"ON MY SET"

The baseball fans found the atmosphere unchanged with static Sunday afternoon, but managed to follow the progress of the double-header. Sunday night's reception was quite free from such disturbance and the excellent programs gave great enjoyment.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, making his first prepared radio address Friday will talk over two nation-wide broadcasting chains from a single microphone in the studios Columbia announcement was made that the company would cooperate in the transmission, carrying the talk at the same time that it goes out over the Columbia System. The 15 minute address to America had been set for 10 p. m. daylight.

Arriving in New York Friday evening, the train crew and passengers of the Fast Freight visit the many places of interest in New York city via radio. Crossing the Hudson in a ferry, they see the famous New York skyline and then visit points of interest in the city itself. In keeping with the occasion, the organizers play "Bye Bye Blues," "Why," and the "Stein Song" as well as selections from other current musical hits now playing in New York. The quartet sings "Sidewalks of New York," "Dinah," and one of their most attractive yodels.

"LET US BE GAY"

The comedy by Rachel Crothers "Let Us Be Gay" which is at the Lakewood this week lives completely up to its title. In action it is smooth, quick and spontaneous, the sentiment is genuine, the characters true and never overdrawn. For the playing too much cannot be said. In a difficult role Peggy Allenby comes through with flying colors, and Robert Hudson as the husband turns in a strong performance. As the grand-mother who knew what she wanted Kathryn Keys is delightful, while Reg Entwistle as the saucy diestro was charming as usual. "Let Us Be Gay" is worth anyone's time and money.

The play for next week will be "Escape" by John Galsworthy with Hardie Albright assuming the difficult role of Matt the escaped convict. The story has to do with a young man who is convicted of manslaughter. After serving part of his term he escapes from Dartmoor. He wanders here and there attempting to make a complete get-away and the play tells of his wanderings, the people he met and how he got out of his difficulties.

Here, There and Yonder,
Touching the Alluring
Things of Nature.

(Number Ten)
She wrote her letter carefully, making an appointment with her friend for Saturday and then addressed the envelope thus:
Mrs. Beryl Stanford,
City.

Entrusting it to a caller to mail she waited all day Saturday in vain for her friend to come but was disappointed and thus put to much inconvenience. Her friend was blamed and their friendship came near being broken up for a time, and all because she employed such a slipshod way of directing her letter for the friend to whom she entrusted it was a busy man, going from one town to another during the day, so after leaving her he boarded the trolley for another town and posted the letter some two hours later in still a third town, so the friend never received it.

Nearly every week I receive letters with my name and only "City" as an address. If the friend who mails them happens to drop them in a box here in the city, all well and good, but he may be in a hurry to catch a train and later may mail the letter in Waldoboro or Portland and so the letter is lost. Think of it when you are tempted to write "City" on an envelope, and then don't do it.

Some time when you have a few moments to spare, step into the corridor of the Postoffice about the time you begin to hear a regular thump-thump-thump inside; look in and watch the regular way in which the letters are picked up and pushed along for cancellation of stamps and in a very few minutes you will understand just why you should always place your letter stamp in the right hand upper corner of your envelope. If you don't understand just at first, you will if you stand there long enough.

I have a friend who cannot or will not understand why she should walk on the extreme left of a country road. She insists that as the right is the proper side on which to turn out, she must stick to the right side of the road, regardless of where others walk. In vain have I explained to her that as she has no eyes in the back of her head, and as autos from behind invariably keep to the right, she will be safest on the left side, as she can then always see autos meeting her. She accepts my theory with a grace or argument, and then seeing an auto approaching in the distance, she deliberately crosses to the right side of the road, directly in the path of another auto which comes up from behind sounding an alarm and coming to a full stop just short of her, the driver swearing horribly. Some day that woman will get a practical demonstration of "how not to do it," and then perhaps she will understand why the left side of the road is safest for pedestrians.

When I drive a horse I am sure to be criticized because I insist on sitting on the extreme left end of the seat while almost all drivers sit on the right. "The whip socket is on the right," they argue, "and that shows that the right side is the proper place to drive from." If this is true why are all the steering wheels of autos on the left? I have reasoned this out to my own satisfaction, and have learned that though we build our buggies as our forefathers did, yet we do not follow the English custom of turning out on the left, consequently we cannot see how near our wheels are to an approaching team when we sit on the right, American fashion, therefore I sit on the left where I can plainly see the wheels of the other buggy and so avoid a possible collision. There is a reason for everything if we will take the trouble to study it out. If we turned to the left as do our English cousins, the right side would be the logical side on which to sit. Adella F. Veazie Rankin street, Rockland.

ARTHUR N. LAWRENCE

Sudden Death of Popular
Ward Three Alderman
Shocks the Community

Arthur N. Lawrence, vice president of the Lawrence Packing Company, and Ward Three's representative in the board of aldermen, died early yesterday morning, following an operation for an unusually severe case of appendicitis. He will be buried with military honors Wednesday afternoon, the remains lying at his late home 108 Beech street until the time of the funeral services which will be held at 2 o'clock from the residence of E. M. Lawrence, 112 Beech street, father of the deceased. The interment will be in Achorn cemetery.

Arthur Neal Lawrence was born in Lubec July 15, 1897, son of Edward M. and Ursula (Allan) Lawrence. He received his education at Hebron Academy, University of Maine and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was an exceptionally popular student, and was awarded numerous tokens and medals for his athletic prowess, especially at tennis.

America joined in the World War while Mr. Lawrence was obtaining his technical education in Boston and he enlisted in the Maine Reserve Force, taking an intensive course at the Harvard ensigns' school from which he in due time received his commission. His services in the Navy were of such a distinguishing character that he received a citation and medal.

