HIS SEVENTY-SECOND.

Ex-Chief-Justice Emery Quietly Observes Birthday.

Ex-Chief-Justice Lucilius A. Emery was seventy-two years of age last Saturday, and the event was observed in a quiet way at his beautiful home in Ellsworth—"Firlands."

Judge Emery has not been in the best of health for some weeks past, and for that reason is passing the summer here instead of at his summer cottage at Hancock Point, as is his custom.

With him for the day besides Mrs. Emery—whose health, by the way, is, her hosts of friends will be glad to learn, greatly improved—were his daughter, Mrs. F. G. Allinson, of Providence, R. I., Prof. Allinson, Daniel Crosby, Mrs. Emery's brother, and Mrs. M. C. Hammett, Mrs. Emery's sister, of Topeka, Kansas.

A year ago in Bangor the members of the Maine bar gave to the retiring chief-justice a parting banquet. It marked the close of many years upon the bench of the State, the last four of which had been as its head.

Since then Judge Emery has devoted himself to rest, recreation and such work as his health would permit.

Among his plans for the future is the preparation of a judicial history of Maine. This will take up the story of the courts of the State from the time when it was a part of Massachusetts to the present. It will show the evolution of methods of practice and will be profuse with personal recollections of members of the court during the life of the author. These, of themselves, will be valuable. They will be of exceptional interest, for the active life of the writer embraced fifty years. He also proposes to do what he can to bring about further changes in legal procedure in Maine, having for their object the hastening of legal actions to a termination.

Automobiles Collide.

The automobiles of John O. Whitney, of Ellsworth, and John Norris, of Bangor, collided on the old Bangor road, a short distance beyond the woolen mill, early Sunday evening. Mr. Whitney was driving his large Lanier car and Mr. Norris, who had been visiting his brother Chester, was driving his Overland roadster.

The cars met at a turn in the narrow road, where bushes hid the road beyond, and the occupants of neither car could see the other until the cars were close upon each other. Mr. Whitney swung his car into the ditch as far as he dared go, while Mr. Norris in turning out struck a large rock at the side of the road which swerved his car back into the road.

The cars met in a glancing blow, which crumpled up the mud-guards on both cars and sprung the frame and axle of Mr. Norris' car. Fortunately both cars were running at moderate speed, or the occupants could hardly have escaped severe injuries. As it was none of the occupants was thrown from the cars, though Mr. Norris' sister, who was with him, received severe bruises.

The accident calls attention to the need of cutting the bushes and undergrowth from the sides of the country roads at all turns and narrow places, so that approaching automobiles or teams may be seen for some distance. Last year the city did this at several danger points, though it is understood there is no State law requiring it. Drivers of automobiles are now advocating a State law to require this. It would also be well to limit by law the speed at which automobiles may take turns beyond which the road cannot be seen for a specified distance.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 4, 1912.

Topic:—The Christian Virtues.—VIII. Temperance.—I Cor. ix, 19-22. (Sermon text—II Cor. ix, 19-22.)

In the topical reference Paul illustrates the Christian life by a foot race and a boxing contest. In order to win the race at the Isthmian games the contestant had to carefully train himself and especially to refrain from eating or drinking that which would weaken his staying powers. All indulgence was prohibited, and temperance in all things was required.

Christianity demands temperance in all things. Self mastery is frequently emphasized and eulogized in the Scriptures. The man who controls himself is declared to be greater than he who taketh a city.

The world demands temperance. To succeed in life, which is no small part of our mission here, we must practice temperance in all things, and especially so far as alcoholic drinks are concerned.

Temperance in all things is required of us. It is not only required so far as strong drink is concerned, but in eating, in speaking and in all our actions.

BIBLE READINGS.

Prov. xv, 1; xvi, 32; xx, 1; xxiii, 1-3, 20-32; Isa. v, 11, 12; xxviii, 1-7; I Cor. vi, 9-10; Gal. v, 19-29; Eph. v, 18; Tit. i, 7-9; II Pet. iv, 1-5; II Pet. i, 6-9; Rev. iii, 10.

The Castle of Christian Endeavor. The castle is built with a lordly design. It is massive and stately and tall. Its towers and battlements glitter and shine.

