Sunday School Contest. Owing to the exile of one of the scorers no report of the Sunday school competition appeared in 'last week's AMERICAN, but the contest went merrily on just the same. With only two Sundays of the period remaining, the enthusiasm is at its height. Last Sunday 143 attended the Baptist Sunday school, 191 at Ellsworth Falls, while the other schools showed large increases. The standing of the schools show marked progress, but the order has not changed since the last report: Bap-tist, 56; Ellsworth Falls, 55.15; Congregational, 52.80; Methodist, 42; North Ellsworth, 40.5. The contest for the first position in the contest between the classes has been uncertain from the first and still remains in uncertainty. At present the classes stand as follows: Miss Milliken's class, Falls, 93; Junior Boys, Falls, 91; Mrs. Whitcomb's class, Falls, 89; Mrs. Whitney's class, Falls, 87.6. The contest for growth is led by the B

B. B. class, Baptist. This magnificent class has more than doubled its membership during the competition. The second class is that on Mr. Mathews of the Congregational, with Mrs. Greely's class of the Methodist church third.

The competition has borne fruit not only in a quickoned interest in the Sunday schools but in a closer intimacy between the churches.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XII.-First Quarter, For March 22, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xiii, 18-35. Memory Verses, 18, 19-Golden Text, Matt. vii, 21-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The topic of this study is entitled "Lessons by the Way." and in the verses for today we have lessons for all the way, always centering upon Him who is "the way," hated by His adversaries, rejoiced in by His people (verse 17). There is much in the lesson concerning the kingdom, for which He taught us to pray to our Father in Heaven, saying "Thy kingdom come." We must distinguish between the present age, during which the kingdom is postponed and which our Lord spoke of as "the mystery of the kingdom of God" (Mark iv, 11), and the kingdom Itself to be set up on this earth at His second coming in glory.

The two parables of our lesson must be studied in the light of their setting not only here, but as first recorded in Matt. xiii. The closing verses of our lesson chapter tell of the desolation of Jerusalem until He shall come again. But when the kingdom comes Jerusalem shall be the throne of the Lord a city of truth and a praise in the earth (Jer. iii, 17; Zech. viii, 3; Isa, lxii, 67). In Ps. cii, 16, it is written that the Lord will build up Zion when He shall appear in His glory, kingdom was at hand when our Lord was here in humiliation, as was preached by our Lord Himself, and by His apostles, as well as by John the Baptist, but because they rejected Him and killed Him He plainly told them that the kingdom would not come till His return from the far country (Luke xix, 11, 12). He did not begin to speak in parables until they determined to kill Him (Matt. xii, 14). Then follows in Matt. xiii the seven parables describing this age of the mystery of the kingdom. The parables of the mustard seed and of the leaven in this lesson are repetitions of two of those, the former speaking of a great tree with birds in the branches and the latter of leaven in the food.

In explaining the parable of the sower our Lord said that the birds represented the wicked one (Matt. xiii, 4, 19), and a symbol once explained stands. We have seen in a recent lesson that leaven is always a symbol of The teaching therefore is that in this age of the mystery of the king-dom or the time between the rejection and the coming of the kingdom, many followers of the wicked one will pro-fess to be interested, but the teaching will become thoroughly corrupt, and tares, the work of the devil (Matt. xiii. 38, 39), will be found with the wheat till the end of this age. To all these deceived and deceiving ones He will have to say, "I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity" (verses 26, 27). Many shall come from all parts of the earth to share and enjoy the kingdom, while many who thought themselves deserv-ing of it shall find their place where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth (verses 28, 29).

We must ponder well and lay to heart the words of our Lord to one of the best and most religious men of his day, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John iii, 5).

Judging from the denial in our own times, of the fundamental truths of the gospel, it is to be feared that many church members and many ministers and missionaries have never been born again. It is not for us to talk about few or many being saved, but it is essential that each one should know for himself that he is saved by receiving the Lord Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour, and that appropriating the great truth "The Son of God loved me and gave Himself for me," "His own self bare my sins in His own body" (Gal. li, 20; I Pet. ii, 24). He is able to say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," "I know whom I have believed" and, "having come to Him I am not cast out" (Job xix, 25; II Tim. 1, 12: John vi, 37). It is still the accepted time, and the day of salvation for all who will come, but when once the door is shut it will be too late. There will come a time when the despisers and haters of truth shall call and get no answer, shall seek and shall not find (Prov. 1, 24-31). Our Lord said that unbelievers shall die in their sins, and thus dying, cannot come where He is (John viii, 21, 24). As in the days of Noah, it will be shut in or shut out.

In this age of the mystery or the postponement of the kingdom, the Spir-It is, like the servant of Abraham, tellof the riches of the Father and the Son and seeking a bride for the Son, or, in other words, gathering from all nations by the preaching of the gospel of the risen Christ the church or body of Christ, but we must never confound the church with the The church will reign with Christ in the kingdom, but the kingdom will include all nations, as it is said in Dan. vii, 27, "The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven." There may be some great surprises awaiting us when we shall see Abraham, and Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and the twelve apostles on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel (verse 28 and chapter xxii, 30).

His reference to the two days and the third day (32) may point to the 2,000 years of this age, and the next thousand. which will be His reign of rightcousness and peace.

EDITED BY "AUNT MADGE".

Its Motto: "Helpful and Hopeful."

The purposes of this column are succinctly stated in the title and motto—It is for the mutual benefit, and aims to be helpful and hopeful. Being for the common good, it is for the common use-a public servant, a purveyor of information and suggestion, a medium for the in terchange of ideas. In this capacity it solicits communications, and its success depends largely on the support given it in this respect. Com nunications must be signed, but the name of writer will not be printed except by permission Communications will be subject to approval or rejection by the editor of the column, but none will be rejected without good reason. TROUBLES THAT DO NOT COME. Of the hard and weary loads 'Neath which we bend and fall, The troubles that do not come Are the heaviest ones of all.

For grief that cuts like a knife There's oil of comfort and cure, And the hand which binds the weight Brings strength and grace to endure

But to phantoms of pain and woe The lips of pity are dumb, And there's never oil or wine For troubles that do not come

There's a song to lighten the toil, And a staff for climbing the height, But never an Alpine stock For the hills that are out of sight.

There are bitter herbs enough In the brimming cup of to-day, Without the sprig of rue From to-morrow's unknown way.

Then take the meal that is spread, And go with a song on thy way. And let not the morrow shade The sunshine and joy of to-day -Lettie S. Bigelow, in Zion's Herald.

Dear M. B. Friends:

The poem for this week furnished by B. E. S. was certainly written for the worrying kind; but it is good for us all, because a variety of thoughts may be found in it.

You will all admit that in the spring, the rug-fever precedes the house-cleaning fever, and one good niece, remembering this, has sent a new idea in regard to making rugs. I can seem to see how one would look made in the fashion described. Thanks to you, Lina, for sharing the design with the other members of the SARGENTVILLE, March 9, 1914.

Dear Aunt Madge:
I have a dim recollection that sometime in the past one of the sisters asked for some new way to make rugs. Maybe she has used her rug rags all up long ago. I am making one that may be new to some of the readers of this column, though I have been making this kind for several years and find them very satisfactory, and they do not require a large amount of labor and material.

A stout iron hoop that will not bend easily is required for a frame. A hoop from a molasses barrel is a good size to experiment with, but if a larger rug is desired, an old carriage tire is just the thing. Wind this firmly with strips of cloth. Divide it into eight equal sections by four strips of firm cloth one and one-third inches wide, pinning the ends to opposite sides of the hoop. This ing of the warp.

For the filling take a strip of the sam width. Thinner material, such as flannel may be used for this. Fasten one end securely and weave the strip twice around the warp. Keepjall raw edges turned under. It will be necessary in one place either to weave two together or add an extra strip to make the weaving come right.

