TO THE YACHTSMEN

Everett F. Groaton, executive secretary of the Maine Development Commission, has sent out the following letter to yachtsmen:

"A few weeks ago we had a meeting in the State House of people interested in yachting. There was very much interest in this meeting and it was decided to form an Association of Maine Yacht Clubs.

"Several purposes were listed and mailed out. It was decided at that meeting to have a second meeting to perfect the organization. The date set for that meeting was Sept. 9. So, accordingly I am calling a meeting of all people interested in yachting in Maine to meet at the State House at 1 o'clock p. m. daylight time.

"The committee on Constitution and by-laws will report."

THEY HAD GUNS

And Were Jailed As Revolutionists—The Ericksons' Experience

An Associated Press despatch from Santiago, Cuba, which appeared in all of the daily newspapers Tuesday, would have been read hereabouts with much keen interest had the local angle been understood. The despatch said:

"Five United States subjects and nine British subjects, arrested by Cuban authorities after they fled from a native uprising in the Bahamas, were acquitted in urgency court here on charges of possessing war materials.

"When the defendants landed on the Cuban coast, after a hazardous boat trip from Great Inagua Island, the Bahamas, they possessed several rifles, pistols, gas guns and several thousand rounds of ammunition. Cubans charged them with illegal possession of the arms and held them in jail.

"The United States citizens in the group were Josiah Erickson, Douglas Erickson and Allan G. Mowatt, all of Swampscott, Mass., Philip A. Smith of Portland, and Charles E. Kaddy of Fort Worth, Texas."

"The Ericksons mentioned in the above despatch are sons of A. Wentworth Erickson, of Swampscott, Mass., who has a summer estate on Masee and Butter Islands. They, with a third son, established a salt plant in the Bahamas, and were taking supplies thither, when mistaken for revolutionists.

Home folks are anxiously awaiting a more detailed report of their exciting experiences.

ON A HEARSE

To the Editor of The Boston Herald: Your recent editorial in The Herald, "Watching The Cars Go By" reminds me of a recent trip through Maine on which I noticed, with much interest, the advertising which the State is getting through its registration plates. I refer to the word "vacationland."

An out of State companion seeing the word for the first time on the plate at the back of a hearse said: "What do they mean by that; is Maine a cemetery?" Of course, we know that it is not, but why use the plate for a hearse?

MAXINE AND GERTRUDE

Bronze Marker Was Placed Yesterday In Honor Of the Famous Actresses

Placement of markers at all points of historic or artistic significance in the city is the laudable aim of the Woman's Educational Club. In pursuit of this self-imposed task, the birthplace of the world famous actresses, Maxine Elliott and Gertrude Elliott (Lady Forbes-Robertson) has been designated for posterity by a neat bronze tablet which was unveiled yesterday with simple and dignified exercises.

Classmate of Maxine Elliott, who delivered address yesterday when a bronze marker was placed on her Birthplace on Hall street unified exercises. On the unveiling committee were Miss Marguerite Gould, Miss Bertha Orbeton and Mrs. Cora Haraden.

An unpretentious one and one-half story building, located at 13 Hall street, four houses in on the right from South Main street, now bears the inscription—

"Birthplace of Maxine Elliott and Gertrude Elliott (Lady Forbes-Robertson) Noted Actresses—Born Jessie and May Dermot—Placed by the Woman's Educational Club 1937."

By a freak of circumstance, the property is now also occupied by Elliotts (Mr. and Mrs. William H. Elliott) but this family is nowise related to the artists who placed that name in flickering lights on "The Great White Way." Mrs. Addie Winchenbach is the present owner of the house.

In preface to a program under the direction of the club president, Mrs. Mary Perry Rich, Lieut. Clinton Holdings of the Salvation Army sounded "Taps," following it with the trumpet solo, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," and later played "America." Col. E. K. Gould, State Historian commended the club on its vision and enterprise, and then informally recounted the steps taken to establish authority for siting the actual birthplace of the distinguished sisters. By interviews with relatives, research at the Registry of Deeds and study of an 1873 city map, Col. Gould expressed his satisfaction that this was the house which Thomas Dermot (father) bought from Edwin Smith, the property being then located on the northern side of Pleasant street. It was sold in 1875 to John Berry and 60 years ago was moved to its present location. Somewhat weather beaten, it is fast falling into disrepair and is a sorry contrast to the once attractive home.

Col. Gould, who was a classmate of Jessie Dermot at the Thomas McLean school, narrated several amusing anecdotes of happy childhood days with the young girl whose graceful carriage and raven locks gave promise then of the great beauty which she was to become. Presumably the judge was among the earliest of her admirers, for even as a lad of 12 he was the principal in a would-be Romeo and Juliet scene.

Escorting Miss Dermot to her home from a party, he was told he must not enter by the door but should wend his way upward by a rose trellis at the side of the house. Plainly the child was imbued with the dramatic urge from the cradle onward. However, nothing loth, the youngster who like all boys prided himself on a certain climbing skill, proceeded to ascend the frail ladder but a sudden flop into the rose bed curtailed his Romeo act and the terrified 12-year-old took to his heels with the imagined certainty that Capt. Dermot was fast on his trail with a club. Would the Maxine Elliott who charmed Kings in her day recall this juvenile entry into the Shakespeare realm? Though trivial at the time, her supreme acting ability, like great portents, cast its shadow before.

Others who supplied reminiscences of the Dermot sisters were Mrs. Rebecca Ingraham, Miss Annie Hahn, Miss Bertha Orbeton and Mrs. Jeanette Dunton. Roland T. Patten of Presque Isle, secretary to Cong. Clyde H. Smith, signified his pleasure at being present to honor two such renowned daughters of Rockland.

PRESIDENT BIRD

Water Company Attorney Succeeds Late Gov. Cobb—McAlary a Director

State Representative Allan F. Bird had two causes for congratulation yesterday. One was his return home after a successful recovery from an appendicitis operation; the other was his election yesterday to the presidency of the Camden & Rockland Water Co., succeeding the late ex-Governor William T. Cobb. Mr. Bird, as attorney for the corporation, has thoroughly familiarized himself with the details of its operation, and may be counted upon for a successful and efficient administration. The name of Allan F. McAlary, the company's capable superintendent was added to the board of directors.

MRS. HAYNES A HEROINE

Wife Of Rockland Coast Guardsman Sacrifices Life In Vain Attempt To Save Boy

Mrs. Beatrice Haynes, 32 of Rockland, was drowned yesterday afternoon in Meganticook Lake in a vain attempt to rescue Chester Spear, Jr. 6, of Warren. The drowning occurred at Young's Beach in Lincolnville. The bodies were recovered almost immediately.

Coast Guardsmen from the Rockland base, commanded by Lieut. Commander R. C. Jewell, applied the prone method from 5 until 8.30 without effect. The inhalator of the Camden Fire Department, under the direction of Chief Allen Payson, was also used without avail.

Boatswain Haynes was among those who responded to the call for aid, unconscious that his wife was one of the victims. Dr. Charles B. Poppstone of Rockland and Dr. H. J. Pettapiece of Camden were summoned.

Leaving her three children safely on the shore, Mrs. Haynes went to the rescue of the Spear boy. Medical Examiner, R. P. Jones of Belfast pronounced death due to accidental drowning.

TODAY'S CRUCIAL GAME

Victory For St. George Means First Money—Rockland Has a Look-In For the $100

The play-off game between St. George and Camden, which was to have taken place in St. George Thursday night, was cancelled at the last moment, because four of the Camden players were unable to take part.

Postponement was made to 4 o'clock this afternoon, which, while disappointing to those, who are unable to attend Saturday games, will have the advantage of nine full innings, whereas a night game can scarcely go more than seven, beginning at the hour which seems necessary for the players.

One up, by virtue of having won the championship of the first half, St. George approaches this contest with supreme confidence, particularly as the game is being played on the home grounds where it is exceedingly difficult to beat St. George. Colbath will probably be Manager Simmons' selection on the mound.

"The Camden Herald says: 'Should Camden win Saturday, it will be necessary to hold another game between these two teams to decide the championship. Should Camden lose, our home team would become second place winner in the second half and it would be necessary for Camden and Thomaston to hold a play-off game to decide the winner of the second place prize of $100.'

The sports writer of the Camden Herald seems to have forgotten that Camden would be tie with Rockland for second place in the event of losing today, as each team would have won six and lost four. Hence the second place tie would have to be played off before anybody tackled Thomaston for the second prize of $100. Rockland still has a chance to be in the money if Camden loses today.

