Don't Ruin Your Children's Eyes

I frequently find children, wearing glasses as the result of a superficial school examination of the eyes, who do not need them, and whose eyes may be permanently injured by their use. Don't take chances with your child's eyes. I will examine them for free. If they do not need glasses, I will tell you; if they do need them, I will fit them properly.

The State Board of Charities and Correction will hold a conference at the court house in Ellsworth on Wednesday, Sept. 18. Similar conferences are being held throughout the State. All prospective members of the legislature, county commissioners and overseers of the poor are especially invited to attend the conference.

Gladys Klark, always popular in Ellsworth, will open a three-days engagement at Hancock hall next Monday evening. She is supported by an excellent company. The play for the opening night is the New York success, "A Young Girl's Romance," in which Miss Klark appears in the character of Katie Murray, a "cow-girl" straight from the wind-swept plains of the West, and with whom the audience is at once in love. Tuesday evening's play will be "Playthings," and Wednesday, "The Heart of Wetona."

Miss Alice Gaynor of Attleboro, Mass., was the guest of honor at a party given last Thursday evening by Miss Margaret Dunleavy at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Dunleavy. During the evening, announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Gaynor and Frank J. Dunleavy. The bride-elect is a daughter of Michael Gaynor of Attleboro, but spent her childhood in Ellsworth and has been a frequent visitor here since. Mr. Dunleavy is with the American expeditionary forces in France.

George E. Nichols, botanical expert of Yale university, who was in Ellsworth recently investigating for the Red Cross the supply of a species of moss that can be substituted for cotton batting in surgical dressings, has made his report to the Red Cross headquarters. He reports that the country from the Penobscot bay eastward is more promising than any other section of the eastern United States. Supplies of material were located in the vicinity of Wayne, Belfast, Old Town, Ellsworth, Franklin, Cherryfield, Columbia Falls, Machias and Calais. These supplies may not be sufficient to fill the ultimate demand, but there is little question that more material can be located in this region when the time comes.

Testimonial to Justice King.
At a regular meeting of the board of directors of the Union Trust Co., the following resolutions were presented and unanimously adopted:
Voted unanimously to place upon the records of the Union Trust Co. the following testimonial in memory of Arno Warren King, a long-time member of the directors and of the executive committee of this company, but now deceased.

Mr. King served this company, its officers, stockholders and depositors faithfully and well. He gave them the benefit of a sound business judgment, enlightened by a careful study of financial and banking principles. The welfare of the institution and its usefulness to its constituency and to the public at large were ever in his thoughts. He spared no labor to promote them. His known integrity, intelligence and faithfulness to every duty were a tower of strength.

His service was made the greater by his personality, by his kindness of heart and manner, which endeared him to his fellow directors and the officers and employees of the company and to all connected with it in any relation.

His death is deeply deplored as a great loss to this company and to the city and State, but the stimulating memory of his life and service lives after him.

Congressman Peters in France.
Congressman Peters, who, with other members of the House naval affairs committee, is making an official tour of inspection of naval activities of this country in European waters, is now in France. He expects also to have an opportunity of seeing something of army activity in the field, and yesterday, his fifty-fourth birthday, may have been celebrated near the battle front.

The first mail communications from Congressman Peters were received here this week, written on board the battleship on the way across. He writes interestingly of the life on shipboard, and mentions incidentally that each morning he took the regular "setting-up" exercises with the men of the navy.

"REPEATERS" ARE WARNED AGAINST HOARDING SUGAR

Food Administrator Merrill Calls Attention to Penalties—Hoover Realizes Supreme Allied Quartermaster.

Orono, Me., Aug. 13.—Although the sugar card system is being established in many sections of this State reports have reached the Maine Division of the U. S. Food Administration that some housewives, becoming panicky over the present sugar crisis, are traveling from store to store (in communities where the sugar card system has not been established) and buying sugar that they may not find themselves without a supply if an actual famine should come.

These "repeaters" are helping to create a possible famine and will upset the entire rationing plan of the Food Administration unless they buy sugar only as it is needed and limit their consumption to two pounds a month for each person in the household.

"The two pounds a month plan, if strictly adhered to, will insure an adequate supply of sugar," says Federal Food Administrator Leon S. Merrill.

"It is the aim of the Food Administration to distribute available supplies of sugar equitably. But this cannot be done if 'repeaters' persist in their unpatriotic attempts to buy more than their allowance and to hoard a supply against a potential famine. Maine has been allotted a certain amount of sugar on the basis of two pounds a month for every person in the State and it can be seen that if the 'repeaters' buy more than this they are going to cut down the allowance of their patriotic neighbors."

