The football game Notre Dame and Carnegie Tech to be played at Pittsburgh, Saturday, will be broadcast starting at 1.45 p. m., with McNamee at the microphone.

Local football fans who are unable to attend the great game between Maine and Colby in Waterville Saturday will not be exactly out of luck for the story is to be broadcast from station WLBZ with Jack Atwood at the mike.

The return of Uncle Jim to the microphone of WGY, if only for one evening a week, has been warmly greeted by youngsters. Uncle Jim and his talented young assistants are producing a continued story, a mystery yarn that is carried from week to week to a smashing finish. Jack Hammond, the red-headed master of ceremonies, is giving Uncle Jim fine support and Dorothy Salad, sister of Sunny Salad, the five-year-old songbird, is piano accompanist. Uncle Jim and his gang are heard every Monday at 5.30 p. m.

The Monday evening Soconyland sketches are becoming increasingly popular. The subject next Monday at 8 p. m. will be "Grandisr."

Listeners on WEEL yesterday forenoon were delighted to hear a 15-minute organ recital by James O'Hara. Features of his program were bits of Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

TANGLED POLITICS

Everybody Is Guessing As To Who Will Rule Next Congress

Capture by Democrats of two normally Republican districts in the special elections next week was forecast by Chairman Shouse of the Democratic National Executive Committee.

In a statement from his party's headquarters, Shouse said that the Democratic candidates had a good chance of winning in the first Ohio and eighth Michigan districts.

Already holding a majority of one in the House lineup, the Democrats would be in a better position to organize the House if they took the two traditionally Republican districts besides the twentieth Ohio and the seventh New York, usually Democratic. Shouse said the second Pennsylvania, also to be filled Nov. 3, "seems safely Republican."

Definite plans on how to fill the vacancies in the fifth New Jersey and the first New Hampshire districts, created by the deaths last week of Representatives Ackerman and Hale, respectively, are to be made this week. Both are traditionally Republican.

The New Jersey legislature will meet Monday to undertake a change in the election laws. Gov. Winant of New Hampshire is expected to announce what course will be taken to fill the vacancy there.

While the outcome of the special elections is awaited by party leaders in Congress before predicting which will organize, the annual influx of House members in preparation for the convening of Congress Dec. 7 has begun.

Representative Tilson of Connecticut and Representative Snell of New York, chairman of the last rules committee, are outstanding Republican candidates for the Speakership nomination. Snell will return after the election. Representative Christgau, Independent Republican, Minnesota, declared neither Snell nor Tilson was satisfactory to Independents.

The Minnesota said the Independent possibly would have a speaker-ship candidate if the Republican leadership "does not abandon its reactionary policies."

Legion Boxing Carnival At the Empire Theatre Offers Real Action

With one of the greatest punching programs ready for exhibition at Empire Theatre tonight fans are fast warming up to the American Legion and Drum Corps boxing card and a capacity crowd is expected when the curtain goes up at 8.30 sharp.

The Legionnaires have spared no expense in rounding out a mitt menu that is well spiced with boxers of all weights, boxers who satisfy everywhere they perform. Heading the array of thump timber are two lightweight "who are among Maine's most popular leather heaters. They are Blondy Gayton, Lewiston's good natured and popular fighter and Blacksmith Laveriere. Gayton was headliner of the Lewiston all-star card Friday night and the blonde battler decisively defeated Young Wheeler of Richmond. Gayton had Wheeler on the verge of a kayo on the last round. He hopes to stop the Blacksmith, but the Waterville scrapper is also pointing for a knockout win.

Young Rubin is rounding into top-form for his scrap with Battling Sukeforth, pugilistic prize of this city. Over in Waterville the boxing bugs expect Rubin to knock Suke colder than the North Pole, but the local boy is as tough as a bride's biscuits, and has his own plans as to who's going to cop this interesting semi-windup.

Johnnie Yuck of Bangor and Al Wilson of Rockland may "steal the show" in their four-round. Both are slam-bang artists. Gold Coast Grenier of Winslow will box Young Sharkey from his rival town of Waterville. Billy Blanchard who was slated to mix with Grenier, underwent an appendicitis operation two days ago. Sharkey is a smart, two-fisted worker and the Gold-coaster, who made a big hit with fans here in the first show, may have his hands full in taking care of Sharkey.

Tete Whittier of Rockport will bring along an array of royal rosters to cheer him to victory against Bobby Gayton of Lewiston. These six-footers are comparatively new at the game, but they are willing and plenty of haymakers will fill the Harbor is bracketed with K. O. Robbins of Thomaston, and brother, there'll be oodles of action wrapped up in this titanic.

Tickets are now on sale by all Legion members, or you may telephone 402 for reservations. It looks as though the SRO sign would be hung out early.

At the meeting of the Auxiliary of Winslow-Holbrook Post, A. L. Monday evening plans for the joint inter-town take place Friday evening in the Legion rooms, Thomaston. Williams-Brazier Post auxiliary, as hostess, were discussed. Those attending are requested to be at the Legion hall, Limerock street, at 7 o'clock. The meeting of the Junior Auxiliary in the afternoon was marked by a 100 percent attendance.

TWENTY CHURCHES

Represented At Bible Conference — Notable Speakers Heard

A large and enthusiastic group of people met for the Regional Bible Conference held in the Methodist Church Tuesday. Twenty churches in the county were represented by delegations. This conference was sponsored by the New England Fellowship and 13 local churches.

The afternoon session opened with an inspirational song service led by Rev. H. I. Peterson, pastor of the Highland Congregational Church of Somerville, Mass., song director and soloist for the visiting team. Mrs. H. H. Marr presided at the piano for all the sessions.

J. Elwin Wright, director of the New England Fellowship, explained the purpose of the organization, and also the reasons for holding such conferences as the one then being held here. "The New England Fellowship," said Mr. Wright, "is an organization of Christians of all evangelical denominations, formed for the purpose of acting as a clearing house of inter-denominational and evangelical activities in New England."

Miss Kathryn M. Evans, another member of the team, gave some graphic instances of the religious needs of certain sections of New England as revealed by a survey which the Fellowship is now making.

The main feature of the afternoon was the address by Dr. Harold Paul Sloan of Haddonfield, N. J. In a masterful way Dr. Sloan presented the unique position of the Bible in the life and literature of the ages.

The church was practically filled at the evening session when the team presented their final message. The greetings of the entertaining church and pastor were presented to the delegates and speakers by Pastor Marr. Director Wright warmly responding to these greetings.

Seldom has a Rockland audience listened to a more scholarly and clear presentation of the arguments for the Person of Christ than were given in this session by Dr. Sloan.

The importance and value of this conference was such that after the afternoon session a committee was appointed to arrange for similar periodic conferences in this section. Rev. J. Charles MacDonald was appointed chairman. The next conference probably will be sometime in January.

MEET IN THOMASTON

Maine Daughters of American Revolution Will Visit Knox Memorial

For several years there has been a tacit agreement among the thirty-two Chapters of the Maine State Daughters of the American Revolution, to devote the November meetings to the interests of the Knox Memorial. From its inception the State organization has shown warm interest in and sympathy with the movement to honor General Knox, and has from time to time given it fine publicity at the State meetings, as well as gifts of money and furnishings.

Valuable additions to Montpelier's beautiful interior have come from individual Chapters, such as the Knox mirror, given by Lady Knox Chapter of Rockland, in the D. A. R. room, or library; the beautiful alabaster vases in the hall and the exquisite clock in the drawing room, from members of the Patience Stanley Chapter of Winslow.

At the 1930 annual State meeting of the Daughters, it was voted to furnish the northeast room, or library, by contributions of money and gifts of furniture, and it is with a view to keeping the memory of this pledge fresh and green, that the November meetings are dedicated to the interests of the Knox Memorial.

