Now Perhaps You Understand How Item About His Boat Got To Egypt

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

I note in the Oct. 18 edition of your valued paper that Capt. Charles Kalloch read an article which was taken from an Egyptian paper named "The Sphinx," printed in Egypt, which stated that my boat had arrived safe at her home port in Rockland, Maine.

An Event For Local Musicians As Well As Public—"Kirk" To Direct

One of the determining factors in securing the War Department's permission for public concert tours by the U. S. Army Band was that such tours would have inspirational and educational aspects.

THREE-TIMES-A-WEEK

Rockland, Me., Oct. 23, 1930.
Personally appeared Frank S. Lynde, who on oath declares that he is the printer of the issue of this paper of Oct. 21, 1930, there was printed a total of 6,245 copies.

Notary Public.

Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.—Prov. 27.1.

Enthusiastic reports were brought back by the members of the Parent-Teacher Association who attended the State convention in Gardiner. Particular pride was shown in the report made by Mrs. Mary Flanagan, president of the local organization. When Mrs. Flanagan announced that the "Rockland organization intends always to have a working fund of $800 on hand," she was greeted with applause and gasps of astonishment, for no other unit in the State had a similar record to offer. Mrs. Hazen Sawyer, State president, paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. Flanagan, not only for her accomplishment in the Rockland Parent-Teacher Association, but as a mother and member of the community; and also had high praise for the Rockland body, saying that she came to Rockland last year to provide stimulus and inspiration for the members, and was surprised to find them giving her those requisites necessary for successful organizations. An outstanding feature of the convention was the address on "Personality" given by Miss Maud Thayer, dean of Westbrook Seminary and Junior College.

The 36th annual convocation of the New England Dental Society is taking place in Boston this week. Dental clinics presided over by some of the leaders in the various branches of dentistry will be outstanding features of the sessions which will be held at the Forsyth Dental Infirmary in the Fenway. The importance of proper food in correcting bodily ills which include the teeth and oral cavity will be stressed throughout the meetings. Experts who will take an active part in the sessions include Dr. H. C. Sherman of the department of chemistry of New York, Dr. Walter Elliott Taylor of the Michigan Dental College, Dr. John Posner of New York, Dr. W. W. Wright of the School of Dentistry, University of Pittsburgh, and Dr. Robert M. Box of Toronto, noted radiologist and periodontologist. During the week a number of noted dentists will give a series of radio talks over WEEI. Among the local dentists attending are Dr. B. E. Flanders, Dr. R. W. Bickford and Dr. E. W. Peaslee.

The Lions Club yesterday received an invitation to be present at the charter night exercises of the new Winthrop Club Nov. 17. A guest at the meeting yesterday was Rev. Joseph H. Bessom, rector of the Episcopal Church in Hallowell. It was voted to send greetings to J. N. Southard, and the members learned with pleasure that while this brother is still a very sick man, that he is gaining. "Parson" Ralph P. Constant delivered an abstract of the speech he was supposed to have made at Wiscasset the other night. Through the courtesy of the Cunard Line, represented locally by M. F. Lovejoy, an interesting travel picture was shown, the projection being in charge of Alvary Gay.

Frank T. MacDonald, "The mason" of 18 Dutton avenue, has been welding the brush again, and the result is an interesting oil painting now on exhibition in the display window of the Rockland Hardware Co. Mr. MacDonald has never had the benefit of instruction as an artist, but displays considerable native ability in his productions and in the selection of his subjects. "Lindy" is featured in this latest picture along with mountains, a waterfall, etc. Mr. MacDonald hails from Belfast, but for the past five years has been a resident of Rockland, specializing in the construction of brick and stone fireplaces.

Providence Journal: Miss Ruth C. Coombs, since 1921 head of the circulation department at the Providence Public Library, has been appointed reader's advisor. In this capacity she will have charge of the library's activities in the field of adult education. This includes the preparation of reading and study courses for individual readers, and advice to those who are interested in informal methods. Miss Coombs is a graduate of Pembroke College, class of 1919, and her early experience in the library was obtained as librarian at Sprague House Branch. She will assume her duties Nov. 1.

"It's time to start knitting mittens for the kiddies this winter" writes Miss Helen Corbett, city matron. "For the last four or five years 100 to 300 pairs of mittens have been knitted by the women of Rockland each winter. The need is just as great, if not greater. There are more kiddies now who will need them. If one cannot knit, one can buy yarn, and the yarn can be placed where knitting can be done. The late Miss Helen Pendleton used to knit from 20 to 50 pairs every winter. I will guarantee to produce enough little hands for all the mittens sent in. Start now."

Col. Walter H. Butler, Counsellor Raymond E. Thurston and Harold E. Jackson are spending a few days at Great Works Stream, guests of Supervisor Joseph Stickney at the warden's camp. One of the "warriors" taken along is a camera, and the chances are that those who attend the fall meeting of the Knox County Fish & Game Association will have an opportunity to see just what the adventurous Rockland trio did up in the big woods. The fall meeting, by the way, will be held in St. George, probably Nov. 7.

Knox County paving cutters were holding a parley in this city yesterday preliminary to the conference which will later be held with the manufacturers concerning the new bill of prices which will go into effect next May. Yesterday's sessions were held at the Thorndike Hotel.

"ON MY SET"

One of the most popular radio entertainments of the week is the concert by the American Legion Band, which comes over WEEI at 9 o'clock Wednesday nights. It was particularly good.

The radio broadcasts of the big football games are having many followers.

Many members of the Lucky Strike Danes Orchestra, popular member of the radio family, are talented soloists, concert masters and orchestra leaders "on their own hook." Ross Gorman can perform expertly on 21 instruments. Andy Sannella is the master of 17, while B. A. Rolfe, director of the orchestra, is an accomplished cornetist.

The new Chicago headquarters of the NBC houses the largest broadcasting studio in the world. Six studios occupy more than 240,000 cubic feet of space, with 56,000 square feet of sound-proof material used to insure quiet operation. In this modern world's largest building, the Merchandise Mart, a staff of 300 employees and 400 artists and entertainers find employment.

It is a welcome announcement that the RCA radiotron feature broadcasts are being resumed tonight, when over WEEI at 10 o'clock Rosa Ponselle, fresh from her premiere in the opera "Traviata" in London, will lend her beautiful soprano voice to the program.

Another opportunity to study music appreciation "on the air" has been announced in the eight radio lectures on that subject offered by the Division of University Extension, State Department of Education, to be given over WBZ at 2 p. m. each Thursday by Dorothy Tremble Moyer, New England Conservatory of Music and secretary of the Boston Civic Association. Folk music of various countries and suite and sonata forms of music will come under discussion in this series.

The Armstrong broadcast taking place each Friday night over WBZ at 10 o'clock is featuring an unique series—"My Husband at Home" given by the wives of celebrities. Mrs. Will Rogers and Mrs. Edgar Guest have already told their stories, and tomorrow night Mrs. Arthur Pryor will tell of the long career of her husband, the famous bandmaster, his hobbies and eccentricities. Mr. Pryor from what we know of him is about the average American man, loves golf and fishing, and seldom goes any place in his car without having his fishing rods and clubs in the back seat.

The two large brick ovens which were formerly used by the Consolidated Baking Co., are being removed by Gus Snowman and crew of four men the equipment having been bought by Isidor Gordon. The materials are being stored in the ice manufactory on Tillson avenue. The removal of the ovens is in order to furnish room for Alden Ulmer's repair shop which is also located in the Park street building, and which is known as the Park Square Garage.

THE TILLSON LINKS

Big Time Expected At Opening of New Miniature Golf Course

Miniature golf, the nation's new amusement, is bursting upon us in all its glory. For many days the peewee sport has been in the budding stage on Tillson avenue. Now comes the blossom—the bow of the indoor sport and the time is Saturday evening, November 1. Dick Skinner, Eastern Massachusetts putting champion has been imported to lend color to this unique and entertaining event and suitable competition has been engaged to make the going interesting for the Bay State title holder in an 18-hole exhibition match to sort of start the ball a-rolling correctly.

No expense has been spared to furnish exquisite entertainment, either in picturesqueness of surrounding or intricacy and interest of play. For several weeks scenic artists and carpenters have waved their magic wands transforming what was a decaying structure into Fairyland. But what is equally important the hand of master golf course designers and builders have contributed their bit and provided an All America course—the 1931 model—almost a reproduction of New England's most popular playground—that which has broken all records for receipts over a given period.