Thomaston 7, Waldoboro 6
Thomaston made seven scores in one inning at Thomaston last night, and that was all the scoring done in the game. Waldoboro threw three pitchers into the breach without avail. Condon meantime was holding the visitors to a pair of safeties. Robinson made a remarkable catch in center field, while young Woodcock did a backhand stunt that brought the fans to their feet.

Base hits, Thomaston 9, Waldoboro 1. Errors, Thomaston 2, Waldoboro 3. Batteries, Condon and Bucklin; French, Benner, Gray and Freeman. Umpires, Dimick and "Brick" Frohock.

Jefferson Man Doing Traffic Duty At North Waldoboro Is Killed

Fred A. Cunningham, 60, of Jefferson, was injured fatally last Wednesday night, when struck by an automobile said to have been operated by Wendall Gentner, 18, Waldoboro High School student, as he was directing traffic at the scene of construction operations on the highway at North Waldoboro.

Rushed to the Memorial Hospital at Damariscotta, where it was found that both legs, one arm and several ribs were broken and he had been injured about the head, Cunningham died at 3.30 Thursday morning.

State Patrolman Stanley Poland investigated the accident and announced he would ask a warrant on a charge of manslaughter.

Cunningham leaves a wife, Mrs. Katherine Cunningham; a son, Linwood of Littleton, N. H.; two daughters, Mrs. Mildred Hopkins of Westbrook and Miss Verna Cunningham of Portland; and a brother, Boardman Cunningham of Jefferson.

THE NIAGARA ROLLS ON

Being Also the Story of The Thousand Islands, Where Millionaires Disport

(By The Roving Reporter—Fifth Installment)

One of the happiest features of the Roving Reporter articles, so far as I am personally concerned, is the comment which I hear, and especially that portion of it which adds enlightenment to some matters which may have puzzled me a bit on the trips.

And so when there came to my office the other day Mrs. Harry G. Brockington of Buffalo I was given some information which I am now passing on to those who have been patient enough to follow this series. She told me how Scythe Tree Inn came to be given that name. It immortalizes the story of the New Yorker, who went away to the Civil War, leaving his scythe hanging on the limb of a small tree. The volunteer lost his life on the battlefield, but the tree continued to grow, with the scythe fast in its embrace.

Call On the Sheriff

The sign: "When in trouble call on the Sheriff," was, as one might have expected, a clever advertising ruse. It exploited Sheriff's Garage.

The blue boxes near Buffalo are receptacles for copies of the Buffalo Evening News.

And thus one learns. I hope that others will follow the example of Mrs. Brockington.

Friday, Aug. 20, with nightfall close at hand, we continued our journey along the Northern Shores of Lake Ontario, passing through Burlington, and noting a sign which said "Pig and Whistle Inn."

We stopped while I bought a melon freshly harvested from an Ontario farm. Files were very numerous and ver- persistent, but the farmer avowed that he hadn't seen a mosquito there in seven years. His veracity, I thought, might well compare with that of Opedilodoc, who used to figure in the comic section of the Sunday Globe.

Maine Cars Scarce

We reached Oakville and saw on the right a large estate, which attracted our special attention. A Provincial constable, John M. Hunchliffe by name, explained that it was a polo ground owned by Senator Cox of Oakville, and London, England. A game was scheduled for the next day, and the genial constable urged us to stay over and see it.

Hunchliffe regarded Gonla's Maine car with some interest. "What's the matter with you fellows down in Maine!" he exclaimed. I haven't seen half a dozen Maine cars all summer."

Have I told you how we traveled from the New Hampshire line on a Thursday noon to the mid-section of Vermont on a Sunday forenoon without having seen another Maine car. There's one for Mr. Ripley.

Near Oakville another curious name confronted us—"The Worn Doorstep Inn."

A Long Way From Home

Saturday morning the speedometer of Ed's car told us we had traveled 722 miles since leaving home the previous Thursday morning. Incidentally we were about 800 miles from home on the return route we had chosen.

We had spent the night at a tourist's home in Long Branch, a suburb of Toronto, and from my chamber window I could see the moonlight playing across Lake Ontario. It was very soothing, and I fell asleep at peace with the world.

story of the city's industrial development.

Toronto's Big Show

As this article is being written the Canadian National Exhibition is in progress at Toronto, and it is fair to assume that our British cousins are whooping 'er up. Rev. Corwin H. Olds tells me that this exhibition is the biggest municipal show in the world. Some of the attractions which I saw advertised are here presented:

U. S. Navy Band, by special permission of President Roosevelt.
"Empire Onward," a stupendous production with 1500 performers.
Tom Mix Circus, with Tom Mix in person.
Guy Lombardo and his famous dance band.
The Royal Canadian Mounted Police.
An Eskimo Village.
Display of Crown Jewels from London.
Warrior's Day.
Hollywood on Parade.
Sports events with world champions.

A Brownbread Cart

The trolley is still indispensable in Canada. We saw a car barn which contained many scores of cars. And what do you suppose I also saw? A brownbread cart, smacking of the days when the Hewitts and the Risings thus distributed the famous baked bean accompaniment.

We broke our fast that Saturday morning at "The Falcon," Highland Creek, but ate again in a very brief time, for reasons you will soon see.

I like the Ontario number plates, red and white, but we saw so many of them that day that they became almost monotonous. The grain fields, which monopolize about all the territory in this section, was well soaked after a night's rain. An enormous artificial apple served as a very compelling sign for a stand which sold pure apple juice. Whitty a town of 6000 population owes some of its prosperity to mushroom farms, a tannery and a canning plant. Two months of dry weather, a citizen told us.

Those Imperial Gallons

Ed was much surprised to learn that the tank of his car would not hold 12 gallons, and then he awoke. They were Imperial gallons, more generous than ours—and more costly.

We came now to the city of Oshawa upon which were affixed the eyes of two nations when the C.I.O. made its advent there. Oshawa with a population of 23,000 is the home of the General Motors of Canada, which employs about 3000 persons. In a brief ride around the town we saw 51 manufacturing buildings of all kinds. When the strike broke out the Northwest Mounted Police were sent for, but things quieted down before they could arrive.

We talked with Harold Atkinson, a Provincial officer, who kindly answered our questions.

A Silent Sheet

"I suppose it was pretty exciting?" I ventured.
Mr. Atkinson laughed.
"The day after the strike was declared," he said, "you could have fired a cannon in the Main street without hitting a soul. Everybody had vanished. It was like a morgue here."

And it was certainly peaceful enough that day, which happened to be Saturday. It required a stretch of imagination to think that only a few weeks ago Oshawa was a powder keg, and nobody sitting on the safety valve—nobody except the premier of Canada—was that the title—who took such a courageous grip on the situation.

Near Oshawa we had seen a stone monument erected on the site where had stood a log church where began

BEFORE THE RAIN

We knew it would rain, for all the morn A spirit on slender ropes of mist Was lowering its golden buckets down Into the evapory amethyst Of marshes and swamps and dismal fens, Scooping the dew that lay in the flowers, Dipping the jewels out of the sea, To sprinkle them over the land in showers. We knew it would rain, for the poplars showed The white of their leaves, the amber grain Shrunk in the wind—and the lightning Is tangled in tremulous skeins of rain, —Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

IN FINE STYLE

Will Maine Present Its Feature Exhibits At Springfield Exposition

Maine is going to the Eastern States Exposition in fine style this year. Extensive exhibits of our recreational, hunting, and fishing facilities will be coupled with those of agriculture, fishery, cannery and manufactured products. These will make a dazzling array in the Maine building for the quarter of a million persons expected to visit the Springfield, Mass., show, the week of Sept. 19.

Potatoes will be features in the Agricultural Department's exhibit which will occupy a large section of the building. Virtually a section of the vast spud country will be on display. There will be a potato house in action with the grading, sizing, and brushing machines in action. There will be a miniature starch factory and an extensive display of containers and merchandising methods to be used in this fall's selling program.

The Department is going to give several hundred crates of the finest tubers away and hopes to get some valuable information in return. This will be done in the cause of consumer research. A questionnaire will be passed out to be filled in to determine the size packages, type of potatoes and other features desired by consumers. For filling out the questionnaire patrons will be given a small package of spuds.

A unique display is being developed in the form of a turn table with many sections. In each section will be placed different products enclosed in colored glass to amplify their natural color. Then there will also be a big animated display depicting the life on a Maine farm in both summer and winter and various exhibits by private concerns.

The display of Maine lighthouses with the coastline in relief which was developed by Marshall Washburn will be returned this year. This made a big hit in previous shows.

