The hallowe'en party given at Hancock hall last Friday evening by the Ellsworth telephone girls, was all that was anticipated, which is saying a great deal. The decorations were unique, and appropriate to the day. Delicious refreshments were served. Music was furnished by Monaghan's orchestra.

A horse owned by H. B. Estey ran away last Wednesday afternoon. Starting from the Kief place at the top of Tinker's hill, the horse ran to the stable back of the laundry. In making the turn at the laundry, the carriage was overturned. Carriage and harness were badly damaged, but the horse escaped injury.

The question of whether or not Ells worth will have a food fair this winter is yet to be decided, but in order to save Hancock hall for the desired week if the question is decided affirmatively, the hall has been engaged for the last week in January. This would bring the food fair in regular circuit order with the food fairs of Bangor and Belfast.

Owing to ill health, Miss Bernice J chool, has resigned her position. three weeks remaining of the fall term will be completed by Mrs. C. H. Gibbs who, as Miss Wilhelmina Frost, taught this same school for many years at its former State street location.

ELLSWORTH, MAINE.

S. G. Stevens, well remembered in Ells worth, died last week at his home in Philadelphia, aged fifty-eight years. Mr. Stevens was the proprietor of the sardine factory at Brooklin for many years, and spent a great part of each winter in Ellsworth. He was as well known here as in Abenaquis club, and one of the most companionable men of that club of "good fellows".

Ambrose W. Garland died Saturday at the home of his father, Nathaniel J. Garland, on Third street, aged thirty-six years. Deceased was born at Ellsworth Falls, but had been employed in Bar Harbor the past ten years, returning to Ellsworth only a few weeks before his death. He leaves three brothers - Irving, of Rangeley; Ralph and Clarence, of Bar Harbor, and two sisters - Mrs. Edward White and Mrs. George Maddocks, both of Ellsworth Falls. The funeral was held at the Elisworth Falls church Monday afternoon, Rev. O. J. Guptill officiating. Interment was at Juniper cemetery.

Dr. George A. Phillips, of Bar Harbor, always interested in the fish and game resources of this section, as, indeed, of the whole State, has made an attempt to stock this part of the county with the Hungarian partridge, a game bird which is being introduced successfully in various parts of the State. Several pairs liberated on Mt. Desert island a year or so ago have thrived, and the birds appear to be multiplying. At his farm in North Ellsworth last week Dr. Phillips liberated fifteen pairs of these birds. The Hungarian partridge is protected by the Maine laws throughout the year, until such time as it shall gain a foothold.

During the Maine teachers' meeting in Bangor last week, a meeting was held to perfect the organization of the Maine Academy of Sciences, one department of which will be devoted to ornithology. Miss Annie R. Stockbridge, of Ellsworth, who is much interested in the study of birds, attended the meeting and enrolled as a member. Other Ellsworth bird lovers have signified their intention of joining. Miss Stockbridge recently took a photograph of the nest of an oven bird-more commonly known, perhaps, as the "teacher bird", from its familiar song, often likened to "teacher, teacher, teacher" The bird is common enough, but its nest, built on the ground with the entrance in the side, bearing a resemblance to an oldfashioned Dutch oven, escapes frequent

The hall and banquet-room were Macomber, who has been teaching the decorated with evergreen, potted plants first to fifth grades at the School street and flowers, and crepe paper in pink and green, the colors of the order. A banquet, which the visitors pronounced delicious was served at 6.30 o'clock. This was followed by degree work by the Bar Harbor lodge, on two candidates. The work was beautifully executed. After the work there was speech-making and a social time. Music was furnished by Harold H. Higgins, violin, and Mrs. George E. Sinclair, piano. Among the visitors who club reunion.

Capt. Alexander Hutchings, of the schooner Melissa Trask, does not quite relish the reputation a Bangor paper gives him this morning for establishing a new slow-voyage record-twelve weeks-from New York to Ellsworth. "Nine weeks for the round trip is bad enough," declared Capt. Hutchings, "but this Brooklin. He was a member of the old damphool story about twelve weeks from New York and two months missing makes me mad!" As a matter of fact, Capt. Hutchings sailed from Ellsworth for Newark on Aug. 30. Last Saturday, just nine weeks to a day, he again dropped anchor in Union River bay. After clearing from New York he was detained at City Island a week or ten days by easterly winds. He sailed from City Island Oct. 13, and, fighting his way along through thick weather, adverse winds and gales, reached Ellsworth in just nineteen days.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Rom. xiv, 7-21. Memory Verses 7, 8-Golden Text, Rom. xiv, 21-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In our recent lessons in Exodus and Numbers we have had a grand illustration of forgetting self and living for others in the story of Moses, who so patiently bore with and interceded for that complaining, rebellious people for forty years, and yet they so vexed him that the time came when even be failed. All mere men have failed at some time, in some way. There has only been one who always and in all things pleased the Father and never sought to please Himself (John viii, 29; Rom. xv, 3; Matt. iii, 17; xvii, 5).

He who gave the ten commandments to Israel out of the midst of the fire and afterward wrote them twice on the tables of stone, providing an ark in which to keep the unbroken tables, came Himself as a man and lived on earth over thirty-three years, fulfilling perfectly His perfect law in every de tail, in thought, word and deed, for He was the true tabernacle, and ark, and mercy seat, and becomes the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

Apart from Him there is none righteous, no not one, but all are under the curse and wrath of God (Rom. Iii. 10, 11; Gal. iii, 10; John iii, 36). God did not ask Israel to do anything for Him until He had redeemed them from the bondage of Egypt, and he does not ask the unsaved now to do anything for Him, because they cannot please God (Rom, viii, 7, 8).

In the first eight chapters of this epistle the way of salvation for sinners is very plainly set forth. Then follows the special Israel portion (chapters 9 to 11), and then from chapter 12 we have the life that should be lived by the redeemed, the life of love which worketh no iil to his neighbor, a life not conformed to this evil age, but transfigured by the renewing of our minds, proving the good and acceptable and perfect will of God (Rom. xli, 1, 2; xiii, 10), a life making manifest the Lord Jesus Christ and making no provision for the flesh to fulfill its lusts (Rom. xill, 14). It must ever be. as His redeemed, "Not I, but Christ." (Lesson verses 7-9; Gal. li, 20; I Cor. xv, 10; II Cor. iv, 10, 11; v, 15).

A great difficulty with believers generally is the judging of others; the de-sire and attempt to put others right while we are not right ourselves; the fancied beam in another's eye with only a mote in our own.

It would be well for us if we would determine not to judge one another any more (verse 13), but to search and try ourselves until we get more right with God; more self emptied and spirit filled; more occupied with Him with whom we have to do, to whom alone we must give account and at whose judgment seat we must stand as His redeemed ones to give account of ourselves as His stewards (verses 10-12; I Pet iv. 10; I Cor. iv. 1).

This brings up the whole question of salvation and service. We are justified freely by His grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. But we are saved to serve the living and true God, while we wait for His Son righteousness and peace and joy in the | sick and afflicted, I am Holy Ghost, manifesting in our lives day by day something of that righteousness and peace and joy (verses 17. 18; Rom. iii, 24; I Thess 1, 9-10).

There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, and we shall not come into judgment for our sins. because they are blotted out and shall not be remembered (Rom. viii, 1; John iv. 24; Isa. xllil. 25); but the judgment seat of Christ, mentioned only in verse 10 and II Cor. v. 10, is for believers, saved people, to give account of their service, their stewardship and to receive their appointments in His kingdom, that they may come with Him to judge the nations and to reign with Him while He shall subdue all things unto Himself (I Cor. vl. 2; tv. 23-28). We must distinguish between the three judgments yet future; that for believers only when we meet our Lord in the air; then the judgment of the nations with reference to their treatment of Israel, when He shall come in His glory, bringing His saints with Him, at which time Israel shall be saved as a nation, and the devil shall be bound for a thousand years (Matt. xxv. 31; Rev. xx), both of these judgments at the beginning of the thousand years; then at the end of the thousand years, the great white throne for the rest of the dead who took no part in the first resurrection (Rev. xx).

