on the morning of Armistice Day.
The fans will be interested to know that the power of the Springfield station WBZ will be increased from 1500 watts to 15,000, making it the highest powered station east of Boston.
In Massachusetts, Stations WBZ-WBZA, WNAC, WEEI, WBSO and WTAG receive cleared channels, while all other stations are obliged to divide time. No change was made in the wave length or power assignments of WEEI, WBSO and WTAG.

from 333.1 metres to 302.8; WNAC
and WBSI, the Shepard Stores stations, from 461 metres to 243.8.
The Transcript station, WBET, was cut from 288 metres to 237.1 and must share time and wave with WMAF at South Dartmouth. WLOE and WMES will divide time on 199.9
metres; WLEX, Lexington, and WSAR, Fall River, and WNEI, New Bedford, on 206.8 metres, and WEPB,

ISSUE REMOVED

Says Gov. Baxter Commenting Upon Water Power and Election.

Former Governor Baxter issued a statement Tuesday hailing the great Republican majority in Monday's election as a signal that the water power issue has been removed from partisan politics, and reaffirming his stand in favor of keeping water power under the control of the State.
He interpreted the defeat of Edward C. Moran, Jr., Democratic candidate for Governor, as an indication of the Republicanism of Maine, and confidence in the Republican candidates.
"The Democratic attempt to capitalize the water power issue has failed," he said, "and Col. Gardiner's great Republican majority removes this problem from partisan politics."
"During the recent campaign I was accused by the Democrats of having changed my mind whereas my speeches for 10 years past prove otherwise.
It is proper for a man to revise his opinion and I would not be ashamed to do so if there were sound reasons for a change. In this water power matter, however, my views have remained unaltered."
"The underlying principle of retaining for Maine whatever hydro power this State at present needs, and of providing for the future is sound and is upheld by Maine people. The Smith Bill of the 1927 Legislature was defeated because if power had been taken out of Maine under that bill it probably never could have been recalled when needed at home. That is the vital part of the water power matter. The Smith Bill now is a matter of history, and can be forgotten."
"What of the future? It must first be established that a surplus of power exists, or will exist if projected developments are completed, and then the export of this surplus must be under conditions whereby there is not a shadow of doubt that it can be recalled."
"The problem is both economic and legal, and it would seem that there is sufficient legal ability in Maine to solve it. As a private citizen, neither seeking nor wanting public office, I shall continue my interest in this question. The people of Maine want it solved in fairness both to themselves and to the power companies."
"The overwhelming Republican victory of yesterday was the result of a clean, dignified, wholesome campaign carried on under the leadership of Daniel F. Field and Mrs. Eva C.
Mason of the State Committee, Joseph P. Simpson and Mrs. Guy P. Gannett of the National Committee and those associated with them on the State District, County and Town Committees, all of whom are entitled to great credit. The candidates on our ticket headed by Senator Hale and Col.
Gardiner have the confidence of Maine citizens and merit the success that has come to them. It is the greatest Republican State victory in history."
"I am sure that those who are working so hard at party headquarters in Washington and elsewhere will be heartened at the news from Maine.
It tells the story in plain language that the East is for Mr. Hoover."

REGAINING CITIZENSHIP

Thomaston, Sept. 11.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:

I wish you would insert the following in The Courier-Gazette, as not even our election officers know that such a law exists.

Congress has passed a law which gives women who were citizens of the United States but have married a non-citizen, the right to regain their citizenship, by appearing before and notifying the nearest judge that she wishes to regain her citizenship. (Not Justice of Peace).

If people would give more support to labor papers they would know more about the laws and the things that occur.

AT NINETY YEARS

Mrs. Bethia Hart of Tenant's Harbor Recalls Striking Incidents of the Exciting Civil War Days.

With him, Mrs. Hart was also a great admirer of General Robert E. Lee.
While not in sympathy with the cause for which Lee was fighting, Mrs. Hart informed her friends, she admired his high type of character and his sincerity.
Sailing the seas with her husband for a total of eight years, Mrs. Hart also had many experiences other than those of the Civil War. In speaking of the sea, she reveals a deeply-rooted love for the life.
On one trip, when the schooner was headed north up the coast, the crew, with the exception of the mate and the cook, were stricken ill with the fever. Taking the helm, Mrs. Hart proceeded to sail the schooner into port.
"My mother was well acquainted with every rope and sail on a ship," her daughter, Miss M. Augusta Hart, added. "We often receive calls from the sailors of those days who still remember my mother. All tell me tales of how she was as capable aboard a ship as any man."
"They also tell me of how during the worst storms she could always be found in the galley preparing coffee for the men who were hard at work at the pumps. All highly respected her."
Mrs. Hart was born in Tenant's Harbor, Me. Her first husband was Gamaliel Morris, Marblehead, who was the first member of the famous Eight regiment to be killed in action.
When King Edward VII, then the Prince of Wales, visited Boston in 1860, Mr. Morris and his comrades of the Eighth regiment acted as his escort.
Following her marriage to Capt.
Hart, Mrs. Hart immediately went aboard his schooner. When Capt.
Hart gave up the sea, he and his wife settled in Marion where they lived for many years.
Though passing her 90th birthday
Thursday, Mrs. Hart is still active and spends many hours of her time sewing and knitting. She is also a constant reader and keeps well informed through magazines, newspapers and books.
Modern inventions, however, mean very little to her. The radio, automobiles and airplanes do not interest
her.
"I would rather read a good sea story," she declared. "But so many of the sea stories of today are far fetched.
I do not like them unless they are true
to life as I know it."
Mrs. Hart is also interested in history and genealogy. Recently she furnished considerable material for the history of the Hart family, which has since been published.

KILLED BY TRAILER

Freddie Demmons Victim of Portland Accident—The Funeral Here.

The funeral of little Freddie Dem-mons who was killed in a South Portland Sunday afternoon trailer overhaul was held Tuesday in this city where his mother (formerly Mabel Sewall) resided in early life. A South Portland despatch thus tells of the tragedy:
"Frederick W. Demmons, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Frederick Demmons of 52 D Street, South Portland, was instantly killed Saturday afternoon when an automobile trailer standing on end in his father's garage fell over and pinned him underneath fracturing several ribs and puncturing a lung.
"The child was found about 6 o'clock in the evening by his father who searched the neighborhood as the boy failed to return for supper.
He was discovered in the garage, the trailer on top of him. Drs. Francis A. Fagone and Julius C. Oram were summoned and declared that death had been almost instantaneous.
"The boy was born on High Street South Portland, Feb. 8, 1925. He is survived by his parents and two sisters Dorothy, aged five and Edna, aged two years.

INJURY WAS FATAL

Mrs. Enoch I. Cook of Tenant's
Harbor Succumbs
From Auto Accident.

Mrs. Enoch I. Cook of Tenant's Harbor, who was knocked down near her home, by Albert Johnson's automobile, Sept. 4, died the following Friday from the result of injuries to her head. The funeral services were held Sunday, Rev. Sidney E.
Packard officiating. The community's sympathy was manifested in the large attendance and the many floral offerings. The bearers were William Barter, Merritt Clark, Capt. Orris Holbrook and Allen Conary. The interment was in Clark's Hill cemetery.
The deceased was born in Tenant's Harbor in 1875, daughter of Alden G. and Annie J. Andrews. She was married to Mr. Cook in 1892. In recent years she had been a victim of ill health, but was not an invalid.
Many excellent qualities made her a highly esteemed member of the community. Mrs. Cook is survived by her husband and her mother, an aged invalid to whom the tragic event is a great blow.

HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS

Mr. Bok Increases His Gift For a Nurses' Home For the Knox County General Hospital.

In the preceding issue of this paper announcement was made of a gift from Edward W. Bok of $50,000 for the erecting and equipping in connection with the Knox County General Hospital of a memorial building to be known as "The William Bok Home For Nurses."
Yesterday Mr. Pitcher of Boston, the hospital architect, visited Mr. Bok by appointment at his summer home and laid before him various plans and specifications for a Home which had been tentatively prepared with reference to some remoter time when the construction of such a building could be made possible.
Mr. Bok canvassed these plans with a trained knowledge of architecture and building and promptly decided that the memorial he had in mind could not be produced with the sum he had named, whereupon he said that he would advance the figures of his gift to $100,000.
With this splendid sum the directors of the hospital will be able fittingly to carry out the work upon a scale of efficiency and structural dignity commensurate with the building's dedicated purpose. Mr. Bok's gift provides for a completed building supplied throughout with modern equipment.
His only specification is that the building shall be finished and in use when he comes here next year on his annual summer visit.
As another indication of the interest taken in the Knox County General Hospital by this family, Mrs. Bok has graciously consented to become a member of its Board of Directors.

HOSPITAL DRIVE NEARS GOAL

Short, Concerted Effort Needed To Reach $100,000—
Edward W. Bok Doubles Gift For Nurses' Home.

The outstanding feature of the hospital campaign this week developed yesterday noon when the president of the hospital, S. T. Kimball, announced that Edward W. Bok had increased his subscription of $50,000 for a memorial nurses' home to $100,000, this to include the fine building and equipment. This splendid gift actually had nothing to do with the present debt reducing campaign, yet it sprang directly from it and tended to lighten the workers and send them forth to their canvass with renewed zeal.
The heavy rain had no dampening effect on the attendance yesterday for 75 workers were on hand to enjoy the exceptionally fine dinner put on by the ladies of St. Bernard's Church with Mrs. A. L. Harmon, Mrs. D. L.
McCarthy, Mrs. Daisy Welch, Miss
McCarthy, Mrs. Daisy Welch, Miss Celia
Brault, Miss Winnifred Coughlin
and a group of very efficient school girls who gave up their full noon hour to the cause. Fruit salad, baked ham, escalloped potatoes and pie comprised the menu. Joseph Emery and Postmaster Veazie led the singing, with Arthur Lamb at the piano.
The team reports proved highly encouraging and showed general support of the project, the total rising to $85,719.15. A. C. Jones led with $257 for the ward teams. The industrialists turned in $338 and the partial towns report $388. The Main street group raised $203.25. The executive committee reported $6151.
Mr. Kimball was present with Architect Pitcher and told of a visit to Mr. Bok for a study of the plans of the proposed nurses' home and its furnishings, which resulted in Mr.
Bok expressing his desire to see work begin at once on the memorial structure which he is sponsoring. It should be completed and occupied a year hence.
"And I don't want to see the work skipped," added Mr. Bok.
The campaign continues today and tomorrow with luncheons each noon in Temple hall. A group of speakers goes to Vinahaven today with Field Chairman Field in charge to address the quarry workers.

CIRCULATION AFFIDAVIT
 Rockland, Me., Sept. 13, 1928.
 Personally appeared Frank S. Lydell, who on oath declares that he is President in the office of The Courier-Gazette, and that of the issue of this paper of Sept. 11, 1928, there was printed a total of 6475 copies.
 Before me, FRANK R. MILLER,

MR. BOK'S TIMELY GIFT

Because from a study of tentative plans for a nurses' home he was satisfied that his original gift would prove insufficient to carry out his desires, Mr. Bok has immediately doubled his figures and placed at the service of the Knox County General Hospital one hundred thousand dollars, with which to build and equip "The William Bok Home For Nurses." The generosity of the gift is matched only by the frankness of Mr. Bok in leaving the details of the construction entirely in the hands of the hospital directors, with no other restriction than that the work shall not be "skimped," and that the completed structure shall be ready for him to look upon when he comes next year to his summer home. There are scarcely words to be found that shall serve adequately to convey to this gentleman the appreciation of the people of Knox County of his splendid generosity.

Edward C. Moran, Jr., late Democratic candidate for governor, who was submerged beneath the terrific avalanche of Republican votes Monday, emerges from that political disaster with credit—credit because of the stirring campaign which he conducted with what is said to be scanty financial assistance from the Democratic National Committee which cold-bloodedly figured that it could not afford to waste funds on a Democratic nominee in a rock-ribbed Republican State; also because he continued his desperate battle in the face of wholesale defection on the part of Democratic leaders, and with only the crudest kind of an organization in most parts of the State. The one thing in his favor was a vigorous personality which enabled him to make a very thorough campaign in every city and county of Maine. Definitely allying himself with the cause of Al Smith did untold damage in the rural sections, and was a costly move, albeit a consistent one, for it was his speech in the Democratic State Convention which insured a Smith delegation to the Houston, Texas convention. Mr. Moran chose to rest his fortunes on the water power issue. The result shows that the voters evidently either did not look upon the Insull interests in the light of a grim spectre, or felt that in any event Maine's rights could not be stolen without the people first having their say. Mr. Moran faced another handicap, and that was the dominating force of his opponent, William Tudor Gardiner—"the most tremendously popular Republican I have ever met"—to quote the words of Senator Watson.

This paper has no sympathy with the attempts here and there manifested to inject into this year's political campaign the religious views, whatever they may be, held by citizens of the United States. Under the Constitution every man is entitled to absolute religious freedom. When war is launched upon us nobody asks of what faith is the man who goes into battle and gives up his life for his country. It is because we have steadfastly held to this conviction and consistently declined to print communications dealing with the subject, that we find occasion to allude to the appearance in the preceding issue of a communication in rhyme, one line of which contained a slurring reference to the thing which we are now deprecating. That it failed to come under the eye of the editorial "censor" may be ascribed to the general office confusion attendant upon the handling of election day returns. The Courier-Gazette never has sympathized with this form of political campaigning and does not now.

Nothing could be more ridiculous than the efforts of Al Smith and National Chairman Raskob lightly to turn aside the result of the Maine election and make it appear that they had expected an even larger Republican majority in this State. The result is a complete surprise to Maine Republicans who have been following the fortunes of that party for a lifetime. They expected a big victory to be sure, but not nearly 90,000 in a total of less than 200,000. If all of Chairman Raskob's logic and predictions are based on that sort of rot there will be few to repose much confidence in what he says in the next six weeks.

Some Democrats have suddenly become very tender on the subject of the so-called "whispering" campaign, being possessed of possibly defective memories as to how they have been persistently conducted at the expense of Republican candidates in other Presidential elections. This paper is heartily opposed to anything being

CEMENT CASUALS

One Loses Part of a Finger and Another Loses Two Toes.

Injuries of a painful, but not serious character, have befallen two employees of the Lawrence Portland Cement Company this week.

One of the victims was Fred L. Collins of 25 Purchase street, Rockland, employed as repair man. Yesterday he had some curiosity to know what was causing a certain noise in the Bailey feeder at the kiln building. He inserted his left hand in one of the pigeon holes, and felt a sharp stinging pain. When he withdrew it he was minus the upper half of the forefinger. Mr. Collins is back at work today, but is using his left hand gingerly.

