Other contests were arranged, and there was not a dull moment from start to finish. The refreshments were delicious, Miss Southard being assisted in serving by her sister, Mrs. L. W. Higgins, and Miss Eva Leighton. The class is arranging to place a number of fans in the auditorium of the church for the comfort of those who attend the morning services. These have already been ordered, and will soon be ready for use.

Harriet, widow of George W. Hale, formerly of Ellsworth, died last Thursday at the home of her niece, Mrs. Grace Hill, in Wellington, Mass. Rev. P. A. A. Killam officiated. Interment was in Woodbine cemetery. Mrs. Hale had been failing in health for some time. About a year ago she went to New York for surgical treatment. Returning to Massachusetts, she made her home with a sister and later with her niece, Mrs. Hale's maiden name was Harriet Hall. She was born in Athens, in this State, seventy-six years ago. Left an orphan in early womanhood, she went to Cherryfield to make her home with an aunt. After her marriage to Mr. Hale, she came to Ellsworth, where she lived for several years, later moving to Aurora, and again back to Ellsworth, where she made her home until the death of her husband in 1882. Her home since then had been in Cherryfield.

Progressive Meeting.

The first progressive meeting of the campaign in Ellsworth will be held Tuesday evening of next week at Hancock hall, when Hon. James R. Garfield, of Ohio, will speak.

Mr. Garfield was secretary of the interior during President Roosevelt's administration, and former commissioner of corporations of the department of commerce and labor. He is a son of the late President James A. Garfield.

Mr. Garfield will speak at Bar Harbor in the forenoon of Tuesday, and in Bluehill in the afternoon, returning to Ellsworth for the evening meeting. He will go from here into Washington county, speaking next Wednesday at Machias and Calais.

Later in the campaign, ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge, of Indiana, and Congressman Victor Murdock, of Kansas, progressive leader on the floor of the House, will address progressive meetings in Hancock county.

Big Liquor Seizure.

Sheriff Silsby last Friday seized at Bucksport 580 gallons of whiskey, in fifty-six five-gallon kegs, which had been landed by a power-boat. The liquor was not marked, but destined, it is believed, for Bangor. There will be a hearing on the libel in the Ellsworth municipal court Aug. 23. An unusual complication enters into the case through the loss during shipment from Bucksport to Ellsworth of fifty gallons of the liquor. The liquor was shipped by freight. Somewhere in transit, presumably at Bangor, or Brewer, ten kegs were stolen from the car. This brings the Maine Central railroad into the case, and a rigid investigation, it is understood, will be instituted by that company on its own account.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 17, 1913.

Topic.—Lessons from the forests and fields.—Ps. civ. 1-3. (An outdoor meeting if convenient.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

God is in everything. His glory is seen in the heavens and His wonderful wisdom in the formation of the dewdrop. The Scriptures magnify the relation of God to nature. Human science has much to say of nature and of nature's laws, but sadly fails to give supreme prominence to nature's God. The materialist does all in his power to eliminate God in the glories and wonders of the natural universe.

This is not true, however, of the holy men who speak under the influence of the Holy Ghost. It was their supreme aim to accord God His rightful place in nature and to teach practical lessons from the relationship that exists between the Creator and the things created. Forests and fields, like everything else in the natural world, teach important lessons.

First.—They speak of God's power and thereby bring comfort and consolation to God's people. This psalm was written by the inspired poet in time of great distress and severe trouble arising from the power of the heathen. In reflecting, therefore, upon the power of God as manifested in nature in forest and in field he was consoled. A God great enough to create hills and valleys, with their fields and forests, was surely greater than any human power. Hence why should any child of God fear the seemingly great power of men? By trusting in Him they were trusting in a still mightier power and one that in the end would prevail. And as we think of God's power shown in nature we need have no fear of any other power. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Second.—They speak of God's providence.—His wonderful provision for all things that He has created. The springs which pour into the valleys assuage the thirst of the beasts of the field. The trees of the field are the habitation of the birds of the air. "The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats, and the rocks for the conies." Surely He who provides for the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air will much more provide for those whom He has created in His own image and redeemed by the precious blood of His only begotten Son. "Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap nor gather into barns, yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?" And if He careth for the less will He not care for the greater?

Then do not fear, though dark the night, But rise on wings of faith sublime, For everything will come out right, In God's own time, in God's own time.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. 1. 11. 12. III. 1-6; Job xxxviii. 1-11; Ps. 1. 1-6; viii. 1-8; xix. 1-6; xlv. 1. 2. xxxiii. 1-8; xli. 1-11; cv. 1-3; Matt. vi. 24-34.

Women in Ancient Rome.

Women took an active part in elections in ancient Rome, and many a man owed his success to the smiles of his own eloquence. Seneca ascribes his election as questor to the influence of his aunt, whose tact and dignity enabled her to push his cause in the right quarters, and even the great Julius Caesar might never have had his opportunity had it not been for a woman. The beautiful Servilia, mother of Brutus, made her house a center of propaganda in his favor, and to her belongs the credit of obtaining his appointment as governor of Gaul. Inscriptions discovered in Pompeii record how women enrolled themselves in political clubs and worked for candidates, making speeches, hiring a wall to post up electoral addresses and generally acting as electioneering agents. Frequently also a husband and wife unite in recommending a candidate, the wife being bracketed in equal terms with the husband.—Exchange.

Eating and Weight.

Every pound of useless fat which the human being carries is an impediment to proper activity. A man six feet tall should weigh approximately 200 pounds. If by strict attention to his diet and exercise he can reduce this weight to 190 or 185 pounds it would probably prove beneficial, but if his weight is allowed to rise to 210, 220, 230 or even 240 pounds he unfits himself to that extent for his duties.