Not seeing the difference between these three judgments, we are constantly hearing and reading of the great white throne before which all must appear, which is most unscriptural and misleading and confusing.

The judgment of our lesson (verse 10) is the first of these, for judgment begins at the house of God (I Pet iv. 77), and only the redeemed will be there. There is much light upon this judgment in I Cor. iii. 11-15, and the ought of the possibility of a wasted life, of works to be burned, even though we ourselves be saved, should lead us to try everything by the question. Will it please the Lord?

Porevermore beside us on our way
The unseen Christ doth move.
That we may lean upon His arm and say.
"Dest thou, dear Lord, approve?"

This poem came attached to Jennie's letter. When you have read both, remembering whattshe has experienced of suffering and weakness, you will not think it worth while to murmur or complain at small trifles; which may seem to worry and annoy. These of us who know her personally can not only admire her unfailing courage and hopefulness, but realize to some extent the burden of bodily ills she has borne so many years. It surely is a privilege to make pleasant to her any of the passing hours. Her ad-dress now will be: "Young district, Bar Harbor, care of Miss Nancie Brown.'

BAR HARBOR, ME., Oct. 23, 1913.

To Dear Aunt Madge and M. B.'s: Well, I am still in the flesh, and no better than before. Was in the hospital almost four weeks. Then they wished me to go to New York hospital, as my case was so delicate and critical that they would not undertake it here. But I did not care to go, as they did not know as I could even stand the trip. So I am to board this winter and take milk and eggs.

all I can possibly consume, and malted milk. But little Norman can be with me, and my John will be with me Saturday night and Sunday, and the others when they can spare the time. So hope to get through the winter. If I am not spared, why I can have my own with me when I go.

Was so very much suprised to read of the death of Mr. Rollins. How his genial face will be missed in Ellsworth and many other places, and at the M. B. reunions. Hextend my heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones.

To the many M. B.'s and other friends, who sent me so many kind; letters and post-cards, I wish to send many thanks and good wishes. It helped me through many a lonely hour. And the lovely bouquet'll got from East Holden, from Aunt Maria, so thankfully re-ceived, and a lovely one of pansies from another friend-they; were like a gleam of sunshine in the dark.

Will not try and fill the whole column, but from heaven, and for the kingdom of leaves little pace for some one else. With God, which is not meat and drink, but loving thoughts to all M. B.'s, especially the

Dear M. R. Friends:

Am still numbered with the living, though I have been soflong dead to the column should think it just if I was no longer acknowledged as a member of the clan.

When I read an account of the reunion came near making two resolves. First, that I would send something to the column without delay, and that, nothing preventing, I would make a desperate effort to attend the next re-union. As I read, I could in fancy see that long table groaning junder the weight of things, with Aunt 'Maria's big bouquet of gladiolus in the center, the open fire send-ng its glow over the room, and the happy smiling faces of all present.

It was with surprise and sadness that I read the death of Mr. Rollins. It seems as though we all had sustained a personal loss. He and his wife were both present at the last reunion I attended, and added much to the pleasure of the day. My sympathy goes out to the family so suddenly bereft.

Expected Meb would be at the reunion, now that she is back in Maine. Have seen Alexia and Aunt Mary this summer, and it goes without saying that we talked. I always read the column, often try new recipes and feel guilty when Aunt Madge is left alone.

October has been a trying month as far as weather goes, two bright days in twenty-five has been our experience. Either rain, fog or both all the others. To keep my courage up have repeated this rhyme:

If the weather is wet, we must not fret;
If the weather is dry, we must not cry;
If the weather is cold, we must not sold;
If the weather is warm, we must not storm;
But be thankful together, whatever the

Heak Sickly Ailing Women

What more can we do to convince you that you positively can find perfect health and relief from your suffering by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? All the world knows of the wonderful cures which have been made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, yet some women do not yet realize that all that is claimed for it is true.

If suffering women could be made to believe that this grand old medicine will do all that is claimed for it, how quickly their suffering would end!

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women in the world - and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true.

"Yes," she said, "those flowers have been in our family since about 1840. And they came originally from a glove."
"From a glove?"

"From a glove. An aunt of mine, who lived in a little town in Maine, unexpectedly fell heir to a small sum of money - only two or three dollars-and sent to Boston and bought | good reason. a pair of kid gloves with the windfall. About that time every man, woman and child in the whole State of Maine had a similar piece of luck-"

"But wait-where did all this money come from, originally?"

"I don't know about that—what does that have to do with it? I am telling you where the flowers came from. After a while the cloth covering of the glove-buttons began to frazzle out, and my aunt found that the solid part of each button was composed of a seed of some sort. Out of curiosity, she planted the seeds; they sprouted made plants, and these Opening exercises. flowers came. Or rather, flowers like these. Address of welcome served."

of the windfall that had bought the glove than in the flowers that sprang from them, "did you say that every man, woman and child in the State of Maine fell beir to a similar amount of money at the same time?"

"Yes-every man, woman and child." "It is certainly strange."

"If you doubt it-

"Oh. I haven't any doubts about it!" But it seemed so odd to me that I looked the matter up, and found the source of the gloves. The up, and found the source of the groves. The State of Maine divided the money received from the government proportionately among its whole population. And I should imagine, by this time, that the Federal government would have considerable difficulty in getting it back again. More than one pair of gloves has been worn out in the meantime.

Even the so called dangerous mammais, the bears, mountain lions, wildcats and other mammals that are best able to protect themselves, seldom make a stand against domestic intrusion. Rarely do they attempt to entice an enemy from their home by strategic means, but at the first warn ing of danger they either hide or watch the intruder from a safe distance. How the Army Regulations Were Adhered to and For the Band

By ARTHUR TOWNSEND manage and a second a second and a second a second and a second a second and a second a second and a second a seco

"Do you play on any musical instrument?"

"No." "Have no musical taste?"

"I don't know. I was born and have lived all my life in the heart of a forest, where no musical sound except the singing of the birds has ever reached my ears. But that I have always dearly loved. Why do you ask these questions?"

"Because if you could play upon the cornet or the flageolet or the trombone you might be permitted to live. As it is, your sentence will be carried What a pity that you have not some foundation for a musical training! I could in a few days coach you so that you might save yourself from being shot."

When the Spanish war broke out the news of it reached the wilderness in which I lived. Here was a chance to get out of the woods and into the world. I would enlist for a soldier. I would need no money. The government would clothe, feed and transport me, and all that would be required of me would be to be shot. And if those who shot at me missed me and con tinued to miss me till the war was over I would be taken care of till the next war, and if I lived through all the wars till I became an old man I would be laid on the shelf, but would be still taken care of.

This was the explanation given me by the recruiting officer, whom I found after a walk of sixty miles. Not caring to walk back again and remain cut of the world I accepted the conditions to remain in the world till some enemy fired a shot that would give the government the best of the bargain. I was put into an infantry regiment and an effort was made to knock some of the "green" out of me and turn me into a soldier. But the effort failed. I could not be disciplined and within a week after having been landed in Cuba I struck my captain, was tried for mutiny and sentenced to be

There are two extremes in war. When an army is not in action there is enough red tape used to girdle the world, but when the real work begins there isn't any red tape at all. In the mixup that occurred after our landing. while many a good soldier lay dying on the battlefield. I, a mutineer, ill with malarial fever, was turned into the house of a Cuban farmer and was attended by his daughter, one of those dark haired, olive complexioned, long evelashed daughters of equatorial regions who can't look at a man without falling in love with him.