The Inland Fish and Game Department will have its usual spectacular exhibit with an actual forest scene with live game and fish.

A display of seafoods, both fresh and manufactured, will be sponsored by the Department of Sea and Shore Fisheries and the Maine Development Commission. A miniature store will be set up with the various products "on sale."

A BUSY SENATOR

Fernald Of Waldo Is Getting Ready For the Special Session

State Senator Roy L. Fernald will introduce an act into the special session of the Legislature to repeal Chapter 166 of the Public Laws of 1933, under which the bureau of Accounts and Control audits the excise tax receipts on automobiles by towns, and reports to the municipal officers the amount that has been collected by their treasurer or collector. The annual cost is about $23,000. Last winter Senator Fernald, as a part of his economy program, advocated the repeal of this law, on the grounds that in no way was the audit a State function, inasmuch as the collector of the taxes was a local municipal officer and inasmuch as the funds themselves were used entirely to carry on local government. Senator Fernald was successful in having a bill reported out of the Judiciary Committee, of which he is chairman, which was unanimously in favor of a repeal of this act. The bill was killed by a member of the Committee on Appropriations and Financial Affairs in the closing hours of the Legislature.

The audit of municipal accounts required by Chapter 216 of the Public Laws of 1937, will include an audit of the excise receipts collected by the local collectors.

Senator Fernald will also present further economy suggestions at the Legislature at its special session.

Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania Smiled When Asked As To Presidency

Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania was hailed upon his arrival in London Tuesday as the probable Democratic nominee for President in 1940 if President Roosevelt does not seek a third term. Earle, however, quickly discounted his own chances. "President Roosevelt undoubtedly is the greatest American today," he said. "There is no one in the Democratic Party with his outstanding ability, and I would welcome a third term for his presidency."

About his own chances he said: "There are 126,000,000 people in the United States. I am one of them and that percentage represents my chance."

"Shall you take it?" he was asked. Earle smiled but did not reply.

QUOTES EXPERTS

Medomak Writer Shows Effect of Beer, Ale and Porter On the System

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

Dr. Hermann Pfeiffer, professor of general and experimental pathology in the University of Graz, Austria, has the following to say concerning the effect of alcoholic liquors upon the heart.

"To continually transport large quantities of liquids through the circulatory system is a great burden to it. And since the liquors that are drunk annually contain greater or lesser amounts of the narcotic poison, alcohol. And in the case of beer, ale or porter, also contains bitter principles which exert a deleterious effect all along the line and especially on the kidneys there is a three fold effect produced. And for full measure the drinker, almost always is a tobacco addict, so we have another narcotic poison to reckon with, namely nicotine."

"Eventually the heart becomes enlarged and undergoes degenerative changes, as do the blood vessels, and finally the kidneys. It leaves the victim a wreck with no possible chance of a 'come back'."

A very eminent French physician, Dr. Legrain, in an article from a French Medical Journal, says:

"Come with me to the morgue where lies the body of the victim of beer; let us examine him. We find him edematous (dropsical) and his tissues are subjected to a fatty degeneration. Take in your hands the heart which has ceased to beat, and notice a heart that is always found in beer drinkers. It has become enlarged until it is the size of an ox heart. It has to do this in order to be able to transport the flood of liquids that passed through it. For the drinker of beer is never satisfied; he knows no moderation, he must have more and more and more. This is why I call beer an invention of the Devil."

A prominent New York newspaper gives the following figures taken from the provisional survey announced by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. "The death rate rose from 10.9 per 1000 in 1935 to 11.5 in 1936. While the birth rate has a new low mark."

What a philanthropic work is that of the newspapers and magazines, which sell their space so freely to advertise so extensively the two most common narcotic habit forming poisons, in order to swell their bank account and to increase the death rate of their fellow citizens?

A prominent welfare journal says: "Liquor advertisements are written with a pen dipped in alcohol."

And yet the gullible public blindly buys, smokes and drinks these narcotic poisons and dies.

E. M. Studley.

Medomak, Aug. 31.

A GOOD PLUM YEAR

Prices of Pickling Cucumbers and Tomatoes Please the Housewives

Maine's plum crop this year, the weekly market report of the State Department of Agriculture said Thursday, "is larger than any for several years."

The report said the "opportunity for selective buying of fruits and vegetables was never more apparent than this season."

"Pickling cucumbers are low and green tomatoes also have taken a drop, which gives the housewife a chance to do her pickling at reasonable prices," the report said.

"The effects of the dry weather are easily apparent both in the quality and quantity of vegetables coming on the market. The size of tomatoes and the ears of corn are showing the pinching effects of lack of moisture."

"The meat market 'is steady,' according to the report which also said berries 'are well past their season and only a few are now coming in.'"

FANCY APPLE CROP

The Red, White and Blue Official Trademark Will Mean Something

A committee appointed to investigate the possibilities of a trademarking and merchandising campaign for Maine apples reported to Commissioner Washburn of the Department of Agriculture, that it favored such a plan. Representing a number of large producers and shippers this group agreed that a campaign patterned after that to be used on potatoes and other products would be feasible. They recommend a more rigid system of grading on apples that would comply with the regulations set up for users of the red, white, and blue official trademark.

The committee which consists of Luther Russell, Kents Hill; Lewis Berry, Livermore; Myron Lord, Lime- rock; E. L. White, Bowdoinham; and W. J. Ricker, Turner, will contact other growers in attempt to develop a Statewide program. It is believed that a large part of the fancy apple crop will be sold in the official containers this year.

MUCH FOR SCIENCE

Found By the Members of the MacMillan Labrador Expedition

Schooner Gertrude L. Thebeaud, bearing the members of the MacMillan expedition and the fruits of the latest cruise left this part Thursday morning for Boothbay Harbor. The story of the cruise as told by that gallant scientist and explorer, Donald B. MacMillan, follows:

The expedition left Gloucester June 24 with 37 men, including four college professors, one collector and taxidermist, one physician and surgeon, one representative of the U. S. Government, one representative of the Canadian Government, one radio operator, and 234 college and preparatory students—a scientific school afloat.

"Supplies consisting of food, clothing, school equipment, medical and dental supplies for the three free dental clinics were landed at Hope- dale, Nain, and Hebron, Labrador."

"The expedition cruised along the coast of Labrador, across Hudson Straits to Resolution Island, which is depicted on the maps of today as one island. We found it to be a group consisting of three rather large islands, and almost numberless small islands. As to the exact number no one knows. According to the statements of the three Canadian wireless operators stationed there at the entrance to the straits there are at least 200, and probably many more, visible at mean low water."

"From Resolution we proceeded westward into Frobisher Bay, discovered by the British explorer Martin Frobisher 361 years ago, and named at that time Frobisher Strait, because of the fact that at that time it was conjectured that it led through to China and Japan and the riches of Cathay. Strange as it may seem this strait, because of the imperfect knowledge of navigators at that time, was placed upon the east coast of Greenland for 100 years or more. It remained for America's most zealous Arctic explorer, Charles Francis Hall, to definitely locate in 1800 the exact site of Frobisher's attempt at colonization in the new world."

"The only map of today of Frobisher Bay is that made by Hall 77 years ago. Unfortunately owing to conditions under which he labored, and to the imperfect quality of his equipment, this map is crude and inaccurate. But much credit is due Hall for what he did, for no man has done half as much in that section since that time."

"Streeter Bass and John Halford, both Bowdoin College boys, determined through astronomical observation that many of the salient points are inaccurately placed upon our charts of today. They are inaccurate both as to latitude and longitude. Much valuable work remains to be done in this particular section."

"We proceeded to go up the bay, many interesting features being noted by our geologist Prof. Martin J. Buerger of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology."

"It has always been a question as to whether the southern ice cap of Baffin Land was continuous throughout the length of the Mets Incongnito, so called by Queen Elizabeth of England. Dr. Kenneth Sewall of the Boston Memorial Hospital, Street- dent Lincoln, Dr. Kenneth Sewall of the Boston Memorial Hospital, Street- er Bass of Wilton, Maine, Charles Edwards of Milton, Mass., and Prof. V. C. Wynne-Edwards of McGill University, Montreal, ascended the glacier, the latter two reaching a height of 2800 feet, from which point it was conclusively shown that there are two ice caps of about equal sizes in area, each about 100 square miles. The highest point of the western ice cap is about 3500 feet. Although there are several small discharging glaciers at the waters of Frobisher Bay, the ice cap is very evidently dying and in years to come will eventually disappear."