In this connection the Food Administration calls attention to the law against hoarding sugar, flour, and other foodstuffs. Those found guilty are liable to a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for two years or both.

Retailers in communities where the sugar card system is not in use, are warned against selling sugar to other than their regular customers and to see that an equitable distribution is made to all their customers. When a dealer suspects anyone of trying to repeat in sugar purchases he is cautioned against making the sale. Every dealer not selling sugar on the card system is now required to report each sale of sugar to the Food Administration.

FORTUNES OF WAR.

The shifting fortunes of war do not allow a general to issue in one day orders to be followed throughout a whole campaign. Herbert Hoover is really a supreme quartermaster of the whole Allied forces, combatant and non-combatant. He cannot tell today what orders will be necessary to issue next month, nor what restrictions now in force may be then safely removed. The whole American people is in the thick of a titanic fray, and the biggest job for the civilian population is to keep the fighters supplied with food. A multitude of inter-locking contingencies decide what commodities must be shipped overseas from season to season.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

Recently when an American was visiting one of the workshops in Belgium where 800 girls were employed to repair clothing sent by America for the refugees, one of the girls fainted.

After the girl had been revived, the American asked the matron if this was a common occurrence.

"Oh, yes, Monsieur," was the answer, "over a dozen faint a day always and sometimes many more than that."

The American looked around the room at the drawn, blue-lipped faces. Then it occurred to him to ask the girls what they had had for breakfast. His question disclosed the fact that nearly all of these girls had had only a cup of Toroline for their morning meal. This is the only beverage that can be bought in Belgium today and is an unpalatable, murky liquid made of roasted rye.

Compare the breakfast you had this morning with the breakfast of these Belgian girls. Can you sit down again to your wholesome and satisfying morning meal without first assuring yourself that you are doing all in your power to feed those in Europe whose cause is our cause, but whose suffering from this cause is so far beyond our own?

Ask yourself frankly, "What am I doing to help?"

"Using less sugar," you say.

How much less? A few teaspoonsful? Or can you measure your savings in pounds?

Be fair to those who are suffering so much for this cause, trusting that you in America will do your utmost for the same cause, even if it does mean the sacrifice of a lump of sugar or a few slices of bread a day.

Be fair to your better self that demands your best efforts in food conservation instead of your least, in order to keep your self respect.

LIVE IT DOWN.

- Has your life been bitter sorrow? Live it down. Think about a bright to-morrow. Live it down. You will find it never pays Just to sit we-d-eyed and gaze On the grave of vanished days: Live it down. Is disgrace your calling burden? Live it down. You can win a brave heart's gaudion: Live it down. Make your life so free from blame That the iuster of your fame Shall hide all the olden shame: Live it down. Has your heart a secret trouble? Live it down. Useless griefs will make it double, Live it down. Do not water it with tears— Do not feed it with your fears— Do not nurse it through the years— Live it down. Have you made some awful error? Live it down. Do not hide your face in terror: Live it down. Look the world square in the eyes: Go ahead as one who's tried To be honored ere he dies: Live it down. FROM JENNIS. —Elin Wheeler Wilcox.

Dear Aunt Madge:

I am glad that you are improving so fast, and hope you will soon be as well as before your illness, for we want to enjoy all of these nice summer days and try to forget the cold disagreeable ones we had last winter.

I have not seen any more about the reunion. I don't expect to be able to present this year, but I know that all who do get together will have a nice time. I have always had a nice time when I could be present, which has been three times.

I feel that I have had my outing. Monday morning, July 1, Homer, my son Meixin's wife, and little Robert, both and myself started out on a little trip. We went up through Franklin and Eastbrook, calling on friends along the way; went to Waltham to the old home of my father, where he went to live when he was three years old, and now he is nearing his ninety second birthday. There is no one living on the old place now, but the old house is still there, and we went in and ate our luncheon, after which we took some pictures and looked in place over and talked of the pleasant hours spent there in my young days. We went up to the shed chamber, where we saw the old room that my grandmother used to weave cloth in. I have heard my father say that she has done her housework and spun twelve skeins of yarn in a day. We also saw the dining table that my grandfather used when he made his furniture when he began housekeeping.

We then called on one of my cousins, who, the last time I was there had four small boys. Since that time one has died and two of the other three and a younger brother are in the service for Uncle Sam. As we went up to the house I saw a service flag in the window with three stars on it. We then went to the old cemetery where my grandparents are buried. I had to look quite a while before I found their graves, it had been so many years since I had been there.

