ALDEN BOULIER CAPTURED

Admits Attention To Mrs. Wellman and Daughter But Denies Any Knowledge of the Murder

Alden Boulier, escaped convict, who worked last winter and spring on Fred Priest's farm in Rockport under the name of William Atkinson, was arrested yesterday in Bridgewater, Aroostook County where he was living under the name of George Lincoln. He is wanted in Knox County in connection with the murder of Mrs. Fred Wellman.

Alden Boulier, Captured In Aroostook County, Denies All Knowledge of Wellman Murder

der of Mrs. Fred Wellman, which occurred April 23, and Deputy Sheriff C. Earle Ludwick and State Patrolman Daniel C. Pray are now on their way to Aroostook County to assume custody of the man.

Boulier's apprehension is the direct outcome of the intensive search which has been made for him, since the Governor and Council were induced by County Attorney Ensign Otis to offer a reward of $1000 for his capture.

What status the case will now assume is not easily understood, for Boulier is an escaped convict and under ordinary conditions would be returned to the State Prison to serve his sentence as a lifer. This disposition of the case would save Knox County a mammoth bill of expense in the event an indictment for murder should be brought against him next November.

Boulier did not deny his identity when the Aroostook County officials placed him under arrest, but also-lutely denies that he had anything to do with the crime, and says he was not in Rockport at the time. This, however, does not seem consistent with the statement that he bought a revolver at the Tibbetts hardware store on the day following the disappearance of Mrs. Fred Wellman, the murder victim.

Boulier admitted paying attentions to Mrs. Wellman; also that he had been ordered to keep away from the Wellman farm by the dead woman's husband. He also admitted attentions to Wellman's 14-year-old daughter. When questioned about his relations with Mrs. Wellman he would admit nothing but stated that the last time he saw her alive was just before he left Rockport. At that time he had gone over to the Wellman home when he thought the husband was away. He was invited in the house by Mrs. Wellman he said, but refused to go. Then he saw Wellman approaching and ran. Wellman ordered him then to get out and stay out, he said. He then hid in the bushes, he said, and saw Wellman administer a terrific beating to his wife.

For the past two weeks Boulier has been living with three Indian women in the shack where he was found yesterday.

After the arrest Sheriff Welch immediately communicated with Sheriff Frank F. Harding.

Boulier said that after making his getaway from the State Hospital he went direct to Rockport where he has relatives and there obtained work on the farm of Fred Priest, not far from the Wellman place. He said he remained there until April 22 when he went to Aroostook County and obtained work in Bridgewater. He testified that he worked for Hiram Kimball for three weeks and for Charles Webber for two weeks during planting season and later for De Long Brothers peeling pulp. He stayed there he said, until June 18.

Then in company with a man named Al Hall, also employed by Charles Webber, he left for an automobile trip to Florida. He admitted that the trip took him through Rockport but that he did not stop at all. The pair continued to Boston, New York and finally ended up at Atlantic City, he said, where he remained about two or three weeks. From there he went back to Bridgewater again, he said, and arrived there about July 15.

He denied knowledge of the Wellman murder saying that he did not even know Mrs. Wellman was dead until Monday of this week when he saw the poster offering a reward for his arrest, displayed in the Bridgewater postoffice. He admitted he knew she was missing because he had read it in the newspapers.

The Houlton correspondence in a morning newspaper evidently has the wires crossed for it states that the murder was committed July 6 (evidently confused with the date on which the body was found) and also quotes Boulier as furnishing an alibi for that period, which was manifestly a long time after the crime was committed. Nobody cares where Boulier was after June 18; what the authorities want to know is where he was the week of April 22 when Mrs. Wellman evidently met her doom.

Arthur Train, New York attorney and author, is summing at Mt. Desert, he and his family being ardent Maine boosters. In fact, Mr. Train is a legal voter in Maine. During his stay between early June and November much of his writing is done, and from Maine people and scenery he draws much of the color and character of his novels. He writes in an atmosphere of sunshine. Long windows pour their light out upon a vista of pine and spruce woods, the whole workshop being apart and isolated from intrusion. At the present time he is in the process of going Graustark as he is in the throes of a Balkan romance, not personally, of course, but surely mentally.

WHEREBY THE OLD FOLKS HAVE AN INNING

Bok Amphitheatre At Camden Proves Wonderful Gathering Place For the Three-Quarter Century Club—Gov. Gardiner, Congressman Beedy and Mellie Dunham Among Those Present—Result of the Contests.

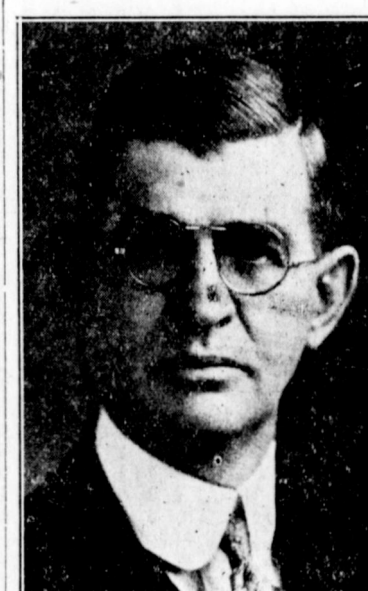

"Grow old along with me,"—Browning

Maine's famous Three-Quarter Century Club held its seventh annual convention in Camden Tuesday, with an attendance conservatively estimated at 4000—far and away the largest gathering ever known in this section of the State. After feasting their eyes upon the grandeur of Camden's scenery, and enjoying its proverbial hospitality there wasn't one of the aged visitors who would not be willing to live to a hundred providing he could spend the balance of his days in that town.

It so happened that there were no centenarians present at this convention although an elusive rumor was in circulation that the crowd contained one woman of that age. She was not officially registered however, and the report was probably incorrect as the age of each visitor was ascertained before the badges were issued. The oldest man present was our own Knox County patriarch, Elijah Harriman of Cushing, whose 99th birthday was recently noted in these columns. The runner-up was Albion Allen, 97, of Hope, who was erroneously credited in the daily papers as being the oldest person present.

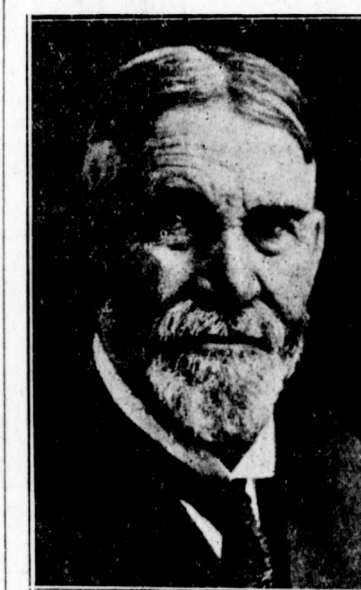

Col. E. A. Robbins, President of the Board of Trade, who Brought the Big Convention to Camden

Town Manager Herbert A. Thomas of Camden Who Had Charge of Handling the Abnormal Traffic

Following a stormy Monday the day of the convention was as nearly ideal as one finds at this season of the year—plenty of blue sky, a few furred clouds and a sun never fully obscured. As a matter of fact "the old haymaker," was working overtime, and coats and vests were laid aside by hundreds of the perspiring visitors.

