REV. R. B. MATHEWS RESIGNS. Parish Urges Him to Reconsider—Will Do So.

Consternation reigned in the Congregational church last Sunday morning, when Rev. R. B. Mathews, who has been the pastor for nearly seven years, read his resignation, to take effect the last Sunday in the current year.

On Monday evening at an adjourned parish meeting the matter of the pastor's resignation was taken up. This meeting was one of the most largely attended parish meetings ever held. The feeling was unanimous that every effort should be made to induce Mr. Mathews to withdraw his resignation, and this sentiment took the form of a set of resolutions and the appointment of a committee to wait upon the pastor, and by word of mouth urge him to remain. The resolutions were as follows:

Whereas, The society receives with deep and sincere regret the proffered resignation of Rev. R. B. Mathews as pastor of this society and church after a most acceptable service of nearly seven years; and

Whereas, It is the earnest desire of church, society and people that he still continue in the pastorate;

Resolved, That this resignation be not accepted, and that with assurances of our continued undiminished esteem and affection, Mr. Mathews be earnestly requested to withdraw his resignation; also

Resolved, That his resignation be not accepted; that he be requested to withdraw his resignation, and this request be communicated to Mr. Mathews by the clerk.

Mr. Justice King, Hon. John A. Peters and Deacon John H. Brimmer were appointed the committee to wait upon Mr. Mathews. While it cannot be stated definitely what the outcome will be, THE AMERICAN is advised that there is good reason for hoping that Mr. Mathews will be persuaded to remain, and this hope is not limited to the Congregational church and society, but is shared in by the community generally.

The other business of this meeting was the unfinished business of the adjourned meeting of the week before. Ex-Chief Justice Emory presided. O. W. Tapley was re-elected clerk and treasurer; Henry M. Hall, A. W. King, J. F. Knowlton standing committee.

It was voted to raise funds for the support of preaching by voluntary subscriptions, and the following were chosen solicitors and collectors: Mesdames A. H. Joy, H. M. Hall, G. A. Purcher, F. W. Rollins.

A finance committee was appointed as follows: M. Y. McGown, Jero T. Giles, F. O. Silsby.

To stimulate interest among the men, it was voted that at an early date as possible a public supper be given, to be provided, cooked and served by the men, and the following committee of arrangements was chosen: His Honor Mayor Cunningham, A. H. Joy, L. H. Cushman, J. T. Giles, Harry W. Haynes, M. Y. McGown.

Congressman Peters Home.

Hon. John A. Peters, of this city, the recently-elected congressman from the third district, is home from Washington, and hopes to be able to remain until the opening of the regular session in December.

Before being sworn in, Mr. Peters was taken to the private office of Speaker Champ Clark, and personally introduced to that distinguished democrat. The newly-elected representative was cordially greeted with the joose remark: "Well, Mr. Peters, I am sorry to see you here."

Mr. Peters did not vote on the tariff bill after all. He paired with Representative Graham, of Illinois, and went to West Virginia and delivered several political speeches in a special congressional campaign which is going on there.

Lesson II.—Fourth Quarter, For Oct. 12, 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Num. xii—Memory Verses, 10, 11—Golden Text, I Cor. xiii, 4, 5—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The first verse of this lesson mentions the three children of this renowned family of Amram and Jochebed of the tribe of Levi of the family of Kohath (Ex. vi. 26-29). They are mentioned again in Num. xxi, 57-59. Moses was eighty years old, and Aaron was eighty-three when they spoke unto Pharaoh that he should let Israel go that they might serve the Lord.

Miriam must have been the oldest, for when Moses was three months old she was old enough to watch what might happen to the babe in the ark of bulrushes, to suggest to Pharaoh's daughter a nurse for the babe and to bring her mother as the nurse. The tribe of Levi was chosen by the Lord instead of all the firstborn in Israel, and they were given unto Aaron to minister unto him.

They were to encamp about it, take it down, carry it from place to place, set it up and have all the care of it. They were not to be numbered with the other tribes. They had no inheritance in the land, like the other tribes, but only cities to live in. The Lord Himself was their inheritance, and they lived upon the tithes of the others and were to give to the Lord the tenth part of the tithes they received (Num. i. 47-54; ii. 33; iii. 5-13; xi. 51; vii. 2-3; xiii. 20-26; xxxv. 1-8).

The sons of Levi were Gerson and Kohath and Merari. Amram belonging to the Kohathites, whose special charge was the holy vessels, while the others carried the heavier parts, as boards, pillars, sockets, curtains, for which wagons and oxen were provided, while the vessels, properly covered, were borne upon their shoulders (Num. ii. 17, 27-37). Miriam is called a prophetess, and she was honored in leading the praises of the other women (Ex. xv. 20, 21). Aaron was given to Moses to be his spokesman or prophet.

While there might be complaining and murmuring among others in Israel, might we not expect to find in this household the love of our Golden Text, that is always kind? But, no, the heart everywhere is deceitful and desperately wicked, and the author of all strife and confusion is ever busy.

It is always true that our adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour, and we are not always careful to resist him (I Pet. v. 8, 9). Zipporah was neither the first nor the last woman spoken against in her own home or by her relatives by marriage.

We think of Hannah, who suffered much from her adversary in her own home, who provoked her sore to make her fret (I Sam. i. 6), but as Hannah's resort was the one who hears prayer (Ps. lxxv. 2), so may He be the refuge of all tired ones. We might think that respect for Moses, whom the Lord had so honored, would prevent his brother and sister from speaking against his wife, but they spoke even against him also, saying: "Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? Hath He not spoken also by us?" (verse 2).

Happy are those who can leave their affairs to Him to manage and roll off all the burden, casting all the care upon Him, for He careth. In this case at least Moses was very meek (verse 3), and that was evidently the manner of his life. The prophet, like unto Moses, said that we would find rest in bearing the yoke of meekness and lowliness (Matt. xi. 29).

The Lord heard their words (verse 2), and it should be a comfort to every child of God that He hears every word spoken against us and sees every thought.

One of the best things I know is that He hears those who talk to one another about Him and keeps a book of remembrance for all who even think upon His name (Mal. iii. 16). In this case we read that the Lord spoke suddenly. If that is the correct word the best translation, it may indicate that these two were taken by surprise perhaps not considering that the Lord was taking notice. Aaron evidently forgetting that less than a year before he had been commissioned to say to Israel: "Come hear before the Lord for He hath heard your murmurings" (Ex. xvi. 6-10).

The Lord said, "Come out ye three" (verse 4), for they were the only ones concerned in this.

The three came forth, and the Lord came down in the pillar of cloud and talked with Aaron and Miriam concerning the honor He had put upon Moses and asked why they were not afraid to speak against him (verses 5-8). Compare Deut. xxxiv. 7, 10-12, concerning the way the Lord honored Moses. His servant.

See in Heb. iii. 5, 6, Moses and Christ spoken of and the house of each, and consider what might happen today to those who do not hesitate to speak against Christ, denying His Deity. His supernatural birth. His resurrection from the dead. His coming again in glory, were God to deal with them as He dealt with Miriam. As Miriam was punished and not Aaron, she must have been the leader in talking against Moses because of his wife. Was it jealousy? Consider Moses' prayer for his sister, "Hear her now, O God, I beseech Thee!" (verse 13). She was healed, but not instantly, as some would have us think is the only way.

Mutual Benefit Column.
EDITED BY "AGENT MAGGE".
Its Motto: "Helpful and Hopeful."
The purposes of this column are succinctly stated in the title and motto—it is for the mutual benefit, and aims to be helpful and hopeful. Being for the common good, it is for the common use—a public servant, a purveyor of information and suggestion, a medium for the interchange of ideas. In this capacity it solicits communications, and its success depends largely on the support given it in this respect. Communications must be signed, but the name of writer will not be printed except by permission. Communications will be subject to approval or rejection by the editor of the column, but none will be rejected without good reason. Address all communications to

THE SONG OF THE HOUSEKEEPER.
Sing a song of cleaning house,
Pocket full of nails,
Fear and twenty dustpans,
Scrubbing-brooms and pails.
When the door is opened,
Wife begins to sing
A song like this, in various keys,
That makes the bare wall ring:
"Just help me move this bureau here,
And hang this picture, won't you, dear?
And tack that carpet by the door,
And stretch this one a little more.
And drive this nail and screw this screw,
And here's a job I have for you—
This closet door will never catch;
I think you'll have to fix the latch;
And, oh, while you're about it, John,
I wish you'd put the cornice on,
And hang this curtain; when you're done
I'll hand you up the other one;
This box has got to have a hinge
Before I can put on the fringe;
And won't you mend that broken chair?
I'd like to have a hook right there.
And would you mind to take a bite
Of cold lunch now, and wait till night
For something good and hot?
There's coffee warming over in the pot.
The pantry door must have a knob.
And here's another little job—
I really have to ask you, dear,
But could you put a bracket here?"
And so it goes, when these are through
With this and that and those to do,
Ad infinitum—and more, too. —John.
—Sent by Alexia.