On Monday, Nov. 2, the General Knox Chapter of Thomaston, and the Lady Knox Chapter of Rockland, will at the invitation of the board of directors of the Knox Memorial Association, hold a joint meeting at Montpelier, in honor of the visit of the State Regent, Mrs. Florence Waugh Danforth of Skowhegan, who has been prominent in the Maine Federation of Women's Clubs. Elected to the State Regency at the 1931 annual meeting, Mrs. Danforth, by her experience and tact, is making a fine record as head of the Maine Daughters.

The program for the joint meeting will include addresses by Mrs. Danforth and the Rev. Walter S. Rounds of Rockland. An interesting feature of the afternoon will be the presentation of a chair to Montpelier by a committee of members from the Col. Daniel Sewall Chapter, D. A. R. of Bath. Another gift, a silver teaspoon, of the beautiful Knox design, is unique as being the only teaspoon of that pattern among the tablespoons and dessert spoons given by Dr. Henry Thatcher Fowler.

This teaspoon is presented by Miss Mary Nicholson and Mrs. J. A. Levenson. A most interesting letter to Rev. R. Woodhull of Thomaston, in 1855, given by Miss Annie E. Gerry of Boston, formerly of Thomaston, will be among the gifts.

Those in charge of the arrangements of the joint meeting are Mrs. Merton O'Rock, Regent, Gen. Knox Chapter, Mrs. Anne Snow, Regent, Lady Knox Chapter, Mrs. Lois M. Creighton, Mrs. Eliza Walker, Mrs. E. C. Moran, Jr., Mrs. Effie J. Seavey and Mrs. Carolyn Page.

THE NEW NUMBER PLATES

They Are Here, Mr. Motorist, Green and White, and Running From 54,000 To 60,000

The shipment of 1932 number plates for automobiles arrived at the headquarters of the Maine State Police, corner of Main and James streets Tuesday and represent quite a departure from the existing plates, both as to appearance and serial numbers.

The plates have a green background, with white letters. The numbers run from 54,000 to 60,000 and those desiring "specials" to correspond with their telephone number, etc., will be accommodated as far as possible by getting in touch with Levi Flint the first week in December.

The new plates may be obtained commencing Dec. 1st, but ones now in use are good until March 1. Motorists should bear in mind however, that while the present numbers are good for several months yet, the present operators' licenses are not good after the last day of the year.

So there you have it! The class colors for next year are green and white. The class motto is just the same—"Safety First."

LIONS GO SOUTH

And Have a Pleasant Voyage With Dr. Hall — New Member Roars

Dr. Walter L. Hall again drew from his inexhaustible fund of travel stories yesterday and told the Rockland Lions Club about his steamboat voyage to South American ports. His lecture was illustrated by many interesting photographs, passed around the circle.

First off he exhibited a pilot chart of the North Atlantic, used on such trips. These are issued monthly by the government, and deal with numerous maritime aids as to wind, weather and current, based on observations.

How do ships head when they are going to South America? Apparently an easy question, one would think and yet these ships follow lanes which are not circumscribed by points of the compass.

The first port is Rio de Janeiro. Dr. Hall strained his eyes for a sight of the American flag, which he supposed would be almost everywhere on the high seas. But aside from the Munson liners he saw only one—that on a banana freighter. Why American ships cannot compete with foreign lines he demonstrated by showing how a Japanese crew lived. Buenos Ayres! The finest modern city in the world. "At last here is a port where nobody will know me," quoth the doctor. But the words were scarcely uttered when he was told that a man wanted to see him on the dock. And he found there an old college chum, whose father had cabled him that Dr. Hall was coming.

Buenos Ayres has no manufacturing establishments, hence no smoke. Hence it is a scrupulously clean city. Surrounding it is a flat country well under cultivation. The only trees are those which have been planted. The doctor visited some of the large ranches, not on horseback as he had expected, but in a fine motor car.

He also visited the hospitals, but was not very enthusiastic because he could not see where, with such a limited number of patients, the revenue was coming from. A light dawned on him when he was told that appendicitis operations sometimes net $5,000 to $10,000 each. The rich of Buenos Ayres are very keen to get around the corner.

Montevideo was much the cleanest town Dr. Hall saw, and had the finest people.

Dr. Hall gave many interesting sidelights for which space is lacking, and the Lions now insist that he describe his experiences in the capacity of a revolutionary general.

The club took a new member into the fold—Manager Joseph Dondis of Strand Theatre, who has promised to tell the club how he came to this country as an immigrant, and of his career since landing in America.

The Lions voted to do their share toward reviving the Boys Band and the committee assigned to this task comprises Charles T. Smalley, Jr., Francis Saville and Maurice F. Lovejoy.

Notice was given of the Waldoboro Lions Club's sad night, which is scheduled for next Wednesday night with the Knox County clubs invited.

Hal Bates acted as pianist in the absence of King Lion Annis, and got a nice hand.

YOUNG PEOPLE MET

Robert Bald, Jr., To Head Knox County Y. P. C. U. the Coming Year

An enthusiastic meeting of the Knox County Young People's Christian Union was held Saturday in Camden at the Methodist Church. The attendance exceeded in numbers that of any previous meeting, members of the Baptist Young People's Union, Epworth League and Christian Endeavor Society of Camden, Rockland, Warren, Rockport, St. George, Martinsville, Friendship, Tenant's Harbor, North Haven and Vinalhaven being present.

The afternoon session was opened with a devotional service led by Rev. F. F. Fowle of Rockport Methodist Church. A business meeting followed and these officers were elected: President, Robert Bald, Jr., Tennant's Harbor; vice president, Kenneth Hooper, Rockland; secretary, Solveig Heistad, Rockport; treasurer, Gladys Kitching, Camden.

The message of the afternoon was delivered by Rev. H. A. Akeley of Warren, after which adjournment was made to the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium where a social hour was enjoyed. Supper was served at the church at 6 o'clock.

The evening service began with the devotional exercises, led by Rev. Milton R. Kerr of Martinsville. The address by Rev. H. H. Marr of Rockland on "Victory and Service" was helpful and inspiring.

Unemployment Fund Has $10,000 In Sight—Work Starts Soon

Something over $8,000 in cash and pledges has been received by the Unemployment Fund and at a meeting of the drive committee Tuesday night Chairman Carver expressed the belief that with the dances, card parties and pledges yet to be received the desired goal of $10,000 will be attained. No further canvass will be made but all contributions will be gratefully received at the Chamber of Commerce office.

The investigating committee is now at work on the matter of what project shall be undertaken. A maximum of labor must be employed rather than any large expense for material and the projects must hook up with municipal betterments. Meantime those desiring employment are registering at the Chamber of Commerce office. About 50 names have been received thus far.

Chairman Carver and his associates on the Unemployment Fund express their appreciation of the fine spirit manifested by the citizens and workers. The funds will be administered with care and every effort made to avoid any unfairness and abuse. Frequent reports will be made through these columns and suggestions will be welcomed by the Chamber of Commerce office which serves as headquarters for the administration of the fund.

"CHEVIES" COLLIDE

Auto Accident On the New County Road Gives Everybody Bad Scare

Working in her piny beds on the New County road early Tuesday afternoon Mrs. George A. Wellman was frightened nearly out of her wits by a tremendous crash almost at her elbow, and turned to find a motor car on its side and nearby another with its front badly stove in.

At the request of one of the victims she phoned for an ambulance and at the same time asked counsel to call the State Police. As luck would have it the ambulance was not needed. The method of the accident was not uncommon. Freeman H. Harmon of Port Clyde returning from Rockland in his Chevrolet coach, found his progress blocked when a woman driving a car ahead of him unexpectedly applied the brakes. Mr. Harmon naturally swerved to avoid a rear end collision, but as he swung another Chevrolet coach, owned and driven by James J. Flynn of 39 Greenwood avenue, Needham, Mass., crashed into his car, the force throwing it over onto one side.

Both drivers were the only occupants of their cars and neither was seriously injured. Mr. Harmon had one of his fingers badly cut and Mr. Flynn had an arm injured besides sustaining numerous bruises.

