use it was dedicated until the building was partly destroyed by fire. George Lindsey, Sr., presided over the destinies of this hotel until the time of his death in 1871, when the property passed into the possession of his son.

After the fire of a few years ago the property was bought for the Camden & Rockland Water Co., which eliminated the pitch roof, and converted the erstwhile hotel into a modern three-story office and apartment building.

The next and last picture in this series will show the old Baptist and Congregational churches, with the Idolo K. Kimball house in the background.

Mr. Cross seems to have a new hobby. He has become a magazine collector. Ranks in "math" go up as magazines go down.

The final report of those in charge of the finances states that the proceeds from the "Charm School" netted $374. That is approximately $63 more than made last year.

*****

No more Sunday reading hours at the Public Library until fall, is the notice issued and going into effect this week. Rockland is one of the few cities in the State enjoying the privilege of library service on Sunday afternoon through the winter—a service which means much to those who are unable to use the library during the week.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

If I had to live my life again I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once a week. The loss of these tastes is a loss of happiness.—Charles Darwin.

THE OLD CLOCK ON THE STAIRS

Somewhat back from the village street stands the old-fashioned country seat Across its antique portico Tall poplars treat their shadows throw; And from the station in the hall An ancient time piece says to all— "For ever—never!"

*****

By day its voice is low and light; But in the silent dead of night, Distinct as a passing footstep's fall It echoes along the vacant hall, Along the ceiling, along the floor, And seems to say, at each chamber door— "For ever—never!"

The Courier-Gazette

THREE TIMES A WEEK

CIRCULATION AFFIDAVIT
 Rockland, Maine, May 28, 1925.
 Personally appeared Frank S. Lydie who on oath declares that he is publisher in the office of The Courier-Gazette, and that of the issue of this paper of May 26, 1925, there was printed a total of 6,447 copies.
 Before me, FRANK S. MILLER,
 Notary Public.

The work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever. And my people shall dwell in a peaceful habitation, and in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting places.—Isaiah 32:17, 18.

Such encouraging greeting is given the canvassers in the money-raising campaign carried on this week, that the members of Winslow-Holbrook Post are highly gratified, and feel confident that with this continued friendly cooperation on the part of the people they will be able to make a proper contribution to the nationwide five-million-dollar drive for the benefit of the children and widows of war veterans. Any contributions for the worthy purpose sent to The Courier-Gazette will be passed on to the local committee.

"Memories of An Active Life" reach their concluding chapter in this issue. We learn from our readers that the story told by Mr. Flint of his successful career, a career issuing out of small beginnings, has been followed by them with profound interest. They share in the gratitude felt by The Courier-Gazette that the writer of these memories has permitted the republication in this paper of the absorbing chapters of his book. We regret but one thing in the connection, that we were not able to reproduce the multiplicity of illustrations which lend to the story a special distinction, making of it a "human document" which calls for a place on every library shelf that is set apart to worth-while biography. In his final chapter Mr. Flint discusses with admirable sense of proportion some of the principles governing the great industrial development of our country, in which with high honor he has played a conspicuous part. We feel that we have followed with profit as well as pleasure this "story of a Thomaston boy who made good."

William K. Irving, traveling freight agent for the Eastern Steamship Lines, was in this section this week. Tuesday he went down over the Bar Harbor line, and Wednesday, with Agent Sherman made calls at Owl's Head, South Thomaston, Spruce Head, Clark Island, Long Cove, Tenants Harbor, Port Clyde and Thomaston. Port Clyde, one of the regular landings on the old Portland and Rockland line is omitted from the schedule of the new Portland, Rockland and Eastport line because at present there are no wharf facilities. The people are hoping that some arrangement may be made so that the steamer Brandon will call at Port Clyde before the first season is over. Look for picture of steamer Brandon in Spear's shoe store window.

This is the season of the year dedicated to the officers of the Rockland High School Alumni Association when they awake from their winter hibernation and shine for a short time. William J. Sullivan is president for 1925; Albert S. Peterson, vice president; Miss Beulah Rokes, secretary; treasurer, Miss Ellen Flanagan; Ernest Crie, Miss Corice Thomas, Miss Dorothy Blackington and Stanley Snow executive board members. Miss Rokes has been at the collector's task for several weeks and members could assist her by forwarding their 25-cent dues to her at the C. A. Rose Co. store, School street.

The Chicago Evening Post radio station WEBB Edgewater Hotel, Chicago, will give away $12,000 worth of radio equipment when the station broadcasts its birthday celebration program today. There will be gifts for every State in the Union, ships at sea, and vessels in the Great Lakes. Telephone or mail communications will not be considered in the award of gifts. Telegrams, only, are desired and each telegram must carry the code word "Savings." Telegrams received May 30, and possibly until the following Tuesday will be counted. Station WEBB will announce the contest nightly up to and including contest night, with a request that responses be sent in by telegraph, via Western Union.