His services with the government were not destined to end with the signing of the Armistice, for he was assigned to the Veterans' Bureau and for three years was engaged in this important work in behalf of the war victims.

He returned to civilian life to join his father and brother Glenn in the promotion of the Lawrence Packing Company. Mr. Lawrence was a member and active worker in Winslow-Holbrook Post and was especially prominent in the World War organization known as the Forty and Eight, being chief de guerre passe of Voltaire 1924 and holding the office of grand commis voyageur in the Grand Voltaire of Maine. He held the rank of 2d lieutenant in Battery G. Coast Artillery Corps, and attended the recent annual encampment at Fort Williams. He was a member of the Universalist parish, Rockland Country Club and Rockland Yacht Club.

The news of Alderman Lawrence's death was a profound shock to his friends throughout the city, comparatively few of whom knew that his condition was critical to the point of hopelessness. His infinite good nature, his willingness to aid in any undertaking which was for the public good, and his activities socially had made him universally liked.

Alderman Lawrence was married May 26, 1926, to Miss Dorothy Blethen, who survives him, together with his father and step-mother, two brothers, Glenn A. and Lloyd N. Lawrence; and two sisters, Mrs. Louise Curry of Miami, Fla.; and Mrs. Ella Lawrence Cole of Rockland.

BY THE MAYOR

In the passing of Arthur N. Lawrence, the community suffers a real loss: a wise counselor, a beautiful character, a lovable companion and friend. In token of the love and esteem in which the community holds his memory, I am asking that the business houses close Wednesday, during the hour of services from 2 to 3 o'clock p. m.

PRIZES CAME TO ROCKLAND

Coining Most Suitable Name For New Soap, and Promptness In Answering Gain Awards Aggregating $1100

One of The Courier-Gazette's oldest subscribers reports the receipt of $1100, awarded by the Paris-American Pharmaceutical Company as the result of a contest for a suitable name for a new soap—$1000 having been the prize for the most suitable name, with 100 additional for promptness in answering.

The prize-winning word was Olinol—being an euphonic combination of the three significant words "all in all."

Under the conditions of the contest the participants could use existing words or coin new ones from their fertile imaginations.

The Rockland winner assigns excellent reasons for declining to permit the use of her name, but those who are already cognizant of her identity are proffering their congratulations.

"It certainly paid in this instance to read an advertisement," she says. A legal release to the right and title for the use of the word "Olinol" was given.

The Paris-American Pharmaceutical Company has been located in Des Moines, Iowa, but has lately transferred its offices and plant to the West Coast.

Officials of the Eastern Steamship Lines have officially announced the resignation of Andrew B. Sides as formerly handled by Vice President Sides. Mr. Irving was originally connected with the Metropolitan Lines, which later merged with Eastern Steamship Lines and has had over 27 years of steamship experience. During the war period, Mr. Irving was connected with the United States Shipping Board and for a short period with the Coastwise Transportation Company, rejoining Eastern Steamship Lines in 1923.

It is also announced that L. H. Wakefield is appointed superintendent of terminals with headquarters at India Wharf and J. C. Gray, Jr., is appointed agent of lines east of Boston with headquarters at Central Wharf, Boston.

The appointment of Messrs. Irving, Wakefield and Gray became effective Aug. 1. Mr. Sides, the retiring vice president was presented with an inscribed platinum watch by the 1600 employees and associates of the company. A seven-piece solid silver service was also presented to Mr. and Mrs. Sides. The presentations were made by Charles Flathers, who traced the career of Mr. Sides during his 28 years with the steamship company beginning with a minor position in Camden, to the vice presidency in charge of operations.

Mr. Sides is leaving Boston for a month's vacation in Maine and is later to be connected in an executive capacity with Thompson's Spa.

HIGHER POSTAGE

Postmaster General's Recommendation Of 2 1/2-Cent Stamp Does Not Stir Cheering Section

With a Postoffice Department deficit of $93,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30 Postmaster General Brown again raised the question of increasing postage on first-class mail from two to two and a half cents, and let it be known that he would recommend that rate.

The announcement caused no surprise—nor any enthusiasm whatever. Mr. Brown previously made the suggestion as recently as last April. In June his third assistant, Frederic A. Tilton, addressed the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association at Asheville, N. C., and urged press support for the department's proposal. It was admitted that a profit is now made on letter mail, but no other way was seen for making the department self-supporting than by increasing the charge for sealed letters. It was stated that $30,000,000 of the deficit was attributable to non-postal items, on which no revenue is received, and the remainder to second-class matter which, by experience, has been found unable to bear a higher rate. Referring to the usual reply, "Cut down on the franked mail," Mr. Tilton declared such mail cost the department in the fiscal year of 1929 only $637,000—an insignificant item in the big deficit—while handling the mail for the other government departments cost only $3,500,000.

But public sentiment is against the increase. The two-cent stamp has been called "one of the nation's institutions." Why should the postoffice be self-sustaining when the Department of Commerce, for instance, has a deficit of $58,000,000, and the Department of Agriculture one of $155,000,000? Such are the questions asked. Moreover, it is pointed out that some $14,000,000, or nearly one-fifth of the deficit, is incurred through subsidies for ocean and air mail. In 1929, for instance, the Interstate Commerce Commission added $15,000,000 a year to the expenses of the postoffice by granting increased subsidies, or pay, to the railroads—a matter in which the postoffice had nothing to say.

Of course the general public has to pay for this service, deficit or not, in the long run. But there is a very general feeling that the expense should be met out of the general revenues rather than saddled on the first-class mail—which is already more than paying its way.—The Pathfinder.