The other victim was Ralph Staples of Willow street, Rockland. While drilling a squib in the quarry he pulled on a piece of air hose which dislodged a piece of lime rock weighing about 100 pounds. The stone struck him a glancing blow on the back and dropped on his right foot, two toes of which were so badly jammed that amputation was necessary. Mr. Staples is doing nicely but it will be two, maybe three weeks, before he is back on the job. The cement plant has 146 men on the payroll at the present time.

Miss Florence Ayers is employed in the office of the Knox Woolen Company and later will visit her mother, Miss Anna Boynton while she enjoys her vacation.

It said that cannot be said in the public press or from the public platform, and it finds in a Herald Tribune editorial much food for thought.

The New York newspaper says, under the caption of the word "Whispers":

The announcement that Gov. Smith intends to answer a "whispering" campaign as the first of his campaign duties would carry more conviction if it did not involve a new use of the word "whispering."

When Dr. Stratton, arch intolerant on the Protestant side, broadcasts his attacks to the open air, to be heard by thousands or millions of people as interest directs their attention, the result is hardly "whispering."

When the Democratic candidate for the Vice Presidency takes the air, sets up a man of straw and knocks him down, the whisper may be more audible, but it is surely not less audible.

There are many reliable signs of desperation in a campaign as in a prizefight. One of them is to charge the enemy with hitting replies to belt. Before Gov. Smith replies to belt, we suggest that he reply to a few of the charges above the belt.

Does he think that the actual boss of a corrupt political municipal machine should be President of the United States?

Does he think that a politician who has always accepted the saloon is the right man to carry forward the American program of liquor reform?

Is he against the equalization fee as he said in August, or for it, as he said in September?

Does he really think that the tariff and immigration laws can be modified without disturbing American prosperity?

Does he really think, as he said in his acceptance speech, that American prosperity is a myth?

There are, of course, a number of blots in American history which will be cast on both sides in the Presidential election. But they constitute an insignificant minority of extremists in each party. They cancel each other.

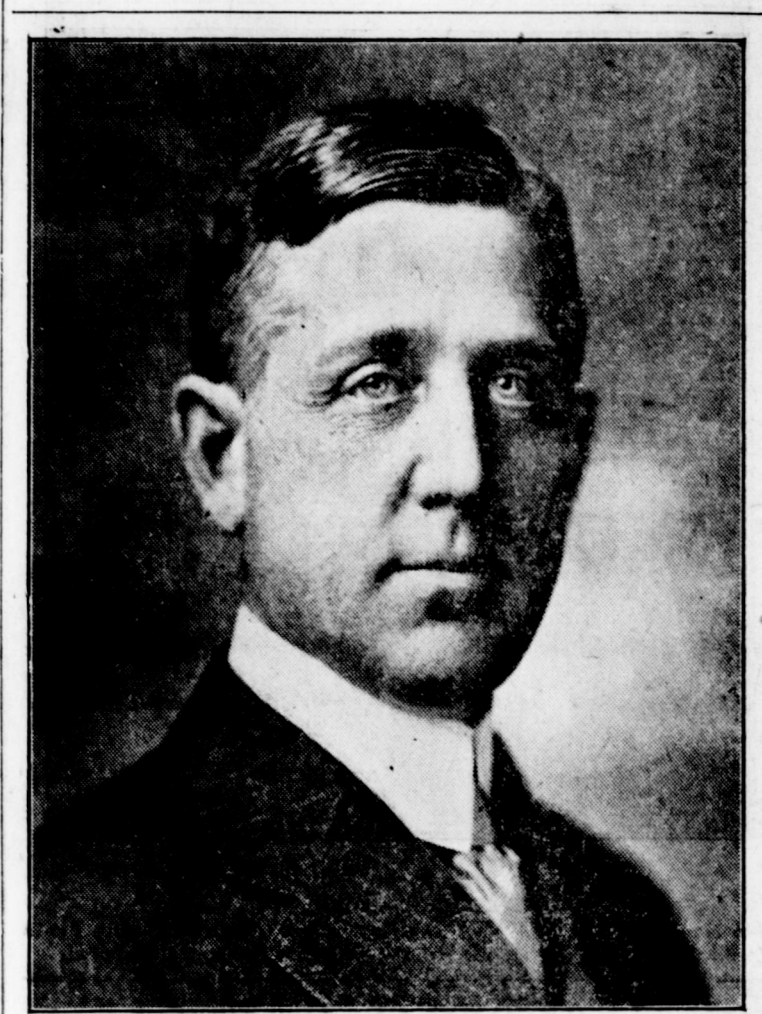

The grave objections to Gov. Smith as a candidate for the Presidency remain.

It will be easy for you to do you, own paper by buying your paper at Gonin's and getting it trimmed for one cent a roll.

Gardiner's Majority Was Exactly As Stated In Tuesday's Issue—Bachelder Wins Representative Contest.

The majority of William Tudor Gardiner, representing the largest ever given a gubernatorial candidate in Maine, continued to climb Tuesday as scattered returns from small up-state communities were recorded. With all the city votes in and with only 16 missing precincts out of 633, Gardiner's lead over E. C. Moran, Jr., his Democratic opponent, was $0,965. Gardiner carried every city

The Special Drive Waged Against Representative Wallace H. White, Jr., in the Second District Failed Utterly of Its Purpose, Mr. White Being Re-elected By More Than 17,000 Majority. He Was Second High Man On the Knox County Ticket.

In the State with the exception of Biddeford and Lewiston both of which are normally Democratic by wide margins.

The senatorial contest between Frederick Hale, Republican, and Herbert E. Holmes, Democrat, resulted in a margin of $0,004 for the Republican.

The total senatorial and gubernatorial votes to date are:

Hale, (R)	144,258
Holmes, (D)	64,229
Gardiner, (R)	147,468
Moran, (D)	66,563

Congressman Carroll L. Beedy in the first district, Wallace H. White, Jr., in the second and John E. Nelson in the third, all Republicans, were re-elected by substantial margins and Donald F. Snow, Republican, won an easy victory in the fourth district. The closest contest was in the second district, where the Democrats had campaigned the hardest and where their nominees for governor and senator reside.

A review of the above figures shows that Senator Hale had the largest majority on the Republican ticket in Knox County, closely followed by Congressman White, while the high line man on the County ticket, was Senator Dwinal, with County Treasurer Dow as the runner-up.

Harry W. French Democratic nominee for County commissioner had the highest vote of any candidate on that side of the house, but was still far out of the running, Mrs. Rich's majority being 1774.

The Isle au Haut returns arrived early Tuesday forenoon, and when they showed Charles L. Boman running far ahead of his ticket for representative to Legislature, the situation did not look over promising for Granville N. Bachelder, the Republican.

REMOVING TRACK

Central Maine Discontinues Prison Terminal of Its Trolley System.

The trolley line from the Thomas waiting station to the State Prison has been discontinued, and the rails are being removed. The action at this time is due to the fact that a new cement road is in process of construction, and it would have meant a heavy expense to rebuild the line. To the eastward of the waiting station, to the point where the new section of highway will begin, the street railway tracks are being raised to the new grade and a heavier rail is being substituted.

THE SEPTEMBER TERM

Grand Jury Reports Today—Three New Citizens—Another Chapter of the Starratt Case.

Court officials and others with whom he has become acquainted during his many visits to Rockland, had a warm welcome for Retired Associate Justice Albert M. Starratt, who is presiding over the September term of Knox County Supreme Court.

The docket shows 80 new entries and 21 cases on the assigned list, but the impression obtains that the September session will not be an extended one.

The grand jury organized for the year with Henry Ewell of St. George as foreman and Hazel M. Anzalone of Thomaston as clerk. It will report this morning and the traverse jurors will take up their duties.