Now take another strip of the thick cloth, pin the end beside strip No. 1 overlapping about one-half. Carry the other end over the last row of filling and bring it back alongside of No. 2 and fasten. Do this in each of the Again weave around twice and repeat this process until the hoop is nearly filled. Fasten the last row securely, then unpin the ends of the warp and trim them to an even length to form a fringe. The rugs are prettier our way, whom I was asked to take a good look if the warp in all the same colors, but it need at, "For," said my companion, "it is said that not necessarily be. Different colors may be used for the filling with good effect.

If I have not succeeded in making these directions plain, I will be glad to answer any questions. The process is much more simple than it looks on paper. Lina.

One of the pleasant surprises of my life came to me last night when I received a letter from a town in Pennsylvania, from C. W. C., who was a pupil of mine in 1867, and whom I have seen but a few times since. She wanted to tell me how she enjoyed The American, especially the M. B. column, which is a weekly visitor to her home in that distant state, sent by a brother. She says she would like to write for it but is not gifted with her pen, but should I send the long letter she wrote describing the great work of Bills Sanday and his co-workers, no one would doubt her ability to become an M. B.

She is enthused with all good works, es pecially temperance reform, thoroughly believes in national prohibition and woman suffrage, therefore I propose her name as an M. B.-ite.

As for myself, I have nothing new to write. One thought comes to me; that is, how little we think, when we hastily scratch a line for the M. B. column, how far it goes. Who reads it? What comments are made on it? How many does it cheer who may be longing for dear old Maine—yes, for Hancock country? Let us all try the coming year to give them something worth looking for. DELL.

It was fine of you, Dell, to send this letter of cheer. It is always a great pleasure to hear of one more that, is interested in the column. C. W. C. will be unani-mously voted in as an M. C., and we shall be glad to have a representative from the state of Pennsylvania. She must have many things to tell us of that part of the country which will be new and of interest to us in the far East,

Dear Aunt Madge: We hunted jackrabbits and cottontails in forest of tall, dry, wild mustard - indeed, blackbirds, great flocks of them, lodged in the branches thereof-where is now a fine residential section of the city of Los Angeles. We soon tired of gunning.

Then the mother and her sons decided that they must have a rig that they might have means of conveyance for seeing the country-And the very day they made the purchase I had gone ten miles into the country with a civil engineer, thus getting my second topbuggy ride within the county of Los Augeles and the opportunity of fording the famous Los Angeles river for my first time, which river was at this time only ankle deep with water The engineer had to call my attention to the fact of this river, else I never should have

He told me further that at times in winter this little, trickling steam over and through gray sand swelled to deep and broad proportions; and the features of the river bed and bank proved to me that this must be the case Afterward I saw this river when it would have floated a fair-sized schooner; and houses and chickens floated on its turbulent bosom than a road, winding and twisting, picking out the easiest way over very uneven surfaces now climbing a steep grade, now crossing s deep canyon; and finally to a single adobe house, at a corner of which stood a man looking this man has killed his sixth man, and is waiting for the seventh to come along." urged him to whip up his sorrel nag.

We were going uphill most of the time, but there were two or three places where we had to drive down the side of a steep hill and along the bottom land for many rods, only to climb out on the other side and continue our way up grade; for by the time we had reached "colony" land we had climbed to an altitude of between two and three hundred feet. This was in June, and I looked, as we rode along, to see wild strawberries in blossom be-side the road. I used to see them in New England at this time of year, but not one did I see, and have never seen one here; but we have !uscious, cultivated strawberries and blackberries in abundance.

Thursday, May 7-Meeting of Hancock Pomona grange with Massapaqua grange, South Bluehill.

SCHOODIC, 408, WINTER HARBOR. On Thursday evening Schoodic grange. Its number four hundred eight, Did hold a supper and a sale Of which I will now relate.

A combination was this sale,
Of names familiar, 'tis true—
Just "Washington" and "Valentine".
And letters of red and blue

To spell the name of Washington Were placed on the wall behind Each table, on which articles Were sold of more than one kind.

The first was W, filled with goods To Work with around the home; The next was A, with Aprons piled; And then to one more we roam.

There S was, for the Sweets galore, And goodies of many kinds, And next was H, for Handkerchiefs As different as our minds. Then next was I, for Infants' wear, On which were some cunning show And mittens, too, and also sacques, And other things babies use.

And farther on was the letter N, There bundles of Nonsense were, All arranged on the fish-pond plan, And heaps of fun did occur.

Then next came the table of G, On which were the things to Guess, And I took in the pretty Toys But, oh! such a mixed-up mess!

On the table to represent O
Were all the Odd things displayed,
And last was N for Neckwear,
And many were nicely made.

One feature that afforded to all-

A generous amount of fun— The sale of "Valentine Fortunes", For five cents each, to old and young.

The proceeds from the supper and sale Were more than we expected, For over fifty dollars there Whea counted were detected.

DUTY YOU OWE YOUR TOWN

Be Faithful and Honest With Yourself.

GRLIGATIONS OF CONSUMER.

Before Sending His Money to Distant Concerns Every Citizen Should Consider the Duty He Owes His Home Town-Local Merchants Ready and Willing to Compete.

[Copyrighted, 1914, by Thomas J. Sullivan.] Duty is a power that rises with us in the morning and goes to rest with us at night. It is coextensive with the action of our intelligence. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will.

Let us do our duty in our shop or kitchen, in the market, the street, the office, the farm, the school, the home, just as faithfully as if we stood in the front ranks of some great battle and knew that victory for mankind depended upon our bravery, strength and

When we do that the very humblest of us will be serving in that great army which achieves the welfare of the world.

A Dollar Lost.

It should be the slogan of every rural consumer never to send away for goods that be can just as well buy at home. Every time you send a dollar to a mail order house that dollar, as far as you and your community are concerned, is practically out of circulation.

Your own home merchant is the one who helps to keep up your schools. your churches and your town. He is the one who deserves your trade and not some catalogue house in Chicago or elsewhere.

Goods on Unsecured Promises. When you have nothing to give in exchange, to whom do you go for accommodations until some uncertain time when you can pay?

Do you not always find your home merchant ready and willing to let his goods go on promises, not guaranteed notes, but verbal promises, trusting to your honesty and good luck in meeting the obligation later?

How many farms have been paid for by your merchants advancing both the goods necessary to keep life in the body and cash to meet that dreaded interest on the mortgage?

Under the same conditions would the farmer trust the merchant for months and months with the produce of his farm, or would he ask for cash or its equivalent upon delivery of the goods?

Not a Robber or Cheat.

We know that the average consumer does not feel that his local merchant is a robber or a cheat; but, like all humankind, the catalogues and prices of mail order houses appeal to him, and he forwards his order and cash without considering the injustice he is doing himself, his merchant and his

The catalogues of the mail order house are illumined with pictures to catch the eye of the unwary. They range in complexion from a brunette banana to a blond canary bird. They offer to sell you anything from a phistone to a cypress shingle sawed out of a sunbeam.

Cash Versus Credit.

It seems unbelievable, but it is nev ertheless a fact, showing the entire lack of any sense of justice, that many people regard their local stores as merely institutions of accommodation. When these people have cash to spend It goes to the faraway mail order houses, but when times are dull, when they are sick or out of work or during the season when farmers are not turn ing their produce into cash. what do they do? Do they write to the catalogue house and ask for credit?

If they did do you think they would get it? Not on your life! Those concerns must have cash, must have it in advance, must have it before you can even see the goods you buy. The consumer sends his money and then sits down and waits until the mail order house gets good and ready to fill his

But when home people want credit or favors of any kind they bustle off to their home merchant, very obligingly order what they want and tell him to charge it. expecting him to wait at least from one to six months for his

Dealing With Neighbors.