"Owing to the big rise and fall of tide, strong currents and failure of good harbors it was not deemed advisable to proceed to the head of the Bay as the 'Bowdoin' did in 1931."

"We crossed to the north side of the Bay to visit and study the Eskimos at Brewster Point. A good, safe harbor here enabled us to explore Peter Force Sound in our 26 foot power boat, the Mir-o-mac; also to visit the gold mine of Martin Frobisher, and the site of the futile attempt at colonization long before the Pilgrim fathers sailed into Provincetown Harbor."

"The site of the house, built in 1578 was easily found. Pieces of red brick, mortar, and even bits of colored pottery were discovered by the boys by digging within the foundation stones. There was a long stretch where upon leaving the island the essays and miners buried the timber which they had failed to use in the construction of a fort; one which was to guard the precious mineral after it was mined. The abandoned mine and two ovens used in smelting the ore were easily found and recognized."

"History tells us that it was Frobisher's gold or iron pyrites. We now know it to be of even far less value than pyrites. According to Dr. Buerger it is amphibolite and pyroxenite. The total cost of Martin Frobisher's three expeditions was $3,000,000. The value of the tons of mineral mined and transported to England and locked under three great locks in Bristol Castle was nothing. The little rock- igit island, Kadlunaru, stands there in the Countess of Warwick's Sound as a fine testimonial of the biggest hoax in all Arctic history."

"On our way out of the bay we were fortunate in seeing both walrus and Polar bear. We were content with pictures only. It is not and has never been the practice on any of my expeditions to shoot for the mere love of killing."

"We sailed North through Davis Straits to the Arctic Circle keeping well to the eastward to avoid the pack ice brought south in the Arctic current—along the shores of Baffin Land."

"At every opportunity and at each anchorage our scientists and boys interested in science were busy. Dr. Potar and the botanists collected and packed away at least 20,000 plants. Dr. Buerger, our geologist, noticed many interesting facts pertaining to glaciation and the so called raised beaches."

"The ornithologists listed over 100 species of birds. John Ripley Forbes, collector and taxidermist, brought back for the Lee Museum of Biology at Bowdoin College and other museums 215 carefully prepared bird skins. Mr. Peters of the Biological Survey through his own observations and from his conversation with the settlers, fishermen, and Eskimos brings back some very interesting facts pertaining to the nesting grounds and migration of game birds."

The boys going out as land-lubbers have returned with a knowledge of the sea and seamanship. They are now listed as able seamen."

"The Kaumajet Mountains of Labrador are classed among the most impressive bits of scenery on the Labrador coast. The highest mountain of this range is known as Mt. Brave, so named by Prof. Reginald Daly of Harvard University in 1900. The members of the 1934 MacMillan Expedition failed because of snow covered slippery slopes to reach its summit. This year its height was reached by Amos Shaler of M.I.T. Brendon P. Philbs of Northwestern University, Chicago, and Paul Haines of San Francisco. With aneroid barometer, they determined its height to be 4420 feet; this corrected for barometric change during the climb was reduced to 4390 feet, in their best judgment 400 feet higher than the well known Bishop's Mire. Two cairns were built in one of which was deposited a record for future expeditions."

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

Employees of One Hundred and Fifty Concerns Are To Receive the Benefits

Approximately 150 employees having less than eight employees have elected to give their workers the benefits of the unemployment compensation law and are making regular contributions, officials of the Maine Unemployment Compensation Commission report.

In electing to become liable these employees agree to contribute for a two-year period at least, and must continue to contribute until they notify the Commission of their desire to withdraw. This notification must be received on or before Jan. 5 of any given year, following the completion of the two year requirement.

Most of the voluntary contributors fall in the class of sub-contractors in various types of work but there also a number of small independent concerns among the 150.

By electing to come under the law these employers indicate their desire to keep their trained crews or staffs intact.

KNOWS WASHINGTON

Cong. Smith's Secretary, Roland Patten, Addresses the Educational Club

Roland T. Patten of Presque Isle was one of the speakers at the meeting of the Educational Club last night at the home of Mrs. Minnie Miles, 32 Ocean street. Mr. Patten's subject being "Current Legislation from the National Viewpoint."

A native of Bangor, lived ten years in Piscataquis County, 50 years at Skowhegan, eight years at Presque Isle, and since last February, has been serving as secretary to our representative, Congressman Clyde H. Smith, at Washington. He has recently come to Maine for a brief vacation and expects to return to the nation's capitol in December to resume his secretarial duties. He was in the publication business with Mr. Smith, at Skowhegan, for 13 years, and his principal activity has been newspaper work. He spoke in part as follows:

"Our Constitution, adopted in 1787, has been in the public eye of late by reason of legislation, much of which has been attacked as unconstitutional. It is really a remarkable document—much better because it came after the colonies had acquired wisdom by stumbling along for ten years under the Articles of Confederation. The Preamble is most impressive:

"We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

"This mention of the preamble to our constitution is fitting for therein is all the law and prophets. All our legislation is based on these six assertions—form, establish, insure, provide, promote and secure—proclaimed by the founding fathers as their purpose and what they believed to be the high objectives of a great nation. The legislation to be here discussed will be considered as complying, or at variance, with this preamble."

"Perhaps we should keep in mind that, in a Democracy like ours, each individual should be allowed the maximum of liberty consistent with the general good. In other words, he should be free to do as he pleases so long as his activity is not against the general wellbeing. As William Jennings Bryan would put it—he should be restrained, only when he lifts his hand to do a neighbor injury."

The speaker then discussed briefly some of the more important measures which passed, or failed to pass, in the season of Congress just adjourned—the Wages and Hours (Black-Connery) bill, the Fair Price (Miller-Tydings) bill, Flood Control, the Farm Program (Ever-Normal-Granary) and the two million dollar appropriation for reindeer purchase in Alaska. He also referred to the Direct Primary, as discussed here in Maine, and the coming special session of the Maine Legislature.

Friendship and admiration for his chief, Congressman Clyde H. Smith, was released in his closing paragraphs, as follows:

"I am proud of my association with Congressman Smith. It is really a continuation of previous experience. We were in the publication business together for 15 years. Mr. Smith has been in public life continuously since young manhood. During this period he won 49 successive political contests; a unique record, probably not paralleled elsewhere in America. He is a prince of a chap to work with or work for. When I blunder—and I do many times, in those new surroundings—he calms my shattered feelings by making me think the mistep was to be expected and was of little consequence, anyhow. He takes his job seriously and listens, as I would not have the strength to do, to the debates and proceedings in the House, often five hours in length, day after day. To do this he conserves his strength by not accepting invitations to social affairs no matter how intriguing and distinguished the company."

"Mrs. Smith, the most efficient secretary and office executive I have ever known, is of great assistance to her husband. There are other legislators, notably Vice President Garner, who are fortunate enough to have life partners worthy to share and qualified to assist in their public careers; but, personality and ability considered, I doubt if another Congressman is as greatly blessed in this regard as our Representative from Maine's Second District."

[The above was placed in type before last night's Educational Club meeting as a faithful abstract of what the former Maine editor intended to say. An exceptionally heavy program brought Mr. Patten's turn much later than he expected, so that he spoke only briefly. The abstract here given serves as a proxy.—Ed.]

PONZI, OR REGAN?

Next Thursday Night's Show At the Potato Bowl Will Decide

Trappy half-sheets, fresh from The Courier-Gazette press, tell the semi-monthly convention of the Beal. Bust- ers which will be held by the Crescent Athletic Club at the Potato Bowl, Tillson Avenue, Thursday night, Sept. 9. Bangor Bill Withee is promoter, announcer and referee.

This time he is going to stack Ponzi Cochran up against Tommy Regan, and both boys are determined that nobody shall be left in doubt as to who won this scrap. "Regan," say some of the fans who know he is about to fight in Boston for the welterweight championship of New England. "Cochran" say other fans, who know about Ponzi's dream punch.

Now come two sluggers—Butch Wooster and Dave White—both ready to uphold Rockland's honor.

Prelims: Casey Jones vs. Clifford White (C.C.C.); The Bat vs. Donald Peters—and one other bout to be announced.

He reports fine weather and bumper crops in Manitoba, valued at $84,000,000.

On the wings of yesterday's heat wave there wafted into town that jolly and highly esteemed former Rockland citizen, James H. McNamara. Mr. McNamara came North from Eagle Rock, Va., with his sister Miss Alice McNamara, and his niece, Miss Antonia McNamara, who had been spending the summer with him. Political chaos is how "Jimmy" describes conditions south of Mason and Dixon Line. The conservative wing of the party is not at all in cahoots with the Roosevelt-Farley regime and looks ahead dubiously to 1940, with the disturbing thought that either might be nominated for the Presidency. Virginia will present a favorite son in the person of Senator Byrd a brother of the famous explorer.

