A BRIEF REPLY

But Alena Starrett's Reply To "Jehovah's Witnesses" Doesn't Lack Emphasis

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

Something was evidently accomplished by my letter of Nov. 2, in your paper, about the invasion of Maine by "Jehovah's Witnesses." Comment from Union, Rockland, and Warren came to me, verbal and written. To cap it all, in your Tuesday issue was the three column or more reply from the sect, carrying many Biblical quotations, and by far too long to be emphatic. From the latter I am more than convinced that my letter got across to Knox County, and that reception to such a sect as will not pledge allegiance to the flag and the republic for which it stands, in this precinct was exceedingly cool. It is my honest opinion that any citizen who calls himself such, and will not salute the flag, is unworthy of the name, regardless how much he professes to worship God and how well he can quote scripture. That is my stand and I refuse to be shaken from it by any one.

Alena Starrett
Warren, Nov. 29.
[A letter from Happy Hope Farm, on this subject will appear in Tuesday's issue.—Ed.]

STRAND THEATRE

"The Crusades," stirring story of the conquest of the Holy Land and of the romance between Richard Coeur de Lion, King of England, and Berengaria, Princess of Navarre, will be shown Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

A cast of more than 10,000 persons is headed by Loretta Young as Berengaria and Henry Wilcoxon as Richard, and includes such favorites as Ian Keith, Katherine DeMille, C. Aubrey Smith, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale, C. Henry Gordon, George Barbier, Montagu Love, Hobart Bosworth, William Farnum, Lumsden Hare and Pedro de Cordoba.

Battle scenes on a scale hitherto unbelievable, a massing of human beings in a fashion never before attempted, an expenditure of considerably more than $1,000,000 make it probably the most spectacular film that has ever emerged from Hollywood.

"The Crusades" is the story of Richard's entrance into the Crusade to escape marriage. Headstrong and reckless, he refuses to wed the Princess of France but, when he runs out of supplies for his men, he marries Berengaria of Navarre to secure the dowry which she brings with her. It is his ripening love for Berengaria that keeps the Crusade alive when the Saracens have checked the Christian hosts at Acre. The Saracens capture the Queen and Richard, forgetting everything else, storms Acre to rescue her. The two great battles, at Acre and at Jerusalem, follow.—ad.

SOME EARLY SCHOOLS

Supt. Morse Gives Interesting Talk On Knox County Educational Affairs

An interesting chapter in Knox County's school history, going away back to the days of the old settlers, was related to the Rockland Lions Club Wednesday by one of its own members, Supt. F. L. S. Morse.

In 1720, or shortly thereafter, colonists built sawmills at Mill River, Thomaston, and began the erection of 30 houses. The settlement was of brief duration, however, for the French and Indians swept down upon it and destroyed all of the construction which had been begun. Similar fate overtook attempts at colonization which were made in 1740, this time the Indians being the marauders. In 1743 members of the Plymouth Colony began a settlement at Meduncook and Stirling.

The first school in Knox County, according to Supt. Morse, was started between the foot of Green and Wadsworth streets in Thomaston. The teacher was Dr. David Fales whose ambition to rear a family of 25 children was nearly gratified. There were twenty-four and the family adopted another. The house in which the school was held belonged to the fort. About 1762 Major Wheaton built a mansion on Gleason street, Thomaston, and brought a considerable number of families from Massachusetts.

Private schools were common in this period, there being one in the Copeland house at Warren, one in Union taught by Mr. Hawes, and one in Friendship taught by Levi Morse who married a Miss Bradford and moved to Union.

Town meetings began to consider the matter of public schools, and often voted for them, although it was some time before such schools were actually started.

Supt. Morse then told of the arrival in this section of a number of Irishmen, who had special talent for teaching.

The first of these was John O'Brien. Members of that family have always been prominent in educational circles, either as teachers, superintendents or members of school boards. John Sullivan came to Wessaweskeag (South Thomaston). Said he could make shoes or teach school. The community needed a teacher and he was engaged. Sullivan was a small man and very jolly. Many humorous stories are still told about him. He was a brilliant man—with a thirst—and is said to have died in a Boston almshouse.

Micah Bowen, a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, taught in Vinalhaven. The first school in Rockland, according to the teacher, was taught by William Walsh, in the Meadow district. Descendants of Bowen and Walsh are still to be found in this section. Michael Ryan taught in Woolwich and applied for a school in Thomaston. Thomas Emerson, a native of Lime-ridge came to Thomaston and taught school. He married there, went back to Ireland for a visit and died in his native country. Faithful Singer came from Ireland and taught school in Warren, but like Emerson he died in Ireland while on a visit there.

Men of this type, some of them capable Shakespearean students, made learning attractive to the people.

After a while the establishment of town schools began, and early in the 19th century the people began to be interested in higher learning. An academy was established in Lincoln County in 1808, and one was established in Thomaston. There were seven mills on Mill River about this time. Warren Academy had some brilliant teachers, including the famous historian Cyrus Eaton; and the father of the late Gen. J. P. Cilley. These academies were founded under the laws of the State of Maine.

There was a theological seminary in Thomaston, and several private High Schools in the county, including a ladies High School in Rockland. Surveying and navigation were included in the curriculum of the High Schools. The Academy in Thomaston ran until the establishment of the High School. An academy was chartered for St. George but was never opened. One was started in Camden in 1840, but was discontinued because it failed to get a land grant. Rough times in those early school-days, the speaker said. Supt. Morse spoke entirely without notes, and his discourse, admirably delivered, held the closest attention of his brother Lions.

COMMITTEE OF TEN

Working In Behalf Of Highway Safety Holds Its First Meeting

The first meeting of the Committee of Ten, appointed by the Governor in compliance with the motion of the Highway Safety Committee, recently appointed, met with Gov. Brann Wednesday. This committee is charged with the formulation of a program for an intensive street and highway safety campaign, the program to be later submitted to the Governor's committee for consideration and approval.

