BROUGHT TO HOSPITAL

The Maine Air Transport, Inc., performed another timely act last night when it brought to this city Mrs. Marietta Winslow of Vinal Haven, who became a patient at Knox Hospital. It was the first time in 13 years that Mrs. Winslow had left the island. Stanley Boynton was the pilot.

THE JIM CROW LAW

That is the name given to any law requiring the separation of white people and negroes in railway and street cars, schools, theaters, hotels, restaurants, etc. Such separation of the races is required by law in the majority of Southern states. "Jim Crow" was long used as a general nickname for a colored man. It was popularized in that sense by Thomas D. Rice who in 1835 employed it in a song which he introduced in "The Rifle," a play composed by Solon Robinson. According to a tradition, Rice picked up essential parts of the song, along with a peculiar limping dance, by accident from an old negro in Louisville, Ky., in 1828, whom he heard singing. "Wheel about, turn about, do just so, an' every time I wheel about I jump Jim Crow." In 1839 an anti-slavery book entitled "The History of Jim Crow" was published in London.

It seems that the only boom that can be had now is the kind you fall down and go.—Thomaston (Ga.) Times.

TWO MINUTES OF SOLEMN SILENCE

Governor Gardiner has issued a statement asking observance of Armistice Day, November 11.

"May we on this occasion be mindful of the blessings of peace; endeavor, both as individuals and as organized society, to emphasize the finer thoughts and joys of life, which abound especially when there is freedom from strife and conflict," he said.

"It has been requested that the general observance of Armistice Day be accompanied by two minutes of solemn silence at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, with a suspension of all industrial activity, as far as possible, together with a complete cessation of street traffic."

ANOTHER GAS REDUCTION

Central Maine Power Company Makes It Possible To Heat Your House More Cheaply

A reduction amounting to over 16 percent in the present gas rate for house heating purposes is announced by the Central Maine Power Company, effective from Nov. 1. Officials stated that the reduction was the result of increased efficiency, resulting from a recent program of enlarging and improving its gas manufacturing plants and was in line with the present day trend to lower costs of all fuels.

This reduction applies to all towns in which it supplies gas, as follows: Augusta, Bath, Fairfield, Farmingdale, Gardiner, Hallowell, Rockland, Waterville and Winslow.

Under the new gas rate all gas used for other domestic purposes through the same service will also be included under this rate so that all customers who heat their homes by gas will have the benefit of the same low rate for all other uses. The rate states that $1 will be charged for the first 200 cubic feet used per month and 7 1/2 cents per 100 cubic feet for all over this amount per month. The lowest rate obtainable under the old rate was 9 cents per hundred cubic feet.

This new rate is available to any customer located in sections where adequate gas mains are already provided to take care of house heating requirements. This is the second reduction made by this company to its gas customers since December 1929.

TRIAL NEXT WEEK

William G. Mank, Indicted For Murder, Repudiates Alleged Confession

William G. Mank, Waldoboro fish peddler, pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder in the slaying of Redding Genthner, 70-year old South Waldoboro farmer, and was remanded for trial Nov. 16.

Mank through his counsel, Frank A. Tirrell of Rockland, repudiated the alleged confession made by him to Lincoln County authorities as he lay in an Albany, N. Y., hospital. His arrest in Albany resulted from his mutterings as he was being treated for self inflicted wounds.

Recreation Alleys Score Another In Inter-City Bowling Series

The Star Alleys and Recreation Alleys are having a nice little series for the city championship. Last Friday night the Recreationers were on the long end, winning by 55 pins. Nobody touched the 500-mark, but Jack Black gave it a scare with 498. Here is the score:

THE BIG CARNIVAL

The Annual Rockport High School Benefit Has Many New Features

Only two more days before the doors of the Town hall will swing open and Rockport's Big Carnival, the biggest and best ever, will be in full swing. Everyone is busy with last minute preparations. The noise of hammers and saws is heard as the construction of booths progresses and when the decorating committee has completed its work the hall will present a sight well worth viewing. Lights have been strung from Town hall to the iron bridge and one passing through the town cannot help realizing that something of unusual interest is about to take place, and the artistic posters (work of Roland Richards) placed here and there will tell what is in store.

The opening of the carnival will take place Friday at 2 p. m. and from that time until 12 o'clock Saturday night there will be something doing every minute. The Rockport Boys' Band will give a concert each afternoon, with soloists and other instrumental numbers, and a sample of a program of merit will be presented under the direction of Mrs. Minnie Wellman and Mrs. Mildred Holmes. Dances in costume by the young ladies, tap dance, clog, waltz, etc., will be featured. The ladies of the Rockport Baptist Circle will serve a baked bean supper both nights, a feature to be appreciated by those who come from a distance and desire to stay for the evening. There will also be several refreshment booths presided over by members of the carnival committee, and a sample of a program of merit will be presented under the direction of Mrs. Minnie Wellman and Mrs. Mildred Holmes. ARMISTICE DAY

We wish it were possible to comment upon the approach of another Armistice Day without being forced to recognize that two great nations are still at war, and that the spirit of peace has not fully triumphed over that of hate. The argument in favor of maintaining our naval strength is in itself an acknowledgment of suspicion that it will yet be needed. One would think that the lesson taught by the World War would be sufficient to last for many decades; one would think that the League of Nations might have a sufficiently powerful influence to make further wars impossible; one would think that in these days of stress the world would be occupying itself in a battle for life instead of being concerned with thoughts of destruction. Yet here we are with the lesson still fresh in the mind but bitterness still apparent in the heart.

Rockland, very proud of its American Legion Post and conscious of the worthy efforts which its leaders are making, is to take upon itself the worthy task of rededicating Winslow-Holbrook Square, thus named in honor of two Rockland boys who fell in battle. Consecrated ground which none should pass without a thought for the two who made the supreme sacrifice, or without again recognizing our debt of gratitude which we must always feel toward those who stood as a bulwark against the peril which faced world democracy.

WARREN TO WOOLWICH

There exists in the minds of some people the notion that the State Highway Commission is indifferent to the need of a permanent highway between Rockland and Bath. Such an idea would fail to take into account the money already expended in Thomaston, Warren and Woolwich, not forgetting the expensive Georges River bridge. Traveling over the rough highway which intervenes between Warren and Woolwich creates a natural impatience to have a cement road the entire distance, but the spokesmen for the various towns, who have besieged the State Capital, have found the Commission impotent to bring about the desired improvement. That a start is to be made recompenses us somewhat for the disappointment that everybody feels because the building of cement highway is not to be continued straightway. The Press Herald yesterday had this editorial comment on the situation:

The State Highway Commission has approved plans for the improvement of Woolwich-Rockland highway during the coming year. These plans will shortly be laid before the Governor and Council for consideration. The Commission finds itself lacking funds with which to construct a cement highway for the entire distance. There will be about twenty-two miles of road which cannot immediately be provided with a cement surface.

The plan is to lay the foundation for future construction. The road for these twenty-two miles will be straightened, widened and given a gravel surface treated with oil. Later, when the Highway Commission has the funds available, a cement surface can be laid as was originally contemplated.

It is important that everything possible should be done to put this road in the best possible condition. What the Highway Commission plans to do is the best it can do under the circumstances. It should be encouraged to carry out the plans it has made.

All towns are not fortunate enough to have as fine a welcoming arch as Camden possesses but all towns can afford a marker which tells the visiting stranger where he is at. This is the campaign which has lately had its inception. Massachusetts and the Provinces have these markers, many of which furnish important historical data besides informing the stranger what town it is.

That is an excellent suggestion—to erect a tablet on the site of the ancient town of Arundel in York County. Kenneth L. Roberts' novel of that name has done much to recall the glories of a once flourishing settlement—and, by the way—are we fully appreciative of the fine service which some of our talented authors are giving in Maine's behalf?

The Black House, Ellsworth's outstanding show place, may not be quite so well known as the White House but it has had 4000 visitors this season, and down that way they refer to it as "Mt. Vernon's Only Rival."

SEMINARS IN MAINE

Christian Faith In Light of Modern Science To Be Discussed By Cong'l Pastors

Has recent biology and psychology left man a "soul?"

This and other questions relating to Christian faith in the light of modern science will engage the attention of the 260 Congregational and Christian ministers and theological students of the State of Maine at seminars to be held this month under the direction of the Rev. Rodney W. Roundy of Portland, superintendent of the Congregational-Christian Conference of Maine.

The leader of the seminars will be the Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, D. D., of New York, N. Y., general secretary of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches. The Maine seminars will form part of a national series being conducted by Dr. Burton.

The first Maine seminar will be for ministers in the western part of the State and will be held in the First Parish Church of Brunswick, Tuesday and Wednesday, November 10 and 11, 1931. The second will be in Skowhegan, Nov. 12 and 13. The third seminar will be for pastors in the eastern part of the State and will be held in the Congregational Church of Bar Harbor, Nov. 17 and 18.

"In this series of seminars," Dr. Burton said today, "Congregational and Christian ministers and theological students are facing frankly, fearlessly and constructively such questions as are raised by the tremendous advance of scientific knowledge in this generation; widespread popular interest in that knowledge has made timely special attention to the religious conceptions of God and man."

