THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lessin, Hos. xi, 1-11. Memory Verses, 8, 9-Golden Text, Hos. si, 4-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns

Again we are reminded that the two great topics of the Bible are the love of God and the sinfuiness of man. His fore to israel as a people is every-where set forth, and briefly summarized in the first verse of our lesson. In Er. iv. 22. He said, "Israel is my son, my firsthorn." In Dent. vii, 68. He said, "The Lord thy God hath en thee to be a special people unto uself above all people." and the only on given is "Because the Lord Of course He espected loved you." them to love Him in return (Deut. vi. 4, 5), and it was their failure to do so, and their loving idols in His stead that grieved Him. in Isniah, who was contemporary with Hosen (Isa, I, I; Hos, I, 1). He says: "What could have been done more to my vineyard that I have Wherefore, when I not done in it? looked that it should bring forth grapes brought it forth wild grapes?" (142. v, 4.) In our lesson chapter He not only says, "I loved him," but He also ays, "I taught Ephraim to go; I healed them: I drew them with comis of a man with hands of love; I inid ment them" (verses 1-4). He ever remilded them that He brought them out of the land of Egypt and that He alone was their Saviour (110, 4; Ise. 100, 3. 11); but he had to say, "My people are bent to backsliding from me. O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself" (verse 7; chapter till, 94. The sin was all theirs, His was the unchanging love. His yearning for them and desire to win them back to Him is seen in such words as these. "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? How shall I deliver thee, Israel?" "O Israel, resura unto the Lord thy God. • • • I will beal their becksliding; I will love them free-" (verse 8; chapter ziv, 1, 4). Hear Him in Ps. Ixxxi, 10-16, as He again ds them that He brought them out of Egypt: "My people would not hearken to my voice, and Israel would none-of me. Oh, that my people had hearkened unto me and Israel had walked to my ways."

It was the same cry when He was here in humiliation, "How often would I, and ye would not." "He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not. He came unto His own, and His own ceived Him not" (Matt. 11iil, 37; John L 10, 11). What an almost un believable record it is that such a God of jove should receive such treatment m those whom He so lovingly and patiently seeks to win to Himself that He may bless them and bestow upon them His fullness! Those who have this world's wealth to bestow have no difficulty in finding willing recipients, but the great God, the Creator of heaven and earth, who giveth to all life and breath and all things, in whom we live and move and have our being, can scarce get a hearing and receives only ingratitude from those for whom He does so much. Why does He bear such a people and not blot us from off the earth, as He did in the days of Noah? Because He is God Matazi Benefit Cala TED BY "AUNT HARGE". tto: "Heipful and Happful."

Dear M. B. Friends:

Deer M. B. Friends: I want to tell you about a parlor rug Fre seen this fail. It was a beauty, and this is how it was made: it was forty inches long and thirty inches wide across the middle, oblong shape, with quite round ends, the very middle black broad-cloth, the ends, blue gray broadcloth, old of course, but good and bright. Then there were strips of rich, dark red, put on to the black middle, the strips, one and one-hall inches wide, the ends tarmed un-der in a point and put on to spread, same as our ingers when stretched wide, and a place left in the very center, showt as big and not man, and not willing that any should perish (verse 9; II Pet. iii, 9). He so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that we might not perish. The Son of God loved me and gave Himself for me. He bore His only begotten from that we might not periah. The foor of God loved me and gave Himself for me. He bore that I might be delivered from the work of the some God in Hi. 16; Galt it. 29: I Pet. 11, 24: I Thews. 1 10. Is there anything more welcome to the average person with good digestion than an invitation out to supper after the theater, and is there any place more delightful to give a little affair o. this kind than at your own home. where all can laugh and talk as much as they please without disturbing any one? The following menu is one easily prepared, therefore welcome to the aidless housekeeper: Shrimps a Newburg on toast, cheese and crack-ers, nuts and olives, coffee of wine.

Lobster a la Newburg is also dellcious. Use the daintiest cloth or lunch con set on the table. When serving the lobster a la Newburg remove the meat carefully from the shell, wash the shell, put little paper doilies in it, then serve the olives, fadishes and green onions from this. It may be filled in-stead with flowers.

Recipe for shrimp and lobster a' in Newburg: One large lobster or one can of shrimps (meat cut into half inch squares), one half cupful cream, three eggs, one tablespoonful butter, red pepper, salt and nutmeg; melt butter. add fish, allow it to simmer five minutes, mix eggs, cream, pepper, mit and nutmeg together: stir into fish, then' stir mixture until it thickens; add last one-half cupful of sherry if desired.

CORN AND ALFALFA FOR WINTERING SOWS

Two rations for wintering old sows vere tried out during the last four sinters at the Nebraska experime station, and the results reported in a recent bulletin prepared by Professor W. P. Snyder. The purpose of the ex-periment was to test the advisability of feeding a ration of chopped alfaifa hay mixed with an equal weight of ground grain and of feeding the al-falfa hay in a rack and feeding shelled rn in a trough.