The Rotary Club was honored yesterday by a visit of its District Governor Ralph Redfern of Portland, who gave a very helpful address of "What a Rotary Club is." He stressed the fact that any club is only as good as its individual members, and that when any member is not living up to its motto, of "Service Before Self" he is making that club much weaker. The attendance was excellent and a large number of visiting Rotarians were present—Gaylord Douglas, Springfield, Mass.; Harold Ogden, Melrose, Mass.; Al. White, Everett, Mass.; Israel Oat, Old Town; Bill Cullen, Lewiston; Frank E. Poland, Boston; Rex Daniels and S. W. Hastings, Camden. The guests were Roland Patten, Presque Isle; Joseph Stickney and Elmer Joyce.

THE NEW OFFICERS

What the State Prison Newspaper Says About Welch and MacGowan

The State Prison newspaper "Vox" takes kindly to the new administration at Thomaston and give a fine send-off to the departing officials. Under the caption "New Administration Takes Office" George L. Leavitt, the editor and printer of "Vox" says: "Time which changes conditions and the color of hair has instituted another change in the Prison Administration. We have all expected the change for several months, but not one of us ever in the least expected to receive as new Warden and Deputy two men in whom we could live under with such confidence of a square deal; as we feel that we can expect and will receive from Warden John H. Welch and Deputy Warden Stanley W. MacGowan.

"Warden Welch has had a wide range of experience in handling men, both as a lumber dealer and as a Sheriff, while this is not in many ways the same as handling a prison population, it will, in a great many ways be more beneficial to him in his position than most men have when taking such a position.

"We all await his decisions and administrative changes with every confidence that we will in no way receive other than the best treatment and aid from him.

"We welcome You, Warden Welch." "There remains our New Deputy, who is no stranger to the largest majority of us. Deputy MacGowan has for eleven years had direct control over many men as State Probation Officer, before which he spent two years as a State Highway Patrolman. His new position will bring him into the prison to shape and mould the character and destinies of many men who for numerous reasons have fallen from their proper place in life.

"We do not regret the change in any degree since it brings to the administrative staff, a man who, above all else, fully intends to bolster and rebuild the character and outlook of men who above all else desires to see go from this prison back into the world of social events better equipped to combat the many obstacles hitherto insurmountable by them.

"We Also Welcome You, Deputy MacGowan.

"To the departing Warden we offer our deepest and most sincere wish that he may find in life simple compensation for the many kind acts and generous deeds performed while with us. To many here he was all that could be desired as counselor, to others a welcome believer in sports and outdoor recreations. May whatever life holds in store for him be of the best like our wishes which must follow him as he travels down the long road of the years."

HALEY RICHARDS

The sudden death of Haley Richards which occurred Aug. 25 was a great shock to the community. He was born at Clark Island Feb. 15, 1890, son of the late John and Amanda Richards—one of 12 children.

He was a member of the Granite Cutters International Association of America and had followed that trade for 30 years. He had made many friends wherever he has worked.

Funeral services were held at the home Saturday afternoon with Rev. Mr. Leach of Thomaston officiating. Williams-Brazier Post of the American Legion was represented by Mr. Risteen. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful and showed the esteem in which he was held by his friends and fellow workers.

He was a man of the finest character, who had served his country with the American Army of Occupation in the World War. His death is a sad blow to a thoroughly devoted family, which comprises his wife, Mrs. Alba Richards of Clark Island; a brother, Richard Richards; and four sisters, Mrs. W. M. Seymour of New York, Mrs. Robert McGee of Clark Island, Mrs. Edith Cameron of Clark Island, Mrs. Mabel Allison of Rockland.

The bearers were W. W. Godfrey, Ralph Morse, James Clegg, William Ellis, James Felt and Albion Caddy.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to express our sincere thanks and deep appreciation to all neighbors and friends who helped in so many ways during our recent bereavement.
Mrs. Alba Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McGee, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Seymour, Mrs. Mabel Allison, Mrs. Edith Cameron and Richard Richards.

SERMONETTE

Coming of a Great Man

When the coming of a man is foretold seven centuries before his birth, it may safely be set down that the prophecy is about one of the great of this earth. When it is uttered by a major prophet like Isaiah, no further proof is required, but add to all the fact that it appears in the works of a master poet there is gathered around the one to come indication of the favor of God—and so history found it. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people," "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, And cry unto her. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, Make straight in the desert a highway for our God. And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed."—Isaiah.

Three more centuries roll by and in the small book that finishes the Old Testament and which rings down the curtain on an era just closing, occur the words, "Behold I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; and the Lord whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple."

Four centuries later we read, "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness. 'Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. This is he spoken by the prophet Isaiah.' The man chosen by God 'to make straight in the desert His highway' and to baptize His only Son." William A. Holman.

Carleton Gregory, a student of Providence Bible Institute, will be speaker Sunday at 3 o'clock, at Ingraham Hill chapel.

Suicide by Shot Gun

William Aho, 45, was found shot to death Thursday at his home on the Friendship road and was pronounced a suicide following an investigation by State Police and Dr. Joseph E. Odiome of North Whitefield, county medical examiner.

Mr. Aho was killed by the discharge of a shotgun which he had placed over the head of his bed. No definite reason for the act is assigned, but friends said Aho had been despondent of late.

The body was brought to the Walitz undertaking rooms in this village. Besides his wife, Mr. Aho leaves a 14-year-old daughter, Lorella.

Deceased who had been a resident here the last five years, had been employed at country clubs at Fairfield and other places in Connecticut during the summer.

NORTH HAVEN

Miss Grace Lawrence R. N. of the State health Department held a clinic Friday for children of preschool age. Dr. Daniel Woodman was in charge of the examinations. Arrangements are being made for dental work later in the month for the benefit of the boys and girls in the grade schools. This is the 11th year this work has been done and the benefits are well known. The town is indebted for this service to a summer resident.

John Crockett was in Rockland this week on business.

Mr. and Mrs. James Pendleton and children visited friends in Bangor recently.

After spending the month of August here, Rev. and Mrs. Milton G. Perry, and daughters Marjorie, Virginia and Grace returned Thursday to Trenton.

Church Notes

The annual joint service of the island and summer congregations will be held Sunday at 10:30 daylight in the new church. The service will be in charge of Rev. John Crockett of Princeton, N. J., with brief remarks by Rev. Henry F. Huse. Island singers are asked to occupy the left front pews with the summer choir.

The local church will resume services Sunday at 11:30 and continue these until the Sunday School sessions begin when the time will be changed to 11 standard.

The annual business meeting of the Baptist Church is called for Sept. 20 at 7:30 at the church.

THE MORTON REUNION

The Morton family, descended from James and Hannah Morton, held their annual reunion last Saturday at Albert Morton's log cabin on Wadsworth Point. A picnic lunch consisting of sandwiches, coffee, cakes, assorted fruit, and ices, was served.

After standing in silence a brief time in honor of those who had died during the year, Mrs. Georgia Richardson gave a talk on family history and future plans for the reunion. Much time was spent in conversation, enjoying the view and strolling over the grounds of some of Friends' first homes.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richardson, Taunton, Mass.; Miss Ruth Richardson, Wooster, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Mark Richardson and sons Harry and Mark, Bridgeport, Conn.; Mrs. Jennie E. Hall, Friendship and Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond V. Root, Betty, Jean and Douglas Kendall, Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Colby Morton and Lorenzo Morton, Lincoln Park, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Smith and daughter Eleanor, East Braintree, Mass.; Mrs. Merle Piles and John D. Piles, Gorham; Mrs. Edna Turner, Waldoboro; Virgil Morton, Thomaston; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Morton, Mrs. Iva Wallace, Mrs. Millie Morton, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Stevens and Phyllis Stevens, Maurice Hall, Mrs. Lena Davis and Miss Nellie Davis, Friendship.

ANNIE R. WILLIAMS

Annie Rose Williams, daughter of Gilman Ulmer and Elizabeth Palmer Ulmer deceased and widow of the late Maynard S. Williams, formerly of this city, died suddenly Aug. 31 at Portland.

During her residence in this city Mrs. Williams was actively interested in church and club work, enthusiasms which she carried forward in Belmont, Mass., where she later lived for several years, endeavoring herself to the community through the gracious expression of a vivid personality. She was instrumental in bringing about the building of the parish house of the Payson Park Church in Belmont of which she was a charter member.