THE FLAG

Here comes The Flag.
Hail it!
Who dares to drag
Or trail it?
Give it hurrahs—
Three for the stars
Three for the bars.
Uncover your head to it!
The soldier who tread to it
Shout at the sight of it.
The justice and right of it,
The unsullied white of it,
The blue and the red of it,
And trappings of dead of it!
Here comes The Flag!
Cheer it!
Valley and crag
Shall bear it.
Fathers shall bless it,
Children caress it,
All shall maintain it,
No one shall stain it.
Cheers for the sailors that fought on the wave
Cheers for the soldiers that fought on the grave
Tears for the men that went down to the grave for it.
Here comes The Flag!

It's the same old money

The size of paper money has shrunk, but in value is just the same as ever. A new dollar will buy the same amount of groceries, will carry you just as far on the railroad, or do exactly what the old one used to. The size doesn't count . . . it is the value. The Government made money smaller so it wouldn't require so much folding, and consequently would last longer.

You can make some of your money last longer by putting it into a savings account at the Security Trust Company. Deposit something every pay day, let the interest accumulate at the rate of 4 per cent and soon you will find your money growing instead of shrinking.

One dollar starts your account here. Deposits accepted by mail if you can't come in personally.

The Courier-Gazette

Rockland, Me., Aug. 5, 1930.
Personally appeared Frank S. Liddle, who on oath declared that he is Pressman in the office of The Courier-Gazette, and that of the issue of this paper of Aug. 2, 1930, there was printed a total of 6335 copies.
Before me, FRANK B. MILLER,
Notary Public.

In my distress I cried unto the Lord and he heard me—Ps. 119.

We are informed by Judge Miller that it was on March 17, 1887, that Maine substituted imprisonment for life for hanging in murder cases of the first degree. The Massachusetts Civic Alliance, whose activities are directed to maintaining the death penalty upon the statute books of the several States, points out that between the years 1911 and 1919 six States abolished the death penalty, only to return to it after the next election. Declaring that fear of executing the innocent is not supported by the facts, a statement by the Alliance adds:

Maine voted to abolish on the popular notion that the executed murderer, Wagner, was innocent, but the writer has a letter from Clerk Emmons of the court, that the murderer's attorney, had told him that Wagner was "guilty as the Devil."

It is a question that evokes powerful reasoning upon both sides. When a case like the recent Portland tragedy submits itself for discussion there is manifested a violent reaction against imprisonment for life, but we question if ever there is likely to develop in Maine a public sentiment of sufficient potency to bring about a restoration of the death penalty.

In an ancient copy of the Atlantic Monthly—of June, 1888, to be exact—an anonymous writer tells the story of his visit to the northern wilds of Maine. He begins his narrative: "I left Boston in the steamer for Bangor by the outside course" (what steamer would this have been?) and, arising early in the morning, he adds:

"The first land we make is Manhegan Island, before dawn, and next St. George's Island, seeing two or three lights. Whitehead, with its bare rocks and funeral bell, is interesting. Next I remember that the Camden Hills attracted my eyes and afterward the hills about Frankford. We reached Bangor about noon."

These are geographical allusions equally familiar to our sight today as to this adventurer into these regions of the coast of three-score and ten years ago. The only difference we note—which is the reason for this reprinting of his paragraph after many years—is the writer's spelling of this historical island's name. So far as we know it has always been Monhegan upon the maps and in the pages of historians. Do any of our readers recall the spelling Manhegan? We should be curious to know.

Upon the right-hand side of the windshield, looking outward, there appears a neat yellow label, testifying to the fact that we have had our car tested, in accordance with the Save-a-Life Campaign Proclamation issued by Governor Gardner. "Experience," so the proclamation begins, "has demonstrated that a considerable portion of the accidents involving motor vehicles is directly chargeable to defective mechanism or equipment." So we had the brakes tested, and the lights, and one thing and another, and the result was this neat yellow label, announcing to whomever it may concern that we had made our initial contribution to the month's campaign inaugurated by the State Highway Police, for the elimination of accident and injury from the highways of Maine. It is a piece of good citizenship that we feel proud to join a hand to.

It is to that recognized authority the Weather Bureau we find ourselves indebted for the information that the July just ended was the hottest month recorded since weather bureau-keeping became established. From July 4 to July 30 there was no day when 100 degrees of heat failed to be registered somewhere in the country. And we are warned that August is to prove equally fierce. Nothing of this sort befell the coast of Maine. Here we believe there were two or three spasmodic gestures toward the early nineties, but this was so evanescent that one scarcely had opportunity to comment upon the fact. Here is where in summer time one is assured of atmospheric comfort. This is among the reasons why the vacation travel to Maine goes on steadily enlarging its proportions.

Helen Willis Moody, that championship exponent of the possibilities in tennis, gives it as her opinion that silver contest cups should be listed as junk. We suppose cups must become wearisome to those who in any athletic sport have the faculty always of being a winner. To those lagging in the hopeless rear of the procession it may be another matter. To the golfer, for illustration, who year after year stolidly plugs his way around in a hundred—what would be the joy if he could point to but a single silver cup, brought out of a contest in which by miracle all his clubs were working in a delightful harmony. Such a trophy shining upon the parlor mantel would crown his life with triumph.

THE BLOOMER GIRLS

Fast Combination of New York Lassies Plays Rockland Tomorrow

New York Bloomer Girls, undefeated female baseball champions since 1919, will be presented to local fans tomorrow afternoon at Community Park when they play the Rockland team at 5 p. m. Manager Margaret Nabel feels that this year's club, the strongest ever to represent the New York Bloomer Girls. There are about 40 girls in all who belong to the club, but it takes several seasons as a rule before a player is considered experienced enough to be rated a regular.