The committee's personnel is: Gov. Brann, Secretary of State Barrows, Gen. James Hanson, Chief of State Police; Oscar E. Wiseman, chairman of Highway Safety of the American Legion; Miss Margaret McQuade, Red Cross Field representative of Maine; Dr. Ruth Emery, State president of the Business and Professional Women's Club; Linwood E. Porter, president Maine Trucking Association; Chief of Police John Ashton, Lewiston; Justice Albert Bellevue of Portland and Walter J. Brennan, Safety Engineer, Department of Labor and Industry.

Gov. Brann declared for a program such as will include all phases of the problem and mentioned the necessity of having a definite objective. After the Governor entertained many ideas he assured the committee of his personal interest in this vital matter and left the formulation of its tentative program to the Committee of Ten. When completed, the recommendations and plan of this committee will be presented to the Governor's Highway Safety Committee of which it is a part.

This session was largely given over to the creation of an organization. It will be suggested to the Governor's committee that Gov. Brann serve as honorary chairman of all committees, that Lewis O. Barrows serve as general chairman of all groups and that the two committees now functioning continue to direct the work, the larger to be known as the General Committee and the Committee of Ten to be known as the Executive Committee.

The Committee was in complete agreement with the Governor's suggestion that the work is worthy of a full-time director who would furnish the necessary leadership and serve to co-ordinate the many and varied activities contemplated.

The Committee of Ten also agreed that the activities should be projected along nine principal lines—education, engineering and traffic control, co-operation with municipalities, child and public education, legislation, laws, regulations and courts, co-operation with other prevention agencies, law enforcement, publicity, statistics and analyses, and commercial vehicles.

In the development of these activities it was thought best to recommend that committees be set up for the intensive development of these phases, the chairman to be named from the Committee of Ten and empowered to select the committee personnel from the Governor's Highway Safety Committee. Appreciating the need for advice from specialists in their particular field it will be recommended that the Chairman of the Committee of Ten be authorized to name to his committee such ex-officio members as may be necessary from time to time.

Another meeting has been called of the Committee of Ten for next Wednesday at 10 a. m. at which time the details of the program to be submitted to the Governor's Committee will be discussed and a suggested plan of action formally drawn.

Among the many phases to be discussed at that time are: Official Observer System, Auxiliary Police Forces, Physical examination for driving license, Survey of Signals, Signs, etc., Survey of Other State Programs, Carbon Monoxide Hazards, Code of Hand Signals, Traffic Planning, "Flying Squadrons" of State Police, Speakers Bureau, Spare Lamp Equipment, Walking on Left of Highways, Obsolete Speed Limits, Drawing of Spot Maps for State, Cities, Towns, Radio Equipment for State Police, Minimum Requirements for the Marking of Construction and Vehicle Break-downs, Triplicate Tag System, Study of and More Severe Punishment of "Repeaters," Greater Publicity on Convictions of Motor Vehicle Law Violators.

"FISHHAWKS" WERE HAPPY

Vinalhaven Reunion In Boston—Toastmaster Drew Pulls Some Stunts

The fifth annual reunion of Vinalhavenites in and around Boston was held at the 20th Century Club, 3 Joy street, Nov. 23. As heretofore chronicled in these columns a delegation from the island town left Nov. 22, and augmented by one here and two there from different towns, arrived in Boston some 15 strong.

Before the festivities began an informal reception was held in the cozy reception parlor of the club, and ceremony was a lost and forgotten art as the Fishhaws called to one another. Old friendships were renewed, some people there having been absent from the island 25 years or more, while others come regularly each year.

About 7 p. m. lines were formed and a gallant onslaught was made on a splendid turkey supper furnished by the club. Before squaring away for the repeat Postmaster O. V. Drew was introduced as master of ceremonies by Arthur B. Brown, who has been the main cog in the wheel of energy that worked so hard to produce such splendid results. After brief remarks Postmaster Toastmaster Drew reached up his sleeve and produced the following toast, which the assemblage drank standing:

"To Vinalhaven, Down In Maine
"Down where the sun shines a little bit brighter, and the fog is a little bit thicker, where the bright blue sea is a little bit smoother, and its great green rollers are a little bit rougher, where the wind can be a life-giving breath of cool air from the S. W. or a howling N. E. blizzard, where it can be 60 above one day and 30 below the next, where fish can be caught standing on Main street, but haddock costs 21 cents a pound in the markets. To Vinalhaven, down in Maine, where you are never more than half a mile from salt water, but where no better drinking water ever runs down hill than runs into the old Watering Trough, that has the crookedest coast line in Christendom, but the straightest people in the world, just a small island on the Coast of Maine, but tonight the biggest place in the hearts of its people."

"Vinalhaven, may she stand till her granite hills crumble in dust, till the red sun fails to rise over rugged Armbrust's Hill, till fish no longer swim the sea, till lobsters eat hay and George McDonald tells the truth."

During the serving of the banquet the festivities were enlivened by the arrival of several telegrams, one to Frank Grimes furnishing considerable information and amusement; and one from Harold Vinal supplying much sentiment and regret.

About this time was solved the mystery of the peculiar looking parcel that the toastmaster had been carefully carrying all day, for when its wrappings had been removed, it was found to be about two feet square or genuine Vinalhaven sod that had been carried clear from the island to Boston so that the exiled natives could once more put foot to the ground they love so well. The toastmaster gravely informed them that this particular piece of sod was endowed with the power of producing an irresistible itching on the bottom of the foot that touched it, and said it could only be relieved by again placing the foot on Vinalhaven soil. If this be true Vinalhaven is assured of a good summer business next year for many of the gathering availed themselves of the opportunity to again put foot to "the old sod."

The sod must have had other magic powers for Toastmaster Drew suddenly pulled out some clam shells from under it which naturally made them high water clams. These upon being opened were found to contain messages from other Vinalhaven people in far-off lands.

General singing was introduced at this point and such old favorites as "Sailing, Sailing" and "Sweet Adeline" were rendered (meaning torn apart) by the lusty vocalists. Two parodies, written by the toastmaster (in collaboration with Rudy Vallee and Bing Crosby) were also sung at this time. One on "East Side—West Side" was:

East side, West side over 'cross the Bridge,
From Pequot clear to Dogtown, not for getting Punkin Ridge,
Boys and girls together, we walked in Lovers Lane,
We're regret, nor can forget, old Vinalhaven, Maine.

