When it was learned last June that Miss Anna Coughlin, assistant principal of Rockland High School, was to make a European trip, the pleasure expressed was very general, it being felt that such a trip would be of significant interest to such a woman as Miss Coughlin, who through her educational contact and cultural training and instincts, would find treasures not in the itinerary of the usual tourist.

This proved to be true, for the beaten path and hackneyed route of the usual traveler were in no way followed, and consequently many out-of-the-way corners were explored and interesting and unique experiences brought forth. Because of these facts the trip was one of unusual interest, and everybody will be deeply grateful to Miss Coughlin that she has consented through these columns to give a brief story of her summer's tour through France, Belgium, Switzerland and England.

Miss Coughlin was accompanied by her cousin, Margaret Ormond of New York City, also a woman of culture and training. For several years she has been instructor of the Gregorian Chant in summer schools on the Pacific Coast, an art so difficult that few can ever attain its accomplishment. Miss Coughlin and Miss Ormond are peculiarly congenial in their tastes, which made their journeys together thoroughly enjoyable and instructive.

Miss Coughlin's story, which will be carried through several issues of this paper, begins thus:

Because the "America" on which we had booked our passage was reported "burned at the dock," Margaret rushed around and found by a happy chance a two-berth stateroom on the "Suffren," a French liner. This ship was originally a German craft, and although slow was a steady going boat. She was loaded with wheat for freight, and her passenger list was filled.

"A ship's company is, of course, a little isolated community, peculiar in many respects, and to the general strangeness we had an added factor, for French was spoken almost wholly. We soon learned that although we could say with some degree of ease, 'He was a romantic hero whose deeds of chivalry saved the Fatherland' that it was a harder matter to say 'Hand me the sauce!'

Two days out the report circulated that we had a stowaway. A well-dressed man of about 12 years was noticed hanging about the doctor's office. The latter asked him why he didn't stay more with his people, whereupon the lad broke down and confessed. He was put at work peeling potatoes for the rest of the trip.

"His company is, of course, a little isolated community, peculiar in many respects, and to the general strangeness we had an added factor, for French was spoken almost wholly. Two beautiful silk flags, the Stars and Stripes, were waving in the gentle breeze. The magnificent wreath of flowers, placed there by our ambassador on July 4, was still fresh. The place seemed so remote from all the turmoil of a big city. There was an indescribable hush.

But that was all. Buck of this little cemetery was what seemed another section of the same yard, but there was no gate. It was an empty space, save a group of funeral looking trees and a white cross. There was a solemn grassy ground. There were no flowers, no shrubs, no cemetery. When the victims of the guillotine were taken from the place of execution, their remains were thrown here in a pit. Few knew or cared anything about it or them. But one poor girl called on Mlle. Paris, knew because she had followed when they brought her father's body and threw it here. Night often saw her coming stealthily to pray that her parent might rest in peace. So when the dreadful days were over, the relatives and friends of the victims sought their last resting place. Questions were vain until some one told them about Mlle. Paris. Then the seekers asked the nuns of the convent for a little of their land that they might have a final resting place near their relatives. Hence the cemetery of "Little Picpus."

We came away through the cemetery, out through the lovely garden, across the cobbled yard, found our driver and sank back realizing that we had read a great chapter in the wonderful book of Paris.

RISKED THEIR LIVES

Capt. George Burns and Axel Stream of Vinalhaven Figure In Heroic Sea Incident.

The following article from the Boston Traveler of Sept. 18 will have a special Knox County interest owing to the fact that the Capt. Burns mentioned is a son of William Burns of Vinalhaven, while one of the sailors, Axel Stream, is also a Vinalhaven man.

Faintly, borne on the wings of a 50-mile northeast gale, crisis of distress reached Capt. George L. Burns of the Cornucopia of the Webb Steamship Line of Boston, as he paced the bridge of the freighter, slowly poking her way through the fog over Bearse's shoals channel off Cape Cod. As a sudden reverse squall carried the sound to leeward the lookout warned of loose lumber scattered over the surface of the tossing sea. A dull thud was heard against the side of the vessel as a giant wave drove a huge bundle of laths.

Then, appearing out of the pitch darkness came the outline of a sailing vessel, the schooner Rebecca R. Douglass, her canvas empty of wind, snapping in the gale. Her deck load of laths strewn the water about her, washing overboard only to be caught by a cross-sea and flung back on deck again. In her rigging Capt. Burns made out her crew clinging there desperately.

Off to windward were the lights of the Eastern Crown, the heavily laden coal steamer which had collided with the Douglass, completely cutting away her bow. The crew of the Cornucopia lined the windward rail, watching the struggles of the ill-fated schooner's crew as the freighter hove to in the lee of the wreck.

Capt. Burns called for a life boat crew. Every man of the 30 manning the Cornucopia voiced his willingness to attempt the rescue of Capt. J. W. Gay of the Douglass and his crew of six.

First mate Claude Boudreau, who lives at 42 Neponset avenue, Dorchester, picked six men and launching of the six-oared metal small boat began. It was dropped over the side. One by one, led by Boudreau, the men who dared wrestle with the elements climbed down a Jacob's ladder into her. The life boat swung outward on a painter held by the boatswain, then crashed against the side of the vessel. As she rose on the crest of a 30-foot sea, the men dropped into her.

Charles Martin, a brawny Virginian, miscalculated the psychological moment and loosed his hold on the ladder as the life boat plunged downward in the trough of the sea. He landed sprawled across the thwart. Both legs were badly wrenched but to leave the small boat meant the loss of precious minutes and taking his place on a bow thwart he aided his shipmates in keeping the boat from buffeting against the side of the ship.

It took more than half an hour to ship the crew. In the lee of the Cornucopia the rowing was comparatively easy but hardly had they pulled away from the vessel when the full blast of the gale struck them. Like a splinter the steel small boat was tossed from the crest of one sea to another.

Mate Boudreau clung to the tiller, fighting to keep the boat from taking the seas on her beam. Time and again cross seas rushing against the wind on the ebb tide out of the channel struck her with the force of a cyclone. Shaking the salt water from their eyes and mouths the crew pulled steadily. Bobbing like a feather in a whirlwind the small boat rushed before the gale, down the channel toward Stone Horse lightship and the rock-strewn shoals of Stone Horse.

Meanwhile, the Cornucopia was dragging her anchor before the gale, headed straight for Pollock Rip shoals. Three times she raised and set her mudhooks before they held bottom.

Two miles away, in the gray of the dawn, Boudreau and his struggling crew could be seen. Then, through the haze, appeared the coast guard patrol boat 241. With difficulty, a line was shot to the lifeboat crew. It sagged and caught in the propeller. Another line was passed, and under tow, against the gale, the lifeboat headed back for the Cornucopia. Sea after sea was shipped.

As Mate Boudreau told the story he declared that another half-mile and the seas would have stove in the small boat, throwing the crew into the raging seas and to their death.

With her side nearly stove in, a gunwale partially torn away and twisted out of shape the lifeboat was restored to the starboard side of the Cornucopia's deck. Standing by until the 241 successfully rescued the Douglass's crew, Capt. Burns proceeded to Boston, and docked at pier 44, Hoosac docks, Charlestown, with a cargo of southern products.

The Cornucopia is in the coastwise trade for the Webb Steamship Company, running between Florida and Boston on the company's regular time.