Players come from all of the five boroughs comprising New York City: Manhattan, Bronx, Queens and Richmond have each contributed two, while the progressive borough of Brooklyn has three residents numbered among the regulars. The girls are big favorites whenever they exhibit at home, and have played every team of any consequence within 100 miles of New York city, while in many instances two or more appearances have been made in the same place, due to the popular demand.

Each spring, a former major leaguer is engaged to coach the girls and select the team, and it is surprising to see how readily the girls respond to his coaching and suggestions, and the effect it has had on the general playing. Infielders in particular have been given very careful attention and local fans will be surprised at the smoothness and grace of the playing, and the remarkably clever knowledge of the fine points of the game that the girls possess. Their batting, fielding, throwing and base-running is as good as any semi-pro, male club and absolute satisfaction is assured. Fans everywhere have received this attraction with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm, and a fast, clean interesting game is assured.

SEVENTY HORSES READY

Knox Trotting Park Looks Like a Cavalry Camp—Big Races Wednesday and Thursday

Because it is a bit too early for the Maine fairs Rockland is going to have the largest field of horses for the races Wednesday and Thursday that will be assembled in Maine this season. There are already about 70 on hand at Knox Trotting Park and it has been necessary to erect tents to shelter some of them. The towns represented in this formidable array are Rockland, Lewiston, Bangor, Corinna, Unity, Revere, Mass., Ellsworth, Boston, Topshfield, Mass., Lynn, Limestone, Calais, Gardiner, Camden, Dark Harbor, Haverhill, Belfast and Brewer.

The races each day will be started promptly at 1.30, and in the stand will be a horseman widely known throughout the State, Harry H. Lee of Augusta. "Jimmy" Butler, secretary of the Lewiston State Fair, will have charge of the horses. The track is as good as any in the State, and promises to be so light and fast

Wednesday and Thursday that the track record seems likely to get what Paddy gave the drum.

The Rockland City Band will be in attendance each afternoon, and a Cuban baritone, who has been heard at many large gatherings, will sing 'twelve acts.

The management is to distribute $1550 in purses. Here are the cards for the two days:

Wednesday
2.17 class, purse $250, 12 entries.
2.20 class, purse $250, 18 entries.
2.27 class, purse $250, for Maine owned horses, 9 entries.

Thursday

St. George Wins and Loses But Is Still Lugging the Banner—Bloomer Girls Tomorrow Afternoon

This Week's Games
Tuesday—Rockland at Camden.
Wednesday—(5 p. m.) Rockland vs. Bloomer Girls at Community Park.
Friday—St. George at Rockland.
Saturday (4 p. m.)—Thomaston at Camden.

The League Standing
St. George dropped back into a tie for first position as the result of its defeat in Camden Saturday, but went back at the head of the procession last night, with its victory over Thomaston. The figures now read:
St. George ..... 7 5 583
Camden ..... 6 5 545
Rockland ..... 5 5 500
Thomaston ..... 4 7 369

It was raining briskly at 5.45 last night and nobody thought there would be a ball game at Community Park, but with the first let-up the St. George and Thomaston teams took the field and managed to get in a game, which the Harbor boys won 11 to 3. Thomaston was minus a couple of its regulars, and met with a further set-back when "Tip" Feehan was compelled to retire on account of an injury to one of his knees. The tabulated score was not available this morning, but will appear in Thursday's issue.

Kickapoo Wins Rubber
The Kickapoo defeated Rockville in the odd game of the three-game series Sunday afternoon by the score of 16 to 2 in seven innings. The game was made by perfect defensive playing by Troy of the Kickapoo who accepted some hard hit balls. Rogall pitched a good game and would have had a shut out but for two bad misplays. Bray led the sailors in batting having a perfect day at bat with four hits and a sacrifice fly.

Camden, St. George 6

Camden went on a batting spree in the second inning of its game with St. George, at Camden Saturday, sending 11 men to bat, and hitting for a total of 13 bases. Singles were made by Dailey, Grafton and Leonard, doubles by Bennett and Thomas and triples by Curtis Bok and Boynton. Into this melee were injected two expensive errors, but for which the tally would not have been nearly as large, and St. George would have won, as subsequent developments showed.

"Kelley" Poole was in the box when the barrage occurred, and he it said to his everlasting credit that in the remaining six innings he allowed Camden only three scattered hits. Boynton was on the mound for Camden and kept St. George's hits well apart until the seventh when Archer, Simmons and Dwyer touched him up for successive hits. The visitors were in a fair way to overtake the home team when a mighty heave by Bennett stopped Dwyer at the plate.

It was deemed the part of prudence to send Bennett into the box and he shut out the opposing team in the eighth thanks to the beautiful catch made by Thurston when Simmons drove out a liner that everybody thought tagged for two bases. Cal. Smith was on third at the time and Archer was roosting on the middle sack. In this connection the writer pauses to say that Richards was the fielding star of the game, accepting nine of his 10 chances. Another beautiful play was that made by Davidson on the foul kicked by Curtis Bok in the first inning. The popular St. George first baseman ran

DODGE DEPENDABILITY

TRUE ECONOMY

is more than price deep

Owners of the Dodge Six and Eight are gratified that the features which contribute most notably to the pleasure of owning these cars are also responsible for their economy, dependability and long life.

The carefully-perfected balance of the engines means less vibration. The floating comfort on the road means that the engine and chassis, as well as the passengers, are virtually free from shock and strain.

The strength and permanent silence of the Mono-Piece Steel Bodies reflect freedom from upkeep expense as well as greater safety. The internal weatherproof hydraulic brakes, which give such reassuringly positive stops, are self-equalizing—require no costly adjusting—reduce wear on tires.

