

PARDONED

(Original.) "Good gracious!" "What's the matter, madam?" "My purse! It's gone!" A lady in a trolley car held up a reticule which had been slit from top to bottom. "Conductor," said a gentleman sitting opposite, "stop that man getting off the platform. He was sitting beside the lady." Several men rushed for the man referred to and held him. "What's the matter?" he asked. "Somebody's robbed that lady. You were sitting beside her." "Suppose I was. I didn't rob her." "Police!" yelled the conductor, ringing the stop bell and beckoning to a policeman loitering on the sidewalk. The man of law suddenly brightened up at the prospect of something to do and hurried to the car. The suspected man was taken to a police station and searched, but nothing was found on him. But there was nothing remarkable in that. These thieves all have pals, to whom they can pass the "swag." The next morning the culprit was brought up for examination, and the lady who had been robbed appeared against him. "What's your name?" asked the inspector. "John Joslin." The inspector looked at him with the air of one who was not to be thus imposed upon. "Jim Boise," he said, "you're the most impudent crook that has ever figured in the police courts. But you're a fool to work this town. I know of a dozen ladies you robbed a year ago who can be brought to swear to your identity. Your picture is in the rogues' gallery, and yet you play your pranks with as much assurance as if you had never been up before." "I am not Jim Boise, I am not a crook, and I never robbed any one." The inspector certainly did not expect the man to acknowledge his guilt. He sent him away and forgot him the next moment in the next case. At the trial the inspector was as good as his word. The state produced nine women who testified that they had at different times and in different ways been robbed by the accused. Boise had been convicted before on their testimony, had been sent to the penitentiary and had escaped. It was only necessary for the state attorney to prove that he was the same man, and, this being done conclusively by the women he had robbed and a comparison of his features with his picture in the rogues' gallery, he was sent to prison. With the added term, he would serve twelve years. The prison gate clanged behind him, and the world forgot him. Seven years passed. One morning a man was brought in charged with picking a lady's pocket. He was caught before he could get away or get rid of the plunder, a pocketbook with the lady's initials on it and $55 in bills in it. "Who are you?" asked the inspector. "What'll you do for me if I save the state expense by owning up and pleading guilty?" "I'm quite sure the judge will take off the usual time." "All right. I'm Jim Boise." The prisoner was sent away, but the next day he was brought up again. "What's your game?" asked the inspector. "Haven't any game except to get a short term." "You're not Jim Boise. Jim Boise is serving a term now. Got a telegram this morning from the warden that he's where he was put seven years ago." "Can't help that. I'm Jim Boise." The inspector took up a photograph lying on the desk before him and looked from it to the prisoner. "It might have been your picture seven or eight years ago. Singular case this. I must look into it." He did look into it and found that seven years before John Joslin, owing to his resemblance to Jim Boise, had gone to serve a twelve years' term in prison. One morning John Joslin emerged from his cell, put on the clothes he had taken off seven years before and passed down a corridor of cells amid a shower of congratulations. "Pardoned?" "Good luck to you. I hope you won't get caught next time." These were some of the remarks made to the man who had under a mistake served a seven years' sentence. The next morning he alighted from a train and walked over a road he had often walked before. The birds were singing in the trees, the dew glistened in the sun, the air was laden with a fresh country odor. The man walked till he came to a cottage. Its paint had worn away, the fence had rotted, but in the windows were neat white curtains. As the gate clicked behind him a pale, overworked woman appeared at the door. With a cry she rushed forward and fell into his arms. Several half starved children gathered round, looking up at the man and wondering who he was. "Courage, sweetheart," he said; then, looking at the children: "Thank God, we are all here. We'll begin again. I am still strong and can work hard. We'll get plenty to eat and paint the house and fix the fence and make everything tidy." "How comes it, John, that you are out? Have you been pardoned?" "Yes, pardoned for a crime I never committed. For seven years the state has kept me away from you and the children, forcing you to work for them and me to work for the people. All the amends they make me is a pardon." "Who pardons the state, John?" WILLARD C. IRVING.