Rockland's new golf venture, to be explicit, vies with the most pretentious in other cities. No detail from parking to pecking has been overlooked by the local sponsors of a business that is now a gigantic enterprise in America. To go into minute detail of all that the Tillson Miniature Golf Links will offer would detract somewhat from the list of surprises ahead for the visitor. But this much can be said, and much be left of the pleasing picture, which summed in a nutshell consists of large putting areas—the most expensive putting material on the market—a series of interesting golf shots from beginning to end—both the natural and the artificial—brilliant lighting arrangements—color everywhere, all blending harmoniously with everything—just the sort of place mother and dad, sister and brother, granddad and grandma and all the relations will delight to play on, or relax nearby and watch the happy folks while away dull care and idle moments.

And, if Saturday evening isn't some night, and if putters are not working overtime something is wrong in Rome.

PLEASANT VALLEY FAIR

F. L. S. Morse, master of Pleasant Valley Grange has announced these committees for the annual fair to take place Friday, Oct. 31: F. L. S. Morse, general chairman; ice cream, E. M. Tolman, Brother and Sister Huntley, Miss Marian Weymouth; fish pond, Susan M. Spear, Evelyn Bartlett and Mildred Sprague; dance, Ellis Sprague, Clarence Wyllie and into Fairyland; baby show, Mrs. A. J. Moody, Mrs. Clarence Beverage and Mrs. Alice Wyllie; advertising, O. Gardner and Bessie Sullivan; supper, Mrs. Belle Bowley, Mrs. Julia Post, Mrs. Pauline Quinn, Brother and Sister Fitzgerald; flower table, Mrs. Adella Veazie, Miss Irene Weymouth and Miss Marvyn Blackington; vegetables, Frank Post, A. S. Bartlett, J. A. Tolman and F. A. Blackington; fancy table, Mrs. Alice Wyllie, Miss Lucy Quinn and Ver-nette Cross; aprons, Mrs. Nettie Far-land, Ruth Delano and Eunice Morse canned fruits, Edith Hallowell and Evangeline Winchenbaugh; entertainment, Mildred Sprague, Robert McIntosh and Bessie Sullivan; candy table, Dorothy Blackington, Audrey Teel and Myrtle Sprague.

TALK OF THE TOWN

G. Carl Cassens is back with the Central Maine staff after a fortnight's vacation.

Ralph Shaw of Washington paid $10 and costs ($17.22 in all) in Municipal Court this morning for hunting without a license.

Franz M. Simmons is back in Rockland with the string of horses which he has been training so successfully the past season.

Shots of the Legion parade in Boston will be seen at the Strand Friday and Saturday. There will be a W. C. Fields golf comedy at the Park.

Carl H. Sonntag, John M. Richardson, James F. Carver and Joseph W. Robinson were yesterday elected members of the Chamber of Commerce directorate.

When the whistle blows in the Harvard Stadium Saturday afternoon there will be at least one dyed-in-the-wool Rockland football fan on hand to see what the Crimson can do.

Deputy Collector Herbert W. Thorndike is having his annual vacation, one week of which will be devoted to bird hunting in Waldo County with his old pal, Charles R. Coombs. Mrs. Thorndike accompanied him to Belfast.

Frank A. Roberts of Belfast was arrested by State Patrolman Pray and Deputy Sheriff Ludwick on the outskirts of Camden last night, charged with drunken driving. He furnished bail in the sum of $300, and the trial was set for Friday morning.

Tickets for the police ball were delivered to the department yesterday and the extent to which these boys are going to be encouraged may be judged from the fact that one patrolman disposed of 130 yesterday without skipping a single stride on his beat.

Charles L. Robinson has rejoined Burpee & Lamb staff, after being confined to the house several weeks by illness. The Chaplainized moustache has gone into the discard as it so altered his appearance that even his most intimate friends failed to recognize him.

With only 6 feet and 9 inches of water over the intake Mirror Lake reached its lowest level of the season last Friday when the last record was made. Since that time there have been two rainfalls—one 48-100ths of an inch and one 9-100ths of an inch. In spite of the protracted dry spell the lake did not get quite so low as it did last year.

ROCKPORT

Mrs. Carrie Warren is visiting her sister in Waldo for a few weeks.

The annual inspection of Harbor Light Chapter took place Tuesday evening with Mrs. Belle Frost, D. D. W. G. M. of Rockland as inspecting officer. The hall was well filled by members and guests, the following Chapters being represented: Seaside Chapter of Camden, Golden Rod of Rockland, Grace of Thomaston, Ivy of Warren, Forget-me-not of South Thomaston and Orient of Union.

The work was exemplified in a very impressive manner by Worthy Matron Orra Burns and her corps of officers. At the close, Mrs. Frost in her usual graceful and pleasing manner commended the Chapter on the excellent work and offered valuable and helpful suggestions. As Rockport was her girlhood home, she has many friends in town who were glad to have the opportunity of greeting her in her official capacity. She was presented with a nice gift from the chapter in appreciation of her services for the evening. Inter-esting remarks were made by Past Grand Patron Albert H. Newbert of Golden Rod Chapter. Preceding the work a picnic supper was served with Mrs. Hildred Rider, Mrs. O. P. Jackson, Mrs. Ada Clough and Mrs. Mae Spear in charge. The banquet hall and tables were very attractive with Halloween decorations.

Carnival Notes

A "Bigger and Better Carnival" for Rockport this year is assured. The whole town is united with that aim in view. Individually and collectively they are giving of their time and services. A number of local organizations and individuals have already pledged to take booths, be responsible for the procuring of their products by solicitation, and turn the entire profits over to the school, among these being the Methodist Ladies' Aid, Baptist Ladies', Sewing Circle, Harbor Light Chapter, Trydelp Chapter, Stewart Orphen and Walter Carroll, and it is believed that many more will fall in line. The proceeds of the carnival will be used to defray the expenses of the senior class trip to Washington and the amount, if any remaining, will be applied to the Alumni Educational Fund. The giving away of a Ford Trol to some fortunate one has proven a great incentive to the rapid sale of tickets.

The Library Building Association will hold a public card party on the evening of Oct. 28 at the spacious and attractive home of Mrs. Adelaide Morrill, Mechanic street, the proceeds of which will be added to the fund for the erection of a new public library building. Table reservations may be made by communicating with Mrs. Leola Mann. Refreshments will be served.

A Halloween party will take place Oct. 29 under the auspices of Harbor Light Club at the Masonic banquet hall. Mrs. Hildred Rider, Miss Helen Small, Mrs. Alice Marston and Mrs. Louise Cavanaugh will have charge of the affair and they promise a good time for all who attend.

Mrs. Chester Pooley and son Chester of Camden and Mrs. Louise Cavanaugh were recent dinner guests of Mrs. Blanche Carver.

Mrs. Harry Lane has joined her husband at Seaport where she will remain for a few days.

Mrs. Elizabeth J. Savage of Bangor, department counselor, will inspect Fred A. Norwood, W.R.C. Friday evening. Supper will be served.

STRAND THEATRE

Nancy Carroll and Charles Rogers, whose gay antics in "Close Harmony" so delighted audiences everywhere, are again to be seen as a co-starring team in Paramount's new Technicolor production of last year's well remembered Schrah and the Mandel musical comedy success "Follow Thru," at Strand Theatre Friday and Saturday.

In "Follow Thru," appropriately enough, Miss Carroll is cast as a woman's golf champion. And a right smart champion she makes too. Charles Rogers is a famous "pro." They meet at the Mission Club tournament following a match which Nancy, through poor putting, loses to Thelma Todd, the Woman's National Champion. Rogers takes one look at Nancy's sky blue eyes and offers to help her with her golf. And Nancy, after one or two long glances at the handsome Rogers, decides that he alone can help her game. But there are complications which come to life in the person of the beautiful Thelma Todd, who tells Nancy that she and Rogers are more than friends. The story is worked out in a manner that is a delight to watch the inevitable manner which is Nancy's and Rogers'.

Two other important roles are expertly played by Zelma O'Neal and Jack Haley. Miss O'Neal, a pert Irish lass if there ever was one, is the girl who made "Button Up Your Overcoat" famous. In the picture she sings this number again in a manner that is a delight to watch and listen to.—adv.

H. J. Kramer of Manchester, N. H., who has lately entered the employ of a local public service corporation, appeared on Main street yesterday afternoon wearing one of the flat dicers which an unkind decree of fashion has forced upon mankind. He was enjoying his walk, the October ozone, and world in general until Robert A. Huzzey, a High School junior piped the lid and burst into song. It was a refrain very familiar in the days when they used to wear flat dicers—"Where Did You Get That Hat?" Kramer showed his resentment by swatting Robert on the forehead, and was duly arrested by Patrolman McIntosh. Kramer subsequently apologized, but in court this morning was fined $10 and costs, amounting in all to $18.54.

