CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 17, 1910. Topic.—The Christian use of letter writ-ng.—Pa. xiv. 1; I John it, 13-15. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Writing is one of the most useful and practical of all the arts that have been invented by man and for the use of man. It is also most interesting to go back into the early centuries and study the earliest forms of communieations by man in writing, the earliest alphabets and the materials upon which writing was first done and the progress made until we have reached the highest point in this important and useful art. The word alphabet comes from the union of the first two letters of the Greek alphabet "alpha" and "heta" In all about 200 alphabets are known, fifty of which are in actual use. There are various kinds of materials upon which writing has been done, but the chief ones upon which writing has come down to us are stone, clay, metal, papyrus, wood, leather, wax tablets, parchment and paper. I imagine that all writing started with hieroglyphics upon stones, such as the American Indians used on stones and on trees. Egyptian script began on stone, and the Babylonians first used clay tablets with cuneiform writing. The writing was done in soft clay tablets and then allowed to harden in the sun or kiln baked. Writing on papyrus by the priests was done in Egypt as well as writing on stone. Leather was used by the Jews, and when it was extra fine-the hides of young animals-and could be written on both sides it was called parchment, and this parchment was used for the sacred writings and was rolled up in a scroll. Vellum is a still finer kind of parchment. For earliest practical uses the Greeks and Romans used a wooden tablet covered with a coating of fine war. This was written upon by a piece of metal, wood or ivory. The opposite end was a palette and was used to erase the wax or to make it smooth. Paper made of vegetable fiber or rags is supposed to have been first invented by the Chinese. In the ninth century it was introduced into Europe by the Arabians, and in the thirteenth century it was used in France for deeds and in the fifteenth for books. Here we see an incident of God's providence. The printing press was discovered. Printing by movable types was invented by a German about the middle of the fifteenth century. But it would have been useless had not paper been invented and just introduced into

Among the multitudinous uses of letter writing to Christians it has been in valuable. This fact is practically demonstrated in the use of letter writing by the apostles to churches, to individnals and the Christians of the world. Moreover, Christ after His ascension indited to the Apostle John letters for each one of seven churches of Asia Minor. John declares in his first epistle that he is writing to three classes of readers, fathers, young men and the children, covering the three general periods of life, childhood, youth and ticular message. In our letter writing as Christians we should have a partic ular object in view, and there many especial occasions suitable for Christian letter writing: (1) To comfort the sick. Many are timid and cannot visit the sick. In many cases they cannot be seen. In either case a letter, wever brief, of comfort and cheer will be greatly appreciated, and any one can take the time to write such a letter. (2) To comfort the bereaved. Much letter writing of this kind is done by friends, but our correspond ence of this character could be extended to the humble classes, who seldom receive such letters. (3) In winning souls for Christ letter writing may be made very useful. A written word may have great weight under the blessing of God when you cannot speak to those in whom you are interested. (4) An invitation by letter inviting non-churchgoers to come to church ome church organization through or some church organization through which they may be saved. Write at least one letter a week to some one of these classes of people and you will soon be writing many more, seeing the usefulness of them and the joy you will experience in helping others. Testimony to Christian Endeaver. Dr. Francis E. Clark has had several kind letters from former President Roosevelt on the Christian Endeavor society. Here is one:

Christian Endeavor stands pre-emisent among the organizations which of true citizenship—that is, for the cultivation not only of a high standard of civic and social righteousness, but for the strength, courage and comme sense necessary for living up to such a standard."

Growing Gifts.

Statistics are sometimes instructive. For example, the gifts of Christian Endeavorers to the foreign work of the Disciples in 1890 were $212. 1894 the amount had swelled to $2,286. nated by 251 societies. In 1900 only societies gave anything, the total being $2.956. By 1905 no fewer than 800 societies took part, giving $10.873. Last year 1.104 societies contributed $15,040. This does not look like a weakening of the Christian Endeavor

-Charles W. Scarff. -Selected by Aunt Emma

Dear M. B. Friends:

I have no remembrance of seeing the oftrepeated adage, which is the title of this week's poem, set to rhyme before. I wonder who knows what wise person put in those five words the test of a person's character. It is a new version of the scriptural "By their fruits ye shall know them", that is all.

When we look for fruit and find "only leaves", may we consider the leaves as words? And if so, they have their uses. Their beauty gives us pleasure, their shade gives us comfort and rest; the birds sing a song of gratitude as they alight in their leafy retreats. Words of cheer, words of comfort, words of kindness-let us have them everywhere as many as there are leaves on the trees-but let there also be the helping hand, the ready assistance the thoughtful deed when these are

Aunt Emma, I found to-day among some clippings you sent, the Sunshine story Aunt Sue furnished a week or two

PASADENA, CAL., June 15, 1910.

Dear Aunt Madge:
As my other half is in San Franciso or the Yosemite valley, I am not sure which just now, I thought I would take this afternoon drive out "all by my lonely". So I "geared" up the family mare right away after dinner informing our housekeeper that I might not get back home till after 6.