It has required three times the talk to tell all these commonplace facts as the beginning of my story. It was Inez Gonzales, the farmer's daughter and my nurse, who regretted my want of musical training with which I might have saved my life by blowing a horn.

"A regiment encamped yesterday," she went on, "in a field across the road. and two of the men supped here this evening. One of them said that his cornet and his flageolet had been killed and his trombone was groaning under a bad wound. The colonel was very proud of the regimental band, and just as soon as the routine of army life recommenced he would notice that the music was not up to the mark and there would be the mischief to pay. The other suggested that musicians be obtained from the prisoners who had been captured from the enemy. The first man answered that he hadn't thought of it; he would try. If you were a musician be might put you into the band."

Here was a chance for life-a ghost of a chance, but still a chance. The only indication that I had enough music in me to avail myself of the oppor tunity was that I had loved the songs I asked Inez to go to the camp, find the bandmaster and tell him there was a man in her home who could play on any instrument; that he was ill. but convatescent, and with a couple of weeks' practice would be able to take his place in a band.

Inez told the story, and the bandmaster came over to see me. When I told him I was under sentence to be shot he was a bit discouraged, but said that if I was a first class cornet player he thought the colonel would have enough influence to get a commutation or something that would save my breath for the band. He went away and came back to say that he had seen the colonel and secured an order delaying my execution till it could be discovered whether I was a valuable musician. If so some way of defeating justice would be found by which I could be utilized. The colonel's pride in the band was such that he would shoot a dummy in my stead if necessary, only the army regulations must faithfully adhered to. But my abillties must be tested before any change in the army situation should take

So there I was, not knowing a note of music, sick in bed and required to make a musician of myself immediate. ly, for army situations are not lasting, and the present one was liable to be changed at any moment. I got busy at once, with my life the spur to drive me on. Inez, having taken a few les sons on the piano, had the wherewithal for a beginning. But there was no time to put on an instrument so unlike the one I was required to play, and Inez borrowed a flute. On this I made a beginning. It was better for the purpose than a cornet since it made less noise, and the bandmaster across the road couldn't hear me practicing.

Written music bothered me. but I made wonderful progress, playing whatever came into my head. I could not read music-at least could not learn to do so quickly enough for the purpose-but I could improvise, and what astonished Inez was that I could not only "make up" airs, but could play them with remarkable fervor.

All this developed within a few days, at the end of which time the bandmas ter sent to learn if I was well enough play for him. I replied that I would be very soon, but since I had not touched a musical instrument since the war began I would like to have him send me one on which I might get a little practice before submitting to a test. He sent me a cornet.

Fearing that he would hear my first efforts and learn of my ignorance of the art to which I pretended, I asked Inez to stuff the cracks in the windows of the room in which I lay, and I be gan my efforts under the bed. I made what headway I could in this disadvantageous way and in two days began to play on the bed instead of under it. Whether I was heard by the bandmaster or not I don't know, but if I was no word about it came to me. But so fearful was I of betraying my want of knowledge of the cornet that I dare not blow a full blast

Every day I feared some change that would cut short my preparation, and it was carried on under the fear that at any moment the army law might be permitted to take its course. I was haunted by the expectation of being marched out at any moment, stood up before a file of soldiers and shot. So lugubrious were my feelings that my playing would have been much better fitted for a funeral march than the popular airs of the day.

One morning the bandmaster came to see me and told me that a candidate for cornet player in the band had appeared in the personage of a soldier in the ranks and since he must have a man to fill the post as soon as possible, unless I was ready to stand a test he would have the other man transferred to the band. I begged him to wait a few days that I might get more strength, but he said the colonel was liable at any time to notice the deteriorated condition of the band and if he did it would be impossible to tell what he would do. This frightened me. and I consented to stand trial.

The next afternoon he brought a man to the house where I was lying. Inez saw them coming with a cornet and, pale as death, ran in to tell me. I was desperate. If I submitted to a trial of skill between myself and one who was familiar with the instrument I would doubtless show my inability as a cornet player; if I refused to submit the man would be appointed in my place and I would be shot,

"Let them come," I exclaimed. "I will blow a blast that will awaken the dead.

I knew that my room was no place for a test on a cornet and asked Inez hand me my clothes. When the bandmaster arrived I was dressing and sent word to him that I would be out in a few minutes. Having finished my toilet, I muttered a prayer and staggered out on to a porch, where I dropped into a chair. The bandmaster told me and my rival that he would take into the band the better player of the two, and since I was weak and the other fellow was strong he would give me the advantage of playing after him.

My rival took the cornet carelessly It did not appear that he was anxious to get into the band, and he did not make a special effort. He did not need to do so to beat me, though he did not know it. He played a selection from the overture to "Zampa," a favorite piece for cornet players to show their skill. He rendered it very well, and I could not have played it at all

One of the few simple airs I had learned was "Home, Sweet Home." Taking the cornet from the bandmaster, I told him that I was not strong enough to give him anything displaying technique; I could only produce melody. I fixed my mind on the cabin where I knew my dear mother was daily thinking of me and on the scene of my expected execution. There were but few notes, but each note was expressive of my depth of feeling. Persons who were passing stopped to I played the air through once, and all were absorbed. I played it a second time, and their eyes were wet. The third time every one within hearing was weeping.

"That's enough," said the bandmaster; "you're my man." "Hold," I said; "the secret must come out in time! I can't play a note. have simply learned this in the vain hope of saving my life."

"I don't care if you can't play the scale; there's more music in you than in my whole band. I'll make a musician of you, and when I do you'll be a wonder."

Inez's tears gushed afresh, and she clasped me in her arms. My execution was got round in this way. A requisition was made on the quartermaster for a coffin. It was indorsed. "No coffin in my possession." The requisition having been referred to the colonel, he issued a special order that I was to be released from arrest till a coffin could be procured in which to bury me. The coffin was never pro cured, and I have never been buried. The army regulations were adhered to, and I have become a great musician. tnez is my wife.

Mummies Make Paint.

In order to furnish the innumerable delicate tints of paint required by artists, manufacturers have nowadays to ran-sack the world. Even mummies have lately been called into use.

Mummies are usually preserved in the finest bitumen, and this ancient bitumen has, in the course of centuries, turned the mummies a leathery brown tint. It has been found that when the bitumen and the shreds of mummy are ground down by machinery, a beautiful, brown pigment is the result-exactly the tint required for painting certain shades of brown hair.

Sepia is one of the commonest of artist's paints. It is a deep brown in color, and comes from a source equally strange. It is prepared from the black, inky fluid discharged by the cuttlefish to blind and baffle its enemies.

Prussia blue is prepared from horses hoofs, and is made by fusing the hoofs with potassium carbonate.

Raw sienna is soil from near Sienna in Italy. Burnt sienna, another common tint, is simply the same earth burnt.

The majority of pigments for making colors-that is, the dry powder-are obtained from minerals, but many pigments come from the animal kingdom. Cochineal, for example, comes from the dried bodies of insects. A kind of pitch is also used for certain pigments.

When You Want a Thing Done Right, Do It Yourself

The man who wants his tobacco cut up for him months before he smokes it, just to save a minute's time, cannot blame the manufacturer because the tobacco gets dried up, burns fast in his pipe and scorches his tongue.

There's only one way to get fresh tobacco-cut it up yourself as you use it, from the Sickle plug. Then you get all the original flavor and moisture that have been pressed into the plug and kept there by the natural leaf wrapper—and you are rewarded by a cool, sweet, satisfying smoke.