REGISTERED PROTEST

State W. C. T. U. Asked That Lincoln County Death Be Investigated.

At the Presque Isle convention of the W. C. T. U. a recent and tragedy in Lincoln County caused by violation of the State and Federal Prohibition laws was called to the attention of the members of the convention.

A lobster fisherman, little more than a boy, was being furnished with some kind of intoxicating liquor. The parents and brother repeatedly protested to the party who was furnishing the liquor, but the evil thing went on until one night the boy became crazed by liquor and had to be restrained by force from injuring others. Before morning the boy was dead. County officers, physicians and the coroner were called and the cause of death was pronounced as alcoholism.

At the time of the State Convention it was reported that no action had been taken against the offender who it was understood was a summer resident. The following protest was unanimously adopted by the members of the convention:

"Ty Weston Hilton, Esq., County Attorney for Lincoln County:

"We, the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the State of Maine in convention assembled, are shocked to learn of the tragedy that has recently occurred in Lincoln County, and we urge that the offender be speedily brought to justice, believing that there is sufficient evidence of guilt. The eyes of the State will be on Lincoln County. We believe that by the use of the authority vested in you by State law you should be able to see that justice be done."

Out of an appropriation of $725,000 for the schools of St. Louis County, Minn., a balance of $50,000 remained at the end of the year. This county covers 6500 square miles, and is one of the largest in the United States. Three of the States are smaller.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

If I had to live my life again I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once a week. The loss of these tastes is a loss of happiness.—Charles Darwin.

DEAR OLD MAINE

I've looked today on the dear old hills,
The dear old hills of my early home;
I've looked with eyes that were dim with tears
That came with thoughts of former years;
When, like a fluttering, unfledged bird,
I nestled within my warm home nest,
And knowing no sorrow and fearing no pain,
I first peeped out on the hills of Maine.

I've walked today in the grand old woods,
The grand old woods that my father loved;
I've pressed my feet on the mossy sod,
The very same that my mother trod;
I've picked the berries so ripe and sweet,
I've breathed the pine tree's fragrant breath,
And the fairy fountain once again
Has filled my cup in the woods of Maine.

I've bathed my brow in the tranquil lake
That dimples and smiles in the summer sun,
I've gathered the lilies so pure and white,
With a tender touch of my old delight;
Till I longed to lay my burden down,
And sink to sleep where the lilies grow;
I'd wish no dirge but the soft refrain
That the waters sing in the lakes of Maine.

I've stood today by the lonely graves,
Where rest the friends my childhood knew;
The breeze stole out of the quivering fir,
The few low round with hidden truth,
The wild bird sought his hidden nest,
The myrtle wreathed the tangled path—
And the living tears fell down like rain
As I bowed my head o'er the graves of Maine.

O glorious, glorious hills of Maine!
O beautiful, beautiful woods of Maine!
—Mrs. Ellen F. Lattimore.

HOSPITAL FUND STILL GROWS

The figures previously named as rising above the attained goal of the Knox County General Hospital campaign, today have to be still further added to, through the arrival of belated contributions from towns and individuals. The amount recorded this morning is $78,423.81, representing a total of nearly 4500 separate subscriptions. And doubtless these figures are yet to be increased, for there remain many friends of the hospital who will not be satisfied to be left out of the giving.

The charge made in Governor Brewster's published article, that there was an attempt to blackmail him in the recent campaign, is met by Col. Fred N. Dow of Portland, who in a detailed communication to the Express denies any such purpose to have been intended by the letter of which the Governor complains, and of which the Colonel was the author, and he prints in full the text of that letter, which was addressed to Chairman Field of the Republican State Committee. Mr. Field's statement, entitled to the same publicity that Gov. Brewster's complaint received, is printed herewith:

"The statement made by Gov. Brewster, Sept. 19, (says Chairman Field), in which he accuses some person or persons of an attempt to blackmail him, differs so much from my understanding of what actually took place that a plain recital of the facts seems called for. Under date of Aug. 2, Col. Fred N. Dow sent me the letter published in his communication in the Express of Monday.

"The Governor was out of the State at the time, but on Aug. 11 he attended a meeting at Farmington. At that time H. A. Furbush, treasurer of the State committee, and I had a conference with him on various matters connected with the campaign. Toward the end of the conference I showed him Col. Dow's letter but did not urge him to act on it. I was very much surprised to find the Governor taking the matter so seriously. I saw nothing in it but a suggestion from a lifelong Republican that he thought might be helpful, no ulterior motive, no deep laid plot. I said to the Governor that if the suggestion did not appeal to him to disregard the matter, and I called the incident closed and gave it no further thought.

"There was nothing in Col. Dow's letter that looked to me like a threat. If there was a conspiracy, the parties to it must have been Col. Dow and myself. His more than four-score years of honorable and upright living would be answer enough to satisfy all Maine in regard to him.

"So far as my part in it is concerned I say there was no conspiracy, no threat, nothing but a courteous letter to me from a gentleman which I showed to the Governor and which seemed to produce a brainstorm.

"There were two other gentlemen mentioned in the Governor's article. As chairman of the Republican State Committee, and one who is in a position to know, I unhesitatingly state that the support given to the entire Republican ticket by Senator Hale and Ex-Governor Baxter was absolutely loyal. Both gentlemen have served the State in high positions and are too well known to need any defense from me."

And so that's that. There is an old-fashioned expression that we have sometimes heard quoted—a tempest in a teapot.

Some public officials have peculiarities that differentiate them from others. Take for illustration Gov. Fuller, who as a congressman from Massachusetts, and as lieutenant governor and governor of that commonwealth, has declined to accept anything in the way of salary. Checks have been sent from the state treasurer's office each month to the Governor, it was explained, but he has not cashed any of them. At the end of each year uncashed checks become non-payable, and the money reverts to the state. In this way the Governor has declined to accept $16,000 tendered him for his services as lieutenant-governor for four years, and $17,500 for services as governor for a year and three-quarters. It has been suggested that he is saving the checks as souvenirs of his public services.

A very pretty custom, infinitely creditable to the Governor and highly to be appreciated by the taxpayers. It calls to mind that similar eccentricity on the part of Dr. Maitland Alexander, of the Dark Harbor summer colony and who each season speaks from a Rockland pulpit. He receives yearly from his Pittsburgh Church a check for his salary—it is a large one—which he immediately returns to the church to be used in its work for charity.

Portland has reason to applaud this summer's generosity of Cyrus H. K. Curtis to that city in his gifts of $100,000 to the Maine General Hospital and $25,000 to the Y. M. C. A. building fund. Nor is this the only manifestation of that gentleman's interest in his native State, as his contributions to the Camden Public Library and the Knox County General Hospital testify—to the library a check for $5000, and to the hospital $16,000.

CRIMINAL DOCKET IS ON

Jury Returns Verdict of Guilty In Littlehale and Weeks Cases—Trials May Outlast the Week.

The criminal docket opened Tuesday afternoon with the trial of Leslie N. Littlehale on one of three indictments naming statutory charges. Frank A. Tirrell was designated to assist County Attorney Campbell in this case, and conducted the examination. Oscar H. Emery of Camden represented the respondent. The argument for the State was made by County Attorney Campbell.

The case was opened to a drawn jury comprising Joseph W. Kittredge, Vinahaven, foreman; Walter Moran, Thomaston; Charles D. Murphy, Friendship; Spofford J. Crawford, Thomaston; Percy F. Merrifield, Rockport; Mrs. Julia Watts, Warren; Harry M. Gordon, Hope; Charles E. Lord, Camden; Charles E. Wade, Rockland; and Elbridge G. Perry, Appleton.