Each of these two rations was fed to ten sows from early in November until the first or middle of March, or for 121 days on the average. The feed consumed daily amounted to 1.13 pounds of grain and 0.19 pound of al-falfa hay per 100 pounds weight of the sows in the lots fed hay in a rack. The corresponding figures for the hogs fed chopped alfalfa hay and chopped grain mixed are 1.04 pounds of grain and 1.05 of alfalfa hay.

The average daily gain of the so getting alfalfa from a rack was 0.76 pound per head. Of those eating equal amounts by weight of corn and chopped alfalfa hay the average daily gain was 0.79 pound. The sows eating al-falfa from the rack were fed one bushel more grain, but ate 400 pour less hay during the winter than the other sows.

The average cost of feed for winter ing a sow fed grain and alfalfa hay in a rack was $5.20. The average cost of feed for wintering a sow on half grain and half chopped alfalfa hay

The Tamworths are probably the most prolific of all breeds of swine. They are inclined to be restlean, but are usually gentle in disposition, and the sows are good mothers. They produce carcasses containing a high percentage of lean meat of fine grain and are noted for their su-perior bacon qualities. They cross very satisfactorily with the fat breeds. When Count Kerehoff died leaving no children his fortune passed to a distant connection who had never seen him or his shole. The young man who succeeded to the title and the property. Adolf Herzog, on receipt of notification of his relative's death went to the schloss and took up his abode there. He found Haas Schlotter, an old servitor, in charge of the place, who showed him his domicile and gave him a minute account of everything in it. for Schickter had been there ever since he was born and for many years had been the major dome. "That clock," he said, referring to a timepiece some six feet in height and in breadth and thickness the size of a cofin for an adult, "has stood there ever since the schloss was built, now nearly 200 years ago. It has foretold the death of every count since the first, who was ennobled on account of his

"What!" exclaimed the young man, with a shudder. "Foretoid death! How did it do that?"

"I cannot tell you." replied the old man. "All I know is that two counts have died while I have lived here. One of them told my father that he was going to die the clock having warned him of his approaching end. The oth-er, he who died a few weeks ago, told me the same thing with regard to himself. But there is nothing remarkable about this, for there is a tradition that the clock will foretell the death of the incumbent count till the schloss is a ruin."

Count Adoif said nothing in reply to this information, but it affected him very sensibly. Soon after becoming domesticated in his new home be found himself constantly looking for some sign from the clock that could be interpreted as an indication that his end was near. It would seem rather that ms sho the clock should be looking for signs of its own decay, because it was very old while the count was young and bealthy.

Count Adolf was betrothed when he acceded to the property to Bertha fon Holwiz, when he married soon after his accession and took her there to live. Not wishing that she should be aware of his uncomfortable feelings or sustoned by the tradition he said noth ing to her about it. But it was not long before the young countess saw that something unpleasant was affecting her husband, and in time she sur mised that it was the clock. For she noticed that her husband was often wakeful, and whenever that occurred be told her be wished it would not tick so lond.

One night when Count Adolf was not feeling well, after he had gone to sleep feeling well, after he had gone to skeep his wife arose, stipped downstairs and stopped the pendulum. Then she went back to bed. The reason she did this was that she feared if her husband a woke and heard the ticking he would be annoyed by it." In the middle of the night the count awoke, feverish and to test and in pain. Immediately he noticed that the clock was silent. Had he been in a normal condition be would doubtless have thought it had run down, though it had never been known to ran down, for Hans Schlötter attended to its winding and had done so for half a century. He boasted that in all these years be had never permitted it to mixed was $6.92. The average gain | run down but once, though he admitted that this had occurred shortly be ration was ninety-three the latter ration ninety-six pounds.

The gain produced by the two rations was nearly the same, but the cost of feed for wintering a sow on the fa $1.63 more than on the other ration With the prices of feed and hogs as stated, the average gain in weight of the sows fed alfalfs hay in a rack more than paid for the feed eaten while the average gain on the sows fed half grain and half alfalfa lacked $1.25 of paying the cost of the feed eaten.

The average of the four tests shown that it required 9.9 bushels of corn and 86 pounds of alfaifa hay, or 8.84 bush els of corn and 495 pounds of choppe sifalfa hay to keep a sow weighing 387 pounds through the winter of four months and increase her weight about ninety-five pounds. It is probable that half alfalfa is too great a proportion for feeding to hogs even for keeping them through the winter when little or no gain in weight is desired.

In these four tests feeding a very light grain ration and letting the sow eat alfalfa at will from a rack proved a better practice than mixing the grain and chopped alfaifa in equal propor tions and thereby compelling the sows to eat a pound of aifalfa with each pound of grain.