Every day more smokers are coming back to the good old Sickle plug and satisfaction. Buy a plug of Sickle at your dealer's -and note how much more tobacco you get, when there's no package to pay for.

The Elections.

The disturbed conditions of party politics is reflected in the elections of yesterday in various states. Men of all parties may find cause for rejoicing in the returns, as their sympathies color their point of view; by the same token, all have their taste of defeat.

In Massachusetts, Walsh, democrat, was elected governor, with Bird, progressive, second; Gardner, republican, a close third, and Foss, independent, a poor fourth. The legislature will continue republican.

In New York Tammany was defeated, the fusion candidate winning out handily. The defeat of Tammany may mean the overthrow of "Boss" Murphy, but it is a poor student of New York political history who believes it means the permanent overthrow of Tammany.

A feature of the election in New York was the election of Sulzer, the recently impeached governor of the state, as assemblyman from his district on the fusion ticket, by a big majority - a gratifying vindication, it must be, to the deposed governor, and another rebuke to Tammany. A republican victory in the assembly and judicial districts of New York is indicated.

Returns from other states indicate some close contests. New Jersey is apparently democratic. In Virginia the democratic ticket was elected without opposition.

As to the progressives, from New Jersey comes the report: "A surprising feature was the light vote cast for the progressive candidate." And from Massachusetts: "A surprising feature was the big vote cast for the progressive candidate."

And there you have it-a grain of comfort and a little "crow" for everybody-except Tammany, which must eat its crow without seasoning.

State Superintendent of Schools Payson Smith is as big a man as his job. Broad of vision himself, his mind encompasses the educational advancement of the whole State, and he is intollerant of any sectional views. At the State teacher's convention in Bangor last week, he placed the stamp of his disapproval upon the proposition to divide the association into eastern and western sections. He sums up his attitude tersely and convincingly in these words: "We can far better than we can to lose the unity of plan and action which is at present the dynamic force behind educational progress in Maine." For much the same reason he opposes the suggestion that a permanent convention city be selected, believing equal opportunities should be given the teachers of all sections to attend the convention at least once in every two or three years.

The appointment of Judge Henry M. Hall as a member of the board of trustees of the city library, made by Mayor Cunningham last night, on the recommendation of the other trustees, is an excellent one. Upon him will devolve the work of general supervision in the selection of books His appointment assures the maintenance of the high standard set by ex-Chief Justice Emery, whose dis criminating and scholarly taste and whole-hearted interest have made the library what it undoubtedly is, one of the best reference and educational libraries of its size in the

A press dispatch from Washington says that Maine may look for "mighty small pickings" from the government treasury for the next twelve months. There may be a little something for Maine in the way of appropriations for public buildings, but the river and harbor appropriations will be "cut to the bone", it is stated. Well, Ellsworth has its new screen doors and new lights on the postoffice building, so let's try to be happy.

Knox county's sheriff slipped by the impeachment proceedings in the last legislature on the strength of a medical certificate. Now Governor Haines has been appealed to by letter and petition for an investigation of non-enforcement conditions in that county. Knox county has the repu-The Ellsworth American tation, rightfully or wrongfully earned, of being the only wide-open county in Maine at present.

> Mexico, our turbulent neighbor on the south, offers a difficult problem for this administration. The European nations have agreed to keep their hands off, recognizing the right of the United States to deal with the situation. Just how best to deal with it is the problem which the administration is now working out. The resignation of President Huerta is the first thing demanded.

> In view of the advantage taken by liquor-dealers of Cumberland county of the seven days that necessarily elapsed between the death of Sheriff Scully and the time his; successor could be qualified, the Portland Express suggests the necessity for s change in the constitution so as to provide for immediate succession in such cases. It is a good suggestion.

Senator Johnson has recommended Hon. W. R. Pattangali, of Waterville, to the department of justice for assistant attorney-general. This is taken to mean that Mr. Pattangall will accept if a nomination is tendered him, as it doubtless will be.

Hon. Peter Charles Keegan, of Van Buren, has formally announced his candidacy for the democratic nomination for governor.

Among some old letters dug out of an ancient sealskin trunk in Penobscot county recently was one from Col. Rufus Buck, one of the pioneer Bucks of Bucksport, relating to the fisheries at the mouth of the Penobscot nearly a century ago. The letter was dated at Bucksport January 27, 1820. In it Col. Buck says: m all the statistics which I have been able to collect, it is my opinion that the amount of fish, including shad, salmon and alewives, taken in this town in the year of 1819, amounted to $30,000, and it is my opinion that the town of Prospect must have taken at that time an equal

Alton and Delmont Sargent, of Elisworth Falls, had an exciting experience with a large buck deer in Union river on Monday. While rowing along near Reed's brook looking for birds, and having only a shot-gun with bird shot, they came upon the deer in the water, and rowed up to him. They fired several charges of the fine shot into the deer's head, which seemed to have little or no effect, and which they are unable to account for, as they were so close that the boat once touched the deer's back. Discouraged with their success with the gun, they seized the next best weapon at handboat hook-and attacked the deer with

From Mariaville way comes the story o man who was hunting on the burnt lands there one day last week, when a big bull moose came over the brow of the hill towards him. He fired, and the moon went down, but got on its feet again and came on at a little faster pace. He fired again, and again the moose wen down and got up again, still heading for the hunter. About this time another big bull, which he had not before seen, showed up over the brow of the hill, coming toward him at railroad speed. The hunter decided quickly that there was no law to allow him to shoot two moose, even in self-defence, and he got out of the way. He went quickly, too, for fear the temptation to shoot the second animal would be too great to resist. When he went back with another hunter, both animals had disappeared, the wounded bull having found shelter in a swamp where the tracks could not be followed.

EARTH ROADS.

Suggestions as to Malatenance, from U. S. Office of Public Roads.

[Issued by Department of Agriculture, Office of Public Roads.]

If you look at the ordinary country road after a shower, you will see small puddles along the wheel-ruts and sometimes larger pools. This water stays on the road surside ditches. If you look closely, you will see side ditches which have grown up with bushes and weeds in many cases, and which are so far from the traveled part of the road that the rain water does not drain into them.

That part of the roadway where the ragons travel is called the traveled way. To prevent water from standing on the traveled way the road should be raised in the center and should slope gently into broad shallow ditches. It is then said to have a crown. If it is ten feet from the center of the road to the side ditch, the surface at the side ditch should be at least ten inches lower than it is at the center where the horses travel. The road then has a ten-inch crown. The rain that falls on a road properly crowned will run quickly to the side and not soak into the surface or form pools. The side ditches for surface water should run parallel to the right of way, and should be open at every low point so that the water can run out of them into neighboring brooks or streams. If the ditches merely collect the water from the road surface and it can not run away, large pools will be formed along the roadside, which will gradually soal into the soil beneath the road and make it so soft that the wheels of wagons will cut through the road surface and soon de

Sometimes water runs from land slong the road into the road and forms a little stream down the wheel tracks or in the middle where the horses travel. When driveways into farm yards are built across the side ditches they frequently form channels for water from the farm yard to run into the road. The pipes under driveways become filled with leaves or rubbish and the water can no longer run away. If the driveways that stop the ditch water were rebuilt so that no pipes were necessary and the ditch could be left open, much trouble from surface water would be stopped.

Sometimes a road runs across low ground or through a swamp where the road can not be drained by side ditches alone. If the road were built higher like a railroad embankment across such low land and made with a crown, it would be dry and hard. Sometimes a road passes through what is called a cut. This is place where the earth has been dug out so that the road can go over a hill without being too steep. The water which always flows quietly under the ground on hill sides is known as ground water. In road cuts such water sometimes makes the road very muddy, and the road then needs what road builders call underdrainage.