The first witness was a young girl of 13, named in the indictment as the person with whom the respondent had taken indecent liberties. She testified that she met Mr. Littlehale at the Consolidated Baking Co.'s plant, and that she had gone there for money. The respondent, she said, had given her money so many times that she could not remember the last time being last March. She probably received $10 or $12, she said. Once she asked for bread. Mr. Littlehale indulged in familiarities, witness declared.

Another girl, aged 13, testified she went to the bakery with the above and that Mr. Littlehale gave both of them money. "We never had to ask for it," the witness declared. Pressed closely on cross examination by Mr. Emery, the girl broke into tears.

"I'm telling the truth, and he won't believe me," she said between sobs. Two other girls, 16, told similar stories.

City Clerk E. R. Keene produced the only check lists of December, 1925, for the formality of showing that the respondent was more than 21.

A fifth girl, brought from her present home in Bridgton as a witness, told of visiting the Consolidated with one of the above and said that she had seen her sitting on Mr. Littlehale's knee. Also that he had given her money.

The defense produced several witnesses to prove that Mr. Littlehale had a general reputation for good moral character. The first of these was Dr. R. W. Bickford, who promptly gave his opinion that Mr. Littlehale's reputation, morally, was good. On cross examination he named several persons on whose word he based that opinion.

The examination then drifted into an unexpected path, the witness being asked whether he had ever discussed the reputation of Mr. Tirrell, the special counsel for the State.

The somewhat confused witness declared that he did not know. Upon repeating this statement he was confronted by Associate Justice Dunn, who arose from the bench and addressed him sternly.

"Do you mean to say that you don't know whether you have discussed Mr. Tirrell's reputation?" he demanded.

"No, sir," replied the witness. "I don't."

"Is the sheriff in the room?" asked His Honor. Sheriff Thurston made his presence known.

"Take this man in custody," said Judge Dunn, and Dr. Bickford was removed to the lower corridor. His release came soon after court had adjourned, upon intercession of one of the attorneys, who made it clear to the Court that Dr. Bickford was an earnest and reliable witness.

And Judge Dunn was convinced of this after a brief, but satisfactory talk with Dr. Bickford.

Alan L. Bird testified that Mr. Littlehale had a good reputation, Capt. R. K. Snow, who qualified as an "ex-sea captain," and Ernest L. Keene, manager of Swift & Co. gave their endorsement of Mr. Littlehale in a business way.

Mr. Littlehale took the stand in a manner that indicated complete confidence in his position. He said he was 62 and had been a resident of Rockland 34 years, having engaged in his present business as a wholesaler and retail baker six or seven years ago. Associated with him at the present time is his son-in-law, Jesse Jones. He said he knew three of the girl witnesses named above; that they came to his place two or three times some weeks, and other weeks not at all; that they asked for bread and money, and that he had given them both.

"Did you at any time take indecent liberties with her?" asked Mr. Emery, counsel for the respondent, naming one of the witnesses.

"Absolutely not."

"What have you to say in regard to the charges which she has made?"

"That her testimony is simply absurd."

Jesse Jones, son-in-law of Mr. Littlehale and president of the Consolidated Baking Co., testified that he had heard one of the girls beg food from Mr. Littlehale and had seen him give her bread many times. He had never seen the respondent take liberties with the girl.

The jury returned a verdict of "guilty" after about 15 minutes' deliberation.

with her on those occasions. She said he gave her 75 cents sometimes and $1 sometimes, the whole amounting to about $5. She said she was committed to the Woman's Reformatory because she had stayed out nights and broken her probation.

Another girl who testified that she had known Mr. Weeks six years, said that she had seen him with the first girl witness at Armory's.

The mother testified as to her daughter's age, and City Clerk Keene presented a certificate as to the age of the respondent.

Mr. Weeks, who gave his age as 64, said that he had known the girl two or three years; that the first time he met her she came to the Kittredge drug store, hung around and finally wanted some money. He gave her a quarter.

The second time she asked him to go upon a side street, and he gave her some money there. The third time he met her the other girl was present. She wanted some money with which to buy groceries, and he gave her a dollar, perhaps more.

"Did you ever take liberties with her?" asked Mr. Weeks' attorney.

"I never did anything wrong to her," was the answer.

"Why didn't you hand her the money on Main street?" asked Mr. Tirrell.

"I didn't like to have people see me doing it. It doesn't look well."

John H. Flanagan testified that he had never heard Mr. Weeks' character spoken of as other than good. The jury deliberated about three-quarters of an hour on this case and returned a verdict of "guilty." Counsel for the State, George Thompson of Bangor for the respondent, The argument for the State was made by Mr. Tirrell.

The case on trial is State vs. Charles Walters. The respondent was indicted for the larceny of $150 from the home of Frank W. Fletcher. The contention of the defense was that Mr. Fletcher probably burned the money when he built a stove fire and testimony was presented to show that Walters had opportunity to earn the money found on his person soon after the loss of the money was discovered by Mr. Fletcher. The arguments and charge are being made this morning. County Attorney Campbell for the State; Frank H. Ingraham for the respondent.

These sentences were awarded Tuesday forenoon:

Lester Allen, Rockland, assault, fine of $1 and costs.

Marcellus Martz, Union, driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, 60 days in Knox County Jail.

Elmer Strout, Portland, illegal transportation of liquor, four months in Knox County Jail and a fine of $400 and costs; six months additional sentence in default of payment of fine.

Edward Walker, Rockland, driving without license, 30 days in Knox County Jail.

Russell Turner, Rockport, intoxication, 90 days in Knox County Jail.

Andrew Jacobson, St. George, illegal possession of a still, two months in jail and fine of $400 and costs; in default of payment six months additional.

The case of Alan L. Bird, administrator of the estate of the late Alma Larson of Camden vs. Joseph Ray of Bangor resulted in a verdict of $1585 for the plaintiff. This case was reviewed at some length in the preceding issue.

Fred L. Hayden, court stenographer for Associate Justice Dunn, has an especially kind feeling for Rockland, not alone because of the friends he has made during his many visits here in 26 years, but because he began his career with the late Associate Justice William H. Fogler of Rockland, whose portrait hangs over the bench at the Knox County Court House. Mr. Hayden says what all Knox County friends have always said: "that a finer man never stood."

GETS JAIL SENTENCE

Keith Driscoll of Rockport Figured in Gun Fight At Naples.

Ten months in jail must be served by 17-year-old Keith Driscoll of Rockport for taking several pot shots with a rifle at Deputy Sheriff George R. Bryant in Naples two weeks ago. This penalty was imposed upon the escaped inmate of the State School for Boys by Judge Chapman in Superior Court at Portland Wednesday.

Both Driscoll and the deputy, who answered the fusillade with a revolver, narrowly escaped death in the duel, which was a result of a man hunt in the Naples woods.

Driscoll was sentenced on a charge of assault on the deputy, although he was indicted on a charge of assault with intent to kill. This latter charge was not pressed by County Attorney Ingalls. He also was indicted for stealing two motor cars, one of which was badly damaged by the boys, and these cases were placed on special docket.

