LABOR DAY SHOOT.

Ellsworth Gun Club Will Entertain
Many Visitors.

The Ellsworth gun club will hold an invitation shoot at its range at Wyman park on Labor day, offering a full day's program. Invitations have been extended to the gun clubs of Bar Harbor, Bangor, Bucksport, Old Town and Machias, and indications are that all these clubs will be represented, and an interesting shoot will be the result. It will be the last big shoot of the season in eastern Maine. The invitation to shoot is extended to all shooters, whether members of any gun club or not.

The range at Wyman park will be open for practice shooting immediately after the arrival of the early morning trains.
The first event will be called at 9 o'clock.
This will be a ten-bird event, followed by six fifteen-bird events, which will complete the morning program.

Luchon will be served to shooters on the grounds by the Ellsworth club. The afternoon program will include ten twenty-bird events.
William B. Hill, of Portland, who re-final examinations, will be required to take them in order to enter the high school.

Arrangements have been made for these examinations at the office of the superintendent of schools in Hancock hall next Friday, Sept. 3, beginning at 8.30 a. m.
Children from out of town desiring to enter the Ellsworth high school must pre-tendent that they passed the required examinations.

ELLSWORTH IS REAL GOOD.

Has Lowest Rate of Arrests of any City in Maine.

An investigation now being made by the Civic League of Maine regarding the police records of misdemeanors in the twenty cities and five largest towns, is nearly ready for publication. This report will show that Ellsworth has, in comparison with its population, the lowest rate of arrests of any city in Maine, according to police reports.

The city report for 1902-3 is missing from several files which the league has consulted, and the reports from 1903 to the present time have not contained any figures showing the work of the police department. Clerk-of-Courts J. F.
Knowlton, who is also recorder of the Ellsworth municipal court, has furnished the data for these five years from the municipal docket. The figures for the whole period follow:

	'02	'03	'04	'05	'06	'07	'08
Arrests	10	48	48	17	14	11	..
Drunkness	7	47	47	15	14	11	..
Violation of Liquor law	0	0	0	0	0	0	..
Arrests	..	'03	'04	'05	'06	'07	'08
Drunkness	..	11	19	4	7	8	20
Violation of Liquor law	..	7	18	2	1	4	7

It is significant that the rate of arrests in the neighboring village of Bar Harbor has greatly diminished during the past ten years, in which period the population has nearly doubled. The arrests in Bar Harbor averaged ninety-one per year for the last ten years, but only fifty-nine per year for the last four years. The commitments to jail in Hancock county averaged seventy-three per year for four years, from 1897 to 1900, but only twenty-nine per year from 1905 to 1908 inclusive.

The court dockets in several towns indicate that the record for the current year will show no retrograde in this record.

BLUEHILL FAIR NEXT WEEK.

Good Racing and Fine Exhibition Promised.

The fair season in this section will open next week, with the three-days' fair at Mountain park, Bluehill, beginning Tuesday. The Bluehill fair always draws good crowds from this section of the county, and Mountain park's reputation for good races is always upheld.

The managers of the fair are always alive to the interests of exhibitors and visitors. Since last year a new well has been dug on the grounds, assuring an abundance of good water for stock and patrons.

Entries for the races close at 11 p. m. today. The races start each day at 1 p. m.
There will be a base ball game and balloon ascension each day on the grounds, and a dance each evening in the town hall.

The officers of the society are F. P. Merrill, president; E. L. Osgood, vice-president; Max R. Hinckley, treasurer; C. S.
Snowman, secretary; W. J. Creamer, G. A.
Morse, J. M. Snow, A. C. Osgood, W. S.
Hinckley, directors.

OTHER FAIRS.
The Eden fair also takes place next week, Sept. 8 and 9. These fairs will be followed by the North Ellsworth fair,
Sept. 22 and 23; Highland grange fair,
North Penobscot, Sept. 22; Amherst fair,
Sept. 28 and 29; Orland fair, Sept. 29.

tor, a teacher of long and wide experience.

leave to-day for a two months' visit with relatives in the West. They go from here to Marshall, Mo., the home of Mrs. Prigmore's mother, where Mr. Prigmore is to supply for two months.

Delightful Musical.

The musical given under the auspices of the west side branch of the Village improvement society at the handsome new home of Judge John A. Peters and wife last Thursday evening, was a pleasant affair. The whole house was thrown open, and Mr. and Mrs. Peters entertained delightfully.

About 150 were present, in spite of the threatening weather, which kept many away. Donations by friends of the society swelled the total receipts of the evening to about $80. The following program was pleasingly rendered:

Piano solo—Etude de Concert.....Miss Margaret Dresser
Song.....Miss Pamela M. Clough
Piano duet.....Mrs. C. A. Cole and Miss Margaret Dresser
Song.....Miss Frances Weston
Song—Sing Me to Sleep.....W. P. Clough

tique.....Miss Sophia Walker
Reading—Pauline Pavlovna.....Miss M. A. Greely

Piano solo—Etude Melodique.....Miss Dresser

The ladies of the branch acknowledge their indebtedness to the home talent, and to Miss Weston, of Bangor, Mr. Clough, and Miss Clough, of Boston, who so kindly assisted.

Miss Mary F. Hopkins was accompanist throughout the program, serving in her usual efficient manner. This was the first public appearance in Ellsworth of Miss Walker and Miss Dresser since their return from the New England conservatory of music, and their playing delighted all.

CASTINE.

Mrs. Alice Copley Thaw, of Pittsburg, Pa., mother of Harry K. Thaw, is at the Castine house for a short stay. Mr. Thaw has quite a number of friends who are at Castine this season.

Capt. A. B. Conner, from the Pacific coast, on his way to Castine, Me., to spend a vacation of two months with his family, dropped in on our last Saturday looking fine; and we shouldn't be in command of the strength at Steamboat San Rita, much ning between Vancouver and intermediate ports on the Pacific, with almost continual sunshine by day and as much moonlight as is accorded to any of the seven seas, no gales, no fog, but just plain sailing. It is regretted that only one entering some one of the scheduled ports. Capt. Conner owns what was once the beautiful home of Capt. Frank Jarvis, who commanded some of the finest ships out of Castine in his day, and everybody who has been to Castine knows that circumstance obliged him to spend his last days in Sailors' Snug Harbor. During the last hour that Capt. Conner spent with us last week he inquired about every member of the Marine society that he ever knew, and through it is medium to be kindly remembered to all of them as well as to the marine friends here in the East. We say Capt. Conner the enjoyment of a two-months' stay in Castine, the beautiful Maine village in which the work of his life itself was born.—New York Marine Journal.

A GOOD TARIFF LAW.

Admirable Summary of the Payne Law by Hon. S. W. McCall.

To summarize a tariff law in such a way as to make it intelligible to the average reader is not an easy task. In the House on July 31, Hon. S. W. McCall, a Congressman from Massachusetts, made a speech which seems to accomplish this task so nearly that that speech, even after this bill has become a law, seems worth while printing.

Mr. McCall is a member of the ways and means committee, and was a member of the Conference committee. His speech was as follows:

"Mr. Speaker: I always listen to the gentleman from Missouri, who is the leader of the minority party, with a great deal of pleasure, although I do not find myself usually in agreement with his conclusion; but he demonstrated absolutely to-day two propositions. He first stated that he could take two men, expert in the use of figures, and could prove two antagonistic conclusions with reference to the tariff. The figures would not lie, but the experts would. And he then proceeded to present a set of figures to the House which proved that he must have employed the services of the most accomplished liar in North America. [Laughter.]