"To some there appears to be a great enrichment of faith through the widening horizon of truth; while to others God seems to be squeezed out of his universe. To some, the modern conception of the nature of man in the light of biology and psychology seems to leave no room for the "soul" or even the mind and therefore to eliminate the need of religion as popularly conceived; while to others man grows greater and spiritually richer with increasing knowledge of his real nature."

Dr. Burton has long been known throughout the Congregational and Christian ministry as a profound student of the religious implications of modern science. He spoke upon this theme in the key-note address at a recent biennial convention of the National Congregational Council and his address was ordered printed and distributed to the ministers throughout the country.

Dr. Burton is a graduate of Chicago Theological seminary and is a brother of the late Dr. Marion LeRoy Burton who served as president of Smith college.

SECOND DISTRICT COUNCIL

Will Be Entertained Here Tomorrow Afternoon By Winslow-Holbrook Unit.

Wednesday afternoon Winslow-Holbrook Unit, American Legion Auxiliary, will entertain the Second District Council of the Auxiliary which is composed of 28 units. Mrs. Bertha S. Abbott of South Paris, State vice president, will call the meeting to order at 1:30 and has arranged an excellent program. Among the speakers will be several State chairmen of the Auxiliary and Anne F. Snow national poppy chairman of the Eastern District.

Refreshments will be served during the social hour following the business session when Mrs. Abbott will make known her appointments for committee chairmen of the Council.

This is the second meeting of the season, the October meeting having been held, with a large attendance, at Lisbon Falls.

Mrs. Abbott is very busy installing the units in her district and also is serving on the traverse jury of the Oxford County Superior Court.

WARREN

Much sorrow was felt by friends and associates at the news of the death of Raymond Lange which occurred Friday night at his home in Pascoag, R. I. He had come to Warren in March in the capacity of dye overseer in the mill and worked until about three weeks ago, in poor health even while he was at work and often putting in extra hours. During his short stay here he made many firm friendships. He was suddenly stricken last Monday with the acute form of Bright's disease. He leaves his father, three sisters, one of whom visited him here this past summer, and two brothers. Funeral services were conducted Monday from his late home, and floral tributes were sent from Georges River Mills and from other friends in this place.

Maynard Creamer and Harry Gordon have been doing some shingling for George Teague.

Among those who attended Pomona Grange at Washington Saturday were Miss Mabel Crawford, Mrs. Charles Mank and Mr. and Mrs. Austin Kallioch.

Mrs. Amy Fuller has returned from a two weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Fuller at Belfast.

Mr. and Mrs. John Teague spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Fuller at Belfast.

Mrs. John Connell, Miss Martha Connell and Bliss Fuller of Union attended the McCormack concert Thursday evening in Portland.

Stephen Comery and Ronald Messer were on a three days' hunting trip the first of last week near the town of Lincoln.

Mrs. Elizabeth Nicholson, who has been living with her daughter Mrs. Stephen Comery the past few months, died Friday after a short illness. Burial will take place at Pine Grove cemetery in Lynn, Mass., her home city.

Saturday night was the coldest thus far this season with the thermometer registering but 16 degrees above.

Mrs. Willard Hall who had been caring for Mrs. Elizabeth Nicholson during her illness, returned to her home Friday.

The ladies of the Congregational Church circle will serve the monthly supper Thursday. The committee in charge are, Mrs. Grace Campbell, Mrs. Nettie Jameson, Mrs. Alice Mathews, Mrs. Belle Walker, Mrs. Gertrude Starrett, Mrs. Adelaide Sawyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wellington spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Packard at Winthrop.

The children of the Malcolm Corner school had a pleasant surprise for Mrs. Nettie Vinal, their music teacher, Friday morning when they presented her with a sum of money earned by selling Ready Jell, to help defray expenses of some music books recently purchased. Madeline Haskell of the third grade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Haskell, sold nearly 30 packages.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Andrews are to start for the South today. They will stay in Boston for a few days enroute.

Alvah Simmons shot a 125 pound doe Saturday on Vaughn's Neck.

Wendell Studley bagged a small buck Thursday.

Ten friends of Warren and Rockland helped Mrs. Percy Buckley celebrate her birthday anniversary Wednesday evening. She was the pleased recipient of two cakes and several other attractive gifts. A very pleasant social evening was passed with cards a feature.

Mrs. Shirley Bowley, accompanied by Mrs. Abbie Stickney, Mrs. Laura Robinson and Mrs. Gertrude Weaver motored Thursday evening to Belfast where they attended the Pythian Sisters inspection.

Miss Doris Bowley and Dorothy Sidelinger attended the moving pictures at Belfast Thursday evening. Supper and Mr. Frank D. Rowe go to Boston Thursday where Mr. Rowe will attend the meeting of the New England Superintendents' Association of which he is a director.

Both chemicals were called out Saturday morning to a chimney fire in the Aho place, occupied by the family of Everett Banner. The fire was extinguished without the aid of the chemicals.

APPLETON

Mr. Trask of Togus has leased the blacksmith shop of Bert Mitchell and will do all kinds of job work.

Miss Golda Banks of New Mexico preached to a large audience both Sunday afternoon and evening at the Pentecostal Church. Next Sunday there will be a baptism at the pond at noon time. These meetings have been largely attended all summer.

HEBOS BECOME HEROES

Capt. Drew's Outfit Takes the Count At Last In Vinalhaven Contest

Hebo Claytor and his faithful four turned on their tormentors last Thursday night and although the licking was not one to brag about and was administered only with the help of Kind Lady Luck it was a win and served to break the string of four consecutive defeats. Captain Drew ascribes the defeat of his team to the long arms and hawk like eye of "Skunk" Gray who in the very last frame crashed out a strike on a spare and turned defeat into victory.

Beaten 13 pins in the opening stanza, the Drews kept fighting and cut down that lead by three pins in the second, and in the third were going strong until Gray's sensational finish knocked the props from under them and they didn't seem to have the ability to stage a rally. M. Jameson came out of the woods across the pond having been in retirement all summer, to lead the field for three-string total and Gray's 97 was the highest string booked for the entire contest. The summary:

Hebo's-Gray, 272; Hebo, 272; Dario, 259; V. Warren, 264; Grimes, 256; total, 1321.

Drew's-Arey, 271; Smith, 241; Drew, 256; M. Jameson, 280; L. Warren, 254; total, 1302.

Some of the high strings for the turkey and fowl given as prizes by the Cascade alleys are:

Three string total, Drew, 308; Hebo 307, Arey 298. High single string, Drew 127, Hebo 115, H. Anderson 109. High string without spare or strike, Dario 92. Most tens in one string, Gray 6.

WEATHER

It was a great weekend for the sporting fraternity, with sunshine and blue skies over woods and football fields. The air was snappy, with cold winds making motorists wish that foot warmers were standard equipment for rubber seats. Sunday was the coldest yet, 22 in the early morning. Yesterday was much warmer, 52 at noon—a delightful day but all too short, the sun now setting at 4:20. Today also is fair and mild, 46 at 9 o'clock and wind southwest, but the forecast for Armistice Day is cloudy, somewhat cooler and possible showers.

Golden Rod Chapter meets Friday night, with supper at 6.

Dr. C. H. Jameson and J. Hugh Montgomery were among the attendants at the Harvard-Dartmouth game Saturday.

Mrs. John Bushea, 119 South Main street, reports that this year's potatoes have sprouted in the store—an unusual occurrence.

Accompanied by Everett Davis as grand esquire, District Deputy Albert C. Jones inspected the Elks lodge in Portland last night.

The meeting of Fales Circle, Ladies of the G.A.R., scheduled for tomorrow evening, has been postponed to the last Wednesday in the month.

Merle Hutchinson, Kenneth Daggett and C. W. Lowe have returned from a hunting trip near Patten. Mr. Lowe brought back a 175 pound doe.

Edwin Libby Relief Corps meets Thursday afternoon for work. Supper at 6 will be in charge of Mrs. Elsie, Mrs. Barton, Mrs. Mary Cooper and Mrs. Elvie Curtis.

Arday Orff, Leroy Orff, Thomas H. Chisholm, Albert Orff, Harry Bickmore and Russell Stevens have gone to the Penobscot West Branch on a hunting trip.

Ray E. Eaton, C. W. Proctor, Albert Peterson, Col. Basil Stinson and Percy Demmons of Thomaston attended the Dartmouth—Harvard game Saturday and spent the weekend with Clarence Shaw in Concord, N. H.

The girls' field hockey team at Bridget Academy has closed one of its most successful seasons, winning two, tying three and losing one. Mary Lawry and Faye Hodgkins, Rockland girls, were prominent members of the team.

Lieut. A. W. Cushman of the State Police, successful as a man hunter, but when it comes to pursuing the nimble deer in the North Woods, well, that's nobody's affair. His five days in quest of game proved a pleasant outing but the "Loots" hungry friends are still hankering.

Judge Walter H. Butler, and Harold E. Jackson of this city, Alfred C. Hocking of St. George and Chester Leighton of Damariscotta brought back four deer from the Washington County woods as the result of their hunting expedition. Smacks almost of an executive committee meeting.