The June meeting of the City Government will be held next Monday night, at which time it is probable that a patrolman will be elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Raymond Fogarty. Among the matters inherited from the previous meeting will be the petition for the Maple street extension, the disposal of garbage at the Public Landing, changes to be made at Strand and Empire Theatres, and hearing of the condemnation of the property at the corner of White and Beech streets.

Trawlers Widgeon and Osprey will come to this port with their next fares, and together with the Teal and another trawler not yet decided upon, will run here regularly during the summer. The Deep Sea Fisheries, Inc., has 1,000,000 pounds of salt cod in stock for the fall trade, and expects to stock 3,000,000 pounds more during the season.

The Eastern Yacht Club on its annual cruise is due in Rockland harbor July 7. On the 8th there will be a race to Islesboro, on the 9th there will be a race to North Haven, on the 10th a run from North Haven to Boothbay.

CAMDEN WINS ONE
 But Rockland Game At Lincoln Was Postponed By Rain.

Losing at Camden yesterday Vinalhaven High dropped into a tie with Rockland High. It was Camden's first league victory, but the team gives every evidence of being a strong contender for the runner-up position, and has its two hardest games behind it. The standing:

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Thomaston	4	0	1.000
Vinalhaven	2	2	.500
Rockland	1	1	.500
Camden	1	2	.333
Lincoln	0	3	.000

Camden 5, Vinalhaven 0
 Yesterday's game in Camden was unique in that every run made was directly or indirectly due to battery failings.

The contest was decided in the 1st inning when a base on balls and three passed balls netted two scores for Camden. The home team made another brace of runs in the 6th when two losses on balls and a passed ball were largely contributing factors. Camden's fifth and last run was the result of a wild pitch, after Ogier had doubled.

The batting of the two teams was about on a par, Camden being credited with four hits—one of which was a scratch—while Vinalhaven had three. Both pitchers were out of position—Ogier being in reality a shortstop while Sanborn's position is third base. Both had good speed and that they are not exactly novices on the mound was shown by the fact that they had 24 strikeouts, 15 of them being by Ogier.

Camden played a flawless fielding game and Vinalhaven had but two errors.

The game between Rockland High and Lincoln Academy, which was scheduled for yesterday was postponed by rain. The Rockland team made the trip, but old J. P. decreed that there should be nothing doing.

Two games in the Knox and Lincoln League are billed for tomorrow, when Camden High comes to Rockland for their first meeting of the season, and Lincoln Academy plays a return game with Thomaston High. The average fan will immediately pick Thomaston as a winner, but what will he say about the contest when it is waged at Community Park? Local baseball has its beginning at Community Park on the late afternoon of Memorial Day when Manager Wotton's team will exhibit its wares in a game with the strong Warren team. Bill Foster will pitch for Rockland and Cross of Camden will be on the firing line for Warren. The game will start about 4 o'clock.

STRAND THEATRE

"A Woman Who Sinned," the Strand's offering for today, is a strong drama, and one that is bound to intrigue and interest even the most jaded movie fan. The cast is an unusually distinguished one. Headed by Mae Busch, who does the best work of her screen career.

Probably no American writer has caught the spirit of the Great West in "The Flaming Forties" and portrayed it so vividly as Bret Harte, humorist, poet, novelist and short story writer.

This he has done in "Tennessee's Pardner," one of the best of his short stories, which has been made into a motion picture and under the title "The Flaming Forties" will be shown at Strand Theatre Friday and Saturday. For this picture, it was necessary to get an actor who knew, loved and could portray the spirit of the West as did the author. The choice naturally fell to Harry Carey, the screen's foremost interpreter of Western roles.

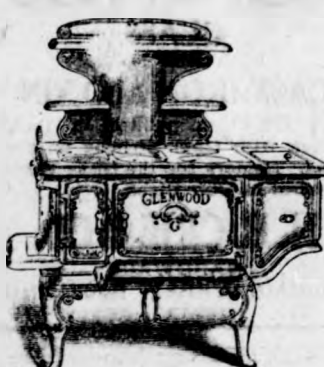

So "The Flaming Forties" is said to have the double distinction of being one of the best pictures of the screen's foremost "Westerner" as well as the picturization of one of the best stories of a famous American writer.—adv.

The steamer Camden, dry-docked for repairs of a broken stern-bearing, did not sail from Boston Wednesday afternoon and consequently there was no steamer for Bangor this morning. Sailings today on both the Bar Harbor and Bluehill lines were cancelled. The next sailing for Boston will be Friday night. The steamer Belfast is expected to arrive Friday morning and all steamers will then be on regular schedule again.