In buying from your home merchants you deal with neighbors. Buy with goods before you. Pay when you get the goods if you so elect. Have goods delivered free. Return goods if not satisfactory. Build up your home

Help build up your own home town and make of yourself a man worthy of your day and time. Every man should take pride in being a good American citizen, and we believe most men do and that most men are, or at least desire to be, but what kind of citizen is the man who supports an octopus? Should he not be placed in a class with the man that knocks his own business? That sort of man is invariably neither a good neighbor nor a good citizen.

A Breach of Promise Case

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

While talking with Farmer Beasley a young woman in widow's weeds came tripping along the road.

"Good morning. Mr. Beasley," she said cheerlly.

"Mornin', Mrs. Chambers," replied "What a pretty woman," I remarked, "and what a pleasant smile?"

"Well, rather," said Beasley. "That smile is capable o' bowlin' over a hull regiment o' men." "How does she do it?"

"Just smiles at 'em; that's all she does. She don't appear to give 'em no encouragement, though Ed Stumps declared she give him a lot of it. He come to me not long after she lighted here and told me that he was goin' to sue her for breach o' promis told him not to make a fool of himself, but he wouldn't listen to me and went down to the county seat and put the case in the hands of an attorney.

"First time I met the widder after Stumps sued her for blightin' his affections I reckoned when I seen her comin' that she'd look kind o' serious, but she didn't. I said good mornin to her and asked her how her suit was comin' on, and she said it was interestin'. The women generally sued the men for breach of promise, and she reckoned she was the only woman in the state that had ever been complimented that way.

"By crackey! She seemed to be proud of it. I asked her if she wa'n't afeared of havin' to pay a big sum, and she said she'd be very much mortified if the jury stuck her for a little one. Funny creatures women are, aren't they?

"When the trial come around I went down to the courthouse. She was there takin' care of her own case. She examined the men summoned for jurors herself, and you'd ought to heard the questions she asked. It was like this: 'Are you married or single. Mr. Jones?' (with that smile o' her'n). 'Oh, a bachelor, eh? Were you ever in love, Mr. Jones? Have you a proper reverence for our sex? Do you think that if you were filted you'd consider money an equivalent for your broken heart? Mr. Smith, you say you are married. Happy match? Does your wife ever git jealous? How much do you think would have repaid you if she had refused to marry you after you had courted her?

"And all the time she was talkin' she just sot there and smiled, showin' her white teeth between her rosy lips. Some on 'em she turned down, and some on 'em she let through, but she didn't take any time about it, whichever way she decided. Nobody could tell from her questions whether she was goin' to turn a man down or let him on to the jury.

"When the twelve jurymen were ready for work they was the most self satisfied lot o' men I ever see together. They all settled themselves down in their cheers as if they was goin' to have the time o' their lives. The judge, he looked cheerful too, The plaintiff's counsel apologized to the defendant, but conscientiously worked for his client. Whenever he said anything about the widder's ropin' him in she just laughed as though she thought it very funny. And when he read some soft sodder she had written the plaintiff she sat lookin' at the jurymen with that smile o' her'n on her lips, and it seemed to me that every one of 'em couldn't help thinkin' that she was sayin' it to him specially.

When the lawyer got through the widder arose to make her defense. 'May it please the court,' and she smiled at the judge. When she said 'Gentlemen of the jury' she spoke the word gentlemen as though every one on 'em had been born in an alabaster palace with jeweled doors and windows. She said she'd have to throw herself on the court's mercy. because Mr. Stumps was so nice to her she just couldn't help sayin' nice things to him too. She was awful sorry about it all and really thought he ought to have a consid'able verdic'. In fact, if she'd been rich she'd 'a' paid him a large sum, seein' she couldn't love him, without compellin' him to take his case into court.

"Reckon this puzzled the jury some. They didn't seem to know which way to bring in the case to the widder's satisfaction. If they allowed Stumps the $20,000 damages he claimed the widder would have to pay it. If they found for him with a few cents damages it wouldn't be complimentary to the widder. So when the judge gave 'em the case they retired to the jury room to talk it over. They all agree on favorin' the defendant, but didn't know how to favor her most. At last one on 'em, an oldish married man, hit the nail on the head, and they all went back into the courtroom feelin'

"'Your honor,' said the foreman, we've found for the plaintiff with $100,000 damages, but owin' to extenuatin' circumstances recommend the defendant to mercy.' "The recommend was all the judge wanted. He remitted the damages and discharged the defendant with the injunction that she git married and stop stirrin' up the men. "Some says she's goin' to take the judge at his word. Anyway, he's been courtin' the widder ever since. But you never kin tell about what wimmen are goin' to do."

So Easy!

"While I was in Berlin fast summer," said the globe trotter. "I stopped with an artist friend for the season. One day the artist's wife had been showing the sights of the town to a solemn visaged cousin. The artist was in his room when the ladies returned from their tour and was so very busy with his work he did not look up. cousin looked on in silence, and when my artist friend had finished his drawing she said:

"'Oh, Mr. Jones, I never even imagined that drawing was so easy!"

"Which reminds me of a story they tell of Joachim, the famous violinist. One day he watched the skaters from his window until he decided that he would try it himself. The attendant after strapping the skates endeavored to show the distinguished musician how to strike out, first with one foot and then with the other. Legs got tangled, and Joachim shot into a gro tesque scrawl.

"'Ya, ya. ya!' exclaimed the attendant as he assisted the famous violinist to his feet. 'It is not quite so easy as playing the fiddle. Yes?' "-

Queer People of Papua. In the Girara country, Papua, a district of New Guinea, where the country is almost entirely submerged, the natives are said to claim descent from the dog. They possess five totems, which are drawn on all their houses. Their villages are erected on hillocks so as to be clear of the water, and the people of each village inhabit one large, common house, sometimes as much as 400 to 500 feet long and 60 to 80 feet in width. The center of this huge building is a kind of common hall, which is used only by the men. while the walls of the structure are divided into cubicles in three or four floors, access to which is gained by means of ladders. The women are not allowed to enter the building by the same door as the men. A great deal of sorcery prevails in the western division. In the wilder parts of the country the chief is himself a head sorcer-er. He claims to be able to separate his spirit from his body and to send it on various missions, including that of

There are certain East Indian flies, several varieties of them apparently of similar type to our own house favorite, Musca domestica, that have developed a rather ingenious, if somewhat disreputable, way of making a living. This is the story told by Captains Patton and Craig in the Indian Journal of Medical Research. The proboscis of these flies is soft and not suitable for piercing the skin of man or the lower animals. So they hang around some one of the several types of biting flies, and when the latter pierces the skin of a victim they crowd him away and use the incision for feeding themselves. If the biter happens to be too large or fierce thus to be driven from his prey, the fly jackals wait until he is finished and then take his place. In view of these observations it seems quite possible that the so called nonbiting flies may play a hitherto unsuspected role in the transmission of dis-

Arithmetic Justice.

Rough and ready justice in Mexico in the days of President Diaz is illustrated by the following story:

In a lonely part of the south a train had been robbed by the inhabitants of a certain village. The president told a young officer to take his company and "put an end to that sort of thing." The young officer had every house searched. Almost all contained stolen property. He then marshaled the villagers, picked out every fortieth man and had him shot. After this he said: am taking my troops away, but if any more train robberies take place we shall come back and shoot every twentieth man. Should it be necessary to return again, every tenth man will be executed." No more trains were attacked.

The Indiscriminate Phrase. "What's this?" exclaimed the sensa tional editor.

"Story about a woman who put a few people to considerable trouble," said the reporter.

"But you haven't identified ber." "We couldn't learn her name."

"What difference does that make? Not knowing her name would not prevent you from referring to her as a prominent society woman, would it?"-Spokane Review.

Looking After Maine's Fisheries.

Congressman John A. Peters is Maine fishermen at Washington. He has been keeping a lot of democrats stirred up over the so-called Flood bill for the regulation of fishing in international waters between the United States and Canada.