A good kind of underdrainage is a trench to go along under the side drain and about three feet deep and a foot and a half wide. In this trench s pipe is laid near the bottom and covered with loose stones no bigger than an egg. When the trench is completely filled with loose stones the ground water, instead of soaking into the roadway, will stop among the stones and flow down the hill through the pipe.

To keep a road smooth and crowned, the best method is to drag it with a roaddrag. A road-drag is made easily with two halves of a log which has been split. The log should be about six or eight inches in thickness and about six or eight feet long. The two halves of the log are set three feet apart with the smooth faces forward and upright. They are then fastened together with braces set in holes bored through the log. A pair of horses may be used to drag the road and are hitched to a chain fastened this, but after towing them ashore the deer climbed the bank and got away.

| Continued the bank and got away. | Continued the bank and got away. | Continued the front half of the log. The road-drag should move forward so that it slants across the road in such a way that a small mount of earth will slide past the smooth face of the log toward the center of the road, thus forming the crown. The edges

The best way to drag is to begin at the side ditch and go up one side of the road, and then down the other. In the next trip the drag should be started a little nearer the center, and the last trip over the road the drag may work close to the be thrown in the horse track and smeare by the round side of the log smoothly over the road. The smearing of the earth by the drag is called "puddling", and it tends to make the surface of the road smooth and water-tight after the sun comes out. rained and not when it is dry.

A good, strong pair of horses four miles of road in a day, and it is the best way to maintain good roads. In every county some farmer along each four miles of road should own a drag, and drag the road when it rains, and he would always find the road in good condition when he goes to market.

A $15,000 PRIZE.

Steamers in Race for Abandoned Schooner Havens.

| From the Boston Globe.]

Spurred on by the lure of salvage, three steamers engaged in a thrilling race last week after the helpless hulk of the ooner Henry P. Havens, of Bucksport, abandoned in a gale off Cape Cod Sunday morning, Oct. 26. At top speed the three boats swooped down on the wallow-ing schooner, which was believed to have foundered, each striving to be the first to pass a line aboard and win a prize estimated as being worth $15,000.

It was Sunday afternoon that a rumor spread about the Boston water front that the Havens had not foundered, but was drifting about in the bay, a rich prize for the vessel that put a line aboard her first. Before nightfall the tug Mercury, her bunkers full and her captain and crew keyed up to concert pitch, headed out of the harbor. All night long she cruised the waters of Massachusetts bay, looking for her prize. At dawn a row of men stood on the deck, straining their eyes seaward Suddenly, with a cry, one of them raise his arm and pointed. A black mass, half buried in foam, rose and fell slugishly on the waves. The Mercury headed toward it at full speed.

was an exclamation of anger. Another of the crew had spied a black steamer, smoke pouring from her funnels and a bone in her teeth as she bore down on the Mercury's prey. Still another vessel appeared on the other side, also headed toward the hulk, for such; she now appeared.

Safety valves hissing, machinery throbbing, her crews gathered in tense knots, the Mercury, the Whitney and the collier J. H. Devereaux, raced toward the Havens. The Whitney reached her first, and before she had lost her way a boat and a picked crew was lowered overside and made for the schooner, bearing a line.

While the other two boats lay hungrily alongside and watched with chagrin the snatching of the prize from right under their noses, the Whitney's men clambered aboard the Havens. Her decks were a veritable tangle of spars, sails and cordage. | the abnormal growth. Her foremast lay in the water under he portchains. The main and mizzenmests lay across the wreck, inextricably mixed up with splintered wood and tangled ropes and canvas. A great hole gaped in her deck forward and beneath it the cargo of soft coal "boiled". Black and threatening, glistening like liquid tar, it hissed and slithered, rolling up against the wooden sides of the vessel like heavy, black porridge, bearing her down low by the head one moment, almost careening her the next, and the Havens, under its impetus, wallowed like a drunken sailor.

When, as the other boats drew sullenly off, the Whitney took up the slack of the hawser, the tedious part of the work began. Hour after hour the men sheltered themselves from the chill wind and strove to keep the schooner beaded straight Though the day was brilliant overhead and the water of the bay blue as in August, on board the schooner everything was soaked and sodden. Green water, rolling across the decks through the shattered bulwarks, added to the peril of the undertaking.
When the Whitney finally reached Bos ton, she tied her prize up at Union wharf, where it will remain until salvage has been adjusted.

"Punkin' Pie."

Several days ago a story appeared to the effect that the American people are no longer cating pie. This statement is an exaggeration, doubtless based on the reports of pie factories and professional pie-makers. It would be an irreparable loss to the palate, the well being and the estheticism of the country if the experts of home should cease to produce that noble national dish—the great American dessert.

The season is here again when that king of all pastries, the pumpkin pie, is in the height of its glory. The golden spheres are ready for the minting. Between the custling tenees of the corn they lie in lightly with a final, mellowing caress.

That same frost has driven the artist of the kitchen from the greener, callower business and contemplates her master-

Not a cheap imitation of the restaurant-made by thinning a mysterious mess from a tin can and applying light coat of the mixture to the bottom of a soggy crust. But the genuine thing, made from the genuine and only ple pumpkin (cucurbita pepo), eighteen inc across and three inches deep. Some like it hot, and some like it cold, but your epicure likes it both ways and three tim day. Also it makes a good snack just a day. Also it makes a good snack just before one goes to bed.

For she makes the real thing, this genius of the kitchen. There are those who fondly imagine they can make a pumpkin pie out of any gourdlike product of any cacurbitaceous vine. They use summer squash, Hubbard squash, crooknecks, vegetable marrow—and call it pumpkin! It's nothing of the kind. An oblate spheroid, yellow in color—that is the fruit. The Greeks call it pepo, and so through the Latin it came to the French who called it pompon, which the English harshened to pumpkin and the Americans softened to punkin'. That's the fruit, the apple of the Hesperidea. That is the one and only foundation for the last word in pastry cooking.

USES OF MAPLE.

This Valuable Tree is Holding its Own, Says the Government.

Though at one time in the early history of the country an average of 6,000 maple trees were destroyed in clearing the ordinary New York or Pennsylvania farm, maple is to-day, according to the department of agriculture, one of the most widely used and valuable native hardwoods.

A bulletin on the uses of maple, just issued by the department, states that the wood finds place in an enormous number of articles in daily use, from rolling-pins to pianos and organs. It is one of the best woods for flooring, and is always a favorite material for the floors of rollerskating rinks and bowling-alleys. leads all other woods as a material for shoe lasts, the demand for which in Massachusetts alone exceeds 13,000,000 board feet annually.

Sugar maple stands near the top of the list of furniture woods in this country. The so-called "bird's-eye" effect, the department explains, is probably due to buds which for some reason cannot force their way through the bark, but which remain just beneath it year after year. The young wood is disturbed each su ing season by the presence of the bud, and grows around it in fantastic forms which are exposed when the saw cuts through

Maple is one of the chief woods used for agricultural implements and farm machinery, being so employed because of its strength and hardness. All kinds of wooden ware are made of maple, which holds important rank also in the manufacture of shuttles, spools and bobbins. It competes with black gum for first place in the manufacture of rollers of many kinds, from those employed in house-moving to the less massive ones used on lawn-mowers. Athletic goods, school supplies, brush backs, pulleys, type cases and crutches are a few of the other articles for which maple is in demand. Seven species of maple grow in the United States, of which sugar maple, sometimes called hard maple, is the most important. The total cut of maple in the United States annually amounts to about 1,150,000,000 feet. Nearly one-half is produced by Michigan, with Wiscon Pennsylvania, New York, and West Virginia following in the order named. Sugar maple, says the department, is in little danger of disappearing from the American forests, for it is a strong, vigorous, aggressive tree, and though not a fast grower, is able to hold its own. In Michigan it is not unusual for maple to take possession of land from which pine or bardwoods have been cut clean, and from New England westward through the Lake states and southward to the Ohio and Potomac rivers, few other species are oftener seen in woodlots.