Unfortunately the old man had told this to his young master. Therefore when Count Adoif awoke feeling fil and did not hear the ticking of th clock he at once inferred that its ceas ing presaged his death. Having ways concealed what troubled him from his wife, fearing that she would conceive a contempt for him on ac count of it, he did not now reveal it to her. But he awoke her and told ber that he feared he was going to die.

The countess at once a woke the se ants and sent for a doctor, who for the count in a state of collapse. He could not tell what was the matter with his patient, for all his organ. seemed to be in fairly good working order. The count's nerves were evi-dently affected, so, not knowing what else to do, the doctor gave him a seda tive, which put him to sleep. A daughter of Hans Schlotter, going downstairs after having carried up a kettle of hot water for the invalid, noticed that the old clock had stopped. Supposing that her father had let it run down, she started the pendulum going; but, noticing that the weights still hung high, she refrained from winding it. When the count awoke Hans was standing by his bed. The invalid. hearing the clock ticking, asked Hans if he was aware that the clock had stopped during the night. Hans said he was not.

While waiting there for our train to Tus-kegee, we saw a car full of boxes of flowers bound for Dr. Washington's fu-neral. neral.

neral. I do not know how many people there were to be entertained over night, but hundreds at least. Everything was beautifully quiet and orderly. The body was placed in the chapel Tuesday morn ing, and the white people of Tuskegee came first to view the remains and the flowers. From 1 o'clock till 4 in the afternoon, came the girls from the school, and then the boys. The general public, colored and white, were coming and going all the time, and when at 9.45 p. m. I left the chapel, the people were still coming. Early Wednesday morning the crowds began coming, and it was a steady stream till they were stopped for the service at 11 o' clock.

It was interesting to see the colored and white, rich and poor, all mixed in percher, file through the chapel.

One large section of the chapel, seating 500, was reserved for the white people of h town. All banks, offices and business houses were closed, and the people Waite-came to the funeral. After the house was packed, the white and colored together filled every inch of standing room. It was estimated that 5,500 were outside unable to get in.

I never saw so many exquisite flowers before. A gate sjar, crossed anchors, wreaths and bouquets in such abundance it was impossible to count them. In the front row alone were over 100 pieces. They were from the West Point R. R., banks, and other corporations and from private individuals in the town and from chools and from people the country over. The service was very simple, as he requested it should be, with no one dressed in mourning clothes. First the choir sang, then the school chaptain read I Cor. 15, from a bible given Dr. Washington by his first teacher, and the statement was made that he never allowed anything to prevent his reading from that book for half an hour each day.

The whole audience sang "How Firm a Foundation". Another selection, "Lead Kindly Light," was later sung by the audience. The students sang "The An-gels Took Him Home" and "Swing Low Sweet Chariot".

beautiful telegraphic letter from Seth Low, the chairman of the board of trustees, was read, and Mr. Wilcocks, of New York, made appropriate remarks. The service closed by the students singing "Still, Still with Thee".

Dr. Washington leaves a wife, two sons connected with the work at Tuskegee, a married daughter living in Dallas, Texas, and an adopted daughter who attends Spelman seminary.

* Peter and Marya that A Story of a Russian In-

By MARTHA V. MONROE *

The harvest was ended, and the peasantry in a farming region in the province of Tula, Russia, were gathered in a barn to celebrate the event with a dance. A young man entered, his serious face contrasting with the joyousness on that of the others, and stood looking at the dancers, his eyes evidently searching for some one among them. Presently a young girl with the fair hair and soft complexion of the north sailed by laughing at something her partner was saying to her. As she passed the place where the young man was standing she caught sight of him. Her laughter ceased, and the merry look on her face vanished. giving place to one equally troubled. She made the circle with the dancers, then, coming again opposite the young man mentioned, stopped, excused herself to her partner and hastened toward the former. "Oh, Peter," she said, "what is the matter?"

"I have seen your father. He says it cannot be; he has no dowry for you. I can earn on the farm barely enough to keep myself alive. It would be a sin for two persons as poor as we to marry and bring forth children to suffer. He is right. We must withdraw from each other, Marya. There is no help for it."

The girl put her arm through his, and together they went outside. A full moon was looking down on them with its peaceful but cold light. Within were the sounds of mirth and music. For these young lovers their surroundings were in bitter contrast with the agony both felt.

"What are you going to do, Peter?" asked Marya.

There was a brief silence, at the end of which he said with almost a wail, "I am going into the factory." The girl, who still held his arm, shuddered as if stricken by a deadly bolt.

The factory was a government institution where something was being the nature of which no one made knew. When a workman entered its portals he did so with the understanding that he would never come out. Once in possession of the secret con-tained wit those gloomy walls, the government took care that he should not have an opportunity to reveal it.

Peter Marinoff, born and brought up among the farm class in Russia, was much out of place. His ancestors had been nobles who in one of the up-heavals that country has suffered were impoverished. But in him was an inheritance of genius that had lain dormant through several generations. It had not yet been suspected either by him or any one else.