Let any one who is accustomed to physical exercise and suffed thereto climb a long, steep hill. If his weight is normal and his health good he can do this without any very great fatigue. Let him then begin at the foot of the hill and carry a weight of forty pounds and note the effect that this will have. The man who weighs forty pounds more than he should—and there are thousands of them in this land of ours—is forced constantly to carry this quite unnecessary handicap.—Dr. Wiley in Woman's Home Companion.

A Remarkable Brass Band.

On the island of Cullion, in the Philippine archipelago, is to be heard the most select and remarkable brass band in the world. It is made up wholly of lepers, banished there to a living death, for the island is the haven and retreat for the lepers of the United States' possessions in the far east. The total population of the island is 4,775, all of whom are under treatment.

In this capacity it solicits communications, and its success depends largely on the support given it by its readers. Communications must be signed, but the name of writer will not be printed except by permission. Communications will be subject to approval or rejection by the editor of the column, but none will be rejected without good reason. Address all communications to:

MY CONSCIENCE.

Sometimes my conscience says, says he: "Don't you know me?" And I, says I, sneered through and through: "Of course I do; You are a nice chap ever' way. I'm here to say! You make me cry—you make me pray, And all them good things that away— That is at night. Where do you stay Darin' the day?"

And then my conscience says one's more: "You know me—ahore!" "Oh, yes," says I, a-tremblin' faint, "You're jes' a saint! Your ways is all so holy-right, I love you better ever' night You come around—tel plum daylight, When you air out o' sight."

And then my conscience sort of grits His teeth, and spits On his two hands and grabs, of course, Com- Some old remorse, And beats me with the big butt-end O' that thing—tel my closest friend 'D hardly know me. "Now," say he, "Be keefal as you'd orto be, And allas think of me!" —James Whitcomb Riley in Century.

Dear M. B. Nieces:

I imagine, those of you who are at your homes, are finding your time fully occupied, with company and canning, picnics and preserving sales and sails and the other various interesting things which belong to the "good old summer time." Those of you who are taking vacations and outings no doubt are having a change from the regular routine of household tasks, and if, camping out, you have a care of the meals, the process of preparing them is so different from the usual way that it is a novelty and more like play than work.

Some of you are by the sea-shore, watching the changes nature produces from day to day and even from hour to hour, on the face of the deep and on the sky above; shadows and sunlight on the water; floating clouds and golden glow on the sky. Others are gliding over the country roads in automobiles, storing glimpses of new scenery and health-giving air.

In the meantime the summer days are passing quickly by, and soon we will be saying: "Where have they gone? But just now it is our business to gather something from out of them to take with us into the winter that is to follow. It may be berries, it may be memories; don't be shocked at this blending of the practical and sentimental, for life on the whole, is made up of these two elements expressed in some form. The real and the imaginary, the mental and the physical; hand-work and brain-work, and whatever our calling, be it there mote home-maker, or the leader in great things, life holds for each the outlook into the world about us which, if used aright, grows more broad with each advancing year.

So, widen your outlook. Be content with doing the work at hand, but let the vision of the mind bring to your view the wonders and the beauties and the possibilities of your own life and surroundings. Don't cultivate the habit of introspection. "Look out, not in."

Mol, I thank you very much for that "huller," which you sent me last week; it is fine.

Now I will go "a borrowing" a few ideas for you out of different papers and magazines.

I have a little neighbor who asked me one day not long ago "Who discovered spruce gum?" Now, we use a great many things about the house which someone discovered or invented, and we never thought about it even once. (Here is a way in which persons can reach out beyond their own horizon—by thinking up where the spices, the dried fruits, the various goodies the articles used about house came from.)

I took up a paper just now and saw a heading, "History of Soap," and received the information that soap, in the form of vegetable ashes mixed with grease, appears to have been in vogue among ancient Egyptians; that in the reign of Charles I, the king, in consideration of a large sum of money to be paid annually into his exchequer, granted a monopoly to a company of soap-makers. There were trusts even in those days.

Tie a little cream of tartar up in a stained spot on any white article, after washing, and put into the boiler with the other clothes. This simple remedy will remove rust and many kinds of ink-stains, and it is perfectly harmless to the cloth.

"How many know that a poultice made of corn-meal is one of the best to be had? Simply stir the meal into boiling water exactly as you would make mush or hasty pudding, and apply to the seat of pain as hot as can be borne. I have seen this work wonders in case of swellings from bruises, cuts and blisters when these had been neglected and, severe inflammation had set in."

Son—Papa, what is reason? Parent—Reason, my boy, is that which enables a man to determine what is right. Son—And what is instinct? Parent—Instinct is that which tells a woman she is right whether she is or not. Minister Praises this Laxative. Rev. H. Stubbenvoll, of Allison, Ia., in praising Dr. King's New Life Pills for constipation, writes: "Dr. King's New Life Pills are such perfect pills no home should be without them." No better regulator for the liver and bowels. Every pill guaranteed. Try them. Price 25c. at all druggists.

A Decade In Transit

By ALICE T. BURGE.

What a receptacle for miscellaneous articles are books! When one closes a book he or she—most probably she—will take up almost anything to mark the place. Then, too, things that may be well preserved find their way between the leaves of volumes. Flowers, photographs, old letters, bits of paper of all kinds, may be shaken out of books.

