SUNDAY SCHOOL.
Lesson IX.—Third Quarter, For
Aug. 31, 1914.
THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.
Dr. J. K. Hauser.
This lesson is an expression of the desire and power of Christ to bring about a union of all men. The question of races and nationalities, which is of such importance, is not to be considered on the basis of political divisions, but should be viewed as a whole. The unity of humanity is to be sought in the higher moral and spiritual values.
The lesson is divided into two parts: The first part deals with the invitation to come to Jesus, and the second part with the importance of taking on the cross of Christ. The two parts are connected by the idea of the cross, which is a symbol of sacrifice and self-sacrifice.

In politics, as in the conduct of the government of Washington, it is a basic rule that every act should be deemed to have been intended for the benefit of the nation. Now that the necessity for the building of a new government has passed, it would be well for every citizen to look at the situation carefully and to consider what steps can be taken to make the nation strong and prosperous. The President has been doing this for some time, and it is hoped that he will continue to do so.

If Col. Roosevelt is currently quelling a rebellion in his last week as President, it is as it were an epitaph to the "Great White Fleet." The war that he is fighting is not with the enemy, but with his own people. He is fighting against the "bulldog" spirit that has infected our country, against the spirit of ill will and enmity that has divided our people. He is fighting against the worst aspect of the human race, the spirit of hate and revenge.

A Dangerous Short Cut.

Dorothy Wexler.

There is an old saying that "rhetor button short cut."

On the contrary, it is almost certain.

The Washington papers is still in suspense. The reason is that in order to cross a certain narrow channel, it is necessary to use a ferry boat. The usual way of going over the channel is to take the ferry boat, which is a small steamboat, and land at the other side. However, there is a short cut that is a great deal shorter than the usual way. The short cut is by way of an underground tunnel, which is not accessible to the public. The Washington papers is still in suspense because they do not know whether the short cut will work or not. They are afraid that the tunnel may collapse and that the ferry boat may be unable to cross the channel. They are also afraid that the tunnel may be too narrow for the ferry boat to go through. However, the short cut is very popular, and many people are using it. The Washington papers is still in suspense because they do not know whether the short cut will work or not.