Dec. 3—Annual fair of Methodist Church.

Miss Katherine Veazie has been substituting for Miss Eleanor Griffith at the Junior High School.

The Knox County Men's Chorus is to give a concert in the Thomaston Baptist Church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

The Home for Aged Women has been greatly cheered this week by beautiful gladioli from the garden of Mrs. A. O. Start, West Rockport.

The rummage sale conducted last week by the Improvement Society of the Universalist Church netted over $134, a tidy sum to be turned into the floor fund.

Harold Joyce, of the U.S.S. Kickapoo, who has been having 15 days' leave, spent one week at Whitinsville, Mass., and the rest at his home in Rockland and returns to the ship today.

Mrs. F. S. Rhodes, who has been spending the past few weeks in Brookline, Mass., called by the death of Mrs. L. H. Rhodes, returned home Tuesday. She has been visiting in several places.

Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Peaslee leave today for Boston to attend the New England Dental convention. Dr. Peaslee is to conduct a clinic on "Practical Office Help" Saturday morning.

Golden Rod Chapter, O.E.S., will have Grace Chapter of Thomaston and Wivurna Chapter of Waldoboro as guests Friday night. Supper at 6 under the direction of Mrs. Mary Ladd and Mrs. Grace Veazie.

New entries at the Rockland Commercial College include: Shirley Jellison of Swain's Island and Ruth Huntley of Rockport for the day school; Harold Gross and Evans Freedman of Rockland for the evening school.

Miriam Rebekah Lodge is to hold its annual fall fair Tuesday, Nov. 4, with a sale of articles in the afternoon and a public supper at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Alta Dimick is general chairman with Mrs. Annie Aylward in charge of the supper. The regular meeting in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Cotton and son Robert who have been occupying an apartment at The Creek in Thomaston have moved to the downstairs apartment of the Mrs. Arthur Pillsbury house on Green street. Mrs. Cotton, a member of the Rubinstein Club, is an accomplished cellist.

The younger scouts of Blue Bonnet Troop enjoyed a hike to Juniper Hill and Glen Cove yesterday under the direction of Lieut. Irene Lundén. The elder scouts studied trail laying in Lindsey grove under the direction of two of the first-class scouts in preparation of first-class tests to be passed in the near future.

The dancing public will be interested to know that Joe Roman and his Pennsylvanians will make their season's debut Oct. 28 in Temple hall. The drive has had a remarkably successful summer season. This is the orchestra selected by "Zits" as the outstanding drive of New England and is admittedly the college favorite.

An event which always draws considerable patronage from this section of the county is the annual Harvest Home at Appleton. This fall it comes on next Wednesday night, and Riverside hall is the place. The program calls for a baked bean supper from 5 to 8, a sale of fancy articles and refreshments and an auction sale of vegetables.

Something of a sensation was created at the Thorndike Hotel yesterday when Frank received a telegram stating that he had been a winner in the Canadian race lottery and that his share might be $36,000. At last accounts the popular day clerk had bought no steam yacht or established any peevee golf courses on the strength of what is said to be coming to him.

Trainer's bakery has an attractive new store at the corner of Main and Elm streets. The building has been thoroughly renovated inside and out. The interior is white with sanitary display cases for the toothsome pastry. One section is devoted to candies and ice cream is also sold. Canned foods and light groceries are available. The store will be open evenings. It is in charge of Miss Mildred Gray and Mrs. Fannie Chandler.

Scores of Knox County teachers are in Bangor for the State convention which will be held today and tomorrow. Miss Anna E. Coughlin, dean of Rockland High School, is chairman of the department of "Deans of Women and Advisers of Girls." One of the speakers in this departmental session will be Mrs. Evelyn Butler Phillips of Rockland High School. A Waldoboro teacher, Miss Agnes L. Creamer is secretary of the department of "Rural Helping Teachers."

Nilo's Repair Shop, Spring street, will be open Saturday nights hereafter for the special convenience of out-of-town patrons. Greasing, head-light adjusting etc. 114-11

The Robishaw residence on Columbia avenue has undergone quite extensive repairs.

A large class of candidates is shaping up for King Hiram Council's work meeting which will be held Friday Nov. 7.

Freeman S. Young is enlarging his residence at the corner of Ocean and Main streets and will convert the stable into a two-car garage.

The next football game at Community Park will find two ancient rivals lining up when the whistle blows—Rockland High vs. Camden High.

"Sonny Boy" Dwyer of St. George is a member of the Bowdoin football squad. He showed up very well in practice with the second team last Saturday.

Navy Day will be observed Oct. 27. No local observance is planned, but there will be an elaborate special program at the U. S. Navy yard, Portsmouth.

Higgins Classical Institute defeated Maine Central Institute 7 to 0 Saturday, and Captain Monaghan of Higgins is mentioned as one of the stars. The St. George boy is bound to make good.

Penobscot Encampment of Belfast visited Rockland Encampment last night bringing 15 candidates. The Rockland team conferred the degrees. A 6 o'clock supper was served by the Rebekahs.

"Has anyone a parlor and kitchen stove to donate?" asks City Matron Corbett. "The two are needed very badly. I can also use plenty of comforters or blankets, now that the cold weather has set in. Telephone between 9 and 10, and 2 and 3—953-W.

Rockland patrons of Beach Inn, Lincolnville, will be interested to learn that the proprietors held a family party last evening in honor of the 14th birthday of Miss Mattie Burgess. The occasion was in the nature of a very pleasant surprise for that young lady who is now a student at Camden High School. Beach Inn closes Friday night, Oct. 31.

The Rockland contingent which attended the annual chicken supper given by the Ladies' Aid of the North Waldoboro Church Tuesday night found that the praise which had been bestowed on former occasions was now exaggerated. The church has a splendid force of workers and it seems that every woman in the community must be a star cook. Chicken, done just to the proper turn, was flanked on all sides by fixins' that would have done credit to any hotel dinner and the most delicious cake and pastry.

The troop committee of Troop 1, Boy Scouts of America, at a meeting held with the Scoutmaster, Edgar W. Dorr, Monday evening, made plans for the coming season and elected Raymond Pendleton, assistant scoutmaster. The first meeting of the troop will be held next Wednesday evening, at 7:30 sharp. This troop is sponsored by the First Baptist Church and the members of the troop committee are Charles H. Morey, chairman; Frank H. Ingraham, vice chairman; Rev. J. Charles MacDonald, Hiram H. Crie, Osmond A. Palmer, Frank S. Prescott and Franklin H. Wood.

The Salvation Army motto, as applied to its religious activities is: "Go for Souls; Go for the Worst." The local branch during the past year held 99 open air meetings, 260 inside meetings (with an attendance of 5615) and made 29 converts. The young people's activities have been a prominent feature of the Army's work. The Sunday School attendance was 1722; the Band of Love (sewing class) had an attendance of 706; the public Y. P. meetings were attended by 2557. The religious training classes were attended by 135 and there were present at socials and other meetings 784. The total number of young people's meetings was 287, with a total attendance of 5904. Forty-two converts were made.

Mrs. Beulah Ames, Mrs. Abbie Hanson, Mrs. Florence Ellis, Miss Leola Robinson, Miss Addie Young, Mrs. Russell Davis, Miss Doris Sylvester, Miss Bernice Maloney and Mrs. Violet Billings of the Rockland office of the Central Maine Power Company were in Augusta yesterday where they attended a meeting of the Woman's Division of Greenway, Dover-Foxcroft, Bridgton, Norway, Rockland, Augusta and vicinity. About 170 were present at the meetings in the administration building, when addresses were given by Walter S. Wyman, president of the company, John S. Everett, auditor, Alton T. Littlefield, department of public relations and Harold D. Jennings, treasurer. At the afternoon session Rev. Hilda Libby Ives of Portland, Miss Stella MacElveny, also of Portland, and others were speakers. Mrs. MacElveny's talk was on "Conquest of the Elements," vividly illustrated by moving pictures of last winter's storm which did such widespread damage in Augusta, Portland and vicinity. Dinner was served at noon at the South Parish Congregational church.

More than 425,000 persons have been trained in first aid under the American Red Cross. More than 275,000 have been given Red Cross training in life-saving.

The Declaration of Independence is firm that all men (and boys) are endowed with certain inalienable rights, including life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, which obviously includes the pursuit of fish.—Herbert Hoover.

Farmer Finds New Friend in Radio

RADIO, which to the city dweller is principally a source of entertainment, has taken its place as an important business aid to the farmer.