Now more than ever before, Dodge cars combine all of the factors you want most in a motor car.

Dodge Six—$835 to $935, f. o. b. factory
Dodge Eight—$1095 to $1145, f. o. b. factory

THE MARATHON CAR
STOPS AT NOTHING

Blistering heat, mountain trails, mud or sand—it's all the same to the standard Dodge Eight sedan which is continuously crossing the country in the Dodge Mileage Marathon. No greater demonstration of dependability has ever been attempted. Over 18,000 miles have been run in the first 34 days.

Dodge Eight closed cars are factory-wired for immediate installation of Transitions, the pioneer automobile radio. Other models will be equipped on order. Ask for a demonstration.

With the return to St. Louis yesterday of E. S. Healey the inter-town pitch tournament participated in by N. C. Austin of Waldoboro, J. H. McGrath and W. W. Case of Rockland and Mr. Healey has drawn to a close. Official reports from the Austin villa in Waldoboro would make it appear that the Austin-Case combination was the winner, but this claim was repudiated by "propagandists" by Miss Healey, as he boarded the train for the West, and he bases his charge on statistics kept by John F. Sullivan the official scorer, showing that the Healey-McGrath team made 28 points, as against 25 accumulated by the Austin-Case team. Furthermore it is cited that Mr. Healey in a three-handed contest won three successive nights. And it now remains to be seen what reply the Monarch of Medomak will make.

WITH RHODES IN EUROPE

Former Rockland Boy Impressed By London's Immensity — Sees Windsor But Not the King

By James Edward Rhodes, 2nd

[The Sixth Letter]

Imperial Hotel, London, June 23. We arrived here from Paris last Wednesday afternoon, having made the trip by way of Calais and Dover. The English Channel was smooth as a mill pond, in contrast to the tales which I have heard of its roughness, but I imagine that it may be mighty rough at times. While we did not stop on the way I secured a very good view of the Cathedral at Amiens from the train, and I also noticed a large British war memorial, cemetery, and old camp as we passed along.

Soon after arriving in London I telephoned to Arthur Richardson, and we spent yesterday afternoon with him and his family at their home in Ealing and had a most delightful time. Mrs. Butler is with them, and she had saved several copies of the Courier-Gazette for me to read. These were the first that I had seen since I had been in Europe. She told me that she had attended the performance of the Passion Play on May 25th, the Sunday before I was there, and that Mrs. Mortland was there at the same time. Mrs. Butler stopped at the home of Miss Lane, who played the part of Christ, but Mrs. Mortland was at the home of Peter Rendell, who played the part of Peter and with whom we stayed.

Richard had not had opportunity to play with any children who spoke English since we left the boat at Naples, and he was very glad to find full time playing with the Richardson children in their back yard. My wife was delighted at the opportunity which he would have of absorbing a little English atmosphere, but I guess that the absorption was not too great for the children had not been out there long before Albert came in and reported to Annah that Charlie and Teddy were talking just like Richie. I hope that they did not get too badly demoralized.

London

London is a tremendous city, covering a much larger area than any city I have ever seen, and is in reality an aggregation of many cities with invisible dividing lines. This hotel is in the Borough of Holborn, but I do not go far before noting that I am in another city, the City of Westminster for instance. We have already taken two of the sightseeing rides around the city and have done little more than gain a slight idea of some of the points of interest. Last Thursday afternoon we took the ride which has Westminster Abbey as its principal feature. The Abbey is surely the heart of England, the place where the kings and queens have been crowned for centuries, and where many of them lie buried, the place where it has buried many of its famous men and erected memorials to many others who are not buried there. I saw many of the graves, from that of Edward the Confessor to that of Thomas Hardy, the most recent, who was buried there in 1930, and that of the Unknown Soldier. Near his grave is the Congressional medal of honor, awarded him by the Congress of the United States. I must confess my gratification at seeing the bust of Longfellow in the Poets' Corner, and hearing the guide tell us how he enjoyed reading his poems. He said that "The Village Blacksmith" was the favorite of all with him.

The coronation chair in which the sovereigns of England are crowned is an interesting exhibit in the Abbey. It is in the same part with the tomb of Edward the Confessor, and has not been very well guarded for initials have been carved upon it, evidently not those of the sovereigns who have sat in it. A curious feature of this chair is the so-called "Stone of Destiny," which is underneath it. This is a large stone attached to it, and is said to be the stone on which Jacob rested his head during his dream, or has some such tradition connected with it. I could not help wondering a little over the destiny of the British Empire as I stood there looking at it.

In going around London we saw many points of interest, but I will mention only two, the Tower of London and the Houses of Parliament. The Tower is in fact an old prison, and with it many of the foulest deeds in English history are associated, particularly the imprisonment and execution, or mysterious disappearance

Nervous, Weak, No Appetite

"I am a factory worker. I got so nervous I could not sleep at night. I felt weak and had no appetite. My mother recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took two bottles. It helped me very much and I recommend it highly. I feel so much stronger, have a better appetite and work in the factory every day."

ance of political prisoners. The spot where Anne Boleyn, wife of Henry VIII, and many others were beheaded is still shown. The most interesting feature of a visit to the Tower is a sight of the crown jewels, the crowns of the King and Queen, and many other of the royal jewels, which are on exhibition. These are exhibited in a large circular glass case, which is heavily guarded. Here is seen the Kohinoor, one of the largest and most beautiful diamonds of the world and probably the most famous, in the crown of the Queen.