Dear M. B. Friends:
The poem signed "John" will be appreciated by the many of that name connected with the column. The writer had evidently had experience, whether "John" or "John's" wife was the author.

The fall housecleaning may disclose a large amount of dust, especially to those whose houses are located on roads frequented by many autos, but many have remarked on the scarcity of flies this season—not, however, expressing regret at their non-appearance.

From time to time one hears discussions and arguments as to what events or happenings or calamities may really be called accidents. The idea has been advanced that the cause of many or most of the so-called accidents can be traced to neglect or carelessness on the part of someone having an "investigation" after scores have been killed or injured in a railway collision or by derelict makes one think the "investigation" should have taken place so early that errors in the system of signals or in the conditions of the rail tracks, or possibly in the habits of men filling places of responsibility, might have been corrected or avoided; then no post-mortem investigation would have been called for.

Did you ever remove from the sidewalk an orange or banana peel someone had carelessly thrown down? Did you ever stop to throw out of the traveled highway a particularly small round stone which on a down-hill grade would be a bad thing for a horse to step on? Did you ever pick up and remove a piece of paper, to avoid an "accident", on the road if some horse should find it whirled beneath its feet or floating in front of him, by a gust of wind? I hope you will "investigate" this question of accidents. Minor ones frequently occur; what caused them?

In connection with these thoughts there is an article in the American Magazine for September which shows the practical working of this theory. E. F. Schneider is manager of an interurban trolley line on the Cleveland, Southwestern and Columbus railway. On Memorial day, 1907, a trolley car was wrecked at Elyria, Ohio; eight passengers were killed and many lost their limbs or were otherwise injured.

Mr. Schneider went there. He is a human being. He could not get away from the question: "Why did that accident happen?" Why does any accident happen? He did some earnest thinking, looked up statistics, and found that only two per cent. of all railroad accidents are chargeable to God's will, thirteen per cent. to negligence of the public, and eighty-five per cent. to negligence of employees.

He called the trainmen together on each division and talked to them—the first speech he ever made in his life, and he has done the same thing every sixty days since. He says: "Railroaders are a manly, big-hearted lot, and if you make them see these things, give them a little different education from the kind I had you can get them." And he surely gets them. Sixty-five per cent. of the men who were with him five years ago are with him yet. Then his accident account was 6.35 of the road's gross receipts; for the past two years it was 1.25. This is what taking care and precaution has done.

Here is something more. In Wooster and other towns a school building was near the line, and several children at different times had been killed when playing games near the track. Mr. Schneider started out again and made a speech to every class in every school along his line. He talked to 50,000 children, telling them just what they must do to be careful. Whenever a motor-man reports that the children of such and such a school are getting careless, Schneider is

WOMAN A GREAT SUFFERER

Tells How She Was Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Grayville, Ill.—"I was a great sufferer of female complaints for a year and I got nothing that helped me until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Now I have better health than I have had for years and I cannot speak too highly of your medicine." —Mrs. JESSIE SCHAAER, 413 Main St., Grayville, Ill.

Case of Mrs. Tully.
Chicago, Ill.—"I take pleasure in writing to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with such awful periodic pains, and had a displacement, and received no benefit from the doctors. I was advised to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and am now as well as ever." —Mrs. WILLIAM TULLY, 2052 Ogden Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

there on the drop of the hat. Result: The Southwestern hasn't killed a child in four years.

Schneider passed this idea along to the street-car commissioner of Cleveland, and he is carrying a campaign of education into the Cleveland schools, lecturing, and giving away booklets with six simple rules for safety printed on them.

A welcome letter from E. follows, for which and for the poem, "Every Year," I am very grateful.

GREAT FOND, Sept. 24, 1913.

Dear Aunt Magge:
Please pardon my seeming neglect. Surely I have not been for want of thought. The M. B. sisters, I presume, are situated as I am, with many city cousins and their friends for their summer outing, and we are so glad to welcome the dear faces back to the old home that we can think of but little else.

I intended to write you before the reunion, and did "take my pen in hand", but company came in, so I laid my pen aside and ideas went with it, but I thought of you all and what a good time you were having, confirmed by reading a description of meeting and banquet in THE AMERICAN. The sun always shines the brighter after a storm. It almost made me hungry, reading of the collation. I wonder there were not more Johns there. One can always appeal to the pocket through the stomach, we think, when we want a little cash, and the Johns make it interesting.

I never met Earnestine, but her going away always gave me a feeling of sadness.

Many changes have come over us every year. Many friends have gone before us every year. Through many a strange mutation we have reached a higher station every year. We have had our slight vexations every year. And pleasing jubiliations every year. There are visions to remember. Of flowers in September. And Christmas in December. The end of life comes nearer every year. The friends left become dearer every year. And the goal of all that's mortal opens wider still its portals. To the land of the immortal every year.

May every M. B. reunion grow happier!

Wants Information of the Gilleys.

WESTFIELD, N. J., Oct. 3, 1913.

To the Editor of The American:

In an article written by Capt. Habbidge, of Gott's Island, in this week's AMERICAN he mentions a Francis Gillely, who moved to Orland. Now, I remember, when a child, hearing my grandmother speak of "Uncle Frank", who lived in Orland. Her maiden name was Abigail Gillely. She had two brothers—Capt. Lewis and Justus Gillely—also several sisters—Mrs. Stanwood, Mrs. Freeman, Mrs. Wood, and others.

I have not been able to learn who their parents were, or where they came from, or whether they are connected with the Baker's Island or Southwest Harbor Gillelys. If there are any of Frank Gillely's descendants at Orland or Bucksport who can give me any information on this matter, I would be very glad to hear from them, either through THE AMERICAN or by mail.

A DEPUTY SHERIFF
By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

The stranger adult that first caught sight of the Widow Henderson of the town of Grand Ledge laughed outright or was dumb with amazement.

The Widow Henderson was exactly six feet four inches in height and weighed 200 pounds. Whether it was six feet four in her stockings or with her shoes on is none of the reader's business. She was homely as a burdock and as rugged as an oak. She had a voice like a bass drum and the strength of an ox.

You may have noticed that big men always marry little women, and vice versa. Her deceased husband was only five feet tall and his weight was just an even hundred. When she moved to Grand Ledge from a distant town she soon ran across Peter Hipps and marked him down for husband No. 2. Peter was five feet tall and weighed ninety-eight pounds. His face was smooth, and his voice was girlish.

The young man was by no means dull witted, but he was made the victim of much chaffing and joking. The climax came when the sheriff of the county appointed him a deputy. Grand Ledge was a pretty hard town, and there were a score of farmers around who came in at least once a week and made it worse. Peter Hipps was a cipher to them. Whenever he tried to exert his authority he was carried out and dumped into a mudhole or dropped off the bridge over the creek. Sometimes he was chased out of town and didn't dare return for two or three days.

The Widow Henderson heard and saw and knew, and one day when she met the lightweight deputy on the street she said:

"Baby, you sure need a protector. Shall we get married?"

"You bet."

And married they were next day, and on the next the bride walked seven miles to the county seat town and into the sheriff's office to say to that official:

"I want to be deputy sheriff at Grand Ledge."

"I'm looking for some one."

"Well, you needn't look any further. If I can't straighten the kinks out within a month I'll resign."

"Mebbe you know I appointed Pete Hipps as a joke?" queried the officer.

"Yes, I do, and you can appoint me the same way if you want to, but there won't be much joking after I get started. I'll make it a very solemn business for most of 'em."

"Well, I expect there'll be lots of talk about it, but you shall be a deputy."

The town considered that marriage as the greatest joke for twenty years. Every time it was mentioned a dozen men hooted and took another drink. They paraded in front of the bride's house and sang and swore and called and scared poor Peter until he crept under the bed and wailed:

"I thought you was going to do something."

"No hurry, baby," was the reply. "I'm giving the calf all the rope it wants. It ain't agin the law to hoot around when a couple gets married."

Next forenoon half a dozen horny handed sons of toil came in to sell their butter and eggs and have some fun. The fun was to consist of taking three or four drinks apiece and then chucking the newlyweds off the bridge to gether. Word was sent them that if they did not appear voluntarily the mob would pay the house a visit.

"Well, baby, the time has come!" grimly announced the bride to the groom.