Ob, radiant promise! Oh, heartening sight! Oh, hope to be fulfilled never! For Christ is the hope and the joy and the light.

Mutual Benefit Column.

EDITED BY "AUNT MIDGE". Its Motto: "Helpful and Hopeful."

The purpose of this column are sundrily stated in the title and motto—It is for the mutual benefit, and also to be helpful and hopeful.

THE SECRET OF HAPPINESS. Are you almost disgusted with life, little man? I will tell you a wonderful trick That will bring you contentment—if anything can.

Dear M. E. Friends: Do you know that Aunt Sue is near us again? How would enjoy having her with us at the reunion.

I turned to the record of coming events and find August 29 thus far an open date. Last year our reunion coincided with the county gathering of the Baptist churches.

A letter from our busy Sunshine sister, whose name has had a high place in the list of the "faithful" since our column was inaugurated, will be very gladly read by all.

Dear Aunt Midge and M. E. Sisters: The way our Delights are about to visiting the M. B. cozy nook makes me fairly ashamed of myself for being such a slave to the old trick of time, procrastination.

But when you see the garden overtopped with weeds, Aunt Maria, and all the seedlings stretching up tall and lanky yet crowding one another in the hot-bed, what can you do but spend every spare minute of the hot days weeding, and in the cooler sunset hours find new homes for the asters, pansies, stocks, etc.

The climbers tried to reach the roof of the stable, but stopped to get in the gable window, and I think grew snaky because my John tied them up to avoid their scratching claws, so out short their bloom.

I am glad Dell gave you a hint of the beauties of Winter Harbor and the delightful hospitality of the entertaining white ribboners, but she did not tell you what a tower of strength she proved to the executive committee, who, when they realized her good will and ability, pressed her into service wherever pen or tongue was needed.

Prov. xv, 1; xvi, 32; xx, 1; xxiii, 1-3, 20-32; Isa. v, 11, 12; xxviii, 1-7; I Cor. vi, 9-10; Gal. v, 19-29; Eph. v, 18; Tit. i, 7-9; II Pet. iv, 1-5; II Pet. i, 6-9; Rev. iii, 10.

Monday morning, July 17, 1911. I take my morning walk; go to the post office; call at the country store, and visit an old mill, or rather mill and shop combined.

A friend, a new-comer, from Concord, Mass., is with me. To return home we take a roundabout road, leading by the Baptist church door, "Out-of-the-Way Inn," and an old cemetery.

What Makes a Woman? One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. It's a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom.

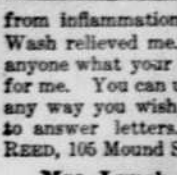

Ob, radiant promise! Oh, heartening sight! Oh, hope to be fulfilled never! For Christ is the hope and the joy and the light.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation. Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it.

At the end of a dilapidated old wharf, on which lay a rusty, stockless old anchor. The whole plant is but a remnant of its former strength and usefulness.

Here, as we seem to see them, they tramp back and forth on the wharf, from vessel to vessel, and from fakes to vessel. They are real "pickle-backs".

The Footpath to Peace.—To be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars; to be satisfied with your possessions but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness; and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts; to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies—often of your friends, and every day of Christ, and to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors—these are little gold-pieces on the footpath to peace.

The college instructor should take pains to practice what he preaches. One member of a class in English composition brought his theme to the professor after recitation hour in order, that the professor might read a marginal correction which he had written and which the pupils had been entirely unable to make out.

The Proof That Ellsworth Readers Cannot Deny.

What could furnish stronger evidence of the efficiency of any remedy than the test of time. Thousands of people testify that Doan's Kidney Pills cure permanently.
 Grateful endorsements should prove undoubtedly the merits of this remedy. Years ago people right in this locality testified to the relief they had derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. They now confirm their testimonials. They say that time has completed the test.
 Mrs. John L. Smith, Waltham Road, Ellsworth Falls, Me., says: "I had trouble from my kidneys for a long time. There was a dull, heavy ache in my back and I was subject to dizzy spells. Reading how effective Doan's Kidney Pills were in such cases, I procured a supply and began their use. They helped me right away, also correcting difficulty with the kidney secretion. This remedy can be depended upon to bring benefit. (Statement given July 6, 1908.)"
A SECOND ENDORSEMENT.
 On August 5, 1911, when Mrs. Smith was interviewed, she said: "I still have unlimited faith in Doan's Kidney Pills, and believe that there is no other kidney medicine on the market as effective as they. You can continue to publish my former endorsement of this preparation, and add that occasional use of Doan's Kidney Pills keeps me in good health."
 For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