"And I am not questioning the figures at all, but the conclusions to which they appear to lead. His expert had taken up the different schedules of the pending bill, and attempted to show that it gave no practical reduction, and he employed figures to reach the conclusion in this way: He took the revenues that are now derived under these schedules and the revenues that he 'figures' will be derived under the proposed bill, and he calculated up from the difference in the revenues that the reduction was practically nothing.

"But what a transparent fallacy was involved! It has been the contention of nobody that the bill before the House was going to reduce the revenues at the custom-houses. On the other hand, we have had it in view to increase those revenues. If we had made the duties prohibitive, there would be no revenue, and by this method it would be argued that we had revised the tariff downward.

"We might have brought in a bill founded on the English system, where upon five articles alone, counting liquors as one, they produce a revenue at the custom-house of more than 150,000,000. Multiply that by 2, which is about the ratio of our population to that of Great Britain, and we should produce over $317,000,000 upon those five articles. A tariff bill like that would be a free-trade tariff; and yet, upon the theory of the gentleman's expert, we should have produced no downward revision of the tariff because the revenues would not have been decreased.

"Then the gentleman demonstrated another fact. Those of us who have the pleasure of knowing Mrs. Clark know that she is a woman of remarkably good sense. The gentleman from Missouri proceeded to prove that fact to the House by saying that after she had read Mr. Payne's report she said his tariff bill would save to the American people $5,000,000,000 every year. That, to my mind, was a highly sensible observation.

"Now let us look at the striking fact brought out by the statistics that were produced by the chairman of the committee on ways and means. He shows that we have reduced duties upon articles which are consumed in the United States to the amount of about $5,000,000,000 every year. Well, what is the democratic theory?

The democratic theory is that the people are not merely taxed upon goods that are entered at the custom-house, but there is also an equivalent tax put on all those commodities produced in the United States and consumed here. Whether that theory is true in its extent or not, there is no doubt that customs duties upon goods in many cases increase the price to the consumer of the same kind of goods produced in this country; and when the chairman of the committee on ways and means shows that this bill decreases the duty upon articles consumed by the American people, necessary articles, to the amount of $5,000,000,000 a year, and that it only increases the duties upon goods consumed to the amount, excluding luxuries, of $272,000,000 a year, it seems to me he has demonstrated conclusively the tendency of this bill.

"It is said that this is not a revision downward. Why, it is impossible for any fair-minded man to take these schedules and to go through them from beginning to end and deny that it is the most effective revision downward undertaken by any tariff bill ever presented to the American Congress.

"You can count on the fingers of one hand in the chemical schedule the increases if you leave out luxuries, while there is a whole page of decreases, and among them the great chemical—sulphate of ammonia, which is put upon the free list, various forms of potash—those chemicals that enter into manufacture and into the consumption of our people.

"And then take the iron and steel schedule. We begin by making a reduction from 40 cents to 15 cents a ton in the duty upon iron ore, which lies at the basis of all manufactures of iron and steel. We reduce the duty upon pig iron, which is used by so many industries, from $4 to $2.50 a ton. We reduce the duty on scrap iron from $4 to $1 a ton. We cut in two the duty on steel rails. The steel schedule presents a reduction which amounts practically to cutting it in two. Yet we have adjusted these cuts to the conditions of the industry, and we believe that they will not result in harming any part of this country. The duty upon coal is cut 33 per cent. The duty upon petroleum and its products is removed altogether.

"And so it is throughout the whole bill. Take the duty upon hides. They have been upon the free list ever since we have been a nation, with the exception of two or three intervals, and this bill places them there again. We do not believe that it will in any way affect the cattle-growing industry in this country, but the removal of the duty is far more than compensated for by the radical cuts made in leather, in boots and shoes, in harness and saddlery. In these paragraphs the duties are practically cut in two.

"Mr. Speaker, the question before the House is: Shall this report be voted upon or shall it be voted down? If it is voted down, you bring in chaos; if you throw open all these hundreds of differences to amendment. You will see nothing but disintegration. You will not have tariff revision at this session, if, indeed, you have it at the next. The question before the House is: Shall we sustain a republican president? Shall we carry out the pledges of a republican platform.

"Mr. Taft, when he was a candidate for the Presidency, took the people into his confidence and frankly announced that if he were elected he would attempt to bring about a revision of the tariff downward upon the lines of protection. That policy beyond question is reflected in this bill. It is a great government measure. It is one of the most monumental measures ever presented to an American Congress. It is a measure the passage of which is desired by a republican president. It is the first great policy of this administration.

"I say to you it would be most damaging to him, it would be most damaging to the cause of a revision of the tariff, either up or down, if enough republicans withheld their votes from this measure to defeat it. It would, at the threshold of his administration, subject him to a damaging repulse, and it would keep uncertainty hanging over his business.

"My friend from Illinois [Mr. Mann] does not want this report to be accepted because he thinks that the cut on print paper from $3 and $3 a ton to $3.75 a ton is not sufficiently drastic. On the other hand, the gentlemen who represent the great paper-producing districts of the country believe that a cut even to $3.75 will produce disaster. This is only an illustration of the difficulties we shall face. We will have many conflicting views of this kind.

"If this report is thrown open, the gentleman from Illinois will probably not see his views prevail and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Maibay] may not see his views prevail. If in a tariff bill applying to some 4,000 articles every duty must first be adjusted to please everybody, or indeed, anybody, we should never have legislation. From necessity such a bill involves compromises. Some of the provisions of this bill, standing alone, I should vote against. But as a whole I believe it a righteous measure, and as such it will have my vote.

"We will have a conflict of forces, we will have disintegration and chaos, if the report is voted down; and in the interests of good legislation, and to put upon the statute books what I believe is, upon the whole, as good a tariff law as was ever passed by the American Congress, I appeal to the members upon this side of the chamber to give their votes in favor of the report." [Applause on the republican side.]

UNDER THE SURFACE

An Incident That Brought Content to a Dissatisfied Woman.

By ROY RICHARDSON.

"I'm sorry we're invited," observed Mrs. Edmonds to her husband as they dressed to go out. "We shan't have a good time."

"Why?" her husband inquired. "I always liked Ned."

"Yes," responded Mrs. Edmonds. "I like them both, but Will, try as hard as I may, they make me absurdly jealous."

Mr. Edmonds grew serious. "The old excuse, Grace. I thought you had outgrown that bad habit. We've got so much that they can never have. There!" he cried, pinching her cheek. "Let's put it aside. We have each other, while you know they quarrel. We must have them here some evening soon. You can sing while I juggle the chaffing dish. Ned Constable never could make a decent rabbit. His wife won't let him learn how."

Mrs. Edmonds sighed even at her husband's picture of a pleasant evening at home. "I shall depend upon you," she said as they rang the Constable doorbell, "to keep me contented tonight, Will."

It was quite an affair. Mr. and Mrs. Constable, whatever they might be when alone, were a charming host and hostess.

"How well they do it!" exclaimed Mrs. Edmonds to her husband as they sat eating. Then, with a dangerous tone in her voice, she said, "I wish, oh, so much, that you and I—"

"There, there," Edmonds broke in gently. "We're not going to speak of that, dearie. By Jove!" he ejaculated suddenly. "I do believe there's old Tom Goodwin over there all by himself. You remember Tom, don't you, Grace—the fellow who was too poor to come to our wedding and who said he was sending for instead of buying a railroad ticket? I haven't seen him for months. He writes things, I believe. You must meet him, good old chap."