R. C. Clarke and J. P. Colbeth were in Portland Sunday where they attended the monthly meeting of the Portland branch of A. & P. Managers' Benefit Association at the Falmouth Hotel. The program included chicken dinner, several interesting speakers and a musical entertainment.

Lloyd E. Clark, a Rockland student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is carry off honors as a sophomore. In the recent field day he ran with the sophomore relay team which broke the record for that class established in 1918. He was also manager of the sophomore football team which included a 7 to 0 defeat over the freshmen among its accomplishments. The sophomores won every event in the field day in the program.

In a Portland paper recently there was an article on the dental clinics of Portland, stating that Portland and Lewiston were the only places in the State conducting such. This was read with a sniff by Rockland citizens, considering the fact that this city has conducted dental clinics under the direction of the local Red Cross Chapter for several years. Some of the children pay the actual cost of treatment, but many receiving attention are unable to pay anything. Teeth are treated, filled or extracted as the case may be, and much valuable service is given in the course of a year. Special emphasis is placed upon the young child and the saving of the six-year molars. This is one of the many important health activities being carried on by the local chapter.

If you were abroad in an automobile in last night's fog you found finding anything but a pleasure.

Miss Catherine Richardson of Norway was a weekend guest of Miss Frances Dobbins, James street.

Former Alderman Oscar S. Duncan is confined to his home by pneumonia, and is in the care of a trained nurse.

Ernest O. Knight of the Kennebec Printing Company, a former Augusta newspaper man, was a visitor in the city yesterday.

George A. Wellman of New County road has entered the Lahey Clinic in Boston for observation. He is accompanied by Mrs. Wellman.

Through F. S. Young's real estate agency Herman C. Howard of Eagle has leased the Mina Rivers' farm in Warren, and will farm there on an extensive scale.

The first and second degrees will be worked at Penobscot View Grange Thursday. Refreshments will be served. The regular supper is postponed from Nov. 12 to Nov. 19.

The master of ceremonies of Bangor's Chateau Ballroom will supervise entertainment at a dance to be given Nov. 16 in Wins hall, Thomaston. There will be many prizes.

Mrs. Florence Bragg has bought the A. E. Morton property at The Highlands and it is understood that she will occupy it. F. S. Young's real estate agency handled the deal.

The grandstand and bleachers at Orono Saturday were plentifully besprinkled by Knox County fans who went not because there was any doubt as to the result but because it was the Bowdoin-Maine game. This seems to have become a habit with the local fans although the other State series contests are generally far more interesting. The score Saturday was 20 to 0. Maine made two of her touchdowns with such ease that it was almost ludicrous, but in the last half the plucky Bowdoin lads all but outplayed the new champions. The State series draws to a close tomorrow (Armistice Day) when Bates, disappointed with her defeat at the hands of Maine will attempt to clinch second place by defeating Colby. The game is to be played in Waterville, and the advance sale indicates that it is going to be the greatest football attraction of the season in Maine.

After vespers Sunday afternoon the congregation of St. Peter's Episcopal Church followed the procession of choir, altar boys and clergy to the Undercroft, or parish rooms, of the church, where prayers of blessing were said. For the past month reconstruction has been going on under the direction of Abraham Nye and R. E. Estes. The main hall has a new ceiling, and the walls and woodwork have been done in cheerful colors. The main hall and kitchen have been greatly enlarged by digging out the foundations, bringing these rooms all on the same level. A new boiler room has been constructed in the basement and a nicely equipped kitchen has been built at the northern end. There are new toilet rooms, and closets for the altar boys' vestments. Father Franklin of St. John's Church of Thomaston and Father Hayden of St. Thomas Church of Camden assisted Father Kenyon in the service. After Benediction tea was served under the direction of Mrs. R. D. Saville and Mrs. W. M. Little. Delightful music was provided during the social hour by Miss Emma Harding and Nell Little at the piano, and Mrs. Arthur Wisner in songs.

The first essential is proper building materials—foods we call them. The next essential is to get these building materials properly worked up for use—this process we call digestion. The third essential is to lay these building blocks down in the right proportions and in right order, cell on cell, to make good, strong, stomach, heart, lungs and such. The brain and its nerves furnish the power, the directing force, for all these building processes. Shut off this force in part, and the building partly ceases and partly goes wrong. Shut it off entirely from any growing organ, and the growth of this organ ceases. Turn it on in full force to every organ, and the boy or the girl develops into a normal man or woman. Chiropractic sees to it that this nerve force in full proportions reaches every part of the body of the growing child. Fathers and mothers, please take notice. Phone 1163 for an appointment.

The Rural Child

Financial help is desired for carrying on in Knox County the religious training of unchurched boys and girls of the neglected rural districts. The work is well organized, under a trained leader, and calls for financial support. Contributions sent to this paper will be promptly acknowledged and passed on to the treasurer of the Knox County Association for rural religious education, J. W. Robinson, to whom checks should be made payable.

"Sob Sister," Fox drama of an ambitious girl, who was too busy trading on the romances of others to recognize her own love affair until it had practically passed her by, which plays Wednesday and Thursday at the Strand, is hailed as being one of the year's most important pictures.

The right of a girl to make use of a winning smile and perhaps a hint of possible affection to gain her ends in business competition, and yet the dangers of this means of attaining success is a subject that Santell considers one of the most discussed topics of the times, and in "Sob Sister," he is said to present both sides of the question in unfolding one of the most unusual and yet most sincere and touching romances yet recorded for the talking screen. The film is reported by those who have already seen it as exceeding "Bad Girl" in heart touching appeal and vividness—adv.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—At a public dance Martin Forbes, Chicago newspaper man, is pleasantly attracted by one of the girl dancers. He "cuts in" on her partner, a man whose name he learns later is Max Lewis, and whom he instinctively dislikes. The girl tells him her name is "Rhoda White." He overhears a conversation between Lewis and an unknown woman which he realizes concerns Rhoda. Sensing a good newspaper story, he informs the girl of a "blind ad" signed "C. J." inquiring for the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland," which, judging from the talk he overheard, he is convinced is the girl's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it.

CHAPTER II.—That night Rhoda finds the advertisement. The sight of her discarded name (Martin was right) recalls her childhood in a California town. Her mother dead, she is happy with her father, professor in a small university, until misfortune comes. Associated with the blow is her uncle, William Joyce, who becomes in her childish mind an "ogre." Her father brings her to Chicago, where he is engaged in some mysterious business. By chance, learns tip-reading and afterward, stenography. When she is sixteen her father dies suddenly, vainly trying to give her a message about "papers" in a trunk. She has some money, and after her death, fearing she will be claimed by her uncle, she changes her name to "White" and becomes a stenographer in the newspaper office where Forbes is working. She is living with a fellow worker, "Babe" Jennings. Babe, who had been at the dance the night before, tells her Lewis had asked her if Rhoda's real name was not McFarland.

CHAPTER III.—Next day Martin has supper with Rhoda and Babe. He is told that the trunk which has been broken into and $500 Rhoda had laid away, is stolen. Martin has learned the woman "Babe" is "C. J." of the advertisement is Charles J. Forster, uncle of Max Lewis, and living at the same address as the girl admits her name is McFarland, but tells Martin little else of her history. A mysterious "C. J. McFarland" asks Rhoda for an interview.

CHAPTER IV.—Rhoda meets Claire, who tells her she knew her father well and is anxious to secure a document belonging to her which Professor McFarland had in his possession when he died. Claire also reveals knowledge of her father's life, a false charge of violation of the Mann act. She warns Rhoda to be wary of Forster. The girl promises to look for the paper, but finds the trunk in which she hid her father's possessions, and which she had sealed, has been stolen.

CHAPTER V.—Rhoda, convinced that Claire has evaded the theft of the trunk, tells the girl that told her was in her apartment, charges her with the act. Claire, of course, indignantly denies it. Rhoda, her suspicion awakened, trails her to the Worcester hotel, where Forster lives.

CHAPTER VI.—Martin, suspicious of Forster, goes to the Worcester, at a venture. He overhears Claire telephone Lewis and offers to "run" to her flat. Martin follows Lewis, with the trunk, which he recognizes, to a railroad station where he checks it. Martin has an idea. He phones Claire.

CHAPTER VII.—At the depot Lewis is accosted by Babe Jennings. She leads him to a black car, and goes to New York. Claire appears and accuses Lewis of trying to "set Rhoda." Babe flees after getting the trunk check from Lewis.

CHAPTER VIII.—Rhoda secures admission to Forster's apartment at the Worcester. He tells her he was her father's bodyguard and offers to "adopt" her, but the girl is suspicious. Finally she tells him of the trunk containing the papers, that was stolen.

CHAPTER IX.—Forster is plainly upset by the news. Learning of Rhoda's meeting with Claire, he denounces the woman as a blackmailer and intimates that she is her accomplice. He also tells her her father was a believer in her and died. A phone message causes him to leave Rhoda. She tries to phone Babe, but is interrupted by the arrival of Max Lewis.

CHAPTER X.—Lewis roughly demands what Rhoda is there for. She tells him Forster sent her. Conley, Forster's bodyguard, appears and the men quarrel and finally fight. In the conflict, Rhoda, fleeing from the conflict, hears the voice of her uncle, the "ogre." In panic she takes refuge in an adjoining room.

