NOVEMBER
[For The Courier-Gazette]
The withered leaves fall at my feet,
A cold, gray sky is overhead;
The summer birds have southward fled,
The flowers that bloomed with perfume sweet
Are blighted by the frost and dead.
But Faith, in autumn time, can sing
Of summer joys again to come;
Faith listens to the insect's hum,
Smells the sweet incense of the flowers,
And in the midst of frost and blight
Hears, warbling in their leafy bowers,
The birds returning from their flight,
And cries: "O Death, where is thy sting?"

POLITICAL RUMORS

In local political circles yesterday appeared a well defined rumor to the effect that Albert C. McLoon will seek the Republican nomination for Representative to Legislature, the office now held by George L. St. Clair, and that Mr. St. Clair will seek the State Senatorial nomination. Mr. McLoon has served the city as mayor and his important connection with the lobster industry would stamp him as one of the outstanding business men in Legislature. Business and industry are also well combined in the case of Mr. St. Clair, whose two terms in the House have found him one of the most popular and dependable members.

BUSY SHIPYARDS

Name of Morse Seems Synonymous With the Fishing Craft Construction

The Charles A. Morse shipyard at Thomaston, is building a new dragger for Foley & Mitchell of New Bedford. It will be a sister ship to the Wamsutta, about 76 tons gross and will have a 170 horsepower Diesel. The owners are Captain Sandy Smith and John M. Hathaway of New Bedford. They will put Capt. Jim Foley in command.

The J. D. Morse yard at Damariscotta, is just completing a new fishing boat for Capt. William Westcott of New Bedford, that is about 100 gross tons. The boat has been named Vandal. At the same yard Capt. Manta of Provincetown, is having built a 97-foot dragger. She will have an 180 horsepower Diesel.

Robert Mitchell of New Bedford, will soon be operating his new dragger built by C. A. Morse & Son, at Thomaston. A 120 horsepower Diesel will furnish the motive power. The Producers Fish Company of Gloucester, Mass., has building five fine draggers at the J. D. Morse yard. Three are 80-footers and two 86-footers. All will have powerful Diesel motors, and will be ready for delivery in February.

"A HOME FOR AGED WOMEN"

At Thanksgiving Time This Worthy Institution Is Never Omitted By the Generous-Hearted

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

May I again claim space in your paper to bring the needs of the Home for Aged Women before its readers. Perhaps the pleasantest and most worth-while Donation Day in the history of the Home was observed last year on the Tuesday before Thanksgiving Day. More friends and visitors called on that day and patronized the sale of fancy articles which the Board members held and more gifts of food supplies and money were received than ever before. Encouraged by last year's success and relying on the generosity of the Home's many friends, we are again keeping "open house" on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 26. Visitors will be cordially welcomed, gifts of food supplies of all kinds will be gratefully received and in addition to the usual sale of fancy articles, there will be a sale of cooked food by the members of the Board of Directors.

This year we have decided to use the money which we may receive for a definite purpose. We realize that through the Community Chest the Rockland people are giving us valuable help and that we can not make demands upon them for aid. We are however suggesting that if any of the readers of this letter feel cause for gratitude at this season and wish to show this in a very effective way, there is no better way of doing this, than by helping in this work.

There is no local philanthropy which can show such direct results of your generosity as this for which we are now asking your help. There are no salaried officers (except the matron), no office expenses, no publicity or advertising, no campaigns for money raising. Every penny which is received is expended for the welfare of the inmates and the upkeep of the property. The women of the Board of Directors give their time, money and energy without any compensation save that which comes from the appreciation of the members of the Home and its friends.

This year, the entire set of buildings has had a fresh coat of paint, the windows have been repainted and new panes of glass set. One step in repair-work always leads to another and one great need is for new shades and rollers throughout the house. In some of the rooms, the same shades are in use as were there at the opening, thirty years ago, and as the rollers have ceased to function, it is necessary to fasten coverings to the shades at night to screen the windows from the public gaze. We realize that all this will be expensive, but we know the people of Rockland and we feel sure that the money will be forthcoming. If we were bold enough, we might also suggest that an electric washing machine and vacuum cleaner would be of immeasurable help to the matron. During the last few weeks, two of the inmates who are over eighty years of age, have been confined to their beds by illness. As they preferred the services of the matron to those of a nurse, she has cared for them all this time in addition to her regular duties, sending only a part of the family washing to the laundry. Think what a help these electrical appliances would be to her at such times. The writer of this letter feels so sure that the people of this city will wish to cooperate in this good work that she is heading a subscription list with one pledge of ten dollars for these hoped-for improvements and if there are others who wish to add to the fund, she feels sure that the members of The Courier-Gazette office force will receive gifts and pledges and will keep the public informed of the increase in the amount.

No woman's letter being complete without a postscript, may I also call your attention to the exact corporate name of the institution, which is A Home for Aged Women, not "The Old Ladies Home." We have just become the winner in a New Jersey law suit in which several thousand dollars were at stake, on this very issue. Thanks to the ruling of the judge and the assistance and presence of Mr. Ingraham and Miss Young at the trial of the case, we have nearly four thousand dollars to add to our endowment fund. Anyone who is thinking of leaving a legacy to the institution would do well to make very sure of its corporate name before so doing. A Board Member

ITS ANNUAL OPEN HOUSE

What Visitors Saw At the High School Interestingly Told By One of the Delighted Visitors

The annual open house at the High School took place Wednesday night last year, fully 250 parents and friends attending. The idea is to present as nearly as possible a typical half day's work, except, of course, that teachers avoid giving written tests at the night session, so that friends who would be unable to visit school in the daytime can see exactly what is being done. The session began with assembly at 7.30. A brief Armistice Day program was presented under the direction of Raymond Bowden and Miss Pride, the assembly chairman being Robert Hussey, a sophomore. The program follows:

Singing, "America the Beautiful," school; invocation, William Rounds; "Hymn for Armistice," Robert Allen; "For Peace," Helen deRochemont; "On Armistice Day," Kenneth Orcutt; "Unknown," Alvary Gay; singing, "America," school.

After this the pupils passed to their respective classes. Pupil "traffic cops" at important points, directed the crowd. Guides were furnished to assist visitors.

In the basement a review of "The House of Seven Gables," was in progress in Miss Pike's English class, each pupil giving a brief summary of one chapter. Evidently the pupils enjoyed this method. Mr. Bowden's History class was hard at work on "The French and Indian War." Out on the gym floor some 20 pupils under the direction of Durwood Heel, were manifestly enjoying relay and shuttle games. This was one of the most popular places in the building. During the entire evening one end of the gallery was crowded with interested spectators.

The manual training room was another especially busy spot. Three separate projects were being carried on at once. Boys were at work on the new "dining tables," hinged shelves which are to be fastened to the balcony railing, so that the pupils who take their dinners may eat in some comfort. Also in process of construction were heavy wire screens for the protection of the windows of the manual training room itself. "Snowball screens" one boy called them. The mature appearance of some of the pupils in this room caused surprise until the visitors recognized Ralph Wentworth, Albert Peterson, Dr. Edwin Scarlett and Wilbur Senter at work upon the new scenery for the Forty Club show.

Upstairs, Mrs. Phillips was conducting a spelling match. Miss Pride's public speaking class was giving such an interesting demonstration of "Chalk Talks" that we had especially wished to hear. Unfortunately we went on to Miss Leadbetter's room where a freshman Latin class was making considerable headway with the fourth conjugation. Miss Coughlin's civics class in the next room was developing a lesson on "The Supreme Court and Its Functions," but Miss Coughlin can make even that topic interesting and we spent nearly twice as much time here as we had intended, almost forgetting that there was still another floor to visit.

The commercial department would have well repaid a much longer visit. Miss Dingley was actually making the figuring of interest interesting.

Mrs. Robinson had a class taking dictation to serve as shipper he will typewriting drills to music. We could not help comparing such modern methods with those in vogue when present members of the Forty Club were actually in school here. Miss Norton's class was speaking French, not simply translating it. Mrs. Hart's geometry class did a good deal more than memorize the famous proposition "If a line is perpendicular to one of two parallel lines it is perpendicular to the other also." Miss Hunter was teaching class in general science, a new subject to us, but as the topic "How Heat Affects the Earth's Crust" developed it began to sound like a fillet of geology—all the meat and none of the hard parts.

