And She Soon Got Back
Her Strength

New Castle, Ind.—"The measles left me run down, no appetite, could not rest at night, and I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs, so I was unable to keep about my household. My doctor advised me to take Vinol, and six bottles restored my health so I do all my housework, including washing. Vinol is the best medicine I ever used."—Alice Record, 437 So. 11th St., New Castle, Ind.

OBITUARY.

June 11, 1908, a little girl was born to be our neighbor on the hill, the first child to be born in that house since our remembrance. We have watched her grow from toddling babyhood to active childhood, with three sisters, Marjory, Sarah and Virginia. Another, little Frances, did not live to join them in their play. Oct. 8, 1918, they came to tell us Maxine had died after only one week of illness. Maxine Ada Doyle, first born and dearly beloved of Edwin and Rebecca Lufkin Doyle, granddaughter of Charles and Jennie Ash Doyle, was called from her work and her play, and she left with a smile as if "she saw dear faces and caught the gracious eye of Him, the sinless teacher, who came for us to die." Maxine belonged to the girls' canning club, and had written the story of her summer's work before her illness. She was a lover of the Sunday school, and the roses which it sent were buried with her. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Doyle her neighbor-uncle, brought roses with them, coming from Thomaston for the service which was held at the house out of doors conducted by Rev. George Sparks. The father, mother and sister Virginia were too ill to go to the cemetery, and no other relatives came, owing to fear of influenza.

Mrs. Martha Lufkin, of Corea, is a grandmother who has spent much time with these children. To each one of these relatives, whose life has been darkened, the sympathy and understanding of the neighborhood and town go out.

FRENCH CEMETERY TELLS WAR TALE

Row After Row of Crosses in Sleepy Village Symbolize Spirit of France.

22 AMERICAN DEAD THERE

Woman Strewing Flowers Upon the Graves of Yankee Soldiers Mourns the "Pauvres Garcons"—American Describes Visit to Cemetery.

New York.—An American officer with Pershing's army in France has written in a letter to his wife this moving description of a visit to a French cemetery:

"Come with me, then, to this little village on the banks of the —, a sleepy little village nestled in the broad valley through which the river flows. In ordinary times a village of a few thousand inhabitants, it is now almost empty because most of the people who could afford it have fled to safer places, tending for the second time since 1914 the bitterness of the war as it affects the peaceful civilian.

"It is late afternoon, warm and sunny. We stroll down the main street together past the old church, once a handsome structure but now badly weather worn and almost in ruins. Further on we pass the ruins of an old Roman wall which marked the limits of the 'city' in Caesar's time. Our footsteps turn us to the right into a little lane which leads out to the country up the gentle slope and toward the front. After passing under the railroad bridge the lane branches off abruptly to the right. It soon disappears through a stone gateway and we find ourselves in the 'new' cemetery, called new because the demands of this terrible four years' struggle have been so urgent that the old cemetery is overpopulated. It was large enough for the normal population of the village, but death has stalked often through the streets these last four years and its victims must have room.

"A little gravel path, laid out with mathematic straightness, runs through the cemetery. First, there are a few civilian graves huddled together at the near end as if they had been crowded to make room for the other tenants. Then on the right row after row of graves of French soldiers marked by huge wooden crosses, and for the most part covered with those hideous bead-work floral pieces that the French use. On seeing them, one understands how Jean Valjean recouped his fortunes. You remember the story, no doubt. There were graves of infantry, cavalry and artillery, and once in a while that of an aviator, but wherever one goes it is always the infantry that predominates. Here is the grave of a Chinese worker, there that of a Mohammedan, but all bear the well-known phrase which means so much: 'Mort pour la patrie!'

Graves of Americans.

"As I wandered along through row after row reading the names and wondering who their owners might have been I was startled to see on the other side of the path a single row of graves, at the head of each a prim little cross, different somewhat from those across the way and painted in khaki. Then I knew who these newcomers were. There were 22 of them, each bearing a little round identification tag. I instinctively reached up to feel if mine was still around my neck. These 22, among the first to give up their all for the patrie so far across the sea, were arranged in perfect alignment like a platoon in drill. I couldn't help saying to myself:

"Well, when the Master of the Great Unknown commands—'Heroes, Attention to Muster!' you all will answer here."

"They were plain little graves, hideous almost in their newness and nary a sod to cover them. But had they been forgotten? No, indeed; for on each lay a little bunch of flowers, put there by the kind hands of the women of the village. These people are so kind, so thoughtful. They, at least, will never forget. Even as I stood there thinking about all these things a woman came up, very poor she seemed to be, yet she carried a huge basket filled with flowers, which she carefully distributed all along the row. As she came up to me I heard her say, almost to herself and thinking probably that I did not understand:

"Pauvres garcons, ils sont venus de si loin!"

"I couldn't help it, I went up to her and shook her by the hand and thanked her in the names of those sleeping there and in the name of their mothers and sisters and sweethearts back home. If I knew where to write, I would write to those 22 mothers and tell them that their boys are being well looked after.