Early on the scene was Mrs. Alice McGouldrick, secretary of the Maine Public Health Association, who confesses to a special regard for the old folks and who was untiring in her efforts to make the Camden convention one of the best yet. She brought copies of the prize essays—"Attractions of Maine," written by Mrs. Ella F. Knowles, 83, of Corinna; and "The Water Cure," written by Mrs. Mary E. Mallett, 83, of Lee. Not eligible as a prize winner, because it was done in poetry instead of prose, was the "Tribute To Mt. Battie," written by Iola Ardella Thomas, 76, of Camden. It is The Courier-Gazette's purpose to publish all three as soon as space permits.

Mrs. McGouldrick was accompanied by a corps of diligent workers, and she had no sooner reached Camden than she found splendid co-ordination on the part of the local committees and the citizens at large—everybody kind and deferential to these visitors of advanced years.

Heading the "young" people were Elijah Harriman of Cushing 99, already mentioned; and Mrs. Georgia Sampson, 97 of Egleys. Albion Allen of Hope and Cyrus W. Murphy of West Kennebunk followed as the next oldest, each boasting 97 years. In the list were also noted R. W. Whitney of Ellsworth, 95; David W. Maxwell of Bangor, 96; Maria A. Cochran of East Corinth, 96; Sewall S. Quimby of Calais, 91; Mrs. Mary Green of Skowhegan, 91; S. Crawford of Rockland, 91; Mrs. Sarah Clement of Seal Harbor, 90; A. W. Curtis of Ellsworth, 92; Elizabeth Wentworth of South Brewer, 90; between 85 and 90 years, the twin sisters, Hattie McKen and Sarah Libby of Lincoln, Beriah L. Woodward of Augusta, Mrs. M. D. Smith of Camden, Orland Barrows movies or stills. This time the movie outfits were on hand. Pathe Sound News had the well known Dick Sears as cameraman, Frank Zampino as soundman, and John Davin, microphones. The Fox Movietone News was represented by L. E. Ellis as cameraman, and A. E. Jones as sound engineer. A. S. Mofat was cameraman for Universal Talking Newsreel.

The forenoon session was called to order by Wilder W. Perry of Camden, the retiring president of the Association, who deserves a deal of credit for the ability with which he handled the business proceedings; at the same time looking after many of the local details.

The audience sang "America" under the direction of John Taylor, the energetic secretary of the Camden Y.M.C.A., who did the greater portion of the day's broadcasting by means of the amplifying system, which was operated with such complete satisfaction throughout the convention. There are several institutions which Camden could ill afford to lose and Secretary Taylor is one of them. Whenever there is a public affair in Camden he is "Johnny on the spot," literally and figuratively.

The invocation was offered by Rev. Ralph H. Hayden, rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church in Camden.

The Camden Boys' Band was presented for the convention's approval, and a broad smile was everywhere in evidence when the youthful musicians struck up: "We Won't Go Home Until Morning." Judging from the contented look on the visitors' faces that was about the way they felt. The music shifted to "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," and a glance at the crowded amphitheatre and the hundreds reveling in the cool shade of the Public Library lawn, seemed to bear out the truth of the words.

The Town's Welcome

The town's welcome was extended by its first selectman Zeina M. Dwinia, former senator from Knox County, whose sentiments appealed strongly to the visitors. He said:

Coming from all the towns and cities of the state and having lived and played important parts in the history of those towns and cities since the days of the Civil War, I represent, as no other group could represent, the life of Maine during that period.

It is frequently said and written that Maine has not progressed during the past seventy years as rapidly as some other parts of the country or as the country taken as a whole; and that is true. The greater part of the population, industry and commerce, but you who have known Maine throughout those years know that in ways which are more appropriate to Maine we have enjoyed our full share of progress.

Not all the states in the Union can or should be great industrial or commercial states. Some should emphasize the quieter and pleasanter side of life. In this Maine is distinctive. Life is easier here. It is lived amid pleasant surroundings, under conditions and circumstances which make, as we believe, for a more complete enjoyment. In these respects Maine has developed, and to the people of your generation is due the greater part of the credit. Where she was beautiful seventy years ago, she is more beautiful today, made so by the hands of her people and by those of her friends; where the spirit of friendliness prevailed then, it is more pronounced today; education, culture, government, civic pride and the arts of living, all these have contributed to make Maine a better place in which to live than it was when you first joined the ranks of her citizens.

It is no longer appropriate to refer to the age of three score and ten as the age of retirement. So much of the world's work is being directed today by men and women of your age that it is useless to attempt to enumerate the long list of great leaders who are eligible for membership in a three-quarters century club. Many of the most prominent citizens of our own State are members of your organization, and count it a distinction. Yours is a club of distinction: the first of its kind to be organized and it is being copied in other States as a new interest in life worth adopting. There is a class of worthy citizens in Maine, not represented here today, who are now, or soon will be, eligible to membership in your club; good people who have lived long lives of usefulness, but who now, less fortunate than you, are unable to maintain themselves, look forward with dread and humiliation to the time when they may become charges upon the towns in which they live.

With this class in mind a survey of the State was made a few years ago and it was found that the security of these people would impose but a comparatively small financial burden upon the people and property of the State. Opinions differ upon the wisdom of this.

WHO LOOK FOR DAY BEFORE HIS MISTRESS WAKES

The lark now leaves his watery nest, And, climbing, shakes his dewy wings; He takes this window for the east, And to improve your light he sings: Awake, awake! the morn will never rise Till she can dress her beauty at your eyes.

The merchant bows unto the seaman's star, The ploughman from the sun his season takes; But still the lover wonders what they are, Who look for day before his mistress wakes.

Awake, awake! break through your veil of lawn, Then draw your curtains and begin the dawn. —Sir William D'Avenant.

ADVERTISING MAINE

Quoting from the New York Herald Tribune editorial on the Knox mansion—"A stately mansion whose reproduction has been carried out in detail, making it one of the historic places of America"—Arthur G. Staples in his Lewiston Journal adds: "What a lot has been done for Maine, since the day when first the Maine Publicity Bureau started about nine years ago. In 1871 we demolished old mansions; in 1931, sixty years later we spend a quarter of a million or more in reproducing what we destroyed previously. All this is not a coincidence or an accident or a mere happening. It is the sign of a growth of concern for the beauty, the history, the hero-worship and the love of beauty in Maine."

And to this we will add, that the publicity which the promoters in advance sought to obtain for Montpelier is not likely hereafter to be denied it. The revelation of the marvelous taste and beauty of the place as an historical shrine gives to it an immediate reputation as a chief asset to Maine and New England. Already it is being visited by throngs of sight-seers, among them many of taste, experience and discrimination, who do not hesitate to declare the mansion at Thomaston as equalling in beauty and atmosphere any of the famous show-places of the country, and in most cases surpassing them.

AGAIN MAINE LED

The world conference of the Young Men's Christian Association, in session at Cleveland the present week, renews attention to one of the greatest of organizations for good that the world has ever known, whose activities among forty nations encompass the globe and which has never done better work than it is now achieving among the young men and the youth of the present day. It is interesting to note the emphasis which the organization lays upon the value of work among boys—catching 'em young. Here we may indulge justifiable pride in the fact that it was in Maine, at the hands of that prince of leaders, Jeff Smith, that the young boy, in the individual and the mass, first came to be made the object of this particular form of activity which has so greatly enhanced the value and the success of the Y.M.C.A.