Across the hall in the chemistry laboratory, Mrs. Whittemore's biologists were demonstrating the differences between reptiles and amphibians by means of a live alligator and a couple of newts. This was plainly no place for a nervous man, and we escaped for a few minutes' talk with the genial principal, Mr. Blaisdell. Fortunately for the school he is not required to do any regular teaching this year but devotes his whole time to the administrative work of the building, and well he may, for it houses at present 680 pupils, 420 of whom are in the Senior High School. By this time the chemical laboratory was again safe for reporters and we listened to an interesting lesson on the unstable metals and saw a demonstration of the preparation of sodium hydroxide.

Among other interesting items we gleaned from this visit was the fact that out of a faculty of 17, 11 members have taught in Rockland High three years or over. These include Miss Norton, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Phillips, Miss Dingley and Mrs. Stratton, who are beginning their fourth year; Mr. Phillips, Mr. Bowden and Mr. and Mrs. Whittemore their seventh year here. Mrs. Robinson her tenth, and Miss Coughlin who claims the longest term of service in a single building of any teacher in the State. That must be something like 34 years, though it is hard to believe. Take it all in all, if the pupils learn as much every day as one reporter did that night the tax payers of Rockland are certainly getting their money's worth.

FINE TRIBUTE TO CARVER

Paid By Large Caucus Which Again Named Him As the Faithful Republican Standard-Bearer

The renomination of Mayor James F. Carver has been regarded for several weeks as a foregone conclusion, and with the municipal caucus resolving itself into a matter of routine, it was not expected that there would be many at Thursday night's caucus. In this premise the Republican leaders were happily disappointed, for when City Committee chairman Ralph W. Brown mounted the rostrum to read the call he found every seat occupied, and an audience that overflowed into the ante-room.

This fine compliment to Mayor Carver, supplemented by the ovation which he subsequently received, affected His Honor noticeably. Col. Walter H. Butler named as chairman of the caucus, proceeded at once with the business in hand, the first item of which was the selection of Arthur S. Baker as secretary.

Mayor Carver's name was placed before the caucus by Raymond E. Thurston of the Executive Council, who found an introduction of the candidate almost superfluous, but who recognized in the large attendance an enthusiastic endorsement of the candidate. The nomination was seconded by Albert M. Hastings, a Spanish War buddy of the mayor.

W. O. Fuller, M. E. Wotton and E. Mont Perry were named as a committee to escort Mayor Carver to the hall, and the candidate's appearance was the signal for prolonged applause.

Mayor Carver said that he accepted the trust gratefully, and with a full appreciation of the confidence which had been placed in him. "The hardest thing the administration has to contend with," said he, "is to tell the people what we are doing, and learn if it meets with their approval. We do not have the money to expend that some folks think we have. How many of the voters know that 50 per cent of our total appropriation is required for three items—schools, State tax and county tax? The rest is devoted to what would be termed in business as 'overhead expenses,' and for the care of the streets, labor, general upkeep, etc. We have at our disposal only $83,000. In order to spend this money to the best advantage and general good, it is necessary to lay out our work carefully. In the old days it was apportioned almost wholly with a view to bringing political prestige and sidewalks were built in front of the houses of those men who could deliver the most votes. Under the present charter that has not been done. All of the work is planned with view to a definite system. This often meets with disapproval in certain quarters, but is necessary if the system is to be carried out.

"Under our administration four miles of cement walk have been laid and nine miles have been resurfaced. When the present plan is carried out one will not have to walk very far before entering upon improved thoroughfares. The sewer question is getting to be a very vital one and should be taken care of in preference to anything else. Whatever happens after the next election I sincerely hope that the present planning shall not be abandoned in favor of the old policy of 'make do'.

The only other business before the caucus was the ratification of the new city committee members chosen in the ward caucuses the previous night. The makeup of the new committee is:

Ward 1—Earl U. Charles.
Ward 2—Frank M. Ulmer.
Ward 3—John M. Richardson.
Ward 4—William A. Glover.
Ward 5—Luke S. Davis.
Ward 6—Ralph W. Brown.
Ward 7—Jonathan S. Gardner.

HE WANTS CAPT. MAGEE

Owner of Yacht About To Make World Cruise Offers Him Skipper's Berth At $10,000 a Year

A fine and deserved compliment has just been paid to a well known Rockland master mariner, in the form of an offer to Capt. Charles R. Magee, to command the new Diesel yacht now approaching completion at Wilmington, Dela., at a cost of $1,250,000. The craft is to make a cruise around the world, and if Capt. Magee consents to serve as skipper he will draw down the munificent salary of $10,000 a year. This tempting offer is made on the strength of the very highest recommendations furnished by representatives of the U. S. Shipping Board when the owner of the new craft was casting about for the right kind of a commander. Small wonder that Capt. Magee is giving the matter very serious consideration.

Capt. Magee put in 25 years on the ocean wave, most of that time as a master mariner, but his last assignment was as mate of the famous seven-masted steel schooner Thomas W. Lawson. He came ashore in 1909 to take a position as deputy collector and inspector in the Rockland Custom House and has continued to fill that position with signal ability. During the World War Capt. Magee was appointed instructor of the local navigation school, which was in existence four years, and is said to have been the only one in the chain which graduated successfully 100 per cent of its students. Capt. Magee was not only an exceptional mariner and marine instructor but has profited by his 20 years in the Customs Service in becoming thoroughly versed on maritime laws. The owner of the new floating palace is showing excellent judgment in dangling such a rich prize before his eyes.

PUBLIC RELATIONS

Central Maine's Employees For Eastern Division Have Good Meeting

A large gathering of representatives of the Eastern Division of the Central Maine Power Co., embracing Belfast, Camden, Bucksport, Boothbay Harbor, Damariscotta, Rockland, etc., were present Thursday evening at the last Public Relations meeting of the season, held in Temple hall. In addition to the interesting addresses made by several of the representatives, a film made at the field day celebration at Oakland Park in September was shown, causing much merriment and comment. Refreshments and dancing closed the profitable and enjoyable get-together. The program follows:
Selections, C. M. P. Orchestra; Customer Relations, Julia Coombs; Personal Efficiency, W. A. Cobb; selection, C. M. P. Orchestra; Elimination of Waste, Malcolm Murdoch; Rates, W. F. Wyman; Film, (to be selected); Message from the management, George Smith.

The committee in charge of the meeting comprised E. H. Marston, chairman; Ralph Smith, Alta Brown, Leola Robinson, secretary.

The Red Cross

Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, says:

In the last seven years the American Red Cross has spent annually an average of $927,000 out of its own funds and $6,750,000 in funds contributed by the public in the relief of disaster victims. That it has the trained staff to deal with the work of relief and reconstruction is due entirely to public support in memberships.

The $927,000 has been chiefly expended each year in the hundred or more minor disasters in communities which are not aided by public subscriptions. Instead of asking the public for funds every time a small disaster occurs, the Red Cross appeals to it once a year for memberships. In this way it is enabled to care for these small disasters from its general funds; and so, when one joins the Red Cross, one is contributing to the sufferers in many small disasters by putting the Red Cross in a position to meet these emergencies as they arise.

TWAS LADIES NIGHT

And Lionesses Learned Why Men Folks Absent Themselves Wednesdays

Hotel Rockland was the scene of a merry gathering Wednesday evening when the local Lions Club observed ladies' night with an open meeting. The club room in the new grill was comfortably filled when the bell sounded at 6.30 and an increased corps of attendants served a dinner which would give the impression Landlord Keating had the idea Christmas came two years this year. The customary Lions program was fully observed and the Lionesses became fully aware of the reason that the men absent themselves from the family table each Wednesday noon.

Following the dinner hour the company enjoyed an interesting address by Oscar E. Huse of Gorham, entitled "Life Across the Border." Mr. Huse has spent much time in Northwestern Canada, and held the close attention of an appreciative company as he contrasted the daily life of our Canadian neighbors with that of the average citizen on the American side. An experienced speaker, with a fine sense of humor, Mr. Huse's address was a prolonged applause his story received and should he again address a Rockland audience he will number the Lions and their ladies in his audience.

Following the meeting the club members and their guests attended Park Theatre, where special seats were reserved.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

If I had to live my life again I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once a week. The loss of these tastes is a loss of happiness.—Charles Darwin.

THE DREAMS AHEAD

What would we do in this world of ours, Were it not for the dreams ahead? For thorns are mixed with the blooming flowers, No matter which path we tread.

And each of us has his golden goal, Stretching far into the years; And ever he climbs with a hopeful soul, With alternate smiles and tears.

That dreams ahead is what holds him up Through the storms of a ceaseless fight; When his lips are pressed to the worn wood's cup And clouds shut out the light.