Mr. Peters has a big chart of Passamaquoddy bay. He wants to know the definition of "territorial waters of Passamaquoddy bay", as used in the the third district. Again it is whis-Flood bill. To this end he has been poking questions at Mr. Flood, of loud, that the bellicose bolter of Bel-Virginia, chairman of the foreign affairs committee which reported the and ready to come back into the fold, bill to the House.

When Mr. Peters asked Mr. Flood what was meant by territorial waters, the latter admitted that he did not know, and referred Mr. Peters to Dr. Hugh M. Smith, U. S. commissioner of fisheries. Dr. Smith looked wise over to see Dr. Tittman of the U. S. man could not answer the question, Peters to, and there the trail ended.

As a result of the embarrassing questions asked by Mr. Peters on the floor of the House, Mr. Flood has Democratic club." slowed up a little in his plans to push the bill through. In the meantime Mr. Peters has obtained a small concession from Chairman Flood, to wit: That the regulations for fishing in these international waters should not go into force until March 1, 1915. This pleases the fishermen along the east coast of Maine, who have been concerned lest they be deprived of years. There should be a hunting rights now enjoyed.

Effect of the Tariff.

The argument always advanced by low tariff advocates is that, while reduction of rates would stimulate importations, there would be a corresponding increase in exports. The New York financial correspondent of the Boston Globe says the bankers of that city, who sell bills of exchange upon which importers rely largely for payment to their foreign creditors, and who are, therefore, the best possible judges of the effect of the new tariff, find the demand for foreign exchange increasing, while there is an increasing tendency to falling off

In December, they say, the United States imported, in money value, more than in any one month since our international trade began, while here was a falling off in money value of exports of between $17,000,000 and $18,000,000 from December, 1912. Until the export movement of our agricultural products begins next fall, no conclusive comparison can, of course, be made, but the indications point to a further falling off in agricultural exports because of increased home de-

So far, the greatly increased imports have not been reflected in reduced prices to the consumer. The foreign manufacturer is reaping a rich harvest because of the democratic tariff.

Hon. Ira G. Hersey, of Houlton, who has served two terms in the Maine House and one term in the Maine Senate, has announced that he will be a candidate for re-election on the republican ticket. Mr. Hersey was an ardent supporter of Roosevelt and is a keen student of political conditions. His announcement indicates that he has made a careful survey on the situation in his county, and that he is convinced that the voters of Aroostook who supported Roosevelt in 1912 are now united in opposition to free trade. Senator Hersey's statement is that he is a republican because Maine needs republicans in Congress, and he does not desire, either by his voice, influence or vote, to contribute in any way to the democratic party. "I believe the great mass of Roosevelt republicans will vote the republican ticket with great pleasure at the next election," says Mr. Hersey, "because the present administration in this State has been a great administration. Its financial policy is above criticism. The conduct of its business affairs has been progressive, equitable, business-like and economical. Our governor has shown himself wise. honest, faithful and fearless, and his administration ought to be emphatically endorsed by the good people of

The many Hancock county friends of Hon. Elmer P. Spofford, of Deer Isle, are pleased to know that he is making satisfactory recovery after a serious surgical operation at a private hospital in Portland. The announcement is not without its occasion for regret among his republican friends, as it is accompanied by the statement that Mr. Spofford is advised by his physicians that, while he will fully recover his health, he must limit his activities so far as possible for a considerable time, and seek quiet and rest. For this reason Mr. Spofford writes to the republican county committee that it would be impossible for him to continue upon the State committee, if the republicans of the county should desire him to do so, and he will retire April 9. Mr. Spofford has always given unsparingly of himself in his work for the republican party, and his retirement from the looking after the interests of the State committeeship will be cause for regret to the leaders of the party not only in the county but throughout the State.

It is whispered in Augusta, according to the Bangor's Commercial's correspondent at the capital city, that Hon. W. R. Pattangall may, after all, again be a candidate for Congress in pered, but this whisper is not very fast, Edgar F. Hanson, is repentant, even to the extent of supporting Mr. Pattangall. And to cap this comes the third whisper that if Mr. Pattangall does not come out as a candidate, Hon. Robert F. Dunton, of Belfast, who recently defeated Mr. Hanson for the mayorship, has been suggested and suggested that Mr. Peters run as the congressional candidate. Perhaps this last suggestion grows out of coast and geodetic survey. Dr. Titt- a desire to pacify Mr. Hanson. If he cannot have Pattangall, give him and had no one else to refer Mr. Dunton, whom he loves equally as well. Postscript: Mr. Hanson is organizing a new party in Waldo county -the "Woodrow Wilson Independent

> The Maine Sportsmen's Fish and Game association has recently made a postal card canvass of its members for answers to several questions on proposed game law changes. From the answers received, the following conclusions are drawn: There should be a close time on moose for four or five license for residents, preferably $1. There should not be a restriction to one buck deer a season. The present limit is small enough.

> Col. Frederick Hale, of Portland, will not be a candidate for the nomination for congressman from the first district against Congressman Hinds, who, after announcing his decision not to run, later announced that he would. Col. Hale, in announcing his determination not to run against Congressman Hinds, says: next election will be a vitally important one for the republican party, and we should enter the campaign with united forces."

> Street Commissioner Marden will adopt seven as his lucky number. The official returns of the ward offithe ballots agreed upon by attorneys representing both sides in the inspection of the ballots gave him a plurality of seven by a different set of figures, and the finding of Justice Cornish gave him a plurality of seven by still another set of totals.

The Right Way to Boil Ham.

The discussion of ways to boil ham may seem to some entirely superfluous, yet have you never noticed that some hams retain that rich red color and perfect taste while others have a brownish color and the meat comes apart? This difference lies in the manner of boiling.

A good ham put on in cold water and cooked slowly, or allowed to stand for while without cooking will lose much of its nutrition. The proper way to cook a ham is to put it on in water that is already hot, just beginning to simmer. If it can be kept at this temperature, which is a few degrees below the boiling point, so much the better. At any rate it should not boil vigorously.

For every pound of ham let it boil a quarter of an hour. Thus a sixteen-pound nam would require four hours to properly cook. When put in hot water the outer layers of meat are cooked at once, thus preventing the escape of juices which will take place in cold water.

There are three great facts concerning pimples and other eruptions.

The first is that they all proceed from an impure condition of the blood.

The second is that they are all cured by correcting the condition, and in no other way, as thousands who have bothered with powders, lotions and other external preparations have found out.

lotions and other externs: preparations and found out.

And the third is that Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills correct that condition as no other medicines do, make the blood pure and rich, and in so doing radically and permanently oure pimples and all other eruptions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills are the medicines that will do you the most good. Accept no substitutes.—Advt.

Tilden was born in Castine, but had been a resident of Hallowell thirty-five years. In May, 1861, he enlisted in the Civil war, and was commissioned as a second lieutenant in Company B, 2d regiment. He had previously held the position of lieutenant in the militia company in his home town, known as the Castine Light Infantry. General Tilden was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the 16th Maine infantry July 9, 1862, and was a little later promoted to a colonelcy. He was twice confined in Libby prison, escaping both times, once by going through a tunnel. He was brevetted as a brigadier-general for gallant service, and was mustered out July 16, 1865.

Three times the Massachusetts legislature has passed a bill granting to Dean Archer's school the right to confer de grees, and twice Governor Foss vetoed it. Last year the bill freached the governor just before Easter. When Mr. Archer called upon him, Governor Foss assured him that the bill was all right, and wished him a pleasant Easter. Afterward Mr. Archer learned that even at that time the bill had been vetoed. This year Governor Walsh signed the bill within one hour after it reached him from the Senate. Dean Archer will have his "pleasant Easter" this year.

Mr. Peters to Preside.

|Portland Press.]

The Republican State committee has made an excellent choice in the selection of Congressman John A. Peters to be the presiding officer of the coming State con-Mr. Peters is throughout the State as standing for the new republicanism and all that it implies, and he was so accepted by the voters of his district when they elected him as their representative to Congress. Unless the progressive voters had believed that the Ellsworth man represented progressive ideas they would never have supported him for the office to which he was chosen, and without their vote he never could have been elected.