"Before I could say anything more to the woman she was gone. She said she must keep one bunch of flowers for her mari over yonder on the other side of the path. There were the serried ranks of the French, on our side of the path only one little row, and then off in a far corner away from everything else a little group of German graves, hid among a clump of trees as if shrinking from the advancing hordes of French and their new allies from across the sea. It all symbolized so well the two armies, the French and the American, one great, the other small but growing, standing side by side against the Boches who lay in the corner against the stone wall.

"In the upper part of the cemetery was a group of workmen digging. They had been digging all day long and for many days, for there were many rows of graves yet unfilled. There must be room for those yet to come.

Supplies for the Front.

"Along the railroad that runs past the cemetery train after train passes, loaded with supplies and munitions and men, going up toward the front. Could those sleeping here but know it! Could they but know that France, as ever since those terrible days of 1914, is standing fast, holding the enemy at bay, and bearing the brunt of this terrific struggle! They must know it, for they all sleep so peacefully. Their part is done. They have given everything they had to give and unbegrudgingly. For them the distant rumble of the cannon has no misgivings, for they sleep secure in the belief that victory some day will be ours. Sleep on, comrades—for I am privileged to call you comrades—your work is over. You have well earned your rest. Those of us who are left will carry on the work you so well began.

"Just as I left the gate, turning homeward, a strange procession appeared down the lane, and I stopped to let it pass—a huge camion, painted war gray, followed by eight grizzled territorials, their rifles slung over their shoulders poula fashion. They were dirty, unshaven, and their uniforms faded and torn, but, oh, so typical of France, torn and wracked by four long years of war. On the truck was painted the word 'Munitions.' It was not mislabeled, for it carried cannon-fodder that had served its purpose, and had been used up in the struggle.

"I came quickly to attention and saluted. It is a custom of the country, often done without thought or feeling, but this time my soul was in it. I was proud to thus render homage to one poor common soldier as he passed on his last, long march.

"Open wide the gates and give the newcomer room! Give him a comfortable place in that furthest row, for he must have rest and peace. The leaves in the trees rustled, the torn and faded flags fluttered and the tin tricolor cockades on each cross twinkled—thus was the newcomer welcomed into his last earthly home."

GRANDSON OF GENERAL LEE

Lieut. Robert E. Lee, U. S. A., grandson of Gen. Robert E. Lee, the commander in chief of the armies of the Confederate states during the Civil war, is fighting for the United States. Lieutenant Lee has the mark as a military leader set by his famous grandfather as the goal of his efforts, though he will be doing his utmost for that Union which his grandfather strove to destroy. General Lee's fame as a soldier is secure, for he is rated by military experts as one of the greatest commanders the world has known. If Lieutenant Lee inherits his military skill there will be no question about his chances of being rated a military genius.

Major William Fitzhugh Lee Simpson, a grand-nephew of Gen. Robert E. Lee, recently died while on duty in France, according to a confirmed report received here. Major Simpson was in charge of the American school of machine gunfire in France. No particulars of his death, except that it was due to appendicitis, have been received. The Lees are in the fight.

N. Y. AIR RAID GERMAN JOKE

Comic Paper Says American Women Are Keen on Latest Paris Novelities.

Amsterdam.—A cartoon in the latest issue of the German comic paper Jugend pictures a German air raid on New York. The scene is a New York roof garden, from which the sky is shown ablaze with bombs, shrapnel and fighting planes. An American "millionaire" is shown escorting his richly clad wife, who is said to be "shrinking in terror before the apparition in the sky." He reassures her by saying soothingly: "Well, my dear, you have always been keen on having the latest Parisian novelities. Now you've got them!"

NO SLACKENING IN FOOD.

Increasing Army and Allies Demands for Food Must Be Met by Stricter Conservation of Foodstuffs Here.

Orono, Maine, Oct. 22—There is no prospect of a proper ending of the war before the campaign of the summer of 1919, said Herbert Hoover recently, Federal Food Administrator Leon S. Merrill of Maine points out that until the hour that Germany is defeated nothing is more dangerous than to look forward to a slackening of Food Conservation in America.

"Iron bed, pair of black trousers, and coat offered in exchange for foodstuffs." "New novels, large collection, in exchange for five pounds of food." "Finest stockings, lady's colored, in exchange for sugar or fats."

DID THIS HAPPEN ON YOUR FARM?

Following is an extract from a letter received by the U. S. Food Administration from a farmer who believes that conserving farm implements is the first step toward raising more food:

"I began going to sea in 1837. At that time there were no lighthouses or buoys this side of White Head. I went ten years as sailor and mate. In 1847 I took charge of an Ellsworth vessel, going my own pilot. I had very good luck with this vessel. 'About this time, Colonel Coggins, who had built several vessels at his yard, offered to build one for me. She was a brig, launched in September, 1850. I loaded in Ellsworth for New York. I sailed her that year in the northern lumber trade, and came home with her in 1851.'"