The Starratt Case

The controversy between the town of Thomaston and Emma R. Starratt, widow of the late George H. Starratt, in a new phase, occupied a portion of Tuesday, when Justice Spear heard counsel as to whether or not a petition for review, brought by the town should be dismissed. Mrs. Starratt held an execution against the town for damages recovered by her from the town of Thomaston for the highway, in front of his land and buildings being raised by filling, injuring his property at "The Creek" in Thomaston, in 1924, when the Mill River bridge was rebuilt, and various attempts have been made to collect the amount due on the execution, the last being by sale of the Thomaston Garage property. Before the time for that sale arrived the petition for review was commenced, which held up the sale, and Mrs. Starratt now holds a bond for her protection in place of the execution, which she was required to return to Court on a writ of supersedeas.

The town claims, in its petition, that the law court, in its decision, when the case was before it, erred in its findings because the decision of the Court was made on the assumption that the highway in question was a town way, when, as a matter of fact, it was a State road, or highway, and counsel for the plaintiff (Mr. Starratt) to show that the road was a town way and that the Court in its decision inferred that to be the fact, without any evidence upon that point. The town also claimed that the Commissioners, who assessed the damages at $3,150, didn't consider the matter of damages from a proper standpoint and that the basis of damage upon which they made their decision was not proper, they figuring on a restoration basis, it was argued, so that the amount of the damages exceeded the value of the property.

HIGH PRODUCING PENS

County Agent Wentworth Holding a Series of Demonstrations This Month.

Egg production is increased by careful selection. This selection should be done at this time of year. It has been definitely determined that egg production is transmitted by the male. Care should be taken in raising cockerels each year from high producing hens. In the special breeding plan which is being recommended by the Extension Service and Knox-Lincoln Farm Bureau, it calls for a pen of carefully selected old hens that have been high producers. These hens should also have other points as color, vitality and size.

Smith Has Never Carried Rural New York

New York State Map showing Rural Vote against Gov. Smith in years of his four successful candidacies.

An analysis of election returns in New York State in the past five gubernatorial elections, made by the research department of the Republican National Committee, indicates an ebb of Smith strength in his own state. According to these figures Smith at no time has carried more than 13 of the 57 counties outside of Greater New York. This was in 1922. In 1920, when he was defeated by Miller, he failed to carry a single one of these fifty-seven. In 1924 he carried one and in 1926 four.

How to Preserve the Water-melon

THE watermelon enthusiast may have his favorite fruit in the middle of winter if he will go to the little extra trouble of preserving the whole watermelon by painting it with waterproof paint, and then keeping it in the basement in a cool place until time for use.

If one cannot secure a waterproof paint that he is sure of, a good waterproof coating may be made at home by mixing rosin oil, 50 parts; rosin, 30 parts, and white soap, 9 parts. This should be applied warm on the surface of the melon. A rather thick solution should be spread on it to be sure that all the surface is to be protected. If the melon is whole, and there are no abrasions in the skin, the coating covers the hard shell so that no air or moisture can get to the inner absorptive layers of the melon.

Another recipe is to take 1 part of gluten, mix it with 1 1/2 parts of glycerin and heat it to about 248 degrees F. A slimy mass will be secured which is not only waterproof, but also water-repelling.

POULTRY

SKIM MILK FOR HENS IS FAVORED

Skim milk is great pig feed, but the man who feeds the milk to his hens and takes his profit in the form of increased egg yields is the one who makes the most money from his milk, according to Iowa State college poultrymen.

Seven years of continuous experimentation at the college has proved that milk, when fed to poultry, will return from three to six times as much profit as when fed to pigs. It has also been found that, when eggs are selling for not less than 30 cents a dozen, skim milk is worth around $2 a hundred-weight as feed for good pullets.

There is practically no difference between the value of skim milk and buttermilk for poultry, repeated tests have revealed.

When hens fed tankage or meat meals as their main source of protein were compared with those that also had milk, it was found that milk-fed birds outlayed the tankage-fed birds by 25 to 40 per cent during cold weather. Milk should always be fed since because birds will consume more of it in this condition, it has a slightly laxative effect and the lactic acid combats many disease germs.

From October 1 to May 1 it is profitable to give the hens nothing but milk to drink and from May 1 to October 1 they may be allowed to choose between milk and water. When birds are given all of the milk they will drink, the amount of tankage or other packing house by-products may be reduced one-half, for milk furnishes one-half the protein necessary for laying hens.

The Iowa poultry specialists advise the keeping of only as many birds as can be supplied with milk.

Laying Hens Need Moist Mash in Warm Weather

Summer feeding of farm poultry can be carried on economically and to good advantage, says Cora Cooke, extension poultry specialist at the University of Minnesota. The amount of feed required on the average farm is less than in winter, a higher production can be counted upon, and prices of eggs are usually ascending after the low period caused by the spring surplus. The specialist points out that the cost of the ration can be reduced by cutting down the meat scrap one-half and omitting it altogether if plenty of milk is available, and also by reducing the amount of corn and, in the case of dual purpose flocks, omitting it entirely.

"The principal thing to look out for is the plenty of mash is used," she says. "As warm weather comes on a moist mash once a day will do wonders in keeping up egg production. Hens that molt early should be disposed of before poultry prices drop in the early fall."

Reports of storage conditions presage a favorable season, says Miss Cooke. A recent report said that 13 per cent fewer eggs and 30 per cent less dressed poultry are in storage than a year ago.

Egg That Has Life Very Essential for Success

Whether breeding chickens, ducks, geese or turkeys, the first essential for success is to get an egg that has life. Strong, vigorous parents that are well fed and well cared for produce such eggs. The general principles of breeding apply to all poultry, says a writer in Wallace's Farmer. Well fed, but not overfed, is the ideal condition. Enough feed to keep the flock active during the day; a liberal feed at night. Green feed and animal feed, clean water, no lice or mites; fresh air without draft at night, together with plenty of room, are conditions that favor eggs with life in any locality. There are no rules for growing poultry that must be followed absolutely. There are the general principles of clean food in abundance with work on the part of the fowl to get it; clean houses, clean yards and fresh air, but success comes about with as many different systems as there are breeders. Bone meal, meat scraps and buttermilk furnish bone and muscle building material; corn, wheat and oats add the necessary fat and energy; green feeds give life and health. Upon the character of the seed depends the harvest.

Poultry Prospects

Says the Massachusetts Agricultural college: "The outlook for egg, broiler and poultry prices is slightly better than in 1927. Feed prices on the other hand are expected to continue high, at least during the first half of the year."

We've covered nine sheets of paper trying to figure out whether that's intended as encouraging or discouraging, says the Farm Life. Our own opinion is that poultry looks better this year than last, and we're going right ahead for a better flock.

Contagious Roup

Contagious roup is a very easy disease to recognize, starting usually like simple cold, with a thin, watery discharge from the nose and eyes. This secretion has a peculiar, offensive odor. Inflammation sets into the nasal passages, eyes and spaces just below the eye-balls. Birds often cough and sneeze and breathing becomes noisy. If nasal passages become blocked the birds breathe through their mouths. The birds soon lose their appetite and become depressed.

Apples will be an outstanding feature of the Maine display this year at Springfield with the McIntosh taking the leading place. The monster McIntosh, completely filling a light mortar, which was on display at some of the Maine fairs last season, will be the centerpiece, and boxes and baskets of choice fruit will be grouped about it.