The other a Vinalhaven version of "Home on the Range" was not so short, and perhaps not so sweet, but

MOOSE SEASON ENDS TODAY

The Kill In Knox, Lincoln and Waldo Counties Believed Under Fifty

Open season on moose and deer closes in Knox County at sundown today, and it is hard to tell which will feel more relieved, the monarchs of the forest which serve as targets for high powered rifles, or human beings whose daily tasks have compelled them to ride through the war zones. Heavy rains have been a great handicap to the hunters, for the swamps are full of water, but in the counties of Knox, Lincoln and Waldo the fear of encountering moose on the highway in the night-time has been materially lessened.

Chief Warden W. E. Bradbury and his deputies have been steadily on the job, the forces in these three counties being augmented by deputies from other parts of the State. Their presence has served materially to keep illegal slaughter down to a minimum.

Warden William E. Davis of Union reported the slaying of three bull moose and four deer in his district yesterday. A Mr. Benjamin of Searsport shot a very large moose, Perley Jones of Portland took back to his home a 17-point moose, and Ray Carleton of Union shot a large bull in the Whitcher Bog at Searsport.

Down in St. George the Andrews brothers—Cecil and Lee—were perhaps the luckiest moose hunters in the entire district, each shooting a 1000-pounder without leaving his own premises.

Warden Davis reported 37 hunters in his district Friday and Warden Charles Head, Jr. of Rockland had seen 100 up to noontime.

Among the successful hunters yesterday was a woman, Mrs. Charlotte Throckmorton of Newcastle. She killed a moose while parked in the highway. Elbert Starrett of Warren shot a 14-point bull near Aunt Lydia's Tavern, across the Waldoboro line. Charles Bennett of Verona killed a moose in Appleton which had evidently been shot by another hunter Thursday. Roy Light of Washington shot a moose near his residence. Horace Jackson of Morrill shot a 1200-pound bull.

On Thanksgiving Day
The army of occupation which had planned to invest the woodlands of Knox, Lincoln and Waldo Counties on the opening day of the moose hunting season, was repulsed to some extent by the heavy southerly storm, but in spite of weather conditions, it is estimated that at least 600 armed men were afoot in the forests and marshlands.

When darkness forced the hunters to quit the chase that night the wardens and public were happily disappointed to learn there had been no casualties among the hunters and comparatively few infractions of the law.

Successful hunters Thanksgiving Day also included: Horace Jackson of Morrill, a 1200-pound moose; Milford Martin of Damariscotta, a large moose; Dr. Irving Tuttle of Appleton, a 17-point moose; Ronald Charrand of Augusta, a 700-pound moose.

Charles F. Henderson of Thomaston paid a fine of $10 and costs of court amounting to $10.25 when arraigned Wednesday on a night hunting charge, before Judge Harold Smith at the Lincoln County Court. Henderson was arrested Tuesday night on the Waldoboro side of Stahl's hill by Game Warden Frank Phillips.

One of the lucky Knox County hunters is Representative Albert Elliot, who brought down a large bull moose.

SUCH DEEDS WILL ENDURE

Kindness Shown Donation Day At Home For Aged Women a Sermon In Itself

The annual Donation Day at the Home for Aged Women Wednesday was crowned with success and happiness, thanks to the many who remembered the members of the home in individual gifts and in donations of articles of food stuffs for the maintenance. How the gifts did pour in, vegetables, jellies, preserves, fruits, the makings of a Thanksgiving dinner, cooked food, candies, and what not!

This year children took an active part in the donation, a charming gesture bespeaking future thought in such work. From the children of the Benner Hill school came a bushel-size box filled to the brim with vegetables, jellies and preserves. Red paper decked with black turkeys gave the container a festive appearance. A greeting card bore the names of each donor, even down to the smallest. The sub-primary at the Tyler Building, Miss Eleanor Bird, sent a box and also the primary department of the Congregational church, Miss Nathalie Jones in charge.

Among the many callers during the day were Rev. Corwin H. Oids of the Congregational church and Rev. E. O. Kenyon of St. Peter's Episcopal, the latter giving the blessing as dinner was served. All the callers showed special interest in the spick and span appearance of the Home, due to the splendid care being given by Mr. and Mrs. William Fifield who are now acting as the caretakers. Tea was served, the ladies making a pretty picture in their dress-up gowns and enjoying their gifts. The board of management, headed by Mrs. Mabel Sherman, whose loving devotion to the Home and its management, never ceases to function, takes this opportunity to express appreciation and thanks for every donation, large or small, and to assure the donors that it will be used to the best advantage. A closing word is that donations always come in handy, are always appreciated. A small bag of vegetables, a few apples, a jar of jelly or preserves, a loaf of cake or bread, a dozen cookies, a little fruit, anytime, it may seem a small gift, but it all helps. Callers, too, are always welcome.

HARVEST HOME SONG

The frost will bite us soon;
His tooth is on the leaves;
Beneath the golden moon
We wear the golden sheaves;
We care not for the winter's spite,
We keep our Harvest-home tonight.
The pleasure of a king
Is tasteless to the mirth
Of peasants when they bring
The harvest of the earth.
The reaper with his hook—
All ye who love our Harvest-home,
The thresher with his flail,
The shepherd with his crook,
The milkmaid with her pail,
The cooper with his hoop—
Tonight the dullest, blooded clods
Are kings and queens, are demigods,

THREE TIMES-A-WEEK

"Remember not the sins of my youth, nor my transgressions; according to Thy mercy remember thou me for Thy goodness' sake, O Lord." (Psalm 25: 7.)

MONDAY'S ELECTION

The utter absence of anything resembling a political campaign this year scarcely prepares anybody for the statement that the biennial city election is impending next Monday. Probably for the first time in the memory of any Rockland voter there is no contest for mayor, so far as the major parties are concerned. The Republicans and Democrats, holding their caucus on the same night both nominated Leforest A. Thurston of Ward 7 for the office of mayor, a position which he has held the past two years. The Democratic nomination was by acclamation, despite the fact that a spirit of antagonism was known to exist among certain voters of his own political faith. In the Republican caucus, a clear majority favored Mr. Thurston, although there were two aspirants representing the Republican party.