Chemical 2 made a quick run to Atlantic avenue, Owl's Head, at 6 o'clock Tuesday night where her crew under Chief Havener, fought a stubborn fire in the home of Mrs. Minnie Smith. Most of the furnishings were removed by willing neighbors, but the house suffered to the extent of possibly $1000, insured. The fire apparently originated from an overheated stove and during the afternoon while the house was vacant worked its way up the partitions to the attic and broke through the room at about the time of Miss Smith's return. Miss Blanche Crandall made her home with Miss Smith.

When Arthur E. Moore came motoring up Main street Tuesday evening in his Oakland touring car it was with most amiable intentions toward his fellow men. Of a sudden Reinald Withington's Ford truck swung into action, and there was a collision which knocked the mud guard off the truck. The truck bumped into Isaac Berilawsky's Buick touring car damaging the top of the latter so badly that it looked as if it had been struck by one of those disastrous snowdrifts. Down they went like toppled dominoes—the Berilawsky car being pushed into a Ford touring car of unknown pedigree. The last named vehicle escaped with no worse damage than a bent tire rack. The quartet of mishaps created a sensation disproportionate to the amount of damage done, and the street was full of people for a long while after the occurrence. Inspector Wentworth was Johnny-on-the-spot with an investigation. Mr. Moore said that Mr. Withington turned out improperly, and Mr. Withington said he held out his hand in the manner prescribed by law.

Those who are complaining of cold weather are reminded that Memorial Day last spring was one of the coldest days of the season.

Empire Theatre is running two uncommonly popular serials—"The Great Mystery," with Lillian Lorraine, on Friday and Saturdays; and "Idaho," with Elaine Ray, on Mondays and Tuesdays.

Major Donald C. Metcalf, Major Gilbert M. Elliott and Lieut. H. L. DeMerritt, U. S. A., held an examination for federal recognition, grade of 2d lieutenant, at Hotel Rockland last night. The candidates were Joseph Walker and Alden W. Allen.

Young Stribling, the sensational Georgia lightweight boxer, defeated the Kansas Indian, Chief Metoquah in Hutchinson, Kansas, Tuesday night. Many local devotees of the squared circle are following the young Georgian's career, among them Ira W. Feeney who has witnessed three of his scraps. "I don't like his style of fighting—hit and clinch," says Mr. Feeney, "but he is a wonderful physical specimen, and so is his father, who always acts as his second." Mr. Feeney cannot see Stribling as a successful opponent of Jack Dempsey yet awhile.

A 24-page illustrated supplement, bringing "The Chronicles of Lincoln County" up to date, is being prepared by the author, Robert Fillmore, and will be delivered to subscribers during the July. It gives practically all of the changes in business which have been made since October, 1924, including the business directory of South Bristol, which was omitted by the printers when the book was published. Commenting upon the "Chronicles" Supt. W. Linwood Chase at Boothbay Harbor says: "I consider that 'The Chronicles of Lincoln County,' compiled by R. B. Fillmore, is a valuable book for reference in all schools. It would be well worth the investment to have one in every school where Maine history is studied."

ADVISES MOTHERS

MRS. OSCAR R. MOWERY

Harrisburg, Pa.—“During my last expectancy my nerves gave way. I got very weak and was so nervous I could not sit still, could not sleep and was completely worn-out. I suffered with pains across my back and up my spine, also had bearing pains. I had indigestion and heartburn very badly. I was just about ‘down and out’ when I began taking Dr. Pierce’s Favorite Prescription and it corrected all my troubles, made me feel well and strong right up to the last. I had comparatively no suffering—the easiest time I ever experienced—and I had a very healthy baby. My advice to the expectant mother is, take ‘Favorite Prescription.’ It is a wonderful help in motherhood and no woman should go thru this trying time without its aid.”—Mrs. Oscar R. Mowery, 327 Dauphin St.

Do not delay but obtain this “Prescription” now of your nearest druggist, in tablets or liquid, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce’s Invalids’ Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg. Write for free medical advice.

HUNTERS CAUTIONED

Against Careless Use of Fire, and Damage To Land Owners.

The directors of Knox County Fish and Game Association have ready for distribution, a quantity of material on the prevention of forest fires among which are a number of metal signs which will be erected in the wooded areas throughout Knox County. This is one branch of work in which every member of the Knox County Fish and Game Association is just as much interested in as he is in the propagation of fish and game, and with the membership of 250 which the organization now has, it is safe to say that Knox County will do very well in the prevention of forest fires in this vicinity this year. An appeal is made through the columns of this paper to every sportsman or person roaming the fields and woods to use the greatest care with fire.