We then went through Mariaville and out to Otis to my old home. We did not stop there, for the place has been sold and gone into strange hands, but it looked about as it did when I lived there, only the trees had grown larger. One tree near the corner of the house I set out when I was very young, only a little tot. It is only a yellow birch, but I watched to see it grow. Now it is quite a large tree. We went to the cemetery and placed flowers on the graves, called on some of the old neighbors, and then went to Lakewood and remained over night with my first husband's people, the Wilburs, and came home the next day by way of Ellsworth. We felt that we had taken in many things that will linger in our minds for a long time.

My father lives with me and is quite feeble. His mind is more feeble than his body, and he is nearly blind.

I received a letter a few days ago from a friend in Charleston, S. C., and she said it was very hot and dry there. Said if we could have some of their weather we could soon get our hayling done. The weather we are having is quite discouraging for the farmer.

Best wishes to all. ARE

That was a nice auto trip you took, Are, but we hope it will not interfere with your coming to the reunion.

—MONTICUTIN BEACH, Cal.

Dear Aunt Madge: I hear many people say, "This is the best place that I was ever in for resting." I, myself, have spent something like fifteen summers at Catalina Island and I think that it is a fine spot, a gem in the Pacific, but for sweet rest I prefer this beach. Because there is most always a breeze from off the sea, it is seldom warm, but on the contrary, invigoratingly cool. I very much enjoy standing on the bank, looking out over and upon the sparkling water, getting my lungs filled with sea ozone daily. It braces me up wonderfully, and makes me somewhat young and frisky, even in my advanced years.

At Catalina there is much hill climbing. Here it is comparatively level; it is therefore easier on my rheumatic legs and feet. For another thing, I like this place because it is on the mainland; I don't have to get seasick getting to it, and with an automobile, one hardly realizes he has made the trip of half a

TO ALL WOMEN WHO ARE ILL

This Woman Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Personal Experience.

McLean, Neb.—"I want to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer from any functional disturbance, as it has done me more good than all the doctor's medicine. Since taking it I have a fine healthy baby girl and have gained in health and strength. My husband and I both praise your medicine to all suffering women."

—Mrs. JOHN KOPPELMANN, R. No. 1, McLean, Nebraska. This famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has been restoring women of America to health for more than forty years and it will help any woman who suffers from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues" to give this successful remedy a trial.

For special suggestions in regard to your ailment write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

hundred miles, or such a matter. Then, again, the ride across country is delightful. There is much to see of the varied and beautiful scenery. Much of the land is under cultivation. Of late years, raising milk-cows is on rapid increase.

P. S.—To-day I saw a man threshing beans with a fall. I carried me back to fifty years ago when I saw that done in cold, windy autumn weather away down on Hancock sock. I am going to have baked beans for supper.

It is quite time that the date of the 1918 reunion should be announced, and you are all cordially invited to meet again at the home of Aunt Madge, on August 29. It seemed best to hold it here this year for reasons which have been fully explained to our good sister "L. E. T.," who so kindly invited us to hold our annual gathering with her. We will hope for a good day and a large attendance.

Donald's Idea.

Having been taken through the steerage on an ocean voyage, and knowing there were several "classes" on a ship, Donald, in his first conversation with the new English cook, asked, "Did you come over storage?"

Among the Grangers.

This column is devoted to the Grange, especially to the granges of Hancock county. The column is open to all grangers for the discussion of topics of general interest, and for reports of grange meetings. Make letters short and concise. All communications must be signed, but names will not be printed except by permission of the writer. All communications will be subject to approval by the editor, but none will be rejected without good reason.

GREEN MOUNTAIN POMONA.

Green Mountain Pomona will meet with Deer Isle grange Aug. 20, afternoon and evening sessions. The fifth degree will be conferred in the evening. Arrangements will be made for all who can, to stay all night, and a large delegation is hoped for. It is hoped everyone will "do his bit" to help make this Pomona meeting a success. POTATO PLANT LICE

Attacking Vines in Many Parts of the State.

The University of Maine college of agriculture reports that potato plant lice are attacking vines in many different parts of Maine. Every infested field is threatened with disaster.

When the lice are found, do not wait to see if they are going to increase, but spray at once with tobacco extract. Potato vines in many places in Massachusetts have been killed this summer by lice where people neglected to spray for the pest.

The louse is a tiny green bug with sharp, slender beak (like a mosquito) which it thrusts into the stem, leaves and blossoms of the plant in order to suck out the sap of the plant. These plant-lice or aphids breed very fast and soon overrun the potato field in multitudes. Their favorite position is upon the peduncles of the flower, and they are also found in large clusters and sometimes in immense numbers on the stem and on the under sides of the leaves.