PLEASED WITH MONTEPIER

The names of many noted people are appearing upon the visitors' record book at the Knox Mansion. Among them this week is that of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, lately returned from Paris, and whose wide acquaintance with places of public exhibit give weight to her opinions. Therefore the friends of Montpelier were the more gratified by Mrs. Wilson's declaration, that she discovered in the Thomaston memorial one of the most artistic and beautiful shrines she had ever visited.

STILL IMPROVING

The announcement by Commissioner of Labor Beals that he finds improvement in the labor situation in Maine is heartening. There are gains, he declares, in the granite centers, the cotton mills, etc., and while no great advances are recorded, the trend is on the whole encouraging. This added to an excellent summer tourist business furnishes ground for congratulation.

AT THE RIGHT END

Police Commissioner Mulrooney of New York appears to have got hold of the right end of it when he tells his officers to shoot the gangsters first and ask questions later. This is his answer to the gangster rule of shooting children who happen to be in the way. Sounds efficacious.

Thomaston 7, Rockland 4

The Rockland team Tuesday night did not look at all like the aggregation which might be expected to wrest the championship and the Bok purse from St. George. After having a one-run lead for four innings and being tied with Thomaston for six innings, the boys took off in the ill-starred monoplanes Error, and made a three-point landing on the wrong side of the fence. The team was completely demoralized in the seventh inning, at the conclusion of which Captain Wotton reorganized his forces, with considerably improved results. But by that time the horse had been stolen.

Wendell Thornton pitched very effectively up to that time, and then with the bases full made a wild heave into center field, which knocked the props from beneath Rockland's house of cards. Condor held the home team to nine hits, and kept them well scattered. The only men on either team to hit for extra bases were Fowler and Oney. Burns and Grafton were tied in number of hits.

Thomaston 10, Camden 6

The jinx has been playing mischief with some of the boys in the Twilight League this week. Tuesday night the Texaco were the victims; last night it was Camden which suffered from the imp's mood. Thomaston's first seven runs were due almost wholly to errors, but the last three were earned on doubles by Benner and Feehan and a single by Condor.

It is not to be wondered at that "Foggy" Bennett faltered.

The pitching situation as applied to Thomaston was indeed a curious one. Upham had the Camdenites eating out of his hand for five innings, and when his control seemed to have weakened a bit he was replaced by Feehan, and the crowd was treated to a great surprise when the dazed lads from Megunticook awoke from their lethargy and pounded him for five hits.

Benner had a poor night afield, but more than made up for it with his lusty stickwork. The fielding of L. Sawyer, Mayhew and Daily were features.

Crescent Beach Innkeeper Appeals From Jail Sentence and Fine

There were lively times on the Owl's Head road Tuesday night before the sheriffs and State Police took into custody Charles S. Grotton, proprietor of the Crescent Beach Inn and Orange and Black Cafe.

The officers for a long time had suspected Grotton of handling contraband drinkables, and on this occasion they divided their forces and lay in wait for him on the two highway leading from Owl's Head to Rockland.

When Grotton's car was finally spotted the officers gave chase and say that two cans of alcohol were hurled from it, one landing in front of State Patrolman Shaw and giving him a rather uncomfortable experience.

Grotton was taken in custody, and in Municipal Court yesterday was sentenced by Judge Butler to serve three months in jail and to pay a fine of $300 and costs, with six months additional if fine is not paid. He appealed, bail being furnished by John L. Thomas and Charles E. Grotton. The automobile was libelled.

The respondent listened to a brief but comprehensive lecture from the Court. "When you took over the

WEATHER
A strange salmon colored sky over the bay to the eastward this morning, topped by black clouds, foreboded showers which are beginning as this paper goes to press, but which seem too slight to relieve the parched condition of the local gardens. The weather-vane veers from southeast to southwest, forecast generally fair, with showers. The past two days have been delightful if you like 'em warm. Noon temperature yesterday was 85, southerly winds.

Monday afternoon Edgar O. Babb was near Railroad wharf when frightened screams drew his attention to the harbor where he saw a child adrift on a raft some 200 feet off shore. No boats were near so he swam to the rescue, reaching the raft just as the child, Ruth Harrington, 13, collapsed and slipped into the water. She will suffer no lasting effects. Another child and a dog, her companion, reached the shore unaided when the raft first went adrift.

ALDEN GILCHREST

Alden Gilchrest, a native of St. George and formerly employed by the American Express office in this city, died July 31 in Springfield, Mass. The following obituary mention is from the Springfield Republican of Aug. 1: Alden Gilchrest, 60, for many years associated with the wholesale grocery house of the Haskell, Adams Company of Boston and later with the Rival Foods, Inc., died last night at his home, 117 Westminster street, after an illness of about two weeks. Mr. Gilchrest was for a number of years manager of the local branch of the Haskell, Adams Company and later, when that concern merged with Silas Pierce & Co., Ltd., of Boston, and the Bay State Seigle Company to form Rival Foods, Inc., he was continued as manager of the Rival branch here. When the Rival branch was closed in this city about two years ago, Mr. Gilchrest went to Cambridge where he located the home office of the company, and worked the Boston territory from that office.

Mr. Gilchrest was born in St. George June 2, 1871, the son of Capt. Alden and Margaret Elizabeth (Fuller) Gilchrest. He received his early education in the public schools of his native town, at Jefferson, Waldoboro and Bucksport, and then continued his studies at the Maine Conference Seminary. Later he took a course at Rockland Commercial school where he completed his training at the age of 19.

His first business connection was with the American Express Company at Rockland, where he stayed for a year, resigning at the end of that time to associate himself with his brother, George A., who was engaged in ship building at Rockland. A year later he entered the employ of Thorndike & Hix where he stayed for three years. It was in 1895 that he began his long association with the Haskell, Adams Company of Boston, representing the firm in Maine for a year. In 1896 he was transferred to this city, and from that time until 1916 he traveled out of Springfield, covering a wide territory. In 1916 he was made a member of the board of directors and manager of the Springfield branch. He retained, however, his membership in the United Commercial Travelers' Association. Mr. Gilchrest married Aug. 31, 1896, Miss Lillian M. Ludwig of Waldoboro, a daughter of Benjamin and Sarah Elizabeth (McCob) Ludwig. He leaves his widow, one son, Neil L. Gilchrest of this city; one daughter, Margaret Elizabeth, wife of Arthur W. Stevens of Scituate; and one sister Mrs. Eben Alden of Thomaston.

Mystery of Deserted House Solved

By A. W. PEACH

BEFORE him stood the House of Mystery. It had been a long walk from the village, but Morgan, after listening to the story of the place as told by a wide-eyed native, had made up his mind to visit it.

And here it was.

Morgan went on, taking no stock in the superstition that kept the mountain villagers away from the place. The view down the valley was superb; but he thought of other things told him by his informant.

Here the strangers had come, asking questions of no one, building the pleasant house which now stared like a dead thing down the valley. The man, so Morgan was told, was named Albrech; his wife, young and handsome, with a grave, dark beauty, was known as Erna.

They gave out the brief information that they had come there because of Mr. Albrech's health. They had lived in peace, coming to the village for a brief visit and returning to the distant house, until the fatal night.

Morgan shook himself from his reverie and turned to the house. The door yielded to his touch, and looking in, he remembered something else. The house and everything in it had been left as it was that night.

No one knew what had taken place. When the constable from the village came, he found the wife there, in a stained nightgown, and in the room beyond Albrech, a raving maniac, with blood upon his hands, and near him a knife of foreign make.