As a member of the legislature Mr. Peters supported progressive legislation, and since he has been in Congress he has remained true to the principles which he stood for there.

THANK YOU, DOCTOR.

But Why Not Return Our Visit After So Many Years? OGDEN, UTAH, Feb. 16, 1914. My Dear Ellsworth American:

Herewith enclosed pleased find some thing to reward your weekly visits so many, many years that I hesitate to confess how many. My earliest remembrance of books and newspapers at the old home in North Penobscot is the recollection of your welcome face when you were younger than you are now, and though the years are long and many since, you have not forgotten the trail of my wanderings, and have never forgotten to bring to me the changes, some of sunshine, but, alas, many of shadow, from old familiar places that will always seem home to me

May you keep on growing bigger and wiser so long as there are human eyes to read the story you tell. And when the last man in Hancock county lingers, and the lights for others have gone out, may he be seen sticking type in the composing rooms of THE ELISWORTH AMERICAN.

Minor officers were elected as follows: Auctioneers-E. K. Hopkins and G. B.

Harbor master- Maynard H. Murch. Constables-at-large-C. S. Johnston. C. Pierson, Hiram Hamilton, w. Nason, D. L. Fields.

Pound-keepers and fence-viewers-S. S Satey, H. B. Estey, C. W. Gerry, Frank M. Moore, Charles Peters.

Mayor Hagerthy appointed Miss Mary A. Hodgkins as librarian. Confirmed. Appointment of E. E. Springer as janitor was not confirmed, pending investigation by the committee on library.

BOOKINGS FOR HALL.

Ald. Stuart suggested that it would be a good plan to have bookings for Hancock all made at the city clerk's office, where the book would be always available. It was voted to have bookings made by janitor and city clerk, the book to be kept by the city clerk.

AUDITOR ELECTED.

Ald. Maddocks thought it necessary to have a paid auditor to scrutinize bills and make suggestions to the board where expenses might be cut down-a real auditor, clothed with authority. It was so voted. and James A. McGown was elected audi-

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Ald. Maddocks moved to proceed to the election of standing committees by ballot. Aid. Moor rose to the defense of what had always been considered the mayor's prerogative—the appointment of committees. Mayor Hagerthy said he was perfectly satisfied to have the committees elected by the board, on the principle that "to the victor belongs the spoils".

It was so voted, and standing committees were elected as follows:

It was voted to charge interest on unpaid taxes at one-half of one per cent. after August 1, same to be added to and become a part of the tax. This is the same as for several years past.

SALARIES.

The fixing of salaries was then taken up. With two exceptions the salaries were made the same as last year. The city clerk's salary was increased from $200 to $300, and that of the superintendent of schools from $400 to $500. George B. Stuart addressed the board in favor of the latter increase, saying the present salary was ridiculously small. He also suggested that the city should, before another year, arrange with some adjoining town for joint superintendence, thereby securing a professional superintendent at no greater expense than at present. The suggestion met with favor from the

The Trick of Ski Jumping.

The art of ski jumping is not so easy as it looks before trying, nor so hard to learn as it might appear after the first attempt. At the start, or takeoff. come down as though you were coasting on the ski, then at the moment of the takeoff bend the body well forward from the hips and throw as much of the weight as possible into the knees. As you leave the edge of the jump straighten quickly at the hips and se cure as much as possible the effect of jumping straight out into the air While in the air hold the arms as still as possible in the position that best preserves the balance, keep the ski points slightly down, as near as possible parallel with the slope of the hill. The body should be perpendicular to the slope and the skis kept well together. On landing advance one ski as far as possible without upsetting, bending the knee of the leg that is advanced. Keep the skis together and parallel. The rest is practice and more practice.

Noncommittal.

A certain chap named James was never known to take a decided stand on any question. With a view to trapping him into committing himself two friends went into James' office one day and started to talk about a buffalo eat-

"Some people may think that a buffalo doesn't eat grapes," remarked one of the friends, "but when I was in the est a few years ago I saw one of them climb twenty feet into a tree to pluck off a bunch of the luscious fruit."

"A buffalo climb a tree!" incredulously exclaimed the other. "Who ever heard of such a thing? Say, Jim." he continued, turning to the noncommittal one, "what do you think of preposterous statement like this?

"Why, I hardly know," was the calm rejoinder of James, "but there's no telling what a buffalo might do when he wants grapes."-Exchange.

He Was a Bit Fussy. The following letter was recently addressed to the general manager of an English railway: "Please send me one tourist ticket for Penzance return (six months) for train leaving Paddington next Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. (arriving Penzance 5:05 p. m.). An actor who recently was taken while on the stage by a cinematograph was greatly pleased with the result. Talking about it to a prominent dramatic critic, he said:

"How is this, son?" he asked. "Teacher's fault," said the boy. "How is it the teacher's fault?" "She moved the little boy that sat next to me." MARDEN IS ELECTED.

Plurality of Seven.

Fred B. Marden was declared elected street commissioner of Ellsworth for the ensuing year by an official recount of the ballots in dispute by Justice Cornish, of the supreme court, at the court house in Elisworth, yesterday afternoon.

The finding of Judge Cornish gives Marden 463 votes and Morrison 456, a plurality of seven for Mr. Marden. The official returns gave Marden the same plurality, but the decision of Justice Cornish gives both Marden and Morrison one more vote than returned by the ward officers, their figures being 462 to 455.

The recount was made by Justice Cornish on petition of Mr. Morrison, through his counsel, D. E. Hurley. J. F. Knowlton and R. E. Mason represented Mr.

Prior to the hearing before Justice Cornish, counsel agreed upon 457 good votes for Marden, 450 for Morrison, and thirtytwo defective. This left sixteen ballots in dispute to be passed upon by Justice Cornish.

At the opening of court, Mr. Hurley argued for the throwing out of three ballots, claimed to have been cast by nonresidents, and which were challenged at brown-tail moths, and urged action to the polls. One of these was eliminated, being admitted by both sides as defective.

Mr. Hurley argued that where votes illegally cast were sufficient to change the result of an election, the supreme court had jurisdiction to throw them out. It was admitted that the names of these three voters were on the voting lists. Mr. Knowlton argued that the statute provided no appeal from the board of registration.

Justice Cornish gave the opinion that, sitting as he did in this case, he had nothing to do with reviewing the work of the board of registration; that all he could do under the statute was to count the

To protect the rights of both parties, however, he said he would allow the taking out of testimony as to the residence of the three voters challenged as non-residents, and then, after counting the ballots, he would give his ruling, to which one side or the other could take exception. Evidence as to the place of residence of John K. Moore, Percy S. Moore and Bion Bonsey was then taken out.

Justice Cornish then proceeded to the ecount of the disputed ballots, passing apon each one as it was presented. The first six disputed ballots from ward 1 all went to Mr. Morrison, bringing him within one of overcoming Mr. Marden's lead on the admitted ballots. Mr. Morrison's stock was looking up.

Then things began to go against him Of the remaining ten disputed ballots, only one was declared in his favor, five for Mr. Marden, and four were thrown out as

At this point Mr. Hurley said that, as the challenged votes, on which he made his argument at the opening, would not affect the result of the election, the point of law raised by him would not apply. The challenged vote was thereupon added to Mr. Marden's total, making it 463, while Mr. Morrison had 456. The other challenged vote, through some mischance, was not included in the sixteen ballots submitted to Justice Cornish. This vote, also a republican ballot, if allowed, would give Mr. Marden a plurality of eight.

Justice Cornish, in passing upon the ballots, was eminently fair, being liberal in his interpretation of the intent of the voter. Some of the ballots were curious, and the ruling upon them is of interest.