I am writing this after my return, so will use the past tense. I drove out of the city westward, first climbing an easy grade to and passed the first reservoir ever built in what is now Pasadena — then it was the "Indian colony". Then, sinking down in the valley, I crossed the Arroyo Saco bridges, then a hard climb out on the other side and go through a notch in a range of hills (smal mountains). Then, for the most part of the next six miles, over hills and through valleys rusty, golf grounds extensive, park in the making on a grand scale; a pretty village of about three years of age, country with scattering homes, in valley and hilitop, brown acres of hillsides, frost proof, planted to tomatoes, orchards of ripe apricots, long Veal: rows of olive tree bordering roadsides, orange and lemon orchards, water plant with gasoline engine at work, puffing trees in orchard, with improvements better ing as I approached the outskirts of Glendale, growing better and better through the new city-streets graded, oiled and sanded, with

This, so far, had been a pleasant drive, but I had decided to go on, changing my course to southerly, on Central avenue, down the valley through Tropico towards Los Angeles However, I took the first road eastward, running round a bunch of hills, through Verdugo canyon, headed northward, and if I had cross my first road westward; but I turned eastward again through a tract of rich valley land just opened up to settlers, streets being graded and oiled. This is a big ranch being cut up into town ots, I presume 50x50 feet. Many pretty cot tages and bungalows are already in course of construction; and, think of it, a few years ago this was grazing land, worth only a small price per acre; now it will bring thousands, probably. Thirty-five years ago, or little more, bandits and desperadoes played hide-and-seek among these hills and valleys.

About five years ago I drove through this section and found it to be just about the same waste of acres as it was thirty-three years ago on my coming to Los Angeles county Now, what a change! And this may help to give you some idea of how rapidly our south ern California is being settled up. It is flood-tide coming in from the east. The rest of my drive lay through Garvanza, South Pasadena and southern portion of Pasadena proper. well paid for my mare's exercise. SUSAN.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Cover a bowl of starch as soon as it is made, and no crust will form.

If the sink gets greasy, a litte paraffine, well rubbed in, will make it beautifully clean-Zinc pails and tins, if cleaned with paraffine, will look as good as new.

If anything boils over on your stove and begins to smoke and cause an unpleasant odor, throw a handful of sait on it. This quite removes the objectionable smelt.

Fish needs to be thoroughly seasoned Twelve minutes to the pound is the rule for baking. When possible rub in coarse sait on both the inside and outside of the fish and allow it to stand for some time. Then wash well and wipe dry before baking.

To clean the rubber roller of your wringe use ammonia in the proportion of one tea-spoonful to a cupful of water. Wipe the rollers with this when they are stained. Do not think of using paraffine as some housekeepers do, as in time it will rot the roller.

Most of these articles will be reprinted from leaflets issued by the bureau of reprinted from leaners issued by the bareas, biological survey, department of sgriculture, or by the National Association of Audubon societies, and will be authoritative. They will be of interest not only to bird lovers, but of educational value to farmers, to whom the protection of many species of birds is of the greatest importance

The Crow.

By F. E. L. Bcal, B. S., assistant in charge economic ornithology, biological survey U. S. department of agriculture.

There are few birds so well known as he common crow. Unlike most other species, he does not seem to decrease in numbers as the country becomes more densely populated. The crow is com-monly regarded as a blackleg and a thief. Without the dash and brilliancy of the jay or the bold savagery of the hawk, he is accused of doing more mischief than either. That he does pull up sprouting corn, destroy chickens and rob the nests of small birds, has been repeatedly proved. Nor are these all of his sins. He is known to eat frogs, toads, salamanders and some small snakes, all parmiese creatures that do some good by eating inects. With so many charges against him, it may be well to show why he should not be utterly condemned.

The examination of a large number of stomacha shows that the hird's-nesting habit, as in the case of the jay, is not so universal as has been supposed. Neither are many toads and frogs eaten. As frogs are of no great practical value, their destruction is not a serious matter; but toads are very useful, and their consumption, so far as it goes, must be counted against the crow. Turtles, crayfishes and nails, of which he eats quite a number, may be considered neutral, while mice may be counted to his credit.

In his insect food, however, the crow makes amends for sins in the rest of his dietary, although even here the first item is against him. Predaceous beetles are esten in some numbers throughout the season, but the number is not great. May beetles, "dor-bugs," or June bugs, and others of the same family, constitute the principal food during spring and early summer, and are fed to the young in quantities. Other beetles, nearly all of a noxious character, are eaten to a considerable extent. Grasshoppers are first taken in May, but not in large numbers until August, when, as might be expected, they form the leading article of diet. This shows that the crow is no exception to the general rule that most birds subsist, to a large extent, upon grasshoppers in the month of August. Many bugs, some caterpillars, mostly cutworms and some spiders are also esten - all of them either harmful or neutral. Of the insect diet, E. A. Schwarz says: "The facts, on the whole, speak overwhelmingly in favor of the crow."