Under the cold moonlight Peter and Marya parted. No ray of hope found its way into the breast of either. "I cannot be yours in the flesh, Peter," she wailed, "but I will be yours in heaven. No one shall ever come between us." "In the factory there is no marriage, Marya. I shall join you in the hereafter." Then Peter pulled himself away from the girl, who clung to him pitifully. The next morning he walked several leagues to the factory and presented himself for admission. There was always room for workmen there, for few cared to enter a service from which there was no retreat. Nor was it necessary that he should have any preparation for the work done there. When a man is to spend his whole life in a certain employment his employer can afford to educate him for his duties. Peter's only pleasure in life was when the moon was at the full on a night-to stand in the factory clear yard, look at the orb moving like the hand of a great clock in a circle of the heavens and think of Marya. He was rentinded of their parting, and as one's remembrance of a face is that of the last time it has been seen so he always saw Marya's with the moonlight streaming down upon it and wearing a look of despair. The factory was a place where explosives were manufactured. The only protection for the secret processes in use there was to make life prisoners of those engaged in compounding the chemicals which constituted the explosive substance. Most of the men employed were kept from knowing these secrets by being confined to only a portion of the work. Many were not sufficiently intelligent. But there were persons who understood the whole of one or more processes. Peter was a born scientist. He soon showed that he was capable of being made one of the principal compound ers, and, since there were books in the factory suited to the work being done, he studied, though rather from a desire to escape his memories of the outside world than any desire to benefit himself. When absorbed in the fairy tales of chemical science, for the time being he forgot all else. Peter was so serviceable that after awhile he was put in charge of the manufacture of a certain explosive. It was not only expensive, but unrelia ble. Peter, being a natural investigator, set himself to work to find some other combination that would not cost so much to manufacture, but would give better satisfaction.

One day an order came to the fac-tory to turn out as much work as pos-sible. New hands were introduced, and large quantities of stock from which the product was evolved were brought With the order came the news Germany had declared war against Russia.

Peter, who by this time was in ex-Peter, who by this time was in ex-clusive charge of the explosive sub-stance for shells and could use any process he chose, manufactured a lot of shell explosive by his newly discov-ered process. This went into shells, which were sent to the front. Peter, who could not make any tests without giving away his secret, waited for a report of how his explosive worked, or, rather, to hear if there was any complaint. None came. Then he sent out some powder manufactured by the old process. Very soon a report came that a proportion of these shells would not explode.

Then Peter went to the governor of the works and told him that he had invented a powder for shells that had worked perfectly. The governor at-tempted to get the secret, but Peter kept it. This he could easily do since there was one ingredient the nature of which no one knew but himself. He offered to sell the formula to the government provided that in addition to the price paid he should be free to leave the factory.

Graft predominates in Russia, and the governor determined to force Pe-ter's secret from him to use it for his own benefit. He put Peter in irons in a dungeon and on bread and water. It is quite likely that Peter would have given way under this treatment had it not been that by holding out he might secure his terms. If he did he could marry Marya, who had assured him that she would never be the wife of any one else. If he did not succeed death might relieve him of his imprisonment.

Complaints came so thick and fast of the shells sent out from the 'factory that one day the governor ordered Peter to be brought to his office. When he arrived all others were ordered out, and when the two were alone together the governor said: ."I have concluded to recommend to the government to buy your formula. How much do you ask for it?" "Ten thousand rubles."

"Very well; it will be paid. My commission will be one-half."

"I will pay no commission. A man who bribes a government official is as culpable as that official."

"You will think better of this." said the governor. "Go back to your dungeon.

Peter returned to his dungeon. He was full of expedients and endeavored to find one by which he could communicate with Marya. He could write to her,"but all letters from those inside the factory were examined by a Peter induced the man who censor. brought him his food to bring also writing material and a bottle on the shelves in the laboratory, giving him the name on the label. Upon receiving them Pe-ter wrote a letter to Marya in ordinary ink and across its face with the chemical a message stating that he had invented a new explosive, but was pre-vented from using it. What was written in plain ink contained this sentence: 'We are suffering with the heat." This was to convey an instruction to Marya to heat his letter.

Now, the message that Peter had written across the face of his letter in the chemical that had been brought him was invisible, but by being heated it came out plainly in visible letters. The censor who read the letters that went out, reading Peter's letter, noticed the words "We are suffering with the heat," but could not understand them because it is seldom warm in Russia. He sent for Peter and asked him what he meant by writing that it was warm.

Local Juries Won't Convict, Says Mrs. Florence Kelley.

SHE WANTS A FEDERAL LAW. Child labor laws will not be enforced until there is a federal law which the government will enforce. So Mrs. Florence Kelley told the Eleventh Annual Conference on Child Labor at its recent San Francisco meeting. During her wide and varied experience Mrs. Kelley has accumulated many exam-ples of why a state child labor law can never be properly enforced and why the federal government must take a hand in if. "After a state child labor law is on the statute books the difficulties of the inspectors are only a part of the obsta cles that confront the state in getting that law enforced. If an inspector works very hard he is commonly re-moved-that is, if he works hard and honestly and ably. I have watched inspectors working hard, honestly and ably being removed for thirty-three years. One who does not work_hard and ably and honestly will probably be removed anyhow when the politics of the state changes.