The accident was witnessed by Robert A. Webster and a reporter of The Courier-Gazette, who were only a short distance away bound for Thomaston. Mr. Webster, who is a special deputy sheriff obtained the necessary data, and was soon joined by Patrolman E. C. Ingraham, Special Officer Forrest Hatch and State Patrolman Daniel S. Pray, who completed the investigation.

Both cars were badly damaged.

Alumni Day will be observed at Bowdoin College Saturday with President Clifton D. Gray of Bates College as one of the guest speakers. The Bates-Bowdoin football game will serve as central feature of the day, although many other plans are afoot.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

If I had to live my life again I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once a week. The loss of these tastes is a loss of happiness.—Charles Darwin.

EVENING IN AUTUMN
The western sun withdraws the shortened day.
And humid evening, gliding o'er the sky
In her chill progress, to the ground condescends.
The vapors throw, where creeping
Where marshes stagnate, and where rivers wind,
Cluster the rolling fogs, and swim along
The dusky-mantled lawn. Meanwhile
The moon
Full-orbed and breaking through the scattered clouds,
Shows her broad visage in the crimson east.
Turned to the sun direct, her spotted disk
Where mountains rise, umbrageous dales descend.
And caverns deep, as optic tube describes,
A smaller earth, gives us his blaze again.
Voids of its flame, and sheds a softer day.
Now through the passing clouds
seems to stoop,
Now on the pure cerulean rides sublime.
Wide the pale deluge floats, and streaming mild
O'er the skirted mountain to the shadowy vale,
While rocks and floods reflect the quivering gleam.
The whole air whitens with a boundless sea of
Of silver radiance, trembling round the

Be strong, as thy days so shall thy strength be.—Deut. 33:25.

OUR COURTEOUS POLICE

That was a very pretty compliment paid to our city's police by the speaker at the Methodist church Tuesday evening. He had in his hand one of those blue tags which his car had won through erroneous parking, and he quoted from its courteous and gentlemanly phrasing—no coarse bawling out, no harsh command to appear at court, but instead a friendly pointing out of the parking violation, coupled with a cordial invitation to visit the city again. In all his travels, the speaker declared, he had never encountered so delightful a manifestation of courtesy in connection with the vexed detail of parking, and he warmly praised this method employed by the Rockland police in dealing with it.

OTHER RECOLLECTIONS

The mention of old-time conditions at The Brook has stimulated interest in other Main street points of history, among which the ancient town pump at the intersection of Limerock street comes in for recurrent notice. The old steam-mill, which has been alluded to, was a later phase of the brick house that Dr. Sears built and occupied as his home, and it was not until long after his death and the family dispersed that the property fell into other uses. Among these appeared the mill alluded to, which was operated by George Mayo, and devoted to transforming into merchantable lumber the stately groves of oak that for generations had spread themselves over the eastern slopes of Dodge's Mountain. It was J. R. Bodwell, one time Governor of Maine, and noted for his extensive granite operations in these vicinities, who as owner of the mountain properties thus denuded them of their oaken splendor and left them in their present state of unadornedness.

LADY NANCY WINS

Because Lady Astor is the sister of Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson of Seven hundred Acre Island, and by visits here has qualified for membership in this summer colony, our people have always taken interest in her British public life and therefore the more rejoice in the great victory that she has won in this week's elections. The narrow majority of 211 votes by which she was in 1927 elected to parliament, this time is increased to a majority of 10,000, by which margin she sent down to defeat the Labor candidate. The associated press story of her victory continues with a personal sketch of a strikingly interesting character. We quote:

Viscountess Astor (Nancy Witcher Langhorne), the first woman to sit in the Imperial British Parliament, has been there uninterruptedly since 1919. In that year her husband was forced by his elevation to the House of Lords on the death of his father, to vacate his seat in the Commons, where he was representing the Sutton Division of Plymouth. She took his place and has been re-elected regularly ever since, in spite of the fire which some of her social and political views have caused in her constituency.

The phenomenon of her political success in England is the more remarkable because of her non-British birth. She is the daughter of Chiswell D. Langhorne, of Greenwood, Va. The four sisters were famous beauties in the Southern society of the days before their marriage. Her first husband was Robert Gould Shaw 2d, of Boston, to whom she was married on October 27, 1897. They were divorced six years later and she retained the custody of their child, Robert Gould Shaw 3d. Mr. Shaw died in New York on March 29, 1920.

She was married to Waldorf Astor, later Viscount Astor, in 1906. They have four sons and a daughter—William Waldorf, Francis David Langhorne, Michael Langhorne and Nancy Phyllis Louise.

To the British public Lady Astor has been a paradox and a delight. On most social questions her views are liberal—her campaign for shorter working hours and higher education for women has attracted wide attention—but her zeal for temperance has cost her many votes. She stirred the British Isles to their foundations a few years ago by her pronouncement that the Australian cricket team beat the English because the colonials did not drink. Her first speech in the House was a fulmination against liquor, and in 1923 she engineered the passage of a bill preventing the sale of intoxicants to persons under eighteen for consumption on licensed premises.

With this, her love for horse racing, a heritage from her Virginia days, puzzles the British for generally, in their eyes, a foe of drink is a foe of the turf. Her vigorous and abrupt manner of debate in the House, her flaunting of old parliamentary traditions and her belief that peeresses should be admitted to the House of Lords have both outraged and pleased voters and politicians.

Lately she has been especially active in the cause of world peace. A year ago in the first international radio address ever delivered by a woman, she said that the peace of the world was the task of the women of the world and that she hoped for early success on arms limitations. Last week, too, she startled Britain by predicting that before long birth control would be a national problem of such magnitude that Parliament would have to give it attention.

WEATHER
Rain all day yesterday, and the showers this morning are predicted to continue tomorrow. Wind is east, temperature 49. The mercury stood at the same figure yesterday afternoon, with light southwest wind. The mild weather and ample moisture are keeping the lawns as green as in the summer. Somehow it does not seem fitting for the Halloween season, the time "when the frost is on the pumpkin," and is a disappointment to the school children who have long anticipated the vacation period afforded by the State teachers convention meetings.

There will be a card party at the G.A.R. hall Friday night.

The Thrift Shop will be open Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The teachers of the primary department of the Congregational Sunday School meet tomorrow night at 7.30 at the home of Mrs. E. C. Moran, Jr., Chestnut street.

Three panhandlers were in Judge Butler's court yesterday and made to understand that there would be trouble in store for them if they did not "get." They got.

The membership of the Parent-Teacher Association is steadily increasing. A most gratifying fact in view of the large quantity of work to be accomplished this winter.

A large barn at 16 Lisle street was destroyed by fire at 5 o'clock this morning and the tenement adjoining, occupied by Otto K. Franklin, was badly scorched on the ell section. Mr. Franklin's loss includes his car, a sewing machine, baby carriage and other furniture in the barn, estimated at $500, with no insurance. The property is owned by Mrs. A. M. Hastings and Mrs. D. G. Munson whose losses, about $1000, are covered by insurance.

Representative Everett N. Hobbs of Hope was a visitor at The Courier-Gazette office yesterday and from a paper bag drew—not some of those delicious Red McIntoshes for which he is famous—but a dozen man-sized sweet potatoes which were a part of his native acres. He planted the sets in June, and did not dig the potatoes until last week, being much gratified at their number, size and quality. Have we ever fully learned what Knox County soil is capable of?

STRAND THEATRE
Jack Holt and Ralph Graves will appear as co-stars in "A Dangerous Affair" which will be shown Friday and Saturday.

These wise-cracking adventures of "Submarine," "Flight" and "Hell's Island," emerge as light comedies in their newest screen venture. Jack Holt as a police lieutenant, unravels a murder mystery; while Ralph Graves appears as a wise-cracking newspaper reporter who unwittingly starts it all.