One day one Joseph Werner, a man of thirty, strolled into a library to nose about among the volumes on the shelves. He was a scholarly fellow, and the books he sought were such as few persons cared for. Passing a shelf marked "History," he took down a copy of "Josephus," an eminent Jewish historian, who wrote during the first century of the Christian era. Turning over the leaves, he came upon an unfinished letter written in a woman's hand. The words "Dear Joe" caught his eye, and since his name was Joe he was interested. Glancing at the date, he saw that ten years had passed since the letter had been written.

He pictured in his mind the history of the volume from the day the letter had been placed in it. A girl was writing to a man. Some one entered the room whom she did not wish to see the letter. "Josephus" was lying open on a table. She placed the letter in the book and closed it. Either she had forgotten it or had been called away and never saw it again. The volume with the letter in it had found its way into the library, where it may not have been opened up to the present time.

While Werner was dreaming about the letter he was looking at the chronography. It reminded him of writing that he had seen long ago. It was all very vague, but there was something inexpressibly tender connected with it. He glanced down to see who was the writer, but since it was unfinished there was no signature.

His mind drifted back to a period about the time the letter was written. Perhaps it was an association with the handwriting. He was then entering upon his first, and thus far his only, love. How delightful that gradual fusing of two young hearts! Loving was as natural as breathing. Then came the serious part. He was about to go away to fight on the world's battlefield for a living—a competence, a fortune. He had spoken his love, which was returned, but the girl must have time to think about it. She was farseeing and thought it unwise to engage herself to one who had not yet even made a start. She would let him know before he went away. But he did not hear from her.

While thus reverting to the past his eyes were fixed on the letter. He read without knowing that he was reading. The writer evidently was giving to a lover an answer such as he had hoped to receive.

Leaving the volume on the shelf, he took the letter to a window, where he could get a clearer view of the handwriting. It looked more familiar than before. Gradually a belief came to him that the letter had been written to him. He remembered the date that he had left home, and that on the letter was the day before his going. As he looked and continued to look the old familiar hand came back to him. There was no mistaking it. The letter had been written—not finished—to him. But it had never been sent.

Why? Ah! There was the mystery. The letter went into Werner's pocket instead of the volume in which it had been inclosed. He knew where the writer lived, though he had not seen her since he parted with her a decade ago. He determined to go to her for an explanation.

They stood face to face. Each recognized the other. He drew the letter from his pocket and handed it to her. She looked at it in wonder, recognizing it, but evidently being daunted at holding it in her hands.

"How did you come by this?" she asked. He related to her the strange happening by which he and the letter had drifted to the library and met there. Her memory seemed to be confused in part, though as to writing the letter it was clear.

"I wrote this," she said, "the day before you left us. Mother suspected that something was between us and had advised that we remain each free until you were able to marry. Nevertheless I resolved to answer you in the affirmative. While I was writing I heard mother coming. A book—I don't remember what book—lay open on the table near me. I put the unfinished letter in it and closed it.

"Mother asked me what I was going to do about you, and I gave her an evasive answer. She drew a promise from me to take no action without notifying her. I was but seventeen and uncertain what to do; therefore I did nothing. The letter remained in the book, where I had placed it. When we gave up housekeeping, leaving our home, we sold all our books to a dealer. How it came into the library where you found it I can't imagine unless the library bought it from the dealer."

"Your mother, who was present," he said, "I being absent, made up your mind for you then; it behooves me, who am now present, to make it up for you now. Let us consider this letter finished, signed, sealed and sent. Nothing remains but to make up for lost time."

And they did.

Imitating the Ostrich

By ELLIOTT SMITH

One crisp October day a young man slighted from a train in a quiet village. During the summer he had met at a country resort a Miss Mathews, with whom he had dawdled about, boating, fishing, swimming, dancing—in short, doing those things which, when done in company with a pretty girl, generate love almost as surely as a dynamo will generate electricity.

During the period that they were together another young man named Dargan had come from the city, evidently for the purpose of being with the girl, for he immediately proceeded to monopolize her. Since he showed plainly that he was a suitor the young man of the first part, Emery, who had no more idea of marrying a wife than he had of establishing a bank, dropped out in his favor, leaving the young lady free to accept his attentions. After several days passed in company with her Mr. Dargan left the resort, and Miss Mathews was again unabsorbed. Mr. Emery slowly drifted back to his former status.

There is no position more capable of exciting a man's self contempt than to occupy the time and attention of a young lady whom he has no thought of marrying. But let him once realize that he doesn't wish any one else to marry her and he cannot but consider himself a veritable dog in the manger. Such was the position occupied by Mr. Emery when he recommenced spending his time in Miss Mathews' company.

As he afterward said, he was like the ostrich that hides its head in the sand to avoid being observed. Yet he was observed not only by others, but by himself.

When Mr. Emery left the resort and Miss Mathews' society he had made a step in advance. He knew that he would rather be hanged for Mr. Dargan's murder than that the said Dargan should marry Miss Mathews. But why? Did he want her himself? Surely he had not gone on his outing with the intention of becoming engaged? It was not feasible that he should become engaged. He had but $3,000 a year, and that was not sufficient to meet his own personal requirements. He did not know what Miss Mathews had and didn't care. Matrimony was with him out of the question anyway.

Some five or six weeks after the parting he was weak enough to go to the place where Miss Mathews lived. He went there to see her, but why he did not know. He had no more intention of entering the lists with Dargan—or any one else, for that matter—than he had gone away in the summer to marry a wife. He had written her that he would be in the vicinity of her home and would make a stop for the purpose of "renewing an acquaintance so pleasantly formed during the summer." He would call on a certain afternoon.

Why will persons say things they don't mean, knowing that those to whom they say them know they mean something else?