Probably the most important item in he vegetable food of the crow is corn. By pulling up the newly-sprouted seeds, the bird renders himself extremely obnoxious. Observation and experiments with tame crows show that hard, dry corn is never eaten if anything else is to be had, and that if fed to nestlings it is soon disgorged. The reason crows resort to newly-planted fields is that the kernels of corn are softened by the moisture of the earth and probably become more palatable in the process of germination, which changes the starcfi of the grain to sugar. Crows eat corn extensively only when it has been oftened by germination or partial decay, or before it is ripe and still "in the milk" Experience has shown that they may be prevented from pulling up young corn by tarring the seed, which not only saves the corn but forces them to turn their attention to insects. If they persist in eating green corn it is not so easy to prevent the members had the floor and used every in this way have yet been presented and it is probable that no great harm has been > Crows eat fruit to some extent, but con fine themselves for the most part to wild species, such as dogwood, sour gum and eeds of the different kinds of sumac They have also a habit of sampling almost everything which appears eatable, especially when food is scarce.

> In estimating the economic status of the crow, the bird should receive much credit for the insects which it destroys. In the more thickly-settled parts of the country it probably does more good than barm, at least when ordinary precautions are taken to protect young poultry and newly-planted corn against its depreda-

"BACK TO THE FARM"

HE high cost of living, or the "cost of high living," as James J. Hill puts it, is a subject which just now is engrossing the attention of the entire nation. The cost of the necessaries of life has been steadily increasing since 1896. The symptoms have been viewed with increasing alarm by nearly all classes." Within the last year the matter has reached an acute stage. The average increase in the cost of necessities from Jan. 1. 1909, to Jan. 1, 1910, was 11.7 per cent. The increase over July 1. 1896, was 61 per cent.

The wage and salary earners in the cities have seen the "bread line" grad-ually drawing closer. The margin between income and expenses, narrow at best, has shrunk to the vanishing All this while newspapers have been shouting prosperity, forgetful of the old maxim that "the real prosperity of a nation is the citizen's margin

Whatever the cause of this increase in the cost of necessities and comforts, there are but two ways in which the citizen as an individual can meet it. The first is to increase his income, and the second is to lower his standard of living. The wage earner, banded together with his fellows in a union, has been able to increase his scale of wages to some extent, though not nearly enough to fill the gap between income and expenses. The wage earner who does not belong to a union has profited to some extent by the general rise in wages, though not so much as the union man.

USING CORN FOR FUEL IN 1896.

The salaried man has borne the hardest brunt of the rising prices. He be-longs to no union, and his demands for increased pay have brought little re-

All classes that are compelled to work for a living have had to turn to the other alternative in a greater or less degree. They have been forced to lower their standard of living. The first item to be attacked is the food supply. Russell Sage once said, "As the cost of living increases the use of meat decreases, the proportion of dark rooms increases and child labor be-comes plentiful." Less meat means poorer nourishment, less resistance to foods of cheaper quality are used. Oleomargarine takes the place of but-Cold storage eggs are a luxury and fresh eggs unknown, and cheaper brands of canned goods are used.

Aside from food, the big item of exense in the city is rent. In order to keep up with the increased cost of things property owners have been forced to raise rents. The frenzied crowding of the people to the cities has enabled landlords to make these increased rents effective. The result is that a house with a porch and a bit of lawn has become a luxury, and more and more the middle classes, the classes on whom prosperity should react most favorably, have been forced into flats and apartment houses. The poorer classes have moved into tenements. The high cost of room has made crowding inevitable. Human beings have been forced to herd together like cat-tle or worse. The modern dairy barn is a palace beside some of the teneents that pass muster as human hab-

Many causes have been advanced by economists and others to account for the rise in prices. Many blame the tariff, but that will not explain why prices are rising nearly as rapidly in England as in the United States. The economist's favorite reason is in the increase in the supply of gold. Money is becoming cheaper, he says, and therefore it takes more of it to buy given amount of any commodity This explanation sounds very plausi ble, but it does not explain the fact that prices have at other times gone down in the face of increased gold production. The gold supply is unquestionably a factor influencing ris-ing prices. That it is the fundamental or may well be doubt

Other writers try to lay the whole trouble to the growing extravagance of the American people and to the increased standard of living. It is true that at the present time we regard as necessaries what yesterday were luxu-ries. This increase in the standard of I.—The Growth of the Cities and the Increased Cost of Living.

living is but the product of civiliza tion, however, and is something to be encouraged rather than discouraged Furthermore, it is responsible in but a small degree for the increase in the cost of living. The increase in the standard of living has manifested itself most strongly in better houses. better clothing and more conveniences. Yet the great increase in cost has been not in these materials, but in food. Between July 1, 1896, and Jan. 1, 1910, breadstuffs and live stock increased in price 108 per cent. During the same period the increase in the textiles was 73 per cent, in metals 65 per cent and in building materials only 15 per cent. That luxurious living has had much to do with the increased prices cannot be denied. That it is wholly responsible is far from the truth.

If we are to seek the real cause of this crisis that confronts our country we must go back to the old cause of supply and demand, coupled with other factors that have grown out of this. The period from 1870 to 1895 was the period of development of the middle west, the bread basket of the world. Here were lands of unparalleled fertility that had merely to be scratched to give forth their bountiful supplies. The result was that the markets of the world were flooded with foodstuffs.