"While the inspector is working hard, ably and honestly it is exceedingly difficult to get a law enforced, if prosecu tion is required, because local magistrates are usually reluctant to enforce it and local juries to uphold it. Some years ago we were prosecuting in Chi-cago a certain sweater who had employed sixteen girls illegally. A dozen witnesses were subpoenaed, and they all swore cheerfully that the law had been kept, although they knew that they bad been working illegally that day.

"The justice thought it a merry jest that we could not get warrants against those perjured witnesses. He said, 'If I were going to choke my office up with perjury suits against witnesses in minor cases we would not get any business done,' so those perjured witnesses went scot free." As a further illustration Mrs. Kelley spoke of the difficulty the New York State Department of Labor has experienced in the past two years in prosecuting canners. The trouble was not with perjured witnesses there, but with local juries. The local juries would not convict because most of them were farmers who sell their goods to the canneries and had no idea of participating in the punishment of their cus-"That condition is so widetomers. spread throughout New York, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware," said Mrs. Kelley, "that there is no present hope of enforcing the child labor law in the canneries of those states with local jurors in local courts.

"I do not share the millennial belief that we shall in any near future bave our laws obeyed by the agreement of employers and employees in industries in which the employees are unorganiz-ed. Laws are obeyed only where there are powerful organizations of workers to compel obedience. But where there is a body of helpless aliens, as in most sweated industries, or in remote villages far from the searchlight it will take a great deal of evidence to convince me that all employers will voluntarily obey the child labor law. Our immediate need is the passage of a federal child labor law to enable the federal government to enforce the law.'

Mrs. William H. Hinchliffe, 20 Myrtle St., Beverly, Mass., writes: "I have taken four bottles of Peruna, and I can say that it has done me a great deal of good for catarrh of the head and throat. I recommend Peruna to all sufferers with catarrh. I do not think I ever felt much better. I am really surprised at the work I can do. I do not think too much praise can be said for Peruna.

drawing a pen over the word heat, he wrote "cold," but the word heat was not erased.

Marya did not need the hint, for she read the letter by the light of blazing logs, and under the warmth the message came out in dark brown letters. She thought a long while about this communication, but, not realizing its full import, took it to her father. He saw in it more than she did, but could suggest nothing.

One morning Marya was missing. She had saved a little money, which was missing also. She had started to Petrograd, using the money to pay her way so far as it would go. When she reached the capital she saw no way to give Peter's letter to the czar. Learning the hour that he reached the palace, she tied the letter to a stone and. standing on the sidewalk behind the line of soldiers, tossed it into his carriage. The czar, thinking it was a pe tition, handed it to an attendant to examine.

One day Peter was taken from his dungeon and led up to the governor's office. An aid-de-camp to the czar and the governor were the only persons present. The aid held Peter's letter in his hand and asked him if he wrote it. When Peter admitted that he did he was taken into a conveyance with the aid and carried to Petrograd. There he communicated his secret to one appointed to receive it.

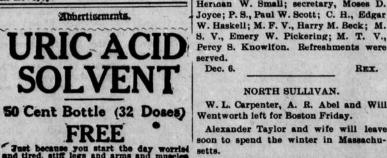

Peter was paid a liberal sum for his formula and sent back to the factory in place of the governor, who disappeared. Some said that he was imprisoned by order of the czar, others that he was sent to Siberia. At any rate, he never appeared at the works again.

Peter as governor of the factory could go and come as he pleased. He married Marya, but had no time for a honeymoon. Marya lived with him in the dwelling used by the governor until the works were destroyed by German emissaries. Then Peter was sent to another point, where he was expect-ed to spend his time investigating and inventing munitions of war.

A federal law would not only protect people outside of North Carolina from receiving goods manufactured by children in North Carolina, but it would protect people in that state from having to buy tenement goods from New York .- Owen R. Lovejoy.

President Wilson's annual message to Congress, delivered yesterday, dealt principally with preparedness. Although he touched upon a variety of topics, the predominating note of the message was military and naval preparedness for the purpose of delense and the upholding of the Monroe doctrine.

Every recommendation embodied in the document had to do with comprehensive plans for strengthening the national defense. The program included the army and navy plane already made public by Secretaries Garrison and Daniels; legislation for government owned merchant ships; a rural credit law; the Philippine and Porto Rico bills which failed of final age at the last session; conservation legislation; a law giving federal aid to industrial and vocational edu-cation; and the creation of a com-mission to inquire into the transpor-tation problem.