A large company enjoyed the Halloween party at the grange hall Saturday evening. Much credit is due Mrs. E. R. Domansky as the promoter of many amusing performances. A special feature was the musical selections by Reuben Devereux and Dwight Domansky, which were heartily enjoyed and cheerfully responded to. There were visitors from Hallowell, Verona and Highland granges. The hall was appropriately decorated for the occasion. Refreshments were served. The friends of Samuel L. Huckleby, formerly of this place, were pained to hear of his sudden death last Monday at Belfast, where he has resided for the past twenty-two years. Willis Leach, of Boston, and John P. Leach, of Camden, came to attend the funeral which took place at Belfast last Thursday. Oct. 31. L. He Paid His Debt Promptly. A train was just starting to leave a suburban station, says the New York Tribune, when an elderly man rushed across the platform and jumped on one of the slowly moving cars. The rear-end brakeman, who was standing by, reached up just as the man got aboard, grabbed his coat tails and pulled him off. "There," he said, sternly, "I have saved your life! Don't ever try to board a train that way again." "Thank you," said the old man, calmly. "Thank you for your thoughtful kindness. It is three hours till the next train, isn't it?" "Three hours and a quarter," said the brakeman, "but it is better to wait that length of time than to be killed." The long train, meanwhile, had been slowly gliding by, slowly gathering speed. Finally the last car appeared. This was the brakeman's car, the one for which he had been waiting, and with the easy grace born of long practice, he started to step majestically on it. But the old gentleman seized him by the coat, and with a strong jerk pulled him back, and held him until it was too late. "One good turn deserves another," said the old gentleman, with a smile. "You saved my life, I have saved yours. Now we are quits." One way to find a woman out is to call when she isn't in.

Decline of the Graceful Courtesy.

"There never was a time when people were more lacking in grace," said a dancing master. "A hostess nowadays," he added, "crowds her drawing room or ballroom with a large number of 'undesirables'—that is, people with no pretense to what is vulgarly called a stylish manner. The hostess is not to blame; circumstances compel her to invite these people. But at one time a hostess paid as much attention to her guests' accomplishments in deportment as to their character before inviting them to her house. 'At a private dance how seldom one sees a girl make a graceful courtesy to her partner! Usually she does no more than nod in a way that looks shockingly familiar. As for the men—well, a quarter of a century ago one saw more masculine grace at a clerk's or shop assistant's 'cinderella' than our best bred men are capable of today! But, after the example of the girls, who can wonder at it?'—Chicago Tribune.

A Gladstone Anecdote.

The sarcastic cheer is very common, and I recall one fatal example of its use. Mr. Gladstone was once drawing very remarkable conclusions from some figures—an art in which he was an unapproached master. A member on the other side laughed out a "Hear, hear!" ironically. Gladstone stopped instantly and turned and looked with interest at the interrupter, who assuredly would at that moment have given a good deal to recall his words. Then he turned back to the speaker. "Sir," he said, "the honorable gentleman laughs." For a minute or two he quoted from memory a long string of figures proving the accuracy of what he had previously said. "The next time the honorable member laughs," he continued in honeyed tones, "I would advise him—I would venture to counsel him—to ornament his laugh—to decorate it—with an idea."—Henry Norman in Century.

SOME THING EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW.

Are You the Only Woman Neglecting a Mother's or Wife's Duty, or Are There Countless Thousands. Many women formerly of robust vigor, with clear complexions and bright, vivacious spirits find themselves slowly losing their good looks and strength, fading under the influence of an unknown cause, ignorant of their real condition. Just when a woman seems to be at her best she becomes depressed, fearful, nervous. And why? You ask. She has been so busy planning, has been so absorbed with her social duties, her work has been so continuous, that she scarcely allowed herself a moment's relaxation. She has neglected her health and, where her food formerly seemed to nourish, now she has but little appetite and even what she does eat does not seem to do any good. If you should ask her what the trouble is, she would say, "I am just tired out." But the real cause is constipation and its resulting condition—bad blood. Just think what habitual neglect of the bowels means, sickness instead of good health; nervousness instead of vigor; cheerfulness replaced by depression, happiness by misery. A week's use of Smith's Pinapple and Butternut Pills in these cases will work wonders. They will regulate the functions of the liver and bowels, immediately unload the congestion, cure the constipation and cleanse the blood of impurities. It is pitiable to see women with no color in their cheeks, without ambition, always tired, with the exuberance and vivacity of youth sapped as by some dreaded vampire, just because nature has been neglected, the bowels have become sluggish and poisonous elements have been absorbed into the blood. Keep the bowels regular by using Smith's Pinapple and Butternut Pills. Never allow constipation or a torpid liver to develop. A stitch in time will save mountains of misery, of bad feelings and depression. These little pills are wonderful health givers. They are Nature's true laxative and a positive cure for sick headache, constipation and biliousness in one night. 25 cents at all dealers. All genuine signed W. F. Smith.