"Do you know," Goodwin remarked a few moments later, seating himself beside his new found friends. "I always promised myself the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Edmonds. And now," and his genial face beamed with good nature. "I see how true it is that unexpected pleasures are the keenest. Funny thing, Mrs. Edmonds, but I didn't want to come here at all."

At this Edmonds smiled at his wife. "Neither did we. Now we are glad we did," he said. "But, Tom, why haven't you called? You might have found us before this in the directory."

"Oh, yes," Tom rejoined, "but you're such dreadful swells I didn't dare. You see," he explained while Mrs. Edmonds tried to tell him how modest they really were, "I'm just beginning. When you just begin people don't like you, and mostly you don't take to them, and so I have thought it best to keep away by myself until I had done something worth while."

Goodwin made himself very agreeable, and Mrs. Edmonds liked him. Her husband got deep in debate with a business acquaintance, and the two men presently drifted to the other side of the room, so when the music began in the conservatory Goodwin took Mrs. Edmonds upstairs.

"It's awfully good of you, you know," he said to her as they seated themselves next a dense mass of palms in the ballroom, "not to insist on dancing, but to talk to me. You're so cheerful and seem so contented. Will is a fortunate man, Mrs. Edmonds."

"How odd! I was discontented and blue when I came here tonight," she said, "all because I was—well, I was covetous."

Tom laughed. "We all get that way at times, I fancy," he remarked. "Look at those De Puysters standing over there, the richest people here. You wouldn't believe it, but they are ridiculously jealous of the Four Hundred. How the Four Hundred fare we never know, but the De Puysters are as poor as we can, while some of us are silly enough to ape the De Puysters. I am glad you are not one of those."

Before Mrs. Edmonds could confess that indeed she was one of them there came to her ear from behind the palms by which they sat the sound of voices. They both recognized the tones of their host and hostess. It was an awkward position, but they could not have escaped being seen from over the palms.

Constable was evidently remonstrating with his wife. "You can't mean to pretend," he was saying, "to be keeping pace with the De Puysters. One would think you were, to see us tonight. I tell you, Anne, I can't afford it, and that's that."

"That's what you're always saying—'can't afford this; can't pay for that,'" cried Mrs. Constable, with considerable heat. "Why don't you go into bankruptcy and be done with it? You never used to complain."

"We would look well bankrupt, wouldn't we?" her spouse cut in. "I never used to complain, as you say, because I was getting rich fast then. It is changed now, and I'm often pinched for money to the verge of desperation. I've told you so, Anne. While I've no objection to your entertaining and having a good time, there's a limit to our means, you know, and where the devil the money for this is coming from I don't see."

"You never told me!" cried Mrs. Constable. "You merely said you were worried. And I'll tell you right now, Ned Constable, I do intend keeping pace with the De Puysters and flatter myself I have done so."

"He stuck me on change for $12,000 last week," muttered Constable. "You may be able to keep up the pace; but, by thunder, I can't at that figure. Anne!"

There was a pause. Then he said pacifically: "You go at it wrong, and as your husband, I must correct you. Look at Will Edmonds and his wife. They are poor, as the world takes such people, but they are richer and happier than we are."

"Yes," exclaimed Mrs. Constable, "and live in a little place where you can hardly turn around and where you meet starved musicians, impecunious actors or authors who hope to startle the world some day. Perhaps you would like to change places with them."

"I may have to," Constable murmured, "before it is all over. Come, Anne: the people are going. We must get downstairs."

Goodwin and Mrs. Edmonds arose, he serious, she trembling.

"Tell me," he asked her, "should we have gone away?"

"Yes and no," she answered. "We couldn't without their knowing." Then, putting her hand in his as they came to Mr. Edmonds, she observed seriously: "A little while ago I was jealous of them, Mr. Goodwin. Now I am not, and my little place where you can hardly turn around seems sweet and good to me. Come and see us in it. We will welcome you, and you may get an idea how nice humility is. Good night. I thank you for being here."

As Grace and Will stood again in their own house later that night she said to him as she kissed him, with tears in her eyes: "I thank the Lord, Will, dearest, for our little place where some people can hardly turn around. Shut your eyes, Will, and say it after me: 'Bless our little place where you can hardly turn around. Amen!'"

Eccentric Henry Cavendish.

Whenever Henry Cavendish entertained his guests he would always give them the same fare—a leg of mutton. A story goes that one day when four friends were coming it was asked him what should be ordered for dinner. He answered, "A leg of mutton." "Sir," was the reply, "that will not be enough for five." "Well, then, get two," said the host. When this gentleman died he was the largest holder of bank stock in England. He owned $1,577,000 in different public funds, besides freehold property of $8,000 a year and a balance of $50,000 on account. This large income was allowed to accumulate without attention. On one occasion, when the bankers had in hand a balance of $80,000, they thought it well to acquaint Mr. Cavendish with the fact.

"If it is any trouble to you I will take it out of your hands. Do not come here to plague me." "Not the least trouble to us, sir, but we thought you might like some of it to be invested." "Well, what do you want to do?" "Perhaps you would like half of it invested?" "Do so, do so, and do not come here to bother me or I'll remove it," was the churlish finale of the interview. Cavendish was seventy-eight years of age when he died in 1810, and he had never changed the fashion of his dress for sixty years.—London Graphic.

Truth Telling.

"Pa," said little George when his father attempted to carve the Sunday duck. "I can't tell a lie. I dulled the carving knife."

"My son," said George's father after looking gravely at him for a few minutes, "I am glad to forgive you. Let me explain why I forgive you. It is because you have not tried to deceive me. You have told the truth. Therefore you shall not suffer punishment. I wish to have you realize that it is always best to tell the truth. You see how easy it is. If you had lied to me about having dulled the knife it would have been very hard for you to keep from letting us find out the truth—indeed, we should have found it out sooner or later—and then you would have been punished. Thus you would have been made very unhappy in addition to having been compelled to invent a lot of falsehoods, which would have been very hard work. A liar always creates trouble and sorrow for himself. Remember that. How did you happen to dull the knife?"

"I was trying to whittle off one of the limbs of that tree you had set out in the back yard 'cause it's got a nice prong for a slingshot."

"George, you come into the attic with me! By thunder, I'll teach you not to cut limbs from trees that I've paid good money to have planted!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Patti's Parrot.

Mme. Adellina Patti, staying some years ago in the fall in New York, heard of a wonderful talking parrot, one Jumbo. Forthwith she bought him at the unconscionable price of £200. Once in her possession Jumbo did not open his beak. Every blandishment failed, and at length she gave him up as hopeless. Then one morning the diva awoke with a severe sore throat. She was engaged to sing at the opera on the same night and naturally in great trepidation sent off for a throat specialist. Jumbo, whom she had quite forgotten, remained to all appearance asleep on his perch. As the door opened, however, and the specialist stood on the threshold, before ever Patti could open her lips Jumbo flapped his wings in great excitement. "Oh, doctor," he croaked. "I'm so sick!" That was the first and last time since Mme. Patti became possessed of him that he deigned to speak.—Dundee Advertiser.

Walking in the Rain.

To enjoy walking in the rain you must lay yourself out to enjoy it and start with the intention of getting wet. A compromise is worthless. Perhaps the best place for enjoying it is a wood of deciduous trees, not because they give shelter from it, but because they make so much of it, multiplying with their leaves the sound of the falling drops.

There is always something discomfiting about rain on a bare head, however thirsty the head may be, but a wood seems to give a warm welcome and to pass it on like good news from the higher branches to the lower and from them to the rejoicing earth. Rain, of course, is delicious in the garden, but there, after a drought, you are tempted to watch its action upon each particular plant, and you are in danger of catching a chill.