In what occurred during that visit I don't charge Miss Mathews with having purposely brought it about. Nevertheless if she did she had a perfect right to do so. When Emery called on her that afternoon he was ushered by a maid into a cozy library, where stood a lady's writing desk on which Miss Mathews wrote her letters, and he had no sooner entered than he saw a letter ready for the post lying where it had been written. He could not well help seeing the superscription.

The epistle was addressed to Dargan. Was it one of a correspondence? Was it an acceptance? Was it a rejection? That was for him to find out.

When Miss Mathews came in—tastefully arrayed, of course—she expressed herself "much pleased to meet again a summer acquaintance."

A summer acquaintance—that was true, but it was galling. He had said that he was pleased "to renew an acquaintance," etc. That he knew, was all folderol, but the same thing coming from Miss Mathews was very different. It was depressing, saddening. Indeed, it was worse than a dozen funeral bells all tolling at once.

Miss Mathews' eyes fell on the letter on the desk. She started. Emery didn't start, but there was a sudden whirlwind of feeling within him which coagulated with a purpose. He plunged into the Rubicon.

Nevertheless he plunged so quietly that the net was not perceptible. He asked Miss Mathews whether she would go back to the same resort next year, and she said she didn't know; she hadn't thought much about it. Then he remarked that he thought he should spend his vacation next season in the autumn since he proposed to hunt. Both were talking about one thing and thinking about another—the letter on the desk. There was a pause in the conversation. Both looked up from the letter at the same moment, and their eyes met. Emery reached for it and tore it into little bits.

"You had no right to do that," said the girl.

"I'll write another."

Taking up pen and paper, he wrote on it: "I have to announce to you my engagement to Mr. Emery, whom I met last summer in the country." Holding it up before her, he asked if she would put it in her own handwriting and mail it.

"Yes," she said, and that is the end of the story, except that she afterward told him she had refused Dargan before he left her at the summer resort.

REPUBLICAN NOMINEE. ELECTION, MONDAY, SEPT. 8, 1913. For Representative to Congress, Third Maine District, JOHN A. PETERS, of Ellsworth.

Peters Gaining Every Day. The events of the past week in political circles have brought much of good cheer to the supporters of Hon. John A. Peters, and these to-day include the vast majority of the voters of the third Maine district who are not imbued with democratic principles.

The issue in this campaign is clear-cut—protection versus free trade. Pattangall stands for free trade; Peters for protection. Is it possible that protectionists enough will vote for Lawrence to insure the election of Pattangall? Think this over.

Straw: Prescott, druggist, Monmouth, former progressive, took straw vote among patrons for week; result: 65 canvassed—60 for Peters; 5 for Lawrence. (Monmouth's vote last November was: Taft 36; Roosevelt 141.)

Mr. Lawrence says he doesn't expect to be elected. Yet he remains in the fight. For what? To assist Mr. Pattangall, free-trader, or to defeat Mr. Peters, protectionist? Mr. Lawrence claims to be a protectionist.

The anti-democratic voters of this district outnumber the democratic in the proportion of about three to two. A vote for Lawrence jeopardizes the election of a protectionist.

Hancock county hasn't had a representative in the House since 1879. Local pride will help Peters in Hancock just as it did Goodwin in Somerset last fall.

Our friends the democrats are not at all pleased with the republican activity and the progressive lack of activity, for voters do not enthuse greatly over a candidate who says he doesn't expect to be elected, and who is destined to be a very poor third. Thus the democrats attempt to bolster the cause of the third candidate by saying that it is the one whom they fear. It is an old trick, but one that will not work.

cratic free-trade bill in a speech July 22. Senator Smoot named a few of the commodities which make up the list. Among the Maine products from which all protection has been removed are buckwheat, corn, eggs, veal, mutton, lamb and pork, milk and cream, potatoes, rye, swine, cattle, sheep, wheat, handle bolts, stove bolts, last blocks, boards, other sawed lumber, clapboards, laths, pickets, shingles, wood-pulp and wool. In contrast, many essentially southern products will retain a substantial duty and will be amply protected.

The Underwood tariff bill reduces the rate on granite. This reduction was at the dictation of a New York firm of importers. If anyone does not believe this, let him read the debate in the Senate July 30. If this new tariff schedule takes effect one of two things will follow: Down will go wages, or finished granite will be imported. Republicans believe in good wages and in the home quarries. Contact with the granite-workers indicates that they will rebuke the democrats by voting for John A. Peters for Congress.

Mr. Lawrence says that the people will hold the minority responsible for the election of an anti-democrat. Reports from all corners of the district indicate that Mr. Lawrence and his followers will be that minority. Are they ready to assume the responsibility?

He was an expert workman.

He leaves a widow and two children—Elmer and Reginald. He is also survived by his mother, Mrs. Catherine Higgins, of North Ellsworth, six brothers and two sisters—Charles E., Webster M. and Adelbert, of Ellsworth; Joseph M., of Fairfield; Reuel, of Green Lake; Frank, of Bar Harbor; Mrs. Olive Leach, of Ellsworth, and Mrs. Clara McGown, of Massachusetts. AT 80 GIVES HEALTH RULES. Enjoy Yourself and Ignore Diet Tables, Says Sir George Birdwood. Sir George Birdwood, officer of the Legion of Honor, laureate of the French academy and formerly professor of anatomy and physiology at Bombay, has contributed at the age of eighty his views on how to reach a ripe old age. His maxims are: Don't think about your health. Enjoy yourself as much as possible. Ignore dietary tables. Eat whenever you feel inclined. Look on the bright side of things. Sir George is particularly scornful about the diet on which another contributor to the discussion thrives—namely, two meals of eggs, bread and butter daily.

"Such a life," he says, "would not be worth living. The great question is not how to live long, but how to live well."