A ballot with a cross properly made in the square, but with lines drawn through the party name at the head of the ticket, was pronounced good. So also were several ballots properly marked at the head, but with other small crosses after the names of one or more candidates in the been crossed out and a poor attempt made to erase the mark, and one in which one line of the cross was made with a blue pencil and the other with a black pencil.

Among the ballots discarded as defective was one in which the initials J. M. were written on the margin; and another in which a small cross was made in one of the black spaces beside the square instead of in the white square.

Many housewives dislike to clean carpet. This discovery may make it easier. Get one onnce of wormwood salt from the druggist, put it into a pail of warm water, then wash your carpet as you would a floor, or if very dirty scrub it. You will find when finished all the dirt and grease spots have disappeared and the carpet looks equal to new.

Memorial. IRVING OSGOOD.

The First Unitarian church of Ells worth, through its committee, has adopted the following memorial:

The Unitarian church of Ellsworth ex presses its sense of heavy loss in the death of Irving Osgood. Now many years he has cor in and gone out among us. His was a mo familiar presence. He was unfailingly at the services of worship, and at the various meet-ings in the interest of that life to which the church is dedicated. He had become a leader among us; for several years was the president of this society, which office he held at the time of his death.

His ideals were high, his exemplification of them noble—ideals of the family life, ideals of citizenship, rising above the lowly plains of prudential relations into that citizenship in the republic of God whose obligations and sanctions are from above. Under their sway service and social sympathy. We are in-spired by his example, and pay tribute to his worth.

Mourning his loss from among us, we extend our sympathy to his family, bound to him in the tenderest, most sacred ties. The depths of our human relationships can be measured only in terms that transcend our mortality

It Was For the Purpose of Spending a Fortune

By SADIE OLCOTT

_____ George Underhill on coming of age had everything to live for. He stepped into a fortune of half a million, or $25,000 a year; was in excellent health, a favorite with his friends, especially attractive to girls, and the management of his estate was likely to give him enough to do to put an edge on his leisure moments. This was the outlook before the young man the day he was twenty-one years old.

But on that same day he noticed a swelling in his neck about the size of a hazelnut. He had never had an excrescence of any kind on his body and could not understand the sudden appearance of this one. He stood before mirror looking at it wonderingly. He pinched it, and it hurt a little, shough not much. He thought he would show it to a doctor and get his opinion upon it, but since he expected to be busy with his guardian and the lawyers nearly all day, passing the papers is receiving his estate, he deferred the matter till the morrow.

During his birthday he was so taken up with affairs pertaining to his property that he forgot all about the swelling in his neck till preparing for bed, when he noticed it again. He was a Lit troubled about it and resolved that the first thing he would do in the morning would be to show it to his physician, Dr. Franklin. So as soon as the office hour of the physician came round George was admitted to his consulting room. George did not leave Dr. Franklin's office for nearly an hour, and when he did he was in a very different mental condition from when he entered it. The lump indicated an incurable dis-The doctor tried in every way to avoid telling him this, for the double reason that his patient would suffer in mind as well as in body and his knowing that he had not long to live would hasten the end. George, how ever, gathered from him that he had anywhere from a few months to a few years on earth. As to how much he would suffer the doctor did not tell him. Possibly he did not know him-He convinced his patient that he had better remain ignorant of what the disease was.

George was a philosophic fellow, and when he had recovered, so far as recovery was possible from the shock. he began to lay plans for spending the brief unexpired term of his life in a way to alleviate the condition to the best advantage. Miss Alice Woodbridge was his favorite among his girl acquaintances, and he thought he would like to have her companionship for the brief season of life left to him. He called upon her, stated the case and asked her to be his wife, agreeing to settle half his fortune upon her, the other half to be spent in such comforts or pleasures or journeys as would help him to forget his coming demise.

Miss Woodbridge asked for a few days to consider the proposition, but, being a gitl with an eye to improving her condition, when she gave her answer insisted that the whole amount of his estate be settled on her except the income during his life, which she considered ample for his purpose. Whether or no she was right he did not stop to consider, but broke off the negotiation

George tried several other girls. One who had no especial affection for him refused him on the ground that she did not care to tie herself up for a money consideration to a man who would be in a dying condition during their married life. Others balked at this or at that till at last George had well nigh gone the rounds of the girls he would care to marry. One he had not tried. She was Lucy Ellis, an amiable, happy-go-lucky girl, from whose shoulders trouble rolled off easily and whose financial necessities were such that she was quite familiar with the pawnshop.

To Miss Ellis George concluded to make a proposal, but, being somewhat discouraged in his quest for a companion in his trouble, offered her much better terms than any he had yet pro posed. After modestly telling her that he thought his income would suffice as well as a larger amount for the purpose of making him forget what was coming he promised to settle his whole estate upon her if she would marry

To his surprise, she threw her arms about his neck and said, with tears in her eyes: "We'll spend it all. And what will a lot of money be compared with the remembrance that we shall have at least a short time together?" "But," he protested, "what will you live on when I am gone?" "Why. I won't be any worse off for money than I am now, will I?

She looked up at him from a pair of ingenuous, childlike eyes through her tears, and then and there his heart

"Very well." he said. "Be it as you

Nevertheless it was not as she said, for George on the day of the wedding, unknown to her, placed $100.000 in trust for her. He did not give it to her direct, for he had no confidence in her holding on to it. Since she took no part whatsoever in the manage-ment of his affairs, he was enabled to do this without her discovering that it

George found in Lucy Ellis just what he needed. Perhaps she was sympathetic, but sympathy in dealing with a sufferer is a good fault, and George would have rather had her sympathetic than cold. But his swelling grew larger and pained him, and he needed devotion as an invalid rather than a spender of money. For awhile after their marriage they spent money like water. In this George found his wife all that was to be desired. But his sufferings gradually in-pleasure seeking. We can never tell for what persons are fitted until they are tried. Lucy, of whom her husband had expected nothing as a nurse, rose to the occa-Her sunny disposition proved a great comfort to him. When he was much cast down, instead of speaking words of encouragement which she did not feel she wept with him. This did him more good than telling him what he knew was false, and he would say to himself: "Poor little girl! She suf-creased, and he was obliged to give up must brace up for her sake." George's condition grew gradually He would not have doctors to visit him, because he had been told that they could do him no good. Dr. Franklin came to see him occasionally and was now and then called in to effect some temporary relief. George asked him one day to tell him the nature of his disease, but the doctor convinced him that it was better for him to remain in ignorance of it.

fers for me more than I suffer. I

One day Mrs. Underhill received a note from Dr. Franklin asking her to bring her husband to his office. Many cures were being announced for different diseases by investigators, but most of them excited wild hopes only to be crushed. A cure for her husband's disease had been discovered which-at any rate, in certain cases-gave temporary relief. She might tell this to the invalid, giving him to understand that the relief was expected to be only temporary. Any relief was acceptable, and, ordering a car, George was carried to the physician's office.

Dr. Franklin covered his neck with sheet lead with a hole in it large enough to admit the swelling. What else he did George could not see, and, as for Lucy, she did not understand what it meant. The doctor was bringing to bear upon the swelling some invisible current, but what it was she could not know without an altogether uncommon scientific knowledge.

Several visits were made to Dr. Franklin's office, and the swelling on the patient's neck began to recede, and after awhile it became diminutive. Then one day Lucy took up a morning newspaper and read to her husband an item of news. It was an announcement that the radium rays had been brought to bear on cancer and that the disease had been in certain cases undoubtedly interrupted. Whether or not radium would permanently cure it the operators had not considered themselves prepared to announce.

"Lucy," said George, looking at his wife with hope lighting his eye, "I shouldn't wonder if that's what my trouble is, and Dr. Franklin is applying radium in my case.

'I'm sure it is!" cried the wife with that impulsive embrace which was her treatment for both good and bad con-

George was to visit the doctor that morning. When he and his wife reached the office Lucy said to the physician:

"Doctor, my husband has cancer, and a cure has been found."

"Who told you that?" "The newspapers."