"A Dangerous Affair" is said to be a real novelty in mystery stories because, despite the seriousness of the mystery involved, it often borders on downright comedy. Murders, spooks, belly-laughs and general hilarity are all intermingled. And the murders are not the result of gangster machinations. The whys and wherefores of gangdom are outside the pale of this film.—adv.

IT MADE EASY PICKING

Our Cushing correspondent notes that William McNamara gathered enough scallops at his shore one day recently to make a good stew for his supper. It is the third time he has picked up this kind of shellfish where the sea had washed them from some unknown bed near his place.

Alton Young, caretaker of the Michael Goldberg premises on Maple street, hands us a handsome white rose which he plucked there Tuesday. Three buds are about to open.

On the dean's list at Colby College this term are Eino Hall, Long Cove; Ralph W. Fowler, Rockland; Martha Johnston, Washington; Avie Brown, Thomaston and Thelma Flagg, Waldoboro.

The schoolgrounds are silent for the balance of the week while the pedagogues are away attending teachers' convention. Most of the boys and girls are doubtless studying hard meantime.

The Rockland Spiritualist Society will hold meetings next Sunday in G.A.R. hall at 2.30 and 7.30 p. m. Rev. Walter S. Rounds will deliver the lecture and Mrs. Annie Smith of Portland will bring messages from the world of spirit. The public is invited.

Theodore Sylvester of The Courier-Gazette force is coming into a fortune, or something equally lucky. Tuesday, back of the office, he found a whole flock of four, five, six and seven leaf clovers. So don't be surprised at anything that happens to our Ted.

The Thrift Shop on the ground floor of the Masonic building will reopen Saturday at 2 p. m., prepared to offer some bargains that no needy person should neglect. A large consignment of furniture from the George Warren Smith estate at Warren Park has been added to the stock. And here's an important announcement. Non-residents will be privileged to buy furniture, but the sale of clothing is limited to Rockland people.

Former Senator Merle Harriman of Readfield, who is also prominent in Patrons of Husbandry ranks, was in the city Tuesday and made a call upon E. C. Moran. They represent opposite sides in the Administrative Code discussion, but are very friendly enemies, and there was no call for the six-ounce gloves which grace the prize ring.

Excursion to Boston! shouts the Maine Central trainman having reference to the special reduced round trip rates which are to be good commencing Nov. 6 and limited to reach the original starting point by midnight Nov. 16. To Boston and return from Rockland will cost just $7.96. The excursions will give football fans an opportunity to see Harvard vs Dartmouth, Nov. 7, without mortgaging the house, motor car or radio.

Dr. Robert H. Fernald of Philadelphia, nationally known educator and engineer, and son of the late Merritt L. Fernald, president, will be the speaker at the luncheon to be held the first annual home coming day at University of Maine, Nov. 7. The choice of Dr. Fernald as speaker is especially fitting, connected as he is with the world of science and education and an alumnus of the university. The luncheon will be held just before the Bowdoin-Maine football game.

J. Maynard Brennan, who has a filling station at the corner of Park street and Broadway, has extended his operations by erecting a larger station on the premises in Warren owned by Mrs. Agnes Brennan and Miss Clytie Spear, who are associated with Mr. Brennan in the enterprise. In connection with the filling station there will be a tea room. The building is an attractive Colonial structure, is nearly completed and the gas station will be in operation in about two weeks. The tea room, however, will not go into commission until spring.

The next High School football game is scheduled for Saturday, but has been postponed to Monday in order that players and officials may attend the two State series games. Camden is coming down next Monday still convinced that it has the better team, and basing that theory on the fine showing which the Meganitcook eleven was able to make in the concluding chapter last Saturday. On the other hand the Orange and Black team has tasted blood and is exhibiting decidedly cannibalistic notions in regard to the approaching contest. Quite certain it is that the sidelines will be decorated with whooping demons.

Rockland had an interesting visitor Tuesday in the person of Seth Yerrington, a New York aviator, who with his flying partner, Edward S. Maloney, came to Maine during the summer preliminary to a non-stop flight to Mexico in the plane Capt. Yerrington was looking over Rockland's air facilities in connection with an important undertaking which may be made later in the form of shipping live lobsters from Maine to New York, Chicago and other centers which consume large quantities of the crustaceans. He found a receptive audience when he talked with local dealers, and while the matter is still very much in embryo something decidedly important may result.

In the current issue of the Central Maine Power Co.'s magazine, The Exciter, is a sure-enough likeness of Hollie Bennett, the corporation's Camden representative. And The Exciter had this to say about him: Bennett, Hollie—Born Sept. 9, 1885, Iron Mountain, Mich.

Schools—Iron Mountain Grammar and High School.

Hobbies—The Exciter was unable to learn what Hollie's hobbies were, but judging from his record as a town representative we should say it was selling, for many a campaign has been swung in favor of the Eastern Division through his efforts.

Present position—Town representative at Camden, from 1920 to 1925 he was inside foreman at Rockland.

NORTH HAVEN
The meeting Tuesday night in the old church had the best attendance yet, 70 or more being present. It is hoped to have electric lights installed soon.

Wednesday 2000 fingerling trout were distributed in Vinalhaven and North Haven waters. The trout came from the hatchery at Appleton, and filled 26 cans. They were brought by Merle Mills accompanied by H. F. Huse and Clarence Waterman Jr., and within an hour and a half after leaving Rockland they were distributed in the island ponds. The fish were fine large ones and in the North Haven cans there was but one casualty. The kindness of Waterman Company in trucking them to Fresh Pond is greatly appreciated. The distribution was at widely separated points and made by Mr. Huse assisted by Mr. Brown. Monday several big trout reared in the Lewis pasture spring were released in Fresh Pond by Mr. Huse and Herman Crockett.

Principal Danforth and Miss Buzzell of the High School faculty are attending the teachers convention in Portland.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—At a public dance Martin Forbes, Chicago newspaper man, is pleasantly attracted by one of the girl dancers. He "cuts in" on her partner, a man whose name he learns later is Rhoda. Rhoda, whom he instinctively dislikes. The girl tells him her name is "Rhoda White." He overhears a conversation between Lewis and an unknown woman which he realizes concerns Rhoda. Sensing a good newspaper story, he informs the girl of a blind ad signed by her name and for the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland," which, judging from the talk he overheard, is a convenience in the girl's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it.

CHAPTER II—That night Rhoda finds the advertisement. The sight of her discarded name (Martin was right) recalls her childhood in a California town. Her mother, dead, she is happy with her father, professor in a small university, until misfortune comes. Associated with the name is her uncle, William Royce, who becomes in her childhood some mysterious woman, Rhoda, by chance, learns his name. Afterward, stenography. When she is sixteen her father dies suddenly, vainly trying to give her a sense about "papers" in a trunk. She has some money, and after his death, fearing she will be claimed by her uncle, she changes her name to "White" and becomes a stenographer in the newspaper office where Forbes is working. She is living with a fellow worker, "Babe" Jennings. Babe, who had been at the dance the night before, tells her Lewis had asked her if Rhoda's real name was not McFarland.

CHAPTER III—Next day Martin has supper with Rhoda and Babe. He is told the girls' apartment has been broken into. Rhoda had laid away, is stolen. Martin has learned that the mysterious "C. J." of the advertisement is "C. J. Forster, uncle of Max Lewis, and living at the Worcester hotel. The girl admits her name is McFarland, but tells Martin little else of her history. A mysterious "Claire Cleveland" asks Rhoda for an interview.

CHAPTER IV—Rhoda meets Claire, who tells her she knew her father well and is anxious to secure a document belonging to her which Professor McFarland had in his possession when he died. Claire also reveals knowledge of the which wrecked McFarland's life, a false charge of violation of the Mann act. She warns Rhoda to beware of Forster. The girl promises to look for the paper, but finds the trunk in which were all her father's possessions, and which she had sealed, has been stolen.

CHAPTER V—Rhoda, convinced that Claire has engineered the theft of the trunk which the girl had told her was in her apartment, charges her with the act. Claire, of course, indignantly denies it, but Rhoda, her suspicion awakened, trails her to the Worcester hotel, where Forster lives.