The Houses of Parliament are not open to the public generally when Parliament is in session. Entrance then is only by permission. On Saturdays when Parliament is not in session the Houses can be seen, and we availed ourselves of the opportunity to go there last Saturday morning. I was glad of the opportunity, but I suppose that it is natural to compare the place with our Capitol at Washington. It is nothing like our Capitol. In entering we passed through the robing room, where the King and Queen put on their robes of state before entering the House of Lords and ascending the throne to open Parliament, when the King reads the Address from the Throne, which has been prepared for him by the Prime Minister. We then passed through the chamber of the House of Lords. It impressed me as rather an uncomfortable place to stay in for any length of time, and I guess that many of their Lordships think so, for their attendance is optional and very small. I understand that the House of Lords as such is a very small factor in English political life. The building is wholly occupied with the chambers of the House of Lords and the House of Commons.

Passing from the House of Lords we went along to the other end of the building to the chamber of the House of Commons. This is much like the House of Lords, but not so ornate and more like a regular workshop. In both chambers the banks of seats are on opposite sides along the long side of the chamber, and face each other, the government, or prevailing political party, being on one side and the opposition on the other.

Of much interest to Americans in London are the statues of Washington, which is just outside the National Portrait Gallery at Trafalgar Square, was presented by the State of Virginia, and is a copy of the beautiful Houdon statue made from life at Mount Vernon, the original of which is now in the Capitol at Richmond. The Lincoln statue, near Westminster Abbey, is a copy of the St. Gaudens statue in Chicago.

Oxford

Last Friday we went out to Oxford to see the University, or rather some of the colleges which compose the University, for Oxford is in reality a collection of small colleges. The University, to a certain extent, is a separate political entity in British life, for it has a representative in Parliament and the University authorities have political jurisdiction over offenses committed by the students. This means that the administrative officials of the different colleges, and in case of some offenses the Vice-Chancellor of the University, can claim student offenders and take them from the custody of the municipal authorities and try them in their own courts. We were fortunate in having as a guide at Oxford a man who had been a University policeman for many years, and so was well acquainted with the University.

I was told that the University at present consists of twenty-three men's colleges and four women's colleges, and that there is, in addition, a small body of non-collegiate students, so-called, who are affiliated with no particular college. Each college is in reality only a place of residence, but it is a complete entity, having its own dormitories, dining hall, chapel, library and recreation grounds. The degrees are conferred by the University. The foundation of many of the colleges dates back for hundreds of years, and various reasons are given for their establishment. Paradoxically New College is one of the oldest of the group. We could not visit all of the colleges, but we did visit Worcester College with its beautiful lake, on which was a boat of newly hatched swans. St. John's College, with its beautiful gardens; Trinity College, famous for the wonderful woodcarvings in the chapel; New College, which also has beautiful gardens and wonderful painted windows in the chapel; and Magdalen College and saw the beautiful paneled dining hall containing portraits of some of its famous former students, among them Cardinal Wolsey. The present Prince of Wales was a student at Magdalen at the outbreak of the war and left then. We were shown the seat which he occupied in the dining hall, and were told how he got his greatest kick out of his university life in evading his guards.

Among the general buildings of the University we saw the Sheldonian Theatre where the degrees are conferred on Degree Day, which corresponds to our Commencements. The theatre was then being prepared for a convocation the next day when the degree of Doctor of Civil Law, the great honorary degree of England, was to be conferred on the Princess Mary. We also saw the Divinity School, now the Senate House of the University, the Bodleian Library, which is the general library of the University, and the Radcliffe Camera which is the reading room of the Bodleian Library.

In comparison with American Universities I could not help making some comparisons between Oxford and Yale. It is situated right in the midst of the business life of a city, much the same as Yale is in New Haven, and some of the groups of buildings which have recently been erected at Yale, such as the Harkness Memorial Quadrangle, are built much the same as the colleges at Oxford.

Windsor and Surroundings

Saturday afternoon we went out to Windsor, about twenty miles from London and one of the country residences of the King. His Majesty was in residence there at the time, and so we could not see some of the parts of the castle that we could have seen if he had not been there. On the way out we stopped at Stoke Poges Churchyard where Thomas Gray is buried and which furnished the inspiration for his "elegy written in a Country Churchyard." Stoke Park adjoining was the manorial home of the Penn family, and this was their church.

Between Stoke Poges and Windsor, which are not far apart, is Eton College, the oldest public school in England, and one of the most famous fitting schools for the universities. We visited this on the way and saw some of the schoolrooms. An impressive feature here is the Roll of Honor giving the names of the Eton men who fell in the World War. They are arranged alphabetically, and by a strange coincidence the names of the oldest and the youngest appear together, that of Lord Roberts who was at Eton in 1846, and that of a boy who was there in 1917. The "public school" in England is in reality a private school, the schools supported by the public having little standing. I was told that a family would make the greatest sacrifices to send children to one of these public schools rather than send them to the other schools.

Windsor Castle is an imposing pile, a relic of the days when a sovereign's life was essentially on the defensive. Our stay was short, and we could do nothing but view the exterior. On the way back to London we passed the field of Runnymede where the Barons forced King John to affix his seal to Magna Charta in June 1215. Later in the British Museum in London we saw two of the four original duplicate copies of Magna Charta which are now extant. One of these has been so badly damaged by fire that none of the writing on it is legible. Further along towards London we stopped at Hampton Court, an old royal palace, formerly a monastery built by Cardinal Wolsey, which Henry VIII annexed in his quarrel with the Church of Rome. Much English history seems to center around the quarrel of Henry VIII with the Pope. Hampton Court is something like Versailles, a country palace surrounded by magnificent gardens. I understand that part of it is now devoted to a pensionate for those who have rendered distinguished service to the government.