With Mayor Thurston's name mentioned on both of the major party tickets the election is a foregone conclusion, and local interest has dwindled correspondingly. A bit of excitement was injected into the situation through the claim that votes cast for Thurston on the Republican ticket could not be counted for Thurston on the Democratic ticket. This of course is too absurd for consideration, and any belief to the contrary probably had its origin from the fact that Republican votes do not count for a Democrat in the primary elections, and vice versa.

The independent candidacy of John W. Lane is interesting but not vital, by any stretch of imagination. Mr. Lane will get a considerable number of votes—votes from the "men in overalls"—votes from dissatisfied Democrats, and votes from Republicans who were not pleased at the action of the Republican caucus. Mr. Lane, himself, has no notion that he can be elected, but does say that Thurston will not have 1000 majority as he did two years ago; and he has hopes of carrying two or three of the wards. Conservative opinion places the Lane vote as hardly likely to exceed the 500-mark. Two years ago upward of 3000 votes were cast in the city election, and it can be seen from this that the Lane candidacy is not viewed with any appreciable degree of alarm by those who have even the slightest familiarity with city elections.

And now comes the election feature which should interest all loyal Republicans—the election of a Republican board of aldermen. The party has a strong candidate in each ward, well deserving the support of the Republicans as a whole, and those independent Democrats who wish to see a change in certain municipal conditions. Democrats, Independents and Lane men who wish to split their ticket and vote for the Republican ward candidates are referred to the following instructions, given by City Clerk E. R. Keene:

The voter may place a cross within the square above the name of the party group or ticket, in which case he shall be deemed to have voted for all the persons named in the group under such party or designation. And if the voter shall desire to vote for any person or persons, whose name or names are not printed as candidates in such party group or ticket, he may erase any name or names which are printed therein and place a cross (X) in the square at the right of the name of the candidate of his choice in any other party group or ticket.

Or, as an optional method of voting, the voter may omit the cross (X) in the party square and place a cross (X) in the blank square at the right of the name of each candidate he wishes to vote for. If the voter wishes to vote for a candidate whose name is not on the ballot he may write the name under the name of the candidate erased. Or if the voter does not desire to vote for a person or persons whose name or names are printed on the party group or ticket, he may erase such name or names with the effect that the ballot shall not be counted for the candidate or candidates whose names are so erased.

A RETURN MATCH

Lawry Says Star Alleys Always Keep Their Bowling Agreements

To the Sports Editor:—

In the Thursday issue of this paper was a letter from Gray and Calder of Vinelhaven, who stated that they had several experiences of paying to bowl in Rockland and that their opponents agreed to return engagements in Vinelhaven.

I wish to state that neither of these games was bowled at the Star Alleys, as I have covered all the games there for the past 20 years and know that Manager Thomas has never owed any team in the State a return game.

The bowling challenge was started for the purpose of reviving interest in the city and neither Thomas nor McKinney would roll for a purse, as we bowl for the love of the game. Thomas as you may or may not know, is nearly 70 and of course not quite as spry as he has been in years gone by. He feels that the season of the year makes it rather hard for a game with the two mentioned boys, as the best service means a stop over night either way.

I believe a game can be arranged for next season and I wish the boys to understand that if play is arranged by either John Thomas or Frank McKinney, a return match will be given. I think my friend, Leon ("Goose") Arey will agree on this point.

Best regards to the boys and Manager Drew.

Test Effect of Weather Changes In 10,000 Mile Automobile Run

Under auspices of the Adventurers Club of Chicago, a test car makes trip through extremes of heat and cold, to analyze weather strain upon radiator, in campaign to insure protection for motorists. Photograph shows the arrival of the car at the airport in Mexico City after the long drive from Canada. It was the formal opening of a movement to keep all America constantly posted on weather conditions.

AMERICA will know all about the weather, every minute of the day throughout the coming winter.

By every means of attracting the eyes and ears of the public, word of falling temperatures or continued cold will be spread. By radio the news will reach the automobilist right on the highway—assuming his car is equipped with a receiver.

This is the greatest campaign ever waged to prevent frozen radiators and all the griefs and expense incidental thereto. Coincidentally, aided by improved cooling systems in modern cars, motorists will be able to thwart frigid breezes at pocketbook savings in the future.

On the principle that "the weather is always first page news," the warning crusade involves the use of weather reports through the air, in advertisements through all mediums, in filling station and dealer bulletin services of striking type. The first step was dramatic: a 10,000 mile test of a car with a sealed radiator containing a new antifreeze compound. That car was driven through more changes of climate than known to Ethiopia or any part of the Dark Continent. It went from the coldest sections of Canada, where it was 54 degrees below zero, to Mexico City, where the thermometer registered 102 degrees above—a contribution staged under the auspices of the Adventurers Club of Chicago and regarded as a convincing demonstration of the efficiency of the new and lesser-priced radiator solution. This preparation was made possible by newly-developed chemical processes started with anhydrous ethanol. The chemical resulting from these processes, steel blue in color, is known as thermo royal, and scientists explain that it is not a super-alcohol nor does it contain glycerine.

No toxic fumes are given off. The chemical resists heat as well as cold, staying in solution with water even under heats much higher than found in lately-designed motor cars.

SERMONETTE
God's Purpose—II.
Jesus stops, and calls to each of us, "Follow Me."
Walking by the Sea of Galilee, Jesus saw two fishermen, Simon Peter and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea. Pausing, he said to them, "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men." He made no bargain and held out no other promise; but straightway they left their nets and followed him. He made them fishers of men in very truth, and they followed, till death claimed them all. Never again were they to go back to fishing by this beautiful sea. In God's great purposes they stepped out into the world of men—stepped from obscurity to greatness by this answer to Jesus' call.