NEW LIBRARY TRUSTEE.

The following communication was read by City Clerk Hale: ELLSWORTH, MAINE, Oct. 14, 1913.

MR. MAYOR CUNNINGHAM: Dear Sir:—Since the death of Hon. A. W. Greely, one of the trustees of the Ellsworth city library, the remaining members of the others as to whom we should recommend to your honor for appointment to the vacancy.
As from now on Mr. Emery will be abset from the city the greater part of each year and Mr. King and Mr. Peters also will necessarily be absent much of the year, and Mr Brady has as his share the care of the build-ing, the general administration of the affairs of the library and reading-room will fall on

We are agreed that the new appointer should be a permanent resident of Ellsworth, and as such interested in the development of the institution, and so situated that he can give its affairs attention at any time when needed; also that he should be not only man of affairs, but also of education, of wide reading and acquaintance with books in the various departments of literature and learneg, and so capable of advising and assisting the librarian in increasing the value of the institution and extending its usefulness.

In view of the foregoing, we urge the ap-cointment of Mr. Henry M. Hall, who, we lieve, will best meet the requirements of the institution. He assures us, and we be-lieve, that he is much interested in the brary and reading-room, and that if honored with the appointment, he will manifest that interest by faithful and efficient service.

L. A. EMERY, A. W. KING. E. E. BRADY.

After the reading of the communication, Mayor Cunningham appointed Judge Hall as a trustee of the library, and the appointment was confirmed by the board. OTHER BUSINESS.

Ald. Clark, to whom was referred the bill of Mrs. Augusta W. Card of $22 for ens killed by dogs, reported that he had evestigated the matter, and recominvestigated the matter, and recom-mended that the bill be paid. It was so oted by the board. Aid. Moore and Clark, the committee to which was referred the matter of disposal the State street schoolhouse, for which offers of purchase had been made, reported that they deemed it advisable for the city to keep the building as a storehouse for four children here whi coad-machinery and tools, believing that employed in Sullivan.

it would save more than the cost of it by the better care of tools and the prevention

It is proposed to move the building which is now on leased land, to the rockcrusher lot on the opposite side of State street, and only a short distance away. The same committee was appointed to arrange for the moving of the building and the making of such necessary alterations to fit it for the purposes intended. This will include the cutting of a wide door to admit the roed machinery. It is suggested that one of the hand-tubs now stored at the Franklin street engine house be also kept in the building. Adjourned.

FESTIVAL CHORUS.

Officers Elected for Ensuing Year-Memorial Resolutions.

The Ellsworth festival chorus held its annual meeting at Society hall last Thursday evening. The meeting resolved itself into a memorial for the late director of of the chorus, Frank W. Rollins.

John O. Whitney, president, paid s tribute to Mr. Rollins, speaking of his ong and faithful service as director of the chorus. He said the continuance of the work of the chorus would be the best memorial to Mr. Rollins. Others speke on the same lines. Letters were read from Director and Mrs. Chapman, expressing their deep sentiments in the death of Con-ductor Rollins. Resolutions were also read from the Bangor chorus.

The following memorial resolutions wer

Whereas. It is with great sadness we look Resolved. That by the death of Mr. Rollins our society loses a faithful, sincere, able and efficient member and leader, the Eastern Maine Festival an ardent and unselfish supporter, and the community a large-hearted honorable, conscientious man and a good

A business meeting followed, at which the following officers were elected: President, John O. Whitney; vice-president, Mrs. Harry E. Rowe; secretary and treasurer, Agnes L. Lord; executive committee, Mrs. John A. Peters, Mrs. John P. Eldridge, Omar W. Tapley; accompanists, Miss Mae Bonsey, Miss Erva Giles.

The choice of a director for the chorus for the coming year was left to a com mittee composed of Mr. Tapley and John A. Cunningham.

President Whitney outlined the work for the coming season. The next meeting will be held on Thursday evening of next week, when the work on Elijah will be-

Methodist Church Notes.

Last Sunday was observed as rally day by the Methodist Sunday school. There was a good attendance. The choir, with Mrs. Greely at the organ, rendered some very fine music. An illustrated sermon was given by the pastor. Two were baptized and six were received into the church. At the evening service a solo was beautifully rendered by Mrs. T. S.

At the regular service next Sunday forenoon there will be an old-fashioned lovefeast, followed by the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. In the evening the subject of the paster's sermon will be, "A success ful man in an unfavorable environment." There will be special music.

The regular weekly prayer-meeting will be held hereafter on Thursday instead of Friday evening.

The reception at the vestry Saturday afternoon for mothers of children whose names are on the cradle-roll of the Sunday school, was a decided success. Coffee and cake were served by the ladies of the church, and all enjoyed the occasion.

BRIGANTINE SULLIVAN GONE.

old brigantine Sullivan, built at Gouldsboro in 1866, and the last of Boston's square-riggers of that type, has laid her bones on the beach at Fayal. Capt. Theopilus Fratus, her master, and his crew, ecently arrived in Boston from Azores.

Engaged in whaling was the forty-seven year-old craft that finally kicked the traces at a mooring. When the Emery's operated the vessel, she was pride of a fleet engaged in deep-water trading.

With increasing years the Sullivan abandoned molasses voyages to the West Indies and other foreign places, going into coasting with coal and lumber as principal cargoes. Capt. Thomas Haggerty was her master a long time. and latterly became part owner, placing the vessel in the whaling industry out of New Bedford.

Fifteen months ago she sailed on a cruise to the western grounds, deck littered with blubber pots, hold full of empty barrels and four whale-boats swinging in the waist. Less than two weeks ago the Sullivan arrived at Fayal, fairly successful. She had 1,200 barrels of oil, and about 1,000 barrels had been landed for shipment to New Bedford when a southwest gale happened along. The Sullivan was riding at a mooring; her chains parted and she went on the beach, where she quickly went to pieces, the crew being compelled to swim ashore.

Capt. Haggerty had, a few days before, turned over command of the brigantine to Capt. Fratus, and returned to this country on account of illness. The wreck was sold for about $200.

Herbert W. Eaton, one of the pioneer lumbermen of the St. Croix valley, died at Calais Monday, aged sixty-five years.

Edward Kennedy, aged fifty, of Moro, was drowned in Umcolcus lake Sunday by the upsetting of a canoe.

UNCLE JERRY RETURNS

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

No man lived a more placid and contented life than Uncle Jerry Spooner of Spoonersville. Uncle Jerry married a placid girl. It was not known that they ever differed in their opinions.

Just after being married Uncle Jerry began buying butter and eggs and shiping them to the city market. He nade a bargain with a commission house that he was to get a certain price the year round. He therefore never had to worry about the state of the market. He shipped just so many eggs and just so much butter.

Uncle Jerry was a subscriber to and reader of the Christian Brother. His grandfather had taken it, and his father had taken it, and he did not want to hurt the feelings of the editor by dropping it.

The Christian Brother had no current news. It seldom referred to the doings of bad men. It never printed a ine about gold bricks or green goods or other confidence games. Uncle Jerry sometimes heard drummers and light ning rod men talking about such things, but be paid little attention. They said of him the day he was fifty years old;

"Why, he knows no more of the world than a baby! If a slick man should come along he could beat Uncle Jerry out of his shirt;"

And just the next day the entire village was thrown into a state of consternation. In the midst of his placid life and never having journeyed above thirty miles from his front gate the good man suddenly announced:

"Say, now, by gol, if I ain't going to "Why-why"- Yes, sir. I am. I'm going up there to look around and see the sights."