During the past 20 years there has been an annual damage to the forests of Maine of $15,820 a year, this, in spite of the fact that the State had commissioned fire fighters to the number of 679 in the year of 1921. Two much cannot be said about the care that should be used while fishermen and hunters are on the trail. A carelessly dropped cigar or cigarette or a pipe shaken out are oftentimes the cause of fires which are preventable with a little care.

Another phase of violations which has come to the attention of the secretary through a complaint from a farmer living but a short distance from Rockland, is that both fishermen and hunters are destructive to a very large extent. This man reviewed the damage which had caused him a lot of labor and money and which he further caused him to adopt preventive means by putting up trespass signs on his property.

He said that many fishermen and hunters were not satisfied with crawling over fences and stone walls, but some of them went out of their way to break down his walls, and in some instances he has known hunters and fishermen to carry a pair of snippers and actually cut the wire in his fences. No real sportsman would do this. This is not only unfair to the farmer on whose land sportsmen would perhaps like to hunt or fish, but it is also a penal offense. In all fairness to the farmer, who has to contend with many hardships, the hunters and fishermen of Knox County should always remember his property rights and if they want to hunt or fish on his land they should ask his permission to do so, which would be granted at least 90 percent of the time.

In this way a very much better feeling of fellowship would ultimately spring up and perhaps be the means of a closer relationship between the sportsman and land owner, with better hunting and fishing for everybody. Not only that, but better propagation of fish and game, which is absolutely necessary if there is to be hunting and fishing. So again an appeal is made to the sportsmen not only of the Knox County Fish and Game Association, but of the whole county of Knox, not only to be careful with matches and fires in their travels afield, but to consider the rights of land in your travels do so without the farmer, and if you must cross his damage to his property.

HE’LL TRY AGAIN

World’s End Prophet Meantime Finding Out Why He Was Mistaken.

Living with his wife and children in a four room bungalow and earning good pay as a painter and paper hanger, Robert Heldt, “apostle of doom,” formerly of East Patchoque, N. Y., who confidently awaited the end of the world at midnight, Feb. 6, disclosed Wednesday that he is taking a correspondence course in astronomy to avoid a second miscalculation.

Despite the fact that his belief in the accuracy of the predictions of the world’s end by Mrs. Margaret W. Rowen last February led him to dispose of his worldly goods and necessitating his making another start when the heralded second coming of Christ failed to materialize, Heldt reaffirmed his belief in Mrs. Rowen’s teachings.

The reason they all made a mistake about the time the end of the world was to occur, he said, was because none of them knew enough about astronomy to read the Heavens correctly. By banding up on that science Heldt is confident he can accurately forecast the second coming of Christ.

AUGUST TRAINING CAMP

Gov. Brewster Expresses His Views To Commander of 1st Corps Area.

Kenneth W. White, county chairman of the Citizens Military Training Camp drive has received the following letter from Gov. Brewster:

It is very gratifying to many citizens of Maine that a Citizens Military Training Camp for young men will be held in the State of Maine during August of this year.

It seems always well that training of this character should be carried out within the State so far as possible, both for the attractions it offers to young men to enter these camps when located in the vicinity of their homes and also for the opportunity it gives citizens of the State to be acquainted with this very necessary department of Government activity concerned with our defense.

It seems probable that a great many of our citizens will avail make the trip from Washington to themselves of this opportunity to see their sons in training and that Maine will furnish its full quota to make this Camp a decided success. We shall thus be assured that the Camp will return each year and benefit directly and indirectly many lines of activity within our State.

Conditions for such a camp in Portland Harbor are very nearly ideal and young men may feel that they are rendering a public service and very definitely benefiting themselves by their participation in this training.

A professional "swallow" in Chicago yielded 272 metal objects in an operation, the contents of his stomach including upholstery tacks, nuts, bolts, screws, a can-opener, a couple of handfuls of thumb-tacks, almost a box of fair-sized nails, cartridges, safety-pins, paper-clips and coins.

Removal of foreign bodies from the throat or windpipe has been facilitated greatly by the invention of the bronchoscope by Dr. Chevalier Jackson of Philadelphia. This device consists of a long, flexible tube within which is a series of mirrors that reflect an image of the object to be removed. Illumination is supplied by a small electric light. Through this tube, the operating surgeon inserts his forceps and readily withdraws the object that has been swallowed.

PRACTICAL "GAL"

President Not Preaching Economy and Then Traveling in Specials.

President Coolidge is not going to swerve from his determination not to use expensive private cars in his travels about the country if he can help it.

Reports that he would use a special train on his trip to the North Coast in Minnesota, early next month, were denied at the White House, although it was said it might be necessary to employ a special train from Chicago to St. Paul.