RUSSIA'S BIGGEST FORGERY. Gang Turned Out Millions of Counterfeit Notes. Russia's secret police are busy tracing the producers of millions of counterfeit notes that have been passed into circulation in Russia and on Russian financial houses abroad. It is the biggest and most perplexing forgery case they have ever tackled.

FOR FOREIGN TRADE. Portland Board of Trade to Assist Manufacturers. The Portland board of trade has concluded that the best way for Maine industries to continue prosperous under the new tariff is to expand their foreign trade. The board recognizes that many manufacturers are so situated that an energetic campaign abroad is out of the question. They have, in many cases, had no experience with foreign markets, and a thousand unknown details, aside from the heavy expense involved, stand in the way of an individual attempt to expand foreign sales.

A PETERS CLUB

FORMED AT ELLSWORTH LAST MONDAY EVENING.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING - PROGRESSIVES FOR PETERS - REPORTS FROM OTHER COUNTIES IN DISTRICT.

Beginning as a conference of local republican workers, and expanding until it took in six surrounding towns, a meeting was held last Monday evening at G. A. R. hall, Ellsworth, in the interest of John A. Peters' candidacy for Congress, which for spontaneity and enthusiasm on short notice was probably never before surpassed, if ever equalled, in Ellsworth political history.

For a day or two preceding the meeting there was general talk on the street about the wisdom of getting together somewhere on Monday night and informally talking over things and getting a line on the situation. Conferences of this sort are common enough, and oftener than otherwise prove of value to the party holding them. It was an affair of this sort which was originally arranged for, nobody supposing that it would amount to more than the usual smoke-talk, a little rubbing of elbows and comparison of notes.

Imagine the astonishment, not to say satisfaction, of the managers when long before the hour set for the opening of the meeting, men began to drop into Grand Army hall; more came and still more, and then some. Seats quickly became scarce; other offices in the building were forced to contribute, and when these were gone, tables, platforms, stools, boxes—even seats on the floor were resorted to.

LARGEST EVER.

And from a quiet conference of local workers the affair resolved itself into a mass meeting which packed old Grand Army hall as it was never packed before. Every ward in the city was represented, and there were delegations from Bluehill, Surry, Sorrento, Sullivan, Franklin and Amherst, and, by proxy, even Eastbrook was represented.

What was it all about? What did it all mean? Why, simply that voters are keenly interested in the congressional fight that is now on; that they wanted to learn all they could about the situation, give what information they could for the encouragement of others, and that they wanted to give the rest of the district assurance that Ellsworth and Hancock county are filled with a determination to do their handiwork to elect their fellow-townman, John A. Peters, to Congress, and thus add another to the list of famous men who have represented the old third district in the house of representatives—a fit successor to Hale, Bisine, Milliken, Burlingh, Goodwin.

FROM THE COUNTY.

The meeting got right down to business. It chose Col. H. E. Hamlin, chairman, who made a ringing speech; He then called upon Hon. Elmer P. Spofford, of Deer Isle, Hancock county's member of the republican state committee. Mr. Spofford said he shouldn't make a speech, but a report, and he made one—full of encouragement, assurance and hope. He had during the past two weeks visited practically every town in Hancock county; he had found that it was not true that every man who voted for Roosevelt last November was going to vote the progressive ticket next month. On the contrary, outside the leaders, so-called, the rank and file of the great body of those who voted for Roosevelt were going to vote for Peters, and were going to do it mainly for two reasons—first, because they were anti-democratic, and second, because they were convinced that the surest way of beating the democrat was to unite on that one of the opposing candidates more likely to win, and that Peters and not Lawrence was that man.

FROM THE DISTRICT.

The next speaker was Col. F. H. Parkhurst, of Bangor, chairman of the republican state committee, who while not a voter in the third district, was, he said, intensely interested in the outcome, as was the rest of the State. The sentiment of the district, he declared, was unquestionably and overwhelmingly against the democratic free-trade policy now being enacted into the law at Washington. The democrat was beaten already if it were not for the unfortunate split in the republican party. Should the democrat win, the country at large won't know or care how he won; his election will be accepted as an expression of the majority opinion of the district, which would not be the fact. In a clean-cut, comprehensive manner presented the situation in the district as he saw it, and in a most impressive manner urged everyone to do his handiwork to unite the anti-democratic strength, vote for Peters and protection, and not permit the district, as a result of factional differences, to be misrepresented in Congress.

FROM OUT OF TOWN.

Then came reports from surrounding towns. Speaking for the delegation from Bluehill, which last fall cast 159 votes for Roosevelt, Judge Forrest B. Snow went to some length in describing the peculiar situation in that town. In spite of the strong influence of a prominent summer resident, who is a good fellow, a liberal spender, and a warm friend of the farmers, last November's vote, he predicted, would be reduced at least one-half. In this opinion he was confirmed by Ward W. Westcott, also of Bluehill.

Capt. George H. Sperry, of Surry, responded for the delegation from that town. Surry gave Roosevelt forty votes last fall; that this fall Lawrence won't get ten is confidently asserted.

Cheer upon cheer greeted W. E. Bragdon, of Franklin, a progressive, when he announced that he was for Mr. Peters and that he should do all he could to help elect him. Franklin cast eighty-two votes for Roosevelt. Dr. S. S. DeBeck thinks at least two-thirds of this vote will this fall go for Peters. Sherman S.

Scammon, also of Franklin, considered the outlook most encouraging.