A kind neighbor, a devoted wife, an understanding mother, a homemaker, who had the rare gift of creating beauty in everything she touched, her memory will be cherished.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Seth B. Carkin of New York city and Mrs. Gladys W. Stow of Portland; three grandchildren, Mary Williams Carkin and Janice Williams Carkin of Burlington, Vermont; and Robert Marvin Stow of San Francisco, California.

CHEAP COMMODITY

Water Is Inexpensive Yet It Is Delivered Where It Is Wanted

Water is the cheapest commodity in the United States. In most cities one cent will buy several hundred pounds of water, delivered right into the house as wanted, points out the American Institute of Sanitation.

"Because water is so inexpensive, many persons do not realize that the water that comes out of the faucet may have been subjected to several processes to make it safe and palatable. Comparatively few municipal water supplies are free from pollution and contamination. For that reason most cities chlorinate the water to remove disease germs that may possibly lurk in it. Cities which depend upon turbid rivers as the Mississippi, must allow the sediment to settle out. Often the water must be treated to precipitate out the organic matter that is objectionable. Many water supplies are passed through sand filters which are aids in clarifying and purifying the water. In recent years a growing number of cities are softening the water, thus making the tasks of housewives easier. And finally, hundreds of cities are removing undesirable tastes and odors, common to most water supplies, thus making the water taste better and the family wash smell better after rinsing.

Up until a few years ago many cities were unable to remove the obnoxious tastes and odors caused either by substance given off by minute plants growing in the water, or by trade wastes discharged into rivers and lakes by industrial plants," continues the institute. "But now that problem has been solved. A remarkable substance has been developed known as activated carbon, which effectively removes all tastes and odors from water supplies. The substance is 100 times as powerful as charcoal. It is insoluble and does not mix with the water. And it is inexpensive to use. One pound of activated carbon, costing only a few cents will ordinarily remove the tastes and odors from 100,000 gallons of water. Hundreds of cities are now able to provide their citizens with sweet and palatable water the year around at a cost of only about three cents per capita."

Pure Water Not Always Palatable
The purity of water cannot be determined by testing or smelling, for dangerous bacteria are odorless and can be discovered only with a microscope. What gives off tastes and bad odors to city water supplies are microscopic plants which grow in virtually all waters. When present in large numbers in the river, lake or other source of water, they impart grassy, fishy, oily or other odors to the water, making it unpalatable. Nearly every city is bothered at some time with such disagreeable taste developing in its water.

With advancing living standards cities are paying more attention to delivering water to their taxpayer customers which is not only pure and clear, but also sweet and palatable. The widespread use of chlorine to sterilize public water supplies has reduced infection from that source to a minimum. Medical experts say that 50,000 lives are saved from typhoid annually and that the disease may finally disappear. Having conquered the problem of safety, in recent years waterworks authorities are improving the quality of their product. Many cities formerly noted for their bad water now have a supply that ranks with the best in palatability.

Just as chlorine has enabled waterworks officials to deliver safe water, a new purifier, activated carbon, empowers them to keep their water supply sweet and palatable under all conditions. Although introduced less than a decade ago, more than 1,000 cities are using activated carbon. The material does not dissolve in the water or add anything to it, but acts as a sponge in soaking up the off-flavors given off by the minute plants. One pound of the remarkable substance will remove the tastes and odors from about 100,000 gallons of water, and the cost of treating water with activated carbon averages only about three cents per person per year.

"MONEY WASTED"

The Poultry Experts Express Their Opinion of Some Drug Products

The following is quoted from an article prepared by Dr. H. E. Moskey "An efficient poultryman naturally wants his poultry to be healthy. This desire, when not combined with a proper knowledge of what constitutes a reliable treatment or cure for certain poultry diseases, has led him to spend much hard-earned money for remedies of no value whatever in the treatment of poultry diseases.

"The Food and Drugs Act fully recognizes the right of manufacturers of honestly labeled preparations to do business. There are many such preparations on the market and many manufacturers who are earnestly seeking literally to comply with the law.

"The sale of drug remedies so-called, recommended for white diarrhea of chicks, (pullorum disease), has been prevalent in the past. Many products of this nature have been found to be labeled as intestinal antiseptics. . . . Bacteriological tests of such articles, conducted by the Food and Drug Administration, have shown definitely that the products have no antiseptic action in the presence of serum or organic matter. Considering the length of the intestinal tract and the dilution of the small amount of medicament with the intestinal contents it is very doubtful if there is any such thing as an intestinal antiseptic. We have no scientifically supported information indicating that there is any justification for a manufacturer's making claims for intestinal antiseptics.

"Large numbers of antiseptics, germicides, or disinfectants recommended for use in the drinking water and labeled for the control and treatment of poultry diseases have appeared on the market. Products of this nature are useful only in preventing drinking water from spreading disease from one bird to another and then only as long as the water is kept disinfected.

"There is another class of drug products designed to be taken internally or inhaled as respiratory antiseptics, or germicides, for the treatment of diseases of the respiratory tract. Most of the chemicals known to have antiseptic or germicidal properties, when tested bacteriologically in test tubes, are easily rendered inert in the presence of organic matter such as saliva, digestive material and serum. Considering the difficulty of reaching the organisms deeply imbedded in the tissue, without doing considerable damage to the tissue, it is not believed possible for any drug product to be efficacious in this respect.

"The farmer has, within recent years, learned much about the destructive forces of intestinal parasites of livestock and poultry. Many manufacturers have, therefore, extensively advertised remedies of every description for the control of intestinal worms. There is no drug or mixture of drugs known to veterinary parasitologists at this time which can be depended upon to expel all types of worms which may infest poultry and other animals.

"When worms, or segments of tape-worms, are passed in the droppings after the animal has been treated, the average person believes that the drug product used is a good worm expeller. Upon critical tests, however, when the animals have been killed several days after treatment and carefully examined large numbers of worms and heads of tape-worms (which were not expelled by the use of the drug) frequently have been found.

"In this connection attention is called to the limitations of the present Food and Drugs Act in that the present act gives the government no jurisdiction over unwarranted claims made in advertising material distributed separately from the article in interstate commerce. In most instances, poultrymen can be guided in the purchase of poultry remedies shipped in interstate commerce by relying upon the label claims and not upon the extravagant claims made in advertising material that is distributed separately.

"Any poultrymen who contemplate the purchase of any sort of medicines to be used in curing poultry diseases or as remedies for any poultry ailment may profit by writing to the Food and Drug Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture for information about the products they intend to purchase before they actually make purchases."

The magazine "Look" presents a brand new idea . . . A serial story told in pictures. The first story which began in the Aug. 17 issue, is entitled "Polly Chooses" and is written by Priscilla Wayne.

Among the stars:

Bette Davis: "Slacks for women are a greater modern convenience than the telephone."

Pat O'Brien: "Ultimately I'll judge myself by the woman my daughter becomes."

Joan Blondell: "I think a little common sense in choosing food is much better than following freak diets."

Beverly Roberts: "I don't believe in unsung heroes. I think any one possessing unique talents in any line also possesses the ability to bring it out."

Eva Le Gallienne playing "Hamlet" at Dennis, Summer Theatre . . . Her performance deemed by critics to be reasonable and appealing in spite of her makeup not being satisfactory and the lighting chronically ineffective.

Henry Fonda, screen star, is to be at the Shubert Theatre in Massachusetts, for two weeks, playing in "Blow Ye Winds" which will open Tuesday, Sept. 7. Do you recall Fonda's performance with Margaret Sullivan in Faith Baldwin's "The Moon Is Our Home?" If you can remember the funniest comedy you saw last year, that was it.

A certain critic, covering Noel Coward's newest book, said, "He is no master of English prose. He is probably nearer Walter Winchell than he is to Somerset Maugham." Which made W. W. burn all right, all right . . .

Whenever the First Lady calls at scout headquarters in Washington, a guard of honor forms . . . Mrs. Roosevelt both preaches and practices that women should be active in politics and social work. Into all fields her energy carries her.

One of the finest written stories I have read in a Great Age has just finished running in the Saturday Evening Post. It is entitled "Serenade For a Wealthy Widow" and is written by Richard Sherman, the author of "To Mary-Ann With Love." Just in case you've any back copies of the Saturday Post it began in the August 21st number and was concluded in the one following. You'd better not miss it . . . Especially if you're interested in Hollywood, its stars and their lives. And in "what makes the world go round" of course . . .