It had been easy to charge him with the murder; and so the case had been settled.

Morgan turned into the room. Most of the summer was still there, dusty, sagging. He went on into the living room and found him facing a pipe organ built into the wall.

Morgan left the room and started to go upstairs, but the dark, forbidding landing above, the musty odor from the cellar, these, with the thoughts the place had aroused, drove him out to the fresh air.

"Enough for me!" was his conclusion, and he worked his way through the weeds to what had evidently been a summer house, thinking to rest there before going back to the village.

As he stepped into the summer house, his eye caught between the floor boards upheaved by the frost and change of years, a glint of paper. Bending over he pulled out a folded note, stained and faded. He opened it.

"Somebody was reading that here and shoved it down between the cracks," he murmured to himself. The first page was folded completely. Inside, the dim lines read clearly enough to make sense. As he read his heart slowed its beat.

He was reading a note addressed to some one who was threatened with death unless she renounced the love she held for another. It was a brutal letter, written by a man seemingly beside himself; and at the end was the name Hilmar.

Morgan read the note again and his mind became calm. Erna had come here with the man she loved, to be followed by a man who loved her enough to slay her if he could not have her.

A noise stifled Morgan. He looked up to see a man coming in the yard and greeting him with a smiling, "Hello! I didn't expect to see anyone here at the end of the earth. I am thinking of buying this place—like to fish and hunt here. Hope you are not on the same errand?"

The eyes were keen and cold but kind, and the stranger's smile was winning. Soon Morgan found himself in pleasant conversation with him.

"Well, I certainly don't want the house, but I intend to buy the place and raze the house from top to bottom. I guess that will wipe out the story for good," he said quietly.

Morgan started to tell him of his and in the summer house, but decided to avoid spoiling the man's pleasure in the site he was buying.

The conversation drifted about until the stranger rose and said he would ride back to the village as he had a saddlehorse tethered in the grove. As they parted he handed Morgan a card, and at the same time invited him to come up next autumn for a hunting trip.

Morgan slipped the card into his pocket; then carelessly drew it out and read with a sense of shock that made him reel—"John Hilmar."

Morgan stared in the direction the man had gone, then at the card. "He came here to clean up everything to make sure nothing would ever appear against him; but here it is—hidden in a moment of fear by that poor girl. There sure is a watcher in the woods. Now I must get everlastingly busy!"

Six months later the long arm of justice had claimed its own. Morgan watched the case develop. Patiently the net had been woven about the cool murderer. He had fled the country after the murder, made money, returned after safety seemed assured, planned to buy the property to make sure no evidence would ever appear against him, had done all a man could do to wash the stains from his past only to have a faded note speak voicelessly from the ruins of the grail he loved hunt—a girl faithful to one she loved even in extremity, and dying because of that love.

THE LOITERER

Clara S. Overlook

This day opens clear, with light air to the westward, so we got the "Nubia" underway and about 8:45 a.m. we took our departure from Boston for a cruise to Marblehead. Sighted two large ocean liners bound in, but sea-serpents were conspicuous by their absence in our line of vision. Arriving at our port of destination in due time we were delighted to find the three masted Atlantic and the single sticker Vanitie both at anchor there. The Vanitie got sail on that 195-foot mast and went out for a spin.

As she passed the Atlantic you noticed that her mast was only a few feet taller than the mizzenmast of the former. The Atlantic's main and fore-masts are shorter than her mizzenmast. It was a source of wonder to watch her roll when apparently the water was as smooth as a house floor. I imagine it was the tide; couldn't account for it any other way. The Vanitie stood to the eastward after getting out of the harbor and seemed to be having a fairly good breeze. She was carrying mainsail and jib.

At eight bells we had dinner, and when we came on deck again we saw that the "Vanitie" had changed her course for a long leg to the westward. She drifted back into Marblehead again about 6:30 p. m. and came to anchor. The Atlantic with 30 men in her crew, the Vanitie with quite a crew, a motor tender which follows the Vanitie around, are owned by one man and it was to be seen in its company.

All summer the robins have hopped over our lawn, picking worms and enjoying themselves unmolested, but last Saturday I bought a crow to ornament the lawn, and since then not one robin has been there, though they call and sing from the trees overhead. It reminds me of a very old rhyme:

Men by their friends we know;
You never will see on the selfsame tree
A ring dove and a crow.

Perhaps the robin feels that my crow, if only an imitation, is too black to be seen in its company.

I came past Willow Brook Farm on a recent Sunday, and truly the flower gardens were wonderful, a riot of color. Had I been alone I should have called on the owner and talked posies.

Hay is over, the white daisies and black-eyed susans gone by, with fire weed and goldenrod coming along, a study of yellow and magenta—oh, yes, and blue fringed gentian, not in bloom, but pushing its stalks and leaves up in the mowed fields, ready to greet the morning sun a little later in the season.

What have some of you other members of N. C. C. seen these sunny days? Write and tell us.

THE CODE ACT

Interest In This Measure Said To Be Increasing—Vote In November

There are evidences of increasing public interest in the Administrative Code act which will be voted on by the people in November. That is, although so far the talk is in the way of speculation as to whether or not the act which was passed by the Legislature by an overwhelming vote will be passed by the people when they come to pass on it. But speculation of that sort quite naturally predicates interest in the fate of measure and also perhaps an inclination on the part of the average citizen to know more about it and what its probable effects will be.

Of course office holders and those who have to do with politics have always been interested in this law, but I find that citizens outside these classes are beginning to talk more about it than they did, which is encouraging, because whether right or wrong it is a matter of vital concern to the State.

Whether this interest shall increase so as to bring out a vote that will be representative of the electorate will be dependent in a great measure on whether an active campaign is made either for or against it.

Soon after the filing of the petitions for the referendum the Governor issued a little booklet giving the text of the act, something of its history and in a simple manner describing what the proposed changes would be. So far as this writer knows, this is all that has been done, either for or against it.

Only a limited number of these pamphlets were issued and few of them fell into the hands of the electorate at large. Even had there been more of them, it is doubtful whether they would have been studied very deeply, for it is history that unspurred by those interested the average citizen is apt to take a great deal more interest in lawmakers than in laws.

If no more were done by either side than already has been done a light vote would be certain and it would be a pretty good guess that the measure would be defeated, for when voters are indifferent they are pretty likely to vote "No," if they vote at all.

So as we say, not only the size of the vote but the verdict returned will depend in great measure on the kind of a campaign that is made for and against and the magnitude of the same.

It is true, I think, that when it appeared that a referendum had been invoked, it was the disposition of Gov. Gardner to get out his booklet and let the matter rest there on the ground that he had done his best for the plan and that it was for the voters to take it or leave it. A great many were of the opinion that this was the wise course for him to pursue or at any rate that such a course could not be criticized.

Others have taken just the opposite position, holding that having put his hand to the plow, the Governor can not consistently turn back.

"I don't see how the Governor can quit now," said one man very high in the councils of the party. "This was his measure, he fought it through the Legislature and if he drops it now it is certain to be defeated and all his work will go for nothing."

"I don't know whether the Governor has any thought of going further in politics, but if he has it would certainly not be good politics to let this measure go by default. If due to his leadership the people vote for the act it will leave him in a fine position politically while if he tries and fails he will certainly be no worse off than he is."

There are the two sides and while I have no specific information from the Governor as to just what he does propose to do, my information is that he will continue to carry on and will organize to have the matter presented to the people in the best possible light.