By 1896 the middle west was pretty well settled. The bloom of its virgin fertility had been removed. Soon the days of using corn for fuel and wheat to feed the hogs were past. Prices of farm products began to rise. If there had been no other factor entering in they would soon have reached a normal level, and the readjustment would have come with little trouble. Unfortunately the tide of population toward the cities had become too strong to be turned in a day.

From 1880 to 1900 the percentage of farmers decreased from 44.3 to 35.6, a decrease of 8.7 per cent. During the same period the percentage of persons engaged in manufacturing increased from 21.8 to 24.3. This increase of 2.5 in the standard of living and the consequent demand for manufactured articles. The increase in professional lines during this time was eight-tenths of 1 per cent, while the number of persons engaged in domestic and personal service decreased one-tenth of 1 per cent.

The great increase came in the number of persons engaged in trade and transportation, an increase of 5.5 per cent. Of the 16.3 per cent of the working people engaged in trade and transportation in 1900 only nine-tenths were engaged in transportation proper. The others, 15.4 per cent of all the people of the United States who work, were simply middlemen. Complete figures since 1900 are not available, but the cityward trend has increased rather than diminished.

Here is the true explanation of the high cost of living. There are more than one-third as many men engaged in distributing food as there are in producing it. The consumer's dollar is worn thin before it gets to the producer. The 10,000,000 men who farm must supply food to the 7,000,000 people who are working in the factories,

OVERCROWDED TENEMENT DISTRICT IN A

to the 12,000,000 people who are doing nonproductive work and to the 46,000, 000 people who do not work at all. And because the changed ratio of supply and demand are enabling the farmer to make a profit where before he worked at a loss there is a great outcry over the high cost of living. This outcry will not change things in the least Neither will boycotts nor anti-meat so-

There is only one remedy, a reverse of the tide of population. The abnormal growth of cities must be checked Farming must be restored to its proper place in the industrial world. In the succeeding articles we shall note some of the forces that are bringing this Gleasondale, Mass., May 28, 1910.

The reappearance of the tilefish on the Georges banks as reported last week recalls the strange story of the first discovery of these fish on the same grounds nearly thirty years ago and their subsequent destruction a few years later.

It was in 1879 that they were first taken in considerable numbers in moderately deep water to the southward of Massachusetts on the edge of the gulf stream. The discovery caused a sensation, and it was believed that an important addition to the food fish of this region had been made.

The tile is a large fish, running in weight as high as forty pounds. It is allied to the cod family, and is caught in the same manner; its flesh is said to be excellent. It belongs to a tropical family having headquarters in the gulf of Mexico, and it was supposed to have followed the gulf stream northward, though on its first appearance it was considered by many and popularly understood to be a hitherto unknown species.

But, however that may have been, the fish disappeared as unaccountably as they per cent is no more than normal and came, though less mysteriously. In the may be accounted for by the increase spring of 1882 vessels arriving at New York reported having passed through great numbers of the dead and dying fish lying on the surface. From samples brought in it was found that the majority were tile fish, and from the reports of various vessels it appeared that the dead fish covered an area of 5,000 to 7,500 square miles, and it was estimated that the total number was not far from a billion.

The cause of this enormous destruction was conjectural, but was believed to have been an unwonted duration of northerly and easterly winds, driving the cold arctic waters in shore and so chilling the warm belt occupied by the fish and killing them. This was a very probable theory, and it was thought for some time that the entire species had become extinct.

But some survived or came from other parts of the ocean, and while no tile fish were taken for many years, a few were caught in 1889 and 1900, showing that they were beginning to reoccupy those waters. They now appear to have propagated in such numbers as to give the fishermen good fares and to make it within the bounds of probability that the hopes of 1879 will be realized as to the supply of a new and valuable food fish.

department of agriculture, there are 21,-720,000 milch cows in the United States and these are worth $702,945,000. The magnitude of the industry can perhaps be best understood when it is considered that these cows produce yearly about

$1,000,000,000 worth of dairy products.

There is no other branch of diversified agriculture so important to the progress of a community. The fertility of the soil can best be maintained by the liberal use of barnyard manure, and the dairy herd not only makes this possible, but dairying is also more remunerative than other branches of farming when properly

Dairying has made wonderful progress since the advent of the modern creamery, and the consumer of butter has not only been benefitted by being furnished a more wholesome and palatable article of food, but the wife in the farm home has been relieved of the drudgery incident to mak-

but the wife in the farm home has been relieved of the drudgery incident to making butter on the farm. Where formerly the cream was ripened and churned into butter under conditions not conducive to fine quality in the finished product, and in the majority of cases by unskilled hands, now the most of the milk or cream is delivered to a modern creamery, where conditions are suited to the purpose of making butter, and the result has been a wonderful improvement in the quality of our dairy products. As the quality has improved consumption has increased and the progress of dairying has been remarkable during the past decade.

The perpetuity of the country's greatness depends upon increasing the production of farm products from year to year, a result which not only furnishes our people with food but maintains the prosperity of our farming communities. Increase in production can only come through improved methods of agriculture and soil improvement. When it is considered that the dairy cow is the foundation for soil improvement and farming prosperity, her importance is best understood, and interest in her should not be confined to her owner. She is an important factor in the development and prosperity of the country.