CHAPTER XI.—Martin, convinced that Forster has got hold of Rhoda, goes to the Worcester and with the aid of a reliable entry into Forster's home. There, after a series of adventures, he meets Rhoda, who explains her presence in the apartment.

CHAPTER XII.—Rhoda and Martin witness, themselves unseen, a meeting between Forster and Claire. They cannot hear the conversation, but Rhoda seems to understand. Finally Claire reads a letter, which Rhoda listens to with joy. Forster produces a pistol. Claire struggles with him, and the weapon is discharged.

CHAPTER XIII

The Frame-Up. The report of the revolver was followed instantly by a scream from Claire. Rhoda and Martin, after exchanging one horrified look, followed Conley through the door, which he'd left open behind him. Claire lay on the floor moaning, apparently unconscious, her face so covered with blood that it wasn't possible to see the exact nature of the wound. The revolver, a blue filament of smoke still rising from its barrel, lay on the carpet three or four paces away. Forster had fallen back limply in his chair. Evidently he thought he'd killed her, for he was bleeding frantically. "I didn't do it! She did it herself! She pulled the trigger!" His voice rose to a yell as he cried to Conley "Take her away! Don't leave her lying there! Take her where I can't see her!" Conley picked her up in a matter-of-fact sort of way which led Martin to think that he'd come to the same conclusion as his own that she was not dangerously injured. Martin opened the door for him, but as soon as he'd gone out with his burden, closed it after him and turned back to Forster. The old man looked from one to the other of them in bewilderment, and at last weakly demanded of Martin, "Who are you? What are you doing here?"

"I'm a reporter from the News," Martin said, "who wanted an interview from you about the disappearance of Rhoda McFarland. I came up to your apartment and found her here. We happened to be where we could see everything that's gone on in this room since that woman Conley just carried out came into it."

"More blackmail!" Forster snarled. "It's a conspiracy that's what it is. You are all in it!" He looked at her said that like nothing in the world but a rat in a corner, darting helpless venomous glances this way and that; toward the picture over the fireplace, behind which he knew his bodyguard was no longer on watch; toward the closed door through which no cry of his could be heard; even toward the revolver lying on the carpet, helplessly out of his reach.

It was Rhoda who answered him. She was so pale, Martin had feared that she might be going to faint. But the glittering timber of her voice as she spoke convinced him that she was white only with anger. "There is only one conspiracy I know about," she said. "That's the conspiracy you went into with Claire. You didn't know she was called Clara Bowman then—and the man who was your secretary—I think his name was Stafford."

Martin held his breath as he looked from one of their faces to the other. "You don't know what you're talking about," Forster wheezed. But the consternation in his face proclaimed that she did know. "You had your secretary hire her," Rhoda went on. "That's why you didn't know who she was when she came back here and got a job in your office. You didn't know that Stafford had told her who you were. And when he died you thought you didn't have to pay the money you'd promised her for ruining my father."

She turned away from him as if the sight of his goat-like face had become unendurable to her, and went on speaking to Martin. "That's what he did. He hired this woman—Stafford found her—to go on the same train my father was going on. She was to cry and pretend she'd lost her ticket and her money, and get him to take pity on her and pay her fare. They must have known how kind he was and how innocent he was or they wouldn't have thought the trick would work. It did work, partly. He paid for the ticket and her berth and loaned her some money besides to buy her meals with on the train. The rest of the plan didn't work. He didn't even look at her. She said so herself to him, just now. He never even guessed what she was trying to make him do. But she went ahead just the same—I suppose they'd promised her more money—and made her complaint before the district attorney. And she testified against him at the trial, only the jury didn't believe her and set her free. But enough other people believed her so that he had to resign from the university and come out here, like a man in hiding, to go to work, without knowing, for the very man who had ruined him." She whipped around upon Forster again, her eyes blazing with furious anger. "I wish she had shot you, instead!" she told him deliberately. "I wish she'd shot you dead. You deserve it, if anyone ever did."

She happened to be standing, without knowing it, almost over the revolver, where she had only to stoop to pick it up. Forster knew it, though. He was staring at the thing in a perfect nightmare of terror. Rhoda, pulled up by the look in his face, followed the direction of his stare and glanced down too to see what he was looking at.

That glance was all it needed to demolish him completely. He flopped out of his chair and sprawled down upon his knees on the carpet, holding out his palsied hands, imploring mercy. "Wait!" he pleaded. "Wait! I'll tell you all about it. It isn't what you think. I didn't mean him any real harm. I thought he'd thank me for it."

Rhoda went a little whiter and turned her face away. "Do you mind picking him up, Martin, and putting him back in his chair?" she asked.

Martin, feeling in his bewilderment like a man in a dream, tugged away and finally managed to haul the poor old ruin back into his chair again. It must have been a minute before the millionaire could find breath enough to speak with, but when he did it was—strangely enough—in the voice of a man with a grievance.

"McFarland was wasted, where he was. He knew as much about the chemistry of petroleum as any man in the world; more in some ways. And he was nothing but a college professor working along a fine line I was interested in, and when I saw he was going to read a paper in Cleveland before the Oil Chemical Institute I went down to hear him. Luckily he hadn't got far enough with his discoveries to give anything really practical away, but he came near enough to it to make me sweat. So I saw him after the meeting and talked to him. I had Stafford with me and we came back with him as far as Chicago. Spent most of the night trying to get him to listen to reason. Here he was on the edge of a thing that might be worth millions to him personally, to say nothing of anybody else, and he was getting ready to broadcast it. I wanted him to leave the university and let me fit him up a laboratory. I'd pay all the expenses of his research and give him a contract that would make his fortune as soon as he had the thing on a practical basis.

"I never saw anybody as stubborn as he was. He'd hardly listen. Practically told me to go to h—l. He said the university had financed his researches up to now and it would be a disgrace to let him go. It didn't do any good to talk big figures to him. He didn't know what money was about. He was throwing away a fortune—anyway that's how it looked at the time—like giving a nickel to a newsboy. I was about ready to quit, but Stafford had an idea."

"I don't say it was a very nice idea, but your father hadn't left us anything else we could do. Stafford said if there should happen to be some little scandal out of the house, it would be all right."

Rhoda gave him something else to think about when she paused outside the door of a booth she'd been on the point of entering and asked him to telephone instead. She looked awfully white. "Rhoda, are you all right?" he demanded earnestly. He must have shouted it rather, for a man turning the leaves of a directory at the desk looked up curiously at the pair of them. He went on, speaking lower, "I mean, are you out or anything?"

She said she wasn't. She just didn't feel like talking to Babe. She'd sit in that big chair over there and wait for him. She gave him their telephone number just before she walked away in case he'd forgotten it.

The promptness with which Babe answered the call suggested that she'd been sitting within hand's reach of the instrument ever since Martin had left her, and indeed she assured him passionately that this had been the case. She'd been having a perfectly rotten evening, she said. She'd been obliged to break an awfully good date in order to wait for him. She'd been told by the telephone, and then Max Lewis had come and really acted rough. She'd had to threaten to telephone for the police in order to get rid of him.

"What did he want with you?" Martin demanded. "Naturally," said Babe, "he wanted his ticket and his trunk checked." "But he had them," Martin told her. "He took the envelope out of my pocket an hour ago, after he'd knocked me cold with a crack in the jaw."

"Well, he didn't think he had them," she assured him. "Wait a minute," Martin said, and laid down the receiver for a search of his pockets. "It's all right," he told Babe a minute later. "I've got them. What he got out of my pocket was your dummy envelope, the one you fooled him with in the first place. I don't wonder he looked sick. Well, don't worry about any more," he concluded, "and don't expect us till we turn up."

"How long is it," he asked Rhoda when he went back to her, "since you've had anything to eat?" "I don't know," she told him absently. "Not since I had lunch, at the Tip-Top Inn. I don't remember whether I ate anything then or not."

"Well, then, that's the first thing to attend to," he announced. "I'm going to take you somewhere and get you a good dinner." "I couldn't," she said. "I know I couldn't swallow a mouthful. With a flash of thought, he remembered her teeth. She looked up at him and went on, "I know what I want to do, Martin. I want you to take me to the morgue."

He didn't for an instant recognize his own newspaper slang and stared at her in consternation until she added, "It was a kid's head, a head that read on a monthly salary about father; everything they did to him. Can we do it tonight, or will the place be all locked up?"

He glanced at the clock across the lobby. It was just after nine. "The place will be locked up, all right," he said, "but I'll be back at the door when you get in. That makes it all the better because we'll have the place to ourselves." She looked so pitiful as she thanked him that it was hard to refrain from kissing her then and there. He did it, however, and, guessing from the way she huddled down in the corner of the seat in the taxicab which conveyed them down town that she didn't want to be made love to, he went on refraining even from trying to get possession of one of her hands.

neglected to close the door, and the departing pair, before they rode down in the little private elevator, were able to hear how the old man took the news.

"That means more blackmail," he wailed. "Where's Max? He'll have to get me out of this."