As the Master went on from this scene he saw two others, James the Son of Zebedee and John, his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father mending their nets; and he called them, and they immediately left the ship and their father and followed him. Never to mend nets again.

Jesus calls to men and women, "Follow me," and whosoever leaves all to follow him steps from obscurity to share in His greatness in the eternal purposes of God. Today as much as those on Galilee's shore.

MRS. E. L. MORRIS

The death of Mrs. Loretta (Armstrong) Morris Nov. 29 at her home at 375 Old County road brought to the close a life of rich service and marked by unusually fine character. Mrs. Morris was born in Burlington, N. S., 32 years ago. Her marriage to Capt. Morris was on Sept. 6, 1885 the family coming to Rockland in 1900. The later years of their long and happy married life were spent in the attractive little bungalow at The Highlands, surrounded by a wealth of flowers in which Mrs. Morris took special pride. Here members of the family gathered for reunion, and friends and neighbors always found happiness and encouragement in her cheerful presence. That Mrs. Morris held a real place in the hearts of all who knew her was borne out in the many kind remembrances shown during her illness and at her death. Her entire life was one of unselfish devotion to her family and friends. She was affiliated with the First Baptist church and a member of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Surviving are the husband, four daughters, Mrs. Luella Curry of Rockland, Mrs. Nevetta Foster of Kremenling, Col. Mrs. Beatrice K. Chaples of Rockland and Mrs. Freda B. Disch of East Orange, N. J.; and one son, Caleb L. Morris of Kansas, Tex.; by 13 grand children and 13 great grandchildren, and two sisters, Miss Lattie Armstrong and Mrs. Bernice Lutz, both of Massachusetts.

Funeral services were held Nov. 24, with Rev. J. Charles MacDonald of the First Baptist church conducting a most impressive service. Mrs. Mildred Havener sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "Oh Love That Will Not Let Me Go." Bearers were grandsons Orrin, Lockhart, John Curry, Ralph Chaples Jr., Ralph Curdennings. Interment was in the family lot at Achorn Cemetery. The floral tributes were of great beauty.

Tenants Harbor Days

Nov. 16: Wind no't east, stiff breeze, cloudy, thermometer, 38 degrees, and at night, "The wind she blow, she blow some more," and the following morning wind still no' east and increasing in force, with snow and rain squalls. That is the weather for Boston, Mass., A.D. 1935. N.E. weather for November.

Now let us look at the record for November 1885 at the Harbor in the State of Maine: Nov. 21, clear and cool, wind N. E. light and kept so all day. Sch. S. S. Bickmore hauled up for the winter. Stripped her today, took off sails and stored them. Nov. 22: Overcast all day. Wind N. E. light, but very cold. Nov. 23: Overcast all day, wind N. E. light. Nov. 24: Overcast all day and cold, wind still N. E. stiff breeze. Looks stormy now, 12 midnight. (Dad must have had the first evening watch that day.)

Nov. 25: Overcast with a very stormy look all day. Strong breeze all day and quite cold, still blowing fresh, 11 p. m. Nov. 26: Overcast all day, wind N. E. fresh breeze and quite cold. And that, folks, was a no'theaster on the Maine coast 50 years ago. The schooners were arriving daily, dropping both mud-hooks, stripping for winter and riding out the N. E. storms as best they could.

Those easterly storms usually gave fair warning of their approach. First, the roar (we called it rote) of the sea could be heard for days before we got the storm. Even Whittier makes use of it in "Snow Bound" and he was many miles inland.

"The wind blew east; we heard the roar of ocean on his wintry shore. And felt the strong pulse throbbing there Beat with low rhythm our inland air."

Second, the lift; when the islands and schooners at sea seemed to be suspended between sea and sky. And when the fleet were all home for the winter, riding at anchor, about Dec. 15 there came a no'theaster, and I can see those schooners now! First, their jib-booms would point down so it would seem as though they must touch bottom, and then they would rise on the sea and their jib-booms would point to the sky, and frequently it would be something like this: Dec. 19, 1885: Snowed about all of last night, and snowed again this afternoon. Wind all around the compass today. (And then what a mess. The schooners would be all snarled up.)

The schooners have vanished from the Harbor and will never come again.

Everyday Cooking Miracles

BY FRANCES WEEDMAN
Director Hatpoint Electric Cookery Institute

How would you like to put the entire meal in an oven, go away, come home any time you please and find the meal perfectly cooked, and ready to serve, "I can't believe it," you might have once said, but now that the new automatic electric range has come forth you know that such a thing is really possible. Perhaps you may have a "miracle" range in your own kitchen, or, perhaps, your neighbor has told you about hers; anyway, this little poem written by a "Miracle Cook" will tell you just how she feels about HER new automatic electric range.

After all, walking out on a Sunday dinner is just ONE of the advantages of keeping company with an electric range! Speaking of Sunday dinners, here is a menu for just ONE of the tempting "just fun" meals which this carefree church-goer can find oven cooked and ready when she returns; roast chicken and dressing, green beans, carrots, and apple pie. Here is how it is done. Before leaving, Mrs. Home-maker makes the usual preparations; she stuffs the chicken and places it in a shallow, uncovered

A modern homemaker setting the "timer clock" of her new electric range.

Before and After
"BEFORE I had an electric range I was so cross we made the change
NOW I'm good natured at every season
And there's no doubt at all that the range is the reason;
Well I remember, alas and alack; How it ruined my temper that old stove to black,
NOW with a clean, damp cloth I can shine
In a jiffy, that lovely electric of mine;
On baking days I was bothered and hot,
Sometimes things were right but more often were not,
NOW I wish you could see my pies, puddings and cake,
And all of the other good things I can make;
ONCE on a time I stayed home like a sinner
Trying to get up a good Sunday dinner,
NOW I put food in the oven and set the control
Then go off to church to attend to my soul;
And when I get home the dinner is done
And all of the labor it cost was JUST FUN;
And it certainly fills me with joy and with laughter
To think of the CONTRASTS—BEFOREHAND and AFTER."

roasting pan; she makes the apple pie, she prepares the vegetables, and places them in covered pans with 1/2 cup water. Then into the cold electric oven they go—the vegetables and the chicken on the lower shelf, and the pie on the top shelf.