"Lord, but I'm scart to death!" replied Peter as his teeth began to chatter.

"Baby, lemme tell you something. There's going to be a row, and we shall both be in it. You pin on your badge, get your handcuffs and club, and we are going out to crack heads. If you don't fight like a man nine feet high I'll take you over my knee and spank you before the whole town! Come on now."

Pete was all a-shiver, but he obeyed her. There were fifty men waiting in front of the postoffice, and of the number at least twenty were hilarious and ripe for mischief.

"To the creek! To the creek!" was shouted as the bride and groom halted and faced them.

"Now, baby," said the wife in a quiet voice, "the fun is due to begin! Pick out the hard cases and strike like the kick of a mule! It's a public spanking if you show the white feather!"

With a couple of warwhoops that would have done credit to Comanche chiefs, bride and groom sailed in. The toughs were taken unprepared. The clubs were wielded without mercy, and the rabble broke and fled with hardly a defense. They were followed and given more club, and then to the number of twelve were arrested, locked up for a couple of hours, and then taken before the justice of the peace and fined $7 each. The next day six men who couldn't see the point were hauled in and on the next three. In a month Grand Ledge looked good to everybody, and Mr. and Mrs. Hipps were on the top rung of the ladder of fame.

"Is the woman to be deputy right along?" was asked of the sheriff.

"You bet your boots," was the reply, "and when my term is out I'm going to get her nominated for my place, and Peter can be her bottle holder. Sakes alive, but how she would have slammed John L. around in his palmy days!"

DR. HASKELL WRITES INTERESTINGLY FROM JERUSALEM.

FIRST HAND VIEWS OF THE DISTURBED SITUATION IN THE ORIENT—THE JERUSALEM JEW.

[Written for THE AMERICAN by Rev. Horace B. Haskell, Director of Newman Biblical Institute, Jerusalem.]

Rev. Horace B. Haskell, formerly of Ellsworth, and former superintendent of the Backport district, East Maine Methodist conference, writes interestingly from Jerusalem, where he is now located as director of the Newman Biblical Institute. Dr. Haskell's many Ellsworth and Hancock county friends will be pleased to read this letter from him, and will second the editor of THE AMERICAN in the invitation to write again.

In a personal letter to THE AMERICAN, Dr. Haskell says:

So many of our friends in the eastern part of the State of Maine are urging us to share our experiences and tell "what is happening over there," that I venture to enclose the following article for publication in your excellent paper, which comes to our reading-room table, and which Mrs. Haskell and I so thoroughly enjoy. Through the columns of THE AMERICAN you keep us in touch, even as our friends cannot by private correspondence, with what is happening in east Maine.

If you find it useable and would like, I will send an article occasionally.

With our very best regards to you and all Ellsworth friends, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
HORACE B. HASKELL.

THE NEAR EAST.

Events are transpiring and movements passing with kaleidoscopic rapidity in the Near East. No man knows what a day may bring forth. It takes mail from this part of the Orient so many weeks to reach Ellsworth, that one runs a risk of triteness in attempting to "furnish news from the Holy Land" or to write up "political matters" in which American readers are interested. Our friends in Hancock, Washington and Penobscot counties are so insistent in inviting us to tell "what is happening over there," that we venture to send a few comments touching some Oriental matters of interest.

THE UNSPEAKABLE TURK.

The Christian diplomat and social reformer rejoices because he thinks the unspeakable Turk is driven out of Europe, and predicts an uprising shared by the Lebanon, Armenia, Mesopotamia, Kurdistan, Iraq and Palestine, which will end Turkish misrule and oppression, but do these men really know what they are talking and writing about?

There is agitation, unrest, dissatisfaction, and here and there a vilayet disturbance in Turkey in Asia, but who can tell what will be the outcome of these things and of the confusion in the Balkans? After peace is declared, Turkey retakes Adrianople and Bulgaria is harassed on every side—Roumania to the north, Serbia and Montenegro to the west, Greece to the south and Turkey to the east. Is Bulgaria to be effaced from the map? Dare Russia make a move? How long before all Europe may be one vast army marching to war?

In all probability better counsel will prevail, and when these lines are read some semblance of order may be evolving out of the chaos. God grant it! Tourists from America write the home papers, indulging in the most vehement and denunciatory language calling, the Ottoman government all the bad names our rich nother tongue supplies in this particular turn of English expression, but does it breathe forth the spirit of the Master?

Let us remember that the leaders among the Turks read these deliverances, and that they are Moslems; and let us remember also that the individual Turk one meets every day on the street is as fine a type of man as is found in Asia Minor and Syria, and I doubt not in the entire Levant.

The fact is that Turkey, in the assassinations, humiliations, dishonor and defeat of a few months ago, did not present to the world the abominable spectacle which is now presented by the so-called Christian Balkan states, throwing themselves, like angry dogs, at each other's throats for the few bones that are left, and at the connivance, some think, if not the actual instigation of certain Christian nations.

The Ottoman empire—this large part of the Moslem world—appeals to the great Christian nations for sympathy and friendship, and at this hour of untold opportunity and tremendous responsibility, when the supremacy of the religion of Mohammed and the religion of the Christ is in the balance in the Near East, what are the Christian nations thinking and doing? Oh, Christendom, listen!

Even ministers of the Gospel, calling the Turks vile names, Christian churches heartlessly rejoicing at Turkish suffering, and Christian nations watching with cunning diplomacy a chance to add to their own prestige and power at the discomfort of weaker governments. Have Christian people no tears for widows and orphans, no kind words for other human beings, simply because they are Turks?

What Asia Minor, Syria, the Levant, the entire Turkish empire needs, and what Bulgaria needs; in fact, what all this bleeding and suffering part of the world needs, is love and sympathy, prayers and sacrifices bestowed with lavish hand and generous heart by the followers of the Christ.

ENGLAND'S SHARE OF THE SPOILS.

The Arabs of Oman have revolted against their sovereign and priestly head, the Imam, Sayed Faisal bin Turki, and chosen a new sovereign and Imam, an Arab of the Kharusi tribe, Salem bin Rashid. Sayed Faisal's troops are unable to subdue the revolutionists, and Nizwah, Rustak, Zaki, Awabi, and other places, have fallen. Even while I write, my friend, Yusuf Stephan, receives news direct from Oman from his friend, Sayed Mohammed bin Said, whose father was vizier to the sultan, that Samail, the leading pass to Maskat, the capital, has been captured, and that the British government is interfering in behalf of the endangered sultan, and has dispatched warships to the coast and landed troops at different points to uphold the sultan's authority on the littoral zone and as far back in the interior as possible.

This is not by any means the first time that the British government has interfered in behalf of Sayed Faisal against rebellious tribesmen. The revolt in Oman is attracting the attention of the world because it emphasizes England's interest in the Persian gulf. American papers eulogize England's disinterestedness and generous attitude toward all parties involved in the outcome of the Balkan-Turkish disturbances. The eyes of the world have been focused upon the Balkan States and Turkey in Europe, while Great Britain's diplomacy has been directed to the Asiatic end of the Turkish empire. While the attention of the reading public has been held to the scenes of conflict at Adrianople, Scutari and Janina, and to the assassinations and changes of government at Constantinople, the British government found a most opportune moment to open negotiations concerning a suzerainty over the coast line of El Hesa, and to reopen the question of concessions for a railroad from Busra, at the head of the Persian gulf, to Bagdad, 500 miles north-west into the very heart of Asiatic Turkey.

This raises a vital question not heretofore thought of; namely, what is England's share of the spoils of war in the Near East? The answer is nothing less than suzerainty over the entire coast line of the Turkish empire on the Persian gulf, with centers at Koweit and Bahrain Islands, and concessions to build and control a railroad from Busra to Bagdad. Oman has long been a British protectorate.

What does this all mean? Look at the map for a moment, and if the reader has not noticed it before, a revelation is in store for him. England borders Palestine on the south and controls the Red Sea, the Gulf of Aden, whose waters wash the shores of the Turkish provinces of El Hedjaz and Yemen, the Indian ocean, the Arabian sea, and the gulf of Oman, and now the Persian gulf, with Persia on the east and Turkey on the north and the west.

England, therefore, surrounds a large part of Asiatic Turkey, and were Turkey to be divided among the European nations, it looks as though the lion's share would fall to the lot of the "Mother of Colonies." The British government has guaranteed the integrity of the Turkish empire in Asia for forty years, with the understanding that the Turkish government carry out certain specified reforms. Is this not great diplomacy, for is it not of the utmost importance to Great Britain that Turkey retain her independence for the present in Asia?