You must walk in the rain if you are to enjoy it safely, and there is no greater pleasure than to walk through lawns and wood and meadow, and to share the delight of each in a long-desired down-pour.

COUNTY GOSSIP.

There was a killing frost in Hancock county last Monday night, and in low lands crops suffered severely. An Orland farmer said yesterday that this August frost made a frost for every month so far this year, there being one the first week in July in his section.

A new pest has attacked apple trees in the vicinity of Ellsworth. It is of the borer species, but attacks the end of a branch instead of the trunk. The end of the twig dies, and cutting it off it will be found hollowed out on the inside, little beside the outer bark remaining. Following up the hollow by splitting the twig, the grub will be found—a lively worm about three-fourths of an inch long.

WILD LAND TAX LAWS.

Wild Land Owners Must Ask for Their Tax Bill.

Many inquiries are being made at the office of the State treasurer relative to the time of payment of the State, county and township district taxes, and for the information of all concerned the following statement is issued by the department:

The law under which the State and county taxes have been collected in past years has been strictly enforced, but with the addition of the new tax, which is assessed as the Maine forestry district tax, together with new laws governing the collection of all these taxes, a full compliance of the law is made necessary. The law reads in part as follows:

"Wild lands are held to the State for payment of such State and county taxes, with interest thereon at the rate of twenty per cent. to commence upon the taxes for the year for which such assessment is made at the expiration of six months, and upon the taxes for the following year at the expiration of eighteen months from the date of such assessment."

In addition to the above law, when taxes are not paid within the prescribed six months, chapter 218 of the public laws of 1909 provides that owners of lands in the unorganized townships (wild lands, so called) shall be liable to pay such taxes to the State treasurer upon demand. If such taxes are not paid within thirty days after such demands, the treasurer may collect the same, with interest as provided by law, by an action of debt in the name of the State. Such action shall be brought in the supreme judicial court of the county where such unorganized townships are located, and the attorney-general may begin and prosecute such actions when thereto requested by treasurer.

As to the payment of these wild land taxes, many owners do not understand that it is necessary for them to ask for tax bills each year, within six months from the date of assessment (which is usually the latter part of March), and to furnish the State treasurer with a description of the lands on which they desire to pay taxes. This must be done, as all such taxes are assessed against the land in the several townships instead of against the individual owner, and in such a way that it is impossible for the treasurer to render tax bills and send them directly to the proper parties.

The State tax for 1909 was assessed April 2, 1909, and is therefore liable for interest after Oct. 2, 1909.

HAMLIN MEMORIAL.

Interesting Exercises at Paris Hill Last Friday.

The town of Paris honored its most distinguished son, and the State paid its tribute also, last Friday when the memorial tablet erected to the memory of Hannibal Hamlin was unveiled with appropriate ceremony. The date was the centennial anniversary of the birth of Hamlin.

But a short distance from the old mansion where he first saw the light of day, a massive boulder, to which was affixed a tablet with an appropriate inscription, was dedicated to his memory. The citizens of Paris furnished the boulder, and the tablet was given by the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. The tablet of bronze has the following inscription:

HANNIBAL HAMLIN.

Born Near This Spot August 27, 1809.
Speaker Maine House of Representatives
Member of Both Branches of Congress
Governor of Maine.

Vice-President of the United States.
Minister to Spain.

Friend and Counselor of Lincoln.
Honoring the Man, the Patriot, the Statesman,
the Citizens of Paris

And His Companions of the Maine Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States

Place This Memorial August 27, 1909.

The exercises in connection with the unveiling of the stone were under the auspices of the Maine commandery of the Loyal Legion. In the presence of fully 3,000 people, who gathered from all parts of Maine, eloquent tributes to Mr. Hamlin were paid by Governor Bert M. Fernald, Hon. John D. Long, former secretary of the navy and one time governor of Massachusetts, who was born in the neighboring town of Buckfield, Hon. Eugene Hale, United States senator, and Hon. Charles S. Hamlin, of Boston. Gen. Joshua L. Chamberlain, who presided at the exercises, also spoke briefly, and a beautiful poem was read by Rev. Henry P. Forbes, D. D., dean of the theological school of St. Lawrence university, Canton, N. Y.

The widow of Hannibal Hamlin and some other relatives of the great political leader were present, including Gen. Charles Hamlin, of Bangor; Hon. Hannibal E. Hamlin, of Ellsworth; Frank Hamlin, of Chicago; Charles E. Hamlin, of New York; Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, of Brooklyn.

ELLSWORTH MAN PROSPERS.

L. H. Mitchell, Proprietor of Large Bakery at Chicopee, Mass.

The people of Ellsworth are always pleased to know of the prosperity of its former citizens who have established themselves in business or professions in other cities. One of these is L. H. Mitchell, who has a large bakery business at Chicopee, Mass. The following from a Chicopee paper tells the story of this Ellsworth boy's success:

"In 1899 there existed at the corner of Main and Church streets the little bakery of Wardwell & Rice. This bakery was purchased in that year by L. H. Mitchell, who continued to run it till 1891. By close application to business and meeting all the demands of his customers in the production of bread and pastries, he found himself cramped for room. Building a larger building on Bridge street, he removed there, and for sixteen years did an ever-increasing business until again forced to find larger quarters.

"He purchased the large three-story brick buildings, numbered 47 to 55 Main street. Here he has settled down to another term of business prosperity. His plant is run by electricity and is thoroughly up-to-date in all appointments. The large white-tiled ovens with their several openings meet the visitor at the bakery, and about it are the various mixers and utensils for the making of pies, doughnuts, cakes and his justly celebrated rye and butter breads.

"From the time the flour comes from the floor above, no hand touches it till it emerges from the ovens evenly and correctly baked. Large armed racks contain all the baked goods until the time of the loading of the teams commences. Everything about the establishment is so scrupulously clean that the name, 'Sanitary Bakery,' is fittingly applied.

"From four to five thousand barrels of flour are annually used, together with many pounds of lard, butter, fruits and dozens of eggs. Employment is furnished to eighteen men and a dozen wagons and horses are required to distribute the products within the city and through the surrounding towns.

"Visitors are always welcome and a visit will well repay the time taken.

"Mr. Mitchell is a hustler and is absolute master of his business. Courteous in manner, he has won and retained customers without number.

"This establishment is a credit to our city and its growth is proof that a live business man can prosper in Chicopee, as well, if not better, than elsewhere."

DOWN THE BAY.

The Methodist and Baptist Sunday Schools Have Excursion.

The annual excursion of the Methodist and Baptist Sunday schools was held on Monday, and 250 enjoyed the sail down the river to Newbury Neck. The schooner Storm Petrel, Capt. Hiram Treworgy, was the craft in which we embarked, and the tug Little Round Top, Capt. Holt, furnished the motive power.

The day was an ideal one for the occasion, except that the wind was rather bracing which kept the chills reverberating along the spinal columns of those who had come unprepared. But it was pleasant on shore, and the writer is quite sure that everybody ate a dinner and a half in honor of the event.

The beach offered its attraction to the little folks, who went wading, while some of the grown-ups went off on a jaunt or picked blueberries. The event of the afternoon was the ball game between the Clawhammers and the Solid Muldoons, with the result that the Clawhammers got humiliated, although if there had been only one more inning, results might have been different.