So diversified are the services which modern broadcasting makes available to even the most isolated farms that the radio receiver has taken its place along with other modern agricultural equipment as an indispensable adjunct to successful farming.

Radio has relegated to the past the days when a farmer depended on his weather eye or aching ear to decide whether rain was in the offing or frost would ruin his crops before morning. Gone also are the days when he shipped his live stock and other commodities without knowing market conditions at the receiving end of the line. A twist of the dial at certain times of day brings him up to the minute information from the Department of Agriculture on weather, prices and the latest scientific farming news. It places him in personal touch with the Secretary of Agriculture, bureau offices, staff scientists and economists who are in a position to take much of the guesswork out of farming.

Although discussions of modern farming methods generally center around labor saving machinery and mechanical equipment, officials of the Department of Agriculture believe the radio deserves an important place among the innovations which are making present day farming less a gamble and more of a profitable business. They at any rate are agreed that the farmer who today has no radio is working at a disadvantage which no amount of modern machinery and equipment can surmount. Especially is this true when recent developments in the radio industry are considered. The perfection of long wave tubes and batteries, which eliminate the necessity for storage batteries in sets designed for farm use, puts the farmer on a par with his city neighbors as far as radio reception is concerned.

Hors D'Oeuvres Jog Jaded Appetites

By ETIENNE ALLIO, Chef, Hotel New Yorker, New York City

NOTHING can contribute more to assure the success of the meal, whether it be a formal or informal repast, than a hors d'oeuvre, skillfully prepared, of carefully selected ingredients to insure their freshness, and served in a manner to appeal to the eye as well as to the appetite.

Whether the hors d'oeuvre be hot or cold, its chief purpose is, of course, to act as an appetizer and this it can do as much by its appearance as by its taste, for there is a full measure of truth in the old saying, "The eye does half the eating." The portions should be small, merely large enough to stimulate the appetite, without any danger of dulling the diner's zest for the dishes that are to follow.

Vienna Hors d'Oeuvre—Simmer calves liver until very tender. Chop fine and rub to a paste. To one cup of liver add one tablespoon melted butter, one-half teaspoon sugar, salt and pepper to taste, and enough thick tomato sauce to make the mixture of the right consistency to spread. Lightly toast strips of graham bread about four inches long and an inch and a quarter wide. Spread with the paste. Garnish with a border of chopped whites of hard-boiled eggs and the rice yolk. Serve cold.

Clams in Nest (Individual)—Halve a grapefruit, remove the pulp, and fill with shaved ice. Place a small glass in the center for the sauce. Place five small clams on the half shell on the ice. For the sauce mix one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, one tablespoon horseradish, one tablespoon vinegar, and one tablespoon tomato ketchup. Add two tablespoons lemon juice, one-half teaspoon sugar, one-fourth teaspoon tabasco, and one teaspoon salt. Chill by placing sauce in the glass a sufficient time before serving.

Southampton Hors d'Oeuvre—Scop out the stem ends of six whole, firm tomatoes, leaving a cone-shaped cavity. Sprinkle with pepper, salt, and a little sugar. Fill with butter. Bake in a moderate oven until tender. Just before serving place the tomatoes on the individual plates and pour over each of them two tablespoons of hot cream seasoned with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with minced parsley and serve hot on thin toast strips.

TENDING A FURNACE

Here Are Some Timely Hints If You Are Desirous of Results

To make the work of tending the household furnace a simpler job, L. Burnside, well known fuel engineer of the D. L. & W. Coal Company, has compiled some interesting data on the proper care of furnaces for the home owner.

"Most people," says Mr. Burnside, "have never been told how to properly start a fire, and so get poor results even from excellent heating plants."

The most common mistake in the handling of a household furnace is the method of refueling. Mr. Burnside states. Here is how it should be done. When recouling, the damper should be opened and the fire shaken down until a red glow appears in the ash pit. Then, and this is most important, a mound of live coals should be pulled to the front of the furnace with a shovel or hoe, and the fresh charge of coal placed at the back of the furnace so that there is always a small mound of burning embers just inside the furnace door. This small, briskly burning heap of coals burns all gases that are generated, and gives the new charge of coal a chance to burn cleanly. All ashes should be removed from the pit each time the furnace is refueled for the most satisfactory results.

The most economical and satisfactory fuel for household use, according to Mr. Burnside, is anthracite coal that is free burning and breaks into square lumps of almost uniform size. Square fracture anthracite no matter what type of company it is sold. This type of coal is colored blue now by the largest producers.

The following are some fundamental rules outlined by Mr. Burnside for the proper care and management of a furnace.

Starting the Fire: If there are ashes on the grate and they should be shaken down until an even layer only an inch or two in thickness remains. It is a waste of coal to remove all the ashes. This bed of ashes should be covered with a thin layer of coal. If the grate is clean, a layer of coal should be placed over it, before the kindling is put on.

Then a kindling of paper and wood should be placed on the grate and, after the turn damper on the furnace pipe and the fire door slide and ash door flap are opened, the kindling should be lighted. It is a common mistake to keep the slide on the furnace door shut while starting a fire, according to Mr. Burnside.

When the kindling is burning briskly, the fire should be covered with a light charge of coal and the turn damper partially closed. The ash door flap and the furnace door slide should be kept open until all of the wood is burned and the coal properly ignited. Then, if a slow fire is wanted, all dampers should be closed, and the fire door slide left slightly open.

Medium Fire: For a medium fire open the damper in the furnace pipe part way and partially open the ash door flap. The fire door slide should be shut and the ashes shaken down until a slight glow appears through the grate in the ash pit. To obtain more heat, the ash door flap should be opened fully and the turn damper opened a little more.

Banking the Fire: The last rules outlined by Mr. Burnside apply to the banking of the fire. He points out that banking a fire is a very important process because the banked fire usually stays without attention all night or during the absence of the tender, and so it must be banked correctly if the best results are to be obtained. So to bank the fire, fill the fire pot to the line of the fire door at least, but the small heap of live coals pulled to the front of the furnace with each new charge should never be covered. Then the damper and ash door flap should be entirely closed. The door slide and the check damper (that's the little flap in back of the turn damper on the furnace pipe) should be opened. If these things are done, the little pile of bright embers in front of your furnace door will burn any gases that develop in the closely confined fire pot and keep them from coming through the open door slide, and besides, you will have a fire burning and ready for enlarging over a long period of time.

HOPE

Harvesting of fruit, flowers and vegetables is drawing to a close. Frost has been late in visiting this locality, a fact generally appreciated.

Mrs. Rose Wilder, Miss Frances True and E. T. Wilder closed their cottage last week and left for a visit with relatives in Surry before returning to their home in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Nancy Payson Brown of Waltham, Mass., was for a few days guest of her niece Mrs. E. N. Hobbs and family.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wellman of South Hope visited relatives here last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brown and family of West Newton, Mass., recently spent a few days at their cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Preston of East Benton were callers at L. P. True's one day last week. Mrs. Preston was formerly Miss Mary Waterman of this town and friends were very glad to greet them after many years' absence.

Dr. P. O. Bartlett, Russell Bartlett and children and H. H. Payson of Rockland were recent visitors at the home of Miss Elizabeth Bartlett.

Maine Boy is Brightest

FROM three to twelve. That's the period which is most important to your child's development. And that's the time many are retarded mentally and physically by constipation.

Watch your child, mother! At the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, headache, biliousness, lack of energy or appetite, give a little California Fig Syrup.

This pure vegetable product cleanses a child's bowels without discomfort. No danger of forming the laxative habit when California Fig Syrup is used. For it tones and strengthens weak bowels. In colds or children's diseases, employ its gentle aid to keep the system from becoming clogged with germs or waste.

Mothers everywhere are eager to tell of the benefits secured by their children. Mrs. C. R. Reddy, Jr., 150 Congress St., Portland, says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Chas. Reddy, 3rd, for four years in cases of upsets, bad breath, coated tongue or constipation. It keeps him the brightest, happiest six-year-old I know."

Look for the name California when buying. That is on every carton of the genuine, for your protection.

Barbara at the Cat Banquet

By LEETE STONE

FOR a stranger some places are more lonesome than others; more lengthily removed from the snugness of home. Barbara Joyce thought Greenwich Village the loneliest place in the world. Cloistered, as she was, in a cheap little room over an Italian oasis of gaiety, she wondered, between times of getting home from work and going to bed, how one could be within sound of so many merry-makers and still be left in such utter solitude.

Barbara Joyce was a small town girl. She had hopefully sought independence and a rainbow future in the glittering city where millions are ever seeking the same combination.