Mrs. Confident Homemaker sets the Temperature Control for 375°; she sets the Timer Clock (alias Chef's Brain) at just the time that she wants the cooking period to begin and to end (she allows a cooking period of approximately 1 1/2 hours—the exact time depending upon the size of the chicken). She turns the oven switch to Bake and away she goes.

Timer Clock Watches Cooking
Were you to ask just how one could be so nonchalant about the cooking of this oven meal you would be told about the miracle electric oven. The Timer Clock, of course, gives the signal for releasing the electric heat units and the Temperature Control sets the exact pace for the inflow of heat; and, mind you, those heat units are so accurately measured, they are so well controlled that the temperature reaches 375° and it stays right there. Perfectly insulated, this electric oven maintains a moist atmosphere at just the proper temperature. Then, when the time's up, the Timer Clock turns the heat off and a warm, tempting dinner awaits Milady's return.

REVOLUTIONARY PENSIONERS OF KNOX COUNTY, MAINE

By Edward Kalloch Gould, State Historian of Maine
(CHAPTER LXII.)

Soon after the battle of Lexington, George White, then of Topsham, according to his declaration for pension for which I am indebted for his account of his services, enlisted and was commissioned as Lieutenant in Capt. James Lancaster's Company, Massachusetts Colonial troops, and served in the building of forts at Portland. Lieut. White was instrumental in raising this Company. He was discharged Dec. 31, 1775, and re-enlisted the next day being again discharged Nov. 23, 1776.

The History of Brunswick, Topsham and Harpswell is authority for the statement, that in 1776 he was made Major of a Regiment of Massachusetts Militia, commanded by Col. Samuel McCobb of Georgetown.

White again enlisted Dec. 1, 1776, and was commissioned Feb. 3, 1777, as Captain, and in March, 1777, joined his Regiment at Ticonderoga. This was the 11th Regiment of the Massachusetts line that was commanded by Col. Ebenezer Francis, who was killed at the battle of Hubbardston, July 7, 1777.

An interesting sidelight of the condition of the Regiment in which Capt. White's Company is serving is shown by a letter of Col. Ebenezer Francis, commanding the Regiment, to a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, dated Ticonderoga, June 3, 1777. He writes: "I have now in my Regiment more than 100 good men who have not had a blanket to cover them. The greater part of them have been here upwards of two months. I need not represent to you the hardships they must have undergone and still do on that account. Not more than one-half of their arms are fit for service; many of them no shoes nor hose to their feet. Some few of them would be glad to have drawn their money for their clothing but it cannot be obtained."

"What can we expect from soldiers unclothed by day and no blankets to shield them from this cold clay by night, and miserable arms at a time when we hourly expect to be attacked. I leave you to answer. Miserable poor run and other things in proportion and their duty very hard. Notwithstanding all those difficulties the soldiers are in good spirits in hopes of being supplied by and by. Is it possible to be as we are informed that clothing and arms for two full Regiments are deposited at Boston while we in this Northern department are suffering for want. I have 400 men arrived. I expect some more on the road and they are very fine men. It is a pity to let them suffer and die."

The first general engagement in which Capt. White's Company took part was the battle of Hubbardston which occurred July 7, 1777.

This was a rear guard action following the evacuation of Ticonderoga by General St. Clair, and was fought by the Continental Regiments of Col. Seth Warner of Bennington fame, Col. Nathaniel Hale's New Hampshire Regiment, and Col. Ebenezer Francis 11th Massachusetts, in which Capt. White was serving.

It so happened that this American rear guard, in spite of a "positive order from Gen. St. Clair to come down to him at Castleton, bivouacked at what is now East Hubbardston. Here they were surprised in the morning by a British detachment under Gen. Fraser. The American troops were cooking breakfast when the British charged their camp. The New Hampshire men were the first to be struck, and being completely surprised, promptly made for the woods. Fraser's men swept on toward the Regiments of Colonel's Warren and Francis. They had only a few seconds to get their men into some sort of formation. Nevertheless their first volley knocked down 21 men of the leading British platoon, dead or wounded, killed Major Grant of the 24th and wounded Major, the Earl of Balcarras the commander of the Light Infantry.

Then began a bitterly fought engagement. Except for a few clearings the terrain was all woods. In these the Americans were able to take cover and fight as individuals after the first volley. The British on the contrary, found it out of the question to maintain their close order formation, but they fought with great gallantry.

Warner's Vermonters were on the left of the American line while Col. Francis' 11th Massachusetts was on the right on a hill on which that officer's monument now stands. Fraser attacked the Vermonters, attempting to turn the American left flank by moving his men around that part of the line. Col. Francis was prompt to take the advantage given him by Fraser's movement. Bit by bit the Massachusetts men began to lap around the British left.

Here and there men who had fled to the woods at the first surprise attack began to return. Fraser was still unhurt, but of his three field officers two had been hit at the first fire and Major Acland of the Grenadiers was now wounded as well.

Matters began to look badly for the British and it was almost in desperation that Fraser ordered a bayonet charge when the sound of martial music and the singing of German psalms indicated the coming of the Brunswickers under General Riedesel. When the German advanced party appeared, the chasseur company was ordered straight forward against the 11th Mass., and they were accompanied by the band to give the impression of a larger body of troops. Eighty men of the detachment were sent to turn the flank of the Americans who were themselves about to turn that of the British. At first the Massachusetts men resisted bravely, but the steady volleys of the Brunswickers bore them down. Col. Francis of the 11th Massachusetts first received a German ball through his right arm, but he still continued in command of his troops until he received a fatal wound through his body, entering his right breast.

Riedesel's turning movement began to envelop the American right held by the 11th Mass., and at the same time Fraser's men charged with the bayonet. The sorely tried 11th Massachusetts Regiment gave way and began to disappear into the woods, and Col. Warren saw that the fight was lost. Instantly his men began to drift away in all directions through the trees before the advancing British bayonets. The action was over; but even after its close individuals and small parties of Americans continued sniping from the woods so that at least one British officer was badly wounded in the act of looking over the papers found in the pockets of the dead Col. Francis. It was a fierce fight and a dearly bought victory. But the Regiments of Col. Hale and Francis had been wiped out as organizations. After Col. Francis' death, Col. Benjamin Tupper was made commander of the 11th Mass., on July 7, 1777, and continued in command until Jan. 1, 1781.