The President, it was said, plans to make the trip from Washington to Chicago in a regular train of one of the trunk lines. Travel in this way, which is much cheaper than in private cars and special trains, the President believes affords the privacy that is necessary.

JUNK IN STOMACHS
Amazing Things That Are Disclosed By the Knife of the Surgeon.

In hospitals in many parts of the United States are museums where are displayed an amazing assortment of articles, mostly useless. There are carpet tacks, pins, needles, fragments of combs and eggshells, fragments of thumb-tacks, bits of wire, shoe laces, pieces of bed springs, paper clips, metal tugs, washers, curtain hooks, cartridges, shot, safety razor blades, teeth both natural and false, spoons, hairpins, photograph needles, safety-pins, fragments of bone, watermelon and other seeds, coffee beans, pieces of solder, heated string and unstrung, and coin, the last almost entirely of denominated less than half a dollar.

Such articles, you would say, would make only a poor display in a museum case. They do. It happens, however, that virtually every one of the thousands of articles so displayed represents a human life that was saved, writes Ada Patterson in Popular Science Monthly.

For these odd collections of useless hardware, vegetable matter and trinkets are made up of the odd things people swallow.

People take these singularly indigestible objects into their systems for a variety of reasons. A small percentage pass into the stomach, throat or lungs by accident.

The most careful person is likely to swallow a peach or prune pit, a small bone, a pebble, or bird-shot, with his food and not realize that he has done so.

Most of these foreign bodies that are swallowed, however, are taken by percentage pass into the stomach, throat or lungs by accident.

"Human ostriches" they call them, who entertain in the side shows at county fairs have contributed many weird additions to the odd surgical museums.

Many other persons swallow sharp objects—nails, needles, knives, and razor blades—with suicidal intent.

Odd habitual swallows are mentally deranged, or suffer from some peculiar physiological condition that causes them to enjoy the irritation hard or sharp objects set up in their internal organs. Then a great many of those who have been operated on have been infants whose careless mothers or nurses have left bright and attractive, but dangerous, objects within their reach.

Not long ago an operation on a 15-year-old girl in Michigan resulted in the removal of almost a thousand things she had swallowed.

These included safety-pins, earrings, watch chains, stove bolts, coins, metal street-car tokens, brooches, adhesive tape, shoe laces and bits of ribbon—almost four pounds in all.

A professional "swallow" in Chicago yielded 272 metal objects in an operation, the contents of his stomach including upholstery tacks, nuts, bolts, screws, a can-opener, a couple of handfuls of thumb-tacks, almost a box of fair-sized nails, cartridges, safety-pins, paper-clips and coins.

Removal of foreign bodies from the throat or windpipe has been facilitated greatly by the invention of the bronchoscope by Dr. Chevalier Jackson of Philadelphia. This device consists of a long, flexible tube within which is a series of mirrors that reflect an image of the object to be removed. Illumination is supplied by a small electric light. Through this tube, the operating surgeon inserts his forceps and readily withdraws the object that has been swallowed.

Everywhere that women, both young and old, gather to dance as well as dine, the circular skirted chiffon frock is to be seen, says the Dry Goods Economist. ## MEMORIES OF AN ACTIVE LIFE

"Men and Ships and Sealing Wax"—The Story of a Thomaston Boy Who Made Good.

(By Charles R. Flint)

Chapter XXI—Industrial Consolidation

I have noted some of the first attempts which were made at cooperation in merchandising, depending upon the creation of identities of interest. These early cooperative agreements tended to restraint of trade, and they have, finally, provoked prohibitive legislation. The great advantages to be derived from cooperation became apparent when manufacturing companies were consolidated to reduce the costs of production and distribution, but in the 80's Industrial Consolidation was still a theory, not a condition.

Now, in the light of thirty years experience, during which time I have acted as organized or industrial expert in the formation of twenty-four consolidations, let me review the general advantages of this form of industrial economy.

The most important benefit to be derived from it is the attainment of high-speed automatic-machine-low-cost-standardized-quantity production, which makes possible the manufacture and maintenance of products of superior quality.

Because of the magnitude of their affairs, industrial consolidations are able to offer, in salaries and a percentage of net profits generally over and above a previous maximum, a sufficient inducement to secure men of the first order of ability—who are not tempted by a fixed salary, but by the incentive of making a record and profiting by it.

The consolidated corporation, under a system of comparative accounting and comparative administration, subdivides its business so that each of its various departments is headed by a man who, through long experience and concentration, operates at the highest efficiency. Furthermore, industrial consolidations are able not only to secure the best men as executives, administrators and employees, but also to retain men of the highest standing in the consultative professions—lawyers, engineers, architects, chemists and other advisers and technicians.