FIGURES DISPEL A SMITH MYTH

Returns Indicate the Governor Makes Poor Showing in Rural New York.

HAS BEEN LOSING GROUND

Agricultural Districts Vote Against Him—Strength Diminishes Rapidly From 1922 Peak.

Election statistics mark the fact that the great political popularity of Governor Smith in his own State is a Democratic fiction.

He has gained public support as the State executive only in New York City, and he has invariably failed to gain it outside of that city. As candidate for Governor he would have been defeated, outside of New York City, at each of the four elections where that city gave him the office, and usually he would have failed by net losses ranging from 93,000 to 410,000 votes.

Election statistics show that he has been a local leader only. He has never become a State leader because he has never gained the confidence of the State at large. Without the indispensable support of the Tammany organization in New York he would have remained a small factor in the politics of his State—a mere local politician.

The same statistics manifest that the last two of Smith's elections are far from proving that he has made any gain in the confidence of the State at large. On the contrary, these last two elections prove that he has lost a considerable share of the support he had previously received in the districts outside of Tammany control.

In 1922 he lost rural New York State, but he carried thirteen of the fifty-seven up-State Counties. In the presidential election year of 1924 he captured but one up-State county—Albany, the official home county of the party in power.

Two years later, in 1926, he recovered no more than three of the twelve up-State counties lost in 1924; and he lost the State, outside of his usual Tammany controlled local field in New York City, by upwards of three times as many votes as he lost in the one year (1922) when he sought to become a real State leader. That is, at his last election, two years ago, he lost up-State by 236,350 votes, as against his corresponding loss of only 93,278 votes in 1922.

The indisputable figures of the election returns thus record that, despite Smith's national ambitions, he has, during his last two terms as Governor, retired a long distance backward from his desired, but unattained, post as a true State leader, to his old, original rank as a successful city politician.

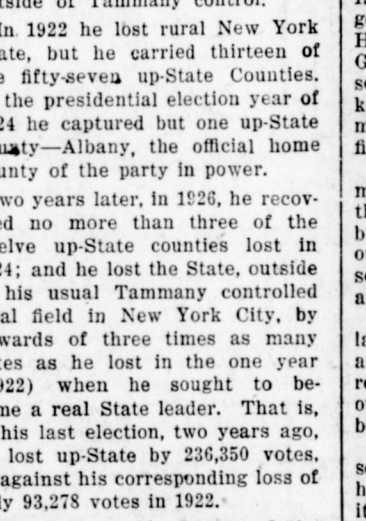

Charity Reveals Conscience

To become too logical is often to eliminate charity. . . . Charity is the practice of a spiritual impulse. It is the evidence of faith and hope. It is the restraint of selfishness. It is the expression of the conscience of mankind. It is the obligation of the strong to the weak. . . . No civilization can stand which disregards these things of the spirit.—Herbert Hoover.

The Big Issue

After all, the big issue, this year as always, is a continuance of the prosperous conditions which have made the United States the envy and the marvel of the world.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The serious thing about this campaign of education is that a whole lot of other people have got to be fooled in addition to the customary farmers. Ohio State Journal.

The Racer

I use Champion Spark Plugs because I know I can depend on them—no matter how tough the going.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive sili-manite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. LIVE STOCK

FEEDER CATTLE HIGH IN PRICE

Prices of feeder cattle probably will remain relatively high for some time, in the opinion of C. R. Arnold of the rural economics department of the Ohio State university.

Arnold bases this belief on the fact that there is an extremely small number of beef cattle on the ranges, with a decided shortage of breeding cows. Further, Arnold points out, it requires several years to increase this supply to any great extent.

Feeders at the present time are bringing an unusually high price, and Arnold doubts whether the supply of cattle will catch up with the demand for some time.

The reason for the present shortage in the supply of beef cattle goes back several years, according to Arnold. Extreme enthusiasm eight or ten years ago over beef cattle, and high prices for breeding animals at that time, gave a great stimulus to production. As a result, the market was oversupplied and even the best cattle feeders in Ohio began to lose money. Many barns and feed lots in western Ohio have been empty during the past four or five years. When the price of beef cattle dropped and there was no incentive to buy or raise feeders the breeding stock on the ranges was thrown on the market and still further depressed the price, but curtailed the supply.

It is this curtailment, at the source of supply, which is responsible, at the present time, for the shortage and high prices of feeder cattle and breeding stock.

On Many Farms Sows

Not Properly Treated

We have frequently observed that on many farms the brood sows are not properly cared for. On some farms too many sows are kept together for safety, writes Dr. George H. Conn in the Indiana Farmer's Guide. Not more than 10 to 15 sows, even in large herds, should be kept in one group. Ten or less sows make a satisfactory group, while five or six to a group is still better.

Another mistake that is often made is to permit hogs to run in the same lots or yards with the brood sows. This is a very dangerous practice and valuable brood sows are often injured from colts and horses.

Sows should never be kept in large groups where they can crowd at night to keep warm, as this often results in their developing colds and other conditions which sometimes become serious.

Always keep a lookout for the sows that fight the others in the herd. If a group has an animal in it that is a fighter, she should be removed before she injures some of the other sows.

It is a very good practice to keep the brood sows in as small groups as possible and to pay particular attention to the hogs to prevent crowding during cold weather.

Balanced Feeding Best Practice With Swine

It will pay hog feeders even better this year than it did last to use protein feeds in moderate amounts to balance corn, according to E. T. Robbins, University of Illinois. This is especially true in those sections of the state where local corn has been used up.

That it pays to balance corn with suitable feeds supplying protein at a low cost was demonstrated beyond all doubt last year by hundreds of farmers who co-operated with their county farm adviser and the extension service of the agricultural college in keeping hog feeding records. The prediction that this practice will pay even better this year than it did last is based on the fact that corn is higher in price and some of the feeds rich in protein lower in price than was the case in 1927.

LIVE STOCK HINTS

Cleanliness pays in handling all types of farm animals.

Hog killers are labor savers in lice and mange prevention.

While blue grass pasture does not rank as high as rape or alfalfa as a forage crop for hogs, it does have considerable value for fattening pigs.

Discard any normal bear which has sired one or more herniated pigs. Such a bear will transmit factors for hernia to more than half his offspring.

Elimination of all of the progeny of boars which have been known to sire inguinally herniated pigs is strongly advised. Probably in some cases, this would not be practical.

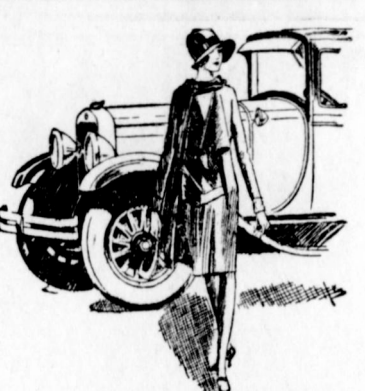

Spring pigs ready for early fall market bring the highest price. Last year they were $11 in September and early October; a month later they were less than $9. This happens year after year with few exceptions.

It costs more per pound to fatten a steer than the extra flesh will sell for. Consequently the selling price for the whole carcass must be enough greater per pound to pay the loss on the added flesh and make a profit.

Heavy cattle are now usually fed only 60 to 90 days, as a longer period is not profitable. It is the best to select that grade of feeders which seems at the time of buying to offer the widest margin or the quickest gains in flesh on a narrower margin.

It May Be Urgent

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

"I'd like a cake of soap"

Your wife knows better than to buy that way. She knows that she gets more value in some soaps than in others.

Are you as careful in buying cement? It's important.