Down in the lobby Martin and Rhoda passed. Knowing how tired she was and what a storm she'd been through, he felt that he couldn't help to tell her she must come with him now to the railway station in the hope that they wouldn't be too late to prevent Max from making off again with that trunk of hers.

Luckily she spoke first. "I don't think I can go home," she said. "We'd better telephone Babe and let her know we're all right. She won't know what has become of us."

This was an obvious duty, and as five minutes wasn't likely to matter much, now, one way or the other at the railway station, Martin assented.

Rhoda gave him something else to think about when she paused outside the door of a booth she'd been on the point of entering and asked him to telephone instead. She looked awfully white. "Rhoda, are you all right?" he demanded earnestly. He must have shouted it rather, for a man turning the leaves of a directory at the desk looked up curiously at the pair of them. have happened during a ride on the train from Chicago to California; whether or not an acquaintance he had formed with a girl in an attempt to relieve her apparent distress had resulted in a sexual intimacy. And, at that, the verdict of the jury had been that it had not so resulted. Yet the doubt that remained in the public mind after the verdict of the jury had been enough to ruin the man's career, to force his resignation from the university, to drive him into hiding for the last four years of his broken life.

The newspapers had done it, and they had done it without transgressing their own code. The story of a college professor indicted and brought to trial under the Mann act was legitimately entitled according to current standards to just such headlines and pictures and editorial comment as this story had received. It made Martin feel pretty sick.

Well, there was no help for anybody in thinking thoughts like that.

They were diverted by a picture included in one of the clippings of the girl then called Clara Bowman, who had been the principal witness in the trial. She was unmistakably Claire, despite the dark hair that was piled high on her head.

"Rhoda," he asked, "how did you know who she was? How did you know what she was saying to Forster? We couldn't hear a sound through the glass."

A smile flickered across her face. The first he'd seen there for a long while. "I forgot," she explained. "It seemed like listening to me. I can read lips, you see. Martin, dear, don't you remember long ago at the Alhambra, how I saw you ask me if I didn't want to be rescued? And you asked me afterward how I knew the exact words you said, and I laughed and told you it was telepathy? I lost some of it tonight, of course, when they turned their faces away. But when ever I could see their faces I could hear just as well as if I'd been in the room."

He sat silent for a while after that, not exactly thinking, but enjoying the savor of the term of endearment, she had unconsciously used. When his mind got back on the rails he took up the kink in Forster's explanation, which he had been conscious of not straightening out at the time Forster made it.

What the old man had said about the contract seemed straight enough, and squared with the facts as Martin knew them. If Rhoda's father had died, as apparently he had before completing his discovery, it was true that the contract was of no value. Claire, though, apparently thought it was valuable. There seemed to be no doubt that it was the thing she'd been trying all the time to steal. It wasn't incredible that if Forster knew she'd failed to get it (since he knew in whose hands it actually was) he might have offered her a hundred thousand dollars for it in return, as he said. But Forster did think that it was Claire who'd stolen Rhoda's trunk, and unless Rhoda's observation had been at fault, he had held his breath while he waited to see whether she would rise to his bait or not.

He knew the contract wasn't in the trunk, but didn't believe that something else was something that he wanted very much, something perhaps he felt he couldn't be happy without?

That seemed highly probable to Martin. Why, unless there was something among her father's papers that she wanted, he'd spent all those weeks advertising for Rhoda? Why had he sent his man Conley to run down the tip Babe Jennings had given him over the telephone? Why had he himself taken the trouble to lie in wait outside the studio in order to identify Rhoda for himself and find out where she worked?

The only answer Martin could see to all these questions was that Forster believed Rhoda had something he wanted. He looked up at her doubtfully, torn between his impatience to examine the contents of that little trunk tonight and his reluctance to do so after all she'd been through today, to subject her to any more experiences, possibly harrowing. To his surprise he found her looking at him, with eyes alight and a faint flush of color in her cheeks.

"Something for me tonight?" he knew it's getting late and you must be tired. "I'll do anything," he said. "Rhoda, dearest, you know I will. Any possible thing that you want me to do."

"She helped to gather up the scattered contents of the file and as he was putting it back in the drawer she patted him on the shoulder and told him not to mind."

"I think there must be some other way," he told her hesitatingly, "of doing the thing he wanted to do; of setting your father's memory right before the world. I think I've got the beginning of a hunch how it can be done. I'm hoping for light on it tomorrow when we go through that trunk. Rhoda, dear, don't worry any more about it tonight. You're all in and you're all starved. Let's go somewhere and have a good dinner."

"I don't want to go to a restaurant," she told him flatly. "I want to go home."

"All right," he agreed, and they started down the long flight of stairs in silence. But before they got within range of the night watchman at the door she stopped and faced him.

"I don't know why I'm so beastly," she said. "I suppose it's because I'm trying not to cry. I'll go anywhere you like, Martin." She gave him a rueful heart-twisting little smile as she said it, but she walked straight on without giving him a chance to kiss her.

It was with a notion of giving the old watchman a tip, as he sometimes did, that he put his hand into his pocket and thus made the disgusting discovery that he was penniless. So out on the sidewalk, as they were looking up the street for a taxi, he asked Rhoda, rather diffidently, if she could lend him any money. He'd given his last dollar to the taxi driver who'd brought them here.

But she told him, with a momentary flicker of amusement in her tone, that she had given her last dollar to a taxi driver that afternoon. She searched her purse, however, and announced a find of six cents. "If you've got a dime," she concluded, "we can ride in the street car. And if you haven't we can walk."

He hadn't a dime but denounced a walk as nonsense. They'd take a taxi round to his club and he'd go in and get some money. That was what he should have done in the first place.

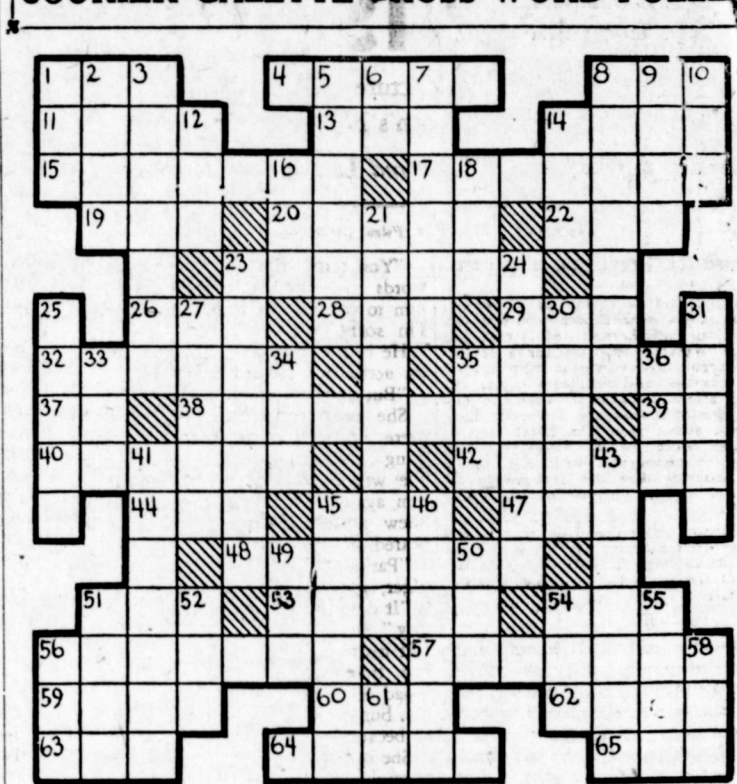

They didn't precisely quarrel over this, though she insisted on walking home and had her way. He knew she didn't mean to be unfriendly. She even slipped her hand within his arm as they walked along, and left it there. But, even so, she felt a million miles away. They tried to talk but gave it up, and by the time they'd got to the street door of the studio building, the silence between had become a palpable oppressive thing.

She asked him now, in a strictly neutral voice, whether he was coming in.

"I'll go up with you to your own door, anyhow," he said, and they climbed the two long flights of stairs side by side without another word.

There was a light shining through the crack under the studio door and they could hear Babe in there talking to somebody. But Rhoda had her key in her hand and she thrust it into the lock and swung the door open without even a momentary pause for a private farewell to the waiting Martin. He stepped aside. But in the instant that Rhoda pushed open the door the man to whom Babe had been talking spoke, and at the sound of his voice Rhoda stopped as if she'd been suddenly frozen. The man's voice broke off. "Babe, who sat where she could see through the doorway, said, 'Here they are,' and Rhoda came to life again in a surprising way. She flung herself upon Martin like a child at the sight of an ogre. Martin heard her say in a broken voice, 'It's Uncle William! Martin, don't—don't let him!'

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Using sex and deception as a weapon, Jane Kay competes with her reporters successfully, but finds herself keenly criticized by Garry Webster, reporter for a conservative journal. Love comes to her in the morning after his arrival when he discovers the stolen from his hotel room. He goes south on an assignment and does not communicate with her for a month, believing that she has grossly deceived him for the purpose of committing the theft.

Chapter VI

EXHAUSTED after a sleepless night Jane arose the next morning and moved about to breakfast alone. As she moved about she found herself in the morning after her return when he discovered the stolen from his hotel room. He goes south on an assignment and does not communicate with her for a month, believing that she has grossly deceived him for the purpose of committing the theft.