ADVERTISE FOOD NEEDS

There is food propaganda that is super-propaganda; no missionaries are needed to spread it. The American assurance to the Allies of a bigger and better loaf travelled like light and warmed like sunshine.

There is super-propaganda, too, that chills like November rain; and in spite of German skill in the art of concealment this kind of propaganda is travelling through the enemy country.

But the United States war and postoffice departments and the American Red Cross have joined forces and completed arrangements whereby every man may receive one parcel, but not more than one, from his family or friends.

The Hancock county chapter of the American Red Cross, and its branches and auxiliaries, will act as intermediary between the relatives and friends of these men and the postoffice authorities in providing them with their Christmas. An outline of the plan agreed upon is as follows:

Christmas parcel labels are being distributed to the men in the American expeditionary forces. Each man will receive but one label. These they are instructed to mail to a relative or friend. These labels will probably not begin to arrive in the United States before November 1.

The relative or friend receiving this label must guard it carefully. No duplicate can be obtained. If it is lost, no parcel can be sent.

The relative or friend receiving the label should present it at the nearest Red Cross headquarters. Following is a list of the Red Cross branches and auxiliaries in Hancock county:

Barnard, Bucksport, East Bluehill, Franklin, Islesford, Sedgwick, Sorrento, Somerville, Southwest Harbor, Sunset, Surry, Winter Harbor, Orland, Cranberry Isles, Waltham, Bar Harbor, Northeast Harbor, Bluehill, Brooksville, Castine, Deer Isle, Brooklin, Stonington, Swan's Island, Ellsworth.

When the label is presented at Red Cross headquarters, the bearer will receive one carton or container for gifts, 3x4x9 inches in size. Cartons will be presented only to persons presenting labels received from overseas.

The carton may be filled with any combination of articles which will fit in it, except those barred by the postoffice department. Barred articles include all liquors, all poisons and articles and compositions containing poison, explosives, inflammable materials, including friction matches, infernal machines, or anything that may ignite or explode...

When completely packed, ready to be wrapped and tied, the carton must not exceed two pounds fifteen ounces in weight. The carton is not to be wrapped and tied by the sender.

When the carton is packed it must be presented at the Red Cross headquarters from which it was received. There Red Cross representatives will carefully examine the contents to exclude forbidden articles, and will wrap and tie the parcel, weigh it, and affix the label from overseas bearing the address of the man for whom it is intended.

The sender shall then, in the presence of the Red Cross representative, affix stamps sufficient to carry the parcel to Hoboken, N. J. As the weight limit on a parcel wrapped and tied may not exceed three pounds, the maximum postage from Hancock county will be 15 cents.

MUTINY GROWING IN GERMAN ARMY

Officers Are Defied and 20,000 Deserters Are Said to Be in Berlin.

TROUBLE ALSO IN THE NAVY

Four Torpedo Boats Are Seized, and Attempt is Made to Escape, but Two Are Sunk by Pursuing Battleship.

London.—General demoralization of Germany's population and widespread and growing disaffection in the German army, accompanied by mutiny and desertions, are described in a dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from its Rotterdam correspondent.

The correspondent says that information reaching him is so sensational as to inspire skepticism, but declares he has received undoubted corroboration from authoritative sources.

He asserts that the German army is filled with mutinous spirit, and that alarming outbreaks have occurred in several units, principally Bavarian and Silesian.

One incident on the Arras front terminated in a whole Bavarian division being disarmed and transported to Bavaria, where it was placed in a prison camp, and the mutiny of one of the Silesian regiments resulted in nearly 100 of its men being executed.

A huge number of desertions are occurring, the correspondent says, and it is estimated that there are more than 20,000 deserters in Berlin alone.

Large numbers are scattered throughout the country and the authorities are having the greatest difficulty in trailing deserters owing to the connivance of the working classes. Nevertheless hundreds have been arrested and generally these have been sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment.

Disobedience and defiance of officers is common at the front, according to the correspondent's information, and a similar spirit is shown in the munition factories, where the workers deliberately are slowing up, with the result that the output has been seriously decreased.

"It was reported from various places on the Danish and Norwegian coasts three weeks ago that heavy cannonading was heard from the North sea," says a dispatch from Christiania to the Times. "A few days later the bodies of German marines were washed up, most of them on the coast of Jutland, but no fighting was reported on either the British or German side."

So there was much speculation about these floating corpses, which bore life belts with the figures and initials of two different German torpedo boats.

An explanation is now given by the Aftenposten's correspondent at Copenhagen, who says a report was received yesterday from across the German frontier of a recent mutiny. German navy crews refused to go aboard the U-boats to which they belong, and seizing four torpedo boats set a course for Norway.

They were overtaken by a German warship and a regular fight ensued, with the result that at least two torpedo boats were sunk and the crews drowned or killed.