Walter Mason was the captain of the Muldoons, and with his brother Philip made up the battery for that team. As a pitcher Walter knows several tricks of the trade, but he couldn't seem to catch that man on first off his guard, and there were several of them. Too bad, but better luck next time perhaps.

The pastor of the Baptist church captained the Clawhammers, and for the second time led his team to inglorious defeat, but it wasn't so bad as it might be. The battery for the unfortunates were Killam and Patten, but the heavy hitters seemed to bunch on the side of the Muldoons.

The hopes of the Clawhammers began to rise in the last inning, as run after run was added to their score, but the tide was retired with the score standing 15 to 12 in favor of the Solid Muldoons, and the prize—a peck of peanuts—fell to them. But what was a peck among so many?

It is not known whether the umpire got any peanuts or not. By the way, his name was Charlie Jones, and he did the best he could, or said he did. At any rate his occupation did not seem to endanger his life, and while some of his judgments were a little hard there was no fussing, and even the fellows who got beaten had a good time.

The younger boys had a game after the older fellows finished, Charles Dresser leading one side and Ballou Phillips the other. Dresser's team won, and the prize—three dozen suckers—soon went the way of all the earth.

The run home was made in two hours with the moon smiling on us, so as to give everybody his (or her) money's worth.

Ridge," with "The Belle of Richmond," "Way Out West," "The Slaves of Russia," "Foggy Ferry," and the "White Caps" to follow.

Miss Mairie Cecil and Harden Klark, who are at the head of the company, are favorites here, as their work in the past has commended itself to all lovers of dramatic art.

Great care has been exercised in selecting the supporting company this season. The specialties include Mairie Cecil, song and dances; Frank Clayton, comedian, vocalist and musician; A. E. Tenney, comedy juggler and club manipulator; Pickert and Whipple, international dancers, and Schreiber Bros. and Klark and Urban, the four musical monarchs.

Monday evening will be ladies' night, special reduced rate coupons being issued for that night.

KEITH'S THEATRE, BOSTON.

That baseball is the American game was never better demonstrated than one afternoon recently in New York, when Cecil Lean, who had long been the star of the Kirke La Salle company, sat on the back of a davenport, in his shirt-sleeves and his coat over his arm, and sang a song called "The Fan." Before the chorus was finished crowded houses were shouting like wild. Lean had caught the spirit of the game, and every move he made was a picture. He woke up next morning to find himself the most talked-about comedian in New York. Mr. Lean will be the star attraction at Keith's next week, coming with Florence Holbrook.

Another big feature will be Fred Lindsay, the whip expert who has done such startling things as to cut the ashes off the end of a cigar with a lasso. Violet Black and company will be seen in a sketch; Byron and Langdon will appear in "The Dude Detective." The Three Bohemians are European minstrels, and the great Weston is the famous character impersonator. Others are Cook and Sylvia in songs and dances, and the Pederson brothers, the comedy aerial artists.

WATCH THE SCORE.

Important Points in the Fascinating Game of Bridge Whist.

Ask any good bridge player, what is the most important factor in winning a rubber, and his reply would be the necessity of watching the score. For this reason particular attention is paid in this column to the state of the score in relation to the declaration as well as to the various strategies which arise in the course of play.

At the very beginning of the game the dealer in declaring trump must be guided by the risk which the score requires him to assume. Perhaps the score is desperate, and he must declare no trump in the hope that his partner will hold the cards necessary to help him out. Take an occasion when the adversaries have twenty to your nothing, and have also won the first game on the rubber, the odds in favor of their winning the rubber on their own deal are so great that a risky no trump is warranted. It should always be remembered in addition to this, that when a risky no trump is advantageous, it is safer to make it as an original declaration rather than to force the dealer's partner to make it from the hand where every weakness is exposed.

The decided percentage in favor of the dealer who plays two hands is materially increased when the declaration is made by him. He is able to false card, thus concealing his strength. He is frequently credited with false carding when he plays his lone ace. If his combined hands are weak in one of the red suits, the assumption that he will false card helps to conceal the weak state of his own hand in relation to that suit. On the contrary, if by passing the make to dummy he confesses his own weakness, the adversaries will find it much easier to estimate the combined weakness of both hands and to finesse against it.

When the adversaries are a game in, the odds that they win the rubber are three to one. This fact should be taken into consideration when making the declaration. If on the rubber game the adversaries are twenty to your nothing, the odds are greatly in favor of their winning on their deal if you do not win on yours then and there. For these reasons the make should be one upon which you can win if possible, not the odd trick, but sufficient points to score the game. In many cases a good heart make will win the game. Occasionally a sound diamond make will win the game from a zero score. At no trump three odd tricks are needed to win the game, it takes four at hearts and five at diamonds.

For these reasons, with an adverse score, your first thought should be whether you dare declare no trump, next comes hearts and then diamonds, which should not be named unless their length and strength are so great as to insure the bringing in of any winning cards which dummy may hold. When the score stands in your favor you are governed by entirely different considerations in naming the trump. Your chief object should be to hold the advantage you already have, therefore, an original black make with a reasonable assurance of winning the game is better bridge than a risky no trump or a weak red make.

When the adversaries stand twenty-four to your nothing on the first game your declaration should be conservative. It is almost as important for you to prevent them from winning on your first deal as it is for you to win yourself. If when they deal they are a game in, the odds in favor of their winning the rubber are greatly increased. Unless you can see the odd trick with reasonable aid from your partner at either a no trump or red a black make is safest. This does not mean that a black make should frequently be made by the dealer, but if, when he passes the make, his partner knows that he has considered the score before so doing, the reasoning upon which the declaration is finally based will be much simplified and the make more satisfactory.

Fire at Cape Rosier.

CAPE ROSIER, Aug. 30 (special)—The dwelling-house of William Counce was totally destroyed by fire this forenoon. A part of the furniture was saved. The loss is about $1,000; insurance $600. Hard work on the part of neighbors, who promptly formed a bucket brigade, saved the nearby buildings.

Besides rendering homeless the family, which consists of wife and two children, this fire throws on to the charity of this neighborhood the Misses Dyer, two aged and infirm maiden sisters, who lost practically all their belongings.

Mr. Counce, who is employed on a yacht at Dark Harbor, was away at the time of the fire, but arrived home to-night. This fire is the second stroke of hard luck he has had this season, his launch having been stolen at Camden last June.

WONDERFUL CLOCK.

One Man's Life Work on View in New York City.

At the hotel St. Regis in New York, a unique and remarkable clock is exhibited in the main drawing room of the hotel. The clock was made in a little Ohio town by a crippled workman, who spent four years in its construction and whose only tools were a scroll saw, a jackknife and a file.

Manager Gus R. Schmidt, of the St. Regis, who heard of the clock in the West, where he inspected it, said:

"The clock is a wonder. It is twelve feet four inches high, four feet four inches wide and twenty-nine inches deep. One large dial gives the standard time, while directly beneath it is a dial which shows the changes of the moon and gives the government weather indications for twenty-four hours in advance.

"By watching the clock one sees handsome pictures of the ships in the United States navy pass behind a glass. The history of Christ is shown from nativity to the ascension by pictures painted by the maker.

"An interesting feature of the clock is a miniature Niagara falls, with real water, the color of which appears to change. Just below are an electric fountain and an arch. Flare appear on staffs in front of the dial and indicate the kind of weather expected twenty-four hours in advance. The weather reports are produced by a thermometer, a barometer, a hydrometer, a spirit level and compass arranged on the front of the clock.