Soon the leaves begin to curl up, then turn yellow and black and fall from the plant, which is particularly dangerous from the fact that often the numerous punctures by the insects serve as entrance pores for the spores which cause the blight. A few of these lice on the plant may not seem dangerous now, but one must remember that from these few that you find to-day or to-morrow there will develop thousands in a short time. These will suck juice from the plants, and potato plants cannot produce lice and tubers at the same time.

Do not wait, spray as soon as you can. Since the insect does not chew the plant but sucks its sap, arsenicals are of no avail. You must use spray which kills by contact with the body of the louse. The best material to use is one of the nicotine sulphate sprays, such as black leaf 40. Where the vines have not been sprayed with Bordeaux mixture, one may use 6 ounces (1/4 of a pint) of the nicotine sulphate (40 per cent.) to 50 gallons of water, to which two pounds of soap, dissolved first in a gallon of water, have been added.

To make one gallon of the spray, use one teaspoonful of nicotine sulphate and an inch cube of soap. The soap makes the poison stick to the insect. It is important to use a pressure sprayer which gives a fine mist and to spray the under sides of the leaves where the lice live in great numbers. Nicotine is a contact insecticide and the insects must be wet by the spray to be killed.

YOUR SON'S LIFE OR A NEW SUIT

What it Means if 105,000,000 People Refuse to Economize on Clothing

NATION HURT IN MANY WAYS

One of Numerous Cases in Point Vividly Illustrates the Vital Necessity of "Saving to Save the Country" in War Time.

By PAUL M. WARBURG, Vice Governor of the Federal Reserve Board

I am one of one hundred and five million of inhabitants of the United States; my duties are the same as those of every other true American, and those of every other true American are the same as mine. Whatever I contribute to the cause of the country, I may expect to see done—such in his own way—by 105,000,000 people.

Let us suppose for the purpose of illustration that I decide that I shall effect a saving on clothes. I might select boots, automobiles, umbrellas, or any other article for which I regularly spend my money, as I have no desire to single out any one commodity, but clothes lend themselves to my thought, so I name them. If I make up my mind, then, at this juncture that to wear old clothes is more respectable than to be seen in new ones; if I decide to buy one new suit of clothes less than I usually purchase each year, and if I figure that suit to cost no more than $10—the country as a whole, should we all pull together and act on the same lines, would save thereby over one billion dollars. It is true that in dealing with our 105,000,000 population we include children and many poor people that could not save ten dollars each because they never spend more for clothes than they absolutely must. But on the other hand $10 is a much smaller amount than the average man or woman spends for a new suit of clothes. The assumption that a billion dollars could easily be saved on clothes may, therefore, be accepted as conservative.

The first thought that occurs to us in this connection is, that by this saving in clothes over one billion dollars would be freed to be invested in Liberty loan bonds. That is the first important and most obvious result. But there are other economic results involved in this saving that are of far greater importance than the mere saving of money.

Economic Results Are Vast.

Let us consider first what one billion dollars' worth of clothes means. Suppose they were half-wool and half-cotton and that the value of the raw material constituted only 50 per cent of the price paid by the ultimate consumer, that would, at the present price of 60 cents per pound for wool and 30 cents per pound for cotton respectively, represent 208,334 tons of wool and 416,667 tons of cotton. Can you imagine how much freight space would be required on water and on land, in moving this mass of raw material? Do you realize that if these bales were put into freight cars, assuming a loading capacity of 16 tons per car for wool and 13 cents per car for cotton, this would represent 13,021 box cars loaded with wool and 32,956 box cars loaded with cotton? Assuming 75 cars per train, there would be about 600 trains; the total length of these trains would be approximately 314 miles, and these trains, hauled by 600 engines, when standing in line would approximately cover the distance from Baltimore to Pittsburgh? Can you imagine the amount of coal consumed in first transporting and then weaving this raw material into cloth? Can you imagine the number of hands employed in these processes? And then consider that more coal, more labor and more transportation are required in distributing the cloth and again more labor and more material in converting it into clothes, and again more labor and transportation in retailing the finished product to the final consumer.

Let us be mindful that all the time these processes are being carried on, Uncle Sam is short of the men necessary to dispatch his war work, and furthermore that shortage of coal and the clogging of the wheels of transportation have stopped his progress at most critical moments and in the present emergency continue to remain a constant menace to the country.

May Cost Your Son's Life.

My new suit of clothes means, therefore, delay for our military operations; delay in transporting and equipping men, and in sending to them, and to our allies, the supplies they need; means increased losses and a longer duration of the war. My new suit of clothes may cost, therefore, the life of my son.