CHAPTER VI—Martin, suspicious of Forster, goes to the Worcester, at a venture. He overhears Claire telephone Lewis to bring a "trunk" to her flat. Martin follows Lewis, with the trunk, which he recognizes, to a railroad depot, where he checks it. Martin has an idea. He phones Claire.

CHAPTER VII—At the depot Lewis is arrested by Babe Jennings. She leads him to believe she is also going to New York. Claire appears and accuses Lewis of trying to "get away." Babe flees, after getting the trunk check from Lewis.

CHAPTER VIII—Rhoda secures admission to Forster's apartment at the Worcester. He tells her he was her father's friend and offers to "adopt" her, but the girl is suspicious. Finally she tells him of the trunk containing the papers, that was stolen.

CHAPTER IX

Some Light and More Darkness. SHE had expected that statement to startle him, but she'd nowhere near guessed what the force of the explosion would be. The utter disintegration of panic that his whole appearance betrayed would have been ludicrous if it had not been revolting. His face had gone a sickly shiny yellow. A door had opened and the man in the blue serge suit was in the room. "Yes, sir?" he said interrogatively.

"I didn't ring, Conley," Forster told him, without looking around. "Understand now, I shan't want you until I ring."

It was precisely the same phrase, Rhoda noted, that he'd used in dismissing the man the other time. It was no doubt a code word, or station himself at some listening post where he could hear everything they said.

"What was it you were saying?" Forster asked. "That some trunk of yours had been stolen?"

"Yes," she said, "my hat trunk, while I was out at lunch. At least I think that's when it was. When I went back to the studio after lunch, about two o'clock, I found it gone."

"What happened after lunch, did you?" he asked, after a sharp look at her. "What kind of hours do you keep on your job?"

"I had this afternoon off," she told him. "I didn't go back to the paper at all."

friend. Well, last night I got a letter from a woman I'd never heard of before, asking me to lunch with her today. She said she'd known my father well and had some things very important to talk to me about. I went to lunch with her to find out what it was. What she seemed interested in was my father's papers, whether he'd left any and whether I had destroyed them. I told her I hadn't. I'd kept them all together in a trunk. She said she'd given him a letter to keep for her and now she wanted it back. She suggested that I take her home with me—to my room, you know—and let her help me find it. I told her you're not necessary, but that I'd find it for her if I could. When I said that, she excused herself from the lunch table to go out and telephone. When she came back she kept talking and ordering more food so that I couldn't get away. When I finally got away and went home, I found that the trunk with my father's papers in it was gone."

His little gimlet eyes had been boring right into her all the while she talked. Now, at her first pause, he barked out, "Who was this woman?"

"She told me," Rhoda answered, "that her name was Claire Cleveland."

A sudden suffusion of blood in his face turned it purple. He beat feebly but furiously upon his desk with a loosely clenched hand. "So you've joined up with that black-mailing woman, have you?" he said.

"I haven't joined up with her at all," Rhoda retorted. "I've just been telling you I think she stole my trunk. She talked to me about you quite a lot at lunch, and she'd come black from the telephone, that is. She said she'd seen your advertisement for me in the newspaper."

He pounced upon her here with a question. "My advertisement?"

"Yes," she said, "the one in the newspaper about the trunk."

"What trunk?" he asked, frowning.

"The trunk with my father's papers in it," she said.

"What papers?" he asked, frowning.

any more lies you'll spend the night in jail. And to begin with, he wound up after a long stare into her face, "who are you, anyway?"

Bewildered now by the suddenness of his attack she could only echo in amazement, "Who am I?"

"Yes. Thought you'd cooked up something pretty good, didn't you, when you got together and swapped stories with a discharged employee of mine, faked up the red hair, and came around here pretending to be Rhoda McFarland."

"I am Rhoda McFarland," she told him furiously. "I don't know who you think I am. I don't know what you're talking about."

"I don't mind telling you what I'm talking about. I'm talking about what happened to Professor McFarland six years ago, when he got on a train here in Chicago to go back to the coast. He'd been east to read a paper before the Oil Chemists' Institute, and he found a young girl on the train across the aisle from him crying because she'd had her pocketbook stolen after she'd got on the train."

"He was crying and she said her father, pullman and all, so they wouldn't put her off the train. According to his story that was all he did. And she promised him her friends would pay him back the money as soon as she got to the coast. But what she did was to make a complaint before the district attorney out there that he'd taken advantage of her."

"He claimed it was a frame-up, and when it went to trial the jury acquitted him, although he couldn't show any reason why anyone should want to frame him that way and on one else could, either. And the scandal of the trial cost him his job at the university."

"So he came back here and told me his story, and I believed him. He gave me a job. He felt disgraced about it. He was like a man hiding out from the police; didn't want anybody to know who he was or what he was doing. Well, I could see how he felt so I never told a soul anything about it. I even paid him his wages in cash every week."

"Claire Cleveland couldn't have found out anything about him, even if she'd tried to. He never came near my office nor where I lived. He worked at a place I fixed up for him, and I don't know where there once a week to see how he was getting on and to pay him his money. I made sure he never told his daughter anything about that California mess. She was nothing but a kid. He'd kept it from her if he'd been telling everybody else in sight. And if you want to know who I think you really are, I don't mind telling you that either. I believe you're the one person alive today who really knows whether Walter McFarland was telling the truth or not."

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Jane Ray is a "loner" among a crowd of metropolitan reporters. She will not exchange news with them, and will resort to any trickery to scoop them. She reaches a new climax in her career when she publishes a sensational article about the city editor of a rival newspaper after phoning the facts of a murder confession to her city editor, thereby preventing the others from catching their early editions.

The following night at a party Garry Webster takes the lead in saying unpleasant things to her, but finds himself succumbing to her undeniable charm. After an exchange of bitter remarks she challenges him to continue the argument at breakfast in her apartment the following morning. They live across the court of an apartment house and she promises to call him when she is ready to receive him.

Chapter III

JANE'S "Yoo-hoo" echoed across the cavernous spaces of the areaway the following morning as she had promised.

Garry, still dragging a towel across his freshly-shaven face leaned out of his window and called: "I'll be right over."

Vonnie called down a minute later and invited Jane upstairs to breakfast. She was mystified when Jane refused her invitation.

Garry breezed into Jane's apartment quite cheerfully. He looked about the place admiringly, examining the cupboard, refrigerator, cretonne hangings and daintily set table. He gazed at Jane.

"I can't get over you," he said admiringly.

It was Jane's turn to be surprised. She turned from the electric grill where she was at work. He continued:

"Everything seems so peaceful here. You look so lovely. Not even a miniature about the place, that is. It's like a dream. The excitement gets in your blood. You're housewifely enough now, Jane, but marriage would bore you sick in a month."

"I wish you wouldn't think of me as just a Sob Sister. Her tone was almost pleading. "I don't like the excitement of it any more than you do. But I have to make my living and I'm better fitted to be a reporter than a piano mover."

Garry was touched. He tried desperately to resume his gay nonchalance. "I'm a swell idea. I'll play hooky from work. I'll borrow a friend's car and we'll drive over to Long Island."

"Lovely!"

"I know where there's real country—trees and birds and flowers and everything."

His mood was infectious. "We'll have a picnic," she suggested. "I'll get away before Baker can call me on the phone."

She was inspecting the icebox for luncheon materials when the phone rang.

"Probably Baker with a nice big juicy murder," he suggested.

She answered and listened. He could not tell what the message was, but he heard her say hurriedly: "Yes, all right. I'll be right over. Goodbye."

She hurried to a closet and began throwing filthy things into a dress suit case.

"He was triumphant. 'There! What did I tell you? Jane off on her daily orgy.'"

"No," she fibbed. She was business-like now. She hurried to her dressing room. "I've forgotten all about my appointment. She's fixing some things for me and I must take them right over."