All domestic cement is good cement, but some brands are better than others—notably Dragon Portland Cement—40% above standard strength.

The extra value is always there. It costs no more. Why not get it by specifying the brand? The Dragon dealer near you is always at your service. He is a good man with whom to do business.

Your Humor and Mine

Each nation has a national sense of humor more or less peculiar to itself. It is seldom that the people of one's country appreciate the humor and wit of the people of another country. For that reason all people are in the habit of saying that this nation or that race has no sense of humor. Sydney Smith once said: "You can't get jokes into a Scotchman's head without a surgical operation." "Ay to be sure," retorted John Wilson, the Scotch humorist, "English jokes!"—Pathfinder Magazine.

Temporary Repairs

Should a leakage of gas be noticed at a time when it is impossible to have it repaired, stop up the place where it is escaping with common yellow soap. A lighted match will quickly find the spot for you, as the gas will light in a tiny jet where it is escaping. Of course this only has to do with very small leaks and should only endure until help is available.

When Mat Sold His Quicksilver

By AD SCHUSTER

WHEN the state commission which has to do with the regulating of public utilities granted the request of the Mokol Hill Water company that it be allowed to abandon its feeble system, the public gave the item some attention because it meant the passing of a town famous in the story of the gold rush to California in '49. There were many who recalled that the place had been a thriving city in the fifties and sixties, and there were others who wondered how the few remaining inhabitants would take this notice to pack their belongings and move away.

Nat Little remembered when the town was filled with men from all parts of the world, when the agate-balcony scales weighed millions in gold, and when the daily arrival of the stage was a signal for joyful celebration. In those days they had run a ditch seventeen miles back into the hills for water, and out of this stream which sang through town the miners drew their supply. Now the ditch was but a memory and the water company, reduced to hauling barrels from a distant stream, had found the task too expensive. Besides, the water company, holding that fifty years of continuous service was enough for any man.

So the townsmen, all but Nat Little, packed their furniture and moved, leaving the ancient brick and stone buildings surrounded by quiet and tradition. The iron doors and windows were swung shut and the wooden awnings were allowed to sag. Mokol Hill became a dead town and Nat Little, walking his deserted street, felt like a ghost consoling with memories.

"I won't leave." Every day he told himself he would stay, the town would come back, and he would have his triumph. They were growing fruit in the foothills now and would grow more in the future, he argued, and this would bring the people. Any day a capitalist looking for a chance to invest his money might drop in and decide to sink a shaft straight down in the mother lode where there is still more gold than has even been taken out. So he drove long distances for his supply of water and held the town, a guardian of its reputation and an exponent of its faith.

When the knowledge came to him that his savings would not permit of an indefinite stay if he must stand the expense of bringing in the needed water, Nat resolved to dig a well. It had been tried before, he knew, but those men might not have understood the business. Nat put faith in a willow twig and dire necessity and spent his days drilling a hole in the rock. Deeper and deeper went that hole without a sign of water.

If this were fiction one might say here that the old miner's drill hit into a vein of gold, but truth demands the explanation that the region had been mined many times and that Nat, with his little outfit, would never be able to sink below the levels of the earlier endeavors. What he did was plunk his drill into a vein of gold, but truth demands the explanation that the region had been mined many times and that Nat, with his little outfit, would never be able to sink below the levels of the earlier endeavors. What he did was plunk his drill into a vein of gold, but truth demands the explanation that the region had been mined many times and that Nat, with his little outfit, would never be able to sink below the levels of the earlier endeavors.

RAMBLES AFIELD

Here, There and Yonder, Touching the Alluring Things of Nature.

[Seventeenth Ramble]

Does the cuckoo have three different kinds of call, or have I discovered a new bird? Of course I know the note which comes from the bushes on a hot day, and which old farmers tell us is a call for rain—"Cook-a-oo-oo!" but these other two calls I am not so sure about. They are pitched about the same as the cuckoo's notes, but one sounds something like the call of a turkey and is followed by a sort of chuckle, while the other call is a sharp succession of sounds like the last short note of the cuckoo but continuing apparently as long as the bird can hold its breath—perhaps eight or ten notes all alike and all on the same pitch and with the same voice as the cuckoo. No, it isn't a flicker; I know his note for he stands on my chimney and on the roof in early spring and we hold long conversations together.

In the swamp back of my house I hear many kinds of birds and one summer a fox ran across the pasture almost every night greeting me with one short yap as I came up the railroad track from my school at Glen-sore. I called it a bird for a long time until an old farmer told me what it was and expressed much astonishment because I had never before heard it in my rambles over the mountain.

On a warm spring day with my back to the door open I lie on the lounge and listen to the many birds which sing in the bushes just across the tiny field which I call "my farm," a few rods away, and I have already taken note of 13 bird songs issuing from those bushes. Among them I hear the cat bird which sometimes is so suggestive of a lost kitten crying for human aid that I rush to the door and listen carefully once more to make sure that my services are not needed. Another bird which I used to hear every day sounds like a lost chicken peeping for the mother hen. This summer I have heard it only once and the swamp robin not at all.

When I was in condition to go over hill and dale at will I much enjoyed a trip up the old road back of the Oliver Holmes house, for all ordinary berries grew there and the woods were vibrant with bird songs. It was there that the swamp robin could be heard all day long and an uncle once told me that the boys in his time insisted that the bird said those weird words—"All d-a-a-y long," with the accent on the long drawn out "d-a-a-y" and a trill at the end.

I have gathered bushels of berries along that road, enjoying meantime a far more wonderful concert than any given between four walls by human voices. It was in one of the adjacent pastures that I found my first wild maiden hair fern. It was here also that I went for several kinds of evergreen which grew in abundance, and in an adjoining lot I found one day a little natural nursery of young evergreen trees just large enough for Christmas trees.

I stood for a long time admiring their sturdy symmetry and hoping no one else knew of them as I could not bear to think of having them cut down. If they were spared, as I hoped, they must now be good sized trees, 15 or 20 feet in height.

It was near this road at the upper end that I once found several raspberry bushes bearing white, or rather cream colored fruit and gathered nearly a pint of the berries. I never could find those plants again. Whether they died or some one found them and dug them up I never knew, but I felt a distinct loss and mourned for them as for some living pet. There was so much in and near that road which I enjoyed that I resented the loss of a single feature, as if I owned the whole place, for I never saw any one else there, and I kept all the secrets of the road to myself lest others might degrade it in some way. The place is still beautiful, or was some five or six years ago when I last visited it but it was then no longer open to travel but was fenced across and used as a cow pasture.

Another old road leads from the Fred Davis farm over all the ledges between there and a point near the road on which the Ben Spring house stands. The traces were very indistinct where this joins the Holmes road. It seems to me that the early settlers must have taken the very steepest, roughest place they could find, on which to build their roads, judging from some of the old abandoned roads which I have seen. It would be interesting to trace the history of some of these and learn why they were built in such queer locations. When I was about a dozen years old, Neddie Blackington came with old "Shellbark" the farm horse, and took me with her to a house in Rockville which she told me had the front door on the back side. I thought she was joking till I saw the house, then known as the "Ice Keene house," but sure enough the front door was certainly facing the fields while the back door faced the road. Some years later I learned that the road originally ran by the front door, but was changed afterward. I have always wondered why, for I cannot see that the situation was improved thereby, and surely it must have been an unpleasant change for those who occupied the house at the time.