"Well," replied the doctor thoughtfully, "we are not yet ready to announce that we have found a cure, but we feel very hopeful."

"You mean you are certain, but you won't say so for fear of raising false expectations."

We're pretty well satisfied that radium is death to the cancer scourge. The Underhills left the doctor's office a happy couple. Their visits to the doctor were continued, and with the continuance of the treatment the swelling returned to its original size. When it had almost entirely disappeared Lucy said to her husband one day:

"George, don't you think it time we were beginning to get rid of some of this property that I married you to help spend? We haven't used half the income.

"That's just what I was thinking about. I fancy I can keep up the treatment as well in one city as another. Suppose we go abroad?"

"It's just the time of year to go, especially to Italy."

"We'll do it. By the bye, sweetheart, this discovery of radium as a cure for my trouble just came in time to prevent you having to spend our fortune

"It wouldn't have been half the fun would it?"

"I don't suppose it would."

She gave him a kiss, after which he wrote a note to a steamship company asking for room on the vessel to sail that day two weeks and to his banker for a letter of credit.

They sailed in February for a trip to Naples and other Italian cities, and before their departure so great had beprofession that efforts were being made to preserve the radium producing grounds in the United States for the enefit of the sufferers of the dread disease, which has always been one of the scourges of humanity. And now George and Lucy Underhill are touring in Europe, but the money they were married purposely to devote to keeping up the husband's spirits is not needed. They have all the comforts and luxuries they require with-out encroaching on their capital.

"Old Curmudgeon"

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Belle Hinckley was an orphan with fortune.

While she was abroad her guardian wrote her that certain property she owned, the family homestead, could be made valuable for a certain purpose if there were more of it. If the adjoining place could be united with it there would be ample room. Perhaps the union could be effected.

Belle had been abroad two years when this announcement reached her and would receive her property in a few months. She resolved to return to America and look into the matter for herself. On her arrival she learned that the purpose for which the property was wanted was a large manufacturing plant. Those about to establish it had tried to buy the adjoining property, but had failed. After her departure for Europe a man had bought it who wouldn't sell. Belle, who had inherited a business head from her father, saw that he was making a mistake that would involve her as well as

The morning after her arrival she went to the adjoining place to see "Old Wilkinson," as he was called, and try to induce him to sell. As she went up the walk to the bouse a young man came out to the porch and stood with his bands in his pockets watching the approaching girl.

'Is Mr. Wilkinson in?" she asked. "No, he is not."

"Can you tell me where I can see him?"

"It is uncertain. Can I be of service

"I wish to see him with regard to selling his property to the Excelsior Electric works. I own the next place and am interested. The company will not buy unless it can have both places."

"Come in." said the young man, and he led the way into the drawing room He said be could represent the matter to the owner of the property and in vited her to state her case. This she did remarkably well, the young man listening attentively, though he seemed to be so wrapped in admiration of Miss Hinckley that she doubted if be took in all she said. However, after she had finished be promised to represent the matter to the owner in a favorable light. Then he invited her to inspect the place, taking her into the greenhouses and presenting her with ome fine American Beauty roses. When she departed he said that as soon as he had anything to report be would call upon her.

Mr. Alexander-that was his name called two days later and said that, while he had represented the matter as she had given it to him, the owner was still averse to selling. Miss Hinck ley asked the young man what reasons had been given for the refusal and was told that no reason whatever had been vouchsafed. He suspected that the owner wished to build on the property himself, or possibly be might be negotiating with other parties.

Belle was very much disappointed. She told the gentleman that but few concerns had the means to purchase so large a property and if the opportunity were not taken advantage of both places would remain as they were. producing no income and paying taxes that would gradually eat them up. The young man said that he would again confer with the owner and endeavor to impress him with this view of the case.

In a few days Mr. Alexander called again to report that he had failed to impress the owner of the property with the reasons Miss Hinckley had brought forth and feared that he had other views for the property. The matter dragged along. The would be purchasers were known to be looking at other sites, and Miss Hinckley was discouraged.

"The only way I know for you to move the old curmudgeon," said Mr Alexander one day to Belle, "is to marry him. When you have done that you can make him do what you like" Belle scouted the idea. Indeed, she had taken quite a fancy to this Mr. Alexander, but anyway she wouldn't marry ato old man, especially a stub-born one. But she thought of the matter and concluded that she would look the old chap over. Alexander agreed to arrange a meeting, but when he admitted that he could not do so except as the beginning of a matrimonial negotiation Belle balked again; but, receiving an advance on the offer for her property conditional on the purchase of the adjoining estate, she consented. It was arranged that she go the next day to make the call, Wilkinson having an attack of Mr. gout which kept him off his feet.

Miss Hinckley was received at the door by a servant and usbered into the library, where she saw Mr. Alexander sitting in an easy chair with a leg stretched out on a foot rest. But he rose without difficulty and said:

"I am the owner of this property. having bought it the day before your first call here. If you wish me to join you in effecting a sale to these elec-tric men you will have first to promise to marry me. I have got another bid for both places and can make these parties to whom you wish to sell pay double the amount they have offered, for they must have the site. Miss Hinckley was quite ready to make the promise, and both deals, the marriage and the real estate, went through readily.

Mrs. Alexander facetiously calls ber husband "Old Curmudgeon."

Mr. Snowman's long life was spent in this town, where he had many friends and no ememies, for he was an exceedingly well-balanced man, mindful of the feelings of others, wise enough to avoid unnecessary contention though always outspoken in his views and convictions and strong enough to withstand opposition. Of a cheerful, jovial disposition, a good conversationalist, his presence was always an inspiration and delight.

He was an exemplary citizen, honest and upright in his dealings and devoted to the interests of his town, county and State. In politics he was a loyal and unswerving republican from the date of the organization of that party, ever ready to contribute his share of campaign service, and never failing to vote at a State or national election during a period of sixty years. He represented his class with ability in the legislature of 1871.

In 1854 he married Phebe M. Bridges, who for sixty years has been a most devoted companion, and by whom he had eight children, two of whom died in infancy. A kind and considerate husband and father, he lived to see, with great satisfaction, a large, ambitious and highlyrespected family, well settled and successful in life.

He was a ship-caulker by trade, and followed that occupation until 1900, when he retired and devoted the remaining years of his life to farming. He was a member of Penobscot grange, and for many years its overseer and treasurer. He was a regular attendant and supporter of the Methodist church, though broad in his religious sympathies.

OBITUARY.

Roscoe De. Long, who was accidentally shot March 8, died at the home of his parents early in the evening. He was born here Feb. 9, 1883.

Funeral services were held at the home Wednesday morning, Rev. Charles Hargrove officiating. Many flowers were contributed, showing the high esteem in which deceased was held.

For the past seven years Mr. Long had been successfully engaged in business with his father, under the firm name of E. C. Long & Son. He had served two terms on the board of selectmen, and for the past two years had been engaged in lumbering to some extent. Through his business dealings he made a wide acquaintance, and his genial disposition won for him many friends.

He was a member of Ira Berry lodge, F. and A. M., Bluehill lodge, I. O. O. F., and East Bluehill grange, having served the latter in many ways, holding the office of first trustee at the time of his death.

He leaves a father, mother, brother and many relatives, who have the sympathy of the community.

How a Secret Was Obtained

By MARTHA MONROE

Two men met on the custom house wharf in Naples, where baggage was being transferred from a recently arrived ocean steamer.

"Good morning, Vincenzo," said one. "What are you doing here?"

Vincenzo Fabroni gave the other a look enjoining silence and led the way to a place where they would not be observed.

"Well, Giuseppe, I am trying to make an honest living carrying baggage. The truth, is I am tired of a criminal life and wish to reform."

"But you have nothing to fear. Being a member of the Camorra, you are always sure of protection whatever you

"That may be, but I am not natural ly a villain. I was made so by circumstances."

"Well, Vincenzo, I wish you success in your efforts to carry rich men's trunks for an occasional lira that you may make by doing so. As for me, I wish I had your opportunities in a membership of the Camorra."