England is playing a wonderful game of politics in the East. France, realizing this and what all these concessions mean to England, is demanding large favors from Turkey, and contemplates establishing a great university in Jerusalem. The Russian government points to the fact that the majority of Jews in Palestine are Russian subjects, in order to add weight to her contention that she has vital interests and grave responsibilities in the Holy Land. The Jews, in trying to strengthen their position, have raised the question of the feasibility of establishing a university on broad Jewish lines in Jerusalem. This is the providential moment for the Methodist Episcopal church, "swayed into the ancient capital of Palestine by apparently irresistible circumstances," to arise in her great might and meet the cry of the Orient for the Christian instruction along biblical and missionary training lines she alone can give. Oh, that some man of means in America would make his name immortal by coming speedily to the help of the Newman Biblical Institute, missionary training and allied schools.

THE JERUSALEM JEW.

As a type and character, the Jerusalem Jew—mark it, I say the Jerusalem Jew—is inferior to the Turk and his near kinsman, the Arab, descendant of Ishmael. In appearance he is small of stature, malarial, wearing a full beard, with strings of long hair hanging in ringlets over his ears and with the remainder of the hair on his head usually cropped close.

I have always spoken earnestly in defence of the persecuted Jew and all persecuted peoples, for that matter, regardless of race or religion. When it came to the cause of all his troubles, I exonerated the Jew. Since living in Jerusalem I have been disillusioned. As a disinterested observer of occurrences, I am forced reluctantly to believe that the Russian and Polish Jew is the cause, to a greater or less measure, of the anti-Semitism of the times.

The Jerusalem Jew is capable of doing those little, mean, despicable acts that tend to irritate and make ill-feeling and finally result in persecution. To illustrate: Mrs. Elizabeth Finn, widow of the British consul to Jerusalem, bought, in 1882, land for the sole purpose of giving employment to poor and needy Jews. The immense cisterns of Abraham's vineyard supply water to many Jewish families—an untold blessing in this land of summer drought—without money and without price. The grapes are given away the same, while scores of aged men and poor boys are paid good wages for doing little except to "putter round."

In the very face of this philanthropic enterprise, Jews built two stone walls sixty feet long and from six to eight feet high directly below the entrance to the gates of the grounds, across the right of way of the vineyard, and there the walls are standing and will stand until the Turkish courts order them removed.

Again, the American colony, always kind to the Jews, never turning any of them away, but feeding many of them, often find their charity required by these very Jews destroying the flower-gardens and doing other deeds of vandalism. Not long ago a Jew was arrested by the Christian and Missionary alliance for breaking up a religious service. I saw a mob of a thousand Jews jabbering and gesticulating in justification of a disturbance of the peace. These are facts.

After seeing what I see and being told what I am being told, I understand what our Jewish friend in America meant when he said he was sorry that we were going to Jerusalem to live, and when we asked why, answered: "Because I wonder what you will think of us when you return."

Perhaps it is well to say, in this connection, that a Jew of a better type said to me recently, "Jerusalem is the pauper-house of the Jewish world," and it is a matter of common conversation that money is pouring into Jerusalem from all parts of the world to enrich Jewish enterprises, support, and individual offers. But there are Jews and Jews, and, be it said with all credit to the race, that there are fine types of the Jew in Jerusalem, one of whom is the American vice and deputy consul, Samuel Edelman.

The Jews of the agricultural colonies in Palestine seem to be of an entirely different character also. The population of Jerusalem is estimated to be from 80,000 to 100,000, fully two-thirds of whom are Jews. Jerusalem is as much a Jewish city as Ellsworth would be were two-thirds of its population Jews and Saturday observed as the Sabbath and the Israelites, calendar in use.

The Zionist movement is gaining momentum. It is a fond dream of the Jew that some day he may rule in the land of his fathers. Incompetent and bad even as in Turkish rule, it is not to be compared with the state of things that would ensue immediately were the Jerusalem Jew to govern the city. The lives of Christians and Moslems would be made unbearable.

In view of these revelations so startling to me, the question arises: What is the Christian to do? It is for the representatives of Christianity to be patient, forbearing, generous, Christ-like in spirit, showing to this branch of the Jewish race the dominant power of the gospel of Christ over the lives of his followers, and thereby weaving an influence that shall draw the Jew to a larger conception of the brotherhood of humanity where he may become a lover of all mankind as well as of his race only.

KITRERY TO CARIBOU.

The annual meeting of the Maine teachers' association will be held at Bangor Oct. 30 and 31.

Three hundred thousand dollars of State of Maine bonds, issued under the recent order, have been awarded to Perry, Coffin & Barr, of Boston, the highest bidders, at 100.52.

Lizzie, aged twelve, daughter of Peter Burton, of Weekaboro, was killed last week by the accidental discharge of a small rifle in the hands of her brother, aged fifteen.

The biggest liquor seizure on record in Maine was made at Poxland last week, when a power boat which put in there for harbor was searched, and about 800 gallons of liquors seized.

At the closing sessions of the Maine Baptist convention, and the Maine Free Baptist association in Bangor last week, resolutions were adopted by both sides looking to the unity of the two.

Dr. J. N. Merrill, for many years one of the prominent physicians and surgeons of Somerset county and the oldest physician of Skowhegan, died suddenly Thursday, aged seventy-one years.

Within two weeks, barring accidents, the new dam of the Bangor Power Co. at Veazie will be completed. The cost is $175,000, and the time necessary for the building extended from May 1, 1912, to this fall. J. A. Leonard, chief engineer, had charge of the work.

Congressman John A. Peters' first official act was the selection for the military academy at West Point, of Claude Willis Townsend, Jr., of Augusta. Townsend was to have been appointed by Congressman Goodwin, but before the papers were filed Mr. Goodwin died.

Frank H. H. Boody, aged thirty years, a traveling real estate agent, of Portland, in a delirium jumped out of the fourth story window of the Maine general hospital last Thursday and was instantly killed. Mr. Boody was taken to the hospital ill of typhoid fever about a week ago.

In a quarrel over a card game at Rumford Sunday, Luigi Reias was killed and Mario Balba dangerously wounded. Balba, who is at the hospital with a bullet-hole at the back of his mouth, is under police surveillance on the charge of shooting Reias. The house where the shooting occurred was the scene of a tragedy two years ago, when Joseph Bill, now a life inmate of the state-prison, shot and killed his wife.

Rev. Wilbur F. Berry, superintendent of the Christian Civic League of Maine and editor of the official publication of that organization, was arrested Monday on a charge of criminally libeling Associate-Justice George F. Haley, of the supreme court. The alleged libel was contained in an article printed in the Civic League Record criticizing the judge's action in settling seventy-five liquor cases in Bangor with fines.

SKUNKS ARE PROTECTED.

Warning to Hunters Unfamiliar with New Law.

Hunters who have been bagging coons and skunks lately are likely to get into trouble. They should keep informed on the laws. Here is something of interest to hunters of fur-bearing animals, it being one of the new laws:

Whoever, from the first day of March to the thirty-first day of the following October, both days inclusive, hunts, traps, kills, pursues or catches any fur-bearing animal (except bears, muskrats, bob-cats, beaver, looper, plover, Canada lynx, foxes and weasels), or whoever, from the first day of May to the thirty-first day of the following October, both days inclusive, hunts, traps, kills, pursues or catches any muskrats, shall pay a fine of ten dollars and costs for each offense, and in addition thereto three dollars for each fur-bearing animal hunted, trapped, killed, pursued or caught in violation hereof, or whoever, at any time, hunts, traps, kills, pursues, catches or has in possession any beaver, or part thereof, except as herein provided, shall pay a fine of one hundred dollars and costs for each offense.

Any person may lawfully kill any wild animal (other than beaver) or any wild birds found destroying his property.

Reports from various places tell of hunters killing coons and skunks. Evidently these hunters have not read the law. The purpose of the close time is to prevent the killing of these and other animals until their fur is good.

A man traveling in Maine met a middle-aged farmer who said his father, ninety years old, was still on the farm where he was born. "Ninety years old, eh?" "Yep; pop is close to ninety." "Is his health good?" "Tain't much now. He's been complainin' for a few months back." "What's the matter with him?" "I dunno; sometimes I think farmin' don't agree with him."

Tobacco Should be Smoked Up As Soon as it's Cut Up

Then it is bound to be fresh—to smoke cool and sweet—because the natural moisture hasn't a chance to escape. That's the reason experienced smokers stick to the good old Sickle plug—slice off a fresh pipeful as they need it—and get all the original flavor and fragrance that have been pressed in the plug, and kept there by the natural leaf wrapper.