She looked across the arway toward Garry's apartment and was surprised to discover the shade and window up. As she stood there he came to the window. "Hello, how are you?" he called. "Fine, when did you get back?" "A half hour ago." Her heart fluttered, but she was outwardly calm. "Let's get together, some time." He was casual about it. She was puzzled and perplexed. "Yes, let's."

Vonnie heard their voices from above. "How are you, Jane," she called. "Hello, Garry," she was enthusiastic. "You kids better come up tonight, the gang is coming over." "It was the usual party—noisy after the gin being circulated. Jane arrived early, hoping Garry would be there. When he arrived Dutch was telling Jane, rather drunkenly, that he was trying to make love to her, but she did not seem to be interested.

Dutch was the first to notice Garry's arrival. Addressing him thickly he said: "I'm trying to make love to Jane. And I'm kidding. What do I do wrong?" "You may not have the proper bait," Garry remarked coldly. "He should get inside into a good yarn. My experience is that a Sob Sister will do anything for a story." Then addressing Dutch. "In fact, I suggest that you find a diary."

Jane was astounded. She sensed suddenly that Garry thought she had stolen Dutch's diary from the Bentley. With extreme dignity she addressed Garry. "Could we have a little talk?" "If you like." They went out to the roof, to the spot where he had first exhibited a feeling of tenderness toward her. "With my eyes blazing she turned toward him. There was an implied snarl in that speech about Sob Sisters. Does it by any chance refer to me?" "I'm sure you know that better than I."

Jane bit her lip. She did not want him to know how deeply he was wounding her. "Let's be frank," she urged. "We've been pretty good friends—better friends than I have ever been with any man before, Garry. When you left without sending me a wire or leaving me a note, I supposed that you considered our association just an affair. Then I began to feel that the average man usually retires a little more gracefully than that—even from an affair." She became defiantly emphatic. "Come on. What's wrong?"

He was surprised by her stand. "Do you want me to put it into words?" "And don't mince them." It was a command. "I think what you did was cheap. His voice was even, hard. He was definitely accusing. "Of course, I know that we resort to all sorts of expedients to get news. But I never met a newspaper woman who'd go quite as far as you did to get a story." She stared at him—white, silent tears welling to her eyes in spite of herself. He continued. "I'm sorry to have to say this, but you hurt me, Jane. I was in love with you. I suppose I was too much in love. Otherwise, I would have realized that you came into my room that night for the pages you could steal."

She interrupted him, lips trembling, almost reeling from the shock of what he was saying. "You think that I... She paused for words... for that." "I'm sorry—I'm sorry." He began to doubt. The enormity of his accusation loomed before him. "But is there an explanation?" "Because I... about the important thing... your opinion of what I did." She wiped her eyes quickly and faced him again. "Pat took those papers. I knew nothing about it until they appeared in the paper."

"Pat took them?" He was suddenly eager, grasping at a straw of hope. "It doesn't matter who took them, nor why," she continued. "The only thing that matters is what you thought. And you thought I was cheap. Well, if I had done it I would have been cheap... but not as cheap as you in thinking I was a Sob Sister."

She turned to go, but he followed her through the crowded apartment downstairs to her own rooms. She made no effort to prevent his entry. "But don't you see, dear," he pleaded. "You should have had faith in me." "I tried to. It was just a network of circumstances." "I love you, Jane. At least you did love me. You can't dismiss love as lightly as that. It's the racket you're in that caused all this trouble."

"The racket," as you call it, happens to be my livelihood." "But it needn't be," he urged. "Not if you'll marry me." She gazed at him in open-eyed wonder. "You want me to marry you, and only an hour ago you thought me common."

He took her hands in his. "I'll tell you secrets. I'm ashamed to admit it. If you had been really my wife, I would have wanted to marry you. I'm that much in love with you, Jane. Being bitter was the only defense I had."

She fell into his arms, weeping. The phone rang. She was still weeping as she answered it. Garry watched and listened. He knew what Baker's voice. He always shouted into the phone. He heard him saying: "We've got an inside beat. Keep your mouth shut. No one knows it yet. Speed just got it from the house." She tried to interrupt. "But..." Baker's voice went on. "But nothing—listen. The Stotesley kid was stolen an hour ago from his nursery. Beat it over to that Long Island joint where Johnny the Sheikh's girl hangs out. Get what you can from her. I tell you she's in on it. Hurry."

"But I don't feel well," she protested. "He was insistent. 'All right,' she said at last. 'It was Baker?' It was as much a statement of fact as a question, and Garry went on. 'I have to leave,' she told him, trying to regain control of her emotions. 'Good heavens!' He was now shouting at her almost as loudly as Baker had done a few moments before. 'Baker doesn't own you. Call him back. Tell him you won't go.' 'I can't rather stick on the job than marry me, is that it?' 'No, no, Garry. She was frightened now. 'But I can't let him down now.' 'The job's got to be,' he insisted. 'No.' It was almost a cry. She was on the verge of hysterics. 'It has. It's in your blood. Love and marriage, or home, mean nothing to you.' 'She was weeping again. She put her hands on his shoulders. He folded her in his arms tenderly. 'You're wrong, Garry. You mean more to me than anything I've ever known in my life.' She kissed him and returned to the phone. Baker could not believe his ears. He was so astonished he could not congratulate her. But he was at the wedding on the courthouse steps. Jane and Garry wanted the ceremony performed in a judge's chamber, but every photographer and every newspaper man was there. And they had to have plenty of light and elbow room to make the proper pictures. It was Jane's last front page story—with pictures—but what a story—and what pictures! (THE END)

China's Flood Toll One of World's Greatest Human Sacrifices

Starving flood sufferers rush into water to get food.

A situation of star, horror now prevails in the flooded areas of the Yangtze Valley where the receding flood waters are creating havoc that beggars description, according to a report received by Dr. David A. Brown, Chairman of Flood Relief in China, from the National Flood Relief Commission in China.

Flood Relief in China, an organization jointly formed by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, and China Famine Relief, U. S. A., is seeking $2,500,000 to buy food and medicine for as many as possible of the tens of millions of men, women and children facing starvation, disease and death as a result of the catastrophic floods.

In order to avoid a conflict with the country-wide campaign for funds for the relief of the unemployed in the United States, as well as with the annual roll call of the American Red Cross, Dr. Brown has informed Walter S. Gifford, director of the President's organization on unemployment relief, that Flood Relief in China's fund solicitation would be limited to mail appeals only now, and will be resumed after November 25th, the date fixed for the close of the unemployment campaign. In reply, Mr. Gifford has expressed his appreciation of this act.

"Millions of refugees, rendered homeless and completely destitute by the floods, are living under conditions which give promise of nothing but death, according to the report of the National Flood Relief Commission. "While the task is not beyond human effort," the commission declares, "it is of such magnitude that only the co-operation of the people of the world can insure its success."

National Headquarters for Flood Relief in China have been opened in New York City at 205 East 42nd Street, where contributions are being received for dispatch to China.

HOPE

Members of the two 4-H Clubs of Hope with friends attended the County 4-H Club contest at Wiscasset last Saturday.

Mrs. Rose Wilder of Lowell, Mass., and Hope, was guest of honor at a dinner party Oct. 25, given by her son, Edward T. Wilder, with whom she makes her home, as an observance of her 93d birthday. Her four children were among the guests, from other relatives who could not be present, there were greetings by mail and telephone. There were also many gifts of letters, cards and flowers. Mrs. Wilder cut and served the birthday cake. Those present were: Mrs. Wilder, Miss Frances True (a sister), and Edward T. Wilder, of Lowell; Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby Wilder and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilder, of Newton Centre; and Mrs. Mary Pease of Worcester, Mass. It may be rightly said of Mrs. Wilder that she is 93 years young, for she enjoys excellent health, retains an active interest in people and events, and has an extremely alert mind. She is very attractive, her upright figure and fair skin belying the years that have passed over her. Mrs. Wilder spends a portion of each summer at the old home in Hope where it is her greatest joy to greet her many relatives and friends who live in this vicinity.

Mrs. C. E. Johnson, who has been with her daughter, Mrs. Fred Snow was given a going-away party at the home of her sister Mrs. Andrew Coffey, Ash Point, Thursday evening. Foss and Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Bird, Jr.

Here's New Vick Plan for Better "Control-of-Colds"

Made Possible By New Vick Product Based on New Idea For Prevention of Colds

Rockland Druggists authorized to sell new product on trial to Vicks VapoRub users and refund price if Vick plan does not reduce family's yearly "Colds-Tax."

Mothers are guardians of the family health and directors of the family budget. It is the mothers who have the worry of colds and their cost. And it is the mothers who especially appreciate the new Plan for better "Control-of-Colds" in the home—just announced by the makers of Vicks VapoRub.

This Plan is made possible by a new preparation, Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, based on a new idea in "preventing" colds. It is a companion product to Vicks VapoRub, the modern method of "treating" colds. That is, they aid and supplement each other.

Here, briefly, is the Vick Plan for better Control-of-Colds in the home:

1.—Before a Cold Starts.