Old cellars with lilacs near by have always held a peculiar fascination for me and I like to know their history. There is such a place on the long road from the Elmira Jameson place to the Rockard farm on Bear Hill. It is near the turn at the foot of the hill and I always stopped there and tried to imagine the house as it once was and to picture those who lived in it. I presume there are those living who could tell me all about it, yet no one has ever given me even a hint regarding it.

There are several such places on the road behind the mountain, but the houses and their former inhabitants are nearly all within my own remembrance, so the old bushes and reminders of former inhabitants do not attract me as do those in more remote places. I can count ten such places now on the Bear road, but most of them and possibly all, had no cellars, but were built on the ground or the underpinning set on stones. Some six or eight years ago a friend took pains to dig for me a high bush cranberry root from the place known as the "Aunt

POLITICAL GOSSIP

Hoover has decided upon Elizabeth, Tenn., in the heart of the Southern Appalachian range within a squirrel shot of North Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky, for his speech invading the Solid South in his campaign for the Presidency. He will speak there Oct. 6. Georgia, Alabama and a corner of Mississippi are within motor ride of the south.

Senator Capper of Kansas predicts that Herbert Hoover will sweep the agricultural West at the coming election. He declares that the threatened farm revolt of several months ago has not materialized and that the farmers have more faith in the farm relief plan of the Republican nominee than in the suggestions made by Governor Smith.

In the effort to bring out a record vote for Hoover in Louisiana—conservative estimates place his expected vote at 100,000, four times that received by President Coolidge four years ago—Republican leaders have agreed not to clutter up the situation with any local Republican nominees, even for the House of Representatives.

The outcome of the Republican primaries in Wisconsin in which Senator La Follette was renominated for the Senate and Walter J. Kohler, a conservative, was nominated for Governor, is looked on as in the nature of a drawn battle between the La Follette Progressives and their oldtime Stalwart foes in that state.

Declaring that he sees nothing in the prohibition situation or any other of the country's "unsolved problems" to justify a change from the Republican administration, which has given the country "excellent dividends in the way of reduced taxes and improved standards of living with quite general prosperity," Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, announced Thursday his support of Hoover for President.

"History demonstrates that this country has been more generally prosperous under Republican administration and as a result of Republican policies," said Mr. Sloan.

Politicians who are attempting to locate the trend of farm sentiment toward the presidential election will find some interesting—and puzzling—lights thrown on the subject by the latest figures announced in the straw poll among agricultural men by The Farm Journal. The tabulation in the September issue gives Hoover 12,742 votes to Smith's 11,405, a margin of 1,337. But in the 10 Middle Western states, where both the farm vote and the magazine circulation are heaviest, Smith shows surprising strength to date. Although each candidate leads in five of the states, the total vote for the 10 states gives New York's city-bred governor 3,388 votes to 2,521 for the Secretary of Commerce.

Henry Breckenridge of New York, who served as assistant secretary of war under President Wilson, has informed Chairman Work of the Republican national committee that he intends to vote for Hoover.

Gov. Smith will carry his presidential campaign into the west the week of Sept. 16 with three speeches in Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado. The first speech will be at Omaha on Sept. 18, the second at Oklahoma City Sept. 20, and the third at Denver, Sept. 22.

Edward S. Harkness, Standard Oil official and director in a dozen or more railroads, who has been a Republican and a liberal contributor to the Republican coffers in the past, and for Gov. Smith, especially because of his stand on the prohibition question and because he possesses these rare qualities of leadership."

Declaring that the "election of Gov. Smith on the wet platform would set this nation back 50 years," former Gov. Eugene N. Foss announced Saturday that he would vote for Herbert Hoover for president. Mr. Foss served three times as governor of Massachusetts and has been a leader of the Democratic party in Massachusetts for many years.

A bet of $15,000 to $50,000 that Hoover would be elected was placed in Wall Street Saturday. The odds previously reported were 2½ to 1 in favor of the Republican nominee. The ask and bid price on whether Gov. Smith will carry New York State remains at 13 to 10 in favor of the Democratic candidate.

"HARMONY" IN TEXAS.

Amid the wildest scenes that ever marked a Democratic meeting in Texas, delegates refusing to endorse the presidential candidacy of Gov. Smith, bolted the state Democratic convention Tuesday and organized a convention of their own.

Many of the state's most prominent political leaders swung their fists in a free-for-all fight that ensued when former governor Oscar Colquitt, avowed anti-Smithite, sprang to his feet a few minutes after the convention opened and shouted:

"Let all loyal Democrats retire." Eyes were blackened and noses bled as the insurgents, trooping from the hall amid jeers and shouts of "get out, Republicans," attempted to snatch standards from delegations of loyalists. Uniformed officers broke up a half dozen melees before order finally was restored and about 300 insurgents repaired to their meeting place on the front steps of the Fair Park auditorium.

The bolt was precipitated when a motion was introduced demanding that only those delegations loyal to Smith be seated. The motion was an anti-climax to the action of the state executive committee yesterday when anti-Smith delegations from five counties were notified that they would not be seated in the convention.

Pinning a Medal on Him

Kirby in New York World, Feb. 20, 1920

THOSE qualifications and achievements which make Herbert C. Hoover so eminently desirable as the next President of the U. S. have never been better described than by Charles E. Hughes at the Carnegie Hall meeting at which the Civic Forum's medal for distinguished public service was conferred upon Mr. Hoover.

"The Americanism of Hoover is shown in every deed, in every utterance. His achievements dignified the Nation, and established prestige for the American name abroad which even the mistakes of diplomacy cannot obscure. He bears a name illustrious because of remarkable achievements; but, best of all, it is a name untarnished, expressive not only of exceptional ability but of the simple life of a modest citizen."

This is the opinion of a man who has been a distinguished Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, and the Republican candidate for President of the United States. It is likewise the opinion of an increasingly great number of American citizens of all parties, men and women alike.

Where is there another candidate, Democratic or Republican, to match him?

MRS. BALANO'S TOUR

Former Knox County Woman Writes Interestingly of Trip Abroad.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:— "It's great to be in Venice and it's fine to study Rome. But when it comes to living there is no place like home."

There is a tremendous thrill in sailing old ocean on a Thomaston built four-master when you are the skipper's lady, the weather is fair and the cabin commodious. It's not too bad to sail on a Bath built steamer as the A. L. Kent, although your quarters are very compact, for as the good captain's wife you receive much kindly attention. But when on a passenger steamer (in the language of the seafaring fraternity) "you ain't nothin'." However we went on a beautiful big Frenchman, three funnels, to Europe this season. And a wonderful experience it was. You are in France as soon as you go aboard the good ship Providence, French cuisine par excellence, French crew very dapper but very strict. French officers and captain, and many French passengers. As one elderly Madame said—"Here it is more French than Paris." The next day in France a large part of Portugal and the Azores comes on board. The old Captain must have had a large respect for South Sea and Cape Cod, for he went so far out around that we feared he would never get back to the port of Boston.

But some days later—and such days, fair weather, pleasant companions, and an orchestra that delighted in one's favorite operas, lectures by famous divines, bound to the Holy Land, sketches by artists going to Lisbon, duets by Milan bond tenors and so on—some days later our Captain showed no hesitancy in making the Azores. He ran from between Pico and the other islands, all about 2 in the morning. There was an old moon and the stars were some help and about 4 o'clock most of the passengers were up to watch San Miguel go by.

The pepper trees at Ponta Delgada where we went ashore were almost as beautiful as Southern California, and such a wealth of flowers! The American Consul is a rather youngish man and asserts that about three-fourths of the entire population of the islands is wild to get to the States, and nearly all can produce birth-certificates showing them to be natives of Providence, R. I. Mark Train says something about "fraud in their heart and deceit in their eye."