His wife placidly corroborated this announcement and did not betrny any symptoms of hysterics, and then a rush was made for the house of the min-ister whose church Uncle Jerry at-

Buffalo House Takes the Taste Out - of Castor Oll.

Since the earliest; days of medicine chemists have |been trying to take the taste out of castor oil. The secret has at last been discovered by Spencer Kellogg & Sons, gof; Buffalo, who are among the largest producers and refiners of vegetable oils in the world. Rain-Making Fallacies.

Warm air is like a sponge. It will suck up a lot of moisture and carry it without spilling any. But if warm air, well paded with moisture, is suddenly cocled, the sponge is squeezed and the moisture falls out as rain.

Twenty years ago some hopeful gentlemen went to the arid regions of Texas and exploded a lot of dynamite, on the theory that the concussion would mix the strata of warm air near the earth with the cooler strata above, and so cause the necessary precipitation of moisture. There happened to be light showers at the time of the experiments, which encouraged the experimenters, but didn't convince anybody else. The fact is, that nature's rain-making machine is too gigantic to be affected by the puny efforts of humans—at least by any methods so far discovered.

Nature pumps the moisture-laden air up into the cold regions of the upper atmosphere with a wheel a thousand miles in diameter. When this tremendous wheel of air is revolving normally it hoists millions of tons of water vapor to an elevation where it can no longer be carried in solution and so falls in rain.

When the wheel is off adjustment it is as futile to bombard the sky with dynamite as it would be to fire popgun corks at the side of the latest dreadnaught.

A Story of Scotland Yard Efficiency Versus Yankee Cuteness

By MARION B. CURTISS on on one on one on one on one

"Stivers, give me a room."

"I'm full, Clapham, but I've always made room for any of you fellows from Scotland Yard who has asked to be taken care of, for I know you're after game. Anything of importance?"

'Well, it's not exactly important, and yet it is important in one sense, seeing that there's a game to be played on us and we've got to make preparations to meet it. Have you any suspicious persons in the house?"

"Now you speak of it, a man came in yesterday. I don't think he's a regular crook, simply a measly chap that might be hired to do some dirty work.

That fits exactly. I shall need your assistance, so I may as well show you my hand. You have this Mrs. Striker of Chicago here, whose coming to London has been made so much of in the society journals. These American millionairesses are, some of them, trying to beat the New York customs officers. and they do so quite often. The American detective is a very dull bird beside our English outlooker. This Mrs. Striker, I've learned, has bought the diamond that the Hardcastle family has been trying to find a purchaser for. They finally sold it to her for £20,000." "Well?" said the landlord.

"Mrs. Striker is not going to pay American duty on a stone that can be carried in a shoe heel or a bouquet of flowers or a watch case with the works removed to make room for it or a dozen other places of concealment. but the trouble is that the news has gone over that she's bought the Hardcastle gem, and those muttonheads of York will be on the lookout for She's to sail on the Romania on Wednesday, and they'll naturally expect that the diamond goes with her.

"Now, we of Scotland Yard are up to all these smuggling tricks and are on to this game. I don't need to give away how I got the story, but I got it all the same. Tomorrow morning Mrs. Striker will be found bound and gagged in ber room and the diamond gone. The New York chaps will see an account of the loss cabled to the newspapers, and when the lady arrives she will not meet with the attention she

"But what's the need of a robbery if ft's all a fake?"

"That's where our part over here comes in. Mrs. Striker will be hounding us Scotland Yard men to recover her diamond and giving talk to the newspaper reporters. There's doubtless some confederate of hers right here in your hotel who will take the blame of robbery.

"I see; he'll take it and return it to her secretly."

"No, he won't do any such thing. Do you suppose she'd trust it to a fellow like that? What she wants him for is to make it appear that he robbed her of it. And how can we Scotland Yard men get it back from him when he hasn't got it?"

"There's that measiv chap I spoke to you about now-that red headed fellow just going into the smoking room. He booked himself from Brumagem, but I know by his accent that he's an American. Lunnon is full of American crooks. I shouldn't wonder if they kept you fellows busy looking after

"So they do. I'm glad you've pointed him out to me; it will save my hunting bim up. What's the number of his

"No. 76. Come to think of it. Mrs Striker's room is 75, directly opposite.' 'Phew! What a simple game it is, to

"What are you going to do?"

"Make sure he doesn't leave his room tonight after he goes up. I shall sprinkle a fine powder on the sill and in front of the door. He's not going to have anything to do with the matter except to take the blame for stealing the diamond. I'll prove in the morning that he didn't go into Mrs. Striker's room, for I shall put some powder before her door too. All the police will have to do when the newspapers how! at us is to bring forward my proof."

"You are a sharp one, sure enough Well. I'll give you 72, a bit farther along the corridor. Going up now?"

"No, not till I've done some watch ing of this red headed chap. I must satisfy myself that he's the confederate. I don't propose to leave some one else to do the job while I'm watching the wrong man."

The landlord went behind his conn ter, and the detective went into the smoking room, where he found the red beaded man, whom he did not lose sight of till the latter went to his room. Clapham, not satisfied with his powder device. sat up all night looking through a space made by leaving his door ajar. He saw nothing unusual. At 7 o'clock in the morning the door of No. 75 was opened, and a lady's maid orried downstairs. She soon return ed with the clerk, and the two made for Mrs. Striker's room. Clapham followed them into the room and saw Mrs. Striker bound in a chair and gagged. As soon as the gag was taken out she cried: "What's gone?" asked the clerk.

"My diamond."

"I don't know. The lock of my door was picked. I heard some one work ing at it, but before I could decide what to do the door was thrown open and some one came in. There being no light in the room, I couldn't see who he was. I gave a cry, and he sprang upon me, put that thing in my mouth and tied me in the chair. Then be said that if I didn't tell him where the Hardcastle diamond was be kill me. To save my life I told him that it was under my pillow on the bed. He took it and left me as you

"Who took it?"

The afternoon London newspapers published the fact of the loss of the diamond, but refrained from giving any clew to the robber. Scotland Yard officials looked wise and said nothing. They did not even watch the measly chap with the red head. Striker, to make sure that the news of the loss of her diamond reached New York, cabled the fact to her husband, and an account of the robbery appeared in all the afternoon journals.

People in London were surprised at the apathy of the police in the matter. But there was one man among them who was not apathetic, Chapham. There was a supplementary game on hand that he did not mention to Stivers. He wished to discover that the diamond was still in Mrs. Striker's possession and receive several thousand pounds hush money. When the lady left her room he entered it with a pass key and looked in every nook for the gem. There was not a hollow article or one that could be made hollow in the room that he did not take to pieces. The stone might be contained in one of a cluster of artificial grapes ornamenting one of a number of hats he found in the room, and he demolished every grape without finding what he looked for. Some bell shaped buttons he cracked, with the same negative result. At last he was obliged to give up the job.

Meanwhile the red headed man came and went in and out of the hotel. The landlord was anxious to get rid of him. but had no excuse to turn him out. Indeed, he was requested by Clapham not to do so. Clapham was not sure some cue might not yet be derived from him. But nothing turned up. At the sailing of the Romania, Clapham stood on the dock. After the gangplank had been removed and the vessel was well out, who should he see waving his hand to him with a sardonic smile on his face but the measly red beaded man he had sat up all night to watch. Londoner stood gaping at the fellow till he was out of sight, then turned away muttering imprecations on the whole "blarsted" Yankee nation.