Use Vicks Drops—just a few drops up each nostril—whenever you have been exposed to anything which your own experience tells you is apt to be followed by a cold—contact with others having fresh colds, crowds, stuffy ill-ventilated rooms, public places—a night on the Pullman or a dusty automobile ride—sudden changes in temperature, wet or cold—inhaling smoke, dust, gases —excesses in living, such as over-eating, smoking or drinking—after a hard day, when you are over tired. In short, don't wait for that stuffy, sneezy irritation of the nasal passages. Then you are not "catching cold"—you have already caught one.

2.—After a Cold Starts.

At night, massage the throat and chest well with Vicks VapoRub—now available in "stainless form," if you prefer. Spread on thickly and cover with warm flannel. Leave the bed-clothing loose around the neck so that the medicated vapors arising may be inhaled freely all night long. During the day, use Vicks Drops every few hours—any time, any place. This gives you a full 24-hour treatment and without the risk of too much internal "dosing," which so often upsets the digestion—especially of children. Both these Vick products are external. They can be used freely and as often as needed without the slightest harmful effect.

Trial Offer to Vick Users.

You have Vicks VapoRub. Now, get a bottle of Vicks Nose Drops. Use it with VapoRub as directed in the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds" in the home. If you are not satisfied that it actually reduces your high cost of colds this winter, your druggist is authorized to refund your money.

Guy I. Walz sang several songs, accompanying himself on the harp. He was in excellent voice and his expressive rendition of the solos was much appreciated by the audience. Mrs. W. H. Crowell, Mrs. G. W. Collins, Mrs. Harold Perry, Mrs. Clarence Benner and Mrs. J. T. Gay read poems and prose selections pertaining to work in the mission fields. Mrs. George Genthner had charge of a guessing contest. Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Miss Edna M. Young and Mrs. Perry. There were 22 present.

Many plans are proposed for relieving Europe, but the favorite plan of all is that which proposes that Americans shall pay Europe's debts.—Washington Post.

What would you do?

Suppose you were a business man. One of the departments of your business supplies a service of great convenience to your customers. Thousands of people enjoy the convenience of the service you render. You believe you are entitled to a reasonable profit in return. At least, you feel, you ought to break even. Yet an analysis shows that you serve one-half of the customers of this department at a loss.

This is the situation in which the majority of Maine banks, and hundreds in other parts of the country, find themselves today as a result of serving thousands of checking account depositors whose average daily balances are below $100.

There are two practical solutions to the problem.

One is for every checking account user to maintain a minimum daily balance of at least $100, to limit the activity of his account to not more than ten checks a month, and to refrain from drawing against uncollected balances.

The second solution is the one which thousands of banks have already adopted and which is rapidly being installed in conservative banks everywhere, to make a monthly charge for small checking account service. This is popularly known as the "service charge." It is, in reality, a "stop-loss" charge.

The first solution would be more satisfactory to the bank. Unfortunately, however, it might deprive some persons of the convenience which a small checking account affords. These people should be privileged to enjoy this convenience if they wish.

The other solution, the Service Charge, places checking account convenience within reach of everybody by making a reasonable monthly charge on all accounts which, due to a small balance and too great activity, do not pay their way.

A JUBILEE BANQUET

And Award of Gold Pieces When Educational Drive Closes

Rumor has it that a jubilee banquet is scheduled as the occasion for the Educational Club members for results in Educational Club membership drive now drawing to a close. Also that these gold pieces, five in number, will not be of the smaller denominations, provided sufficient effort is shown to bring the membership near to the coveted 1000 mark, all in good standing. Each 25 cents in membership, without regard to the future year to which the payment is credited, counts one point for the worker.

This club assists in many local philanthropies and charities, scholarship fund to names of educational projects; presents Knox County's only extensive winter lecture course without additional charge, pays rental for its cozy quarters at the Copper Kettle, pays travel and hotel expenses for its out-of-town speakers, presents many local speakers with freedom of discussion, psychology and current problems and regular literary and discussion features, with unlimited eligibility for girls and women with guest nights for gentlemen.

It is a decided and indispensable asset to this section and yet makes no other request on the public than to maintain a liberal membership list, on which appear many notable names of distinction. Where else can 25 cents or $2 or $10 for life membership accomplish more for education in citizenship? Money may be credited to names other than that of the donor, if wished. This drive ends Nov. 15. Awards go both to teams and to individuals. M.P.R.

ROW-NO-MORE RICH

Death Of Waterfront Character Who Rowed Dory From Rockland To Gloucester

The two-masted schooner Irving J. Luice of Gloucester sank in the treacherous Race Point Tide off Provincetown late Sunday, sending one man to his death, a few minutes after a Coast Guard vessel had towed it off a shoal. The other three members of the crew were rescued.

The man who perished was believed to be Louis Rich, a character known to Gloucester and Halifax fishermen as "Row-No-More" because of his recent feat in rowing a dory from Rockland to Gloucester.

The schooner, which was bound to Bridgeport, Conn., with a cargo of sand, left Provincetown Sunday morning after having been weather-bound for several days.

A RECIPROCITY PROGRAM

Rubinstein Club Enjoys Delightful Afternoon With Ethelbert Nevin Club Entertaining

One of the most delightful occasions in the history of the Rubinstein Club took place Friday afternoon when the Ethelbert Nevin Club of Sanford-Springvale presented a reciprocity program with the Rubinstein Club. The program which merits the name of concert was given in the Universalist vestry, the attractive appearance of which makes it ideal for gatherings of this nature. Potted yellow chrysanthemums loaned by Harriet Silsby Frost and huge baskets of autumn leaves were used effectively. Misses Katharine Veazie, Margaret Everett and Fenne Brown acted as ushers, with Miss Adelaide Cross and Miss Mabel F. Lamb at the door. The large and appreciative audience was composed of club members and local music lovers.

Mrs. Hazel Atwood, president of the Rubinstein Club, extended a welcome to the visitors, and Mrs. A. Harold Plummer, president of the Ethelbert Nevin Club, also the newly appointed chairman of philanthropic musical education of the State Federation of Music Clubs, responded graciously.

A feature of the entertainment provided by the visitors was the Richmond Glee Club, of which Mmes. Cora Pierce Richmond is director, and from which solo and other voice combinations were drawn. Added features were Miss Elaine Blouin, dramatic soprano, State winner of the Atwater Kent audition contest, and Clifford Ramsdell, baritone, also an Atwater Kent entrant. Mr. Ramsdell is a nephew of John Taylor of Camden, thus coming by his musical talent justly. The Rubinstein Club was represented by Miss Edna Gregory, pianist, and Mrs. Gladys St. C. Morgan, mezzo-contralto.

The program:

Chorus—The Miller's Wooing
 Soloists—Edna Gregory, Fannie Fanning
 Soprano—Marian Smith, Ruby Low
 Soprano—Pace, Pace, from "La Forza del Destino"
 Piano—Habenera
 Valse—Moszkowski
 Soprano—Sunlight Waltz—Harriet Ware
 Chorus—Gondoliers
 Soprano—Edna Gregory
 Baritone—The Hills of Home
 Duet—The Still Lagoon
 Valse—Wadsworth, Ruby Low
 Mezzo-contralto—When Mother Sings
 In the Luxembourg Gardens
 The Little Tavern
 Chorus—The Beautiful Blue Danube
 Soloists—Clarissa Harrison, Jeannie
 Soprano—Suicidio (La Gioconda)
 Chorus—The Virgin's Prayer (Tannhauser)
 Soloists—Clarissa Harrison, Jeannie

The four members of the Glee Club wore attractive yellow gowns, made alike on long graceful lines, and wore silver slippers. Their work merited in every respect the warm response it received, for seldom is found more finished chorus singing. Features were clean attack, vivid coloring and exceptionally fine diction. The bond between singers and their director was plainly shown in the quick response to every motion. While each number was splendidly given, the glee club's finest work was done in the Nevin numbers.

Miss Wadsworth displayed a thrilling voice, singing her aria with considerable authority. She responded with "Memory's Garden" by Denza as an encore. Miss Harrison's voice, a flexible soprano, was well suited to the charming waltz song she chose. The duet was a very lovely number, and Mr. Ramsdell was warmly received. All these singers who are under Mmes. Richmond's tutelage reflect her intelligent direction in their fine diction, phrasing, coloring and authority. They are a distinct credit to her.

Miss Gregory, a graduate of the Faelten Piano School of Boston, played delightfully. Both Miss Gregory and Mrs. Morgan were well received.

Naturally the greatest interest centered in Miss Blouin, and from the moment she began to sing it was clearly realized that here is a voice that is destined to become great. While the enthusiastic reports that had gone abroad in the State since the Atwater Kent audition in Portland had somewhat prepared local music lovers, the actual singing of this young girl went far beyond the most sanguine expectations. Miss

Blouin who has just passed her 19th birthday is French; she is very lovely, with soft dark eyes and hair and exquisite coloring; she is also beautifully formed. And when she sings, she is even lovelier, for her face is a veritable mirror of her emotions. Her voice, distinctly dramatic soprano, has an astonishingly long range and is one of great power. The lower tones are rich and colorful as a contralto voice, yet from them she soars upward to the heights with utmost ease. It seems almost incredible with three and one-half years' training that such progress could be made as this young girl displays. Already she is called the second Rosa Ponselle, and everything about her seems to mark her to be one of the world's great artists. For encores she sang "Cuckoo" by Liza Lehmann and "The Sleigh" by Kuntz, and later more informally she gave a group of French songs which were utterly charming. Miss Blouin captivated everyone by her naive charm and marvelous talent, and it is safe to predict that none of her friends will watch her progress with keener interest than the new friends she made on her trip to Rockland.