So some it's a dream of high estate To some it's a dream of wealth; To some it's a dream of a truce with Fate In a constant search for health.

To some it's a dream of home and wife; To some it's a dream of a crown above; The dreams ahead are what make each life—The dreams—ah—faith—and love! —Edwin Carlisle Latsey.

AN ABLE EXECUTIVE

Mayor Carver's speech of acceptance at the caucus which gave him renomination, was a brief but admirable review of some phases of stewardship covering his past incumbency of office. His administration, cutting aloof from former haphazard methods, has sought steadily to address itself to a consistent plan of municipal improvement, in particular with respect to streets and sidewalks. This is a process which naturally is slow to manifest results, but which in the end is bound to justify its wisdom. The observant citizen, the taxpayers in general, are not blind to these facts, and we are confident will insist upon retaining Mr. Carver in the office where his good sense and impartiality in administration have operated to his individual credit and the visible benefit of the general community.

HOME FOR AGED WOMEN

The communication printed on another page tells a clear story of present needs of a Rockland eleemosynary institution which has never failed, at the recurrence of the Thanksgiving season, to benefit from the generosity of our people. There are no campaigns staged, for the rigid budget of the home is now administered through the Community Chest. What takes place at this November season is in the form of freewill offerings, along the lines mentioned by our correspondent, the points of which we are confident will recommend themselves to the reader. This paper gladly accedes to the request that it be made a channel of money contributions, receipt of which will be properly acknowledged and forwarded to the home treasury. Such fund opens today as follows:

The Courier-Gazette ..... $10
A Board Member ..... 10

The happy idea of a commemorative postage stamp, to be issued next year in connection with the dedication of the Knox Memorial, we are confident will be approved by the postoffice department, and should serve materially to deepen country-wide interest in the Knox subject.

ROLL CALL FOR RED CROSS

The countrywide roll-call of American Red Cross, now in progress, opened on Armistice Day and will close on Thanksgiving Day. What the organization means to our people is succinctly stated by President Hoover in his proclamation:

"Both as President of the United States and as President of the American Red Cross, I earnestly bespeak the co-operation of every American citizen in the great humanitarian work of the Red Cross. Its prompt efficiency in time of disaster, and its continuing service in numerous less spectacular but no less important tasks of relief, make it an indispensable part of our national life. Every American should be a member, and I urge all to enroll."

In Rockland the membership feature is cared for through Community Chest. Elsewhere in the county towns the local chapter is supported by the membership fee of one dollar.

KNOX COUNTY APPLES

The exhibit in this week's annual apple show emphasized the belief in the potentiality of Knox County as a producer of this noble fruit. The soil and the climate lend themselves by a natural gesture to the growing of an apple, which not only equals in every detail of comeliness and flavor the boasted fruit of western orchards, but also develops to the taste a note of excellence difficult to describe, but once encountered never to be forgotten. It has needed only the application of modern methods to reopen to Knox County orchardists the channels which western growers have been usurping. We look forward to the not distant time when apple raising upon these farms shall constitute one of the county's most profitable industries.

MARK ALL OF 'EM

There are other historic points hereabouts that might profitably come in for attention when the Knox Memorial shall have received its commission. What about that ancient fort that one time guarded the St. Georges River? Is there sufficient of its remains to justify an attempt at restoration? If not, does the spot merit a tablet? The sites of two forts on the Androscoggin and the Kennebec rivers were this year marked with boulders and bronze tablets, set up by the Maine Daughters of the American Revolution. The day is not remote when everything of this historical character is to figure as a valuable asset to any Maine community with which it is associated.

IN REDSKIN DAYS

A Chapter From the Early History of Barrett's Pond, Now Hope

[By A. F. Duntun]

The following sketch, which is cheerfully dedicated to the Hope Grange, is partly historical and partly legendary; as gleaned from the oldest inhabitants a long time ago.

Many years ago this part of the country was inhabited by two divisions of aborigines, the Tarratines and the Wawenocks, the former having dominion over the eastern, and the latter over the western portion. The Megunticook mountains were said to be the barrier or dividing line, that separated the two great confederacies. Nulnont was the sachem of the eastern tribes and Basheba the sagamore of the western. The eastern tribes were headed by the brave Tarratines and the western by the mighty Wawenocks.

During the year 1615 a sanguinary and exterminating war broke out between the two great divisions of aborigines in this State. This was waged with fury for two years when the Tarratines became the victors by killing the Basheba. After this a truce was called between the two nations and the chiefs of all the tribes while seated around the council fire at a place not far from what is now Hope, commenced smoking the pipe of peace and agreed to bury the hatchet.

The hatchet was buried on the side of the mountain which overlooks the village, beside a great boulder and this boulder turned over upon it; since which time it has been called "Hatchet Mountain." On the upper surface of the boulder there is a facsimile of a hatchet, or Indian tomahawk, carved with some blunt instrument, presumably a stone chisel, in the hands of one of the red men. Be that as it may, it is there and visitors can form their own opinion as to its origin.

Shortly after peace was restored between the two nations a famine ensued among the red men, followed by an unknown epidemic or pestilence, which continued for more than a year, exterminating several clans and devastating the western tribes from the borders of the Tarratines on the east to the Narragansetts on the west. This locality was embraced in the territory of the Wawenocks, but Basheba's dwelling place was near Bristol, then called Pennaquid.

This glance at the history of the aborigines gives us a faint idea of the stirring events that associate themselves with this vicinity. These mountains commanding such extensive prospect of sight, have doubtless served as a watch tower for many an Indian scouting party—been witness to many an artful ambush and innumerable deadly conflicts—while our lakes and waters have borne the canoes of contending tribes or echoed the sound of the thrilling warwhoop.

Pacific scenes exercised their turn, and thus lived and acted the red men of the forest, who once roamed where we now live. Famine and pestilence had reduced the once powerful Wawenocks to a few wandering bands and it was these renegade Indians who caused the early settlers so much trouble. There is nothing to show that they had a permanent settlement anywhere, but moved their wigwags from place to place as game became scarce or the whim might take them.

One of their favorite camping places was at the narrow of the foot of Hobb's Pond. This place is still known as "The Indian Garden." The oldest inhabitants can remember when many strange herbs grew there which must have been planted by the hand of man. This was probably the Indians' medicine chest. In the fall the Indians went to the seashore, where their principal food was clams; thus the settlers were free from their depredations during the winter.

When the first settlers came to this part of Maine it was a vast wilderness. The Indians being troublesome they built a blockhouse or fort on what is now known as Wiley's Hill, where they could flee when the scouts reported "Indians in the vicinity."

Near the shore of the pond in E. N. Hobb's field a few rods north of the boys' camp, is an old cellar. On this spot one of the first log cabins in town was built by David Ellerson. There he lived with his wife, two small children and a big dog. One morning while Mrs. Ellerson was preparing breakfast, the dog which was sleeping near the fireplace, arose, and with the hair standing erect on his back walked to the door. Ellerson had broken his leg a short time before and was confined to his bed and utterly helpless.

Knowing by the actions of the dog that the Indians were near, Mrs. Ellerson took her husband's old flint-lock rifle from the pegs over the fireplace and peered through one of the numerous loopholes. The land had been cleared for a short distance about and presently six Indians came out of the woods and advanced toward the cabin. They came up the pond from the Indian Garden in their canoes, and landed on the shore where the boys' camp now is. Mrs. Ellerson thrust the rifle through the loophole and fired with so good an aim that one of the Indians fell dead. His comrades took a log from the woodpile near by and proceeded to batter the door down. An opening was soon made in the lower part of the door and one of the Indians put his head through. Mrs. Ellerson had dropped the gun and seized the ax but before she could use it the Indian stepped inside the cabin. The dog leaped upon him like a tiger, fixed his teeth in the side of the neck and pulled him to the floor. Another tried to enter, Mrs. Ellerson clove his skull with the ax and left the body wedged in the opening. Just then a rifle shot was heard outside. One of the neighbors, knowing of Ellerson's mishap was on his way to see how he was getting along and hearing the shot fired by Mrs. Ellerson hastened to enter, arriving within gun shot just as the Indians were pulling the dead body out of the opening in the door. He at once fired and one of the Indians fell dead. The other two beat a hasty retreat, launched their canoes and paddled off down the pond. The Indian attacked by the dog was found to be dead.

Some years after this the first frame house in town was built on the site of David Ellerson's old log cabin. The house was afterward moved up near the village and is now occupied by H. R. Coose.