The shooting occurred when deputies and a posse cornered Driscoll. Three of the shots he fired went on a straight line through a machine on which Deputy Bryant stood. The officers testified all came within two feet of the deputy and the first missed him by an inch.

Shots fired by the deputy prevented accurate aim of Driscoll, it was said. The lad fled and surrendered the next day. The rifle bullets were of the "dum-dum" type.

The double feature program for the last time today is Vera Reynolds in "Sunnyside Up" and Jetta Goudel in "Her Man of War."

A beautiful herd of wild horses from an important part in the Wild Horse Stampede, the Universal Blue-Struck western starring Jack Hoxie, which comes to the Empire Theatre Friday and Saturday. The herd is supposed to be the property of Jack in the picture, and in actuality belongs to the owner of a ranch near Lone Pine, California. The herd is kept in a huge valley on the ranch. Hoxie owns a nearby ranch, incidentally, and spends most of his time between pictures and on his mountain property. In conjunction there is the seventh chapter of "The Radio Detective"—adv.

PARK THEATRE

"Mismates," with Doris Kenyon and Warner Baxter, is the feature for the last time today.

Millions of readers of the late Gene Stratton Porter's works have been anxiously awaiting the film version of her greatest novel, "Laddie." Under the direction of Leo Meehan, Mrs. Porter's son-in-law, F. B. O. has produced a magnificent picture from the story, which will have its local showing at the Park Friday and Saturday. John Bowers as Laddie and Bess Flowers as Pamela give superb interpretations of the leading roles. Broad in understanding and deep in human sympathy, "Laddie" is one of the best loved and most widely circulated novels of all time. It has ranked for years among the twelve best sellers in America, and even today has a steady sale that overtops many of the supposedly popular books. Mrs. Meehan, the novelist's daughter, made the adaptation for screen purposes, and collaborated with her director-husband in the final script, which is remarkable for its close fidelity to the original. The other feature is "The Midnight Limited," featuring Gaston Glass, Wanda Hawley and Richard Holt—adv.

STRAND THEATRE

The new Metropolitan production, "Shipwrecked," which was produced at the Strand Theatre yesterday, scored a triumph. It is being shown again today for the benefit of the Boy Scout Sloop Fund. An added attraction this evening will be the returns of the Dempsey-Tunney fight by radio.

"The Night Cry" Rin-Tin-Tin's latest Warner Bros. feature coming to the Strand Theatre Friday and Saturday, is said to be one of the most colorful pictures in which this famous canine star has ever appeared. It was filmed in its entirety right in the heart of the sheep raising country—wide plains, rolling hills, streams, everything just as one would find in these romantic and colorful surroundings. The added attraction is "A Broadway Lady." The film is electric with that spark which makes the theatrical district of New York the most fascinating place in the world. It is a trip behind the scenes of a great Broadway musical comedy, and a revelation of the lives of those glorified American girls who nightly flash across the footlights in winsome grace and beauty—adv.

TONIGHT'S BIG BATTLE

Dempsey and Tunney, Modern Gladiators, Meet In Philadelphia With Heavyweight Championship At Stake.

On the site where America is celebrating 150 years of Independence, the setting has been laid for tonight's little battle between two modern young gladiators.

Surrounded by reminders of the glories of America's embattled history, Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney are expected to add a spectacular and unprecedented chapter to boxing history in a match tonight at the Sesqui-Centennial Stadium that cannot last more than 20 minutes.

If the expectation of most expert critics can be depended upon, it will not last half that long. In spite of a competitive layoff since 1923, Dempsey, the champion for seven years, is favored by the big majority of observers not only to successfully defend his title, but to win by a knockout. These opinions are based on Dempsey's apparent comeback to close to his best physical condition, his recognized superiority over the challenger as a puncher and despite Tunney's own record for ruggedness and hitting ability.

For the privilege of witnessing the first heavyweight title battle of ten rounds in three years, Promoter Tex Rickard expects a throng of 140,000 to pay about $1,500,000.

Only such masses as have witnessed the English Derby at Epsom, the Grand Prix at Longchamps, or the 500-mile automobile race at Indianapolis would compare with the throng of fans expected to occupy seats in the big horseshoe shaped structure, or on the wide expanse of infield at prices ranging from $3.30 to $27.50.

The gathering probably will be as notable in representative citizenship as it is in size. Governors, cabinet members, Ambassadors, Senators and Congressmen, leaders in business and society, men and women of all walks of life will make up the cosmopolitan outpouring.

The magnets for all this public interest are two hard-fisted athletes trained for a hand-to-hand struggle that has a million-dollar stake. Their immediate reward is a $500,000 purse, of which $450,000 goes to Dempsey—win, lose or draw—but to the victor an avenue for amazing financial return is opened.

In these days of highly commercialized sports, the heavyweight champion's income is of stupendous proportions. Not only can he command close to a half million dollars for a single ring appearance, but his revenue from motion picture exhibitions and advertising projects may run well into six figures without his even working up a perspiration.

Dempsey has held sway since 1919, when he knocked out Jess Willard, at Toledo. His opposition since then, however, has been limited, partly because of a lack of real contenders and partly because of complications in the champion's business affairs which have hampered his fighting career.

During his last three successive years of competitive idleness, Dempsey has been accused of dodging the big negro challenger, Harry Wills, but the facts, as stated by Tex Rickard, seem rather to prove that opposition from political sources, prejudiced against a mixed title match, has been more responsible for the two failing to meet.

Meanwhile Tunney, fighting his way upward in rapid strides, established himself as a contender of front-rank. Knockouts of Tom Gibbons and Bartley Madden, men who have stood up against the heaviest guns of Dempsey and Wills without hitting the floor, elevated Tunney to a commanding role. His position was further strengthened by a refusal of Wills to accept an elimination match with him last year.

Tunney is the champion's equal in physical proportions, both being under their belt about 90 pounds, and his superior as a boxer. The chief differences, however, come in speed, aggressiveness and punching ability.

In all three the champion, even though admittedly past the peak of his career, is conceded to have a margin. Tunney's strong defense, and his age, however, are counted in his favor, as well as his ability to box and absorb punishment.

In personality there is a strong contrast between the dark-browed champion, nervous and cat-like in his movements, and the pleasant-faced, blue-eyed and straight-backed challenger. Dempsey is all nerves, all ways on the jump, while Tunney is of calm and steady although far from stolid temperament. Jack likes crowds and activity; Gene prefers peace, the woods and his books.

Salient facts and features in connection with the Dempsey-Tunney battle for the world's heavyweight championship follow:

Place—Sesqui-Centennial Stadium, located in grounds of Exposition celebrating 150 years of American Independence.

Time—Thursday night, Sept. 23; preliminary bouts at 8 p. m., Eastern Daylight Time; title bout, about 9.45 p. m. (in case of rain or bad weather, will be held following night).

Principals—William Harrison (Jack) Dempsey, of Los Angeles, champion of the world since 1919, and Gene Tunney of New York, the challenger. Dempsey is 31 and Tunney 28 years old.

Promoter—Tex Rickard of New York.

Bout—Ten rounds to an official decision, rendered by two judges, but in case they disagree, rendered solely by the referee.

Estimated Attendance—140,000, which would set a record for boxing contests or for paid attendance at any sports event in the world.

Estimated Receipts—$1,750,000, a figure which, if reached, also would shatter all previous sporting records.

Previous Records—$3,000,000, established at Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City, for Dempsey-Carpentier heavyweight title battle, July 2, 1921, also promoted by Tex Rickard.