For Sorrento Percy L. Aiken spoke. The bulk of the twenty-one Roosevelt votes of that town will, he believes, be thrown this year for Peters. Mr. Aiken and Dr. DeBeck had toured Eastbrook that day, and as a result they felt sure that the bulk of the thirty-nine Roosevelt votes would also go to Peters next month. A similar report came from Sullivan, voiced by W. O. Emery, whose judgment of a political situation is regarded in these parts as reasonably sound.

Two of the most heartening addresses of the evening were made by Rev. R. B. Mathews and Rev. P. A. A. Killam, both of Ellsworth. Mr. Mathews' opinion of Mr. Peters, formed through an association with him for seven years, was expressed in clean-cut phrases which found quick and vociferous response. Mr. Killam's announcement that, though a progressive, he should support Mr. Peters was greeted with loud applause. He is opposed to Mr. Pattangall because he is a democrat and a free-trader. He favors Mr. Peters not only because he is the best equipped for a Congressman but also because, in his judgment, he stands a better chance of election than Mr. Lawrence.

FROM OUT OF TOWN.

Franklin was represented at the meeting by W. E. Bragdon, S. S. Scammon, L. C. Bragdon, Dr. S. S. DeBeck, Boyd A. Blaisdell and Samuel Bragdon.

From Surry were: George H. Sperry, W. E. Phillips, George H. Phillips, W. M. Smith, D. J. Curtis, and George Cousins. From Bluehill came Judge Forrest B. Snow, Ward W. Westcott, C. F. Westcott, Jr., and Mr. Saunders.

From Sorrento—Percy L. Aiken.

From Sullivan—W. O. Emery.

PETERS CLUB FORMED.

At the close of the speaking, which had aroused the greatest enthusiasm, a Peters club was organized—the first in the district. Of course every body present joined, and papers were prepared for circulation throughout the county.

The next meeting of the club will be held at G. A. R. hall next Monday evening. The Dorr building on Main street has been secured for general headquarters, and will be open for committee meetings and informal gatherings every afternoon and evening.

Arrangements were made to raise a Peters banner, and bright and early on Tuesday morning, without ceremony, one was flung to the breeze across Main street, bearing the words: "John A. Peters for Congress."

WALTHAM.

Miss Bessie Jordan visited friends in Brighton last week. Herman Jordan is buying blueberries and carrying them to Bangor with his automobile truck.

Miss Carolyn Baxter, who has been the guest of W. B. Hastings and wife, has returned to Boston.

Aiden K. Haslem, wife and daughter Josephine and Mrs. Sarah Haslem visited at Machias through the celebration.

Miss Leah Jordan gave a lawn party at her home Wednesday afternoon. There were twenty-six present. A pleasant time was spent playing games. Refreshments were served.

LOVEMAKING IN SPAIN.

It is Done Right Out in the Open, and No One Seems to Mind It.

The best of the Alcazar is the Alcazar gardens. But I would not ignore the homelike charm of the vast court by which you enter from the street outside to the palace beyond. It is planted casually about with rather shabby orange trees that children were playing under and was decorated with the week's wash of the low, simple dwellings which may be hired at a rental moderate even for Seville, where a handsome and commodious house in a good quarter rents for $50 a year. One of those two story cottages, as we should call them, in the antecourt of the Alcazar had for the student of Spanish life the special advantage of a lover close to a ground floor window dropping tender nothings down through the slats of the shutter to some maiden lurking within.

The nothings were so tender that you could not hear them drop, and, besides, they were Spanish nothings, and it would not have served any purpose for the stranger to listen for them. Once afterward we saw the national courtship going on at another casement, but that was at night, and here the precious first sight of it was offered at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Nobody seemed to mind the lover stationed outside the shutter with which the iron bars forbade him the closest contact, and it is only fair to say that he minded nobody. He was there when we went in and there when we came out, and it appears that when it is a question of lovmaking time is no more an object in Spain than in the United States. The scene would have been better by moonlight, but you cannot always have it moonlight, and the sun did very well; at least the lover did not seem to miss the moon.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine.

KENNEBEC SPEAKS.

FIRST GUN FIRED AT ISLAND PARK, AUGUSTA.

PETERS SOUNDS KEY NOTE—EX GOV. COBB MAKES RINGING ADDRESS—CLAMS AND LOBSTERS GALORE.

Last Thursday Kennebec county republicans started the third district congressional campaign with a clam bake, roll-call of towns and speeches.

The affair was held at Island park, a beautiful picnic ground near Augusta. Among the invited guests were ex-Gov. Cobb, of Rockland, Col. Frederick Hale, of Portland, national committeeman for Maine, Judge B. F. Maher, of Augusta, L. T. Carleton, of Winthrop, H. M. Bigelow, of Portland.

The dinner was preceded by a roll-call of towns, conducted by F. J. Ham, chairman of the county committee. Every town but two reported, most of them being represented by more than one committee-man. There are about 375 towns in Kennebec, and nearly 300 were present—279 by actual count.

The roll-call was followed by a stirring address by Col. Parkhurst, chairman of the State committee.

Lack of space permits a report in detail. Judge B. F. Maher presided at the post-prandial exercises, introducing in turn ex-Gov. Cobb, Mr. Peters, Col. Hale and Mr. Bigelow. All the addresses were full of enthusiasm and hope.

Naturally interest centered in the address of Mr. Peters, the republican candidate for Congress, who spoke as follows:

MR. PETERS' ADDRESS.

Gentlemen, we are entering upon a real fight, and I want to say that I am in it to win. We can win if you will put your backs into it. This is not exaggeration, no mere figure of speech. You gentlemen here represent the activity and efficiency of the party in Kennebec county. Your county will largely determine the result of this election. You have nearly twice as many votes as any other county, and if you swing solidly in any one direction, it will be almost conclusive in the result.