"Go ahead," he told her, a trace of sarcasm in his voice. "I'm going to torture another muffin."

She hurried out. He gazed at the closed door, his face hardening. As he sat he heard the voice of the maid who came to his apartment calling to him across the apartment house away.

"Your paper is on the phone, Mr. Webster."

"Then I'll call them," he shouted.

"Bryant 6000," he told the operator. "Garry desk, Webster calling—"

"Hello, Webster!" It was the voice of his city editor. "There's a double death over in Jersey. Bentley, the poet."

He slammed up the receiver, reached for his hat and crumpled it between his hands. For a moment he gazed at the closer from which Jane had just taken her things.

"Yeah!"

In the word was concentrated a mixture of bitterness, disappointment—contempt even.

She was a Sob Sister about everything. He slammed the door behind him and hurried down the stairs to the street. In a few moments he was on his way to Jersey.

"I got so I couldn't eat anything without having trouble afterwards," says Mr. Barney Barnes, popular oil rig builder, of 2 1/2 West Grand Avenue, Oklahoma City, Okla. "I would have heartburn, and indigestion pains after meals."

"Nothing seemed to help me. I tried everything I could hear of but my indigestion hung on for years."

"Then a friend got me to take some Pape's Diapiesin. I had almost immediate relief with the first two tablets. Now that I have been taking them for some time, I find I can eat meats or most anything and have no trouble. I want to tell others about Diapiesin because it sure helped me."

Local Contests Completed

4-H local contests have been held by 31 clubs in 20 communities with over 225 club members exhibiting their work.

Ten clubs have completed their work 100% and by Nov. 1 more record sheets will be in the office. Hope clubs had the largest attendance of approximately 100 parents and friends. Dresden Mills was second with over 75 present. Programs of songs, recitations, demonstrations and plays have been given by each club. Damariscotta Mills and Simonton's Corner entertained their parents with suppers followed by programs and games.

Three clubs in Union held the local contest in Seven Tree Grange hall. Four demonstrations were given: "Packing a Lunch Box," Pauline Young and Thelma Esany; "Thinning Vegetables—Robert Mitchell, Willard Howard; Planting and Transplanting Vegetables—Raymond Rhodes, Robert Farris; Canning and Grading Eggs—Clifton Meservey. A good attendance of parents and friends was had in practically all the communities.

A new insect for the orchardists to combat was recently discovered by County Agent Wentworth. It is known as the European Red Mite. It is so small that it can not be seen with the eye, but red spots appear on the trees where there are many of the insects together. For control measures use an oil spray in the delayed dormant stage and thoroughly spray all parts of the tree. Orchardists should watch their trees closely for this insect.

Recent apple market report from Boston indicates strong demand for McIntosh which as the reporter says "stand out in a class by themselves." There is also improved demand for fancy Baldwins.

Cleason Turner, Agricultural Engineer of the Extension Service, will be in Knox-Lincoln County this week assisting County Agent Wentworth in laying out orchards.

THE SAUNTERER

A. B. Crocker

The day being auspicious, the wind nor'west, I decided to saunter over to the noble Charles. I had the river bank all to myself, so I selected a bench in the sun, just up-stream from the Larz Anderson memorial bridge, and sat. Just back of me was Mt. Auburn street, with its car line and a through street for auto traffic. On the opposite side of the river the Metropolitan Parkway gave through auto traffic to Brighton and points south and west. Also the Harvard Stadium, R.O.T.C. headquarters, and Harvard Boat Club. For water bound traffic there were three single sculls manned by young men and five motor launches tied up at the club float, "as idle as a painted ship upon a painted ocean."

Should I happen to be visiting some other city in the U.S.A., or some city in any other part of the world, and gazing upon that scene before me I could probably write something of interest about it; but as it is in our sister city of Cambridge, and I can walk there in half an hour, why, there is not much to write.

As I basked in the sunshine of that beautiful New England October day, sniffed the ozone wafted to me by the north-east wind, a dove flew by, veered to port and crossed the river to the oar. "O that I had wings like a dove!" I exclaimed. "I would fly over land and sea, alight at the old home village, and go smelting."

I wouldn't give a plugged nickel to sit in a boat anchored across the tide and catch smelts. To me smelting means to take the old bamboo pole outfit, hang a basket on my arm to catch minnows, saunter down to the Crick, then start at Elmira's ledge and fish up to the bridge.

THE OBSERVER

Mrs. A. I. Perry

We hear so much and read so much these days about "this depression." It gets on one's nerves. As to myself, I have no patience with a pessimist. It is my firm belief that most people are very shortsighted and careless of what opportunity has given into their control. If those of us who are not fortunate (and often I am forced to think, unfortunately) enough to have unlimited means would look ahead and plan there would be less talk of poverty, unemployment and the inevitable bread line.

I personally know of many who patronize places of amusement but do not own a decent shirt; and then they expect others, who are saving their nickels and dimes, to share with them. The deserving poor have my entire sympathy, but for the waster I have only contempt.

Every adult knows there is a cold winter ahead. If there is no work in the city or village of their residence, there need be no lack of warmth, for the country abounds with wood to be got with little expense, provided one is able and willing to work. Some there are who do not know how to go about it. Others do not want to know, just blame it on the administration, or to prohibition! We are given the right to dictate our own lives, also to abuse them. Yet we cannot live upon ourselves alone.

Rambles Afield

Adella F. Veazie

(Number Twenty-eight.)

While we are admiring the various flowers and shrubs under cultivation in our gardens, let us not forget that there are also many plants along our country roads which are well worth our notice and care, especially for those who have large lots of land which may be made into rockeries, pools and wild corners. Among the earliest and most noticeable comes the meadow rue, so common that many take no more notice of it than they do of the dandelions which bedeck our fields and lawns so gorgeously and which elicit so much profanity from the man behind the lawn mower.

If you will examine a plant of meadow rue you will wonder that it is not more often cultivated. Its leaves are almost as finely cut as those of the maiden hair fern in our hot houses and it would be well worth our care even though it never blossomed, but the blossom is such a dainty, misty white bit and there is such a cloud of them that I always think if they were advertised in catalogues as some rare foreign plant, people would pay high prices for the plants and there would be a rush to obtain them.

Have often said, when the dandelions bloom, that if we had never seen one before and had to buy them, there are many who would not hesitate at giving a dollar for each plant. Still I am not advising any one to plant dandelion seeds on the lawn for notwithstanding their beauty they are a pest and a nuisance, but not to such a degree as the burdocks which are so plentiful at the foot of Rankin street and which are increasing at a rapid rate each year, simply because no one seems to have the forethought to cut them down and burn them before the seeds ripen. There is much to study and admire, even in a burdock, but when a whole neighborhood becomes infested with them nobody loves them. Pick off a burdock blossom and examine it closely. Every one of those little curved hooks on the outside will stick to your dress, your stockings, your hair or wherever it touches you.

It is really a curious and attractive plant, in its proper place as a specimen, but woe to the animal of whatever kind which strays into an infested area of mature plants with their ripened seeds, for immediately they become imbedded in his hair.

But only his human friends with scissors and brush can relieve him of his misery. Kill every burdock you can find, and burn the refuse. A spoonful of kerosene on the amputated stump of the plant will insure its death and you will have no further troubles.

But I started with desirable plants for the garden and as usual have left my original subject and wandered off among pestiferous things which we do not want, however curious they may be.

A very handsome plant can be found occasionally in our woods which may easily be transferred to our garden. This is Actaea or as it is more commonly called, Baneberry. One kind has large clusters of bright red berries, while another has white berries with thick red stems. Both varieties have leaves almost as handsome as some ferns. Neither is likely to become a pest as they are not at all common even in a wild state. I have always seen these in more or less shaded situations when in a wild state, but when I called on Lilla Cole some three or four years ago, I found them growing near her door in full sun light, so I concluded that while some shade is desirable, it is not absolutely necessary, as hers looked very vigorous and thrifty.