Purse—$600,000, of which Dempsey is to receive three-fourths, win, lose or draw, with one-fourth, $150,000, going to Tunney. Dempsey's share may reach $750,000.

You can teach an old dog new tricks!

I WAS already a veteran pipe-smoker when I ran across Prince Albert. It happened one day in the smoking-car. I reached for my tobacco and found I was "out." A good samaritan sitting across the aisle held out a friendly looking red tin.

I accepted the offer. That was a great moment in my life, as it turned out. Why, that very first taste won me. It was cool, like a breeze through an open window. It was sweet as a ripe peach. It was fragrant, even in that smoke-filled car. I was having the time of my life.

The mildness of Prince Albert appealed to me too. Yet there was plenty of body to it. I knew I was smoking. And I knew I was enjoying it more than any other tobacco I had ever tried. That settled me. I bought some P. A. when the train pulled in.

That was several years ago. I've been a P. A. regular ever since. Maybe you need a similar experience to put you next to the grandest tobacco that ever lined a pipe-bowl. My suggestion is: don't wait! Get yourself a tidy red tin of Prince Albert today!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Some Favorite Dishes

MANY people prefer water ices, sherberts and other frozen dishes to ice cream. Here is one that once tried will always be popular:

Velvet Lemon Sherbet.—Take two cups of sugar, the juice of three lemons and one quart of rich milk. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, regardless of the curdled appearance, as that will freeze out and the mixture will be as smooth as velvet.

Beaten Biscuit.—Into a pint of flour stir a teaspoonful of salt, and a cupful of cold water. Work to a stiff dough, transfer to a floured board and with a rolling pin beat the dough for fifteen minutes, turning and folding so that all parts of the dough may receive the pounding. Cut into biscuit, prick well with a fork and bake a light brown in a hot oven.

Cherry Pudding.—Mix together the following ingredients: One and one-third cups of sugar, two tablespoons of butter, one cupful of milk, two cups of flour sifted with two tablespoons of baking powder, the yolk of an egg and the stiffly beaten white added at the last. Pour this batter over a quart of berries from which the juice has been drained, and steam one hour. To make the sauce, add a tablespoonful of flour and sugar to the juice, cook, stirring until well blended, add butter and nutmeg for seasoning. Cook until smooth.

Banana Sandwiches.—Peel and cut bananas into halves lengthwise, spread with raspberry jam and put together, lay on a plate and serve with whipped cream covering each.

Vanilla.—Beat three eggs until light, add a tablespoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cold water and a pinch of salt. Stir in enough flour to make a stiff dough. Knead and roll out very thin, after dividing into four portions. Tear off a piece the size of the hand and drop into hot fat to brown. The more irregular they are the prettier. When brown, sift powdered sugar over them and serve. Keep closely covered, they will be crisp until eaten.

Old-Fashioned Red Cake.—Cream one cupful of butter and add gradually one and two-thirds cups of granulated sugar, beating until creamy; add five eggs, one at a time, beating vigorously between the addition of each. When the mixture is foamy fold in two cups of sifted flour sifted with two spoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in a slow oven.

Six Month's Cake.—Mix one-half cupful of butter with one cupful of sugar; when creamy add two well-beaten eggs and one-half cupful of molasses. Mix and sift two and one-half cups of flour, one spoonful of cream of tartar, one half teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves and the same of mace. Add alternately with one half cupful of milk to the first mixture and beat vigorously, then add one cupful of raisins cut into small pieces and dredged with two spoonfuls of flour. Turn into two bread pans and bake in a moderate oven forty-five minutes.

When baking pie prepare and bake another shell. If kept in a cold place will be crisp and good for several days. Fill with crushed berries mixed with sugar and top with whipped cream. Such a dessert is quickly prepared and is especially well liked.

Great Value Even in Moments of Leisure

Farm women have recognized that well-earned and well-used leisure is the oil which makes the necessary duties of life be performed happily. Carl Sandburg has said: "Life is a combination of biscuits and lynchings," and one farm woman is learning to realize the value of the lynchings as she has long since realized the value of the biscuits, a writer in the Country Gentleman asserts. She is changing her objective from shilling pots and pans to shining joyous faces, and she and her family alike are profiting by the change in accent.

Not all farm women are realizing the value of leisure, and not few farm women as yet have leisure in needed measure; nor are all who have won it using it effectively. But a good beginning has been made and the future is full of hope.

These times of leisure are literally moments only for some women. I know one mother of five young children who can't find 15-minute periods for recreating mind and soul. She says she can find leisure only for a moment here and there. To be sure, she looks ahead to the time when she can lessen the personal service to the little folks, but now practically every moment demands her attention, and so her leisure, like a roary, is counted dead upon dead.

Wind's Great Effect on Personal Comfort

Personal comfort at any time of the year depends to an astonishing degree on wind; that is, on the motion of the air. An interesting experiment, described by a writer in the American Magazine, illustrates the point.

To find out the different effects of still air and of air in motion, a man was shut up in a telephone booth. The booth contained an electric fan and it also had tubes through which fresh air could be supplied. The man had a lighted cigarette.

With the electric fan going, and with no fresh air coming in through the tubes, the man was comfortable, even after his cigarette had gone out because of lack of oxygen to burn. But when he was shut up in the booth without the fan being turned on, he was in great discomfort, even though he was being supplied with fresh air through the tubes.

"Divine" High Priest

The Grand Lama is the supreme high priest of the Lamaistic hierarchy, and is regarded as a divine being. Lamaism is the name of the religion prevailing in Mongolia and Tibet and to some extent in China; its followers are numbered in the millions. Lamaism is a form of Buddhism, corrupted by Sivaism, and by Shamanism or spirit worship. It was introduced into Tibet by the Chinese about the middle of the Seventh century, A. D., and shortly thereafter the holy city of Lhasa became a goal for pious pilgrims and the seat of the Grand Lama. The Grand Lama is also called the Dalai Lama, i. e., the ocean-priest, or priest as wide as the ocean.—Exchange.

What She Was After

Mrs. Skiffington, during the course of an afternoon call on Mrs. Biffington, sought the latter's advice regarding a proposed divorce action.

"Well," said Mrs. Biffington, on the conclusion of her friend's lengthy recital of her woes, "You have had your marital troubles just like the rest of us; but I am not at all sure that you would be justified in taking this step. You have no other grounds for seeking a divorce, have you?"

Mrs. Skiffington hesitated a moment, and then added: "To tell the truth, in addition to what I have just said, I have a brother who is a lawyer, and I am very anxious to give him something to do."

Retiring Into Oneself

Men seek retreats, houses in the country, seashores, and mountains; and then, too, they want to desire such things very much. But this is altogether a mark of the most common sort of men; for it is in thy power whenever thou shalt choose, to retire into thyself. For nowhere either more quiet or more freedom from trouble does a man retire than into his own soul, particularly when he has within him such thoughts that by looking into them he is immediately in perfect tranquillity.—Marcus Aurelius.

Cane and Beet Sugar

When highly refined no one can distinguish between cane and beet sugar, as they are one and the same thing. Between the crude or raw beet and cane sugars there is a great difference, the latter being edible, while the former is not, as it possesses a very disagreeable odor and taste. Cane sugar molasses is good for culinary purposes; beet sugar molasses is not. Cane juice contains glucose, but beet juice does not, though the latter contains raffinose and the former does not.