A Woman's Vengeance

By BIANCA CAROLI

The Italian women of the middle ages were, some of them, as much given to adventure as the men. About the middle of the sixteenth century the Mancini family were prominent and rich at Venice. A brother and a sister in the family were devoted to each other, the brother being a delicate young man given to study rather than to arms. Bianca, his sister, was, unlike him, fond of manly sports and constantly regretted that she had not been born a man that she might indulge in them without restraint. Possibly this dissimilarity is what united the brother and sister. The one was gentle, refined, intellectual, the other naturally aggressive and without much mental cultivation.

Nevertheless Bianca possessed a fair face and figure and had a number of suitors. Among them was Leonardo Donadio, a man with a bad reputation and therefore undesirable. Bianca told him, as she had told all the others, that she would not marry because she did not wish to be separated from her brother.

One afternoon, when she was lounging with the social magnates, as was the custom on St. Mark's square, looking down the Grand canal she saw a gondola approaching, and when it came nearer she recognized her family colors. The gondola was pulled up near the pillar bearing the winged lions of St. Mark's, and Bianca, under a presentiment that something had gone wrong, went to meet it. As the boat came up, there, lying in the gondola, his cloak red with blood, was the dead body of her brother. She stood gazing at it for some moments, paralyzed. She did not faint; she did not cry out. Her first words were:

"Who has done this murder?"
 "Leonardo Donadio, signorina," replied the gondolier. "He met your brother on the Rialto and said to him, 'You will not stand long between me and your sister.' They fought and your brother fell pierced to the heart. He was no match for that ruffian, who is the best swordsman in Venice."

Those were queer times, and Donadio had a faint hope that even after what he had done he might still win Bianca. She was not seen abroad after her brother's death, and finally it was learned that she had left Venice. Where she had gone or what she had done for was not known.

Six months passed, during which time nothing was seen or heard of Bianca. Donadio, who was wildly in love with her, seemed crazed by her withdrawal. Had she remained in Venice and lashed him with a torrent of invective he could have borne up under it, but this vacancy she had left, this nothingness, was agonizing. He shut himself up in his house and would not go out of it.
 One day while a gondola was passing under his window he heard two men in it speaking of a young man who had recently arrived from Naples and had opened a fencing academy. As they were passing out of hearing he heard one of them say, "Not even the skill of Donadio could prevail against him."

This was the only thing that could have aroused the recluse from his despondency. He would go and see this fencer, and if he appeared to be worthy of his steel he would insult him and, by killing him, would show that Donadio's match had not yet appeared.

The next day he left his house for the first time, not by water, but by taking one of the narrow interior passages. He had scarcely closed the door behind him when the narrow way was blocked by a young man, whose black beard covered his whole face. The beard contrasted with the man's complexion, which was soft and clear, more like wax than flesh and blood.

"How now, Signor Donadio?" said the man. "Where are you going after your long stay shut up in your home?"
 Donadio, thinking the man some one he had met, but forgotten, told him that he was going to a new fencing school he had heard had been opened.

"You do not need to go there to meet the new fencing master. He stands before you."

Putting off the beard, the stranger displayed the features of Bianca Mancini. Donadio recoiled, for with the other hand Bianca drew her rapier.

"You got rid of what you considered the only barrier between you and my brother. You now see another barrier, myself, which you are to dispose of in the same way. I have been educated under the best masters of the art of fencing in Rome and Naples. Draw! I returned to meet you, but since you never left your home I have been obliged to draw you out by stratagem."
 Donadio could not go aside nor straight ahead, the passage being blocked. Thinking to dominate the woman, he drew his sword, resolving to disarm her first and talk with her afterward. He was soon astonished at the skill with which she parried his thrusts. She did not at once assume the offensive, evidently feeling a vindictive relish in playing with him. Then suddenly she began to press him with rapid and well executed thrusts. Donadio, who had not handled a sword since he had killed her brother, found himself no match for this fury, whose blade glittering before him dazzled him. Then he felt the cold steel in his side, and as he fell he was stabbed again and again. The last picture that faded from his gaze was one of vengeance—the face of the woman he loved.