The first full fiscal year of the Taft administration makes a financial showing which is even more satisfactory than was expected. The year closes with a surplus of $9,402,000, against a deficit one year ago of $58,-734,000.

The total receipts of the treasury from all sources during the year were 8669,064,000 as compared with $603,-599,000, in the previous fiscal year.

The receipts from the different sources were as follows: Customs, $332,785,000; internal revenue, $276,-823,000; miscellaneous, $51,000,000, and year over the former fiscal year was $32,000,000, the receipts from that source for the year closing June 30, 1909, having been $300,000,000.

The expenditures for the year just closed were $659,662,000, as compared with $662,324,000 in the previous year, when the deficit was $58,734,000.

The figures presented are what are known as the ordinary receipts and expenditures. The Panama canal is cept separately. Although having the power to issue bonds to provide funds for the continuing construction of the canal, the secretary of the treasury in the year gone advanced the funds for the Panama canal work out of the treasury, and will reimburse the treasury whenever he thinks the occasion is propitious for a canal bond issue.

The expenditures on account of the canal during the year were about $34-000,000, and if this expenditure were included in the total of the year's exnenditures, the deficit would be less than $25,000,000, as compared with $118,000,000, last year.

It is stated that the advances to the postoffice department were only $8,-495,000 for the fical year, as compared with $19,501,000 in the previous fiscal was within eight and a half million dollars of sustaining itself. It was estimated at the beginning of the year that the postoffice department would call on the treasury for grants ounting to $16,000,000. Mr. Hitchcook cut this estimate in half.

Prices are Falling.

The recent fall in prices in the United States is sharply illustrated by the bureau of statistics' figures coverdomestic and foreign trade for

May, 1910, in comparison with earlier months of the fiscal year just closed. The bureau publishes each month a statement of the export prices of about fifty principal articles of the export trade; also the wholesale prices of certain important articles in the domestic trade.

The export prices are those prevailing in the wholesale markets at the ports of exportation, since the customs regulations state that "all articles exported shall be valued at their actual cost, or the value which they may truly bear at the time of exportation in the ports of the United States from which they are exported".

The domestic prices quoted by the bureau are the wholesale prices of the articles named at certain great centres, chiefly New York, as supplied to the bureau from recognized and reliable authorities.

The May export figures show ma terially lower prices in pratically all the important articles forming the export trade.

In the domestic markets nearly all articles show lower prices in May and June, 1910, than in the corresponding period of last year. The bureau of statistics' figures of domestic prices come down to a later period than those of export prices.

Some Tariff Facts.

Here are some very important facts concerning the tariff of 1909 which are studiously kept in the background by certain speakers and writers. They are, however, facts of great value, and should be made known to the voters of the United States to the widest possible extent. They ought to be effective in checking the tariff agitation mania.

The per cent. of free imports under the present law for nine months is much larger than for the corresponding time under the Wilson democratic

The average dutiable rate under the present law for nine months was 41 per cent., while under the Wilson law it was 42 per cent., and under the Dingley law 45 per cent., showing a very decided downward revision for the new law.

The average ad valorem rate on all imports under the new law is 20 per cent., whereas it was 25 per cent. under the Dingley law and nearly 22 per cent. under the Wilson law.

Chief Justice Fuller's Funeral.

In the little Episcopal church at Sor-rento last Wednesday afternoon were held the funeral services of the late Melrille W. Fuller, LL. D., chief justice of of the supreme court of the United States, who died Monday, July 4. The church was thronged with relatives, men of national prominence and summer residents of Sorrento, Bar Harbor and

The body of the chief-justice, in a black casket almost covered with an immense pall of ferns and flowers, rested in front of the altar, and was surrounded by score of floral tributes from relatives and friends, including a beautiful piece from Pres. Taft, who sent his regrets that it was impossible for him to be present.

According to the wishes of the lat chief-justice, the simple funeral service of the Episcopal ritual was read by Rev. James E. Freeman, of Minneapolis, the minister in charge of the church and a close friend of the Fuller family. A quartet from Bar Harbor sang.

The pall-bearers were Gov. Charles E. Hughes, of New York: Associate-Justices Oliver Wendell Holmes and Joseph Mc-Kenna, of the United State supreme court; Senator Eugene Hale, of Ellsworth; Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard, of New York, and Nathaniel Francis, of Washington, a on-in-law of the deceased.

The body, accompanied by the members of the family, Associate-Justices Holmes and McKenna and Rev. Mr. Freeman, was taken on a steamer to Mt. Desert Ferry, where connection was made with the late afternoon express for Chicago, where the interment service, conducted by Rev. Mr. Freeman, was held Friday afternoon.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JOHN J. HARRIMAN.