A portion of the stone wall that enclosed the old fort on the Wiley Hill is still there and as it is built on a solid ledge, it will forever stand a monument to our heroic ancestors who placed it there, unless removed by the hand of man or shaken down by some convulsion of nature. Hatchet Mountain is about 1200 feet high and from its summit there is a fine view of the surrounding country. On the top of the mountain is a piece of level or table land in which there is quite a depression, which used to be filled with water. In fact it was quite a pond at some seasons of the year. It has been gradually filling up and is now covered with a growth of woods.

The theory has been advanced that this depression was of volcanic origin and the formation below would seem to give some basis for this theory. At the foot of the mountain, to the south is one of the most beautiful sheets of water in existence. When the town was first settled it was called Barrett Pond in honor of one of the first settlers. Our worthy townsmen Dr. Moses Dakin in his book entitled "Monterey, or the Mountain City" published in 1847, gives it the name of Idalia Lake. We know it as "Hobb's Pond." Hatchet Mountain he called "Mount Ida."

A MODERN SERVICE ROOM

Moody's Gas Station Has Added Interesting New Department—The Plant's Recent Expansion

There has been a great amount of activity, pounding and traffic of late around Moody's Gas Station on Park street so a Courier-Gazette reporter went up to see what it was all about and found that many changes have been effected.

The size of the main building has been considerably more than doubled through the addition of a section 35x72 feet on the southern and eastern sides, a large workshop has been erected in the rear for the use of Harry Smith, an expert automobile mechanic who operates a repair shop and service station for Cadillac and LaSalle. Adjoining is a battery of six new garages, all at the present time under lease to Leon H. Kelly Inc., of Brunswick, agents for the cars named above.

The addition to the main building gives much needed room in the shop and for storage, gives double the office space available heretofore and most interesting of all, provides the plant with an automobile service room, probably the best and most up to date in Eastern Maine. With the completion of the plant comes the installation of a Hi-jet blower system of steam-hot air heating which is very efficient.

In the shop a large oil rack has been erected capable of holding 128 barrels so that any grade of oil is instantly available without effort. Storage space and a repair shop for the six trucks operated by Mr. Moody is also provided together with a heater room which contains an American boiler, a Nu-way oil burner and a large air compressor for the service department. The new offices are finished in buff and brown, and are very attractive, with Mrs. Moody in charge.

The service room opens directly on Park street, entrance being via large folding doors with ample window space on northern and eastern walls. A Manley free wheel lift picks up the heaviest car or truck with ease and allows use of the grease guns for Alemite of which there are two high pressure and 600w. An electric flusher, a vacuum cleaner, air scales, pressure spring sprayer and all such devices are available. Frank Butler, a veteran auto-mechanic, is in charge and includes battery service and radiator winter attention in his repertoire. The Moody Station has eight employees, distributing its Gulf products all grades of fuel oil by means of six trucks and a tank boat.—adv.

"ON MY SET"

The Cleveland station, WTAM, is back with us after an extended summer vacation, from which it has apparently profited.

Judges located in three cities and all seated at their radio receivers will decide the winner of the intercollegiate debate between teams representing Elmira College for Women and Union College to be broadcast by WGY Monday evening at 10.30 o'clock.

Followers of Christian Science listened to a remarkable lecture yesterday noon by William W. Porter. The broadcast came in over WNAC, and without the suspicion of interference as far as my set was concerned.

On the eve of the climax of his great adventure in the Antarctic, Commander Richard Byrd will hear the voice of his mother via radio through the short wave broadcasting stations of WGY, on the special program sponsored by the Buffalo Evening News, at 11 o'clock. From Richmond, Va., Mrs. Byrd will speak words of encouragement to the son who is now preparing for the hazardous flight to the South Pole. Gov. Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, brother of the explorer, will also send greetings, as will Robert P. Lamont, secretary of commerce.

High power has been denied the Bangor station WLBZ because of the protest filed by the Milwaukee Journal station WTMJ. Too bad. The Bangor station comes in very well at intervals, but power is quite plainly lacking.

Boxing fans listened with interest Thursday night while James J. Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan in New Orleans. It was a broadcast in the old time boxing bout series. The scrap took place in 1892, and of course neither boxer ever had the remotest idea that millions would listen to the story of it with the use of wires.

WCSH of Portland desires to increase its power from 300 to 1000 watts. It would be a source of much satisfaction to friends of radio.

Did you hear "Officer of the Day" march played by Arthur Pryor's Band on WBIS at 7.30 this morning? One of the finest band broadcasts (Victor recording) to which I ever listened.

VITAL QUESTIONS

to ask your dealer before buying:—

1. Has the receiver three screen grid tubes?
2. How is the receiver shielded?
3. Has the receiver "Linear" Power Detection?
4. Has the receiver a Phonograph Jack?

Unless three are used—in the radio frequency stages—sufficient amplification cannot be secured to obtain the new brilliancy of tone created by modern broadcasting.

If the receiver is not "totally shielded", (copper is best) you cannot get perfect clarity on every note.

Improved reception from modern broadcasting without distortion is impossible without "Linear" Power Detection.

Electrical reproduction of records, with better tone than even a talking machine gives, doubles the pleasure of a radio.

PARK THEATRE

The picture at the Park Theatre Monday and Tuesday will be "Four Devils" in which Janet Gaynor speaks a role for the first time on Fox Movietone. Besides Miss Gaynor it includes Charles Morton, Mary Duncan, Nancy Drexel, Barry Norton and Farrell MacDonald, and all are said to have speaking parts which fit them perfectly. "Four Devils" is held to be the most profound piece of work he has done so far.

Janet has the role of a circus acrobat, one of a quartet of aerial artists who thrill the throngs in a hippodrome. Her fellow performers are Morton and Norton and Miss Drexel. So well has Murnau built up the illusion about them that, as they swing on their trapezes, they appear to have been born "under the big top." Miss Duncan is a vampire who almost wrecks the lives of several humans when she becomes infatuated with Morton. MacDonald is a retired clown, a sort of foster father to the performers who took them away when they were ill treated by an employer in their childhood, and presided over their rearing.

Morton Downey will appear in "Lucky in Love" an all talking-singing picture today.—adv.

STRAND THEATRE

In a picture like "The Saturday Night Kid"—a story of life among the employees of a big department store, Clara Bow just has to have a group of girl friends, the same as any sales lady in any big store would have a similar complement of "yes-women."

CLARA BOW in the Paramount Picture "The Saturday Night Kid"

Miss Bow is cast in the title role of an ambitious, hard-working sales girl who finds time, in spite of the demands upon her of an unruly younger sister, to be a gay girl on a "date." She falls in love with James Hall, young clerk who has been promoted to floor-walker in the store, but later discovers that he is different to her love, mainly because of the intrigues of her scheming sister. In order to bring her lover to his senses, Clara deliberately plans to create the impression that she is everybody's sweetheart and therefore she earns the name of "Saturday Night Kid"—that is, a girl who has a date with a different man every Saturday night. This feature will be seen Monday and Tuesday.—adv.

NO LABOR PARTY

President Green of the American Federation of Labor said in a recent address, that the workers of the United States have no intention of forming a labor party.

This will come as a hard blow to many who have visioned a socialistic government, to be created by labor. But it is eminently logical. American labor, under our broad two party system, has fared too well to need any party entirely its own.

So long as men are paid high wages for short hours of work, live under good conditions and occupy an enviable position in the social scale, it will be difficult to arouse dissension among American workers. The American wage and living standards have made strikes obsolete in most industries. What disputes arise are settled amicably in a manner fair to all, by boards of arbitration. Capital and Labor are partners in the job of advancing our civilization.

It is a mistake to think of labor as a separate entity, apart from the rest of our citizens. An American labor party would find no place in life.

He is a brother of Dr. R. J. Waggatt of this city.

Eighteen years ago last Thursday in the modest establishment on Lime-rock street the Copper Kettle made its formal bow to the public, under the management of Mrs. Ava Lawry and her daughter, Miss Beulah Lawry, now Mrs. Hervey Allen. The efficient and careful thought given to that modest beginning has persisted until now the Copper Kettle occupies one of the most important places in the city's business activities, as a view of the fine building in Postoffice square, the adjoining Laurie and the nearby Laurie will testify. Mrs. Lawry and her daughter kept open house, meeting old and new friends, and serving refreshments.