Rogue Will Win

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS -----

Ned Temple at twenty-one inherited fortune, which he proceeded to spend lavishiv. Ned was one of those lovable fellows who cannot refuse any one a favor, and the most of his money went in satisfying the cravings of the needy and in loans to his supposed friends. When his money was all gone he proceeded to live on credit, and when his credit was gone the bailliffs got after him.

One of Ned's creditors, his tallor, whose profits on Ned's orders had been large, not being especially grateful for past favors, trumped up a charge of swindling against him in order to force him to pay a bill of $16 and swore out a warrant for his arrest. Ned got win the matter, and, throwing a few articles into a suit case, he made for a train and the same evening found himself in another city. He had been there before in his halcyon days and had spent a lot of money there. Not having a cent in pocket, he was obliged to find shelter and food by means of his assur-ance. Marching into a club where he had several times been "put up" by a friend, he called the gentleman up on the telephone and desired the same favor. Not succeeding in getting him Ned told the manager that his forme introducer would be around in the morning to introduce him again.

During the evening he fell in with Lord Tinterton, a young English nobleman, who possessed letters of in-troduction to prominent American families. One of these was to the Meri-weathers. Ned had heard that there were several pretty girls in the family, and it occurred to him to put in a brief period as a guest at their house by borrowing his lordship's letter. Tinterton, being assured that Ned wished the introduction to assist him in a love affair, consented. Ned sat down to a table, wrote a note on club stationery, inclosed the letter and dis patched it by special messenger. The next morning Miss Grace Mert-weather was driven up to the club in a limousine, and the chauffeur called for Lord Tinterton. Ned, who was on watch, responded, went out to the car and was invited to transfer himself during his stay in the city to the Meriweather domicile. Returning to the club, he left word for his friend, who was to "put him up,". that he would not be able to avail himself of his kind act. Then a servant carried his suit case to the car and he and Miss Meriweather were driven away.

Miss Meriweather proposed a drive before going home, to which Ned cheerfully assented and before they drew up at her residence the couple had entered upon a desperate firtation. No one could spend an hour with Ned without a flirtation, and to girls he was irreststible. He remained all of three days with the Meriweathers then received a letter from a friend to whom he had loaned $500, containing a check for the amount. He bade goodby to his hosts and, returning to the city, showed himself boldly on the street, stopping at the tailor's to settle his bill.

pose of personating him at such times as he might wish to escape the atten-tions of "tuft hunters." Lord Tinterton was a very retiring man and, hav-ing found himself importuned to ac-cept invitations that would be irksome to him, had requested his secretary to relieve him of the onus, thereby sparing his lordship the necessity of offending a number of persons. The secre-tary closed his letter by stating that hoped the lady would be careful not to let the matter get out, since his lordship had so far honored him as to tell him that he had won the heart and hand of one of America's fairest daughters and an exposure during Tinterton's absence might cause a good deal of trouble. The note was signed "Henry Brewerton, secretary."

When Ned returned to his fancee she told him of her correspondence with his secretary and expressed a de sire to see the man who had been so successful in personating him. Ned held his breath till the story was fipished, then remarked with perfect as surance that Brewerton was very use ful to him when an avalanche of invi tations came down, and he didn't know what he would do without him. He came of an excellent family in England, and his breeding rendered him capable of playing the part of a king. Miss Meriweather approved his lordship's plan of escaping the hordes of persons who were hunting him and expressed a desire to meet his secre-tary. She asked his lordship to extend to Mr. Brewerton an invitation for her to dinner. At this Ned looked blank, but only for a moment, saying that he would be most happy to do so. He was commissioned to ask Mr. Brewerton to dine on the first day that he had no other engagement.

On leaving his fiancee Ned at once sought Lord Tinterton and pressed his hand gratefully, praising his marvelous tact and ingenuity in getting him out of the scrape. "But we are not out of the woods," said Ned. "There are more quicksauds to get over. I say this because by your letter to Miss Meriweather you are now involved with me. I have promised to bring you-my secretary-ha, ha:-to dise with my fiances. Isn't it funny?" "But, man," said his lordship earnestly, "when are we going to reach the denouement?

"The denouement! There is an adage 'Never try to cross a bridge till you get to it.' Let that be our guide." His lordship was not reassured by this, but since he saw no way out of the matter and had the advantage of being the real lord, while Ned was the spurious one, he gave him authority to accept the dinner invitation for him. It is to be confessed that, notwithstanding this advantage. One morning Tinterton received note from Miss Grace Meriweather. stating that a man had delivered a letter of introduction from him to her family. He seemed to be an entirely ifferent person from the one she now ssed. Would he kindly explain? addre

Tinterton saw at once that Temple was on the brink of exposure and, renembering his promise, racked his brains for a method to protect the man who had used his letter. He finally wrote Miss Meriweather that he would explain the matter on her promise to eep it a secret. Receiving an assenting reply to this, he wrote her that he was Lord Tinterton's secretary and that his lordship had brought him to America with him for the express purthat he was not trying to win his girl away from him, but the green monster had fastened his fangs on Ned's heart and would not let go his grip. Tinterton bore a message to yed from Miss Meriweather that she desired him to call upon her the same evening. Ned believed that she had accented him, supposing him to be a lord, but notwithstanding this faith was about to throw him over for a lord's secre tary, with whom she had become in fatuated. He would have stayed away, thus rendering it incumbent on her to write him his dismissal, but he was certain of nothing, and curiosity prompted him to go to her.