While general opinion is that if nothing more is done the act will be defeated, there is quite common agreement that if a good lively campaign for it, it will stand an even chance and probably better than that.

There is then the question of what the other side will do. As to what their plans are if any, I have had no inkling. It is known of course that in going after the referendum two elements were concerned. They were those who were opposed to the measure on its merits as a matter of public policy and those who were out to defeat it from political motives. It was the latter element which started the referendum, organized for it and provided the money to hire canvassers. The canvass took money and in the closing stages of the movement, there was evidence that there was no lack of it.

Of the former element there are some, I know, who will do nothing further against the act any more than to vote against it. One man very active for referendum and who was opposed to the bill on principle, told me that after the referendum had been secured, he would be through. There are others, I understand, who feel the same way about it.

Whether the political element will be disposed to quit after having secured the referendum is something else again. A guess would be that they would hardly be likely to do so that we will have to wait for developments.

A common remark made about the act is that it is not easy to understand in all its details. To an extent, this is true, but after all there are really but two outstanding questions which are involved.

The supporters of the measure claim for it that it will result in a saving of state expenditures. The chief argument of those opposed is that it places too great power in the hands of the Governor, which would enable any executive so disposed to build up a political machine that would be undependable.

"To carry this measure through," said one man to the writer "all that the Governor and those in favor of it will have to do is to show the voters that the act will be an actual money saver. Do that, and the victory will be won. On the other hand (this man continued) if the folks are convinced that the result of this bill will be to build up an autocracy of dictatorship then it will be past saving."

HIGH SPEED TAX ON ENDURANCE

Racing Pilots Severely Affected by Strain of High Velocities.

New York.—Capt. Malcolm Campbell racing over Dayton's sands at 245 miles per hour, the Schneider Cup race winner flying a supermarine at 328.63 m. p. h., and another British pilot annihilating space at the rate of 357.80 m. p. h., confound the people who 15 years ago predicted the best of men would exceed 60 miles an hour.

But the thing is done, more to the amazement of scientists than of grandstandees. Before the war, 200 m. p. h. was the arbitrary figure accepted as the maximum limit of human motion. Above that velocity, eminent authorities argued, biological processes would cease. But so far, there is no record of a life lost from the effects of speed alone.

When one considers that the airplane record before the World war was set only at 45.75 m. p. h. and that in the last 10 years it soared 800 per cent, the hazards of 500 and 1,000 m. p. h. seem minimized. Now that rocket ships are projected and an interplanetary society takes itself seriously, it is relevant to ask question about human biology.

Centrifugal Force Affects Brain. The birds do it naturally, man does mechanically. He is not fitted for flying, but if he were not adapted, he could not fly at all. Because he has not learned to speed as he has learned to walk, the strain of high velocities taxes the body severely. Some of the effects are visible, others invisible.

Speed pilots gradually grow accustomed to the effects of high velocity, provided they work up to the maximum gradually. On a straight line of flight, the hazards are much lower than if one turns.

The heart beats is accelerated and often blood rushes to the nose. The early racing pilots made wide turns around pylons, but in the competition for speed the modern pilot banks his ship almost at 90 degrees to make a 180 degree turn.

The visible effects of this ordeal are shown by black and blue marks over his body.

Even in a padded cockpit one is pounded and pummeled. On rapid turns, the pilot may experience a complete "blackout" and lapse into unconsciousness for an instant.

Centrifugal force takes blood from the eye, but sight returns as soon as the turn is completed. A sinking sensation affects the pit of the stomach, accompanied by dizziness. Blood rushes from the head to the center of the body, or to the legs.

May Approach Death Point. The fitness of racing pilots forecasts many fatal ailments. The last Schneider Trophy winner, Flycatcher, died of a heart ailment, and his only unpleasantness came from the heat fumes and oil splashes. It often to avoid noxious effects, Italian pilots tried the climbing turn. But by so doing they lost speed. The maximum speed at which a sharp turn can be taken still is a moot question, but the best flight surgeons hesitate to guarantee anything beyond 300 miles. Safe speed on a straightway may possibly be as high as 500 miles per hour, but only experience will prove it.

On a steep bank the flyer's body is physically at right angles to his former position. Centrifugal force is away from his head and toward his feet; he is held fast by straps, but the force does act on his body. Blood rushes to the lower extremities, especially to the capillary vessels. Anemia of the brain, haziness and unconsciousness result. But recovery is usually prompt because the circulation adjusts itself. It is not rash to state that racing pilots are approaching a speed when a sharp turn will press the brain stem to the point of death. Furthermore, the violent concussion would rupture blood vessels in the brain, as well as other parts of the body.

Tingling of the scalp, ballooning of the cheeks and rattling of the teeth are accentuated at high speeds. A pilot's arm would at least be broken if he were to hold it out at a speed of 250 miles per hour, and if he dared to lift his head above the cowl it would be knocked over and his neck probably broken.

Steer on Targets. Despite these warnings, racing pilots acquit themselves of feats verging on the superhuman. At 300 miles per hour, a plane travels 440 feet per second. Even though nerves and eyesight are perfect the pilot travels ten yards during the time it takes his eyes to see a target and his muscles, R. L. Archerly of the royal air force actually looped the loop at 300 miles per hour, and topped off the performance with a perfect barrel roll.

But all are agreed that, so far as the airplane is concerned, maximum speeds are near. At 500 miles per hour, the pilot and designer will have to contend with the heat of air friction, and the engine metals would become red hot. The pilot would have to be encased in a side an insulated cockpit.

It is doubtful whether brain, nerves and muscles could coordinate on speeds above 400 m. p. h. An automatic piloting device may have to be included in the equipment. Certainly, the eye could not judge a curve if the body is moving 400 m. p. h. Modern auto and airplane pilots are already steering on targets seen through a line of sights.

The limitations of the human frame are not all that must be overcome. There is a maximum pace for internal combustion engines, and at present it is placed around 600 m. p. h., which still allows for new records.

We must go to Jules Verne when speculating about rocket travel. He gave his interplanetary carriage an initial velocity of 24,000 m. p. h. If you want to know how the passengers fared, there is no greater authority than Verne himself.

Hunting and Fishing

Now Big U. S. Industry

Washington.—Hunting and fishing in the United States are not mere pastimes; together they constitute a billion-dollar industry. This is according to the estimate of the senate's special committee on conservation of wild resources, which has been conducting a nationwide survey under the chairmanship of Senator Frederick C. Walcott.

The investment in federal and state lands and equipment devoted to wild animals, birds, and fish, the report states, amounts to about half a billion dollars. Game lands and fish waters in private hands, it is estimated, amounts to another half billion, so that these outdoor recreations can hold up their heads, financially, with such "big time" indoor recreations as radio, the movies, and midget golf.

Based on records of hunting and fishing licenses issued, the committee estimated the number of hunters and fishermen benefiting by these investments at thirteen millions. Hunters and fishermen form only a fraction of the whole group who enjoy the wide display of national and state parks, forests, and game sanctuaries.

Senator Walcott and his committee feel that the federal government has not been doing its share toward the solution of wild life problems, and that increased appropriations and larger personnel, both for carrying on work which lies strictly within the province of the federal government and for co-operation with the various states in meeting state problems.