These smokers could save a minute's time by getting their tobacco already cut up—but they know it would also be dried up, would burn fast and bite their tongues.

You'll find solid satisfaction in smoking Sickle. And you'll get more tobacco, because there is no package to pay for. Your dealer sells Sickle.

The Music Festival.

The great annual musical event in Maine—the festival—began in Bangor last Thursday, and closes in Portland to-night, and marks the seventeenth triumph of its irrepressible conductor-in-chief, William R. Chapman, of Maine and New York.

Artistically it has been quite the equal of any of its predecessors, and the superior of many, for Mr. Chapman has never permitted the high standard set at the beginning to be in any respect lowered.

After every festival the question is always heard: "Is this the last? Can the festival be maintained?" Invariably the answer comes from those who are authorized to speak: "It's not the last; it can and will be maintained."

Already some of the local choruses have reorganized, and will soon begin rehearsals for the festival of 1914. Lovers of oratorio will be glad to learn that next year Mendelssohn's masterpiece, "Elijah," is to be sung again, and it is hoped that Ffrancion Davies, the great English baritone, and Evan Williams, the great American tenor, will be engaged.

The only bad feature about this year's festival in both Bangor and Portland was the weather, which greatly interfered with the attendance.

Tariff Bill Passed.

The second tariff-for-revenue-only bill passed since the Civil war has been signed by President Wilson, and is a law of the land. Time only can demonstrate its wisdom or unwisdom.

The party in power is entirely consistent in passing the bill; it believes a tariff for protection is fundamentally wrong, regardless of its effects on the industries of the country; regardless of its revenue-producing power. It believes that a tariff for revenue only can be so framed as not only to give adequate revenue, but also to give incidentally as much protection as the industries of the country require for maintenance and a reasonable profit.

Every previous tariff law based on these propositions has proved totally inadequate either as a revenue producer or as affording adequate protection; has proved a colossal economic blunder. The present law may prove otherwise, if it does, the question will cease to be a political one, and that is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Bird Lovers Rejoice.

Those who are interested in the protection of bird life—and who are not—are greatly rejoiced that the new tariff law contains the clause for which they have so strenuously contended providing for the prohibition of the importation of wild birds' plumage, and the abolition of the traffic in feathers and skins of slaughtered wild birds.

This victory was accomplished only after a most strenuous campaign in the Senate, where powerful influences were brought to bear against the House bill.

Bird protectors in Germany, France and England have sent congratulations to their co-workers in the United States on their victory.

No one was more active in this section in bringing about the desired result than Miss C. J. Stanwood, the well-known ornithologist, of this city.

Job for Pattangall?

The Washington correspondent of the Bangor Commercial writes that Senator Johnson called upon the President last Monday, and that it is understood that the President may be willing to nominate a Maine democrat as assistant attorney-general, a place, paying $5,000 annually.

No one is particularly in mind, although the attorney-general is said to have considered whether W. R. Pattangall, of Waterville, would care to accept the nomination.

A Life Shave.

The bet between B. F. Maxim and H. E. Riggs, barber at North Water, at the last election for representative to Congress, was won by Mr. Maxim.

The bet was thus: Should Mr. Lawrence receive the most votes, Mr. Maxim was to pay double price for a shave; be it Mr. Peters, Mr. Riggs was to give him a free shave the rest of his natural life.

The result of the bet is very pleasing to Mr. Maxim.

COUNTY GOSSIP.

Franklin grangers are working for a new bill.

A moose, driven into the water by bounds and drowned, was towed ashore at Manset last week.

Wild violets, dandelions, buttercups and daisies were among nature's contributions to a last Sunday stroller near Ellsworth.

The town of Eden, at a special meeting last week, adopted the act passed by the last legislature for a change in the method of electing officers. Under the new plan, nominations will be made by caucus or by petition, and ballots will be printed as in elections in cities. This will greatly shorten the annual town meeting, as the balloting for each office separately will be eliminated and balloting can be done while the voters are discussing and acting upon other matters in the warrant.

TO HELP THE FARMER.

Boston Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture.

Ever since the reorganization of the Boston Chamber of Commerce in 1900, it has been felt that it could and ought to help in the development of agriculture, which is one of New England's largest industries. In 1909 there were $867,000,000 invested in farms, and the value of products for that year was $282,000,000.

The Chamber has recently re-organized its committee on agriculture, and secured as chairman Theodore N. Vail, who besides being president of the American Telephone & Telegraph company, has, at Lyndonville, Vermont, a large farm and one of the most practical agricultural schools in the country. Associated with Mr. Vail on the committee are Nathaniel I. Bowditch, William H. Bowker, Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, Charles M. Cox, George H. Ellis, Harold L. Frost, Richard Hittinger, John C. Runkle, Walter E. Smith, Charles F. Whiting and Wickliffe J. Spaulding. John C. Orcutt has been engaged as permanent secretary.

The present conditions in agriculture are of great concern to farmers' manufacturers and business men of New England. A good many farmers claim that on account of not being able to get good help and because of no adequate system of marketing, there is little money to be made in farming at present.

Manufacturing depends on labor and labor in some form constitutes the greatest element of cost in the production of manufactured articles. The cost of labor is regulated, generally speaking, largely by the cost of food. At present 75 per cent. of New England's food supply comes from outside her borders. New England can and ought to raise a greater proportion of her food-supply; and it is of importance to manufacturing and business interests that she should.

Sixty years ago New England produced nearly as much as she consumed. The cheap lands of the West attracted her more progressive people. As soon as the railroads were built the land which they had taken up rose in value and when sold made them a handsome fortune. The many railroad lines furnished good transportation, and as the land was new and easily tilled, crops could be raised much more cheaply than in New England.

Now the free land of the West is all taken up and the virgin soil is being gradually reduced; the price of land has risen and the amount of production per acre has decreased materially. To fertilize this large area of land and bring it back to its original productivity will cost a large sum of money and require a great deal of labor. The agricultural products of the country have greatly increased in total amounts produced, but the production per acre has decreased except in a few sections.

The committee believes that New England has many acres of land that are capable of being developed into a state of high production; that farms can be bought in many of these sections for less than it cost to erect the buildings; that this land can be developed at a small cost; that this land is right at the door of the world's best markets, furnished by people having the greatest purchasing power in the world; that transportation facilities, city and town highways, electric and steam roads are unsurpassed.

The committee has made a preliminary survey of what is now actually being done in New England agriculture. This shows that, generally speaking, the state departments of agriculture, state colleges, experiment stations and private agencies are perhaps covering the field of experimentation and production very well, but that there has been very little done in the way of improving transportation facilities, distribution and marketing. These, with the change of attitude in regard to the possibilities in New England farming, are the greatest problems that confront New England agriculture to-day.

The committee will not undertake to do directly constructive work that is now being done by existing agencies, but will work with all these agencies to improve New England agriculture. It will try to secure the co-operation and support of the business men and transportation companies for the development of New England agriculture as a business industry. It will mostly confine its activities to working out, in co-operation with the New England lines of railroad, state and private agencies, some of the most practical problems confronting the farmers to-day, and will announce its detailed plans from time to time.

Paint Now

If you properly needs it; don't wait. There are two parts of a job; the paint and the work; the work is more than the paint; and it never comes down.

The cost of paint is about two-fifths; the work three-fifths.

Paint won't come down in a hurry; too many jobs put off.

Men are waiting for $2 or $3; they don't know it; they think they are waiting for $20 or $25.

Why don't men use their heads?

FINDING BAR HARBOR.

How Alpheus Hardy, the Pioneer Cottager, Heard of It.

[From the Bangor Commercial.]

In the early sixties an old lady, resident of the town of Eden, one of the three towns on the island of Mount Desert on the coast of Maine, who had been in the habit of picking, curing and doing up carefully in little parcels many of the simple herbs, more or less medicinal and culinary, desired to visit Boston, and to help out her expenses on the trip, she decided to take along a generous supply of the "yarbs", as they were commonly designated by the simple folk of that then sparsely settled village.

In the course of her efforts to dispose of these herbs she visited in Boston, the office of Alpheus Hardy, one of Boston's successful lawyers. Liking her pleasant manner of proceeding to business, and fortunately having just finished his day's labors, Mr. Hardy drew from the woman a full account of her experience in this line of business, and being favorably drawn towards her by her simple and honest way of expression, he learned that as yet she had made no settled arrangements for staying in the city for the short time she was to spend there. He recalled that Mrs. Hardy was quite an advocate of using samples for many of the ills of humanity. Out of kindness of heart as much as any other motive he invited the woman to accompany him to his home at the south end, where, he told her, she would be sure to find a good patron.