The supply of goods, of labor and of transportation is limited. It is a matter of common agreement that this limited supply is not sufficient freely to satisfy all wants and that unrestricted attempts on the part of each individual to satisfy his own requirements may lead to a wild scramble and destructive competition with the government, resulting in fatal delay and endless increase in prices.

The loaf of bread available for ourselves and for our allies is not large enough to "go around" if we all want to eat more than is absolutely necessary for our maintenance. It is everybody's duty, therefore, at this time to "tighten his belt" and to make a genuine effort to live on as thin a slice of the loaf as he can. Unless that be done we must buy additional food in neutral countries, thereby using tonnage that should be kept available for our military operations and increasing our difficulties in adjusting our trade balances with neutral countries.

Hurts Uncle Sam in Many Ways.

To return to our story of the suit of clothes: During last year the United States had to import 421,000,000 pounds of wool representing a value of about $172,000,000. About half of this came from Argentina. Our suits of clothes called for a substantial portion of this wool and therefore to that extent robbed Uncle Sam of the use of his ships. Moreover, our factories being busy in producing the things required for the prosecution of the war and our home consumption still proceeding at almost top speed, the quantity of goods available for shipment to Argentina in payment for the wool (or for that matter to Chile for nitrates, to Peru for copper, and so on), is insufficient. As a consequence the United States had to pay for more goods in South America than South America has had to pay for goods bought in the United States, thereby causing a decline of dollar exchange in these neutral countries. This shrinkage in the price of the dollar means that it has lost a corresponding part of its purchasing power in neutral countries. The scarcity of goods available for our export trade has thus become a serious obstacle in our way in trying to secure at reasonable prices or in adequate quantities some of the things that we absolutely require from foreign countries.

My suit of clothes has hurt Uncle Sam, therefore, in several ways: I have consumed more wool than necessary and thereby forced the United States to import a correspondingly large quantity of this article; I have consumed more cotton goods than necessary and to that extent have deprived Uncle Sam of the means with which to pay for the minimum of wool which we may have to import.

Clothing But One of Many.

I have used the illustration of a new suit of clothes; it would be easy, though somewhat tedious, to show that we have been dealing only with one case in point. The country is short at this time of hides and skins and has to import large quantities from neutral countries because we are extravagant in our individual purchases of shoes. Similarly, though we are the largest producers of copper, we are forced to import copper from Peru because our civilian population has not begun sufficiently to curtail its use. In like manner we might ask ourselves if it is all excusable that at this time we still manufacture such articles as silk stockings, when every thread of silk must be imported, while we could use our own cotton?

It is impossible and unnecessary to enumerate the many articles that are in a similar position. Many billions of dollars can easily be saved when once we are capable of realizing the cumulative effect of individual "saving;" take the word "saving" in its larger meaning, as involving not only money, but also goods and services. If every individual could be made to see with his own eyes that neglect of saving of this sort means decreased war efficiency, a propaganda of the war, and a larger number of casualties; if every one who has a son or dear relative on the fighting lines across the water could be made to feel that millions of small savings directly affect his boy—there would be no doubt that we could secure the most conscientious and enthusiastic co-operation of all the people. Thus far—we must say with regret—of 105,000,000 people, 100,000,000 do not see the connection between the suit of clothes and the life of the boy.

Germany's Enforced Economy.

Germany's military success is largely predicated upon her ability to center the entire national effort upon the business of war. It is safe to say that she never would have been able to bear the burdens of the fight as well as she has during these four long years had it not been for the enforced savings in material, money and men brought about through the British blockade. If it had not been for the stern necessities created by that blockade the German people would not have been willing to submit to famine rations as to food, clothes, shoes and other similar articles. Industries catering to the appetites and extravagances of the masses would have kept men and material from the government instead of making everything available for the war work of the government, and financially she would have exhausted herself by buying things abroad that she could go without or for which she had to strain her ingenuity in finding or creating substitutes.

It is difficult to bring about drastic economy without the compulsion exercised by hard necessity. For us the problem is whether or not, of our own free will, we shall be able to establish our own voluntary blockade against waste and extravagance. It is a problem whose solution requires the greatest intelligence and the greatest degree of unselfish patriotism. It is a problem that will put the spirit of our people to the severest test.

The government is not devoid of means of promoting economy. The war industries board, the food and fuel administrations, the capital issues committee, the department of labor and department of agriculture all move in the same direction of increasing necessary production and decreasing unnecessary consumption.

Full success, however, may be counted upon only if the whole-hearted co-operation of every citizen of the United States can be enlisted.