One eventful night, with all the myriad village cowpaths to choose from she selected a new trail to her friendless room from the Bleeker street "L" station. She threaded a way through the mass of floes and jetsam that flock from the four corners of the world—that Mecca of all nations, where it does not seem possible that so many grimy, pathetic children could exist; so many raucously conflicting noises be heard; so many noxious smells be smelled, and so many weirdly flung gutter fires be lit from barrel hoops and dirty staves.

Near the end of a narrow street that led into her own she approached a neatly caparisoned gasoline station. There was a cleanly swept cement platform near the door to the office. Resting on this platform, all in a seemingly row, paws and tails correctly placed and neatly curled, were nineteen cats, all in one perfect attitude of resigned and wistful waiting.

Anything in the world may be seen in Greenwich Village that is undesirable; but here was a sight quite different, a hint even for America's rendezvous of arts. Barbara chose a shadowed spot near an iron railing and watched. Almost at once she noticed two taxis swerve slowly to the curb opposite the waiting cats. Two taxi drivers, husky, hard-boiled eggs with unflinching eyes, got out, each with a newspaper under his arm.

They waved their newspapers gently as they stepped over to the platform. From the cats came a faint tremor of recognition, as the newspapers were spread out with a deal of care and a faint rustling in the front of each cat's head.

The two newspapers spread, passed right by her without a glance, and disappeared into a dark doorway. They emerged almost at once, one carrying a ten-quart pail. Starting at one end of the anxious, waiting row of cats of all colors, the two taxi drivers dashed out the pail in double handfuls, by the jaws of each expectant feline, nineteen luscious little piles of chicken and chop bones topped with a generous sprinkling of spaghetti. With a purring and chewing and skillful use of delicate, soft-clad paws ensued.

A miracle, indeed, to Barbara watching in the shadow. Here was the city where nobody cared. As she revelled in the warm sensation around her heart, and started for the bare little room for the usual chop of cat can of peas, there took place the small can of the miracle. Barbara was at once less lonely.

A lean, long-nosed black kitten skirted the curb with wolf-born vigilance and came to a hesitant stand before the dinner table of nineteen.

At once from the favored assemblage arose curious backs, soft smacking curved growls and tails gently agitated from the nineteen satisfied diners.

The little black stranger faltered, gave way, and started a regretful retreat in the direction of Barbara's shadowy railing. Swift inspiration moved the lonely girl. Stooping impetuously, she swept the black blotch of fur into her arms, and started with a tiny warm companion for what for the first time seemed like home.

Walking, she bore with her an impression of a figure of a young man who had likewise watched the cat banquet from the edge of the curb across the street. She felt that he moved when she stooped to salvage the black kitten, and as she hurried down her particular alley there remained the impression that that man's footsteps kept pace with her own.

"Two I say," frank friendly tones in the nothing evil lurked, "stop a second, won't you an' tell me why you took that cat?" The girl turned rightabout and directly faced the dark figure and light voice.

"Excuse me, please! I was tipped off to that bunch of cats by a friend last night. I'm a new Express reporter just in from Indiana an' tryin' to please. They eat up human stuff, you know. Knew you liked cats the way you gathered in that one. I do, too. Maybe you'd help me dress up my yarn."

Barbara, also from Indiana, possessed the well-known feminine intuition.

"I'll do more than that, Indiana man—I'll invite you in and cook a chop for you if you'll promise to leave enough on the bone for the twentieth cat."

WASHBURN EXPLAINS

Why Farms Have Increased In the Seacoast Counties of Maine

"Several tendencies in the past few years have brought about a condition which viewed superficially may be misunderstood as meaning that agriculture is declining in the State," declared F. P. Washburn, commissioner of agriculture, in a statement designed to correct any misapprehension of the recent bulletin of the U. S. Census Bureau that the number of farms in Maine has decreased.

"Modern large scale farming has caused the buying in of smaller farms, making a decrease perhaps in the number of farms but creating a corresponding increase in size. This has been done in the interest of more economical production by machinery and other modern improvements," stated Mr. Washburn. To illustrate, the four-cow dairy cannot survive under modern conditions in competition with the 20-cow dairy since some items of overhead are the same in each case, and the small farmer cannot operate at profit under such overhead. Modern farming with machinery demands larger fields, and small rough rocky farms may well be turned back into timber, with no loss to the State. "The amount of agricultural products remains substantially the same," he declared.

"Remote areas not reached by good roads or telephone or electric service will lose in the number of farms. This is inevitable. Nor is it desirable that farms be maintained in the more remote sections away from all advantages when there is abundant land to produce all our markets can carry situated in more accessible areas, where farmers and their families may have the advantages of roads, schools and electric service.

"In the seacoast counties," Mr. Washburn pointed out, "apparent decrease in the number of farms is traceable to the purchase of these properties for summer residences. Much of the land has also been developed for cottages for summer rentals.

"Comparison of farm values in 1920 and 1925 reveals the following," he continued. "In 1920 total farm value was $204,000,000, in 1925 it dropped to $197,000,000. This is not a serious loss considering that 1920 values were still affected by the war time conditions. These figures are not yet available for 1930."

"In 1920, acreage devoted to farm lands was 5,425,968 while in 1925 the total was 5,161,428 acres. The U. S. Census report does not give us farm lands in terms of acreage for 1930 but merely the number of farms. This tendency of consolidation of farms I have spoken about may account for the apparent decrease in the number of farms. However if the loss of 5% in acreage for the five year period 1920-1925 is maintained in the same ratio for the five year period 1925-1930, for which acreage figures are not yet available, the total loss in acreage for the 10 years will be 10% indicating that nearly one-half of the 18.3% loss in the number of farms was the result of combination of areas or sale to other operators."

"The counties showing the heaviest losses between 1920-1925 were the shore counties and indications are that small shore farms have been sold for summer property, not an undesirable movement by any means since it tends to favor producing units and more home markets."

Gathering of Old Time Friends
Thirteen old time pupils of the Eastern District School with one teacher, Mrs. Jennie Patterson, met at the Fountain Wednesday of last week for their annual trip to the old school grounds, the schoolhouse having been removed many years ago.

It was an ideal day for the ride and picnic lunch which was served at noon. The company was joined at this time by another pupil, Fred Colby, who happened to be passing, and he was made guest of honor.

School was called at 1 o'clock and opened with an original song, written by Ada Smith Rogers. This was followed by the Lord's Prayer and roll call, songs and recitations, also letters read from absent schoolmates and election of these officers: President, Ada Smith Rogers; vice president, Carrie Hopkins Burns; secretary, Lottie Poole Johnson. Games were played at recess, the prize winners being Susan Hopkins, Addie Coombs, Grace Norwood, Sadie Brown, Josie Oakes, Alice Brown, Margaret Gerrish Coombs, Sadie Kay Brown, Alice Gerrish Brown, Josie Brown Oakes. School closed by singing "Till We Meet Again," with original words by Sadie Kay Brown.

The latter Day Saints opened the Western Maine convention here Oct. 19 with business session at 2:30 followed by preaching at 7 o'clock. Supper was served in the church vestry. Visitors were present from Jonesport, Rockland, Camden, Stonington, Boston and Dixfield. Sunday was a busy day with prayer meeting at 9:45 a. m. and preaching at 11 by Elder E. F. Robertson of Stonington, formerly of Nebraska.

Dinner was served at 12 o'clock and at 2:15 there was a baptism, ordination services at 3:30. Priesthood meeting and preaching at 7 p. m. by Elder Neuman Wilson of Jonesport. There were over 100 visiting Saints and the main church room was crowded at every service.

It was a wonderful conversion and Bishop E. L. Traver of Boston, member of the Rotary Club, and bishop in this church, gave an address which will long be remembered.

Modern Styling and Fast Colors Feature Inexpensive Scatter Rugs

Small Rugs in Good Taste Await the Home Maker of Modest Means

By Virginia Smith

In hotels, clubs, and office buildings, as well as in elaborate homes, one still finds carpeting used to cover entire floors. In the average American home, however, carpeting is dispensed with in most rooms.

Two reasons have been given for the passing of carpets. One is that they were difficult to keep clean and sanitary without efficient servants. The second is that carpeting involved considerable expense in recutting and refitting when the family moved from one house to another. Rooms were never the same size. With the improvement in domestic architecture in the last twenty years there came a definite fashion for uncarpeted hardwood or painted floors with small gradually there came improvement in inexpensive scatter rugs, but it has been only quite recently that we have been made pleasantly aware that some of them now feature design and color that will please the most exacting buyers and home furnishers. As a matter of fact, the improvement in moderate priced scatter rugs has been so marked that many who can afford luxurious Orientals have been attracted by the new designs, particularly those in cotton chenille which are guaranteed to be washable and color fast.