Mrs. Striker kept her stateroom for a day or two, then appeared on deck. Everybody on board had heard of her loss, and those who had an acquaint ance with her commiserated with her for it. She tossed her head and laughed as though the matter were of no great importance to her, as indeed it was not, for she was rich enough to buy more gems at the same price.

When the Romania was steaming up New York bay, among the crowd of passengers standing on the deck was Mrs. Striker. She wore a very large hat, trimmed elaborately, that she had bought in London not two hours before leaving her hotel for the steamer. She descried a motorboat flying culiar flag put out from Staten Island and heading directly for the steamer. When it had come within a few hundred yards of her a gust of wind took her beautiful hat and dropped it on the water. But the motorboat that arrived so timely received it and sped away merrily.

It did not get very far before it was stopped. Soon after the Romania passed Sandy Hook another motorboat was seen following her, and the red headed man from London from the stern was making signals to it, which were evidently understood. As soon' as the first boat rescued the hat the second gave it chase, overhauled it and took it in charge.

When Mrs. Striker reached the dock in New York she was arrested for smuggling. The hat was produced. and in a large swelling ornament was the Hardcastle diamond. The face had been removed, the stone inserted and the face soldered in its place again.

"How did you get on to the busi-ness, Watkins?" asked the customs in-

Well, you see, I was sent over to track the man who absconded from the -th National bank and was in London when the lady bought the stone. I reckoned she might try to get it in free of duty, and I took a room directly opposite hers at the hotel. She put up a job of robbery on the Londoners order that it might be cabled over here and put you fellows off your guard. A Scotland Yard man got on to the business, but not on to its true inwardness. The way I located it was this: While shadowing the lady I saw her buy some solder, and the last thing she bought in London was the hat that blew off her head in the bay. Not long ago, you may remember, we had a case of hat blowing. I put the two togethe and cabled our agency to be on the lookout. The rest you know."

"Well. I'll report the case to the co lector of the port. You go up to his office in a few days and you'll find out what the government will do for you.

What do you expect?" "I think, considering the goods are worth $100,000 and the duty will run up pretty well into the thousands, they ought to do something pretty nice for

"I think so, too, especially since they wouldn't have got a cent of duty them-selves if it hadn't been for you." Something pretty nice was do

Watkins, but since it was done from a private fund it was never known how much he got out of it.

The Look That Haunts Him

By HELEN STANLEY

"I've been obleeged," said Sheriff Harker of New Mexico, "to kill a number of men in my day, and they was all of 'em the all firedest villains you ever seen. Consequently I don't lay awake nights seein' 'em lookin' at me reproachful-like. There wasn't a consarned one of 'em that wouldn't 'a' killed me if he'd got the drop on the fust. But there was one killin' that I won't never git over."

"A man?" "No.

"Not a woman or a child?"

"Not any o' that nuther." "Well, then, what was it?"

"I never was a good hand to begin at the wrong end of a yarn. If you're a mind to listen I'll tell you about it, but I don't want no interruptions.' "Go ahead."

"When I was sheriff of -Arizony, there was a good deal goin' en in the shape of crime, with all sorts of pussons a-doin' of it. Some of 'em would stay and fight it out after a killin' or a robbery, and some of 'em would light out. Them as lit out must be follered, and, seein' they allus stole the best hosses there was to be had, it wasn't no easy job to catch 'em. was a young feller then and as fond of a good hoss as any one. Besides, I had to have the best in runnin' down thieves and cutthroats. Another animai I needed was bloodhounds. I had three of the likeliest dogs you ever saw, but only one favorite. I called her after Queen Victoria. If ever a dog loved a man Vic loved me: Onct when I got shot by a road agent and was laid up for awhile she stayed around the door of my room lookin wistful at every one that came out, as much as to say, 'Is he goin' to hand in his chips or not?' And when she'd catch sight of me lyin' on the bed she'd moan dreadful.

"One mornin' early I was wakened and told that a desperado named Jim Rynders had broke into the house of a citizen and carried away his daughter. a gal about eighteen years old. Nobody could tell which way he had gone, and the only way be could be tracked was by a bound. I mounted my horse Nap-he was named for Napoleon Bonyparte-and, lettin' Vic loose, took to the house where the outrage had been committed. She picked up the scent right away and struck off westward. I followed on Nap.

"Vic ran along with her nose to the ground till she came to a creek, where she lost the scent, but picked it up on the other side some distance below. showin' that the rascal had been tryin' to throw us off by walkin' in water. We followed till night, when, comin' to a wooded place, I saw Rynders ahead. He had just come to a halt and was pickin' up wood to make a fire with. The gal was sittin on the ground. up agin the trunk of a tree lookin' like a corpse. Vic saw 'em just as soon as I did and stopped stock still like a pointer on seein' game. I put my hand on her to quiet her, for I thought I might get a shot at the man before he knowed I was near. Vic didn't give me away, but Nap did by splutterin'. Rynders turned like a flash, but not before I'd sent a bullet at him. The gal jumped to her feet. and Rynders darted behind her, th. cowardly rascal thinkin' to prevent my killin' him without killin' her.

"The way for me to do was to send made a bee line for him, and as she neared him I saw him draw a revolver and I saw her go ahead on three legs She got her teeth into his side and held him so that the gal could get away from him. He fired ag'in at Vic. and I saw that he had disabled her, but I now had a free shot at him and dropped him.

"I ran down and tried to quiet the gal, who was hysterical, and partially succeeded. Vic was lyin' still, but I knowed she was alive, for she was followin' me around with melancholy

The dog saved you.' I said to the gal. 'If it hadn't been for her I couldn't have tracked you.'

"This set the young woman to thinkin' about the dog instead of herself, and she went up to Vic and patted her. Fright was turned into gratitude. "I called to Vic. but she could not come to me. A shot had struck her back and paralyzed ber. "'I'm sorry, miss,' I said, 'but the 'Killed! Why so?' "To put her out of misery. She'll never move again. "The gal bust out cryin'. I waited for her to compose herself, then got her to go behind a tree while I did business. Vic saw me aim at ber and knowed what I was goin' to do The look she gave me stays by me to this day. My wife couldn't help lookin', and she can't forget it nuther. "Your wife?" "Yes. I married the gal."

"I dug a hole in the ground right there where Vic. was shot, and we buried her, tearful. I had had the dog a long while and was mighty fond of her, but I don't know as I mourned for her more than the gal she had saved did, though she hadn't known her for more than haif an hour before she died.

"No. sir-ee: them galoots I killed don't trouble me, but the look Vic gave me when I was about to put a bullet into her is with me to this day."

The suphomore class of the high school held a hallowe'en social in the town hall Friday evening. Several of the girls were fantastically dressed as witches and ghosts. The hall was tastefully decorated with orange and black paper. Twine cobwebs, jack o' lanterns and a witches' den in which fortunes were told, were some of the features. Games were played after a short program. The seniors also held a social Wednesday evening.

The funeral of Mrs. Elzira A. McNeil as held at her home Tuesday forenoon, Oct. 28, Rev. G. Mayo officiating, For months Mrs. McNell had been ill. Though at times her health seemed improved, her Vic at him, and that's what I did. She friends had but little bope that she could overcome the weakness and pain that prostrated her. A sister, Mrs. Morgan, and niece, Mrs. Angie Smith, who were uncessing in their watchful care, were assisted by Mrs. Abble Dunn and Mrs. Rachel Smith. All was done that could be for the sufferer, who longed to be at rest Since the death of Mr. McNeil, nearly two years ago, life had seemed changed to er, and she looked forward to the greeting beyond with confidence. Her abiding faith in the Eternal Goodness sustained her to life's close.