"The front of the clock is lighted by fifty small electric lights, thirty-five of which are arranged around the Niagara falls and electric arch. The history of the United States from the landing of Columbus to the present time is shown by ninety-six paintings, attached to a ribbon 108 feet long which is moved by electricity. When the clock strikes the hour the figures of Uncle Sam and the Goddess of Liberty pass out of an electric elevator on one side, down a stairway, around the base of the miniature catenoid and electric fountain to the other side, where they ascend another stairway and enter another elevator. A minute after the hour strikes fifty lights appear around the dial, and a musical attachment is brought into play, sending forth delightful airs. At the half hour the cathedral gong strikes once, and the musical attachment is started again.

"An illuminated picture on one side of the dial shows Washington crossing the Delaware with his army. Three boats are portrayed, with Washington standing in the first one. This scene is repeated every hour and forty minutes. Other illuminated pictures, which appear periodically, show the old battleship Maine both before and after the explosion in Havana harbor. "On the back of the clock is displayed the Lord's Prayer, inscribed with 312 pieces of wood. Pictures of American poets, musicians and the presidents also appear on the back. All of these portraits are in motion and travel at the rate of twenty-five feet a minute. Pictures of Presidents Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley are shown, and at the hour of their death a light appears on the face of the clock, while a phonograph announces the occasion.

"The face of the clock contains a piece of wood from every state and territory in the Union, including the island possessions, and it took three years for the maker of the clock to collect them.

"All the mechanism for running the clock is in the base and includes 640 feet of electric wire and 412 electrical connections. The current is obtained from an ordinary electric light connection."

Humanity.

It's the bad that's in the best of us! Makes the saint so like the rest of us! It's the good in the darkest-crust of us! Redeems and saves the worst of us! It's the muddle of good and badness, It's the tangle of tears and gladness, It's the lunacy linked with sanity That make and mar humanity.

A young lady named Helper was married to a man named Lord in a Western Kansas town, and all the newspapers out that way headed the story, "Lord Helper."

THE PREDICAMENT OF ANGLIN, SENIOR.

His Own Love Affair and That of His College Chum.

By HENRIETTA G. ROBINSON.
[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Halfway down the steps of the fraternity house Anglin turned and went thoughtfully back to the room that he shared with Beresford.

"You're dead sure you'll not change your mind and come?" queried Anglin. Beresford, with a volume open on his knee and a pipe gripped between his teeth, nodded emphatically.

"Then I suppose you don't mind if I take your skates? They're sharper than mine."

"Take them, of course."

But when Fred Anglin had slung the skates over his shoulder and buttoned on his thick gloves he still lingered. It seemed as though this were not what he had come back to say after all.

"I ought to tell you, Tom—we've been such pals right along—that I'm going to put my fate to the test to-night. The Tremaine girls will be at the skating party. And tonight I intend to speak to Gerla."

Beresford jumped up and wrung his friend's hand enthusiastically.

"Good for you!" he cried. "Go in and win! As long as it isn't Geraldine I can endure the thought of your happiness if she says yes. I'll be able to listen to your raptures without experiencing a perfectly legitimate desire to sling you through the window."

"Thanks, old man," laughed Anglin, adding: "Lucky we've not set out to respect her on the same sister. Now, I'm blessed if I understand your infatuation for Geraldine. But, as long as you are her captive, why do you hold back? You are older than I, and—"

Beresford shook his head with a grim smile.

"It isn't that. You've a wealthy father and a settled income. I've only enough to pull me through this final year. When I get my diploma—well, I shan't have much more, in a material line. I don't dare ask Geraldine to wait until I have attained—achieved—arrived. It wouldn't be fair to her."

"It would—her promise—be a tremendous incentive to you!"

"Oh, I know that. But she must be considered first."

There was another handclasp, a firm and silent one. Anglin swung away for the tramp into the country, where the skaters were to assemble at Pilgrim's pond.

The star studded night closed down early. When Anglin reached the appointed place the amusement of the evening was already in full swing. The expanse of ice was clean swept and of an opaque, turquoise tint. Strings of Chinese lanterns dangled in the multi-hued propinquity from bare tree to tree and from pole to pole. In a declivity, semi-shaded by a fly tent, a royal fire blazed and crackled. In and out, around and about, in dullness under the sullen stars or in red relief where the flambeaux, set at regular intervals, flared fantastically, sped and flashed the dark figures of the skaters.

Fred Anglin got on his skates as quickly as possible and started out across the frozen pond. Many turned to look after the athletic young figure circling through their midst with such easy, swallowlike grace of motion.

But he noticed neither their presence nor their admiration. He was looking for one particular little figure. She would wear a short skating costume of blue velvet, the Russian blouse, which was girt with heavy cords that swung backward when she raced. The high peaked cap would make a penthouse over a mass of fair curls and mischievous eyes, bluer than any violets that ever mocked the blueness of a June time sky. And—

"There she is!" he said suddenly to himself.

Alone in the shadow of the wigwam shaped refreshment tent, apparently fancying herself unobserved, a slender young form was whirling on heel and toe, cutting a pattern of intricate tracery on the ice.

"Come with me," he cried as he dashed to her side. He held out his hands, crossed at the wrists in the old approved carry-the-lady-out-of-town style.

Together they swung gracefully down the strip of gleaming ice which was least covered.

holding her hands tight pressed to his side, did not escape the girl's alert consciousness. But she answered in unsteady accents. There were trepidation in her tone and dread, the dread of a sweet girl's experiences who hates to give pain.

"I'm sorry—sorry—sorry than I've ever been about anything in all my life," she began. "I—I did not dream it was I for whom you—cared. Had I done so I never would have permitted you to say—this."

As one stunned he relaxed slightly his grip on her fingers, while he accelerated their speed.

"Don't worry!" he answered bravely. "I must have been awfully stupid to have fancied—you are sure you're quite warm enough? We are almost at the tent now. I'd better bring you some hot coffee, Gerla."

"They were at the tent. Yellow streaks of light from its canvas apertures were glinting out at them. The girl came to a standstill, her hand still on her companion's arm.

"What was that you said?" she asked sharply.

"Gerla, I suppose I should have said Miss Tremaine," and then, as she did not at once reply, he wheeled swiftly and confronted her.

She had dashed back the peaked hood of her skating coat. He saw a little, dark, mignonne face looking up at him in the wavering amber light—a face that looked uncertain as to whether it ought to break into smiles or quiver into tears—the face of Gerla's twin.

"Geraldine!" he exclaimed as he fell back in astonishment.

"It was her turn to be amazed. 'Why, did you think it was Gerla?' she cried. 'Sure,' he added, with enthusiastic relief. And then when her merry peal of laughter had died away he queried, 'But how do you happen to be wearing Gerla's costume?'

She laughed again—a relieved sort of merriment that made Anglin think suddenly of his roommate.

"Oh, that's what—what fooled you, was it? Why, we changed them just for fun. But is Tom?"—she flushed furiously at her slip of names—"I mean if Gerla had thought?"

"What?" exclaimed Anglin ambiguously. "Geraldine, do you think?"

"Oh, as to Gerla," she broke in, "she is coming back of you. Ask her yourself. And she skated swiftly away."

The next instant Anglin was facing a girl in a suit of wine colored velvet. The peaked cap was drawn high over tousled golden curls and eyes of deep blue.

"How you stare!" she laughed. "Am I an uncanny spirit?"

"I've proposed to one girl tonight," he confessed as he whisked away to the waltz the band was playing, "and I don't want to make a similar mistake again, for she was not the girl at all whom I meant to ask to marry me!"

"Are you quite sure you're not mistaken now?" she asked quizzically.