The State chairman of the Ellis Island committee, Maine D.A.R., requests that Lady Knox Chapter, Rockland, provide certain materials for use in the beneficial work of the D.A.R. there. The local committee desires that at the next meeting of the Chapter, Dec. 2, all members take their contributions so that they may be packed and forwarded soon thereafter. The articles requested are: Denim, khaki or other shirtings, lengths not less than three yards, (3, 6, 9, etc.); yarn for sweaters; odds and ends of worsted, balls two inches in diameter, or larger; pearl cotton, No. 3 (all colors); coarse white knitting cotton. It is suggested that as far as possible the colors selected be cheerful or, at least, not too dull. These supplies are made into useful and ornamental articles by those immigrants who because of certain especially unfortunate circumstances, are obliged to remain in the detention rooms sometimes for weeks or even months. Formerly they were utterly idle from sunrise to bedtime, and became quarrelsome, resentful, suspicious and terribly unhappy. A wonderful transformation is brought about by the opportunity to do congenial and useful work. Made-up garments are never given, the rule being that the men and women shall work for and upon what they get. The government makes no provision for such occupation for those detained.

Everything is in readiness for the Forty Club's play "Meet the Wife" which will be presented Monday and Tuesday at the High School auditorium. Park Theatre was crowded to capacity Thursday night by an audience which was duly interested in the regular program, and tremendously interested in seeing who would become the owner of the 1929 Chevrolet sedan, valued at $768, and offered by Sea View Garage. Tickets had been sold, with trade, at 15 Rockland places of business. Manager O'Hara acted as master of ceremonies at Thursday night's drawing and Earle C. Dow represented Sea View Garage. Six tickets were drawn by Miss Charlene Grindle. The holder of the lucky one is John Ham, an employee of the Veazie Hardware Co.

Preparations for the Universalist fair are moving forward in a most satisfactory manner, and the outlook is that the event will surpass previous undertakings of the energetic workers of that church in many ways. Not only will opportunity be provided for purchasing attractive and suitable Christmas gifts, but many novel features will be introduced. Mrs. Grace Daniels as general chairman has the assistance of a large corps of workers, devoting untiring diligence.

The annual meeting and banquet of the Rockland Chamber of Commerce will be held Thursday evening, Nov. 21, at 6.45 p. m. at Hotel Rockland. This will be the beginning of a series of open forum meetings to be held during the winter. The St. George Quartet will entertain and everyone who has heard them will be anxious to hear them again. George B. Wood, president of the Rockland & Rockport Lime Corporation will speak on a subject near to the hearts of all Rockland citizens, namely, "The Outlook for Lime." The ticket committee handling this event consists of Willis Ayer, Frank Rhodes, Axel Brunberg, Audrey Orff and L. E. Jones.

The incident of the 16-year-old Alston (Mass.) girl who meditated suicide, but found on waking into the Charles river up to her waist that the water was too cold, and abandoned the idea, recalls the adventure of the Rockland lawyer, who tiring of life concluded to put an end to it all. That was many years ago and the lawyer soon afterward left for other parts. So, on a cold winter's day he walked over to the breakwater and jumped in. No sooner did he strike the water than the freezing cold of it put an end to all suicidal ambitions and with haste he scrambled ashore and sought shelter in a neighboring house, where sympathizing friends dried his clothes by the kitchen stove. Not without a sense of humor, the lawyer called at the newspaper office to tell of his adventure and happy escape and was induced to write for publication a story of his personal impressions, in that connection, for which he charged a fee of five dollars. Embalmed in the ancient files of the paper his narrative makes an interesting tale.

HELD IN HEAVY BAIL

Berlin Cole of Camden, charged with arson, pleaded not guilty in Municipal Court this morning and waived examination. Judge Miller found probable cause and held the respondent for the February term of Knox County Superior Court in the sum of $4,000. Bail was furnished by the boy's mother, Mrs. Nettie Cole and his half-brother Roger Rhodes. "You must keep an eye on him," cautioned Judge Miller. "Oh, I'll watch him," promptly replied Mrs. Cole, "and there are others around here I'll keep an eye on." The specific charge against Cole is that he set fire to the northern end of a shed connected with the store at the corner of Atlantic avenue and Elm street, owned by Mrs. Edward W. B.K. Cole's counsel is Charles A. Perry.

Winslow-Holbrook Post will attend the memorial service at Owl's Head chapel Sunday afternoon for its late brother, John Carver. Commander Cates asks the boys to be at the Legion hall not later than 1 p. m.

Mrs. Elizabeth Doak Clifford of Belfast, a niece of Mrs. Anne Haskell of this city, was injured in an automobile accident Tuesday when the car which she was driving left the road and struck a tree. She was jammed against the steering wheel, and the fact that she wore a fur coat may have been the means that prevented internal injuries. A cut on the knee was her chief injury. Mrs. Clifford's companion, Mrs. Jessie Hart, was injured much more seriously.

Charles H. Berry, Everett Munsey, Lloyd Lawrence and Sam Levy have returned from a successful week spent at Wytopickton, bringing back two fine bucks and a yearling. They reported hunting conditions very difficult. When their car drove through the streets this morning it had a long ladder lashed to its side in addition to the game, this leading to a report that the yearling was caught in a tree-top nest. The story is emphatically denied by Mr. Berry.

Bad weather has held up the trials of the new cruiser Salt Lake City to such an extent that the craft will not leave this port before next Monday. Today she is having a four hour run at 30 knot speed, and this will be followed today and tomorrow by a six-hour run at full speed, and four hours at 10, 15 and 20 knots. "The performance of the Salt Lake City has been very satisfactory," said Commander J. H. S. Dessez, recorder of the Trial Board, yesterday, "and is a great credit to designer and builders." The next trial on the Rockland Course will be that of the superdreadnaught Oklahoma, of which a Rockland man, Commander D. W. Fuller, is executive officer, scheduled for Dec. 11. The Shipping Board steamer Clariton comes later and two new cruisers, Chester and Northampton will be held in the spring.

TO LOS ANGELES

The Tourist Should Certainly Go, According To W. J. Hatton, Booster

Los Angeles, Nov. 9
Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—
We arrived in Los Angeles Oct. 29 and are enjoying the perfect weather that we are having these November days in summer ways. We had a fine trip across the continent. Over the Sunset route there are many things to interest the new-comer. In the Southern States one sees the cotton and sugar cane growing near the railroad tracks and still farther South the cypress trees. The hills are covered with pine and hardwood and at this season of the year when the leaves are turning they present a beautiful sight.
When the train reaches Western Texas one comes to the desert country and the scenery changes. A barren and treeless plain is now seen for miles and miles—no vegetation except the desert palms and giant cactus. Even the mountains are barren, and devoid of trees.
This desert continues through Southern New Mexico and Arizona until the Colorado river is reached. Crossing the river at Yuma one enters California and soon the beautiful San Bernardino valley comes in view with orange orchards and walnut orchards along the road. We pass the Guasti vineyard, the largest in the world and soon find ourselves in the city of angels. Los Angeles is a busy place these days making preparations for the holidays. The streets are crowded with shoppers and everybody seems happy. If the people of Maine want to find a fine city and a fine climate, here it is. Come and spend the winter here and enjoy the sunshine.
W. J. Hatton.

"Try these," said County Agent R. C. Wentworth. "These proved to be a bushel of the nicest McIntosh Red apples imaginable. The advice has been followed—gratefully and satisfactorily."

It's too early yet to claim the State championship for the Rockland High School girls' basketball team, but at the rate practice is progressing, and the size of the squad are indicative of trouble for all competitors. Bill Sullivan, the gentle bulldog coach, is again barking orders, and has as the nucleus for his sextet Alice Flanagan, Helen Mattson, June Brewer, Bernice Smith and Phyllis Snowman who won court honors last season. In the squad of 15 lassies are quite a few who know what it means to face the onslaught of an opposing team.

Yesterday's Rotary luncheon, after discussing as its chief gastropody note the weather, addressed itself to matters largely professional, in discussion of some of the features that have to do with the contacts of Rotary with the community. The public service committee had charge of the program, in which the chairman, W. O. Fuller and the other committee members—Louis A. Walker, Kelley B. Crie, Willis I. Ayer and Walter S. Rounds, took part in five-minute addresses, each presenting some phase of the obligations that Rotary lays upon the individual member in this community relations. Visitors present included Charles W. Babbs, Charles Wood and Marcus Chandler of the Camden club, and Al. Goodhue of Belfast, the latter conveying the challenging statement that his club already has made a record of ten successive meetings with 100 per cent attendance. Next week's luncheon is merged in a session in which the Belfast, Camden and Waterville clubs take part to be addressed by District Governor McIntosh.