It is now possible to buy inexpensive rugs of interesting design and color that are just as effective in the modern scheme of furnishing as those which cost a young fortune. Those shown here are typical of the new colorfast cotton chenilles which have amazed interior decorators because of their ability to withstand frequent laundering without loss of color or shape.

Let no one dissuade you from buying expensive rugs if you can afford them. However, we need no longer feel that Orientals are good and desirable merely because they are costly.

Many a woman who would have loved to take up her old carpets shrank from doing so because she could not afford expensive rugs and would not have dared to substitute cheap and inartistic scatter rugs. The homemaker with a modest budget but an eye for beauty could find no attractive scatter rugs within her means when carpeting, featuring cabbage roses and startled deer, passed out with marble top dressers and horsehair sofas.

What The Normal Man Should Weigh

Ages 45 to 49

According to Leonard Williams, M. D., a gifted writer on Obesity—a man's normal weight at ages 45 to 49—

|----------------|------------|
| 5 Ft. 7 Inches | 156 Pounds |
| 5 Ft. 8 | 161 |
| 5 Ft. 9 | 166 |
| 5 Ft. 10 | 172 |
| 5 Ft. 11 | 178 |
| 6 Ft. 0 | 184 |
| 6 Ft. 1 | 191 |
| 6 Ft. 2 | 198 |

These weights include ordinary indoor clothing. Get on the scales and see if you are overweight and how much.

The Modern way to take off fat is known as the Kruschen Method—and it is well worth a four weeks trial.

Cut out pies, cakes, pastry and ice cream for 4 weeks—go light on potatoes, butter, cheese, cream and sugar—eat moderately of lean meat, chicken, fish, salads, green vegetables and fruit—take one-half a teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—don't miss a morning.

An 85-cent bottle of Kruschen lasts four weeks—get it at David L. McCarty's, or any drug store in the world.

THREE TOUCHDOWNS

Proved the Undoing of Rockland High In Its Annual Game With Morse High

Rockland High lost to Morse High at Bath Monday 21 to 0, Morse High receiving three touchdowns and three extra points.

Rockland fumbled the kick-off and Morse recovered on the 40-yard line. Rockland held on downs. Paul Wilson, Morse quarterback, ran the Rockland's punt back to the 20-yard line. On the next play H. McElman scored on a back through center and L. Wilson made the extra point.

The next period Rockland had the ball most of the time and it looked as though she would score, but the final punt was lacking.

In the third quarter a 15-yard pass from H. McElman to his brother, D. McElman, scored the second touchdown for Morse. H. McElman kicked the extra point.

Morse scored again in the last period on a pass which put the ball on Rockland's 15-yard line and then a play around left-end netted the third touchdown. R. McElman scored the extra point.

The McElman brothers were the bright lights for Morse, while Larabee was the star for Rockland, also the star of the game, outplaying any man on the field.

As The Times Saw It

The following is clipped from the Bath Times' report of the Rockland-Morse game in Bath last Saturday:

"Flashing a brilliant and powerful offense that swept Rockland's heavy line in front of it, along with a dazzling defense that smashed through to upset Rockland plays before they could get underway, Morse High broke into the win column 21-0 Monday afternoon at Kelley field against the Lime City eleven."

"Harold McElman, stocky, hard hitting half back, returned to the form that featured him last season as one of the best small school backs in the State. He ripped the Rockland line to shreds, turned their ends tossed passes accurately and played a whole of a defensive game. The middle of the first period saw him shoot off right tackle, shake off a pair of Rockland linemen and out-run the secondary defense for the first score. In the third period he tossed a 20-yard aerial to his brother Dick, who ran 20 more for it for the second score. A few minutes before the last whistle he emerged from a mass of Rockland tacklers and raced 37 yards for the last touchdown."

"It was a colorful Morse team that gave the home town rooters something to talk about. Far more colorful than against Brunswick, Westbrook or Gardiner. The line played a beautiful charging game, swept away would be tacklers and opened big holes for the backs to pound through for substantial gains. On the defense the line was on its toes from end to end, went through fast and hard, breaking up plays before they reached the scrimmage line."

"The visitors featured one man who played as fine a game as Kelley Field has seen in some little time. It was Larabee, husky center, who made three fourths of Rockland's tackles, roamed from end to end, tackling Morse backs for a loss whenever they were thrown for such, was down the field under kicks like a race horse, hit low and hard. His tackling was outstanding, as it was clean, hard and vicious. A couple more linemen like him, and it would have been hard sledding for any high school backfield."

PARK THEATRE

"If you can surprise an audience, you've just about won your battle in making a picture—but there have been so many pictures and audiences have seen so much that to surprise 'em with anything becomes a harder and harder task," declares Hal Roach, picture producer who directed "Men of the North," coming here Friday and Saturday.

"The present picture is a case in point," says Roach. "When I first looked at the Willard Mack plot, the surprise finish struck me. Mack has always been adept at these—his stage successes such as 'Kick In' and 'Gang War' are examples. 'Also, the outdoor element in the picture got me. Here was a mystery drama, with all the elements of the detective story, laid in the snowy fastnesses of the Canadian woods. We took the company up into the high Sierras, into a panorama of miles of snow and pine trees, and the glorious settings of nature were a background for the ingenuity of man, as told in the story. It struck me as being different—that's why I wanted to direct the story personally."

The new picture is a vivid adventure of the French Canadian woods, with Gilbert Rowland as the fiery Canadian trapper Louis, pursued by the "Northwest Mounted" in a mystery plot, with Barbara Leonard as the heroine.—adv.

High School Notes

"Night school" is to be held Nov. 12.

Mildred Carver is regretting that her turn as office girls falls on a two-day week.

Junior High School made $26.16 on its social last week. This money will be used to paint one of the rooms.

Are we musical. One day last week a visitor found the piano going in one room, the radio in another, the weekly music lesson in the auditorium and downstairs in the boiler room the janitor was whistling.

No, Miss Hunter does not wear that awful, ridiculous, green hat on the street. It is hanging in her closet because she is helping Miss Prife collect costumes for the senior play, "Not So Long Ago" which is a comedy of 1850.

The sophomores are to sell hot dogs at the ball games to add to their grading fund. They are trying to make their money go farther by doing some of the digging as well. A passerby overheard one boy say as he mopped his steaming brow, "Gee, it looks as though we hadn't done anything yet!" It's a hard job but the sophomores are a plucky lot and the school is proud of them.

The juniors, not to be outdone, have adopted the library for their project. If they succeed in carrying out their plans for repairing plaster, tinting walls and mending books, the room will soon cease to wear that orphaned look and take its place with the other newly furnished rooms. A good library is just as necessary to the school as a good gymnasium though it lacks the latter's popular appeal.

The new "Tattler" is out and everyone is congratulating the Press Club on its appearance and contents. It is easy to read and worth reading. It lacks, praise be, that silliness that is so prone to creep into juvenile publications. A complete file of such a monthly for the four years would make a valuable souvenir of one's High School course. The present issue furnishes a pretty good directory of school activities and officers.

The Commercial club gave a very successful social under the direction of Phyllis Snowman, general chairman, assisted by Gladys Alley, chairman of the program committee and Mildred Carver, who was in charge of the refreshments which were a special feature. The program opened with Goldberg and Pietrosky, vaudeville, in a clever song and dance act. This was followed by the Magazine Lovers act, "Sweethearts on Parade" arranged by Gladys Alley to accompany the songs "Confessing" sung by Evelyn Pietrosky and "I Love You" by Naomi Stearns. The girls taking part in this were in appropriate costumes: Gladys Alley, formal; Madeline Coffey, beach; Ruth Perry, afternoon; Jeanette Cohen, street; Mabel Porter, French; Phyllis Snowman, home girl; Dorothy Prescott, tennis; Mary LaCroce, stenographer; Mary Lawrence, riding; Cynthia Wassart, farmette; Madeline Rubenstein, golfer; Ray Hodgkins, aviatrix; Naomi Stearns, dream girl.