After an excellent supper, which was a new and delightful experience to her herb merchant, Mr. Hardy and his kind wife commenced to look over the stock in trade of which they bought very liberally. The conversation drifted round to the place where they were secured, and at the mention of "Eden" a decidedly great interest was aroused in Mr. Hardy and his wife. Eden—was there still an Eden on earth? There certainly was if the description given by this honest, kindly woman was keeping anywhere within the limits of truth.

The evening passed away and the interest of the Hardys was only partially satisfied in so short a time. The woman must make her home with them while in the city and tell them more of this beautiful island on which towered thirteen mountain peaks, with wooded glens of surprising beauty; of walks and drives, enchanting in their loveliness; of myriads of wonderful rocks and caves and headlands and coves, and all the many attractions, known then to so few, but which since have become to many hundreds of thousands so attractive and their influence so lasting.

In the early spring of 1865, when it was seen that the cause of the Confederacy was about lost, many of the regiments whose terms of enlistment were expiring returned home.

Among others to reach home were two sons of Alpheus Hardy, and, like thousands of others, they needed rest after a long and hard campaign in war service at the front.

As Mr. Hardy was very wealthy, he decided, before his sons selected their life's vocation, to give them a good long rest and vacation to last many weeks into the cool of autumn.

He and his wife decided that they would all go to this "land of Eden" in which they had so recently been led to believe special opportunities for which they sought were to be found.

The latter part of June he called at Foster's wharf, Boston, and secured a suite of the best staterooms on steamer Katahdin (of which I was at that time a clerk); also room for a pair of horses, a barouche and several packages of stores, etc.

Like the careful business man he was, he made some inquiries in regard to Mt. Desert. Fortunately he struck the right person to inform him, as my own father was a native of Bar Harbor (his home being situated on the very spot which became the site of the Agawam hotel, so desirable a place that the Eastern railroad early acquired it when it became evident the Eden would be occupied by more than two human beings, although the "snake" would not be there). I had never been there, the spot in those days not being very easy of access.

Mr. Hardy asked my opinion as to the best route there and I advised that he land at Bucksport, procure a good breakfast for his horses at the hotel there, take the Ellsworth road, ride to that little city, pass a little beyond that place and turn off on the Mt. Desert road, cross the bridge to the island and then a short drive to Bar Harbor.

These directions he followed, and early in the afternoon they arrived at their destination. Now came up the question of arranging for a season, the length of which would depend on circumstances.

If not agreeable, a week; if cheerful and satisfactory, two months or more. He easily found Capt. Stephen Higgins (by the way, a cousin of my father), who owned the newest and most attractive cottage in the settlement, and opened up negotiations which proved satisfactory. The only things lacking were beds. Mr. Hardy said that they would only be too glad to enjoy sleeping on a newly-filled straw bed, and in a very short time several beds had been filled with that article and placed in some of the rooms of the cottage.

Arrangements were made for their board, and Mr. Hardy staid till Monday when he got transportation back to Bucksport and took the Katahdin for Boston, well satisfied with his trip. He came down several times while his family was there, and on his return for the winter to Boston he was so enthusiastic in his praise of Bar Harbor that several of his close friends decided to join him there the next year.

So land was bought, and early the next spring several cottages were in process of building and a good-sized building to be used as a summer restaurant constructed.

The result of the second year was so manifest that Cadet Charles Deering, who was running a steamer from Portland to Machias, arranged to call both ways at Bar Harbor, and the Eastern railroad arranged a schedule and trains for passengers to and from Boston and Portland via Rockland and Castine.

At once real estate began to boom. Big, fine summer hotels were erected, many elegant private houses and cottages were built, fine store established, and churches and schools followed.

And Bar Harbor was put on the map.

And Her Name is Mary.

Her name is Mary. She wrote a nice little note from Haverford, Penn., to the bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture.

"I enclose three funny moths I caught the other day," wrote Mary. "Will you kindly tell me what they are?"

Whereupon the bureau of entomology rose from its several chairs and began to move in circles. Mary had found the brown-tail moth in Pennsylvania, where the brown-tail had never been heard of before. A brown-tail moth is as destructive to elm trees as a forest fire. No one knows how many millions of dollars have been spent in fighting him. If moths have sleeves, the brown-tail is giggling up his.

"Go!" said the centurions of the bureau. "Beat it to Pennsylvania and find out all about this dreadful thing."

So the bureau of entomologists swarmed on Haverford next morning. Other bug connoisseurs heard the dreadful news and they came to Haverford. For a week young men stumbled through its streets their eyes fixed on the tops of trees. The pockets of the young men bulged with butterfly nets and poison bottles. They hunted frenziedly, but they could find no moths. At last they looked up Mary.

"Quick!" they gasped. "Smest important! Tell us where you caught the brown-tail moth?"

"Oh," said Mary, "I brought them home with me from Maine."—Washington Star.

Uses of Olive Oil.

Not everyone realizes the medicinal properties of olive oil. It is quite true that the machinery of the body needs oiling occasionally, like any mechanical machine which is constantly in use, and olive oil, taken internally, will be exceedingly beneficial. A tablespoonful will aid the digestion and ease liver trouble.

This oil should be served frequently as a dressing, and is not only pleasant on vegetables, but serves as an appetizer as well. Taken internally, either with salads or alone, it is beneficial for catarrh, either of the stomach or throat.

WEDDING BELLS.

LEIGHTON-WALKER.

A pretty autumn wedding was celebrated at the home of Mrs. Minnie A. Leighton on the Surry road last Monday evening. The most interested parties of the occasion were her daughter, Miss Mary A. Leighton, and Neil D. Walker, of Vinal Haven.

The house was effectively decorated with autumn leaves, evergreen and red berries adding their touch of color. One corner of the parlor was fashioned into a leafy bower, with bell of white suspended, making a fine background for the ceremony. The house was thronged with guests, most of them being neighbors of the bride.

At a little after 8 Miss Nellie S. Abbott, the organist, began the wedding march from Mendelssohn, and the bride party entered the parlor, led by the best man, Carl W. Leighton, brother of the bride. The bride wore a traveling suit of blue cheviot, with hat of white plush, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Nellie M. Trowgory. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. A. A. Kilham, using the single ring service.

After congratulations came refreshments. These were delicious, and were served by Mrs. Leighton and Miss Cora Anderson, assisted by Mrs. W. H. Butler, Mrs. C. L. Davis, Mrs. Nellie Meader and Miss May A. Wilson.

Mr. Walker has been in the employ of the Maine Central railroad as purser, serving in that capacity on the Hangeley the past summer. Mrs. Walker is an Ellsworth girl. Both young people have a host of friends who extend congratulations. They were the recipients of many useful and pretty gifts.

With fanfare of automobile horns and whistles, with confetti accompaniment, the bride and groom were escorted to the late train, and left on a short wedding trip, after which they will make their home in Portland.

WOODWARD-WARNER.

The marriage of Miss Marion Louise Woodward, of Ellsworth, and Royal Stuart Warner, of New York, took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Abby M. Woodward, Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. The wedding was quiet, only immediate relatives and a few girl friends of the bride being present. Rev. R. B. Mathews officiated.

The house decorations were simple, yet effective. The parlor decorations were of white clematis and hydrangeas, an arch of the vine framing the bay-window in which the couple stood. The hall decorations were of hydrangeas and woodbine; those of the living-room of pine and native holly. The table decoration in the dining-room was of Killarney roses.

The bride's gown was of white satin charmeuse, with pearl trimming, en train. Her veil was caught with valley lilies. She carried a court bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by two little flower girls—a niece, Margaret Woodward, of Springvale, and Mary Devereux Cousins—in white batiste and Valenciennes lace, with pink sashes. The Mendelssohn march was played by Miss Myrtle Monaghan.

After the ceremony and congratulations, refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Warner left on the late train for a short wedding trip, which will include a visit to the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Warner, at Cobleskill, N. Y. They will live in New York city. The bride's going-away dress was a tailored suit of dark blue serge, with hat to match.

The bride is an Ellsworth girl, a graduate of the Ellsworth high school, class of 1910. For the past three years she has taught in the New York Institute for the Deaf. The groom is employed with the H. W. Johns-Manville Co., of New York. The bride received many beautiful presents.

BROWN-STONE.

Ellsworth friends are interested in the wedding of Miss Mabelle W. Brown, for three years assistant teacher at the Ellsworth high school, to Leon B. Stone, of North Haven. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Brown, of Fairfield, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 1.