Who said November days are drear and sad? November days are merely gray and still. October's fun is over; leaves are down. Most of the nuts have dropped. Upon the hill, unashamed, display their naked grace. Against a background Nature has prepared a soft gray sky that throws into relief Each tiny twig and branch the winds have bared.

Many music lovers in this section plan to be in Portland Monday, to hear the Don Cossack Chorus (Russian Male). For those who have not heard them previously I can guarantee that it will be an experience of a lifetime. They are unique, something that cannot be described. Deems Taylor has hit the nail on the head by saying "The best chorus I ever heard or hope to hear." They emerge from a background of most unusual nature. Their name is taken from the particular territory that spreads through the Don Basin southward to the sea of Azoff, and the men of the chorus made up one of the units of General Wrangel's White Army. With its defeat a prison camp near Constantinople was the next step. It was rightly termed the "Camp of Death" for the men knew hunger, cold and sickness as daily companions, never knowing who would be the next to succumb to the dreaded contagion. There was just one bright spot in their day, to gather around the open campfire at nightfall and sing the songs of the homeland. They needed no accompanying instrument, for song to the Russian is natural as speech. Among the men was a young lieutenant, Serge Jaroff, who hearing their campfire songs, conceived the idea of forming a chorus, with the best voices available. This was the beginning of the present chorus of which Jaroff is today the leader. With their transport to Bulgaria in 1923, they continued their chorus work, and gradually their fame spread. Their singing of the ritual in the Russian Embassy Church in Sofia drew crowds to hear them. A concert was arranged, in which they combined sacred and secular songs, and from that time on they have been acclaimed far and wide.

These men have mastered every variety of choral singing. There is a wild beauty in their voices that belongs to no other chorus. Everything about them is dramatic, even to the electrifying realism of some of the songs with their outbursts of fierce yelling and whistling. And yet there is startling contrast in the devotional singing of religious songs. All that they sing is in Russian. The men are very large and none of them are particularly young probably ranging from 45 to 60. They show tragedy in their faces. Jaroff is the only man among them with any musical training—he had studied back in Russia and had conducted a choir. He is a variant from the traditional Cossack type, as he is a small person, small enough to be picked up in one hand by one of the men in his chorus. Yet his command is dynamic, and it is evident that he controls them by an inward and quenchless power.

On tour as well as at rehearsal, military discipline prevails. Today they travel on Nansen passes, which means that special passports must be made out for them with the phrase "en voyage" substituted in place of country. They are "men without a country," their homeland a memory passionately cherished while they roam distant lands. Perhaps that is why they sing such a thrill on the road, who knows? I have seen the scale of prices and seating plan and will be glad to talk with anyone desiring such information. Seats may be ordered by letter or wire and will be held until 6 o'clock next Monday.

Edward H. W. is an associate professor of music at Bowdoin College, who died on Nov. 12, had many friends and acquaintances in this vicinity, who feel a real friend of music has been removed. Before coming to Bowdoin College he had significant experience as organist in several churches. He came to Bowdoin in 1912 and in 1922 was made associate professor, awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Music by the college in 1928. He was affectionately known as "Wassie," and through his activities as leader of the Bowdoin Band and director of the Glee Club and associate instrumental organizations, was known to two generations of Bowdoin men. He was always their counselor and friend. Rockland felt a particular interest in Prof. Wassie as only a few years ago his daughter, Ruth, was a teacher in the High School here, making many friends by her efficiency and charm of manner.

With final tabulations completed in the nation wide referendum by radio listeners to select the most popular composers of classical music, living and deceased, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra will honor the names of Ludwig van Beethoven and Maurice Ravel in its 200th broadcast over the coast-to-coast network Sunday, Dec. 1, 3 to 5 p. m. Actually Ravel is a second choice in this vote. Jan Sibelius, the distinguished Finnish composer, received more votes from the nationwide radio audience in the United States and Canada than any other composer, living or dead. But the response to the Sibelius request will be postponed one week, to Sunday, Dec. 8, when the orchestra will mark the composer's 70th birthday by broadcasting the program to Finland as well as America and Canada.

The vote was: Beethoven 1788, Brahms 904, Wagner 788, Tchaikovsky 648, Living, Sibelius 1888, Ravel 910, Strauss 616, Stravinsky 418. The most popular American composer proved to be Roy Harris who received 162 votes, more than Bruckner and slightly less than Cesar Franck.

A charming letter from Edith Beese Greene encloses several programs indicating that she is having a feast of music on her return to Massachusetts. Mrs. Greene writes: "The Saint-Saens concert was so interesting. I feel I must send program to you. I have long wanted to see, and hear Isidor Philipp, having studied with one of his pupils. The ease with which he played for one of his years was amazing. I am told he is nearly 80. He has none of the mannerisms peculiar to many pianists. It was a concert long to be remembered." The occasion was the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the Birth of Saint-Saens, given in Jordan Hall. Philipp played the piano part in Quartet, Op. 41, B flat, for piano and strings, and Sonata for piano and violoncello, Op. 123, F major. Am interested to note that the cellist was Jean Bedetti who comes to Portland on March 19 in the third concert of the Portland Music Teachers Association series.

In a concert given at the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum on Sunday, Nov. 3, which Mrs. Greene attended, Frederic Tillotson was featured pianist. Mr. Tillotson was heard as lecture-pianist in a convention program of the State Federation of Music Clubs a few years ago.

THAT CANADIAN TREATY

H. W. Crockett of North Haven Approves "Good Neighbor" Policy Editor of The Courier-Gazette:— I wonder if any of the readers of The Courier-Gazette have read the recent article called "The Turning Point," by David Lawrence. He says President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull deserve the thanks of their countrymen for negotiating successfully a trade agreement with Canada on the basis of the principle of reciprocity. Other agreements have been made in the last two years but none comparable in importance to the Canadian pact.