In the garden is a large grape vine, said to be the largest in the world, and a carefully trained arbor in a specially constructed conservatory of its own. It was laden with hundreds of bunches of grapes.

Impressions of England

I have been here only a few days and that is a short time within which to form an accurate impression regarding a country, but these few days have served to confirm the impressions which I brought with me. London is much like any other large city, but the country section which I have seen are fascinating. As a whole, however, England lacks the fascination of a foreign country, for it is much like our own. The basic fascination of almost any foreign country is the difference in language and customs, and when these are lacking one can feel that he is in a foreign country but only in another section of his own. As far as the English language is concerned, it may at first seem like a foreign language to us, but we soon get used to the vernacular and see that it is the same as our own. England, therefore, must offer some other attraction to the American, and this is found in its history, basically ours before ours began, then parallel with it for a while, and then separate from it.

The economic situation in England is bad. The English themselves have to admit it and are gloomy and discouraged. As a whole, however, the other cities and towns that I have seen seem busy and hustling enough and I have had no direct contact with the unemployment situation as I have not visited the manufacturing and mining sections, but in riding around I have seen many men stretched out for length in the parks and I suppose that they are part of the unemployment. As I view the situation it is a logical and an inevitable outcome. England has been a manufacturing nation, developing a large colonial empire and exporting its manufactures to those colonies, and to other parts of the world. Now these colonies are no longer dependent on England, and the rest of the world have found out that they can get along without the British Isles. England, therefore, has lost her markets. This is the whole crux of the situation.

I do not know much about the political situation, but my impression is that England is suffering from a bankruptcy in political leadership, this bankruptcy being caused by the fact that the trouble with the country is economic and no political relief can be found for it. The old party system has broken down, both from lack of leaders and lack of issues. The Labor Government has not been able to do anything to improve the situation, the Liberal Party seems a thing of the past, and the Conservative Party is so torn by strife between its leaders that union on any issue seems almost impossible. It appeared to me that there is a contest between the Commons and some of the younger peers, those who have attained the peerage themselves and, therefore, do not have the inertia and conservatism of the hereditary peers, for the control of the party. Lord Rothermere is evidently trying to build up a new party, the United Empire Party, the basis of the Conservative Party, the issue being free trade within the empire and a duty on foreign food stuffs coming in from outside, a sort of a Chinese wall around the British Empire. It will be interesting to follow the developments.

SAVE-A-LIFE

Campaign Now In Progress Is To Cut Down Maine's Accident Rate

Official details of the "Save-A-Life" campaign and motor vehicle inspection of all automobiles and trucks in this State from Aug. 1 to Aug. 31, inclusive which is authorized by proclamation of Gov. Gardner, are announced by Edgar C. Smith, Secretary of State.

"Brakes, lights, horns, steering mechanism, windshield wipers, mirrors, and number plates will be the salient points of inspection," said Edgar C. Smith, "since these parts or equipment are among the first to become defective, and when defective are responsible for a large number of the serious accidents that take place every year. The official inspection is due to the cooperation of garages, automobile dealers, repair shops, and service stations in every community of the State which have indicated their willingness to serve as official inspection stations and make the required examination of all motor vehicles."

Leading motor organizations, civic and commercial bodies, chambers of commerce, and railroads have expressed their willingness to cooperate with the "Save-A-Life" movement.

The "Save-A-Life" campaign is really an intensified effort to cut down the accident rate in Maine, and to make the State a model in this respect. The campaign is directed solely against reckless driving and mechanical defects that are apt to develop in the safety factors of cars and trucks under service conditions, because such defects are one of the leading causes of motor accidents. It is the belief of safety authorities throughout the United States that if all motor vehicles could be quickly and easily controlled by their drivers, the accident rate would rapidly diminish.

"The 'Save-A-Life' campaign is a national movement in this direction by men who take the leading role," the Secretary of State said.

The official method of the campaign in automobile inspection will be:

1. Every automobile and truck in the State to be inspected by a competent mechanic in a reliable service station to be designated and appointed with the approval of the Secretary of State and the Chief of the State Highway Police, and if the car or truck is found to be unsafe, or to have mechanical defects, it must be put in a safe condition before an official inspection sticker will be affixed to the windshield.
2. Official inspection stickers will be issued to all cars and trucks that have been examined and found in a good condition, or that have been put into good condition after being examined and found to need adjustment.
3. In order to remove any possible cause for resentment, inconvenience, hardships, or loss of time on the part of the automobile or truck owner, the motor vehicle owner is at liberty to choose any official station he prefers.
4. Any adjustment or repair found necessary to insure safe operation, made at the owner's order and with his permission, will be charged for at the usual rate of charge for such mechanical service by the station. Any agreement in this connection is solely between the motor vehicle owner and the inspection station.

5. Brakes, lights, horns, steering mechanism, mirrors, windshield wipers, and number plates will be the chief points of inspection.

6. Brake Performance Requirements: Foot brakes—two-wheel brakes, car going 20 m. p. h. must stop in 37 feet. Foot brakes—four-wheel brakes, car going 20 m. p. h. must stop in 22 feet. Emergency brakes, car going 20 m. p. h. must stop in 75 feet. Note—If a brake-testing device is used, the equivalent of the above is required.

7. Horn Inspection: Press button and determine whether mechanism gives sufficient warning.

8. Steering Mechanism: Steering parts should appear to be sufficiently strong and in good mechanical condition in respect to wear so as not to indicate any possibility of breaking under ordinary conditions or affecting the steering in any manner, thereby causing an accident. Any play in the steering mechanism must be adjusted.