On being ushered into the drawing room, what was his surprise to see Tinterton sitting with Miss Meriweath Ned entered with a scowl at the er. eman and a look of contemptuous reproach at the lady. Both rose as the spurious lord entered. Tintertor looking embarrassed, Miss Meriweather maintaining a reserved dignity

"I have sent for you, Lord Tinter ton," she said to Ned, "to make a con-Captivated with the idea of being Lady Tinterton, I accepted your offer without loving you. I have de-cided that this would be unjust to you; therefor

"You have transferred your affections to that blooming Englishman." Both the real Tinterton and Miss Meriweather burst into a laugh. Ned. red as a beet, turned and was stalk ing out of the room when Miss Meriweather threw her arms about him and held him.

"That was an awful game for you to play," she said, "and I didn't it till the day I invited you and the real Lord Tinterton to dinner. when we drove out together I confided my knowledge of the situation to him. I suppose I should have you arrested for false pretenses, but stead I"-

PRIVATE WARS.

Any Pretext Would Serve to Start a Conflict In Feudal Times.

"Of the many privileges conferred on the nobles of Europe by the feuda system none was more jealously guarded or more frequently exercised than the right of waging private war,' writes Dr. MacMillan in the Scottish Review. "This lawless custom was the cause of untold misery, barbarity, ruin and destitution. Upon the slightest pretext-often indeed with no excuse at all-the feudal baron would sally forth from his stronghold in order to carry fire and sword into the territories of some neighboring chief. "'This abuse,' says Cox in his "His-tory of the House of Austria," 'was carried to so great an extent that not only sovereigns and states engaged in hostilities from interest or revenge but the lesser barons, and even associ ations of tradesmen and domestics, sent deflances to each other on the most ridiculous pretenses and in a manner scarcely credible at the present day. "'We find a declaration of war from a private individual, Henry Mayenberg, against the emperor; another the Lord Prauenstein against from Frankfort, because a young lady of the city refused to dance with his un-cle; another in 1450 from the baker and domestics of the margrave of Baden against Eslingen, Reutlingen, and other imperial cities; another in 1462 from the baker of the Count Palatine Louis against the cities of Augsburg, Ulm and Rothwell; one in 1471 from the shoeblacks of the University of Leipzig against the provost and some other members, and one in 1477 from a cook of Eppenstein, with his scullions, dairymaids and dishwashers against Otho, count of Solms.'

"But this lawless and mischlevous spirit did not expire with the abolition of the right of private war."

THE PROTECTING FOREST.

Important Part Trees Play In Prevent ing Serious Floeds.

It has been shown that forests prevent the rapid melting of ice and snow and thus avert or modify floods in the spring. Mountains also play an important part with regard to floods. By in tercepting drifting currents of moisture laden air mountains are active agents in precipitating rainfall, and unless they are protected by forests the waters pour down into the valley in destructive torrents. The evergreen trees, particularly the spruces, are es-pecially useful in controlling these tor-rents. Under all spruce forests there is a large deposit of what woodsmen call "duff." This is composed of partially decayed trees, bark, needles, cones and

This duff varies from one to six feet in thickness and has the power of absorbing and holding water like a sponge. During the heavy spring rains it becomes thoroughly saturated with water, which gradually oozes down the mountain sides into the streams in summer. The trees also protect the snowfall from the rapid action of the sun in spring, thus restraining floods from that source also. The protection of the forests there fore is the surest and safest way in which to prevent destructive inundations. They are really natural storage reservoirs, not holding back great masses of water in bulk, which may be released by the breaking of some dam and carry terrible destruction before them, but storing it in the capillaries of the spongy soil and yielding it gently and continuously during the season when most needed.-London Standard

Williams and Amherst Played the First Intercollegiate Game.

THIRTEEN MEN ON EACH SIDE.

The Contest Lasted Four Hours, and the Score Was 73 to 32-Players Were Elected by Ballot, and Popularity, Not Skill, Was What Counted.

The first intercollegiate game of base ball was played on July 1, 1859. It has frequently been declared that the the vacancy. first match between colleges was the Harvard-Williams game of 1864-that the first college contest played under twenty-five. the general rules that now govern the game, but five years earlier, on July 1, 1859, Amherst and Williams met at Pittsfield, Mass., in the first intercollegiate baseball game of any type played in the world. The two balls used in that game are hanging in a room in Amherst college, and beside them hangs this inscription: "The veritable balls used in the first game of intercollegiate baseball ever played, July 1, 1859. Amherst versus Williams, won by Amherst." The contest was of the old fashioned "round ball" kind and required thirteen men on a side. The teams were not selected because of any particular skill or training, but "were chosen by ballot from the students at large. took about three weeks to settle the negotiations for the match, and doubtless the arguments would have continued as many months had not the Pittsfield Baseball club offered its grounds and thus quieted suspicions as to neutral territory. There was considerable dispute as to the size and kind of ball to use, but this was ended by allowing each side to use its own ball exclusively.