"Quite!" he assured her. "But I would like positive proof—and corroboration!"

And both Fred Anglin succeeded in securing before he strode home to ask Tom for congratulations and to hearten him with the fondest of hopes.

A Transformation Scene.
That great statesman William Pitt, upon whose word so many tremendous issues hung, was in the habit of retiring to his country house for seasons of relaxation. There he dropped his character of august prime minister and became for the time a romping school-boy. One day he had been skylarking with his young friends. He rushed into every fray with the ardor of the youngest present. When the fun was most furious a servant entered the room and informed the prime minister, who was coatless and embellished with burnt cork, that Lords Hawkesbury and Castlereagh had arrived from London on important business. "Ask them to wait," remarked Pitt and proceeded with the game. When that was finished Pitt said that he must attend to two noble lords and retired to his dressing room to repair damages. Presently he returned, and a remarkable transformation took place. Standing in the middle of the room, the prime minister drew himself up to full height of unapproachable dignity. To the astonishment of the young people present the two lords came into the room almost on their hands and knees and with abject obsequiousness explained the object of their visit. Mr. Pitt listened with an air of distant hauteur and with a sentence or two dismissed his noble guests.—Westminster Review.

A Train Load of Monkeys.
A plague of monkeys some years ago sorely troubled the officials at a small station on the Saran railway, in northwest India, says the Bombay Gazette. Trucks full of grain for export were often stored up in the station, and the monkeys came down in large numbers from a neighboring grove to help themselves to the grain, picking holes in the tarpaulin roof of the wagons. The officials were weary of dealing with the thieves, who daily grew bolder, till an ingenious guard hit upon a stratagem. For several days sweets and fruits were put on the roofs of the wagons, with the result that the whole of the monkey colony were attracted to the spot and soon became perfectly indifferent to man. One morning when they were all busily feeding an engine was stealthily attached to the wagons, and suddenly the train moved off. The monkeys were quite scared and made no attempt to escape, sitting crouched together till the train had gone several miles and stopped at the jungle. They wanted no hint to leave. Every monkey leaped down howling and fled into the jungle, whence none ever returned to trouble the railway.

BAR HARBOR.

The western end of Bar island, forty acres in all, has been purchased by Edward T. Stotesbury, head of the firm of Drexel & Co., Philadelphia, the sale being made through the agency of Edward B. Mears. This is the biggest land transaction that has ever been consummated in Bar Harbor. The price paid, it is understood, was well over $100,000. The property was owned by Charles B. Pineo and wife and Milton B. Rodick. The purchase will doubtless put an end to the bridge discussion, and the injunction proceedings now pending in the United States district court. Mr. Stotesbury has not made this purchase with the idea of carving the property into lots and disposing of them to the highest bidders. It will comprise one grand estate, and although it has not been definitely decided yet, the probability is that within two years the western end of the island will be one of the most magnificent summer estates on the eastern coast.

Frank Wooster, of Bar Harbor, supplied for Rev. C. E. Bromley Sunday, favorably impressing his hearers. District Superintendent H. B. Haskell will occupy the pulpit next Sunday.

John D. Perkins and family attended the Wilbur reunion at Eastbrook Saturday. It was Mrs. Perkins' first drive for months, she having been confined to her home with relatives since early spring.

Quantities of sweet peas and graceful ferns lent fragrance and beauty to surroundings at the home of Theodore Bragdon and wife, Aug. 20, when their granddaughter, Miss Lela Gordon, gave a dinner to a party of her young friends, and her engagement to Curtis Springer was announced. Both young people are held in high esteem and have the good wishes of their many friends.

The list of teachers for fall terms of school follows: High school—Maurice C. Fess, North Anson, principal; Miss E. Laverne Whitten, Belfast, assistant. East Franklin grammar, Mrs. Hattie L. Lufkin, Stearns; primary, Miss Edna Donnell. Ryefield—grammar, Miss Eva B. Springer; primary, Miss Daisy Gordon. Tracy district, Miss Katie S. Bunker. Franklin Centre—grammar, Miss Lillian V. Gray, Brewer; primary, Miss Lettie A. Smith. Beechland—Miss Delle Bragdon. West Franklin—grammar, Harry Patten, Sullivan; primary to be supplied. Pupils in South Bay, Georges Pond and Egypt districts will be conveyed to Sullivan, North Franklin and West Franklin. Very few changes have been made in the teaching force, and from the good work done last spring it can be inferred that the results will be most satisfactory this fall. District schools open Sept. 7, and the high school the third week in September, it is hoped.

Deeds, Not Words

Ellsworth People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills, for Ellsworth kidney sufferers, have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Ellsworth people who have been cured to stay cured.

Arthur L. Frazier, of Hancock St., Ellsworth, Me., says: "Since publicly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills in 1905, I have had no occasion to use a kidney remedy. Time has proven the wonderful benefit I derived from Doan's Kidney Pills to be lasting, and in all other cases where Doan's Kidney Pills have been used on my recommendation, relief has followed. I suffered a great deal from backache, and after a hard day's work I could not sit in a chair for any length of time. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Moore's drug store, gave me relief, and I continued taking the remedy until all traces of my trouble had disappeared."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

tions on the death of Freeman Butler, president. Readings were by Mrs. Henry Butler, Mrs. Carrie Jellison, Master Alvin Jellison, and Mrs. Marietta Dyer.

Ice-cream and lemonade were served by Mrs. Butler and Mr. and Mrs. Jellison. An attraction to many was the baseball game between the Eastbrook and Waltham teams. Score 20 to 2 in favor of Eastbrook. Resolutions were passed expressing regard for the character of their deceased president, Freeman Butler, and extending sympathy to the immediate relatives.

Many people delude themselves by saying "it will wear away," when they notice symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble. This is a mistake. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy, and stop the drain on the vitality. It cures backache, rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble, and makes every trace of pain, weakness, and urinary trouble disappear. G. A. PARCER.

A PRIVATE INSANE ASYLUM.

[Copyright, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.]

Dr. Treat's private insane asylum, situated nine miles from the city, had been in existence for ten years when the first breath of suspicion was raised against it. The editor of the Daily Argus was a personal friend of the doctor. He regarded it as one of the model institutions of the country and had time and again commended it in the most favorable terms.

One day a young woman escaped and told such tales as led to an investigation. The trick of getting a reporter into a prison or an asylum for a few weeks to report on the condition of affairs was a new thing then, though old enough now. On the city staff of the Argus was a man named Green. He suggested the plot that was carried out. He was to be sent to Dr. Treat's asylum for treatment. The editor took up the idea not because he doubted the doctor, but from a newspaper standpoint. Green would find nothing to criticize during his stay, but his articles on life in an insane asylum would make good reading. It would be a stroke of newspaper enterprise to show that the Argus was wide awake. The details of the plot were worked out, and then Green suddenly disappeared. It was learned from the editor afterward that his friends had him incarcerated in the asylum as a "troublesome person." In plain English that meant that he stood between somebody and property. Two doctors were found to certify to the fact that he was "harmlessly insane." That meant he was in the way, but not exactly going to chop up people with an ax. His examination by these doctors lasted less than half an hour.

The editor continued to visit the doctor's retreat and to assure him that he believed in his integrity, but each time he went out there he managed to secure a brief interview with Green. In fact, he was handed a written report of what had been seen and heard. Why none of these reports—twelve in all—were never published will be explained later. Green had not gone to the asylum to dissemble. He announced on his arrival that he was perfectly sane, and he continued to talk and act like any sane man.