You take some chances in coming here because I have noticed lately that if more than twenty-five men get together in any one spot for the purpose of taking counsel together in relation to public affairs, they are instantly denominated a ring, and are held up to public scorn as a part of an intolerable machine.

I take it, however, that you belong to exactly the same kind of a ring that I do. That ring which embraces all citizens whose public spirit influences them to abandon their private affairs for the time being for what they believe to be the good of the community. I have been temporarily promoted from the ranks to help lead in this fight. I shall devote all my time to it until somebody surrenders. I am enlisted for the war, gentlemen, and I believe that you are, too.

THE SAME OLD FIGHT.

This is one of the most important political contests—most far-reaching in its results—that you have ever seen. The election last November was largely based on individualities. The great figure of Theodore Roosevelt dominated the field. Tariff legislation was in embryo. Everybody knew in a general way what the party stood for. We realized that the doctrine of protection was denounced by the democratic party as unconstitutional and a robbery of the people. As a general proposition it was the same old fight over protection against free trade.

That battle is now over; the democrats won. The vote against President Wilson exceeded the vote for him by more than a million, but he won and the general propositions of the democrats are now being crystallized into law. We know that their idea of a revenue law is, and we are beginning to realize its effect, but, whether we like it or not, the country at large cannot vote again. In this section of it, however, we have a chance to express our sentiments. God knows I wish we did not have that chance, because it is due to the untimely death of my friend and your friend, whom we elected last fall to represent the ideals of the people of this district, and if he had lived we would have been content, knowing that we were adequately and ably represented in Washington.

But we cannot shirk the duty that is thrust upon us, even if we would. Maine's voice is usually heard in September and is listened for with interest. This time we shall speak again in September, and the result will be eagerly watched for all over the country. Let us see to it that we speak in no whisper.

WHICH WILL YOU CHOOSE.

As I look at it the real proposition which is put up to us is whether or not we shall send a democrat to Congress.

Of course, if you believe that all protection principles should be squeezed out of the revenue laws, if you believe that a tariff protecting your business from foreign competition is unconstitutional; if you had rather have the duties removed from potatoes, oats, apples, lumber products and the other things that we produce in this northeastern section of the country where the democrats have little influence in Congress; if you believe that the best way to trim a tree is to take an axe and cut it down; then you should vote for the democratic candidate, and if you vote in accordance with your convictions, I have nothing more to say.

But if you believe what the convention of 1860 believed when it nominated the immortal Lincoln, "that while providing revenue for the support of the general government by duties upon imports, sound policy requires such an adjustment of these imports as to encourage the development of the industrial interests of the whole country, and we commend that policy of natural exchanges which secures to the working man liberal wages, to agriculture remunerative prices, to mechanics and manufacturers an adequate reward for their skill, labor and enterprise, and to the nation commercial prosperity and independence;" if you believe that a majority of the people have believed ever since and believe now, you will assuredly take thought and not vote for the democratic candidate, either directly or indirectly.

PATTANGALL AGAINST OWN STATE.

The democratic candidate well knows that the majority sentiment of the district is against the prevailing democratic policies. He is not blind. He is in no trance, as is shown by his nomination over his friend, our former Congressman Gould. He will argue, and it has already been argued for him, that he is just the man to send to Congress in this crisis, because he may be influential with his party associates.

It is suggested that he may be able to stop for a few moments the free-trade steam-roller that is about to flatten out this section of the country, and pull a few industries from in front of it. But he cannot do it. Nobody can do it from this section of the country. The ways of the secret democratic caucus are peculiar but mighty effective. A northern democrat might squirm some, but when he came out of the caucus he would be bound by its action, because that is what he went in for.

He would become one of the benchmen of Mr. Underwood, of Alabama, and would vote exactly as he directed, as democrats are doing at the present time. He would become an adjunct of the democratic caucus, and a well-disciplined follower of Mr. Underwood.

We don't need any more men to represent Alabama. We want a man to represent Maine and the majority sentiment of Maine. Don't get the idea that I claim that I can stop the democrat roller, or make it swerve one iota from its course. The fact is, neither of us can accomplish a thing. Very likely the bill will be passed before anybody gets there from this district.

"LICK" MAN WHO WEARS BOOT.

The question is bigger than that. The point is emphatically to express the true sentiment of the district on these questions. Shall we swallow the pill, or shall we spurn it? We can at least register a protest. I don't believe in licking the boot that kicks you—I believe in "licking" the man who wears the boot.

Can you give any good reason why we should send a man to Congress who represents only a minority of the sentiment of this district? Last September we didn't want a democrat by 700 majority; last November by 7,000, and now I believe we don't want one by at least 10,000, and if we get one it is because we are fooled by politicians.

Now what is it that the citizens of this district really want to accomplish? They care but little about individuals in this fight—they believe as I do, that principles are superior to persons. I take it that what the people want to accomplish is by their vote in September to give an effective expression of their sentiment on the most important questions of the day.

"SHOOT AT A MARK!"

Now consider for a moment whether this can be done by sending to Washington Mr. Lawrence, the progressive candidate. In this country there always has been, and always will be, two principal parties. A majority party in control for the time being, and an opposition party to be in control next time. At the present time the national House is composed of 290 democrats, 127 republicans, nine progressives, seven progress-republicans, one socialist and one independent, with one vacancy.

If we are in harmony with the 290, we should certainly send a democrat. If we are opposed to their policies we should add one to the 127—the opposition. To add one to the nine would mean nothing, and would simply be shooting in the air. I prefer to shoot at a mark, especially if by shooting in the air you are likely to hit somebody you don't intend to.