AT CHRISTMAS COVE

Forty-Eight Happy Children From Rockland and Vicinity Are There

Forty-eight undersprivileged children assembled from Rockland and vicinity, were taken Tuesday to Christmas Cove for a fortnight's outing. The needed clothing was supplied by the Salvation Army, being donated partially by local merchants.

The children were examined by Dr. Popplestone, and three who failed to pass are now receiving treatment with the expectation that they also may go in two weeks' time. The Chamber of Commerce and local service clubs arranged the transportation.

During the two weeks the children are the personal guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Miles, whose hobby it is to entertain on their private estate, five hundred or more, poor and undernourished boys and girls of the State of Maine.

This camp is situated on the coast of Maine, bounded by St. John's Bay and Little Harbor; one of the most delightful spots in the entire State. Here are found up-to-date facilities with every convenience and comfort, superior in every respect to other camps whose fee for the summer ranges up to three hundred dollars. A competent staff of Salvationists is engaged to study and take care of their welfare, which includes especially their physical protection and happiness in general.

They are not expected, or asked to do any work, but invariably many of the older and larger boys and girls do offer their services to do odd jobs in order to keep themselves occupied, such as sweeping the dormitories, assisting with the making of beds, carrying wood to the kitchen, etc.

The children are not compelled to go into the pool, neither are they permitted to go in without permission, and then never alone. The "buddy" system is enforced, which means each boy must select a "buddy" before entering the pool, remaining together. When one has had enough the other must come out also. In cases where there exists nervousness every effort is put forth to assist the child to overcome the fear of the water. Children who cannot swim are invited to avail themselves of the opportunity of being taught by the swimming instructor at regular periods.

During the general swimming period the counselors are stationed on all four sides of the pool ready to render any assistance that may be required in the event of any child needing such assistance while in the water, thus assuring absolute safety precautions. Children who cannot swim are not permitted to go beyond the waistline.

Various games are played and hikes are conducted through the splendid pine forests, the odor of which, together with the sea breezes, is very beneficial to the health. Singing of songs and choruses is an outstanding feature of the program. Concerts are conducted each week, which are enjoyed very much by Mr. and Mrs. Miles and their friends. At the close of these concerts candy is distributed to the children.

Follows the list of children sent from Rockland and vicinity:

WHEREBY THE OLD FOLKS HAVE INNING

dom of such a measure, but it seems to me that Maine may well consider whether she has not a duty there which is a proper function of good government.

Col. E. A. Robbins, president of the Camden Board of Trade, which was instrumental in bringing the big convention to that town spoke briefly but there was no mistaking the cordial tenor of his message.

"As president of the Camden Board of Trade," he said, "it is an honor and a personal pleasure to welcome you all today upon the occasion of your annual meeting. We hope that this day's gathering will be the most enjoyable in the history of your unique organization, and that you will return to your homes as happy for your day spent in Camden as we will be for having had the pleasure of entertaining you. It gives us great pleasure to share with you the beauties of our home town and I wish in closing to emphasize the fact that Camden's late string is on the outside of the door today and always, and we all extend to you a most hearty, open-handed welcome."

Cyrus H. K. Curtis, who was asked to add his words of welcome in behalf of the summer colony, was introduced by President Perry as "the father of the noble woman who has brought this beautiful place [the amphitheater] to your view."

The applause which followed this remark showed the crowd's gratitude and approval.

"President Coolidge once asked me how old I was," said Mr. Curtis. "I told him I was born in 1880 but that had nothing to do with my age. Wherever I go throughout the country I find many old people, whose age is all due to the fact that they got their start in Maine. Methuselah must have lived in Maine, for when he was 760 somebody told him he didn't look a day older than 730."

"In the 30 years I have been coming back to Camden I have regained my youth. I am glad I started in Maine and I hope to finish my days here."

And something reminded Mr. Curtis of the woman who told Chaucer M. Dewey on his 90th birthday that her husband was the same age. "I would like to have him talk with you; you see he is feeble-minded."

And Mr. Curtis was reminded, too, of the fervent prayer offered by the old negro preacher, who said: "Use me, oh Lord, in any way you can, if only in an advisory capacity."

A gray-haired man of 90, who received a most cordial greeting when he arrived at the speakers' stand, answered the addresses of welcome—Rev. Samuel F. Emerson of Skowhegan, destined in a few hours to be the convention's choice as its next president. Mr. Emerson said:

Samuel F. Emerson's Response

In responding to this welcome address which so fully represents the heart-throbs of the goodly citizenship of Camden, I realize that I am speaking in behalf of an honored class of splendid men and women of our own State, who in former years carried forward to a full success the manifold activities that oftentimes rested heavily upon them, and are here today enjoying the fruits of their past labors and receiving the tribute of admiration and respect so richly bestowed upon them. Heaven has bountifully lengthened their lives that they might on this special occasion mingle with the multitudes and celebrate the sixth anniversary of the Three-Quarter Century Club of the State of Maine.

It means a great deal to the citizens of the State. It means that the climate, the pure water springs, the sparkling lakes, rivers and streams, the majestic forests, the undulating hills and valleys and the breathing of the pure air assures health and vigor and long life, not surpassed, even if equaled by any other State in the Union.

I look in the faces of this younger generation of the sons and daughters of Maine and wonder if you realize in full the rich heritage that comes to you, as the mothers and fathers pass from the activities of earlier years and leave in your possession the valued resources, the manifold privileges and conveniences, that, by their labors and sacrifices, are preserved for you and your future welfare.

Come forward then sons and daughters, grandsons and granddaughters, and take upon yourselves the mighty responsibilities that lie directly in your pathway, and may Heaven help you, not only to preserve, but to still further advance the prosperity, the happiness, the Christian influences of our own beloved State.

Half a century ago we were engaged in the center of life's activities. We did not look forward, nor anticipate a day like this. Our minds could not grasp the future and realize what that future would reveal to us. But happy thoughts came to gifted minds. Organization was perfected, resulting thus far in six wonderful gatherings in different sections of the State, every one crowned with a warm-hearted welcome, the same as we have received today, followed with greetings and varied exercises, the trend of which turned back the tide of time, and makes these honored citizens feel young again, proud of the fact that they are residents of the Pine Tree State.

Dr. E. D. Merrill, president of the Maine Public Health Association, and Speaker of the Maine House of Representatives, also called the father of the Three-Quarter Century Club, told briefly how that organization had begun its existence seven years ago with 15,000 members, and how its roster has steadily grown. "The mere arriving at the age of 75 is no distinction in itself," said Dr. Merrill. "It depends upon what you have done, what you are doing and what you hope to do. The life counts. Birth control would be more enthusiastically received if it could be made retroactive."

Dr. Merrill gave a brief but interesting summary of the important work which the Maine Public Health Association is doing.

President Perry was down on the program for an address, but realizing that there were many speakers he refrained, contenting himself with a few humorous remarks.

J. H. Montague's song, "Camden, By-The-Sea," which has now had such a wide circulation, thanks to the Camden-Rockport Lions Club and other means, was sung by Mr. Taylor, with Albert Reeves at the piano.

The crowd arose as one person to greet Hon. Wm. Tudor Gardiner, Maine's governor, and it listened with earnest approval to his words.

Gov. Gardiner's Address

Maine citizens, near and far, on this day respond to a feeling of genuine pride and joy. To have recorded in the annals of any State an event such as this is indeed a high honor to the State, and as Governor of Maine, it affords me pleasure and happiness to greet you on this occasion.