The Waterville Sentinel, in an extended account of the wedding, says:

The bridal party entered the west parlor to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march. The double ring service was performed by Rev. J. L. Clark, of the Baptist church of Fairfield, under a bower of autumn leaves and evergreen. The bride wore a charming gown of white charmeuse with pearl and shadow-lace trimmings, cut en train. Her tulle veil was fastened with a coronet of tiny white rose buds. She carried an arm bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Frances Stuart, of Waterville, as maid-of-honor, groomed in pale blue charmeuse with lace bodice, she carried pink roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Phyllis Thomas and Ellen Pillsbury. Miss Thomas wore while marquisette over yellow mesaline. Miss Pillsbury wore pale yellow crepe-de-meteor. They carried baskets of day-break carnations.

The groom was attended by Francis Mills, of North Haven. The ushers were Leon Brown, brother of the bride, Victor Worthington, of Portland, and George Stuart, of Bowdoin college.

A collation was served in the dining-room, which was prettily decorated in ferns and autumn leaves.

Mrs. Stone is one of Fairfield's most popular young ladies. She was graduated from Coburn classical institute in the class of 1906. Mr. Stone was graduated from Coburn the same year, and since that time has been employed with his father in North Haven. They eluded their friends and left in an auto for China Lake, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will be at home after Nov. 1 at North Haven. No cards.

OBITUARY.

MRS. ELLEN HAYES HENNESSEY.

Mrs. Ellen Hayes Hennessey, one of Ellsworth's oldest citizens, died Monday at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. William L. Harrington.

Mrs. Hennessey was born in Cork, Ireland, February 8, 1823, and was therefore in the ninety-first year of her age. As a child she went to London, where she lived until young womanhood, when she came to New York, where she was married to the late Humphrey Hennessey. Some fifty years ago they came to Ellsworth, which had ever since been her home.

Three children were born to them; one died in infancy; a daughter, Margaret, died about thirty years ago at the age of nineteen, and Mrs. Charles Goggins, who died in January, 1910. Since the death of this daughter, Mrs. Hennessey had made her home with her granddaughter, Mrs. Harrington, who cared for her with a daughter's devotion.

Mrs. Hennessey possessed the motherly instincts to a marked degree, and several children and grandchildren by her husband's previous marriages, as well as others, found a second mother in her. She leaves besides Mrs. Harrington, three other grandchildren—Mrs. Peter Fortier, of Ellsworth, Eileen Goggins, now attending St. Joseph's academy at Deering, and Frank Goggins, of Berlin, N. H.

The funeral was held this morning at St. Joseph's Catholic church, Rev. P. F. Flanagan officiating. The bearers were E. E. Brady, Jeremiah Hurley, William L. Harrington and Peter Fortier. Interment was at Mt. Calvary cemetery.

The Yellow Claw

Was It the End of It?

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Perkins entered his employer's private office and laid a square paper wrapped package at Murray's elbow. "By parcel post, marked 'Personal,'" he murmured apologetically and went away as silently as he had come.

John Murray stared at the package with incredulous eyes. Suddenly his jaw set firmly and he jumped up and, locking the door to the outer office, went to his safe and took from an inner compartment two other packages of the same size and shape as the one Perkins had just brought in.

With the three packages ranged before him on the desk, John Murray studied them with knitted brow. They were exactly alike. He opened one of the packages.

Within was a square box of Chinese red lacquer, with a powdering of gold on the lid. The box was perhaps ten inches square and three inches deep. Murray lifted the lid and gazed long at the strange contents of the box.

On a bed of red silk lay a hand—a hideous, claw-like hand—with long, transparent nails. The thing was made of yellow wax, but so perfect was the workmanship and so faithfully had the artisan carried out his idea that the yellow hand seemed like that of a living human hand, a veined and knotted hand, with muscled fingers half curled, as if in malignant desire to clutch, to strangle, to kill.

There was nothing else in the box save the yellow, claw-like hand.

With set lips Murray opened the second box and disclosed a facsimile of the waxen hand and the third box and saw still another hand. But this last hand contained in the box just arrived was closed, as though it held something in a death grip.

Murray shuddered a little, for he knew that the throat which the Yellow Claw longed to grasp was his own.

He knew that the death grip was intended for his own strong, brown throat.

Murray knew that he had received the three warnings and that if he did not obey the last one—well, he drew a sharp breath and walked to the window—well, if he didn't heed the third warning, why, he would disappear as mysteriously as Henderson had vanished three months before or as completely as Moore had dropped out of sight six months ago.

"I will speak to Swinnerton. He must advise me," muttered Murray as he thrust the boxes back into the safe and locked the door.

As he spoke there came a rap at the office door.

He turned the key and admitted Perkins, who darted little, snaky glances around the room as he delivered his message:

"Mr. Swinnerton to see you, sir."

"Send him in, please," said Murray shortly and he pushed forward a deep chair for his visitor, who entered almost immediately. Tom Swinnerton was a tall, thin, anxious looking young man with fair hair tousled over his fine forehead. He sank down in the chair and tossed his hat on the desk.

"Hope I don't bore you, Murray, but I've heard from them," he said with a nervous laugh.

John Murray uttered a faint echo of the laugh.

"I'm in the same box, Tom. I've heard three times."

"My God, Murray," gasped the other. "You don't mean—why, what are you going to do about it?"

Murray shrugged his shoulders. "The third call came only half an hour ago."

"I've heard twice. I came to ask your advice," shuddered the younger man, fixing his anxious eyes on Murray's strong face.

"There's only one thing to do, Tom, after all"—and Murray turned suddenly and sat down close to his visitor. He spoke in a whisper: "You know we four, Moore and Henderson, you and I, promised to obey the call of the Yellow Claw at any time in return for which they allowed Henderson to go free after that fiasco of his up the river. Those were rough days for foreigners in China, and, well, I don't believe any one of us expected to be called upon to do what the Yellow Claw demands. Henderson must have refused and Moore as well, for you know they have both disappeared."

"Well, what is the one thing to do, John?" asked Tom after awhile.

"Go down into Chinatown, find out what they want and then decide what is best to be done."

"When shall we go?"

"Tonight is best. I've had my last call. The third hand held a garrote's cord. Jove, they're an uncanny set, these Chinese!" Murray arose and paced the floor.

"Why Chinatown? We don't know where to go," objected Tom.

"They've come by parcel post. I've investigated and can tell you the very nation from which they were mailed. And I'm pretty sure that when we get looking out for us to take us to the Yellow Claw."

The two men dined in silence, and when the early twilight was falling they walked slowly up Dupont street, bending elbows with slant eyed Asiles who had formed this foreign settlement in California's largest city.

As they passed a dark alley a Chinese stepped forth and held out a lean hand toward them.

"Come," he said in a shrill whisper, and the two followed, knowing that they had received the dreaded summons.

Down the alley, lighted at long distances by small smoky oil lamps above grim doorways, through a broken arch, a turn to the left, through a swiftly opened door, down an ill lighted passage, at the end of which were broken steps leading down into a black void. Their guide produced a candle, lighted it and led the way down other steps into the bowels of the earth. At last he paused before a black painted door and rapped softly three times, then three times again.

The door swung inward and disclosed a dimly lighted room.

Under a canopy of richly embroidered satin there sat on a cushioned teakwood chair a dignified figure clad in a Chinese robe of stiff brocade. On the breast of the tunic hung a heavy chain of amber beads and from the beads there swung a life size waxen hand—the replica of the three that John Murray had received, and of the two that had come to Swinnerton.

The face of the man in the chair was hidden under a queer mask of painted porcelain, but his bright dark eyes shone through narrow slits beneath the painted brows.

Murray looked around to find that the door was closed and their guide had disappeared. They were alone with the grim figure in the chair.

"Advance," murmured the figure in English, and the two obeyed mechanically. Murray's hand rested on the revolver in his coat pocket.

"You have come in obedience to the beckoning of the Yellow Claw," went on the voice monotonously; "are you prepared to keep your promise made to the most high Feng Soy?" His voice dropped to a whisper as he added a few words of secret import. A dead silence followed his speech.

"What is it you wish us to do?" asked Murray at last.

Again the personage bowed his covered head and whispered short abrupt sentences that caused his hearers to stiffen with horror.

Their faces were white like drifted snow when they lifted them to the impassive porcelain mask. Swinnerton's eyes were fixed on the bright dark eyes of the personage with a strange intensity; it was as if he was trying to wring some secret from the keeper of the Yellow Claw—as if he was racking his memory for some clue. Murray broke the silence.

"And if we refuse?" he asked.

"If you refuse," answered the voice, "Henderson and Moore will no longer be alone."

Tom was laughing and in either clutched hand was a revolver; his long neck was thrust forward and his head nodded vaguely at the personage.