The 290 gentlemen, are going to lose control pretty soon, and then the 127, having grown to a majority, will be the dominant party, and then we can accomplish something. This is a business proposition, not a matter of idealism. No doubt the nine progressives in Congress are animated by high ideals, but they do not have a copyright on all the high ideals there are. They have no committee appointments, little influence and no hope of the future.

To my mind it would be a weak, futile and ineffective act in the present crisis to add one to the nine progressives now in Congress. Let us adopt such of their ideas as appeal to us—if they are not already adopted. Let us work these things out in a business-like way, without hysteria, without prejudice, with an open mind, looking only at the ultimate benefit to the State.

MR. LAWRENCE "CRAWFISHES".

The progressive candidate seems to be a little peevish about my candidacy. He suggests that I come over and join him. It is unfortunate that there are two candidates against the democrat. But whose fault is it? Immediately on signing nomination papers, believing that Mr. Lawrence and I held the same views on public questions, I made a proposition to him, characterized by the Boston Herald as "fair and sensible", and I have heard no fault found with it except by Mr. Lawrence and his immediate friends; and that was that they eliminate one of us by both going into the primaries as anti-democrats and letting the people take their pick, the loser to support the winner.

This proposition was made in good faith and adequate provision made to carry it out if accepted by Mr. Lawrence. He refused it on the ground that Mr. Roosevelt had more votes than Mr. Taft, which seemed to me, entirely foreign to this question, and also on the ground that he couldn't consistently enter the republican primaries.

CAN LAWRENCE JUSTIFY RUNNING?

I covered that point by having it understood beforehand that the winner should call himself anything he desired in Washington—progressive, progressive-republican or republican. The practical idea was to make use of the only machinery that we had on hand for ascertaining the wishes of the people. To be sure it was called a republican primary, but that was the only primary there was except the democratic and nobody would have thought the less of Mr. Lawrence if we had both submitted our faith to the decision of the people. It would have settled the schism in the party, and we could have beaten out the democrats in a walk, but that is all over now. The burden is on him now to justify his running and not on me to justify mine.

ROOSEVELT NOT IN THIS RACE.

Consider for a moment Mr. Lawrence's reason that Roosevelt had more votes than Taft, because he evidently claims that he inherited that vote and has a lien upon it. I take it that there were three large reasons prevailing here why Mr. Roosevelt got more votes than Mr. Taft—Roosevelt's popularity, Taft's unpopularity and dissatisfaction with the Chicago convention, but Mr. Roosevelt is no longer running; Mr. Taft is out of it forever, and my nomination is by direct and unsolicited vote of the people without the aid of a convention, good or bad.

Why should Mr. Lawrence claim to control the Roosevelt vote? If Mr. Roosevelt had been in Mr. Lawrence's place he would have accepted my proposition because he is big enough and broad enough to rise above mere party names. There was nothing in his principles which prevented him from seeking the republican nomination at Chicago and using it as he saw fit. Why should not Mr. Lawrence have accepted the republican nomination in the primaries—if he could have gotten it? Especially with the understanding as a part of the contract that he was only using machinery to ascertain the sentiment of the voters—and always remembering that he could call himself whatever he wanted to.

REFUTES LAWRENCE'S POSITION.

It is useless for Mr. Lawrence to assert that he has the Roosevelt vote in his pocket and to start with that assumption in his campaign. The very fact that so many of you gentlemen are here to-day, and probably one-half of you voted for Roosevelt, is a refutation of that position. Assertion does not prove anything. Figures can be relied upon, however, and I have some that are very significant in this connection.

In this State the only elections we have had since last November in which there were three candidates, republican, progressive and democrats are in eight cities. The total vote in those eight cities was practically the same in the spring as in November. In those same cities, in November, Mr. Taft, the republican candidate, received 21 per cent. of the total vote (neglecting fractions). In the spring the aggregate republican vote was 26 per cent. In November Mr. Roosevelt received 24 per cent. of the total vote.

In the spring the progressive candidates received 17 per cent. The democratic candidates received 43 per cent in November. The democratic candidates in the spring received 43 per cent. Of course, there were other issues involved, but there are other issues now. If we had figures for one city only it would not be much evidence, but we have the figures of eight municipalities, in every one of which there was a large shrinkage in the progressive vote, showing a tendency in this way to unite to defeat the democrats, and especially significant when anyone claims that the Roosevelt vote automatically and of necessity goes to any candidate who rises up and calls himself progressive.

THOMPSON NOT ROOSEVELT HEIR.

Mr. E. M. Thompson, of Augusta, the most popular and best-known candidate for mayor received at one election 215 votes against 857 thrown the fall before for Mr. Roosevelt. It seems that he wasn't the political heir of Mr. Roosevelt! If these figures are any indication, if it is happening, as we know it is all over the district, that men who voted for Roosevelt are uniting with us in our opposition to the democrats, isn't it perfectly true that a vote for Mr. Lawrence amounts to a one-half vote for Mr. Pattangall?

In other words, there are two ways of helping Mr. Pattangall. The best way for him is to vote for him direct, but if two of us vote for Mr. Lawrence, it will have the same effect.

PAINT OUR COLORS TO THE MAST.

Gentlemen, it is not agreeable to me to ask you for your votes. I would not do it did I not feel that you realize that it is not to gratify personal ambition, so much as to co-operate with you in finding a way to express the real sentiment of this district. I am merely an incident, an instrument. It is too important a fight to consider any man's personal ambition or future—mine or that of anybody else.

I am in the fight because I feel that I am called to the colors, and if you will stay with me we will nail them to the mast.

Many are not being benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little if any stronger than they were. The tan or their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, builds up the whole system.—Advt.