Lisbon, Portugal, is a delightful old town set upon hills alongside the river. Here one gets the usual sight-seeing, cathedrals, buildings, antiquities, etc. But its Liberty avenue and the spacious squares and plazas are more like Havana and Rio de Janeiro than like the most of Europe.

We got up early one morning to see the famous Bay of Naples as our ship steamed slowly in, with Vesuvius smoking away in the immediate background. And our first impressions of Italy lasted through quite a stay in that country. Musically, backed by Americanized, intelligent, Italian sentiment is certainly, doing a wonderful work. Somehow the beggars are being gotten rid of, the streets are being cleaned up, old buildings are being removed, and everyone seems to be at work.

In Naples in summer one is a little off the beaten track of tourist travel.

AUGUST ACTIVITIES

Secretary Hewett Tells What the Chamber of Commerce Did.

Secretary Hewett submits the following summary of the activities of the Chamber during the month of August.

Old Home Week: August 6, was staged the Chamber's activity in the Old Home Week program in the form of a parade. From every standpoint this parade was a decided success and as well as furnishing entertainment brought considerable business to merchants along the street. During this week the Chamber was host to two balls: one at the Samost Hotel, the other at the Baldrige estate, both of which were a great success. In addition special attractions were arranged for the crew of the ship.

Dollar Days: The annual Dollar Days were staged on the last two days of the month. Seventy-five merchants cooperated in making this affair a huge success. Your secretary, in talking over the results with the various merchants, is of the opinion that all were greatly satisfied, one merchant stating that it was the greatest Dollar Day in his particular line that he had experienced. Another stated that he felt that the merchants' committee was justified for the time and effort put into it and that the Dollar Days had now become one of the greatest business days of the year, few if any bringing greater returns.

Tourist Information Bureau: Last spring when it was planned to move the Tourist Information Bureau from the Hotel Rockland there was a feeling that this service located at "The Brook" would be handicapped by parking facilities and inaccessibility. Your Secretary is glad to report that the service performed by the Bureau this year has exceeded that of any previous year in the number of requests for information and in addition has offered the office a direct contact which cannot be procured at any other place. This service will be continued as a year-round program and I would like to call your attention once more, to the fact that correct and adequate information is available at all times.

The most interesting of the whole trip was the flight from Amsterdam to London. We took off on the early morning aero-plane, there are four each day and booked ahead for weeks—at 8 a. m. Fourteen passengers, a large Fokker biplane, shot along at a height of 3,000 feet or more, passed through two or three small clouds and could see the fields, canals, ships, etc., very plainly. The Tower of London, come over to America and we will show you a tower more than two stories high. We were of those Americans who have seen America first, and Europe does seem so very small. "Travelling with two boy scout sons," said my friend, "I will assure that you have not had one dull moment in all summer." Quite correct. Not many. Mrs. Fred B. Balano, New York, Sept. 1.

For the benefit of those who are asking how long is Gonia's Sale going to last, will say that I have decided to continue it until Saturday, Sept. 15. 108-110

INCREASE OF CRIME

Shown By Comparative Reports of Maine Corrective Institutions.

The United States Department of Commerce makes the following announcement for the State of Maine concerning results of the 1927 census of state prisons and reformatories, covering the state prison, the state reformatory for women and the state reformatory for men.

These three institutions had a total of 182 prisoners received from the court during the year 1927, as compared with 69 in the year 1910. The increase in the number of prison admissions in Maine between 1910 and 1927 was relatively greater than the growth in the state's population during the same period, as shown by the fact that the prisoners received from the courts in 1927 numbered 23 per 100,000 of population, as compared with 9.3 in 1910. The number of prisoners received from courts and also the ratio of such prisoners to the general population increased from 27.1 on January 1, 1910 to 48.4 on January 1, 1928.

Of the prisoners received from the courts in Maine during the year 1927, 138 were men, and 44 were women; and of the prisoners present on Jan. 1, 1928, 287 were men, and 95 were women.

These figures are based on reports furnished by the institutions, with the cooperation of the state board of charities and corrections. The figures for 1927 and 1928 are preliminary and subject to correction.

PAYING THE TOLL

Automobiles Kill Or Injure 2360 Persons Every 24 Hours.

That an average of 2360 persons are seriously injured or killed every 24 hours, in automobile accidents is revealed in analysis of motor accidents for first half of present year by American Road Builders' Association.

During first six months of this year 12,750 persons were killed and 412,000 seriously injured and economic loss, exclusive of small property damage and insurance premiums, amounted to $350,000,000. The association estimates that at present rate of accident increase, 40,000 persons will be killed during 1928.

Of the 2618 fatal automobile accidents in 1927, motorists were responsible for 11,765 of which all but 182 were attributable to inattention, speeding, traffic law violations and intoxication, in that order of importance. In all but 1259 of the total of 11,367 deaths caused by fault of pedestrians during 1927, caused in the order of their importance were: Children playing in the street or crossing in violation of traffic laws, adult jaywalking, inattention and confusion.

Adverse physical conditions such as wet or narrow streets, defective road beds or poor light caused 3586 deaths in 1927. The human factor is responsible for 95 per cent of all accidents, the latter being the result of complex traffic laws, congestion, discourtesy on the part of fellow motorists, fatigue, physical incompetency, lack of confidence and improper conduct of pedestrians. Approximately 60 per cent of the victims in fatal accidents are pedestrians. More than 30 per cent of all fatalities are children of school age. Accidents involving pedestrians continue to climb much faster than accidents involving only motorists.

Association recommends that local campaigns be undertaken to educate pedestrians and drivers in courtesy and caution. It recommends also common sense in place of complex traffic rules and uniform licensing and traffic rules in all states.

A DESPERATE MAN

Stephen Hoppe Soon To Be Tried For Murder, Attempts Another Escape.

A jail guard's mistaken belief that two trustees were attempting to help Stephen Hoppe, alleged slayer and notorious jail breaker, overpower a second guard and flee from the Dedham, Mass. jail, cost the lives of both men. The dead were Herbert F. Ring of Quincy, and William J. Glennon of Plainville, former professional baseball player, who was serving a sentence for non-support.

Hoppe, known as one of the most desperate criminals in New England, has two sensational escapes to his credit, one from the Thomaston State Prison and another from a death cell at Windsor, Vt. State Prison. After fleeing from the Maine penitentiary he had his face transformed by plastic surgery in New York.

He is to go on trial next week for the killing of Albert N. Hollis, Quincy policeman, slain in flogging a store robbery.

Early Sunday Thomas J. Brennan, a guard, making his final round came upon Hoppe in the corridor of his cell tier. The convict was armed with a bar saw from his door grating and he struck the guard on the head. Other prisoners set up a cry which brought Ring and Glennon, who were on duty in the kitchen. As the four struggled another guard, Walter A. Ridley, arrived on a tier above.

Hoppe, who was armed with a cheap mail order revolver, fired upward and Ridley responded, shooting into the group in belief that the three prisoners were attempting to overpower Brennan.

Ring was killed instantly while Glennon died later in the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston. Hoppe was subdued and taken to another cell. An examination of his own revealed eight saw blades.

A month ago, jail authorities frustrated an attempt by Hoppe to escape by removing bricks from a cell wall. Since then he had supposedly been under strict surveillance and officials were at loss to explain how he obtained the weapon and blades. It was said that his only visitors had been his attorney and that he had never been permitted to leave his cell except for meals.