For the first time the figure in the teakwood chair moved, the hands sought folds of the voluminous robes and flashed out again.

Four revolver shots deafened the air, and when the smoke had cleared away Swinnerton was sitting on the floor with a bullet through his arm, while the teakwood chair was empty.

On the silken carpet before the dais was a huddled form under folds of stiff brocade.

Murray leaned over his friend and assisted him to rise.

"Tom, are you badly hurt?"

"A scratch on my arm. I believe Perkins is dead. Better look and see," returned the other with a dry laugh.

"Perkins! What are you talking about?"

"Why, I guess you'll find that the Yellow Claw is nothing less than your confidential clerk, Perkins. I thought his face was familiar, but couldn't place it. Remember Blake, the renegade white man who got Henderson into that trouble up the Yangtze?"

"Yes, of course; but Perkins?"

"Perkins is Blake, and the rascal has been working us four to the limit. Must have robbed and murdered Moore and Henderson. Both were handsome jewelry and carried large sums of money when they disappeared. Let us get out of this."

"But the Yellow Claw?" protested Murray, unconvinced that all these years of uneasiness and the last few weeks of terror had been inspired by the machinations of his snaky eyed clerk.

"Perkins is the Yellow Claw. It doesn't exist outside of China. That's my best bet. He's used his knowledge to blackmail us, and he may be the tool for treacherous powers higher up. Remember the sums of money he demanded? Whew!"

Murray stepped to the prostrate form and turned it over. The porcelain mask fell away and disclosed the dead face of Perkins. The waxen hand at his neck was red with blood.

Without another word the two Americans left the room. Together they fled silently by strange passages and through crooked corridors, darting blindly here and there, up darksome stairways, until, guided by a watchful Providence, they found themselves in a dim courtyard that was peopled only in the shadows. No one stayed their flight, for no one cared. Each had his own affairs, and murder was a common thing.

Finally they came to the Signal Building, and Murray helped his companion up to the office and telephoned for a physician to attend to Swinnerton's wounded arm.

"Now to live," muttered Swinnerton with a grim smile. "The Yellow Claw is dead."

But Murray shivered as if he felt the cold breath of some evil premonition.

"I am not so sure about that," he said slowly.

BY THE GREEN MONSTER

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Janeway's business called him often away from home. One afternoon he returned from one of these trips glad to get back and, opening the door with his latchkey, went upstairs. In the upper hall he found himself face to face with a man he had never seen. He was well dressed, and Janeway, instead of taking him for a burglar and supposing there might be some mistake about his being there, awaited an explanation.

"I admit," said the man, "that this looks bad for your wife, but any man who will leave his wife at home for weeks, sometimes months at a time, deserves."

"What do you mean, sir? Why are you in my house?"

"Come! Maintain your equanimity. Consider that by making a scandal you will injure not only yourself, but will ruin your wife's reputation."

Janeway was too paralyzed to speak. He simply glared at the man, who continued:

"Take your revenge on me, not on her. I will meet you at any time or place you wish and enable you to inflict vengeance upon me to your heart's content. I will give you an opportunity to do by me as, I confess, I would do by you under reversed similar circumstances. But the real cause of our quarrel need not be known. We can invent some pretext."

"Where is my wife?" thundered Janeway.

"For heaven's sake keep away from her, at least for awhile! In your present state of mind you are liable to commit murder."

Janeway hesitated. A fiery furnace was within him. He knew the man spoke the truth. It was all he could do to avoid clinching with him.

If he had had a weapon he would have killed him. But one idea took possession of him—to get away, somewhere, anywhere, that he might free himself from a temptation that would put him behind bars and might bring him to the scaffold. He turned, descended several steps, stopped short and said:

"Your name! And where can you be found?"

"Edmond Trowbridge, Calumet club."

Janeway stopped for no more. Descending the stairs that a few moments before he had mounted with such pleasurable expectation, he rushed through the hall to the front door and went out. What he did during the next hour he has never been able to distinctly recall. The time was occupied walking the streets, but what streets are a blank to him. His brain was in a turmoil. Should he find a friend and send him to the man who had ruined him with a challenge? Not yet. He was unwilling to give his confidence to any one. Should he go to his wife and hear what she had to say? Doubtless her visitor had told her what had occurred and she was prepared for the worst.

He was lost in wonder how the woman with whom he had lived happily for a dozen years could have so deceived him. Could this person who had done this thing really be his wife? Was he not asleep and suffering from a horrible nightmare? Was there not some mistake? Gradually his feelings so far subsided as to permit him to exercise common sense. What did common sense dictate as the first thing to do? Why, to go to his wife and hear her story.

It was 9 o'clock when he again opened his front door and stepped into the house.

"Is that you, dear?" came his wife's voice from upstairs. "Why are you so late? You telegraphed you would be home to dinner."

Janeway did not deign any reply to these remarks. He was trying to make up his mind to the disagreeable work before him. He staggered into the living room and, throwing himself into an easy chair, covered his face with his hands. Hearing a step in the hall he withdrew them and saw his wife standing in the doorway gazing at him with a frightened look.

"Frank!" she said. "What under heaven is the matter?"

There was a ring at the telephone. She paid no attention to it, but, advancing, kneeled beside him and took his hand.

"Answer the phone," he said, in order to gain time.

Going to the instrument she took down the receiver. Then she said to her husband:

"It's the chief of police. He says a man has been brought in with articles on him with our name on them."

Janeway jumped from his chair as though raised by an electric shock. Rushing to the phone he snatched the receiver from his wife and called for a description of the man arrested.

When he had heard he took her in his arms and hugged her till she cried out.

"What does it all mean?" she asked.

"I came home at 5 o'clock and found the thief here."

"When I was out? Why did you let him go?"

"He told me a cock and bull story."

"What story?"

"Why he said—he said—that you were dead and he was the undertaker come to measure you for your coffin."

"What assurance! Now I understand what you were suffering when I came into the room."

They clung together in an embrace. Fortunately for him there was no need for a confession.

NEW HOME OF EASTERN TRUST & BANKING COMPANY, BANGOR.

EASTERN TRUST & BANKING CO.

Handsome New Building in Bangor Opened Last Saturday.

The moving of the Eastern Trust & Banking Co., of Bangor, to its elegant new six-story building on State street, Bangor, which took place last Saturday, marks an important epoch in the growth of this well-known institution. Ever since its incorporation in 1887, this bank has forged rapidly to the front, and now occupies an enviable position in the financial world.

The new Eastern Trust building is handsomely constructed of granite and brick, measures 65x113 feet, and is six stories above the basement, with a total floor area of 54,000 square feet. The east side of the building on the street floor, together with a portion of the second and third floors, are given over to store purposes; the remaining space above the first floor is devoted entirely to offices, of which there are seventy. An elevator provides easy access to all floors.

The banking-rooms are located in the west side of the building, on the street floor. They are finished in mahogany, with grills, counters and general fittings of bronze and mahogany. The floor is laid in mosaic tile with marble base, while the walls and ceiling are in ornamental hard plaster. No pains or expense have been spared to make these banking quarters up to date in every way, and no detail for the expeditious handling of the bank's business, or for the convenience of its patrons, seems to have been overlooked.

The big vault is a source of wonder and admiration. Massive in size and thoroughly modern in construction and appointments, this safe-deposit vault leaves absolutely nothing to be desired in the way of protection for money and other valuables entrusted to its keeping. The latest known devices have been employed to make this vault secure against intrusion by burglars, fire or floods. In the basement, directly beneath the safe deposit vaults, is a spacious storage vault where bulky packages, heirlooms, etc., can be stored with assured safety.

With such well-equipped quarters, the Eastern Trust & Banking Co. will be better able than ever to serve its patrons, its helpful influence being felt not only in the local territory but also in the section around Old Town, Machias and Dexter, where thriving branches are located.

To an able board of officers and trustees must be given the credit for the notable business growth which this bank has shown since its incorporation—a growth which has necessitated and made possible the move into its new building. The bank officials include: John Cassidy, president; Edward R. Adams, vice-president; Charles D. Crosby, secretary and treasurer; John H. Rice, assistant treasurer; executive board of trustees—John Cassidy, Edward R. Adams, Frederick W. Hill, Herbert Gray, James W. Cassidy, Charles S. Pearl, James H. Merrill and Charles D. Crosby.

THE ROYAL MONTH and the Royal Disease.

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofula and consumptive. The progress of scrofula during a normal October is commonly great. We never think of scrofula—its bunches, cutaneous eruptions, and wasting of the bodily substance—without thinking of the great good many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose radical and permanent cures of this one disease are enough to make it the most famous medicine in the world. There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relatives—consumption.