To me this is something more than an official duty, the carrying out of a custom or the bringing of an executive message. It has been my privilege to meet and come to know many of you personally. And when a man of a younger generation is granted opportunity to become acquainted and form intimate friendships with men and women of an older generation, exchange of conversation and discussion offers much in giving helpful knowledge to those who are endeavoring to carry on the work you began.

Often, in the course of executive service, one is confronted with problems that, for a time, appear beyond solution; and the task may be thankless, at best. Realization of your part in the affairs of our State and its building, the obstacles which stood before you and the determination which enabled you to overcome these obstacles, indeed gives renewed courage to the many who seek to do your bidding, in behalf of our State, today. We owe you much, not alone for the material things you have given us but for the inspiration that stands carved in your achievements.

From a collection of authoritative data we learn that Maine people, as compared to the average of other States, live seven years longer. This assembly today would seem to bear out the fact of the figures! Right living, the example you have set for us, together with industrious labor in a climate that is rugged and healthy, must mean longevity. We are truly thankful for such sturdy stock as you represent. You have given us a solid foundation on which to build and we hope to do our part as you would wish.

I wish to commend this organization, its sponsors and its members. Maine's Three-Quarter Century Club members have not only made history, through their efforts of a life-time, but they continue to make history through this Club, itself unique throughout the Nation. I trust it will prosper, grow and continue to spread all that is good and gratifying to you each and every one. May the sunset of your years, like the sunset of the day, grant you peace and rest, joy and happiness, with a radiant hope of new and greater blessings in the Tomorrow of your lives.

Hon. Frank H. Holley, treasurer of the Three-Quarter Century Club, and president of the Maine Senate, expressed his pride and joy at being allowed to participate in the transportation feature of the convention.

One of the best speeches of the day was made by Bertram E. Packard, State Commissioner of Education, who spoke with pleasant recollections of his ten years' residence in Camden. "More wonderful than the scenery are its people," said Commissioner Packard. He told of a visit to California and he made his home deeply appreciate Maine scenery. "In California," said he, "they are optimistic, and they have to be to live in a climate where there is no change. In Maine it seems that they never grow old."

The speaker commended Cicero's essay written at the age of 84 and quoted: "I like a young man in whom there is something of the old, and like an old man in whom there is something of the young."

Almost everybody was too excited to eat at the noon hour, but several thousand lunch boxes made their appearance and home cooked "wittles" disappeared as if by magic.

The business meeting resulted in the choice of these officers:

President—Samuel F. Emerson, Skowhegan.

Vice President—P. S. Mooney, Augusta.

Secretary—Clarence A. Weston, Portland.

Executive Committee—W. W. W. Perry, Camden; Mrs. Emma Gannett, Bangor.

The members of the nominating committee were Henry Lord, Bangor; W. W. Perry, Camden and Hattie McKeen, Lincoln.

Included in the resolutions were these paragraphs:

Whereas, each year, we receive many inquiries regarding the reason for our longevity, which is a necessary qualification for eligibility in joining our Club, therefore

Be it Resolved, that we humbly thank God for His protection throughout the entire span of our lives, for it is through His great goodness and understanding that we have been privileged to be citizens of Maine, where invigorating air, health-giving sunshine, good nourishing food, refreshing water, and quiet sleep, are available, and are the fundamental factors in the secret of longevity.

Whereas, the Maine Public Health Association, that volunteer health agency, which organized our Club in 1925, and which sponsors, directs and finances our activities, has been whole-heartedly endeavoring to bring happiness to our members, individually and collectively, therefore

Be it Resolved, that we extend to the Maine Public Health Association our deepest gratitude for its continued interest in the Three-Quarter Century Club and its members; particularly this year, when the health needs are so evident and the demands many, do we appreciate the fact that the Association has labored for the success of our seventh annual meeting.

The Camden Board of Trade, particularly its president, Col. Robbins, and Camden citizens were thanked for their hospitality.

The next convention will be held at Lakewood near Skowhegan.

Mellie Dunham and Gram were presented at the first of the after-noon features and there was immediately a rush in the direction of the platform.

They have become used to staring throngs since the day Henry Ford made "Mellie" famous, and Tuesday faced the people and the cameras with almost composure. "Mellie," a small white haired man was in his jolliest mood, joking with everyone standing near him. "Gram" gowned in green silk with a navy blue hat, maintained a quiet dignity through all the proceedings—not exactly aloof, but not warming up to the admiring throng as did her good husband.

Opening the program "Mellie" after mending a broken string fiddled several tunes, including "Turkey in the Straw," "Pop Goes the Weasel" and other familiar jig tunes. The Pathé-Movietone operators seemed quite anxious to have "Mellie" announced as "the most famous old-time fiddler in the world," but "Mellie" seemed equally as anxious to have "the world" limited to the State of Maine.

Mellie did not enter the fiddlers' contest, and would have needed his utmost ability had he done so. The contestants were William H. Foster, 83, Dexter; Fred Thibodeau, 76, Waterville; Fernando S. Philbrick, 86, Rockland; J. M. Hart, 82, Warren; Robert Daniels, 76, Ellsworth; Messrs. Thibodeau, Philbrick and Hart were one, two, three in the eyes of the judges, the chairman of which was Congressman Carroll L. Beedy of Portland, a former resident of Camden.

Many of the audience favored Col. Philbrick as champion. Mr. Hart's singing and anecdote earned him a big hand.

While the fiddling was in progress Mr. Daniels and Mrs. Jane Arsenault 83 of Bath danced a jig. And maybe they didn't get some hand.

Mrs. Sarah Fye, 82, proved an adept, still, at the piano.

George E. Torrey, 80, of Rockland, was introduced as a man who had not missed his Sunday School session for 56 years.

Mrs. Ella Martin, 80, of Camden, was not presented but she could have held that being the only woman who ever walked from North Haven to Camden on the ice. This was in '75.

In the fancy work display were noted an exhibit by Mrs. Elmira Rollins of Camden of particular note, including a pair of pillow cases edged with handsome handmade lace, made when she was 90 years old, several yards of knitted lace made when 85 years, and also hairpin lace made when 80 years. Mrs. Nettie Moody of Wilton, aged 77, displayed two handsome rugs braided from velvet pieces.

Knox Lincoln Farm Bureau

At the milk testing meeting held in Nobleboro County Agent Wentworth reports samples of milk tested from the herds of J. F. Perkins, Tom Genthner, Sterling Oliver and Howard Rollins. The work was done at Mr. Rollins' farm. Sterling Oliver's second crop of alfalfa is coming along well and he expects a good yield this month.

Joe Bryant of Damariscotta Mills has 900 pullets on range and they are doing very well. He has been feeding a great deal of liquid milk this year and feels that this should help to produce some profitable pullets this fall. All his birds are housed in open-air shelters.

West Alna poultrymen are sure to make some money this year with their flocks. Calls were made recently on flocks of Roy Dow, Mrs. Hannah Hendrickson, Luther Carver, Henry Thronon and William Averill. All are using open air shelters and good range.

The capons of William Averill and Allie Averill, West Alna, are developing fast and there has been no loss. These birds should be ready for the Thanksgiving market.

The bull which Roy Dow, West Alna, received two years ago on the Maine Central livestock train has developed into a fine animal. He has added three pure bred cows to his herd during the past two years and has several grade heifers that he is raising. He is planning to build a bull pen next year under the direction of the Extension Service. He says it pays to have pure bred stock.