"Curiosity Killed the Cat"

Just how this saying got started is unknown. There was an old proverb that a cat has nine lives, yet cats would wear them out. Another version of the proverb is that though she had nine lives cats killed the cat. Probably "curiosity killed the cat" is merely a corruption of the former saying. Its popularity seems to rest on the alteration of the three hard "c" sounds, rather than on the sense of the expression.—Exchange.

A concrete illustration of the spirit of Miami in the face of her disaster was received in the wire to Mrs. Harrison Sanborn from the director of the department of music of the Miami public schools, stating that the school opening was delayed only one week. Mrs. Sanborn, assistant to the director, a position she held last year, left her Rockland home Wednesday for Florida. E. M. Lawrence called by the needs of his property in Coconut Grove, is driving through with Mrs. Sanborn. Mrs. Danne Gardner accompanied them as far as New York. Word was received from Dr. Harrison Sanborn at Miami that he was safe but had lost all his personal belongings. Mrs. Sanborn has sublet her house on Lisle street to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gillette and young Harrison will remain at home with them.

They devote their winters to commercial art work in the metropolises.

Prof. and Mrs. Wilbert Snow (Jeannette Simmons) and children have returned to Middletown, Conn., after two weeks at Spruce Head.

The Portland Evening Express of Tuesday carried a portrait of Agnes R. Armstrong, former Rockland girl, in connection with the following interesting news item: "Miss Armstrong, who has been spending the summer at Willard Beach, is soon leaving to join the Lenox Hill Play company, Inc., with which she has been associated the past three years in the Lenox Hill Little Theater in Greenwich Village, New York. Miss Armstrong is widely known as a writer of short stories under the name of Judith Beverley, her stories for some time appearing in Leslie's Weekly. She formerly made her home in Rockland."

Arthur P. Sampson of Bath, salesman for the Franklin car, is in town.

Dr. Edwin Scitrott and E. A. Rossiter of Camden are cruising about the islands on Mr. Rossiter's schooner.

Kathleen Millay's novel "Wayfarer" has just been published (Wm. Morrow & Co.). Miss Millay is a Camden girl, sister of the gifted poet Edna St. Vincent Millay, and is in private life the wife of Howard Young, whose play "No Heretic" ran on Broadway last year. Prefacing a lengthy review the New York Times of Sept. 19 says of the "Wayfarer": "With considerable skill and sense for contrast Miss Millay has confronted the carefree life led by the camp followers of the arts around Macdougall Street and Sheridan Square with such grim facts as child-bearing, dish-washing, floor-sweeping and cooking in a Maine that the summer visitor never sees. The verve of a perfect familiarity and relish, strangely shot through with disillusionment, invest the first half of the book with color; the lucidity of a distaste that sometimes becomes nausea never lets the second half drop below a certain level of poignancy. Morals are scrambled. But that was to be expected and is no affair of literary criticism. What is its affair is that in order to attain realism reality has been sacrificed. Once more, and for the thousandth time, the flair of our younger writers for reproducing objective character from observation and reminiscence is opposed to their strange incapacity in convincing subjective character from thought."

Of course the Rockland Library has every title.

When the Standard Catalog Bimonthly came this week the librarian in checking it over found that over five-sixths of the titles listed were available at this library. Since this is a selective list of the outstanding books published from 1924-1926, it is especially valuable as a guide to the most recent books on various subjects in our own library. The book may be found at the charging desk at any time. "It is suggested that one use it in planning the winter's reading."

"Patrons cry for it." Well, that may be exaggerating the point a bit, but it is a fact that patrons not only expect but insist on finding descriptive book notes in the front of every library book. This custom which was started several years ago has proven invaluable both to non-fiction and fiction readers. It gives one an idea of the type of the story, a fact which titles alone can seldom reveal, and the brief sketch of the story saves many a patron from carrying home a book which she has read once but failed to remember from the title and cover. Then too whenever it is possible comparative reviews are given, an especially valuable feature in the case of non-fiction where the reader wants the latest and most accurate information. The new subscription to the print-on-one-side edition of the Book Review Digest will enable the library to give better service on this point.

Mention was made above to re-reading books. Be not mistaken, the library joyously greets the reader who finds a book sufficiently absorbing as to call for re-reading. It is the book that lies on the home table idea that the library objects to.

Never a week goes by, and seldom a day, but what some of the staff is greeted by, "Do you have to read all the books you buy?" The librarian's stock answer is sure enough Yankee—"What would happen to the grocer if he took a substantial taste of every bit of stock that came into his store?" Never a doubt but that the librarian would be affected with as serious an attack of indigestion as would the grocer, only hers would be mental.

No, to buy books intelligently (the aim, at least, of any librarian) is not necessarily personally to read them but to meet them through others' eyes. For this one is provided with many means.

Of course the most desirable is personally to read, that is, when the book treats of a subject of which the librarian can conscientiously judge. The next substitutes are the book reviews. To use these advantageously one must work with them long.

By far the most valuable bibliographical tool of this sort is the Book Review Digest, a monthly magazine listing all the outstanding new books, and giving a brief sketch with excerpts from and reference to all known published reviews. Hence at a glance one may compare the views of many, and decide just what the book holds for him personally. The yearly accumulation of this Digest is invaluable in recommending, buying and becoming acquainted with books. Closely allied to this magazine but more selective and published especially for the small library with small book funds, is the Standard Catalog Bimonthly, in this library a real catalog of the outstanding recent books owned locally.

Published by the American Library Association and especially dependable in its brief reviews is the Booklist, a monthly publication dealing with books for public libraries. Locally, however, it has been found that it is so very difficult to find recent fiction which gains the necessary votes for inclusion that its fiction lists are of little value to this library.

Besides these strictly bibliographical tools, the library also subscribes to several magazines with which the book buyer and intelligent reader finds it a pleasure to keep in touch.

By far the most helpful are the Saturday Review of Literature and the weekly Book Review section of the New York Times, both valuable for their up-to-the-minute reviews. For the library the Bookman is of less use, though its special articles on authors and books are invaluable for reference and general reading.

Lately both the Boy Scouts and the National Federation of women's clubs have taken strong stands in stressing the value of reading and of owning books. Articles sponsored by these associations appear frequently in such popular magazines as the Delineator, Ladies' Home Journal, Good Housekeeping, etc. All easy ways for him who would keep in touch with the best of the new books.

Truly if one cares there is little extant and worth while books. It is a cure for reading any but really economical, this habit of keeping in touch with book reviews, for it saves one many an hour that can be more pleasurably spent with real books or friends. Remember, it is as much the library's duty to provide information about books as it is to provide the books themselves. Take advantage of this service.

One breathlessly records the increasing use of the library for books of real information, especially by the men. Scarcely had the last book notes appeared in this column before a telephone call was received reserving the two books mentioned on sales and advertising. Remember, the main reason that your library cannot supply specific information on the subject you ask for is because no one has ever shown the slightest interest in reading material on this subject before.

Recently the librarian was asked for up-to-date material on lime manufacture. It was with much chagrin that she found that the library material was out of date and the resources of the State Library must be used. But after all, which was more to be regretted, that the library did not have the material, or that in a town where for more than a century lime has been our chief industry, this patron (a non-resident) was the first in many years to show sufficient interest in new methods of lime manufacture to even ask for material on the subject?