IN THE CHURCHES

SERMONETTE
Pentecost, a World Need
Dr. Darnell in the September Forum in answer to the question, "Is anything left of religion?" says "Very little; belief in God, in immortality, in heaven is gone. All that survives is the good life." The reviews and magazines are full of such arguments. Christians pass them over, ignore them, but the sad thing is that atheists gain ground while Christians remain inarticulate.
We agree with Dr. Cadman that "We would rather be wrong in our belief about God, and with faith in his word than believe with Dr. Darnell and be right."
But is this enough? The Protestant churches are talking of Pentecost in 1930. Do they mean an affirmation, dogmatically, of their belief in a Pentecost, or do they mean that they will all be in accord, ready to be filled by the Holy Spirit, to preach as did Peter, to dedicate their lives and property to him, and pray that God will use them for the salvation of their fellow men? If the churches mean this, then the United States and the world will indeed be shaken and this loose talk of there being no God will cease and "great grace will be upon us all."
W. A. H.

Spiritualist meetings will be held tomorrow at 2.30 and 7.30 at G. A. R. hall.

At the Congregational Church tomorrow morning Mr. Rounds will preach on the subject "A Test of Courage." The Church School at 10.30, and the Comrades of the Way will meet at six o'clock.

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Cedar and Brewster streets. Sunday morning service at 10.30 o'clock. Subject of lesson sermon, "Mortals and Immortals." Sunday School at 1.45. The reading room is located at 400 Main street, over Daniels' jewelry store, and is open each week day from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Rev. L. G. Perry speaks at Littlefield Memorial Church Sunday at 10.30 from the subject "Loyalty to the Church." The choir will render the anthem "He Sends It All in Love." Lorenz, and there will be a vocal selection by Miss Sibyl Jones. Bible School meets at 11.45 and B.Y.P.U. is at 6.15. At the evening service at 7.15, opened by stirring song service. Pastor Perry's subject will be "Preparedness." Earl Achorn of Rockport will sing "The Holy City." He will also assist the choir at morning service.

"The Church That Was Killed By Popularity," will be the subject of the morning sermon at the Pratt Memorial Methodist Church at 10.30. The choir will sing "O Come To My Heart, Lord Jesus," Ambrose, and a vocal duet "My Faith Looks Up To Thee," Lachner, by Robert Gregory and Mr. Kenderdine. Sunday School convenes at noon. Epworth League will meet at 6 p. m. to discuss "Getting More Out of Newspapers and Magazines" and will be led by Henry Day. At the evening service, the pastor, Rev. Jesse Kenderdine, will present the monthly literary sermon of which the subject will be "The Everlasting Mercy." John Masfield. The choir will sing "Breadth of the Wave." Family Night comes on Tuesday evening with supper at 6 and a table program.

THOSE HORNETS NESTS
Massachusetts Reader Asks Which Should He Take Stock In
Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—
Noting this item in your recent issue:
"An old New England sign of cold weather and deep snow is said to be registered by hornets when they build their nests high in the trees to keep them above the snow. Have any of our readers observed whether this sign is to be seen anywhere in this region?"
I doubt if much dependence can be placed in this old saying. There is a large hornets' nest high up in a tree (probably 15 feet above the ground) near my back door, but to offset this, I recently destroyed three large nests in the raspberry bushes very close to the ground. I wonder which colony was the best weather prophet?

MAINE Mother's Experience shows what can be done with children

HARSH corrective measures are seldom necessary with a child! Most modern parents recognize this. That's the reason so many agree on this gentle means of putting a child in order when bad breath, coated tongue, headaches, biliousness or upsets tell of a clogged digestive tract.

When used at the first sign of bad breath or feverishness, a spoonful of California Fig Syrup often does the work. Sometimes several doses are necessary. Always you can depend on its use to clear the system harmlessly and in a hurry; to give the child a new start by regulating and strengthening the stomach and bowels.

Mothers by thousands praise the gentle effectiveness of this rich, fruit product which all children love. Mrs. Helen Baker, 184 Newbury St., Portland, says: "Nothing I know can take the place of California Fig Syrup in my home. It has been a blessing to my little girl during colds and upsets. It always has her right in a jiffy."

Words like these and sales of four million bottles a year show how mothers depend on California Fig Syrup. Caution: The name California Fig Syrup is the genuine, famous for 50 years.

OLD TIMERS LOSE

Creaky Joints Too Much For Vinalhaven Venerables

The Old Timers unlimbered a little from their slings and bandages Wednesday night at the Cascade alleys against the Outlaws, but the slings and arrows of an outrageous fortune denied them a win. Perhaps outrageous joints and muscles contributed some to their downfall but the score does not show it, for they grew better as they bowed, the only trouble being that the Outlaws were a little better than they were all the time. At the start the Old Timers showed a lack of practice, some of them not having bowled all summer, but as they warmed up and got the lay of the alleys there were times when they had their opponents guessing and groggy.

"Doc" Shields' string of 107 was high for the match while F. Robinson and Drew were tie for high on the total with 282.

"Considering the circumstances, and the position of the signs of the Zodiac," Gene Hall was quoted as saying after the game, "I consider we did very well. Our team total of 1296 would ordinarily have won, and I only hope we can do as well every time. You can take it from me, the Old Timers may be defeated, but they never surrender, and fight to the last plug of tobacco. I don't want to brag, but just watch our smoke."

The score:

Outlaws
Clayton	88	78	100	266
F. Geary	88	84	85	257
Grindle	85	74	95	254
Gross	89	104	85	279
F. Robinson	83	94	105	282
	433	434	471	1338
Old Timers
Hall	73	81	77	231
Shields	73	84	94	251
Drew	90	85	107	272
Littlefield	79	92	79	250

WORDS from a WANDERER by Harry A. Daniels

We read much in the metropolitan papers these days of the engagement of Humbert, crown prince of Italy, and Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, of the recent visit of the crown prince to Brussels, where the engagement was announced, and of the attempt on his life by a fanatic. In the talking news reel you can distinctly hear the shot.

It will thrill the fairer sex to know that this is a true love match, something rather unusual in royal marriages. It is unfortunate that most girls born princesses have to marry who, where and when the statesmen of their country dictate. Affairs of state come before romance, and many a pretty, modest princess has been sacrificed to some man in whom she had not the slightest interest, to say nothing of love, affection or even admiration.

In this case it is different. In the first place, the king and queen of Belgium have always stated that under no circumstances would they allow their daughter to be bartered against some treaty or made a foil against some political move. Their son, Prince Leopold of Belgium, was really in love with Princess Astrid of Sweden, and no obstacle was put in the way of this marriage, which has thus far turned out so happily. In all probability when this young man becomes the king of Belgium, his sister Marie Jose, will be the queen of Italy.

The wedding of Crown Prince Humbert and Princess Marie Jose, on Jan. 8, will not take place in Rome, but at Turin, Italy, the residence of Archbishop Gamba, who probably will perform the ceremony, says a dispatch. Turin is the seat of the House of Savoy, and the sacred shroud upon which the Saviour was said to have been laid upon the descent from the cross, is kept in Turin as the property of the reigning house.

Col. Charles Lindbergh is again honored, says Readers Digest. A wheel of light, 1,000 miles in diameter will have its hub at Chicago.

when the colossal two billion candle-power searchlight offered to Chicago by Elmer A. Sperry, the inventor, is installed. It will be named "Lindbergh Light." On clear nights its beam will reach 500 miles and will touch 12 States. It will be visible to night flyers from Buffalo, on the east, to Omaha, on the west, and to Memphis on the south. It will shine across the Great Lakes, far into Canada—a guiding star for all air mail and air passenger pilots. A pilot leaving Buffalo, N. Y., will pick up this light at Chicago, as soon as he rises from the Buffalo field.

Hon. B. Ogden Chisholm, American member of the international prison commission, who has just resigned, suggests that riots in our prisons could be prevented by giving the prisoners a little drink every day. He says that in France the prisoners get one liter of wine a day and in Germany they get one liter of good beer a day. He suggests we do the same here. If the writer remembers correctly, two glasses of beer were equal to a seldel, and a litre was more than a seldel. In fact, a little over a quart. If this suggestion is adopted, and American prisoners start to give each prisoner a quart of good wine or beer a day, how many days would it be before the job of jailer would be the best job in the country? And many a man now walking around looking for a job would think himself well off if in jail.

The new fashions: Pull in the waist line. Let out the hem line. Throw out the life line. Curves everywhere, just like a shore road.

Some one remarks that it will be wonderful to live on this earth 500 years from now when there will be so many people that there won't be any land on which to grow carrots and spinach. Dr. Kuznetski of the Harris Foundation Institute figures that at present the population of the world is increasing at the rate of one half of one per cent a year.