It is safe to say that she never would have been able to bear the burdens of the fight as well as she has during these four long years had it not been for the enforced savings in material, money and men brought about through the British blockade. If it had not been for the stern necessities created by that blockade the German people would not have been willing to submit to famine rations as to food, clothes, shoes and other similar articles. Industries catering to the appetites and extravagances of the masses would have kept men and material from the government instead of making everything available for the war work of the government, and financially she would have exhausted herself by buying things abroad that she could go without or for which she had to strain her ingenuity in finding or creating substitutes.

It is difficult to bring about drastic economy without the compulsion exercised by hard necessity. For us the problem is whether or not, of our own free will, we shall be able to establish our own voluntary blockade against waste and extravagance. It is a problem whose solution requires the greatest intelligence and the greatest degree of unselfish patriotism. It is a problem that will put the spirit of our people to the severest test.

The government is not devoid of means of promoting economy. The war industries board, the food and fuel administrations, the capital issues committee, the department of labor and department of agriculture all move in the same direction of increasing necessary production and decreasing unnecessary consumption.

Full success, however, may be counted upon only if the whole-hearted co-operation of every citizen of the United States can be enlisted.

the loaf as he can. Unless that be done we must buy additional food in neutral countries, thereby using tonnage that should be kept available for our military operations and increasing our difficulties in adjusting our trade balances with neutral countries.

Hurts Uncle Sam in Many Ways.

To return to our story of the suit of clothes: During last year the United States had to import 421,000,000 pounds of wool representing a value of about $172,000,000. About half of this came from Argentina. Our suits of clothes called for a substantial portion of this wool and therefore to that extent robbed Uncle Sam of the use of his ships. Moreover, our factories being busy in producing the things required for the prosecution of the war and our home consumption still proceeding at almost top speed, the quantity of goods available for shipment to Argentina in payment for the wool (or for that matter to Chile for nitrates, to Peru for copper, and so on), is insufficient. As a consequence the United States had to pay for more goods in South America than South America has had to pay for goods bought in the United States, thereby causing a decline of dollar exchange in these neutral countries. This shrinkage in the price of the dollar means that it has lost a corresponding part of its purchasing power in neutral countries. The scarcity of goods available for our export trade has thus become a serious obstacle in our way in trying to secure at reasonable prices or in adequate quantities some of the things that we absolutely require from foreign countries.

My suit of clothes has hurt Uncle Sam, therefore, in several ways: I have consumed more wool than necessary and thereby forced the United States to import a correspondingly large quantity of this article; I have consumed more cotton goods than necessary and to that extent have deprived Uncle Sam of the means with which to pay for the minimum of wool which we may have to import.

Clothing But One of Many.

I have used the illustration of a new suit of clothes; it would be easy, though somewhat tedious, to show that we have been dealing only with one case in point. The country is short at this time of hides and skins and has to import large quantities from neutral countries because we are extravagant in our individual purchases of shoes. Similarly, though we are the largest producers of copper, we are forced to import copper from Peru because our civilian population has not begun sufficiently to curtail its use. In like manner we might ask ourselves if it is all excusable that at this time we still manufacture such articles as silk stockings, when every thread of silk must be imported, while we could use our own cotton?

It is impossible and unnecessary to enumerate the many articles that are in a similar position. Many billions of dollars can easily be saved when once we are capable of realizing the cumulative effect of individual "saving;" take the word "saving" in its larger meaning, as involving not only money, but also goods and services. If every individual could be made to see with his own eyes that neglect of saving of this sort means decreased war efficiency, a propaganda of the war, and a larger number of casualties; if every one who has a son or dear relative on the fighting lines across the water could be made to feel that millions of small savings directly affect his boy—there would be no doubt that we could secure the most conscientious and enthusiastic co-operation of all the people. Thus far—we must say with regret—of 105,000,000 people, 100,000,000 do not see the connection between the suit of clothes and the life of the boy.

Germany's Enforced Economy.

Germany's military success is largely predicated upon her ability to center the entire national effort upon the business of war. It is safe to say that she never would have been able to bear the burdens of the fight as well as she has during these four long years had it not been for the enforced savings in material, money and men brought about through the British blockade. If it had not been for the stern necessities created by that blockade the German people would not have been willing to submit to famine rations as to food, clothes, shoes and other similar articles. Industries catering to the appetites and extravagances of the masses would have kept men and material from the government instead of making everything available for the war work of the government, and financially she would have exhausted herself by buying things abroad that she could go without or for which she had to strain her ingenuity in finding or creating substitutes.

It is difficult to bring about drastic economy without the compulsion exercised by hard necessity. For us the problem is whether or not, of our own free will, we shall be able to establish our own voluntary blockade against waste and extravagance. It is a problem whose solution requires the greatest intelligence and the greatest degree of unselfish patriotism. It is a problem that will put the spirit of our people to the severest test.