For some time I have been planning to find a plant of Pyrola to transfer to my wild garden. Sometimes I hear that plant called wild lily of the valley, though it is in no way related to that plant, but the stem of white bells reminds me of them and the fragrance is quite as pronounced. They bloom in July and I have seen them growing quite plentifully near one of the garage halls where Pomona was held, though I have forgotten just where, but think it may have been near the garage.

The rhodora which blooms so profusely at or about Memorial Day is another handsome plant for the garden, though I have heard that it does not take kindly to a change of location. This reminds me that so many insist on calling the plant "lambkill", while lambkill blooms in July and has a much prettier blossom, wheel shaped and a better shade of pink. Both belong to the heath family but there is no mention of Rhodora being poisonous, while lambkill (sometimes called "sheep poison") is said to have killed young cattle and sheep.

Former Rockland Ball Player Dies In Bath—"John L." Umpired One Of His Games

Thomas P. Neagle, 68, veteran barber, fireman, and baseball star, died last Saturday in Bath after an illness covering a period of 14 months.

Mr. Neagle, conducted for many years a barber shop, first on Center street and later on Washington street. He was a member of the Bath Fire Department for nearly 25 years. He started with Kennebec, No. 3, transferred to Water street, went to the Northend station for a year, and later rejoined the Water street company where he remained until he became second assistant chief engineer.

Mr. Neagle lived for a time in Rockland, where he was employed for six years at the Thorndike Hotel.

During his residence in that city, he played on the town baseball team against its traditional rivals, Belfast, Camden and Bangor. His last year in Rockland was featured by a 2-2 tie with the strong nine of Holy Cross college. The last year he played with the Bath team, the players went to Canada, where they played at Moncton, Fredericton, St. John and Halifax. One of the days he treasured was when he caught in Rockland and John L. Sullivan stood behind the plate as umpire.

CEMENT MATTERS

Accidents In This Industry
Rare—Thomas A. Edison's Contributions

The current issue of The Association Progress Review, issued by the Portland Cement Association contains a number of matters interesting to those who are connected with the plant at Thomaston.

Considerable space is devoted to the recent death of Congressman Ernest R. Ackerman of New Jersey, a pioneer cement manufacturer and for many years president of the Lawrence Portland Cement Co.

The National Safety Congress met in Chicago last week, with about 4500 in attendance. The outstanding safety record of Portland Cement Association members was the subject of repeated favorable comment in meetings of several important sections. At the luncheon meeting of the Public Utilities Section attended by some 700 representatives of leading utility companies, Dr. Stephen K. Mahon of the Toledo Edison Co., praised the safety work of the cement, and referred to the specific record of a mill under his observation which had operated without accident for 1148 days. David Adam of the Lawrence Co. was elected vice chairman of the cement section.

The recent death of Thomas A. Edison recalls the important contributions he has made to the production of portland cement. His great interest in all labor saving devices and equipment led him to study the possibilities of portland cement and concrete, and in turn to the manufacture of cement. The Edison Portland Cement Co. of Orange, N. J., was organized in 1899, and its first cement was shipped in 1905. At that time the rotary kilns in use were seldom more than 60 feet in length. Mr. Edison saw the possibilities of a much longer kiln, and in 1909 was granted a patent covering the design of kilns 150 feet or more in length. Mr. Edison is credited with introducing the well drill for quarry blasting operations, and with being the first to use steam shovels for loading rock in the quarries. He was greatly interested in the possibilities of concrete for fire proof house construction.

He also built the first crusher that would handle rock dug by large steam shovels. His crusher will take a rock weighing five tons, and is running today, though it was built 25 years ago. Originally driven by a 600 h. p. steam engine, it is now powered by a 600 h. p. motor but the engine still stands ready for use. The rotary kilns he designed are still making cement.

ANOTHER SUMMER THEATRE

Maine is to have another summer theatrical colony, if the plans of Len D. and Leona Hollister mature. The project to cost about $200,000 is to be on Raymond Cape and will be known as The Sebago Lake Theatre on Raymond Cape. The Hollisters who have been summer residents of Raymond Cape since 1924 are widely known as vaudeville artists, playwrights and composers; they have figured extensively in Maine theatricals. The outlay as now planned will include a modern summer theatre, overnight bungalows, a nine-hole golf course, tennis courts, dining room and dance pavilion, with facilities for swimming and boating. The colony for the theatrical folks will be set aside and known as Players' Lane.

At The High School

Ruth Whittemore

Frances Knowlton presides at the office typewriter this week.

Everyone here is feeling happy over our football victory Saturday.

The senior supper under the able management of Lucy French brought in approximately $50.

All the city schools are closed Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week on account of the state teachers convention at Portland.

A few days ago the teachers of the English department enjoyed afternoon tea served in Mrs. Carroll's room. Very English, what?

No, Mrs. Spear's classes are not putting on any pre-Halloween stunt. Those paper bags over their heads are a convenient and efficient means of achieving 100% touch in typewriting. No seeing the keys through even the huge carvill bag which Nelson Rokes thoughtfully provided for his own use.

The Thrift Shop has nothing on the Manual Training department. After several years of dickerings Mr. Whittemore has at last succeeded in selling the clumsy, old sander for enough to buy a spray new one which does all the work and takes up only a tenth as much space. He even has $7.50 left over to buy extra belts for the new machine.

Sue Hastings' marionettes were charming. The Friday afternoon matinee especially for children featuring "Peter Rabbit" was enthusiastically received. The evening performance was more sophisticated. The management even removed the screen during the presentation of a screaming funny rehearsal of the play. "St. George and The Dragon" so that the audience might see how the clever little figures were manipulated. There is only one serious difficulty with marionettes. In order to enjoy them fully one must have the vivid imagination of a child combined with a mature appreciation of the artistry involved. Unless the spectator possesses both of these qualities some of the charm eludes him.

Edward Gross conducted the devotional exercises at the high school assembly Tuesday morning. The program under the direction of Mrs. Robinson was carefully arranged and beautifully executed. It consisted of a number of musical compositions and their explanation.

Naomi Stearns explained the first selection, one of Carl Weber's compositions. Weber, a German pianist and composer, who lived 1786 to 1826, became famous for the operas which he wrote. The selection was an overture of one of his most famous operas Der Freischutz, which means The Freeshooters.

The scene is in Bohemia, 1750. The story is founded on a German tradition that whosoever will sell his soul to Zamiel, the Demon Hunter, may receive seven magic bullets, which will always hit the mark. The story is woven around Max and Agnes, and in order to win Agnes, Max secures the magic bullets.

As the duet is played you will listen first to a tender horn passage as Max goes into the forest. Night is falling and the air is filled with mysterious sounds. Then a quick movement, representing the doubts of the young hunter is heard and the magic bullets sound as they drop into the melting pot. Next a beautiful melody, portraying love and happiness appears, but this is succeeded by another mood of distress. Finally a triumphant strain is sounded, leading to a grand climax.

The Overture, Der Freischutz, was played as a piano duet by Emma Harding and Gertrude Heal.

Carol Gardner explained the second selection.

There is situated in Russia near Leningrad on the Neva River a famous island called Kammenoi-Ostrov. Ostrov being the Russian word for island and Kammenoi signifying small and rocky. In winter countless sleighing parties go to and from this island on the ice of the river. In summer the river is covered with boats. The midnight sun, which never goes below the horizon, floods the scene with its mystical light. One of the Russian composers, Anton Rubinstein, spent much time on this island. In fact, he became very familiar with all phases of gaiety at this festive resort and well acquainted with most of its people. He wrote twenty-four pieces for the piano, entitled "Kammenoi-Ostrov" which are a set of tone sketches representing various scenes and characters which his sojourn there brought within his experience.