A piano solo by Kitty Haskell was followed by a tap dance, "East Side, West Side" by Jennie Cohen, Madeline Rubenstein, Phyllis Snowman and Cynthia Wassart. The closing numbers were imitations by Mary Lawrence, "Helen Kane" and Naomi Stearns, "Helen Kane". All the preliminaries of Tuesday's assembly were cut as short as possible to give Mrs. Jackson more time to finish the story of the trip which was partly reported by Miss Norton at a previous assembly. She began where Miss Norton left off—on the edge of California. Perhaps the most striking feature of their stay there was the entire absence of rain. There was none of our New England interest in the barometer and the weather report. You know beforehand that the day after tomorrow will be almost exactly like the day before yesterday. The soil is so dry that it is hard to realize that such their mouths somebody would begin to grin. One friend told them it was because they didn't wear enough rouge. It made them look funny. Another said it was because they didn't really speak English. It was at this "Red Apple Inn" that Miss Norton admired the curtains and the lady with them was bewildered because she didn't see any. She thought the Yankee girl said kittens.

They went up Mt. Wilson, 6000 feet above the sea level. Both of them had been up Kilauea and Waldoboro Hill and they thought they knew something about hills but Mt. Wilson was different. One old lady describing the trip told them positively "You have to go nine miles in high!" But they found that she meant you were lucky if you could keep on going in second. Most people have to shift to first more than once. On one of these mountain roads the track is so narrow that passing is possible only at certain definite turns. In some places the road is just the width of the car with mountains going a mile straight up on the left and a mile straight down on the right. Mrs. Jackson didn't speak until they were safely down again. She said her heart was in her mouth and she was afraid it would pop out.

They saw the California markets where lemons are 10 cents a dozen and cantaloupe sometimes as low as eight for a quarter, and miniature golf courses where people are playing all day and all night. They saw the "Huntington Library," the home of Gainsborough's "Blue Boy," and the Hollywood Bowl and Albee McPherson's temple and the Pacific ocean flora and fauna from a glass bottomed boat. And after they had seen all that they saw Yosemite Park and wonderful fruits and vegetables can be grown in it but there is nothing half way about the necessity for irrigation. It is irrigated or it is desert. The eucalyptus trees seemed to Mrs. Jackson the homeliest things she had ever seen. All the year round they are always shedding something, either their leaves or their bark or their blossoms and their odor is quite unpleasant. One girl said she had heard a lot about eucalyptus trees. Was that what they made ukeles out of?

The most important animal in California is the ant. They come in armies. They invade the whole house. Battle after battle the girls waged. They used ant powder, ant paste, ant poison but always with dishearteningly temporary victories. Some of the California expressions they found very amusing. One lady said, "We like the Crosses when they were here. They were fine people but they hadn't been out here very long before they shirked back East again." They viewed the homes of Pasadena's many millionaires and amused themselves by dining at the "Round Table" where only the main course was placed before them on a plate at the great round table the center of which revolves slowly, exhibiting boards containing everything else that anyone could possibly want to eat. The price is 50 cents. You may eat all the afternoon. It is 50 cents just the same. The only restriction is that you mustn't try things and put them back. You must eat what you take.

They visited Hollywood and never saw a single movie star, but they saw the wonderful roads ten cars wide and the Puppeteer Show where even the orchestra players were puppets. Out at Beverly Hills they did see the fence and the trees around Douglas Fairbanks' house. All the houses show the Spanish influence, flat roofs, arches, stucco, color. At San Gabriel they visited the "Red Apple Inn." Every time they opened the wonderful "Fire-fall" at Glacier Point.

It was on this Glacier Point trip that they had the driver with the most remarkable line Mrs. Jackson had ever heard. It was so good that one of the passengers called him "Santa Claus." He pointed out some trees which he said were not pepper trees but flapper trees. "Their limbs are bare!" He called their attention to "Poison Point" towering high in the air. "One drop is enough!" He described the hot weather they had, so hot that they had to keep the hens in Keelators so they wouldn't lay hard boiled eggs. And right here the heartless electric bell rang for the end of the assembly period.

THE OLD COMMERCIAL DAYS

As Seen In Days When G. A. Kilgore Was Principal—Well Known Names In Student List

The Courier-Gazette's recent interview with George A. Kilgore, a former principal of Rockland Commercial College, was read with a great deal of interest by former pupils of that institution. We are indebted to Frank D. Alden of 58 Old County road for a copy of the college prospectus issued by Mr. Kilgore in 1881-82, containing a list of the students for that period. The faculty at that time was composed of these instructors:

G. A. Kilgore, principal, (general manager and superintendent of the course of instruction). Scientific and Practical Book-keeping, Business Ethics, Business Forms and Mathematics.

Miss Julia L. Hills—(Superintendent of Academic Department). Elementary and Higher English Branches.

L. A. Barron—Plain Business and Ornamental Penmanship.

W. R. Prescott—(Assistant in Commercial Department). Book-keeping and Penmanship.

Mrs. G. A. Kilgore—Instructor in Pitman's or Graham's Phonography.

Capt. J. J. Emery—Instructor in Nautical Science and Practical Navigation.

True P. Pierce, Esq.—(Member of Knox County Bar). Lecturer on Commercial Law.

A glance at the rules and regulations shows that—

"No talking, whispering, laughing or other improper noise is allowed."

"Running up or down stairs, or remaining about the door before or after school is prohibited."

"No student who in any way exerts a bad influence can retain connection with the school."

Follows the list of students:

BAY STATE ISSUES

Everybody Is Waiting To See What Massachusetts Will Do Nov. 4

Massachusetts, largest State to vote Democratic in the 1928 Presidential election, but traditionally Republican, ponders the problems of unemployment and prohibition as both parties beg the support of her 1,600,000 voters in the election Nov. 4.

On that date the public, now listening to nightly political radio appeals, reading political literature in its morning mail and rousing now and then to hearken to an old-fashioned rally, will decide several questions.

First, it will determine whether or not William M. Butler, a dry Republican, friend of Calvin Coolidge, or Marcus A. Coolidge, a wet Democrat, will succeed to the United States Senate soon to be vacated by Frederick H. Gillett, Republican.

It will decide whether or not its present dry Republican Governor, Frank G. Allen, will succeed himself or be succeeded by Joseph B. Ely, a wet Democrat.

It will decide whether or not its prohibition enforcement law, popularly called "The Baby Volstead Act," will be repealed.

And it will choose 16 representatives to sit in Congress.

The Democrats, party and individual leaders alike, have denounced prohibition and have laid upon Republican policies much of the blame for depression and unemployment.

The leaders of the Republican ticket are dry, although no less than half a dozen Republican Congressmen or aspirants for Congress are classed as wets. They stand on a platform which upholds the party's 1928 declaration for law-enforcement—although it also counsels voters to await the findings of the President's Law-Enforcement Commission and expressed the belief that the will of the majority will prevail.

The Republicans have pledged themselves to rehabilitate business and relieve unemployment and point to efforts already made to aid both business and worker.

Butler, campaign manager for former President Coolidge, and formerly chairman of the Republican National committee, was appointed to the Senate after the death of Henry Cabot Lodge but was defeated later by Senator David I. Walsh, Democrat.

Declaring that the dominant issue of the campaign is the rebuilding of business and the creation of more places for workers, he has pledged himself to work for those ends and to support the President. Butler, himself a leader in the cotton manufacturing industry, proposes a Federal 48-hour law to equalize conditions of labor.

His opponent, Coolidge, says that "the Coolidges are men of few words," but he has, by radio and at rallies, expressed himself on the major campaign issues. He calls prohibition a failure but forecasts a probable delay in repeal of the 18th amendment. Therefore, he purposes to work for modification of the enforcement law and proposes raising the definition of intoxicating liquor from a half to one percent to 12 or 15 percent. He has suggested a Federal commission to supervise distribution of such beverages.

He has struck at the present tariff as a contributing cause of unemployment. He holds that light and power rates are of tremendous importance and proposes giving to a Federal Commission power to regulate interstate rates of hydro-electric companies.

Governor Allen is dry, but that issue has played but little part in his campaign. He stands for re-election upon his record in office, pointing to welfare measures for the sick and the aged, pointing to a steadily shrinking State debt, and emphasizing a program of construction of State roads and buildings that has released and is releasing many millions of dollars—thus creating jobs for workers throughout the State.

Ely assails prohibition and advocates repeal. He has kept that issue to the front in his drive for office. But he also has attacked the Republican economic policy. The laboring people, he says, have in large measure, failed to share in business prosperity. This, he charges, the Republicans have failed to see and alleges that curtailed buying power coupled with increased industrial production has brought about widespread depression. He has promised co-operation in a program bringing together able economists, leaders of industry, labor and Government.

Fifteen Massachusetts' 16 representatives in Congress are seeking re-election. The exception is George R. Stobbs, Republican, of the Fourth District where two wets are running for his seat. Of the 15 seeking re-election, nine have been classified as dry by an organization seeking repeal of the prohibition laws, and six have been termed wets.