The government is not devoid of means of promoting economy. The war industries board, the food and fuel administrations, the capital issues committee, the department of labor and department of agriculture all move in the same direction of increasing necessary production and decreasing unnecessary consumption.

Full success, however, may be counted upon only if the whole-hearted co-operation of every citizen of the United States can be enlisted.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Ellsworth residents? After you have read the following, quietly answer the question.

A. M. Franks, carpenter, 67 High St., says: "I noticed my back was growing lame and ached severely. Finally, I got so bad, I was compelled to lay off from work and was down and out for several days. I was in this condition until I got Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me from the first and when I had taken a couple of boxes, I was relieved. I have since had a cold, which settled on my kidneys, causing another attack, but Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at E. G. Moore's Drug Store, very soon removed the aching from my back and I haven't been annoyed since with the trouble." (Statement given February 7, 1906.)

STILL PRAISES DOAN'S.

On December 4, 1916, Mr. Franks said: "I shall never forget the benefit I derived through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills at the time I recommended them before. Since then, they have always proven very beneficial when I have had need to use a kidney medicine."

Another call has been received for five "limited service" men from Hancock county to leave for Camp Upton, N. Y., Aug. 29 and 30. The local board has not yet issued this call.

VOLUNTARY ENLISTMENTS SUSPENDED. Voluntary enlistments in the army or navy were suspended completely Thursday to prevent disruption of industry pending disposition of the bill proposing to extend draft ages to include all men between eighteen and forty-five years.

Orders were issued by Secretaries Baker and Dahiels directing that no voluntary enlistments be accepted after Thursday until further orders. The orders also excluded civilians from appointment to officers' training camps until further notice.

It was explained that the view of the government is that many of the older men are indispensable in their present occupations, but the natural result of the debate on the draft question was certain to lead to a rush on the recruiting offices. It is regarded as essential that men greatly needed at home should be prevented from rushing into the army under a mistaken idea that they are certain to be drafted anyhow and prefer to join the service voluntarily. It was quite evident that plans for applying the new draft age limitations to the older men include a very careful classification of each individual to determine his position at home and probably a far more liberal construction of industrial exemption rules than has heretofore been given.

CHANGES IN DRAFT RULES. Plans for radical changes to liberalize the draft regulations are being worked out at the war department, Secretary Baker told the Senate military committee in urging prompt enactment of the new draft bill extending the ages to include men between eighteen and forty-five.

Mr. Baker proposes to let the government decide whether a man should be exempted from military duty, and in order to reach such a decision he proposes that each registrant shall be called on to answer a series of questions which will determine his family relations, his responsibilities to his dependents, if he has any, and his place in the industrial affairs of the nation. Upon these answers will depend the government's action with regard to calling him to the colors. No registrant will be allowed to waive exemption or to ask it.

Mr. Baker declared he was not satisfied with the present system by which a man might claim or waive exemption from military service, and asserted that he believed the government should decide such questions, since many men with dependents hesitate to ask exemption for reasons which are purely patriotic. He said that at the present time he thought marriage would in itself constitute sufficient reason for placing registrants in a deferred classification.

The war department now is working on a series of questions which it is proposed to require each registrant to answer. With these questions before them officials of the department will be in a position to judge the status of each man in the community to which he belongs, and to the nation in general. In this way, it was asserted, it is proposed to eliminate dependency and thus to solve one of the biggest problems that arises out of the war.

Mr. Baker said definitely that no plan for extending the "work or fight" rules to professional classes or beyond its present scope was under consideration.

The war secretary contemplates dividing all registrants into two classes so far as those in class one. The first would be composed of men between eighteen and nineteen years, and the second of those between nineteen and forty-five years. The object is to provide that the eighteen-year-old class shall be drawn upon only when the man power situation makes it absolutely necessary.

MERCHANT MARINE ENLISTMENTS. With a view to drawing as lightly as possible upon men available for active military service and at the same time meet the urgent demand for man power for the merchant marine, which is proving one of the country's most powerful assets in winning the war, new age limits have been fixed by the recruiting service of the United States shipping board for men entering Uncle Sam's merchant marine.

From now on young men will be accepted as sailors, cooks and stewards on all American vessels making mercantile voyages, provided they are between eighteen and twenty years and pass through a training course provided by the shipping board on its fleet of training ships.

Men between the ages of thirty-two and thirty-five inclusive will also be accepted in the same way for these three ratings. Hitherto all the 3,000 men a month accepted for training by the shipping board and subsequent service in merchant's crews have been within the present draft age limits of twenty-one to thirty-one.