ANOTHER RAMBLE

Mrs. Overlock Has Something To Say On An Always Entertaining Topic

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—
I am always an interested reader of "Rambles Afield" and wish I might have the gift to write such interesting nature stories. Several times Mrs. Venzie has asked for information regarding some particular plant or flower and I have thought I would write what I knew about it, but alas! in the stress of a busy life I have put off doing so until I had mislaid the paper and forgotten just what I was going to write about.

This time I am going to tell you readers that the yellow "meadow lilies" spoken of are one of the flowers which bloom every summer in my garden. I have six of them which were brought from a meadow near the National Soldiers Home three years ago and they are the stately queens among the other flowers. One of them was three and one-half feet tall, had eight blossoms on the single stalk and was in bloom nearly three weeks. I do not think they ever grow in clumps, as I have always noticed them as growing singly.

Another lily which will bear transplanting is the red "wood lily." I have successfully grown them for seven years. They are beautiful with their fiery red flower heads set on top of the stalk. They are always upright, never bending over like a bell, as the meadow lilies do. It is hard work to dig them up as they grow very deep in the woody soil.

"DUNT" VISITS ROCKLAND

Hope Man Raises Fine Apples and Has a Knack of Writing "Nonsense" Interesting To Be Read

Rockland had an interesting visitor Tuesday in the person of A. F. Dunton of Hope, who is an occasional contributor to the "All Sorts" in the Boston Post. Mr. Dunton wears a very serious mien when engaged in farm tasks or any of his other daily tasks, but there is a twinkle in his eyes which indicates that he sees the side of life provocative of smiles, and even chuckles.

"Oh, I write a little nonsense now and then," he modestly admitted to a Courier-Gazette reporter. "Couldn't write anything serious if I tried." But Grangers and other friends who know of his literary persuasions say differently.

A. F. Dunton & Son is the firm name under which Valley Farm is operated, and there are not many idle moments for A. F. Dunton and his son, Charles Almon Dunton. This farm produced some especially fine cobs last summer and because it came along too early for the factory much of it found its way to a Rockland market. Chances are pretty good that the reader of this little story ate some of it, and inwardly remarked "yum, yum!"

The Duntons found it a good year for general crops, and can see where most of the Knox County farmers will make something out of potatoes this winter. Green Mountains found especial favor at Valley Farm.

The Duntons also had good luck with their orchard, gathering therefrom 370 barrels of nice fruit, including 70 barrels of "Maccks," or McIntosh Reds, some samples of which have been seen at the apple show next door to The Courier-Gazette office this week. The Dunton orchards also produced lots of fine Northern Spys and Baldwins.

A. F. Dunton doesn't blind himself to the fact that farming has not been a success with many who have undertaken it in his locality.

"Within a radius of three miles from my house," said he, "I can count as many as 40 abandoned farms. Why did the farmers leave? Dunno, except that they saw a chance to better themselves in the cities."

A. F. Dunton doesn't begin to look the 80 years that he says he is. The family doesn't make much account of age, for there was Mr. Dunton's father, Abner, who was making inroads into his second century when he died. A. R. Dunton of penmanship fame, was an uncle.

"How times have changed in my town," Mr. Dunton grew reminiscent as he thought that proposition.

"Hope's population, once 1200, has dropped to around 300. My father taught school in our district and at one time there were 115 pupils. When I attended there were 100, but today the district has only about 20 pupils."

"A man had to be a fighter to teach school in those days, for boys often went wild. He was a stalwart 6-footer, and he acted promptly when one of the worst boys in school tried to heckle him. Striding to the seat Mr. Chapman seized the unruly pupil by the shoulders, and dragging him into the aisle used him much as a farmer uses a rail. During the rumpus the stove was knocked over. But there were no more school rebellions while Mr. Chapman taught."

The Duntons found it a good year for general crops, and can see where most of the Knox County farmers will make something out of potatoes this winter. Green Mountains found especial favor at Valley Farm.

O. K. OR OKEH?

Great Mystery Surrounds the Genesis of the Familiar Abbreviation

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:

Your very good paper asks information as to the origin of the expression O.K. In case your replies aren't numerous I hope this will help you out. According to my version okay is absolutely wrong. O.K. is correct—meaning all right.

During the Civil War, a cracker manufacturing concern with the trade name of Oliver Kendall put out a cracker—sort of a soda or hard-tack—with the initials O.K. stamped in the cracker. This brand was a favorite with the soldiers and when orders were made up for rations, calls were unanimous for the O.K. crackers—in other words they were all right. The popularity of the O.K. crackers gave them a prestige and was a great advertisement.

I can't vouch for the authenticity of this, but I read it some few years ago. Beulah L. Allen

Rockland, Nov. 11

[The query raised by a subscriber to which the above communication is addressed is one that often presents itself for answer. We do not recall having ever heard the explanation given by our correspondent. The matter is treated at some length in that handbook, "Nuggets of Knowledge," by George W. Stimpson, reprinted herewith.—Ed.]

These letters have long puzzled etymologists. The first known use of O.K. in this sense [of "all right"] appears in the court records of Sumner County, Tenn., Oct. 6, 1790. On that date Andrew Jackson, Esq., "proved a bill of sale from High McGary to Gasper Manker, for a negro man, which was O.K." James Parton, in his biography of Jackson, suggests that what appeared to be O.K. in the record may really be a poorly penned O.R., which was the abbreviation used for "Ordered Recorded." Apparently O.K. came into general use after Jackson was elected President in 1828. One Hickory's alleged illiteracy was one of the chief buttresses of the campaign.

Seba Smith, in a series of letters written to a Maine paper, under the name of Major Jack Downing, seems to have originated the story that Jackson endorsed his papers O.K. under the impression that it was the abbreviation of "All Correct," which he, according to the story, always spelled "Oll Korrect."

Later the same story was told of John Jacob Astor, William Henry Harrison and others. The Standard Dictionary accepts Parton's explanation as the probable origin of O.K. while Webster's New International Dictionary says it is probably from the Choctaw "okeh," which is pronounced "o-kay." According to Byington, in his Grammar of the Choctaw Language, "o-keh" means "it is so and in no other way." This theory was accepted by Woodrow Wilson, who, as President, used "okeh" in approving State papers. It also appears on a series of popular phonograph records. There is not, however, a particle of evidence to support the "okeh" theory. Another theory derives O.K. from Aux Cayes (pronounced o-kay), a town in Santo Domingo, from which the best tobacco and rum were imported in Colonial times. Clerks, it is said, in billing the goods to retailers, would use the phonetic letters O.K. for the sake of brevity. Hence anything of good quality came to be called O.K. Here again evidence is lacking. Still another theory derives the slang expression from the circumstance that during the Civil War the War Department purchased large quantities of crackers from the Orrington-Kendall Cracker Company, who marked the boxes with the initials of the company. Since these crackers were of exceptionally good quality the letters O.K., it is said, gradually came to be a synonym for all right. This theory is proved erroneous by the simple fact that O.K. was in use long before the Civil War.

When the music is over the machine shuts off automatically. If the guest tires of a piece before it is finished, he can stop it by dialing "13." A selected list of radio stations are suitably numbered and by calling the proper number, the guest can tune in wherever he wishes, provided, of course, that the ship is within receiving distance.

"To distinguish an artistic imitation of an old violin from a real one requires years of study and experience," says Toscha Seidel, the Russian violin virtuoso who has a rare fiddle collection, and who was heard at a Maine Music Festival some years ago.

"A well preserved old master will bring from $10,000 to $25,000. A good modern imitation of an old Italian masterpiece can be bought for $100. Different specimens of instruments by the same maker sell for a variety of prices, dependent on the period when they were made, the state of the wood and the varnish, the beauty of finish, the workmanship, the tone, and the historic association. Thousands of factory-made violins are sold with spurious labels of 17th and 18th century makers.

"There is a tradition that wood cut from the south side of a tree gives a richer vibration. Stainer, the Tyrolean maker, used to pick out trees that had begun to die at the top. For the sound board, or belly of the instrument, pine or spruce is chosen; for the back, sides, scroll and neck, maple wood. The secret of the unrivalled Italian varnish, which preserved the wood and made it resonant, died with Stradivarius.

"Old instruments are not always better than modern ones. Their condition and state of preservation vitally affects the tone. But it is quite certain that no violins made at the present time will be as sonorous, and sweet 200 years from now as the beautiful instruments tooled with skill and care by the famous old violin makers of Cremona."