Luncheon was served at Mrs. Luda Mitchell's to the visitors, members of the executive board and artists of the Rubinstein Club. This was a very delightful affair, affording opportunity for acquaintance and exchange of ideas. Mrs. Mitchell was ably assisted by Mrs. Helen Wentworth. The excellent food and service were commended.

Gorham Normal School won a cross country meet with Bates freshmen by a score of 25-35. Kenneth Twitchell of Gorham broke the record obtained on the Lewiston course.

The girls' soccer tournament between the juniors and the seniors was won by the juniors. They defeated the seniors three out of five games.

Girls' field hockey practice started last Tuesday with a large group of students answering the call for volunteers.

Daniel Patt of Union and Wayne Bagley of Seal Harbor played last Wednesday noon during the Westbrook hour from Station WCHS in Portland. Daniel Patt broadcasts at that hour every Wednesday.

ROCKPORT

Mrs. Mary Priest of Waterville, department chaplain, who was in town Friday for the purpose of inspecting Fred A. Norwood W.R.C. was entertained overnight at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Ernest Torrey.

A social for the young people of the Baptist Sunday School was held at the church Saturday from 2 to 4 at which 37 were present. A fine time was reported.

An addition to the motorboat racing fans is Frank L. Salisbury who with his Flowers-Falcon boat received from the factory last week, is planning to show them a few stunts next season. It is the first boat of its kind to appear in this vicinity and is certainly a smooth looking affair.

Mrs. G. F. Currier will entertain the girls of "teen age" of the Baptist Church at a fireside lunch at 6 p. m. today at the parsonage.

Mrs. Belle MacGregor and daughter Mrs. Edna Robbins of Camden were Sunday visitors with Mrs. Cecile Cain and Mrs. Emma Torrey at their home on Union street.

Nellie Preethy of Brooklyn was guest Friday of her sister Mrs. Etta Carter.

There was a large attendance at the Friday evening meeting of Fred A. Norwood W.R.C. at which time the annual inspection took place. Mrs. Mary Priest, department chaplain, officiating. The meeting was preceded by a supper in the banquet hall which had been made very attractive with Halloween decorations of orange and black. In the main hall the color scheme of red was effectively used. The fine manner in which the degree work was performed by the officers brought many words of praise from Mrs. Priest. She was presented with a gift by the president, Mrs. Emma Torrey, in behalf of the corps, to which she touchingly responded.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ingraham are staying at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Ingraham, while the latter are enjoying a ten days' vacation trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Flowers of Oyster Bay, N. Y., are guests for two weeks of relatives in town. They were entertained Thursday at the home of Mrs. Flowers' sister Mrs. Orna Burns.

Miss Norma King, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles King of Camden, was a weekend guest of Miss Dorothy Upham, Russell avenue.

Capt. and Mrs. Ernest Torrey and Mrs. Cecile Cain motored to Waterville Saturday where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Haney and Mrs. Vesta Haney. They were accompanied on the trip by Mrs. Mary Priest who was returning to her home.

The Saturday Night Club was entertained last week at the home of Mrs. Effie Veazie.

Miss Marion Weidman will be hostess Friday afternoon to the Twentieth Century Club at her home on Russell avenue.

The piano pupils of Mrs. Z. D. Harshorn gave a pleasing recital at her studio in Rockport Saturday morning and this program was presented:

 Dance Characteristic—Morrison
 Water Sprites—Erb
 Mazurka—Wrede
 Dorothy Lord, Barbara Belyea

Lions Club's Big Event

The Camden-Rockport Lions Club in observance of its third birthday anniversary held ladies' night Friday evening at Rockport Masonic hall. At 7:30 Lions and their ladies numbering 68 entered the dining hall where banquet was served by Harbor Light Chapter. The club colors, purple and gold, were effectively used in the hall and table decorations. Music was furnished by a six-piece orchestra under the direction of Clarence Fish.

King Lion Charles A. Perry opened the meeting and introduced as toastmaster Rev. A. E. Luce of the Camden Methodist Church, who after brief remarks called upon John Taylor of the Camden Y.M.C.A. Mr. Taylor pleasingly rendered "Camden By the Sea" composed and written by two Camden citizens, Charles O. Montgomery and Everett Grieves.

Mrs. Helen Wentworth was then heard in two readings and Miss Rasmild Helstad in vocal solos. Poars of laughter were continuous during Howard Anderson's reading on "Etiquette." Mrs. Wentworth again appeared in readings and was followed by Evaristie La Verdere of Waterville, deputy president of the French song parts of which were sung by the club in union. The toastmaster then introduced Dr. W. M. Emerson of Bangor, governor of the 41st district which includes Maine and New Brunswick. He gave a short but very interesting talk on "Lions and the French song parts of which were sung by the club in union. The toastmaster then introduced Dr. W. M. He gave a short but very interesting talk on "Lions and the French song parts of which were sung by the club in union."

Clarence C. Stetson of Bangor, chairman of the Maine Development Commission was introduced as the speaker of the evening and his address with the "Maine Tax Burden" as his theme proved very interesting. One point which he stressed was that "The disease of deserted and abandoned farms that has afflicted certain of our less prosperous farming communities might easily spread to other types of property, factories, stores, transportation, city and rural homes and bring to other sections of the State unemployment and suffering unless some vigorous steps are taken to lessen present tax burdens. There is no surer way of stopping expansion of our recreational industry than to continue high local and State taxes."

King Lion Perry then gave an outline of what the club has accomplished in charitable work during the past year and what it proposes to do in the future. Songs by the club in union interspersed the program. At 9:30 adjournment was made to Town hall where dancing was participated in. Representatives from the Bangor, Waterville, Rockland and Wadsworth clubs were present.

Nile's Repair Shop, Spring street, will be open Saturday nights hereafter.

GLAZED COIFFURES

Here's A New Purpose To Which Lady May Devote Her Locks

And now come the Parisian glazed coiffures and ornaments made of hair, dyed to exactly match the evening gown and stiffly glazed.

They are new modes for the feminine crown of glory that is opera-bound or stepping out to some very formal affair.

These Paris-fashions were introduced at the coiffure salon of the Illinois Hairdressers' Association by John Mueller, stylist, who has just returned from seeing how smart Europeans are wearing their locks this season.

This glazed coiffure was first brought out at the recent Exposition Francaise des Arts de la Coiffure. It is statuesque, still, formal. Not a hair wafts in the breeze. Not a curl curls at large. The secret of achieving this style, as Mueller explained, is to have the hair set with waving fluid, which is not combed out. When the hair is dry it is sprayed with a preparation until it shines and glisters.

Then the ornaments are added—if one wishes.

They are fashioned in the shape of Spanish combs, fans, curls, braids. After being dyed they are coated with shellac. As the approved style is to dress the hair back from the face, Mueller said, the ornaments are worn at the back of the head or placed behind the ears.

The color of the ornaments is not influenced by the shade of the wearer's hair, but must match exactly the color of the gown, Mueller continued. If the gown has two or more predominating colors, the ornament may have also.

THE SEA BREEZE

I am sitting at my eastern kitchen window, watching the sunrise. Such beautiful pictures, if we only take the time to look at them. It is high water in the harbor, the hill and trees are reflected upside down in the water. Lots of gulls here this morning, diving after the herring.

I took a sort of a vacation this summer and went out to haul lobster traps with my husband every morning, for two weeks or more, and wonder of wonders! I didn't even feel seashell though some days it was quite choppy, as the fishermen call it. But I had a fine time; learned to steer the boat up to the lobster buoys, hardly missed one, but once in a while had to try a second time. Now it is too cold for me to go out, but I shall look forward to next summer so I can go again. I sort of feel disgusted with myself, to think of all the summers I might have gone, but would not, for fear of being seasick.

The sun is having quite a job to get up over some grey clouds, but he is turning the edges to gold, so I think he will win out soon. Wish some who never have the chance to see a sunrise over the water, could be sitting here with me enjoying it as I do. Best wishes to all the members.

WHY CALLED A CROWBAR?

"Crowbar" was originally applied to a hooked piece of iron with a "beak" on it, suggesting the head of a crow. Later the name was extended to any bar of iron used for prying.

MISTAKES

When a garage man makes a mistake he adds it on your bill.

When a carpenter makes a mistake it's just what he expected.

When a preacher makes a mistake nobody knows the difference.

When a lawyer makes a mistake it was just what he wanted, because he has a chance to try the case all over again.

When a judge makes a mistake it becomes the law of the land.

When a doctor makes a mistake he buries it.

But when the editor makes a mistake—Good night—From an Exchange.

Latest invention seems to be wage-saving machinery that throws thousands of dollars out of circulation.—New York Evening Journal.
