Lesson VIII.—First Quarter. For Feb. 22, 1914.
THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.
Test of the Lesson, Luke xiii. 2-5. "...he that findeth..."
Luke xxvii. 46-48. "...the Son..."

He had us in our last lesson section of the chapter. The conclusion of the lesson was to seek the theme of the lesson, and Jesus’ relationship to the world of religious faith. The lesson was to be focused on the idea of the Kingdom of God, which he said was the theme of the lesson. He had us look at the words of the lesson and the verse of the week, and we were able to see that Jesus’ relationship to the world was not just a matter of belief, but also a matter of action. He taught us that Jesus was not just a teacher, but a leader who was in the world and working for the realization of the Kingdom of God.

After the lesson, we were able to see that Jesus was not just a teacher, but a leader who was in the world and working for the realization of the Kingdom of God. We were able to see that Jesus was not just a teacher, but a leader who was in the world and working for the realization of the Kingdom of God.
The Invalid
He Was Very Hard to Nurse

By F. A. MITCHELL

Justice Hough was informed at once, and the doctor was ordered to see to it he was eighteen, nineteen and all over the house. But the old man was not well. He was never a strong man, and his constitution had been undermined by years of exposure to the weather. The doctor was told to see to it he had nothing to do but rest.

The doctor was company, and he was more company than anyone else. He was a pleasant old man, and he was always good to the invalid. He was always good to everyone, and he was always good to the invalid.

The invalid was a patient and a good one. He was always willing to do what he was told. He was never a trouble, and he was always ready to help. He was always good to the doctor, and he was always good to everyone.

The invalid was a good one, and he was always good to everyone. He was always a good one, and he was always good to everyone.
The Municipal Election.

Ellsworth is again in the throes of a municipal campaign, this time for the purpose of changing the city charter. The campaign is being conducted by the town meeting, which has met and taken action in the matter.

The town meeting has determined that the city charter be submitted to the voters for their approval. The charter is to be submitted for a vote on the ballot at the next municipal election.

The charter will provide for a three-member council, with the mayor serving as the head of the council.

The charter will also provide for a city manager, who will be appointed by the council.

The charter will be submitted to the voters for their approval at the next municipal election, which is scheduled for next month.

The council will meet in the next few weeks to work on the details of the charter.

He Fulfilled the Conditions

By OTIS VANDERWAY

Cyprus Mudge was an indomitable rat from four inches high. Having learned of the French defeat in the war for the colonial world, he went animal. In Paris he went at once to the Paris Hotel, a tavern previously introduced to him by his friend, Zeno, who introduced him to the Baron von Blum, and who finally consented to place a $500 reward to anyone who would accept his challenge to fight Mudge for the championship of the world, through the personal interest of the Baron himself.

The Baron made the arrangement with Mudge, who accepted the challenge.

Mudge arrived at the Paris Hotel and entered the tavern. Mudge's position was taken by a short, stout, black-clothed man who looked like a turkey cock and was grinning from ear to ear. Mudge had the position of being the center of interest and attraction of the tavern. After a short time Mudge was carried to the center of the room and placed in front of a large red light. Mudge was then whipped by the man who had promised him the $500 reward. Mudge, seeing that it was really a fair fight, took the arrangement and engaged the man, who was the champion of France. The fight lasted for several hours, and the man was defeated by Mudge. Mudge was then declared the champion of the world.

Mudge's victory was greeted with enthusiastic applause from the crowd, and he was carried out of the tavern to the sound of music and the cheers of the people. Mudge was then presented with the $500 reward, and was declared the champion of the world.

A Clever Device

A Story Showing How a Fortune Bag is the Balance

By ESTHER VANDEVERE

"John," and Mary MacKintosh had been married only seven years when he came to tell her of his decision. They were standing in the kitchen, and the sun was bright and hot through the window behind her.

"What do you mean, John?" asked Mary, her face grave and faraway.

"I mean," replied John, "that I have decided to go away for a while."

Mary looked up, her beautiful blue eyes wide with shock and grief. "You mean you're going to leave me?"

"Yes, Mary. That's what I mean."

Mary MacKintosh thought of him, always smiling, always happy. How could she believe him? And yet he was looking so serious, so determined.

"I can't believe it!" she cried. "I can't believe you'll leave me!"

John came to stand close to her, his hand touching her shoulder. "I know it's hard for you to understand, Mary. But I have to do this."

"But why? What is it?"

"I don't want to tell you," he said quietly. "I just want you to know that I have made up my mind.

Mary was angry now. She knew that he had something to hide, but she couldn't help but wonder. "What is it, John?"

"I can't say," he replied. "But you'll know when the time comes.

"John!" cried Mary, almost in tears. "You're going to break my heart!"

"I'm sorry," he said softly. "I know it will hurt you, but I have to do this for myself."

Mary MacKintosh felt as if all the color had drained from her face. "What will I do without you?"

"I don't know," he said, "but I promise you, I'll be back."

John had turned and was gone. Mary stood there, feeling as if her world had come to an end. She knew that he had to go, but she couldn't help but wonder, what was the reason?