Saturday morning when it learned of the death, on Friday evening, of Mary J., wife of John J. Harriman, of Cherryfield. It was known that she had been poorly for some months, but it was not supposed a fatal termination of her illness was a

Mrs. Harriman was born in Ellsworth Mary Hayes, and until her marriage about four years ago had always made her home She was graduated from the Ellaworth high school in the class of 1889 She learned the compositor's trade in THE AMERICAN office, and followed it for several years. Later she entered the employ of the tate C. R. Foster, and remained with him until her marriage, having charge of his branch store in Bar Harbor for several reasons.

After her marriage she went to Cherryfield to live, but spent much of her time at the home of her mother and sister here. She made hosts of friends, who sincerely mourn her death, and who extend to th bereaved family their warmest sympathy

Mrs. Harriman was a woman of high character and sterling worth. In the church of which she was a devout mem ber she was active and influential, and her loss there will be sorely felt.

Family ties were unusually strong; sh was devoted to her aged mother and only sister, and they to her, and to them as is well-nigh irreparable. The funeral was at St. Joseph's Catholic church last Monday forenoon, Rev. Fr. P. F. Flannagan officiating. The profusion of beautiful floral offerings suggested the high esteem in which she was held. The bearers were James and George Harriman, T. F. Mahoney and John McCarthy, of Bangor. Interment was at Mt. Calvary

Besides the husband she is survived by ner mother and sister - Margaret H Hayes, and to them goes out the heartfelt sympathy of the community. Friends and relatives were present from Cherryfield, Bar Harbor, Bangor, Boston, Spring field and Brookline, Mass.

THE HISTORY OF OUR FLAG. [Written by A. Elwell Leach, Surry, Me.]

The history of our glorious old flag is of eeding interest, and brings back to us throng of sacred and thrilling associations. The banner of St. Andrew was blue, the letter X, and was used in Scotland as early as the eleventh century. The banper of St. George was white, charged with a red cross, and was used as early as the first part of the fourteenth century. By a royal proclamation dated April 12, 1700. these two crosses were joined together upon the same banner, forming the ancient national flag of England. It was not until Ireland, in 1801, was made a part of Great Britain, that the present national flag of England, so well known as the "union jack", was com-pleted. But it was the ancient flag of England that constituted the basis of our American banner. Various other flags had indeed been raised at sundry times by our colonial ancestors, but they were not particularly associated with, or, at least, were not incorporated into and made part of the destined "stars and stripes".

It was after Washington had taken command of the fresh army of the Revolution at Cambridge, that, January 2, 1776, he unfolded before them the new flag of thirteen stripes of alternate red and white having upon its upper left-hand corner the red and white crosses of St. George and St. Andrew on a field of blue.

This was the standard which was borne into the city of Boston when it was evacuated by the British troops and was entered by the American army. Uniting as it did, the flags of England and America, it showed that the colonists were not yet prepared to sever the tie that bound them to the mother country. By that union of flags they claimed to be a vital and substantial part of the empire of Great Britain, and demanded the rights and privileges which such a relation implied. Yet it was by these thirteen stripes that they made known the union also of the thirteen colonies, the stripes of white declaring the purity and innocence of their cause and the stripes of red giving forth defiance to cruelty and oppression. On June 14, 1777, it was resolved by Congress that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, and that the union be represented by thirteen white stars on a blue

The first flag of this kind was made by Betsey Ross in the year 1778. This reso lution was made public September 3, 1777, and the flag that was first made and used in pursuance of it was that which led the Americans to victory at Saratoga. Here the thirteen stars were arranged in a circle, as we sometimes see them now, in order better to express the idea of the mion of the states.

In 1794, there having been two more states added to the union, it was voted that the alternate stripes as well as the circling stars be fifteen in number, and the flag, as thus altered and enlarged. was the one which was borne through all the contests of the war of 1812.

But it was thought that the flag would at length be too large if a new stripe was added with every freshly-admitted state. It was therefore enacted, in 1818, that permanent return should be made to the thirteen stripes, and that the number of stars should henceforth correspond to the growing number of states.

Thus the flag would symbolize the union as it might be at any given period of its history, and also as it was at the very hour of its birth. It was at the same time suggested that these stars, instead of being arranged in a circle, be formed into s single star-a suggestion we occasionally see adopted. In fine, no particular order seems now to be observed with respect to the arrangement of the constellation; it is upon that azure field-the blue to be emblematical of perseverance, vigilance daughter, Mrs. William F. McKoy, in Bar and justice, each star to signify the glory of the state it may represent, and the whole to be eloquent forever of a union that must be "one and insperable".

What precious associations cluster around our fiag! Not alone have our fathers set up this banner in the name of God over the well-won battlefields of the Revolution and over the cities and towns which they rescued from despotic rule, but think where also their descendants have carried it, and raised it in conquest or protection! Through what clouds of dust and smoke has it passed; what storms of shot and shell; what scenes of fire and blood! Not only at Saratoga, at Monmouth and at Yorktown, but at Lundy's Lane and New Orleans, at Buena Vista, at Chapultepec and Manila.