The age limits for officers wishing to train for the merchant marine are much wider, nineteen to fifty-five inclusive, and only men who have spent two years at sea will be accepted at the navigation schools. New age limits for firemen are twenty-one to thirty-one, and men who have fired six months on boilers of fifteen pounds pressure will be given special training as oilers and water-tenders.

Flour Regulations. Some misunderstanding seems to have arisen regarding the allowance of wheat for baking establishments and households, following the announcement that those who have been abstaining entirely from wheat on a voluntary basis were released from their pledge by the food administration.

There is to be no increase in the amount of white flour for bread in bakeries or households. The same proportions will prevail, 75 per cent. of flour for bakeries, and 50 per cent. for household use. There has been an increase in the flour supply due to the excellent condition of the wheat crop, and this permits release of those who have been abstaining entirely from wheat.

Many people would be surprised to learn of the number of homes and establishments that have been going without wheat entirely as a patriotic act. There are 200 hotels and eating houses in Maine that have given the pledge to abstain from wheat and they have lived up to it, according to a prominent food administration official.

UNITARIAN FAIR.

Pleasant Program at Hancock Hall Two Days Last Week.

The Unitarian fair held at Hancock hall Aug. 7 and 8 proved a success socially and financially. Old Home day brought together a number from out of town who appreciated this opportunity to greet old friends.

The concert in the evening was one of the rarest musical treats given an Ellsworth audience in recent years, Miss Erva Giles appeared in a concert for the first time since she returned from her winter's study in New York, and her sweet, flexible voice gave evidence of the careful training she has received. Joseph Fuchs of New York, violinist, a pupil of Franz Kneisel, delighted the audience with his technique and the charm of his playing. Miss Alice O. Hersey of East Corinth, was one of the finest readers who ever come to Ellsworth, and in her varied program, covering a wide range of subjects that showed her versatility, she sustained the reputation made on a former visit. The hearty applause showed the appreciation of the audience, and all of the artists responded generously.

Thursday's programme was especially adapted to the younger set, although in the afternoon Miss Herberta Penley, emergency home demonstrating agent, gave a food demonstration. After a short musical program, there was a junior dance from 4 to 5 o'clock. In the evening the play "The Princess and the Monster," under the direction of Rev. J. W. Tickle, was presented by fifteen young misses. Added interest attaches to the play as being one of a series of "drawing room plays" written for the benefit of English children by professional playwrights, at the instigation of the late W. T. Stead shortly before his tragic death on the Titanic. The parts were well taken and the musical numbers, solos, duets and choruses called forth much applause. The cast of characters was as follows:

- Cast of Characters.
King of Oosamee (who dislikes change), Sylvia Grindie
Queen Felicia (his consort), Willa Moseley
Princess Viva (beloved by all in Oosamee), Catherine Osgood
Prince Karl (cousin to the princess), Louise Alexander
Chancellor Grabgold (who can always explain), Mattie Royal Lord Chamberlain (a dignified official), Eleanore Royal Florizel (the princess's favorite page), Elizabeth Royal Attendants on the princess who belong to the royal order of shepherdesses, Hester Spencer, Lucy Willey, Doris Wardwell, Margaret Woodward, Eugenia Walker, Florence Walker.
The Monster (who isn't so bad after all), Leon (companion to the Monster), Alice Adams

During intermission, an interesting four-minute speech was made by Dr. George A. Phillips of Bar Harbor. After the play a confetti dance was enjoyed.

Stevens-Ball Wedding. Harold E. Ball of Winchester, Mass., and Miss Theodate Stevens were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. David A. Stevens, at Presque Isle, Wednesday evening, Aug. 7. Only the family of the bride and a sister of the groom, Mrs. Nathan C. King of Ellsworth, were present.

The ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. J. C. Gregory of the First Congregational church of Presque Isle, the double ring service being used. The bride wore a handsome dress of white crepe meteor, with train, and veil, fastened with orange blossoms, and carried a large bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Christine Mekkel-sen of Boston, who wore pale yellow silk and carried yellow roses. The groom was attended by George Messenger of Winchester. The bride was given away by her brother, Fred A. Stevens, of Presque Isle.

The house was profusely and beautifully decorated with pink sweet peas and greenery. The ceremony was followed by a large reception, when many friends and townspeople extended sincere good wishes and congratulations. The wedding presents were exceptionally beautiful and numerous. Mr. Ball is cashier of the Winchester National bank, and partner in and treasurer of the Winchester War Tool Co. Mr. and Mrs. Ball will reside in Winchester.