For the first three days he was well treated. Then he was called into the doctor's office and told that if he continued to play the hypocrite he would bring down punishment on himself. The doctor meant by that that if Green still continued to act like a sane man he might expect trouble. He refused to make any change and was placed in a dark cell for three days. As he was still rational when he came out, one of the keepers knocked him down with a club.

That was the beginning of the man's persecution. He could have been released at any time by tipping the wink to the editor, but he had determined to make his investigation a thorough one. One of the punishments was being tied down on a cot, face upward, and a dish of water suspended from the ceiling in such a manner that a single drop struck his face every second. At the end of an hour each drop seemed to have the force of a sledge hammer. Another was to tickle the soles of his feet until he went into hysterics. There was a ferocious great hound at the asylum, the property of one of the attendants. Green and other patients would be tied in a chair and the dog tied to a ring in the wall and left together for half an hour. The rope on the dog would be tied so that he could get his teeth within an inch of his victim's legs. On several occasions the rope stretched and enabled him to inflict terrible bites. Green concealed pencil and paper and managed to write of these things and pass them to the editor. After a month had passed he had made a good case against the doctor and was told to chop it off there. This he refused to do. He wanted to get the whole of it down to the last detail.

When he refused to play insane to please the doctor, who must have known that he was a perfectly sane man, Green was starved for two days at a time, and the punishments numbered a score. One of the worst was heading him up in a barrel and rolling him around the back yard for half an hour at a time. The food he described as not fit for dogs, though the Argus, to oblige the doctor, had published a bill of fare fit for wealthy people to sit down to. Sane or insane, every patient had a program to go through with when visitors were being shown through the place. They must speak of the doctor as God and bless him for his goodness. If asked what they had to eat they must mention a list of twelve articles. To fail in these things meant a brutal beating. The editor could see at each weekly visit how Green was failing, and at last a certain day was set for the exposure and his release. Before that date came word was received that he had made his escape. Just after the word came he entered the office and walked over to his desk without speaking to any one. There he sat for half an hour with his head in his hands, and when the city staff finally gathered around him he lifted his head and began to babble like a child. He was clean gone daft, and though he lived on for three years, his reason never returned.

The next day the asylum was mobbed, and the doctor had to fly for his life. The Argus had said that he was a good man and a merciful man and that his enemies had done him injustice. The Argus had a scoop right at hand, but it was never published. The editor couldn't see his way clear to eating his own words. M. QUAD.

CHORAL SOCIETY CONCERT.

The first concert of the recently organized Bluehill choral society was given at the town hall last Friday evening, and was an unqualified success in every respect. The performers were greeted by an enthusiastic and appreciative audience which completely filled the hall.

The getting together of a chorus of fifty or sixty voices in a village no larger than Bluehill is further evidence of the contention that there is no end of musical talent outside the big cities and larger towns—that, indeed, the "woods are full of it," the difficulty usually being the lack of someone to develop it. The one thing usually lacking Bluehill has found in Mr. Bestelmann, an enthusiast, as well as a musician, who has been playing this summer with the Kneisel quartette.

Both are to be congratulated—the society on securing the services of so able and distinguished a leader; the leader on the splendid performance given. Of the entire chorus all were "home folks" except four—two men and two women.
The work of the chorus alone was well worth the price, but to it was added vocal and instrumental music, thus making the evening one of rare enjoyment.

The following words of appreciation are sent THE AMERICAN for publication: "The Bluehill choral society, which gave its first concert on the evening of August 27, greatly appreciates the assistance so kindly rendered by Mrs. Albert Walsh, soprano; Llova Orenstein, pianist; Louis Bestelmann, violinist; and Walter Kaubisch, accompanist; also Messrs. Gardner, Bernstein, Jacobson, Bresskin, and Gustoff, of the orchestra. The services of Mr. Bestelmann, the conductor, who organized the society, have been of the highest value, and all its members are deeply grateful to him.

"The thanks of the society are cordially given to Thomas Tapper, who has taken a deep interest in its formation, and who even now is assisting Mr. Bestelmann in making plans for its future work. Mr. Tapper has also very generously offered to furnish the society with all the music required. The interest and kindness of the musical people who make Bluehill their summer home are certainly a great incentive to the society to do the best possible work, and it is very thankful for and appreciative of this kindness and interest."

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

It is with feelings of sadness that your committee accept the duty assigned them and present a brief tribute to the memory of our sister, Ella M. Hinckley.
Resolved, That Mountain Rebeck lodge has lost an esteemed member, and we wish to express our deep appreciation of her faithfulness and high character; and the memory of her cheerful presence, gentle dignity and willingness, will linger long to inspire us to do better work, and to exemplify in our living the principles of our order.

Resolved, That we extend our warmest sympathy to the bereaved husband and children, trusting their hearts are comforted in the thought that their loved one is safe in her beautiful new home.

"Her hands are folded together, And the word on her lip is 'Rest.' And yet it looks like a welcome, For her work is compassed and done, All things are seemingly ready, And her summer is just begun. It is we who may not cross over, Only with song and prayer, A little way into the glory we may reach, As we leave her there. But we cannot think of her idle, She must be a home-maker still, God giveth that work to the angels Who attend the task full; And somewhere yet in the hills of the country that hath no pain, She will watch in her beautiful doorway To bid us welcome again."

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, a copy of these resolutions be placed upon our records, a copy presented to the family of our bereaved sister, and copies sent to THE AMERICAN and Bangor News for publication.

The burning of the confectionery store owned by Edward F. Teague Tuesday of last week caused much excitement, but the effective hosepipe service and lack of wind prevented a spread of the flames. This little building, formerly the Bee store, has served its purpose for a quarter of a century, and much regret is felt over its destruction. It was partially insured.

Before leaving her cottage here, Miss Mary Snow sent to the public library twenty books, for which the library association extends thanks. Mrs. Lemont, the librarian, has also donated several books, and Miss Lee, a hotel guest, has remembered the library with books as she has often done in the past. These, with the sixty-five newly-purchased books, make nearly 100 added to the present season.

Robertson, U. S. DISPENSATORY

Describes the Principal Ingredients of Peruna.

Are we claiming too much for Peruna when we claim it to be an effective remedy for chronic catarrh? Have we abundant proof that Peruna is in reality such a catarrh remedy? Let us see what the United States Dispensatory says of the principal ingredients of Peruna.

Take, for instance, the ingredient hydrastis canadensis, or golden seal. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrhal jaundice (catarrh of the liver), and in diseased mucous membranes of the pelvic organs. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, corydalis formosa, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic. It is used as a treatment for chronic constitutional diseases and scrofula.

Cedron seeds is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. The seeds are to be found in very few drug stores. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a substitute for quinine.

These are not all of the medicinal ingredients Peruna contains. Suffice it to say that it is a compound of herbal remedies, each one of which has, from time to time, been recommended by physicians of all schools, for different catarrhal conditions.

If you want to know what the people say send to us for a free book of testimonials of what the people think of Peruna as a catarrh remedy. After all has been said, the best evidence for or against any remedy is the testimony of those who have tried it.

ball game were enjoyed. The climax was reached in the game of ball between the Boston and Portland girls. Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Not a Drop of Alcohol

What is a "tonic"? A medicine that increases the strength or tone of the whole system. What is an "alterative"? A medicine that alters or changes unhealthy action to healthy action. Name the best "tonic and alterative"? Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only Sarsaparilla entirely free from alcohol. Ask your own doctor all about it. Never take a medicine doctors cannot endorse. J.C.