9. Mirror Requirements: Every taxicab, commercial motor vehicle, motor truck or trailer so constructed, equipped, loaded or used that the driver or operator is prevented from having a clear view of the highway immediately in the rear must be equipped with a mirror. Such mirror must be at least six inches in diameter or length, and must be adjusted so as to give the operator a clear view of the highway in the rear of the vehicle for at least a distance of 50 feet.

10. Lighting Requirements: (a) Every motor vehicle and trailer shall be equipped with a pair of lamps, one on the right side and one on the left side, and shall be equipped with bulbs not to exceed 32 candle-power. Bulbs showing signs of blackening or a whitish discoloration inside of the glass are inefficient and should be discarded. (b) All bulbs which are burned out or are dimly shining and be replaced. (c) Headlights must be of a type approved by the Secretary of State with bright reflectors, and properly adjusted and focused. (d) All motor vehicles must be equipped with tail lamps, and must have red lens. (e) Every motor vehicle of seven feet or over in width shall have thereon at the rear end a red light on the body one amber lamp visible for a distance of at least 200 feet ahead of such vehicle.

11. Windshield Wipers: The Maine law does not require a windshield wiper, but if a car is equipped with a windshield wiper, it is well for the inspector to see if it is in workable condition. The department urges the equipment of all motor vehicles with hand or automatic wipers as a measure of safety.

12. Registration (License) Number Plates: Each number plate displayed shall be horizontal and shall be so fastened as not to swing, one on the front and the other on the rear, and the lower edge shall be at least 12

STILL "ON THE GO"

"Uncle Fernando" Sees Peaks Island—Meets Comrades in Bay State

Boston, July 28.
Editor of The Courier-Gazette:

I think my last letter left me in Portland, about to visit Peak's Island. I found it to be one of the most beautiful spots I have seen on the coast of Maine. I spent one night there, and a part of two days and visited several G.A.R. comrades, among them, the author of "The Bronze Button" of which many thousands of copies have been scattered all over the United States. I visited the 8th Maine reunion headquarters camp, a big building, more like a good sized hotel than a camp, where any old veteran, or relative can find a room and good bed for $1 a day (with privilege to cook) including table and dishes. The building stands on the most prominent place on the shore and commands a view of the whole island as well as a vast expanse of ocean. The 5th Maine Regiment has a similar place, almost adjoining.

Leaving there I went back to the city and thence to Boston on "The Flying Yankee" (no "airial" for me) thence to Marlboro, meeting more "comrades" on a picnic with their ladies (W.R.C.) on the shore of "Boon Pond" an historical spot. The first settler named Boon was killed and scalped by Indians. A stone marker shows where that happened. I visited it.

At this picnic I met several former Warren people. One man at one time was at the head of the Warren shoe factory. One lady was a schoolmate of Warren's famous twins (Mrs. G. A. Miller and Mrs. Vinal).

There are more than 400 camps and cottages on the shores of Boon Lake or pond. I was taken on a motor boat ride about eight or ten miles and also assisted at a flag raising there. My next move was to Walpole for Saturday night. Sunday morning I motored to Boston to meet the St. John boat and got a friend of my host—Arthur Taylor, formerly of South Hope. He took me to Concord and Lexington to visit, or rather re-visit the spot "where the 'first shot' etc. The place at the 'bridge' has been changed a little since I saw it last—made more beautiful, at least the lane or road leading to it. There I met an auto load of people all the way from Illinois, just coming for the first time. They had a 'guide' from Boston, and were just 'learning history'—hungry for it. Well time and space, and your patience, forbids more this time—even "Tom Thumb Golf" in which I was an onlooker.

OVERNIGHT, the marvel of Free Wheeling with positive gear control has captured motoring America. Studebaker's initiative in developing and perfecting this exclusive feature, manufactured under Studebaker patents, is the subject of world-wide compliment.

Yet, the limelight of motordom's approval is no new experience for Studebaker.

Look back to July 21—August 9, 1928. You find the President Eight traveling 30,000 miles in 26,326 minutes—a feat that established 5 world and 18 international records; that made The President undisputed champion of the world.

That accomplishment still stands unmatched and unchallenged. Yet, today's brilliant new President Eight, offering you Free Wheeling with positive gear control, is a larger, more powerful, more beautiful edition of this World Champion car. Now it gives you world championship stamina and speed—plus Free Wheeling!

The benefits of Free Wheeling are manifold—

You shift from high to second, back and forth, at 40—50 miles an hour, and never touch the clutch.

You need use the clutch only to start or back up.

The braking power of your engine is available as readily as in conventional cars.

For the first time in a motor car you get the full benefit of momentum automatically. When your car has gone 10,000 miles your engine has "worked" only 8,000 miles.

You save 12 per cent on gasoline, 20 per cent on oil—even more in heavy traffic.

Strains on engine, transmission and axle are lessened. Tires wear longer.

There is nothing new to learn—Free Wheeling with positive gear control is simplicity itself. You drive just as you do in a conventional car.

Free Wheeling is an epochal contribution to motoring—a brilliant milestone in Studebaker's 78 years of manufacturing progress.

Arrange today to drive the President a World Champion seasoned Eight, with Free Wheeling. We promise you the thrill of your life

WHY THE BLACK HILLS?

"Black Hills" is a literal translation of the name given to the mountainous region in western South Dakota, by the Sioux Indians. In the Dakota tongue the name was Paha Sapa, alluding to the dark and somber aspect of the pine-clad heights as seen from the plains. These heights really deserve to be called mountains. Harney Peak, with an elevation of 7,242 feet above sea level is higher than any peak in the Appalachian or Ozark ranges. There are several other peaks in the Black Hills with altitudes of 6,000 feet or more.