Let the Library know your wants. If its shelves cannot supply the book it takes but a day to acquire it for you at the State Library. Possibly it is only lack of demand that is keeping the book from our shelves. The library needs your co-operation to better its service. Use the mails, call on the telephone, come in person, but remember the library's whole reason for existence is to supply community book needs.

FISHERMEN'S RACE

The fishing schooners Henry Ford and Columbia of Gloucester, and the Gossoon of Boston, will race Oct. 11, 12 and 13 for the championship of the American Fleet. The dates were changed from October 2, 4 and 5 in order to avoid conflicting interest with the World's Series and to assure a larger crowd on the Oct. 12 holiday. Several trophies already have been donated for the race, which also will constitute elimination trials for determining an American contender in a possible resumption of the International Races with Canada this fall.

Mrs. McCormick Reveals Secret of Good Health

Victim of Heart Trouble, Nervousness and Weak Stomach, Mother of 7 Children Finds Relief. Strength Restored. Praises Tanlac

"Words cannot express the agony I went through," says Mrs. John McCormick, a popular matron whose seven beautiful children are the pride of Taft Avenue, Portland, Me.

"My strength had vanished. I was afraid to go out on the street alone, my heart caused me so much trouble. It would skip a beat and palpitate. And my stomach was so upset that the sight of food nauseated me. And when I managed to force down a little food I would suffer for hours.

"My plight shattered my nerves. And many nights I would hear the clock strike every hour, counting the minutes that seemed like years, tossing and turning, waiting for dawn to come. Then I would be so weary and worn that I could hardly drag one foot after the other. Life and the care of my children was a burden. In vain I sought relief.

"Then a neighbor told me about Tanlac. And three bottles of this tonic relieved me of all my troubles. Quickly my old strength returned. I began to have an appetite for food. And now I can eat everything without a sign of indigestion. My heart never bothers me. And even the noise of seven children playing does not rattle my nerves. Tanlac was a god-send."

Tanlac relieves pain that ravages health. It often conquers serious troubles and builds up strength in famished bodies. It is Nature's own remedy made from roots, barks and herbs. Enjoy good health and strength. Begin taking Tanlac. The first bottle brings amazing results. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today. Over 40 million bottles sold.

CARL FACES CAMERA

The Bangor Commercial conducts a "Before the Camera" department. Its "victim" in Tuesday's issue was a former Camden boy, in regard to whom the following was said: "Carl Hopkins is local manager of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company. Although young in years he has had much experience in telephone work, starting at the game by climbing poles and gradually being promoted to responsible offices, finally to the management of the local branch. Mr. Hopkins, although confined to his work a large part of the time, attending to all details of giving the public the best of service, finds occasion to show a keen interest in civic affairs, proving the old theory that it is the busy man who always does many tasks well."

MILLIONS FOR NUTS

America Swaps Lots of Cash For Its Annual Supply.

A government agency states that nuts must be added to the list of supplies for which the United States is dependent upon the world.

Last year America bought for about $50,000,000 a half million tons of nuts or nut products, including chestnuts, walnuts, coconuts, and copra, palm nut oil and pecans, Brazil nuts, almonds, filberts and peanuts. The peanut, which is classified as a nut by the government, accounted for 36,000 tons.

"The nut tree has not been taken seriously by Americans until recent years," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C. "The Indian and the pioneer respected its gifts, but for many years a nut tree existed in America only to provide a happy outlet for the excess energy of small boys in the fall."

Nut Orchards Cut Imports
"America would be importing many more tons of nuts but for the fact that Americans have gone in for nut crops within the last twenty years. Pecan orchards have been planted in Florida, Georgia and other southern States, walnut and almond orchards have been planted in California. The peanut, of course, is a new world native by birth, and a standby in Virginia and the South. Nevertheless America still must look abroad for nuts, especially those produced in the Tropics."

"Where does America shop for nut meats? She goes to Tobago, Trinidad, Jamaica, the Philippines and South Seas for coconuts; she goes to Brazil for Brazil nuts and babassu nuts; to Lagos, Liberia and Sierra Leone for palm nuts; to Italy and Spain for almonds, filberts and pignolia nuts; to Syria and Palestine for pistache nuts; and to France for English walnuts and chestnuts. Walnuts also come from China, Italy, Spain, and Chile in some quantities."

On the Trail of the Elusive Walnut

"An American investigator went to the Orient to study the Chinese walnut industry. His experience throws light on the old sources of our nut meats. Shanghai, he knew, was the main shipping point for millions of pounds of walnut meats coming to the United States. Arriving there he called on the exporters and asked how to find the Chinese walnut orchards. No one knew. They came from the interior. That was enough for the exporters. But the American found a Chinese assistant who told him that the walnuts came from Taiyuan, capital of Shansi province."

"Strange," the American investigator said to himself when he reached Taiyuan, "there are no walnut trees in sight." But he was soon put right by a citizen who told him that the walnut trees were actually 100 miles farther on, at Fenchow. He obtained one of the 18 motor cars in Shansi province and started off for Fenchow. The American reached his destination only to be informed that the walnut trees, as a matter of fact, were 25 miles farther on. Although the nuts were similar to the English walnut of California, the Bear State has no such walnut trees to show as the investigator found deep in China. For age, the walnut tree is the "elephant" of the plant world. Chinese trees are 200 years old still bear nuts. How did they get into the Shansi hills and into the valleys northeast of Peking? Did the Chinese walnut trees come from Persia like the English walnut trees, or are they native? That remains a plant mystery."

Six Tons' Pressure To Crack This Nut

"In another part of the world tongues are wagging over a new and probably important development in the nut trade. Beside the northern tributaries of the sprawling Amazon grows a palm tree which produces the babassu nut. Probably the babassu gave inspiration for the phrase, 'a hard nut to crack.' Its spherical shell, about the size of a baseball, has been known to withstand six tons' pressure. The prize for the strong man who can crack a babassu is a group of nut meats the size and shape of shelled Brazil nuts. Each nut meat will burn readily and can be used as a wickless candle. Babassu meat is 66 per cent oil, which is said to be the only nut oil that can be substituted for coconut oil. American inventors have been working busily on the problem of a portable nut cracker, capable of dealing with this tough nut right in its tropical home and rumor has it that inventors are on the eve of success. If they win, the babassu will probably join the Brazil nut as one of the most important exports of Brazil."

"To Americans must come much credit for putting nut growing on a business basis. The walnut orchard, the pecan orchard and the almond orchard are largely American institutions. Until this American idea came in nut trees were grown somewhat according to the Biblical plan when peace and plenty were achieved by every man dwelling under his vine and under his fig tree from Dan to Beersheba. In Italy, in Spain, in China, in Anatolia, the peasant farmer felt sure of a livelihood if he dwelt under his own nut tree. Probably more than 80 per cent of the cultivated nut crop of the world comes from the peasants who own from one to five trees. Orchards are now becoming more common in Sorrento, Italy; Valencia and Alicante, Spain; Grenoble and Bordeaux, France; under the pressure of higher prices. For Spain the almond has definitely ceased to be a specialty crop. It takes highest rank among her exports to America."