Plans are being made to hold a fall meeting of the executive committee of the Knox-Lincoln County Farm Bureau at Moxie's Cove, Round Pond.

Extension Engineer in County

Cleason Turner of the Extension Service, Orono, will be in the county today and Friday of this week to assist the county agent and home demonstration agent on these subjects: Ventilation of barns and hen houses; concrete work, water systems and septic tanks in rural homes. Thursday he will be with County Agent Wentworth in Thomaston, Rockland and Hope; Friday in Nobleboro, North Edgecomb and Wiscasset with Miss Lawrence the home demonstration agent. Calls will be made on farmers that have asked for information on engineering subjects.

State Demonstration Team Contest

Aug. 13 at the Y. M. C. A. building in Auburn, the State 4-H Demonstration Team contest, for counties in the southern part of Maine, will be held at 9 o'clock, standard time. The winnings boys' team, the winning girls' team and the best broad team in the State will be awarded the trip to Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Sept. 20-26.

Velma Grey and Marjorie Taylor of the Megunticook Juniors 4-H Club, Camden, compose the girls' team competing in this contest.

These girls have given their demonstration preparing and packing a lunch at a Grange meeting, a meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary and a joint meeting of the 4-H Clubs in Camden; also at the county try-outs in Damariscotta where they won as the best girls' team in Knox and Lincoln Counties.

The boys' team to compete at the State contest is composed of Raymond Rhodes and John Burns, Seven Tree 4-H Club of Union. These boys demonstrate planting and transplanting vegetables. John has a garden of 20 square rods and Raymond's garden is 18 square rods. Both gardens have a variety of vegetables which are taken care of by the boys themselves.

Katherine True of Golden Rule Club, Hope, will give a broad demonstration. Katherine has given her demonstration at Hope Grange and at Orono during Farm and Home Week last March. These boys and girls are Rudy Vallee's cigars. The checker contest was a long and arduous bout, each player giving the matter in hand the most absorbed attention, and the afternoon hours had waned before the end was even in view.

The knitting contest which had 10 entries was won by Mrs. S. A. Roy of Livermore Falls, 77 years old, and Mrs. Nettie Moody of Wilton, 77, with Mrs. Joan Tryon of Gardiner, 91, and Mrs. Sarah Barnes of Camden, 86, winning honorable mention. The limit was 20 minutes, and how the needles flew. Despite the heat which must have caused sticky fingers, the contestants maintained unruffled demeanor, even under the battery of eyes and cameras confronting them, and presented a thrilling picture as the stitches fell into place with lightning-like rapidity.

Two quilts which had been pieced by Maine women more than 15 years ago were spread on frames on the Library lawn for the quilting contestants. There were numerous entries, the winner being Mrs. Clara A. Pullen of Camden, 82 years old.

Mrs. Pullen was also a member of the style show which was held somewhat later in the amphitheater. Her quaint gown was of the period before 1880. Mrs. Tina Salisbury of Camden 80 years, wore a gown more than 150 years old, combined with beautiful handmade lace in the collar and a quaint lace handkerchief affair on her head. Another entrant was Mrs. Mary A. E. Nutter of Dexter, 84 years, who wore a gown much over 50 years old.

The Board of Trade committee in charge of the affair comprised: Col. E. A. Robbins, chairman; Mrs. E. A. Robbins, reception; Allen Payson, refreshments; Herbert A. Thomas, parking, policing, etc.; J. H. Hobbs, stands; John Taylor, music; Dr. H. J. Pettapiece, first aid.

girls are working faithfully on their demonstrations and we wish them all success at the contest.

An Annual Event

Alna Farmers plan to hold their sixth annual club tour tomorrow. There are eight boys in this club carrying ten projects—one dairy, one garden, two chick raising, two pigs and four beans.

A committee composed of Ralph Jones, Carroll Jones, Gregory MacDonald and William Hayward was appointed at last meeting to accompany the leader, Clarence H. Walker, and County Agent Wentworth on this tour.

Mr. Wentworth and Mr. Walker have been present on all six of the club tours held by these boys.

The 4-H Clubs which have held a tour this year are: Hope Happy Farmers, N. F. Barrett, leader; Alna Homemakers, Bernal Jewett, leader; Orr's Corner Girls, Mrs. Amber Childs, leader; W. A. L. U. Burkettsville, Mrs. Florence Calderwood, leader; Seven Tree Club, Union, George Cameron, leader; Union Junior Farmers, Clifton Meservey, leader. Chickens, pigs, gardens, corn, potatoes, beans, sewing and canning were thoroughly inspected.

Coccidiosis in Flocks

Several calls have been received at the Farm Bureau office from poultrymen in the county who are losing pullets from coccidiosis. The symptoms are: Loss of appetite, roughened dirty plumage, gradual loss of flesh, paleness of comb, leg weakness or paralysis of legs, sluggish weak movements when walking.

If many birds are affected the best thing to do is to sell the flock for poultry, for it has been found that loss will continue throughout the winter after the pullets have started to lay.

When the first symptoms appear the flock should be given either a milk or soda flush. Milk is the best, either fed as dry or liquid. If dry is used put 40 per cent in the mash. With the liquid feed only hard grain and milk. Soda may be used one-quarter pound to five gallons of water. This to be given for one day.

This treatment should be followed by a very rigid sanitary schedule which will include cleaning brooder house thoroughly, use new range, use plenty of litter, provide abundance of feed and watering space, feed hoppers and watering fountains so constructed to keep droppings out and old yards should be plowed, limed and reseeded.

Nobleboro Still Leads

It looks as though Nobleboro is going to win the county square meals for health contest unless Montsweag and Camden serve more meals. This is how the contest stands:

Alna, four; Camden, eight; Damariscotta, three; Edgecomb, three; East Union, six; Hope, five; Montsweag, nine; Nobleboro, 18; Union, 4. The contest ends Sept. 30.

Special award to the community serving the largest number of approved community meals.

A blue ribbon with gold letters to be awarded the community serving 12 approved community meals. A red ribbon with gold letters to be awarded the community serving nine to eleven approved community meals. A white ribbon with gold letters to be awarded the community serving six to eight approved community meals.

Milk for Baby's Vacation

The problem of taking a baby on the family vacation is simplified by the use of dry milk. Never carry milk in a thermos bottle, because of the danger of having bacteria multiply in the slightly warm mixture, hygeia author, Dr. A. B. Schwartz, warns mothers. Traveling unprepared may spoil baby's stomach as well as his parents' dispositions.

WOODLOT IS IMPORTANT

Hardwoods Bring Better Prices Generally, and in Many Cases Mature First

The farm woodlot plays a more important part in the agriculture of New England than in that of any other section of the country, according to President E. H. Thompson of the Federal Land Bank of Springfield, Mass. In a recent address he pointed out that the wood lot has several important advantages:

It furnishes an income from lands that would otherwise be a liability, due to soil, topography, and rugged conditions common to New England. It furnishes winter work when men and teams are often unemployed.

It frequently gains in value though the farm be otherwise abandoned. It constitutes a long-term asset of increasing value and this is of great importance to banks making long-term loans on farm mortgages.

A serious obstacle to greater interest in farm woodlots is the lack of good markets for small lots of timber, in many districts. The tendency of many farmers is to plant conifers, whereas hardwoods are bringing better prices generally, and in many cases mature first. Of course a serious hindrance to the maintenance of farm woodlots in some areas is annual taxation.