The greater part of the plant of the Augusta Lumber Co., at Augusta, was burned Monday, with a loss estimated at $100,000.

Capt. Andrew E. Clark, a former hotel man at Camden, died Wednesday at Belfast at the age of eighty-one years. He served as captain of Co. F. 28th Maine regiment, in the Civil war.

Albert E. Colcord, aged thirty-six, a member of the firm of Colcord & Washburn, pharmacists, of Portland, fell from a power boat in Portland harbor last Wednesday night, and was drowned.

The primary election, by which the voters of Maine selected candidates of three parties to be voted for next September, cost the State $12,065.74, according to the figures of State Auditor Lamont A. Stevens. This includes the bills for printing, paper, packing, shipping, etc.; in fact, all of the bills which the State pays.

Three wooden blocks at Maine and Common streets, Waterville, occupied as stores and tenements, were burned Monday. The loss is estimated at $40,000. The heaviest losers were Isaac Hillson, a shoe dealer, $11,000; and E. W. Lucques, druggist, $7,000. The buildings burned were the Gallert block on Common street, the Krutzky block on the corner of the two streets, and the Gallert block on Main street.

The Prize Piano Next!

Final Count Aug. 19—Miss Gray Again Wins Special Prize—Splendid Bonus Offers—Every Contestant Has a Chance—Look Out For a Surprise.

STANDING OF LEADING CONTESTANTS AT COUNT JULY 30. Table with columns: 1st count, 2d count, 3d count, Total. Lists names like Annie E. Gray, Elaine Donovan, Susie Jordan, etc.

The third special count was closed last evening, and the judges who counted the votes awarded the special prize, $10 in gold, to Miss Annie E. Gray, who also won the second prize. The vote stood as given above. The last lap of the race has fairly begun. There is a chance for a greater number of the contestants quietly but just as effectively steering a march on those who are overconfident. Now is the time to work as you never worked before. Contestants! you do not realize how many of your friends are watching you. Everybody is interested and taking a hand. On Tuesday, Aug. 13, the ballot-box will be removed from THE AMERICAN office and placed somewhere—the place to be announced later—so that in case anyone wishes to vote secretly (or practically so) he or she may do so. Envelopes will be provided for the contestants, and ballots, properly signed, should be placed in an envelope, being sure to write the name of the contestant on the envelope. All bonus votes cast must be accompanied by the actual number of coupons stated on the bonus, or the bonus votes will not be counted nor allowed to be given to the contestant. If each and every contestant will analyze the result of yesterday's count, she can see what a good chance she still has if she will work. Special attention should be given to the bonus votes. Read carefully the special inducements offered below. THE AMERICAN piano contest is a serious matter; merit will win, and who will be the popular lady of this vicinity is the question.

POINTS FOR CONTESTANTS. The successful contestant (1) will familiarize herself with each feature of the special announcement as printed in THE AMERICAN; (2) will work among the citizens, whether they be friends or neighbors, and secure every subscription possible; (3) will secure the merchant coupons by interesting those who are not in the habit of regularly coming to Ellsworth to do their trading; (4) will induce her friends to subscribe for five or more years; these subscriptions count the most, and her efforts will be handsomely rewarded. We especially invite all who may be interested to inspect the piano, which is on exhibition at Smith & Hagerthy's clothing store. It will stand a rigid examination, not only as to appearance and strength, but also as to tone and workmanship. THE AMERICAN grand piano contest has been a success, but we fear that many of the contestants do not realize or appreciate this rare opportunity. READ THESE BIG BONUS OFFERS. From now until the close of the contest, which will be on Monday, August 19, we will give the following bonuses; these will positively be the last bonus offers, and they will hold good until the close of the contest: For every seven new subscribers we will give 8,000 extra votes, making a total of 12,000.