Those two balls brought to the game were the wonder of the crowd. That of Amberst weighed two and one-half ounces and was about eight inches in circumference, while that of Williams weighed two ounces and was seven inches round. Some Williams wiseacres had suggested a light colored covering so as to "make it seen with difficulty by the batters," and this peculiarity filled the "fans" with admiration.

The "fans" at that first college game were indeed plentiful. All the faculty and every student at Williams were there, and the whole village of Williamstown emptied itself into the ball grounds at Pittsfield. There were, moreover, several "female seminaries" within easy riding distance, and their interested students were present to put the boys on their mettle. The Amherst team felt a little lonely, as only seventeen students, all players, were in their company, and not a single neighbor or member of the faculty came to cheer them up.

It was indeed doubtful whether the game could ever be finished, for some enemy of law and order started the report that "the Amherst thrower was a professional blacksmith who had been hired for the occasion." Thus the suspicion of professionalism entered colege athletics at the very beginning However, the contest started at 11 o'clock, lasted twenty-six rounds, or innings, and closed after four hours of continuous playing. The score was 75 to 32.

"As the man at bat had the right to knock the ball in any direction what ever, there were many "side strikes." "back knocks" and "tlcked" (foul) balls. Considering the fact that the man behind the bat had no glove, mask or protection of any sort, it was re-

CASTINE. NORMAL SCHOOL NOTES. Monday evening, Dec. 6, in the house-hold arts laboratory, the B class served a formal dinner to the faculty as a practical demonstration of the work done in cook-ing during the past term, under direction of Miss Mary S. Coombs, teacher of domestic science. The dinner was well cooked and well served, and the occasion was one of the pleasantest of the many social events of the term. The din-ner, as an object lesson, was confined to a cost of thirty cents a plate. Tuesday evening, the second division of cost of thirty cents a plate. Tuesday evening, the second division of B. class served a successful dinner to the first divison, at the Domestic Science lab-oratory. The dinner consisted of five courses, and was given at the cost of twenty-five cents a plate. The table decorations were green and red. The place cards, designed by Miss Stanley and Miss Thompson, showed much origi-nality. The sewing room was transformed into an attractive drawing room. The guests played the role of distinguished personages in attendance at an engage-ment party. ment party.

ment party. The tennis tournament for girls' doubles, which was begun earlier in the fall, was finished Friday, Nov. 19. The final round was won by Miss Angie Hall, of Casco, and Miss Mildred L. Hussey, of Albion. who defeated Miss Adelia Barron, of Ells-worth, and Miss Addie Robinson, of Isle au Haut, 5-7, 6-2 and 6-1. Misses Hall and Hussey have thus won the girls' doubles championship, and will be called upon to defend that title in the spring tournament. ournament. Dec. 7. R.

are busy men, all the year 'round, and have so much to do, that they don't always take time to look after their health. They say they haven't time to be sick, so many of them go about their work, even when they are feel-ing poorly. As a matter of fact, most farmers could keep well, most of the time, if they would take something occasionally, to keep the stomach and liver in order and the bowels regu-lated. lated.

For many years, "L. F." Atwood's Medicine has been a friend indeed to Maine farmers. It is a remedy that quickly corrects the little ailments and keeps a man feeling ready and fit for a good day's work.

GREEN Trading STAMPS

The announcement that MORANG'S has adopted the Nationally known and justly famous "S. & H." Green Trading Stamps is a mighty important one to every one of our customers and friends in Ellsworth and surrounding territory. WE WILL NOW GIVE "S. & H." GREEN STAMPS admitted to be the Standard American Discount which are redeemable at the splendidly stocked "S. & H." Premium Store, 81 Central St., Bangor, for over 4,000 items in Standard Merchandise.

As you know, we have had a wide experience with various systems and are now prepared to offer the good people of Ellsworth, full benefit of a service which, for the past 19 years, has been saving money for millions of wise, thrifty shoppers throughout the United States. "S. & H." Premiums are exactly the same quality of goods you would select to buy. They include furniture, cut glass, silverware, chinaware, blankets, tapestry, leather goods, toys for the children and even fine jewelry.

Candidly, by giving "S. & H." Green Stamps we are returning to our trade a far more generous discount than we possibly could do in actual cash. One visit to the "S. & H." Premium Store will convince you of this fact.

We want you to see our window display. Our new policy will in no way affect our fixed practice of pricing merchandise at the most reasonable figures quoted in Ellsworth or elsewhere.