Every dry Congressman is opposed by a wet. But only one wet Congressman faces a dry opponent. In six districts both candidates are wets. The Republicans are concentrating upon an effort to regain the Second Congressional district recently won by William J. Granfield, wet Democrat. Joshua L. Brooks, wet Republican, is campaigning actively. Joseph Borghatti, wet Democrat is waging a hot contest in the Ninth District against Representative Charles L. Underhill, generally considered a dry.—By John B. Knox, Associated Press staff writer.

A LIFE OF ADVENTURE

Dr. George Shorkley, Formerly of Camden, Had Amazing Experiences In Arctic, Tropics and Trenches

"Lord God! We aren't asking for much. All we request is a little food. We have done our best, but cannot carry on much longer without help. Amen."

These words, uttered by Anthony Fiala, leader of the Ziegler polar expedition in Franz Josef Land in 1904, brought immediate results in a most surprising manner. A huge Arctic bear, wandering aimlessly through the ice drifts and over the pressure ridges that seamed the ice, caught the odor of burning seal oil. He began investigating and eventually reached the smoke vent in the roof of the igloo in which Fiala and his marooned mates of the expedition.

The bear crashed through the roof and landed sprawling in the midst of the explorers. Startled, it fled in terror, straight through the wall of the dwelling. One of the expedition members, weak from hunger, dragged himself to his feet, grasped his rifle, in which but one or two cartridges remained, and shot the animal within a few paces of the door. The bear saved the lives of the beleaguered adventurers who finally were brought back to civilization aboard the Terra Nova, the sturdy vessel that in later years was used by Capt. Robert F. Scott on his journey to the South Pole.

Dr. George Shorkley, now a practicing physician and surgeon of Mount Vernon, Wash., is past the 60-year mark, but he carries himself in an erect and soldierly fashion, as befits a veteran of two wars and three scientific expeditions to the opposite ends of the earth.

He is content. The sunset of his adventurous day is being spent with his only daughter in their beautiful Mount Vernon home. His wife died recently.

This country doctor, who incidentally enjoys a most excellent practice, now is ministering to victims of whooping cough, colds in the head, diphtheria, an occasional broken bone and the various ailments usually found in civilization. He is the same man who at various times in his eventful life has gazed into the fever-glazed eyes of dying men in the tropics; has eased the pain of Arctic adventurers who gave their lives in the frigid North; and has spoken words of cheer to American and enemy soldiers whose days ended violently in the trenches of the World War or in the jungles of the Philippines.

Dr. Shorkley first felt the urge to visit distant and dangerous countries shortly after being graduated from Bucknell College. He joined the Harvard University archaeological and ethnological expedition into Guatemala and Spanish Honduras in 1892. This expedition was sponsored by the United States government and the Hemmingway Foundation.

Dr. Shorkley went along as an engineer and was second in command. John G. Owens, an archaeologist and scientist of note, was leader of the party.

"We knew nothing in those days of the cause of yellow fever," Dr. Shorkley recounted. "Men were dying by the hundreds all around us and our expedition was greatly hampered by the disease. I contracted the ailment, but pulled through by a narrow margin."

"We saw the remains of the de Lesseps attempt to dig a canal across the Isthmus of Panama. It was quite apparent that disease rather than engineering difficulties caused the failure of the attempt," Dr. Shorkley observed.

Shortly after his return from the tropics the Mount Vernon physician was seriously injured in a train wreck while taking the place of a man who had been shot and killed by strikebreakers in a Pennsylvania labor difficulty. Although in the hospital for many weeks he was not permanently incapacitated and at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War enlisted in the infantry. He shortly was commissioned a lieutenant and served throughout the war.

He was not injured, although he took part in some of the hottest battles in the various fighting sectors.

Shortly after the close of the war the Baldwin-Ziegler Arctic expedition left for the North Pole. This was in 1904. One year later the party had not been heard from and it was thought that a relief expedition was organized to locate the explorers, who were feared dead. Dr. Shorkley, as was entirely typical of him, volunteered his services and was signed as surgeon of the party.

He sailed from New York in July, 1905, and met the others of the expedition at Tromsø, Norway. Their ship, the Fritof, was a staunch wooden vessel, was completely outfitted there and the party sailed away.

"It was pretty much of a glorious boat ride for us," Dr. Shorkley related. "We did not find the Baldwin-Ziegler party, although I am certain we passed within a mile of them. In the Arctic night we could not see them and after searching every section and after searching which we figured they might be, we returned to Tromsø, the ship being forced out by the rapidly forming pack ice. We had plenty of harrowing experiences, however."

"Two days after we had returned to Tromsø the Baldwin-Ziegler party sailed in," Dr. Shorkley laughed. "In fact, they almost beat us there. Such are the vagaries of the North."

It was while the Baldwin-Ziegler party was marooned in the ice of Franz Josef Land, that a number of specially designed buoys were set adrift by them. Several of these have been found, some of them recently. One was discovered several days ago near Novaya Zemlya by a young Russian, Gregory Nikitin. Another was turned over many years ago to Raymond R. Frazier, Seattle banker, who at that time was American consul to Denmark. The buoy contained a plea for a shipload of coal for the stranded explorers.

Frazier received it a year after the party of which Dr. Shorkley and his companions had gone in search had returned to New York. Dr. Shorkley also has one of the buoys in his interesting collection of mementoes gathered on his wide travels.

It was in 1903 that the Ziegler polar expedition was organized. Dr. Shorkley naturally was included in the personnel. It was on this trip that he experienced his most terrible hardships, on this voyage that he saw men tried in the fearful crucible of the North, where privation, terrible isolation and seclusion bring to the surface the actual make-up of a man.

On this voyage Dr. Shorkley and his companions saw their ship, the America, sink into the sea with more than forty tons of provisions aboard after its heavy ribs and timbers had been crushed like matchwood by the ice in which it was encased. It was on this journey into the forbidding North that the beleaguered voyagers were forced to eat their dogs; to fight off disease and death and finally to pray like little children to the travelers' God for aid—that was not denied.

"There were thirty-nine of us in the party on the ice after the America was crushed and sunk," Dr. Shorkley recounted. "We had anticipated landing only the scientific party of fifteen. The remaining men made up the crew of the America, and they were scheduled to stay aboard ship for the return journey. We fifteen contemplated pushing on to the Pole with the dogs."

"However, with the sinking of the America we were forced to feed 39 men. We immediately began rationing our food. The America had gone down at about the eightieth parallel of north latitude, which left us some four hundred miles from the Pole. There were, on short rations, with more than double the number of men we had counted on and no ship. It was not a pleasant situation."

"We had with us 420 dogs, thirty-two Siberian ponies, sledges, sectional canoes for assisting us across leads in the ice and various other types of exploration equipment known in those days. Naturally we had no airplanes, no radio, nothing with which to communicate with the outside world. We became acquainted with utter isolation as only explorers of that day ever will know. We were absolutely cut off from civilization and had no idea when, if ever, we would again establish contact."

"We made attempts to push on to the Pole. It was useless. We drifted south on the ice, as we were, and we forged north. Storms of unusual severity swooped down on us from out of the polar regions. For almost two years we battled against death, hoping against hope that relief would be sent."

"Our ponies developed glanders, which precluded their use as food for the men. We killed the animals and fed a time to the dogs. The disease is not contracted by canines. We then ate the dogs."

"I saw men on the verge of starvation flatly refuse to touch the flesh of certain of the dogs. The reason was that several of the beautiful malamutes had saved the lives of members of the expedition and our members refused thus to treat their saviors. It was necessary to apportion certain dogs to certain men."

After remaining in Franz Josef Land for slightly less than two years the adventurers were rescued by a relief expedition aboard the Terra Nova. During the time they were marooned the explorers made many sorties over the ice to various parts of the Arctic.

Dr. Shorkley is certain they passed over the resting place of the explorer August Andree, who, perished 33 years ago in an attempt to fly over the Pole in a balloon and whose body, together with those of his two companions, was found recently.

"This year was a 'miller,'" says Dr. Shorkley. "The ice and snow thawed sufficiently to expose the bodies of Andree and his two co-adventurers. When we were there they were deeply buried beneath the crust."

Dr. Shorkley was an intimate friend of Andree's brother and just prior to the former's departure for the Pole he promised Andree that he would search diligently for the lost flyer.

Although he could have obtained a commission in the Medical Corps of the Army in the late war Dr. Shorkley joined a fighting outfit and was made a major of infantry. He was engaged in some of the most bitter fighting of the conflict, but emerged without a battle wound.
