New Amendments to the Federal Reserve System.

President Roosevelt has signed into law the amendments to the Federal Reserve Act, approved March 4, 1914. Among the important provisions of the new law are:

1. The power of the Federal Reserve Board to require banks to maintain minimum reserves against deposits, the amount of which shall be determined by the Reserve Bank and the Board, but shall not be less than 15 per cent of deposits.

2. The power of the Federal Reserve Board to make loans to banks for the purpose of providing temporary accommodation to meet the demand for money, the amount of which shall be determined by the Reserve Bank and the Board, but shall not be less than 25 per cent of deposits.

3. The power of the Federal Reserve Board to require banks to maintain minimum reserves against loans, the amount of which shall be determined by the Reserve Bank and the Board, but shall not be less than 25 per cent of loans.

4. The power of the Federal Reserve Board to require banks to maintain minimum reserves against investments, the amount of which shall be determined by the Reserve Bank and the Board, but shall not be less than 30 per cent of investments.

5. The power of the Federal Reserve Board to require banks to maintain minimum reserves against investments, the amount of which shall be determined by the Reserve Bank and the Board, but shall not be less than 30 per cent of investments.

HALVOR GUENTER

DOG

Or the Story of a Troubled Conscience

By JOHN C. WADE

Halvor Guenter had been a model pet for years. Now, however, he was exhibiting strange behavior.

On each day都市 from twelve to two, the dog would rush at the little boys and girls to-town, and always after a day's work, Mrs. Guenter would have to take him outside to walk him. This was a very tiresome task, as the dog would often refuse to do his business in the usual places.

One Sunday morning several weeks ago, while Mr. Guenter was walking the dog across the road from their home, they saw several men standing near the fence of a neighboring house. The men were talking about a dog that had been found in the area. One of them said that the dog was a mixed breed and might be worth a lot of money. The other men agreed and suggested that they should take the dog to the city to see if they could find out its value.

Mr. Guenter, who had always been very fond of his dog, was shocked by this news. He had always thought of Halvor as his faithful companion and had never considered selling him for any amount of money. However, he knew that he could not afford to keep Halvor and that he would have to make a decision.

After much thought, Mr. Guenter decided to try to find a way to keep Halvor. He went to the local animal hospital and asked the doctor if there was anything that could be done to help his dog. The doctor examined Halvor and discovered that he had a serious illness that required immediate medical attention.

The doctor suggested that Mr. Guenter take Halvor to a specialist in the city, where he could receive proper treatment. Mr. Guenter agreed and took Halvor to the city.

The doctor diagnosed Halvor's illness as a rare and incurable disease that could only be treated with medication. He prescribed a special medication that would help alleviate the symptoms but would not cure the disease.

Mr. Guenter was devastated by this news. He knew that he could not afford to pay for the medication, but he knew that he had to do whatever he could to help his dog. He went to the local animal shelter and asked if they could help him.

The shelter director was moved to tears by Mr. Guenter's story and offered to help him. She arranged for a volunteer to drive Mr. Guenter and Halvor to the city, where they would receive the necessary treatment.

Mr. Guenter and his faithful companion were soon on their way to the city. The journey was long and difficult, but Mr. Guenter knew that it was worth it to save his dog.

The treatment was expensive, but the doctor was able to get Mr. Guenter a reduced rate. Mr. Guenter was grateful for the doctor's help and promised to make sure that Halvor received the best care possible.

The treatment was successful, and Halvor's condition improved. Mr. Guenter was overjoyed and knew that he had made the right decision. He was determined to do everything he could to ensure that Halvor lived a happy and healthy life.

In the end, Mr. Guenter learned that love and devotion are the most powerful forces in the world. He knew that he would always be grateful for the love and care that his dog had given him and that he would never forget the lessons that Halvor had taught him.

Poultry Gossip

Promoters should realize that with the great wave of interest in poultry that has swept the country, it is now more important than ever to keep track of the latest developments in the field.

The success of any poultry enterprise depends on careful planning and attention to detail. Promoters should ensure that their birds are healthy and well-nourished, and that they are provided with adequate space and proper care.

It is also important to keep in mind that the demand for poultry is always on the rise. Promoters should be prepared to meet this demand by providing high-quality stock and ensuring that their birds are in top condition.

Poultry promoters should also be aware of the latest trends in the field. This includes the development of new breeds and the introduction of improved feeding practices. By staying informed, promoters can ensure that they are always ahead of the curve.

In conclusion, poultry promoters should be proactive in maintaining a high level of interest in the field. By providing high-quality stock and keeping up with the latest trends, promoters can ensure a bright future for their enterprises.

Poultry House for the Back Yard

The only house that is raised for poultry is one with a deep interior. No one can succeed in keeping healthy eggs if they are kept in houses that have deep cores and therefore dump inwards or outwards, as the case may be.

But even more important than the house for the house is the fact that the house to the house is the one that is raised for poultry. The house to the house is the one that is raised for poultry.

The house to the house is the only house that is raised for poultry. The house to the house is the one that is raised for poultry.