Thus better service is assured, with an overhead cost less than the aggregate amount which was paid to men of lesser capacity by the various constituent companies.

The consolidation not only adopts the best methods to be found in any of its various plants, but it improves them through continual experimentation by the ablest experts.

It reduces stocks of merchandise, thereby saving interest and carrying charges and minimizing loss from depreciation.

It centralizes sales and advertising, and eliminates duplicate trade catalogues.

It centralizes purchases, and secures important benefits through quantity and time contracts.

It greatly reduces the volume of fixed and circulating capital per unit of output.

It retains lawyers and experts of experience and demonstrated ability for patent and trade-mark protection. By consolidation, inventive genius is less hampered by conflicting patents, and expensive litigation is largely eliminated.

It utilizes the advantages of a central traffic control, eliminating duplicate routes in the transportation of products sold and received, and locates factories with relation to labor, raw material and markets.

Throughout the country there are many examples of manufacturers who haul their raw material and fuel hundreds of miles to a factory, and then ship back to centers of consumption which are near the source of the raw material. Many factory locations have become obsolete as a result of changed conditions; they are often relics of ancient happenings. The whim of a poor Welsh shoemaker in colonial days fixed Lynn as a great shoe manufacturing center. A German's skill in knitting for his neighbors in the Pennsylvania German colony centered the stocking industry of America in Philadelphia. The cotton industries have been re-locating in the South, nearer to raw material and cheap labor; the shoe industry is re-locating in the West nearer to skins, hides, and the center of consumption. Consolidation facilitates financing, the shareholders have greater security than they generally have in ownership of individual companies; their shares are available for loans, or convertible into cash, and are readily divisible for the disposal of part interests or for subdivision by will.

In 1911 I made a departure from the practice of bringing about consolidations in single industries by effecting a consolidation of allied interests, that is by consolidating the manufacturers of similar but not identical products. The Computing-Tabulating-Recording Co. is of this class; and although it is not the largest of the consolidations in which I have acted as organizer, it has been and is the most successful.

At the outset of this organization, I pointed out to the Guaranty Trust Co. that the proposed "allied consolidation," instead of being dependent for earnings upon a single industry, would own three separate and distinct lines of business, so that in normal times the interest and sinking funds on its bonds could be earned by any one of these independent lines, while in abnormal times the consolidation would have three chances instead of one to meet its obligations and pay dividends. On the several but not joint responsibility of my syndicate subscribers, the Guaranty Trust Co. loaned over $4,000,000.

I have attended the fortnightly meetings of the executive and finance committee of the Computing-Tabulating-Recording Company for eight years, and have thus become familiar with the administration of a consolidation of allied interests. All the advantages of industrial consolidation which I have enumerated are secured by an allied consolidation, except that a centralization of the sales department cannot always be effected to the same extent as in the case of consolidated companies that manufacture a single product. But there are special advantages that can be realized by an allied consolidation. As no one individual company is indispensable to its formation, it is easier to arrive at an equitable capitalization apportionment; and, as before stated, the allied consolidation has better chances of being able to earn dividends in periods of depression. It is, also, less liable to attack in any one branch of its business in normal times, as the other branches can continue to earn dividends.

The advantages to be realized by allied consolidations have been fully demonstrated by the Computing-Tabulating-Recording Company, under the leadership of its president, Thomas J. Watson. The company started with an aggregate bonded indebtedness of $5,500,000, three times its then net current assets. In addition to paying $2,000,000 in Federal taxes, it has paid $3,500,000 in dividends; has increased its working capital $4,000,000; and has added $5,000,000 to its surplus.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Computing-Tabulating-Recording Co., President Watson reported that:

"The recent issue of 19,555 shares of stock has all been sold and paid for by the stockholders and employees of the company."

"The recent success enables the company to clear its entire floating debt, except ordinary current bills for material, supplies, etc., and will leave the company with a cash balance of over $1,000,000."

"The net earnings for the first five months, after providing for Federal taxes, are sufficient to take care of the full year's dividend of $6 a share on the entire issue of 150,688 shares of capital stock outstanding."

"These earnings do not include $500,000 received in the recent settlement of a judgment for the infringement of some of our patents."

Having written of industrial evolution from an economic viewpoint, I shall now write of individuals and classes who have been affected by it and of some of the men who have been active in its progress.

As one reviews the history of industrial evolution from the time when the food of the people in "Merrie England" was peas, black bread, and the bark of trees, it appears that, as manufacture and commerce developed, the masses who had been living in abject poverty were gradually and permanently benefited; but many of these steadily improved conditions, the introduction of labor-saving machinery, their viewpoint was expressed by a French philosopher who wrote: "These machines which would render the manufacture more ample, or, in other words, diminish the number of workmen, would be pernicious."