It was the same glorious old flag which inscribed with the dying words of Lawrence, "Don't give up the ship," was hoisted on Lake Erie by Commodore Perry just on the eve of his great naval victory; the same old flag which our great chieftain bore in -triumph to the proud city of the Aztecs and planted upon the heights of her national palace. Brave hands have raised it above the eternal regions of ice in the Arctic seas, upon the most northern point of the earth, the north pole. It has been set upon the summits of the lofty mountains of the friends and the terror of its foes? What countries and what seas has it not visited? Where has not the American citizen been able to stand beneath its guardian folds and defy the world? With what joy and exultation seamen and tourists have gazed upon its stars and stripes, and read in it the history of their nations, glory, received from it the full sense of security and drawn from it the inspiration of patriotism! By it how many have sworn fidelity to their country!

OBITUARY.

George H. Rutter, one of Franklin's most respected citizens, died at his home here July 4. He had been in poor health several years, suffering severely at times with rheumatism and other troubles, but not until the latter part of the winter did his condition become so serious that he was obliged to remain in bed. Then his strength gradually failed until the end

He died not as one having no hope, for was an earnest Christian worker, a faithful member and descon of the Bap tist church. He also held a license to preach the gospel, and was never so happy as when engaged in the work. Ih church, as well as neighbors, will miss the wise counsel and true friendship, but his Christian influence will remain.

Mr. Rutter leaves a widow, who has given him tender and loving care through his long illness; one daughter - Mrs. Myrtle Rutter Donnell, of Franklin, and two brothers-W. F. and Charles G. Rutter, of Lawrence, Mass., who have the sympathy of all.

Funeral services were held at the house July 7, Rev. G. Mayo officiating, assisted by Rev. Mr. Provan, of the Methodist church. Beautiful hymns were sung by the choir. There were many beautiful flowers. Interment was in the family lot.

The Hero of Pond Point of July Celebration.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

"Hi, Jared!" called First Selectman Foster. "Found the grave yet?" "Reckon I have," replied the sexton.

"Ann Bassett says it's the grave of Theron Bassett."

After a century of somnolence the town of Pond Point awoke to the realization that its name was not written large on the page of the nation's history. Indeed, it did not appear at all. Other towns and villages in the state boasted of bullet scarred edifices, historical taverns and many dwellings wherein had slumbered the immortal Washington or the beloved Lafayette.

It had remained for Dr. Liscom to unearth or at least to disclose the identity of a real hero of the Revolutionary war. In his genealogical re-searches the good doctor had come across the mention of one Theron Bassett of Pond Point, who had enlisted and afterward died fighting on the 27th of August, 1776, in the battle of Notwithstanding the fact that The ron Bassett had appeared to be the only patriotic soul among the hundreds that had populated Pond Point in those early days, with commendable ardor Pond Point decided upon a celebration upon the following Fourth of July. This celebration was to come as a thunderclap upon the neighboring towns, which had openly jeered at Pond Point in days gone by.

There was to be a grand parade and speechmaking on the green where the churches formed a triangle. There was to be an oration at the grave de livered by the first selectman himself, followed by the sounding of "taps" over the resting place of the neglected Then there was to be a picnic in the grove, with free ice cream and gorgeous fireworks in the evening. Other towns and villages would come

At last the honor of Pond Point was to be vindicated. Dr. Liscom had a cousin who knew a man who was a reporter on a New York paper. This reporter was enjoying his annual vacation, but he had reluctantly consented to appear. Had he known what was in store for him he might have accepted the assignment with more

The eventful morning dawned warm and muggy, with the promise of intense heat later on.

"This is a proud day for Pond Point." remarked Dr. Liscom as he prepared to enter the carriage drawn up at the sidewalk.

"The greatest day ever," responded the first selectman, puffing nervously at his huge cigar. "We've been waiting a long time, doctor, but today we'll show some of those other fellows what Pond Point can do! They say there's a big crowd from Leetown and Scatterbrook up at the green now." He panted into a seat beside the doctor and fumbled at the roll of manuscript in his pocket.

In the carriages were three clergy-men of varying doctrines; the Enright brothers, lawyers and men of standing in the community; a superanuated senator who was a relative of the Enrights and the orator of the day; the committee on celebration, and, lastly, the reporter from New York, who sat dejectedly beside Hiram James of the Pond Point Clarion, rather bored at the whole proceeding.

Up the long street, around the corner by the postoffice and up the incline to the village green, where the school-house and three churches stood in neighborly proximity. Here they paused and formed a semicircle about the platform which had been erected. Dr. Liscom arose and said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen-This is a proud day for Pond Point! For the first time in her history she is able to stand side by side with her patriotic sister towns and to enthusiastically commemorate the Declaration of our Independence and to honor the memory of one who fought and died for that liberty and who, through a strange oversight, has been too long permitted to rest in an unknown grave," etc.

Jared Wilson wheeled a small cannon into position, and the minister lifted his long, white hand and bowed his head, and there was silence while he prayed. First Selectman Jefferson Foster came forward when the prayer was ended. His round red face was redder than usual, and when he removed his stiff hat beads of perspiration stood out manuscript from his pocket and surveyed the company with a wavering When his glance met the slightly contemptuous smile of the reporter from New York he started violently and unrolled his papers nervously.