'Why don't you join the society?" "It won't have me. I have secrei enemies among the members who keep me out. Nevertheless I have been reasonably successful without the Camorra's assistance. I have just steered an American tourist into the hands of bandits and shared in the ransom.

"I wish you would lend me some of I would like to set up a wineshop whereby to make a living." "How much do you need?"

"Five hundred lire would start me." Giuseppe Zarrella thought a few minutes, then said: "I need something you possess. You need something I possess. Suppose we make a trade. You wish money to set you up in business. I wish to be a member of the Camorra. I will give you all you require for your purpose. You give me a secret that will enable me to gain admission into the society." "What secret?"

"Who murdered Di Guido?" Vincenzo winced. "What good would it do you to know that?" he asked, "It would open to me the doors of Mrs. Robert Laughlin this winter, is at the Camorra. The police are straining every nerve to discover who commit-Inez Williams is finishing the winter ted that crime. Let me once intimate term of school which was closed on that I am in the secret and the Camorra will gladly admit me."

After some more talk Vincenzo said that he would think the matter over and would give his friend an answer on the steps of the sea wall at 9 o'clock the next evening. When they came together again Vincenzo said:

"Giuseppe, the risk I would run in giving you the information you wishthe risk of my life-is worth much more than 500 lire."

"How much is it worth?" Giuseppe looked at the other, won dering how high a price he could put on his secret. Finally he said, "Could you give me 3,000 lire?"

"Yes, I will give you that. An ad-mission to the Camorra would be worth that to me." "Swear that you will divulge the se cret to no one. "How could I use it without divulging it?"

"I see. Swear that you will tell no one that I gave it to you." "I swear to that."

"When will you make the trade?" "Now. I came provided with the Giuseppe took a roll of bills from his pocket, counted out 3,000 lire and put the rest back. With the money in his palm he clasped Vincenzo's hand. Vincenzo whispered the secret in his ear. the hands were unclasped, and the bills remained in Vincenzo's. "Now, Vincenzo," said his friend, "I will tell you what to do. Report to the Camorra that you have made this money by robbery and expect an arrest, warning them to be ready to clear you. That will account for your having such an amount, and they need not suspect that I got my secret from you.' "That I will surely do."

A few days later Vincenzo reported that he had waylaid an Englishman on the heights back of the city and taken considerable money from him. He was promised that should be be arrested and tried members of the Camorra would be present at the trial and intimate by signs to the judge that if Vincenzo were convicted he

(the judge) would be assassinated. Within a week a man was arrested for the Di Guido murder. He remained in jail some time while the government was working up a case against him and taking steps for his conviction despite the threats of the Camor-Meanwhile Vincenzo Fabroni open his wineshop and was making, for him, a good living. One day a member of the national police walks by his shop several times and, when he saw it was empty, walked in. Fabroni stood looking at him with astonishment mingled with horror.

"Giuseppe!" he exclaimed or, rather, moaned "Don't be afraid," said the carabineer.

"You are safe so far as the govern ment is concerned. Serve me a liter of wine, and I will tell you something." Vincenzo pulled himself together, brought the wine, and Giuseppe told him that he had bought his secret not to secure a membership in the Camorra, but to discover the murderer of Di

A Wireless Message From The Dead

By F. A. MITCHEL

We are moving so fast in scientific discoveries that, lost in wonder at what we know, we have no time to consider what our attained knowledge is likely to develop in future. For instance, we know that an electric current may be transmitted without any other medium than the atmosphere. We also know that functions of the body, if not electric, are a force something like electricity.

When I was a boy I was constantly finding myself saying something to a companion who would say. "Why, I was just about to say that myself." At the time I considered this a coincidence. Now I believe it to be a power I possessed in receiving the mental impressions of others by a sort of wireless process. I studied medicine and became a doctor. Then during hospital work I broke down and, though it was between winter and spring, was obliged to go to the country to recoup.

I stopped at a house that looked down a valley, and the view was un-interrupted. I used to sit on the porch wrapped in rugs and enjoy the view in the sunshine. About a mile distant was a house that bore evidence of having been built in colonial times. It was not by any means a farmhouse, but something quite handsome. The architecture was that peculiar style involving a porch with pillars.

One night I was awakened by the sound of wheels stopping right under my window and thought I heard some one call "Doctor!" I raised the sash and put my head out through the win-A man in a wagon asked me if I was a doctor, and I said I was, whereupon he begged me to come with him at once. I dressed myself unwillingly, went downstairs and got into the wagon with him. I asked him to tell me about the nature of the case I was expected to treat, but could get nothing out of him. He seemed entirely absorbed in some powerful emo-

We were but a few minutes in reaching our destination, drawing up before a house with pillars from the porch to the roof. I inferred that I had come to the house about which I had so often dreamed. The door was opened a woman in a short petticoat full at the hips, a kerchief across her bosom and a dainty cap on her head. She looked very much troubled. "Come upstairs," she said.

I followed her up a winding staircase, and the woman opened a door with a glass knob. I entered the sickroom to see a young woman lying on a bed with four high posts surmounted by a canopy. On one side of her was a man holding one of her hands; on the other side was a young girl holding the other. These two looked at me with that mute appeal a doctor is so often obliged to meet.

As I drew near the bed the girl with the invalid pulled down the bedclothes, and I saw at once from blood stains and temporary bandages that my patient had been wounded. I was not a surgeon, but felt obliged to perform a surgeon's part. I examined the wound and saw that it was near the heart, so near that i wondered that the wounded woman lived. There was nothing that I could do for her except bind up the wound in a more professional manner and await results.

Presently I saw her gasp, and between gasps she said to the man beside her:

You are convinced of the unjustness of your suspicions?" "Yes, yes; forgive me."

"I forgive you. Goodby." She fell back dead.

Amid a wall of those present I retired from the room. Notwithstanding the tragical circumstances, I could not but notice the costume of those in the house. "What singular persons!" I said to myself. "Not content with living in a colonial house, they adopt the colonial costume." This was especially marked in their collars, which were like those I had seen in pictures of America's early settlers I was ushered out by the woman who received me and driven back to my home, where I went to bed, remaining half awake, half asleep, for the rest

Now, there was something uncanny about my visit, and I hesitated to talk about it to those in the house. I asked if any of the family had heard a wagon stop before the house during the night, but no one had heard any such sound. This induced me to maintain reserve about my visit. Presently I ventured to ask who lived in the house with pillars and was told that no one lived there. It had been unoccupied for many years. The last tenant had vacated some thirty years before. I asked if anything peculiar had taken place there, but no one had heard of anything unusual. But before returning to the city I heard from a very old resident of the region there was a legend that long before the Revolution a murder had been committed there. A man in a fit of jealousy had stabbed his wife.

And now in this second decade of the twentieth century I have come to believe that the scene I witnessed took place as I saw it many years ago; that it was stored somewhere; it may be in some soul across the borde possibly one of the participants who flashed it to me by some such process as a wireless operator will flash a message from one side of the world to morning of Saturday-not so very early in the morning, but well before the ordinary man's luncheon hour-a friend of ours met an acquaintance strolling along. Do you remember the fellow who would not carry a latchkey because it spoiled the set of his clothes? Well, it was that fellow.

"Gee whizz, fellow!" said our friend. "You are wandering along here in the rain just as if it was fine weather. You will catch your death of cold. Why don't you carry an umbrella?" "Oh, I don't like to carry an umbrel-

"Afraid you'll lose it?" "Oh, no; it isn't that. But it seems so vulgar to carry an umbrella-looks as though a fellow didn't have another suit of clothes, don't you know!"-Boston Advertiser.

All girls in Japan are taught ethics. They are told to be filial to their parents, true to their friends, kind to brothers and sisters and to live peace fully with their husbands. These principles are taught to boys and girls alike since 1890, when the emperor commanded it.