The Coconut Puts Lather in Lather
"Almonds are grown all around the Mediterranean basin, but the United States gets her chief supplies from Italy and Spain. Amalolia, Syria, Greece and North Africa ship to northern Europe. The Orient also looks to the Mediterranean for almonds. Practically the entire Italian supply of shelled almonds goes to India where it is essential to some of the famous Indian dishes. "Recent exposure of cream dilution with coconut fat in New York City give some hint to the uses of the coconut. Its role as an edible nut is small compared to its part in the modern industrial scheme as maker of oleomargarine, soap and salad oil

THEY BOSS THE HOME

And Women Are Also the Compelling Power Behind the Steering Wheel of the Auto.

Mere man is in the majority of cases accorded the privilege of driving the car while en tour, but when it comes to deciding where the tour will be, how long it shall extend, where to stop and where to eat, the women of the nation exercise all but supreme jurisdiction.

This, according to a statement issued from the National Headquarters of the American Automobile Association today, is one of the most interesting statistics developed by the daily contact of 841 touring bureaus of A. A. A. clubs with the motor caravaners of the nation.

For some unexplained reason, the attaches behind the touring counters are admitted into the inner circles of the family and stand by while the issues of the tour are being decided. Experience has taught these attaches that they will save time by giving the routing originally requested by the woman.

"The man or men of the party may for half a dozen reasons want to get back home, but the women usually decide when and how," the A. A. A. statement observes.

"I've got to get home," Mr. Husband declares bluntly.

"But we haven't seen near all of it yet, dear," his better half protests, calmly but firmly.

"I'm sorry, but we can't go much further," friend husband insists, a trifle irritated. "The tires are going fast. Besides, I can see the baby's getting sick. He can't stand this sort of thing. And my business will go to rack and ruin. You'll get all worn out, yourself. And I'm running low on money. It just can't be done, that's all."

"The wife, who perhaps knows better, ignores all these reasons. Perhaps, she took pains not to hear them. In any event, she comes back with the emphatic:

"Well, we'll go ahead anyhow. I want to see the scenery. There's lots of it around."

"Tell her the roads are impassable," the husband whispers. If he adds, "or by the Lord, I'll break your neck" he may get what he wants. But this rarely happens."

Some amusing incidents revealing the very human characteristics of the 35,000,000 who spend part of the summer on wheels are recorded.

"Four college boys who toured east from Kansas fell into a dispute at Washington as to where they would go next," the A. A. A. statement continued. "It was time to get back to school, but they wanted to see Florida. They appealed to the touring bureau clerk of the District Division to decide for them, and he temporized."

"Then, while a quickly gathering crowd looked on, they rolled dice on the touring bureau's floor. Florida won, and the boys will be an extra year finishing college as a result."

"One of the favorite night calls on the service department of the average bureau is this, by telephone: 'I've run out of gas. How soon can you send some out here?'

"Where are you?" "There is a gasp at the other end of the wire. The gasless motorist is deflating. Finally he says: 'Why-er-I don't know.'"

"There is the record of one woman, going from Cleveland, Ohio to Hagerstown, Md., who asked how far the journey to the Maryland city was. When told, she asked naively: 'How far is it back?'

"How long can I keep a marriage license before I use it? is another query, and a sweet, innocent thing has been known to stand at the counter in the Richmond, Va., touring bureau and asks: 'Can you tell me, please, if it's raining down in Pittsburgh?'

But for each of all these questions, foolish and otherwise, the A. A. A. disclosed, there is one that is asked 20 times:

"What is the shortest and best route from here to some place?" Usually, there are no other requisites. The road must be paved and in the finest condition. It must not run through too high hills. And it must have the best scenery possible.

"There could be no better training for the road engineer than a few weeks behind a touring bureau counter," the A. A. A. added. "He would learn precisely what the touring public wants, and if he could devise ways to fill the bill he would occupy a favored niche in the hall of fame."

and candles. It also is widely used in shaving cream manufacture to impart a lather-producing quality.

What Tin Cans Owe to Nuts
"An all-important nut which is not edible is the palm nut. The African Gold Coast ships thousands of tons annually to the United States for soap, candles, coloring for butter substitutes, heat resistant paints, shoe polish and for lubrication of cutting tools."

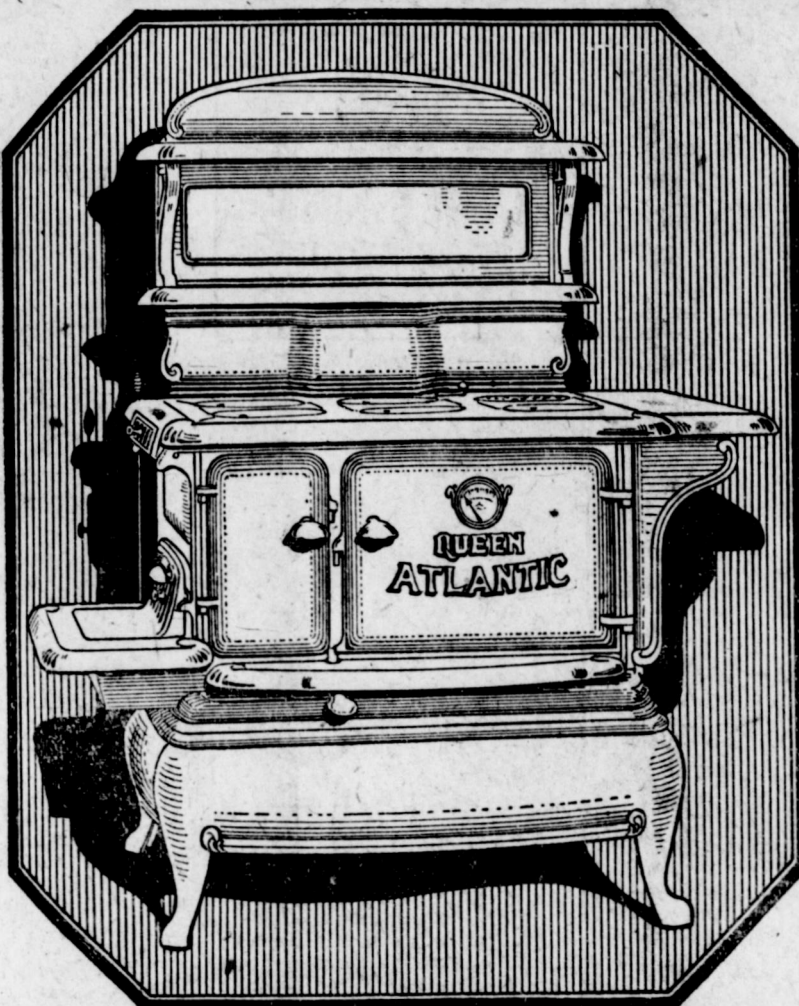

"The tin plate industry is one of the heaviest buyers of palm nuts. Palm oil is essential to the making of that necessity of modern civilization, the tin can. Thin sheet iron after being passed into its bath of molten tin must be brought through palm oil, floating on the hot metal, when it emerges with its shiny tin coat."

TO DIRECT PUPILS' ATTENTION TO POSTURE

Four girls and five boys were selected as the most physically fit pupils in a "posture drive" conducted last session in Junior 3 High School, Trenton, N. J. In a contest following two weeks of special emphasis on good posture, after combining the entire student body to find the best groups, 28 boys and 38 girls were chosen as of excellent posture. Careful elimination by a committee composed of the State director of physical education, city director of health education and the supervisor of physical education, resulted in selecting the best physical specimens in the school. For the 75 boys and 106 girls classified as of poor posture special corrective exercises were prescribed. —School Life.