"We smile at these things," wrote Macaulay. "It is not impossible that our descendants, when they read the history of the opposition offered by cupidity and prejudice to the improvements of the nineteenth century, may smile in their turn."

Fortunately, in this twentieth century, it is universally recognized that opposition to the development of labor-saving devices and machinery is narrow and short-sighted; but there are still labor agitators, communists, bolsheviks, and demagogues who are advocating theories in business and finance that, if adopted, would, as in Russia, shake the very foundation of industry. Many of them have the persuasive art without experience or industrial knowledge. They remind me of an after-dinner speech which I heard General Grant make, in which he said:

"Mr. President and gentlemen of the Press Club of New York: A feeling of awe comes over me when I realize I am addressing men of superhuman ability. Your rapidity of conception, your unerring conclusions are astounding. When I was before Richmond in conference with men whose life study had been military strategy, when after days and nights of investigation and deliberation a plan of campaign was finally decided upon, you would get down to your newspaper offices late at night, dash off editorials explaining how we were all wrong, and pointing out what we should have done and what we ought to do. Your remarkable versatility was shown in formulating legislation, and you were peculiarly positive in international diplomacy where the facts were state secrets." (Laughter and applause.)

The efficiency and economic advantages of well-organized and ably managed industrial consolidations have been fully demonstrated, particularly during the World War when victory largely depended on cooperative production and transportation.

In writing thus of industrial consolidation, I do not here refer to plans of capitalization, but to what has been, and what is destined to be accomplished by demonstrated methods. In improved quality, in standardization, in reduced cost of manufacture and distribution, and in reduced prices to consumers. When these results are realized, everyone profits thereby, and it is of secondary importance from a public point of view whether the enterprise is owned by one man or by a consolidation of various companies.

Henry Ford has furnished the supreme example of how manufacturing methods and distribution can be improved by methods which were developed as a result of industrial consolidation. Sharing these advantages with the public, by reducing the price of his products and raising wages Ford has made the greatest individual industrial success in the history of the world. Endowed with almost superhuman ability, he has put in effect the methods of the ablest industrial leaders and I think Wall Street will admit, incidentally, that he has demonstrated his capacity as a financier. The industrial field is always open to anyone who wishes to demonstrate his leadership and has endowed him with superior intelligence.

It is, however, very seldom that one man is endowed with the ability to form an organization which secures on a large scale benefits that are ordinarily the result of consolidation.

Rockefeller and Carnegie, as well as Ford, started without capital, and the success of all of them has been due to superior intelligence, which illustrates the wisdom of the Creator in endowing men with superhuman ability to lead in the evolution of industry, as well as in other great activities of life.

All men should be free and equal before the law; everyone should have this opportunity up to the capacity which God has given him, but to attempt to interfere with the progress of industry by substituting the mediocrity of uniformity for the ability of the individual, and the grand scheme of endeavor which makes life earnest in giving a man something to strive for, is contrary to the plan of evolution ordained by Providence.

While labor leaders, socialists and legislators have opportunities to be of service to their fellow men, they will not only fail in their efforts, but their influence and activities will prove harmful, so long as their plans fail to take into account the fundamental, supreme, unalterable fact that men are endowed with widely differing abilities. The application of any theories which suppose conditions in opposition to this fundamental fact inevitably result in chaos such as that of Russia.

The taking over of factories in the hands of workmen, and their re-delivery, was wholly a useless waste of money, and it showed that directors and managers must be men who are qualified for their positions by intelligence and experience.

How far the great improvement in the condition of the masses has been the result of the development of steam and electricity, and the use of natural resources, the development of labor-saving devices and machinery, and how far it has been the result of industrial consolidation, cannot be accurately determined, because it is impossible definitely to separate the results of mechanical development from those of industrial evolution. It is, however, manifest that industrial evolution has now reached an advanced stage where continued development must result, largely from industrial consolidation.

I do not think the capitalists and "Trust Magnates" realize how intelligent the labor leaders are.

In 1893 I was under examination by the Lexow Anti-Trust Committee for three days, during which time some of the metropolitan press inflicted upon me "the unkindest cut of all," by using for my picture a wood-cut of the Duke of Genoa, Weyler of Cuba (we both had side whiskers). During the examination I appealed to labor, stating that in my opinion wages were and would be higher, as they have proved to be, under industrial consolidation than under the conditions of war-torn-knife competition.