350 BARRELS OF ROYAL FLOUR TO RUSH OUT! at $6.75 per Barrel. We recently bargained for two carloads of the celebrated ROYAL FLOUR. One carload is already here; we expect the other 'most every day. We bought this flour at an unusually "successful" price; we've got to move it now in a hurry, and have put the price down where we are sure it will bring quick results. $6.75 PER BARREL IS MIGHTY LOW FOR SUCH FINE GOODS AS ROYAL FLOUR. Some dealers might have hesitated before closing a trade for two full cars--350 barrels--of one brand of flour. But we know what a superior Flour ROYAL is; we know, also, how every Ellsworth cook who once tries it prefers it ever after; and we are confident, at the extremely low price of $6.75 per barrel, that these two carloads of ROYAL will be sold out in quick time. Luther Gilpatrick and wife spent Thursday with friends at Hancock Neck.

All regret to learn that Rev. Mr. Parker left Lamoine on Wednesday for New Hampshire, where he will preach.

Miss Emily Archer, of North Lamoine, will be confined to the house for about three weeks because of a severely sprained ankle.

The people of North Lamoine are very kind to their pastor, Rev. Mr. Toms, and wife. On Thursday evening just as the worthy pastor was retiring, because he has not at present the strength to sit up late owing to his not having recovered fully from his recent illness, he was aroused by voices calling to him from the outside, and on his opening the door, to his astonishment he found a party of over twenty friends from North Lamoine on the mission of a surprise party. The surprise was complete, and it was some time before he and his wife could recover from its effects, but after a while all were seated, and a pleasant evening was spent in innocent amusements, social chat and vocal music. Mrs. Mabel Robinson, who has lately come to reside at North Lamoine, presided at the organ, and several members of the choir, assisted by the young men's club, rendered some excellent music. Capt. Kief also sang. Mrs. Toms, assisted by Miss Emma Graves and Mrs. Mabel Robinson, served refreshments, after which the usual good-byes were said and a happy company returned to their homes. After the company had left Mr. Toms and his wife found a nice supply of provisions which will be useful during the winter. Many families who were unable to be present sent kind remembrances in a very substantial form.

The lecture at North Lamoine school-house by Rev. Mr. Toms, was a success. The singing by the Graves family was much appreciated. Mrs. Mabel Robinson was organist.

PENOBSCOT.

A pretty wedding took place Wednesday, Oct. 26, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Leach in the presence of twenty-five invited friends and relatives, when Miss Mabel Rose Snowman, daughter of Mrs. Leach, was married to Carlton George Poole, of Boothbay Harbor.

The bride was prettily attired in silk crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of white pinks. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Elsie Snowman as maid of honor, and Mrs. M. A. Wardwell, a cousin, as bridesmaid.

The groom was attended by Dr. M. A. Wardwell as best man. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. V. Stanley, of the Methodist church, the ring service being used.

The parlor where the ceremony took place was handsomely decorated, the bridal couple standing beneath a large bower of evergreen and ferns in one corner of the room.

The bride, an exceptionally attractive young lady, has been successfully engaged in the millinery business for several years. The groom is the eldest son of E. A. Poole, of Boothbay Harbor. He is a graduate of Shaw's business college, and is successfully engaged in business in his home town.

After the ceremony and congratulations, dainty refreshments were served and a social hour was passed. The couple left town in a tornado of rice and old shoes on a short wedding trip to Portland and Boston.

They will return to Boothbay Harbor where they will make their home and will go to housekeeping at once. A well-filled table of valuable and useful presents testified to the fact that the young couple have a host of friends who wish them happiness and prosperity in their married life.