To struggling, ambitious, would-be writers, Julia Delmar is the most gracious professional in lending a helping hand. She not only replies to the letters she receives with astounding promptness, but writes personally in long-hand to those seeking advice in the writing field.

The wisest saying ever credited to man: "Three can keep a secret if (and this is important) two are dead."

A star is a window in heaven. Where angels' eyes peek through. Looking down upon us. And everything we do . . .

An attitude of a person least admired: One who apologizes for living. You see and I see at least one such person every day in someone's home or on the street. And then some people wonder why they never get ahead. Stop and consider: Are you one of these persons? If so, why not turn the leaf and stick up for yourself? I don't mean walk over people. I mean, rather, don't let people walk over you. Don't be used . . .

A year ago Margaret Tallchett was a society debutante in Dallas, Texas. In the eyes of the rest of the world, she was a nobody. Now, using a bit of ingenuity coupled with a stroke of luck, she possesses a contract from David Selznick and a promise to play Scarlett O'Hara in Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind." The girl is the envy of every actress in Hollywood.—John Velmar.

Community Club Notes

The Community Club held a successful meeting Friday night at the schoolhouse.

Under the supervision of Charles Salo and Maynard Brown, the work on the lawn has progressed rapidly the past two weeks. The plot has been seeded and the walk is nearing completion.

The playground equipment will be in place by the opening of school. Tickets on the quilt are being sold by the members and the award will be made on the night of the beano party which is being sponsored by the club at the schoolhouse Sept. 15. Sandwiches and coffee will be served.

The next meeting will be Sept. 10. Members or non-members are invited to attend.

THE SAUNTERER

"Venl, vidli!"

The day of our latest trip opened clear, no wind, so by getting under way early and using our auxiliary engine, we arrived at our destination, old Fort Sewall, Marblehead, in good season. Hundreds of others had also got underway early and were there ahead of us.

The flotilla of fine "J" yachts, Endeavor I and II (British) Ranger, Rainbow and Yankee lay at anchor in the harbor with their mains'ls up, and when they are hoisted on masts 165 feet long they are some sails. The only boat I ever owned had a sprit sail and the sprit was a nuisance. A Marconi rig is much better.

When I read in the paper an account like unto this: "Endeavor I shifted headsails, replacing a Genoa with a working quad and forestaysail," I said to myself, "All right!" There were the "Big Five" in sight—and scores of other boats big and little. U. S. Government boats, palatial yachts, sail and power, S.S. Steel Pier with a crowd of excursionists at $5 a ride, and the smaller craft by the hundred.

The big ones towed out, and when, at the mouth of the harbor, under the lighthouse tower on the Neck, one realized what a 165-foot mast really looked like. A race was scheduled to start at 11:45 but there was no wind.

Leaving our vantage point at the Fort, we moved back and upward to Fountain Park which gives a view over the lighthouse and the Neck to southward where the starting line was located in Boston Bay. To the north and east one could see to Gloucester if clear. The wind came up northeast, course to eastward, 12 miles, beat our run home 24 miles.

At noon, taking out time for lunch (out of the bag) I sat on the bench until 7 p. m., the finish, and then finished the lunch (out of the bag) and then "came awa hame," arriving in time for a tub and bed. It certainly was a perfect day, but I did not meet a person I knew during the entire time. My bench companion for the afternoon was a Marblehead man who had sailed the briny in square riggers, fore and afters, and yachts, and whose father had sailed in the Ship Red Jacket. I did not have to know the courses, marks on yachts, etc., but just left it to the pilot and watched the show.

It is the unexpected that happens. I never expected to sit on the bench at Marblehead and watch a yacht race with five of the largest racing yachts sailing, but I did. To write that it was a "red letter day" would express it mildly.

There will be four more races of the "J's" at Marblehead. I have seen No. 1 but do not expect to see the others. If the marine editor of The Courier-Gazette had been with me, he could possibly have written up the show in detail.—[Marine editing has become a lost art.—Ed.]

My pilot knew his Maline, Tenant's Harbor, Rockland, Calne and upriver ports to Bangor. A good man to have along. We could see the yachts most of the time beating to windward. Sometimes they were lost in the haze. Running back, we had a good view of the three leading boats, Ranger, Endeavor II and Yankee, and when we saw the spinnaker come down on the Ranger, my pilot looked at his watch and at the Endeavor II and said, "The Ranger wins this race by 10 minutes."

We were two miles from the finish line and could not see the boats at all, only the tops of their masts. Officially Ranger won by 9 minutes and 16 seconds, and I am telling the folks now that was a good guess by my pilot. It was a great race. I never expect to see its like again.

At WALDO THEATRE

MONDAY and TUESDAY, SEPT. 6 and 7

A GLORIOUS TORRENT OF DIFFERENT ENTERTAINMENT!

SO SELDOM are films produced that are so different that they start a new trend in motion pictures...Such films were "The Birth of a Nation", the first great spectacle drama... "The Jazz Singer", the first great venture into the realm of sound... Walter Wanger's "Trail of the Lonesome Pine", the first great Technicolor triumph.

And such a picture is "Walter Wanger's VOGUES OF 1938"... It's a completely unique production that combines a story rare in its dynamic pace and hilarious humor by Sam and Bella ("Boy Meets Girl") Spewack... grand stars, Warner Baxter and Joan Bennett, thrill you... dazzling entertainment by New York's night club favorites in a mad dusk-to-dawn romp... the most photographed beauties in the world... and TECHNICOLOR so natural and so gorgeous that it takes your breath away.

When you see it, you'll know why this theatre is so proud to present...

THE NANKOW PASS

The Embattled Gateway To China's Northwest — A Focal Point

Bitter conflict between Chinese and Japanese forces in the Nankow Pass, in the mountains northwest of Peiping, brought modern methods of warfare against man's most colossal fortification—the Great Wall of China.

"Nankow Pass is a 15-mile gorge spanned by the Great Wall, a dramatic spectacle for 2000 years," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "More important today at the Pass than the mighty ribbon of stone, however, is the Peiping-Suiyuan Railway, which winds through the break in the wall to link China proper with the unsurveyed wealth of the Mongolian northwest."

Focal Point of Railroad and Caravan Routes

"The railroad is the first one built by and for the Chinese themselves. Begun in 1905, it reached the frontier city of Kaigan four years later, pushed on to Suiyuan and finally to Paotowchen on the border of China's western deserts. From these cities caravan routes radiate fanwise through an area exceeding that of China proper, capable of funneling the products of Mongolian steppes and Tibetan valley fastness through the Nankow Pass into Peiping. Caravans of wool, bales of hides, bags of grain, and quantities of livestock on the hoof are transformed almost magically from superfluous natural resources into a nomadic chieftain's fortune by the trip down through Nankow Pass."

Rail transportation has not entirely superseded four-footed transport, for strings of two-humped camels still pick their way through the Pass over an ancient tortuous trail which the railway shortens with tunnels. Some of the most powerful locomotives in use in Asia are required for the steep grades in the Nankow Pass.

"Of the two passes northward from the flat plain which Peiping dominates, one leads into Japanese-controlled Manchukuo. Nankow is the one remaining key to the northwest, where its nearly unscratched and richest resources of iron and coal to be found in China."

"The Pass is a defile through rugged eroded almost treeless mountains. At the village of Chu-yung-Kwen the bordering cliffs are so close together that the route is spanned by a single-arched stone bridge connecting fortresses on either side. This bridge is called the 'Tower That Crosses the Street' and has been a landmark for seven centuries. Bearing inscriptions in six languages, it commemorates the ancient importance of the Nankow Pass as a highway of civilizations as well as commerce."

Within the past century, however, the more potent cultural influences have been reaching China by sea instead of by overland routes.

A Chinese Version of the Thermopylae Pass in Greece

"Six miles beyond the Pass the mountain walls draw together to form the Harp-playing Defile, named for the music of a mountain torrent now dried up."

"At the bottom of this 15-mile mountain staircase stands the village of Nankow, locally famous in peace for its permissiveness. But warfare brings reminders that the name means 'South Gate,' and that the Pass was once protected by five successive walls with their respective gates. The village is the starting point for pilgrimages northeastward to the mountain valley containing the famous Thirteen Tombs of Ming Emperors, with impressive avenue of colossal stone animal guardians."