While many of these pieces reflect the gayer side of this life the No. 22 portrays the contemplative phase of life. This composition is intended as a musical portrait of a lady, outlining spiritual rather than physical charms. The first song-like melody of the piece is intended to suggest the personality of the lady while the right hand indicates the poetic background, the luminous summer night, the weird light quivering through the leaves, the mingled scent of flowers, the faint sea-breezes, the hum of summer insects, and the whisper of the reeds stirred by the river.

Then is heard the bell of a church, not far distant, calling to midnight mass and ringing out through the whole second strain. Full rich chords of the organ are heard. This is followed by a brief passage suggestive of the voice of the priest intoning the service within the chapel. Then softly a little conversation is heard, like whispered words of farewell, and finally a few chords of the organ lingering and fading into silence.

Kammenoi-Ostrov No. 22 by Rubinstein was played by Miss Gertrude Heal. This was followed by a vocal solo "Sylvia" by Virginia Richardson.

Lawrence Crane gave the explanation for the "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6" played by Horace Booth.

Franz Liszt, a Hungarian pianist and composer was a contemporary of Rubinstein. To many players he is the man who wrote the thumping things they usually put at the end of a program. Hungarian Rhapsodies. The reason that players have this impression is because Liszt's pieces are so difficult.

Contrary to the general impression, these Hungarian Rhapsodies are not in any sense derived from National Hungarian Music, but they are purely gypsy or Bohemian origin.

Liszt himself gives a reason for naming these pieces as he did, saying:

"I have called these Rhapsodies Hungarian because it would not be just to ascribe to the future what has been united in the past. The Hungarians have adopted the gypsies as their national musicians. The gypsies, though scattered in many countries, and cultivating elsewhere their music, have no where given it a less equivalent to that which it has acquired on Hungarian soil."

These compositions, then, according to Liszt's own statement are called "Hungarian" only by courtesy and a sort of national adoption. They are called Rhapsodies because of their resemblance to those poems sung or recited by the wandering bards, troubadours, and rhapsodists. Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6 begins with a march movement. Next comes one of the forms of the friska, which is often sung in Hungary. Then follows a doleful part, the words to which, in free translation run as follows: "My father is dead, my mother is dead. I have no brothers or sisters, and all the money I have left will just buy a rope to hang myself with."

The work closes with a wild dance, which Liszt has brought to an overwhelming climax. The last artist needed no explanation. His songs and pieces have gained a place in the hearts of the American people and are familiar to all. Narcissus by Ethelbert Nevin was played as a piano trio by Flora Colson, Carol Gardner and Evelyn Sherer.

THE CARNIVAL SOON

Rockport High School Much Enthused Over The Annual Event

The forthcoming carnival to be given Nov. 13-14 by the senior class of the Rockport High School promises to be the most successful series. Business houses have taken on the carnival spirit and thousands of samples have already arrived for distribution. The local churches and auxiliaries have ambitious plans for making their booths attractive.

Carnival visitors will see the Eastern Star, the Ladies Aid and the Johnson Society of the Methodist Church, the Try-to-Help Club and Sewing Circle of the Baptist Church and many other booths beautifully decorated and presided over by those who will try to be helpful.

The committees have been hard at work at their parts in the carnival. Mrs. Farmer in charge of the advertising has everything well in hand and already has a list of names in store. Roland Richards in charge of booths has to report that they are nearly all sold. In charge of the electric decorating is Roland Crockett who promises the most brilliant display of colored lights yet to be seen at any carnival. Minnie Wellman at the head of the entertainment has a fine array of dancing girls and furnishes a program for afternoons and evenings.

Other features are balloons, hot dogs, candies, punch, booths and fancy work. All will enjoy the crowds and remember the thrill of waiting for the grand prizes.

THE SEASON'S THRILLS AND ILLS

[For The Courier-Gazette]

We've had the opening of the spring; The croaking frogs and birds that sing. The time to plant and sow the seeds. To get supplies for winter's needs. But with the blessing come pests—Mosquitoes, flies and hornet nests; Snakes and lizards in the grass; I turn aside as they pass. To save our crops we insects slay. Which keeps us busy day by day.

Then come the good old summer days. When Sol throws down his brightest rays; When zephyrs soft our faces greet. Fragrant with perfume subtly sweet. Caught while kissing fragrant flowers. Wet with morning dews and showers. With these days come the lightning's flash. Soon followed by the thunder's crash. And we wonder, standing in awe. What can mean this sudden flaw.

Next the scene shows glorious fall. Among the seasons the best of all. This then we gather in the fruit. Our empty larders to recruit. We pause and view each changing scene; The leaves that once were all so green. Now gorgeously decked in many hues—To view this sight could one refuse! But soon we watch them blow away. And leave the trees all bare and gray.

When winter comes and freezes o'er Our ponds and pools from shore to shore. The girls and boys with glee will skate. But sometimes fall and bump their pate. There's many a joy in winter time. When days are fair and air sublime; But when wild Boreas rules the air Broke better clothe ourselves with care; He'll tan the cheek and bite the toes. And leave a blue spot on the nose.

As changing seasons roll around. Like changes in our lives abound; In babyhood, like tender plants. We need kind care as we advance To childhood's glorious summer days. And color life with halo rays. Through childhood days our minds we store. For future use the best of lore. What should be used for purpose true. Which, sad to say, some fail to do.

Soon comes to us life's wintry age. When we review each blotted page Of records made by word and deed. Some hearts made glad, some made to bleed.

We too, like leaves, fall and decay. We're wrapped in shrouds and laid away. Our race is run, our battles fought. The veil is drawn and we are not! Oh, then how sweet is Hope Divine—That we shall live again, and shine! W. R. Walter.

North Waldoboro, Oct. 26.

BLIGHTING THE CEDAR

Experiment Station Says Arbor Vitae Leaf Miner Is the Rascal

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—Some time ago I noticed that the cedar tree by the driveway on the property of William T. White near Chickawaukie Lake, known as the Holmes farm, was attacked by a, to me, entirely new disorder. The particular tree is very beautiful. None whom I consulted could explain the remedy of the trouble or suggest a remedy. Other similar trees in this section suffered likewise, so I consulted the Maine agricultural experiment station and received reply as follows. It may be of interest to such of your readers who are puzzled by the appearance of cedars on their properties.

John Kellenberger.

Orono, Oct. 17.

Mr. John Kellenberger:—The cedar twigs submitted show the work of the arbor vitae leaf miner. The tiny whitish moths are found flying in June. In midsummer they lay their eggs on the edges of the leaves. The young larvae then mine into the leaves of the preceding year's growth. They become full grown near the end of the season. Spraying with a contact insecticide such as nicotine sulfate (Black Leaf 40) has given some measure of control in Connecticut.

However, as you doubtless know the arbor vitae sheds some of its leaves each fall, and I am wondering if part of the trouble which you describe may not be due to this natural leaf drop. The past winter produced an unusual degree of winter injury to evergreens in general in this section. Many spruce, pine and cedar trees had brown twigs and branches as a result.

If spraying is undertaken it would be necessary to make the applications as soon as possible after the miners begin their work. Spraying late in the season would have no value, since the miners leave the foliage after becoming full grown.

C. R. Phipps, Entomologist.

FROM BANGOR STATION

Will Be Broadcast Maine Football Games Of Next Saturday and Armistice Day

For the first time in the history of the Maine colleges the two final games of the series of four between the colleges, to be played Saturday, Oct. 31 and Wednesday, Nov. 11 at Waterville, will be broadcast through Station WLBZ at Bangor.

Jack Atwood, former of Bangor, and one time announcer of WLBZ, will be loaned by the Yankee Network management to the Bangor station to describe the two outstanding football contests of the year between the University of Maine and that of Colby, Oct. 31 and between Bates and Colby on Armistice Day.

Atwood, a graduate of the University of Maine, and former band leader of that college, joined Station WNBC and the Yankee Network some months ago, after several years at WLBZ.

Atwood will be assisted in the broadcast by Michael J. Ryan, well known Maine athlete, whose familiarity with college sports will make him an invaluable aid to the reporter in his description of the plays.