After the examination I invited the principal labor leaders of the country to my home for dinner. I had never heard of a so-called industrial leader or capitalist extending that courtesy to the prominent representatives of labor. I had been a member of the Civic Forum and attended its banquets where capitalists and labor leaders talked to the galleries and for publication, but on such occasions there never was and never could be a frank interchange of views. In the privacy of my home, the interchange of opinions was frank and free. The discussions were intense, but the good nature of the occasion was maintained from seven o'clock in the evening until two o'clock in the morning. A college graduate and distinguished lawyer present introduced, with an air of superiority, the subject of socialism. To his surprise, he found himself in the infant class as compared with the knowledge of the labor leaders, some of whom were personally acquainted with the prominent socialists.

I asked Gompers: "What is the difference between a socialist and a trade unionist?" Gompers promptly replied: "The socialists want to accomplish by revolution what we are accomplishing by evolution."

I then asked the labor leaders a question, involving a charge to which there was no logical defense. To give an idea of the fairness of the discussion, they, rather than take an illogical position, replied: "You, as an industrial organizer and manager, can speak with definiteness, but it would be unwise for us to get too far ahead of our constituents."

This gave me the opportunity to introduce a humorous simile, which was in the spirit of the occasion. "Your reply," I said, "reminds me of the description of a cowboy which was given to me by a cowboy at a roundup of cattle on Padre Island, Texas, where we were contemplating the possibility of a stampede."

"It's difficult," he said, "to find out what starts a stampede; it may be as small a thing as a jack rabbit, but when it starts there's nothing indefinite about it!"

"The cowboys put spurs to their horses and ride ahead of the stampede waving their ponchos. To endeavor to stop the cattle is certain death. All that can be done is to slightly change their course, until they rush on to a lake or river cool off, and arrive at normalcy."

Had a capitalist made that statement at a Civic Forum banquet there would have been a stampede of the representatives of labor.

I was interested in discussing with those labor leaders their views on Bryan's 16 to 1 policy. While the labor leaders have always found it convenient to be in politics, and while they have been glad to avail themselves of Bryan's matchless oratory, their sound judgment made them unanimous in the statement, "want labor paid in fifty-cent dollars."

They justly observed that: "There is no way in which wages are so quickly and effectively reduced as by depreciating the currency of a country."

The laborers of Europe are today sadly familiar with that fact. The natural evolution of industrial methods and processes has not only been fully demonstrated but it has been fully demonstrated by the operation of the law of gravitation.

But are those advantages fairly distributed? Rockefeller, Ford, Carnegie, Frick, Schwab loom up like first power lighthouses. The public methods and processes have not only been fully demonstrated but it has been fully demonstrated by the operation of the law of gravitation.

satisfaction out of their surplus wealth is by devoting it to benevolence. It is to their credit that they have generally shown in the disposition of their fortunes for the public weal the ability that they displayed in acquiring them. They have certainly blazed the way to a prosperity that has resulted in the well-being of the people at large.

On the coast north of Cape Hatteras, the old time crockery, to secure plunder, used to display false lights which caused merchant ships to run on the reefs to death and destruction. Lenin has displayed in industry the false lights of communism that have led to industrial chaos and the starvation of millions.

Before the formation of "industrial trusts," I could have named many firms that flourished by being expert in the manufacture of deceptive goods. In many cases counterfeit goods; but such concerns now find it almost impossible to compete with standardized products whose trade-mark brands are internationally advertised and known to be reliable. I know of no industrial consolidation today that does not realize the importance of improving and standardizing its products.

The amount received by promoters—generally in junior securities—has been greatly over-estimated; except in cases where the principal objective has been a large flotation of speculative securities, the promoter's share has been but a small percentage of the increased profits realized through consolidation.

The boards of directors of industrial consolidations have had the opportunity to observe so many object lessons of success and failure that most of them, I am glad to record, have arrived at the age of wisdom; they have, to a large extent, availed themselves of the advantages of consolidation stated above, so that the industrialists of the present day are generally administered with good judgment.

Even in the past when business management had not the experience that it has today, the common shares sometimes called capitalised hopes—have been converted into thousands of millions of dollars in dividends and increased tangible assets.

Industrial consolidation has proved itself, with the result that the number of consolidations in America and the industrial countries of Europe is steadily increasing.

Where You Stay Out of Bed to See the Sights

When the great Hindu poet, Rabindranath Tagore was here, in Stockholm, he made a practise of rising a couple of hours after midnight to watch and meditate in the glow and ever-changing lights of the heavens as they broke over the city—a spectacle to one, used to the dark nights of India, that was a never-failing source of delight and wonder. The Stockholm loves his city, the Queen of the Baltic, he gulls it, but this is hardly adequate to tell of the combined majesty and beauty that night and day flush the noble features of this city of islands. The other day, a new beauty filled the city. At high noon, the city began to broadcast to all amateur radio stations in the Kingdom the melodious City Hall chimes, and the remotest villages now share with the city, the music of the hours.