In some respects the Canadian treaty will mark a milestone in the drive this generation is making to work its way out of the economic depression. Historians may some day say it was the turning point in an era of post-war nationalism which in the last decade reached absurd proportions and that finally the world entered in 1935 upon a different era in which the restoration of world trade by the removal of artificial barriers became the paramount objective. Secretary Hull has maintained for the last 20 years that the world must stop its tariff walls and retaliatory schemes which restrict instead of expand the total volume of trade intercourse.

One cannot help from remembering what happened under President Hoover when the Hawley-Smoot tariff law was passed, much against the wishes of the eminent economists of the country; so much so that they framed a petition begging him not to do so. What happened? When the Hawley-Smoot tariff law was passed in 1930 its rates were so high that other nations retaliated with higher rates. American companies unable to ship their goods any more were compelled to build branch plants in foreign countries. This meant that American workmen were thrown out of jobs and huge factories were literally transported to other lands.

The folly of this experience will live for generations to come. Now as I see it we have a President who is breaking up some of these schemes and trying to work out a higher ideal. Canada is not only our neighbor but one of our best customers for our goods. So it is fortunate that an example has gone out into the world of what President Roosevelt has rightly called the good neighbor policy.

Herman W. Crockett

What our lightkeepers and coast guardsmen are doing to protect coastwise shipping by day and by night. The day's news from many lonely outposts along Maine's waterfront.

They took me out a-sailing— The boat was made of glass; We sailed upon the little clouds. The stars came out in shining crowds So thick we scarce could pass. But feather-light through all the night Above the sky we sped; There were no oars with which to row. There was no breath of wind to blow. Though all the sails were spread— Rose Fyeman

Light Notes

In order to protect the illuminating apparatus, a lighthouse tower is surrounded by a lantern, in which the light is placed, the size of which is determined by the order of the light. The base, uprights, and dome are generally made of copper or iron and the sides are glazed with heavy plate glass.

It is important that it should be well ventilated. The luminous intensity of a light is measured by means of a photometer, the unit of measurement in some countries being the light of a Carcel lamp consuming a certain quantity of oil per hour, and in others a sperm candle of fixed dimensions which consumes a certain number of grains per hour.

The distance at which a light may be seen is termed its "range." The form of the earth's surface introduces another element in the problem of determining the value of the range—that of the height of the light above the level of the sea. Thus occurs the theoretical or luminous range and the practical or geographical range.

Portland Head

"A stitch in time saves nine," and a line in time will reach our place in "Guardians of our Coast" we hope.

Billy Dow of Portland called Monday on Mrs. Martha Sterling.

R. T. Sterling, Mrs. Sterling, Mrs. Hilt and Robert Sterling Jr. were visitors in Portland Tuesday afternoon.

Arthur Harlow and George Cloudman were callers Wednesday at the station.

W. C. Dow of Portland visited Wednesday morning with R. T. Sterling.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Thayer Sterling and son Robert joined the family party Thanksgiving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sterling, Peaks Island. F. O. Hilt and family were obliged to remain at the station.

Tonight, while we write, there are clouds in the sky and there have been many dark days this month but we all had much to give thanks for on the holiday.

Ram Island

Lighthouse and Coast Guard friends, we greet you!

Mr. Sampson, our superintendent, inspected this station recently.

Rough seas piled up on this section of the coast during the storm which caused everyone to stand by at attention.

Keeper Robinson, Mr. Colbert and Guy Robinson on a recent trip to town, gathered welcome mail, bought supplies and cared for various other business items.

Bennie Blake was a caller at the station last week.

Thomas McPhee and Millard Robinson have been marketers and mail carriers on their occasional town visits.

The workmen are continuing their work of calking the tower and making other repairs.

Kind wishes to fellow coastmen until another news bulletin.

Manana

Hello, everyone along the coast! It's about time we had a word to say about Manana.

Mrs. Vinal Foss is a patient at the Deaconess Hospital in Boston and is getting along finely. We hope she will return home soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Singer are here to spend the winter with their son and his family. Little Nancy is growing every day and is a great deal of company in the home. We are looking forward to a grand Christmas.

The recent storm was very severe in this direction but no damage was done at the station. Hope other lights along the line fared as well. How are you all on Boon Island? There is usually much work to be done there following a storm.

Chester Doughty, R.F.D. carrier of Orr's Island and Capt. Harvey C. Black of that place who recently brought Mr. and Mrs. Singer here in I. Orrin Linscott's boat, remained with us for one night's visit. It is regretted that Mr. Linscott could not make the trip as his illness made it impossible this year. He was missed keenly.

Mrs. Matilda Strout, mother of Mrs. Foss, is keeping house for the children and is a welcome member of the household.

News is far from plentiful just at present, and so we make our farewell felicitations of the townspeople to their friends and relatives in Boston.

"FISHHAWKS" WERE HAPPY

It was here that the toastmaster, who had been springing so many surprises and was so free with his jokes and wisecracks, had the tables turned on him, when a bevy of charming ladies headed by Mrs. Charles Foster presented the unsuspecting gentleman with a beautiful birthday cake and sang into his blushed reddened ears "Happy Birthday To You."

At the close of the banquet the floor was cleared and upon the arrival of the orchestra general dancing was indulged in. The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Drew, followed by "Scotty" Hopkins (who has not missed one of these events, though by far the oldest person there) with Miss Ruth Hopkins upon his arm, with members of the committee behind them. After that it was every man for himself.

As good nights and good byes were being said it was the general opinion that the affair had been highly successful, and plans were immediately formulated for next year's function. A message was given out from State Senator William Bissett of Portland, a former Vinalhaven boy, that plans were under way for a similar reunion in Portland, to be held in February, and some expressed their intention of attending.

The Frenchman has his cliques, the Scotchman has his clans, New York has its 400 and Chicago has its gangs, but for all around sociability and an organization cemented together with the binders of friendliness and hospitality, give us a Fishhawks reunion.