Mme. Frances Alda for 22 years a soprano in the Metropolitan Opera Company has announced that she would quit opera at the end of the present season and devote all her energies to singing for radio.

Mme. Alda was a Maine. Music Festival star, several years ago, charming everyone by her great beauty of person and voice. It is safe to prophesy that she will give unlimited pleasure to her radio audiences, as her voice is one that broadcasts in a most satisfactory manner. She was heard recently in an Attwater-Kent hour.

Lovers of Ethelbert Nevin will be interested in the collection announced in the October list of Victor records. On five double-faced records, the selections include such numbers as "A Day in Venice," "Narcissus," "Mighty Lak a Rose," "The Rosary," and other favorites. They are made by Victor Salon Orchestra and Victor Salon Group under the direction of Nathaniel Shilkret, who has preserved the warmth of simplicity and genuineness associated with Nevin's lovely music.

THE REALM OF MUSIC

Gladys St. Clair Morgan

An announcement of interest to radio fans who listen with pleasure to "The Revelers" is that this unique ensemble is to appear in Symphony Hall (Boston) Sunday afternoon. It is composed of four singers and a pianist who are about to begin a nationwide tour under the management of the National Broadcasting Company. They do not resemble the usual male quartet, not striving for "close harmony" and other conventional effects. Their voice parts have a freedom which rather suggests an instrumental quartet. Their program ranges from the classics to the moderns and jazz.

An attractive first book for piano pupils has come from the Oliver Ditson Company press. It is called "The Young Students' Piano Course," a standard text for class teaching. The little pieces are largely folk-songs, very tunelessly arranged, and presented in a most interesting manner to both teacher and pupil.

Nov. 11 Miss Mildred Emerson of New York, known to us as Mildred Clark, formerly of this city, organized a choral society under the auspices of the Greenwich Village Historical Society. The leaflet sent out prior to the date said that the objects of the club are to enjoy and appreciate concerts; to increase the knowledge of better music; to become familiar with the lives and works of the great and modern composers; to encourage local talent; to promote acquaintance and good fellowship among the members and finally to get together and sing.

"An hour and a half will be devoted to rehearsing and studying the musical repertoire that has been chosen by the director; the remaining time, in entertainments and social diversion, provided by a member or members, and once a month a professional artist will be engaged, so that the Choral will enjoy entertainments each meeting. Two or more concerts will be given each season, with assisting artists."

Congratulations and success to Miss Emerson in her new enterprise. We will be interested to hear of the progress made.

Charles F. Ketterling, president of the General Motors Research Corporation, has within the year had a million dollar yacht built for him which is not only a floating palace, but has many unique features the like of which has never been known before. The staircases are enameled with ivory, the library is done in India teakwood, and so on.

There is a marvelous automatic radio and phonograph. Perhaps the most remarkable feature of this radio is that it is connected with the telephone system of the yacht. Suppose a guest is in his stateroom and decides he wants music. He switches on the loud speaker concealed in the wall and, not hearing anything, knows that machine is not being used by anyone else. He decides that he would like some phonograph music, and reaches for the dial telephone at his side.

Near the telephone are two lists, one for phonograph and one for radio. There are 10 records on the phonograph list, that being the capacity of the machine. Each day someone chooses the 10 records that are to be available for the day. Each record has a number on the list. If the guest happens to be in a sentimental mood and desires to hear "I've Waited a Lifetime for You," he discovers that the number is "eight." So he removes the telephone receiver, dials "eight," waits a few seconds to give the machine enough time to select record No. 8. He hears a click which means that contact has been made, hangs up, sits back and listens. Volume is regulated by a knob close at hand.

When the music is over the machine shuts off automatically. If the guest tires of a piece before it is finished, he can stop it by dialing "13." A selected list of radio stations are suitably numbered and by calling the proper number, the guest can tune in wherever he wishes, provided, of course, that the ship is within receiving distance.

Mme. Schumann-Heink is one of the few active survivors of a wonderful music period and of a group of famous singers of great distinction.

whose training and whose association with an equally important group of musicians and conductors seem to set them apart from the singers before and after them. In telling her story to Mary Lawton, she includes her memories of many of these celebrated people as well as the events of her own rich life. Miss Lawton has not only recreated the singer's interviews into an absorbing narrative, but has taken great pains to catch the homely idioms in which they were expressed, and while setting down the incidents in orderly fashion to convey the full impression of Schumann-Heink's personality. The story tells of her early privations and struggles, of her first successes, of her experiences in America, of London, days of singing to the soldiers during the War, and of the climax of her fame and her golden jubilee.

This little item referring to Schumann-Heink flashes into my mind at this time. When conducting one of her master classes one day, she gave glimpses into the lives of the great musicians she has known suggesting that judgment of their foibles and even their faults be withheld. "These people who have given us so much great and beautiful music—let us forget their foibles and remember only how great they were," she cautioned.

Robert Schumann, she told them, wrote one of the most beautiful of oratorios—"Paradise and Peri." It never is sung in this country. And Schumann—she died in the arms of Brahms. But he hated Richard Wagner so that his very name is anathema in Bayreuth, and in the festival city the diva is "E. Heink," although the Schumann who was her husband was not related to the composer.

Colby College News

[By Barbara Hamlin]

Rev. H. C. Metzner of the Methodist Church in Waterville was the speaker at Y.W.C.A. meeting Tuesday evening. His topic was "Plays that Preach." He believes that sermons should be more like plays, with something of interest every minute. In commenting on some of the much-criticized modern plays he said that too many people wanted idealism, not realism, on the stage. Mr. Metzner believes that today we need more plays and sermons to picture life as it really is.

Jan. 14 has been set as the date for the first of the Colby College concert series. Miss Ruth Webb, pianist, assisted by two other artists, will give a recital. Miss Webb is an accomplished pianist having studied in this country and Europe. This is not her first visit to Waterville and those who have heard her play are looking forward with pleasure to her coming visit.

The Men's and Women's Glee Clubs are to try a new plan this year. Instead of giving two concerts the clubs are planning to unite and present a musical entertainment, which is expected to be the best ever given at the college. The date of the concert is to be announced later.

Edward H. Sothern, famous Shakespearean actor, gave a dramatic recital Monday evening. Mr. Sothern who has a charming personality, kept his audience interested and entertained for three hours. He gave scenes from "Hamlet" and "Othello," and impersonated "Lord Dunsany," the character made famous by Mr. Sothern's father. He spoke of the endowed theatre movement, which he hopes will be as successfully carried out in America and England as it has been in France and other European countries. The plan is to present in the endowed theatres the finest dramas at prices within reach of everyone. In closing Mr. Sothern read some of the famous poems from "If I Were King."

The Colby-Bates game on Armistice Day was the 35th played between the two colleges. The first game was in 1893 when Colby won by a score of 4-0. Since then Colby has won 18 games, Bates 11 and there have been five tie games.

THEATRES TO AID

Twelve Hundred To Join Press In Lessening Christmas Congestion

The movies will do their share this year to relieve the tired, aching feet of distracted shoppers, mail carriers and expressmen, who annually bear the burden of Christmas shopping activities.

Twelve hundred Public theatres, by order of Sam Katz, president, will join hands with the newspapers in urging the public to buy and mail all gifts as early as possible this year. Since these theatres play the pictures made by all producing companies, it is expected that other theatres affiliated with film producers, as well as independent theatres, will follow suit.

Heretofore, only the newspapers have championed the "shop early" idea. The movies, however, through Public alone, add an appeal that will reach 35,000,000 theatregoers weekly.

As an inducement to shoppers, nine of the 14 most extraordinary and exceptional pictures now scheduled for production will be released between now and Christmas and shown in the 1,200 Public theatres during the pre-holiday season, to spread the shopping rush over four weeks instead of the customary hectic two weeks. Talks of such compelling interest will lure the public into the shopping districts for two hour performances, thus making it easy for the shopping to be done with more leisure.

With these super-attractions luring movie fans to the shopping district, in the various cities and towns, and a screen announcement at each performance urging early Christmas shopping to avoid the last minute rush, it is hoped that the weight of the theatre campaign, augmented by the usual local newspaper drive, will bring about a long sought change in conditions.

"Shop early and by degrees," will be the sense of the theatre screen campaign. "Don't postpone everything until the last minute and make yourself a fatigued and worn-out victim of the eleventh hour panic. Do part of your shopping and mailing now, the remainder later and have leisure time between to enjoy a good movie."

But creatures, near the period of their stay Upon her bosom, apprehend the change: For seasons, stealing each so much away, Leave us no more the powers of equal range.