The first selectman was suffering painfully from stage fright. He looked at the opening lines of his carefully prepared speech and then concentrated his gaze upon a solitary vehicle wending its way slowly up the dusty "Friends and fellow country men," began the selectman in a husky growi, "this is a great occasion—a great occa-sion." he repeated, confidently evading a synical gleam in the reporter's eye, "for which we are indebted to our steemed townman, Dr. Liscom." Jefferson Foster's eye wandered again and encountered the grinning reportmidst. Today we are to honor the bravery and daring of our esteemed citizen Theron Bassett, killed on the field of duty. A year hence we hope to erect a suitable assument to his

There was a rustle of excitement on the outskirts of the crowd where the vehicle that had crawled up the dusty road had haited. A woman's voice, rising high above the tumult, angry and expostulating, interruped the se lectman's speech. "I tell you I'm go-ing up front! This thing has got to be stopped!"

A murmur of indignation followed the speaker as she pushed her way through the crowd and finally emerged into the open space about the grave She was a tall, rawboned woman with strongly marked features and iron gray hair drawn tightly back from her forebead.

"What do you mean by this disturb-ance, madam?" asked Dr. Liscom se-with a little clicking movement of her

The reporter took a notebook from his pocket and reflectively sharpened

"Bassett!" repeated the doctor affably. "Then I am sure you are a relative of the hero whose dust lich under this mound. We would have included you among our honored guests had we known there was a living descendant of Theron Bassett,

"Fiddlesticks!" interrupted the wo man rudely.

The reporter scribbled busily in his notebook. The first selectman's mouth

"What do you mean, madam?" asked

Dr. Liscom patiently.
"I mean that I just heard this morn ing that you Pond Point folks were going to hold a celebration over this grave, and I came over here from my home in Leetown to stop these sacri legious proceedings!" She looked triumphantly about her, while the people gasped. Leetown was a mine of his toric wealth: Washington's headquar ters, noted taverns where he had slept hirthplace of a hundred heroes-Lee town had more than its share of honor

"What do you mean by 'sacrile gious?" There was utter silence as Dr. Liscom asked this question.
"I'll tell you, sir! Theron Bassett was my ancestor-he wasn't anything but a drummer boy, anyway, and he deserted from the army before the battle of Long Island! He lived to be ninety years old, and he died from sunstroke. He's buried over to Leetown and they're holding some kind of a powwow over his grave this very min-ute, I do believe!" She snorted contemptuously as she faced the dismayed

"We were misinformed, then," cried the first selectman, giaring angrily at Dr. Liscom, who in turn fixed an accusing eye upon the discomfited Enrights.

The reporter chuckled gleefully as he scribbled, and for a few minutes there was no sound save the sharp breath ing of the committee and the rustle of turning pages. Jefferson Foster wondered helplessly what the scribe might be jotting down against his future peace and dignity. "Yes, you are misinformed," returned Mrs. W. L. Alley.

the woman sarcastically. "This grave," indicating the decorated mound with sweep of her mittened hand, "does not contain the dust of any of my ancestors, though it is the grave of a HERO! This first grave with the weeping willow on the stone is Greatgrandmother Bassett's, the next is the wall, which you have made so gay and this gentleman has been declaim- iting Mrs. Calvin Huckins ing over-this is the grave of HERO, great-grandfather's favorite dog. The old man thought a sight of him, and when the dog died he buried him here under the wall, and nobody knew anything about it. He always said Hero was as good a Christian as lots of folks he knew!"

She went amid a dead silence, and it was not until the dust from her carriage wheels had settled again that a faint chuckle from the visitors broke the constraint. Dr. Liscom covered the situation with a few words spoken with a twinkling eye.

"Pond Point seems fated to play a passive part in the history of her country. So be it! Let us be content to be good citizens, heroes in our humble way, and perhaps we may so conduct ourselves in time of national distress our descendants may honor our memories even as we would honor the memory of some great man! In the mean time I move that we adjourn to the picnic grove!"

Amid loud applause the gathering made its way to the grove, while the reporter replaced his notebook in his pocket and thanked the doctor for the privilege of attending such an interesting occasion, and the good doctor and other members of the committee swallowed hard when they saw the alert young man sprinting up the road to catch the noon train, for they knew that the honor of Pond Point was at the mercy of his pencil.

In the churchyard Jared Wilson surveyed the decorated mound in silence. Once he put forth his hand to tear the flags and flowers from their place, but he drew back.

"If he was a good dog the flags won't hurt him any," he muttered as he followed the committee to the picnic

That fall when Jefferson Foster failed to secure the nomination for repre-sentative from his district he laid the entire blame upon the hero of Pond

Pe-ru-na the Remedy.

DR. J. W. FULLER, Scientific Optician, 208 North Main St., Los Ange-les, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with catarrh of the head for many years. It affected my sense of smell, hearing and sight. "I spent lots of money with doctors and the use of local applications to reheve me, but to no purpose until my attention was called to the wonderful effects of Peruna. "I must say that I met with most surprising and satisfactory results. Peruna took hold of the complaint and drove it entirely out of my system. "Although well along toward the allotted span of man's life, I am as pleased as a child over the results, and feel like a young man again."