"The Great Wall gives its best show near the top of the Nankow Pass. On either side it stretches out of sight, like the spiny backbone of a dragon whose humps make the mountains. With a base of huge granite blocks, its top is a brick-walled promenade 14 feet wide, punctuated by watch towers. This is the Inner Great Wall, a final line of defense within the Outer Wall just north of Kaigan. Nankow Pass, where Genghis Khan was fought off in 1215 A. D., is to China what the narrow defile of Thermopylae was to ancient Greece."

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yattaw and Frank Yattaw have returned to Mechanically, N. Y., after being guests the past week of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Yattaw.

Miss Peggy Yattaw has returned home after being employed for the past summer at the Samoset Hotel Rockland.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Yattaw had as visitors over Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Putansu and daughter of Clark Island, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Reynolds and family, Mr. and Mrs. Perley Black and family of St. George, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Black, Miss Myrtle Black, Ed. Robinson of Port Clyde, Lester Black of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Kelly of Bath and Miss Ann Horst of Somerville, Mass.

Miss Dorothy Yattaw was recent guest of Mrs. Lillian Dodge in Rockland.

Mr. Carl Gray of Omaha, Neb. and Cushing, who was guest speaker Thursday at the meeting of the Woman's Club took "Home" as subject. Using Bible references, she stressed the peace, love, and happiness which is needed in the home. She also pointed out the necessary duties of the housewife, in the career of home making, which she called the biggest career of woman. If home conditions were better she feels sure that world conditions of today would be improved. To the husbands, present—it was an open meeting—she illustrated ways by which they could make the duty of their wives more pleasant by remembering important anniversaries and dividing the pay check. "Only a woman can make a home," she said with emphasis. Mrs. Gray was introduced by Mrs. Grace Wyllie, chairman of the program committee. Mrs. Willis R. Vinal, president of the club, presented Mrs. Gray with a large and beautiful bouquet of gladioli, in behalf of the club. Roger Teague, popular tenor, sang pleasantly "The Old Refrain" (Kreiser). Mrs. Wyllie, his accompanist. The program committee appointed for the October meeting includes Mrs. Eleanor Barrett, Mrs. Nancy Clark, Mrs. Carrie Wyllie, Mrs. Evelyn Powers and Mrs. Flora McKellar.

Mrs. George Newbert, and guests Mrs. Glenn Reever and son, Gerald Reever of Beverly, Mass., recently enjoyed a motor trip to Lakewood,

GUARDIANS OF OUR COAST

What our lightkeepers and coast guardsmen are doing to protect coastwise shipping by day and by night. The day's news from many lonely outposts along Maine's waterfront.

Curtis Island

During the past season many visitors have arrived at the station, mostly to watch the yacht races, and some for lunches on the beach.

Mrs. Julia Ray and daughter Irma of Bangor made an annual visit of a few days recently.

Mrs. Nettie Foren of Portland recently spent a week with her brother, Keeper Reed.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Goodwin were recent visitors, motoring from Portland and bringing with them their grandchildren Donald Levi and Lillian May Mattson.

E. M. Reed arrived for the weekend and holiday.

Mrs. Reed attended the Educational Club meeting Friday at Mrs. Minnie Miles.

Patrick J. Peppalardo of Lawrence, Mass., is guest of E. M. Reed.

Portland Head

September comes sailing in through fog. We wonder what kind of weather is in store for us.

The yacht race is over, also the Louis-Farr fight. Of course we heard the fight over the radio but the decision did not seem quite fair.

Commander Donald B. MacMillan has returned from the Polar region and scientific expedition which started when he sailed June 24 from Gloucester, Mass., on the Gertrude L. Thebaud. Dr. MacMillan reports it one of the best of all his trips to the Arctic region.

William Hill and John Robinson were guests of Capt. McVane on his boat for an all day outing last Saturday. The boys report a wonderful time.

Robert Sterling, Jr., attended a picnic last Sunday at Sebago Lake with the crowd from Inness Photo Service of which he is a member.

Weekend guests of F. O. Hill and family were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Thomas and son Deane of Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. R. T. Sterling entertained as guest Tuesday and Wednesday, Miss Mary Toothaker of Brunswick.

In our letter of Aug. 14 we mentioned the death of retired carpenter Basil R. Lunt. Today we are extending our sympathy to the family of Lester B. Beal, another carpenter in the service, who died suddenly Sunday at his home in South Portland. Both men were well known on light stations and they entered into whatever fun was available at the points where they went. We have lost two friends in the deaths of Mr. Lunt and Mr. Beal.

Informing a Lady

Lady—So you are on a submarine. What do you do?

Sailor—Oh, I run forward, ma'am, and hold her nose when we want her to dive.

FAMILY REUNIONS

The Kaler family reunion will be held Sept. 12, at the home of Orren Black, Waldoboro. Picnic lunch. A welcome is extended to everyone.

Mrs. Earl R. Freeman, Sec. 106-108

Miss Alice Heller, was honor guest at a tea given Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Theodore Bird at her home on Summer street. Miss Heller, whose marriage to Charles Edward West, of Augusta, takes place the middle of this month, was "showered" with gifts of linen. The bidden guests were Mrs. Albert Elliot, Thomaston, Mrs. Charles Babb, Camden, Mrs. John Creighton, Ashburnham, Mass., Mrs. Joseph Doyle, Mrs. John Black, Miss Eleanor Bird, Mrs. R. C. Jewell, Miss Ruth Scarlett, Miss Virginia Snow and Miss Rose O'Neill.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Stone and daughter Janet motored to Cornish yesterday to spend the weekend-holiday with relatives.

Mrs. Walter C. Ladd was hostess to the Thursday Auction Club this week at the Damon farm in Warren, at picnic dinner and cards.

The Afghan Club motored to Jefferson for a picnic at the Jefferson Lookout, in place of a regular weekly meeting. The wonderful view from the tower and inspection of the station occupied the afternoon.

Wednesday proved a most memorable day for Mrs. Mattie Nutt who is slowly convalescing from a broken hip at Knox Hospital. It was her birthday anniversary and in celebration of the event there gathered at her hospital room all her children and grandchildren, bearing such tokens of love as one brings on such occasions, even to the all-essential gleaming birthday cake. By mail and messenger came greetings and gifts of remembrance from friends far and near. To this the Knox nurses added acts of thoughtfulness even beyond their always kindly habit.

A benefit bridge was given Wednesday night, by Miss Louise McIntosh, at the home of her brother, Charles McIntosh, Clarendon street, for St. Peter's Church. Five tables were in play, honors going to Mrs. Elmer Teel, Mrs. Herbert Kallach, Mrs. Henry Jordan, Miss Flora Savage, Miss Helen Stetson and Mrs. Harold Marshall.

Members of W.I.N. club were entertained at the Ma Belle Beauty Shop, Thursday night, with Miss Margaret Nutt as hostess. High scores went to Mrs. Vera French, Mrs. Florence Knowlton and Mrs. Phyllis Norton.

Miss Barbara Bodman is a patient in Knox Hospital, where she recently underwent a tonsil operation.

Ellis A. Mills and Charles Sundberg of New York are spending two weeks vacation with Mr. Mills' mother, Mrs. Frank Clark, Fulton street.

Mrs. Carl Christoffersen entertained at a dinner party Thursday night with Mrs. E. Carl Moran Jr. as honor guest.

A jolly party was given recently at the home of Mrs. Joseph Day by Miss Barbara Bodman and Miss Dorothy Black. Refreshments were served. The guests, Rose Athearn, Topsy Bird, Margaret Shute, Albert Barlow, Laura Sylvester, Sylvia Hayes, Ruth Packard, Lawrence Cole, Billy Bicknell, Gordon Burgess, Kent Glover and Clarence Peterson.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Brown and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. William Welch of Sharon, Mass., have returned from a motor trip to Saint John's, N. B. They visited relatives in St. Martin's, N. B.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice C. Bird and family of Winchester, Mass., are spending a few days at Spruce Head.

By invitation of John Cochran Chapter, the fall meeting of the Maine Daughters of the American Revolution will be held at Belfast Sept. 15, at 10.30 a. m., daylight time, in the First Church Federated. Meeting of the State Executive Board at 10 a. m. A chicken dinner will be served at noon in the Pryth House. Make reservations by Saturday, Sept. 11, with Miss Bertha Whitten, 24 Congress street, Belfast. Overnight reservations may be made with Miss Whitten. Five minutes will be allowed each State Officer and State Chairman to outline the work for the year. Year Books and Book Plates will be on sale. Consult your Chapter regent for further details.

MARRIED SIXTY YEARS

Rev. and Mrs. C. D. Crane Celebrating Anniversary Today In Milford, Conn.

Reverend and Mrs. Charles Dodd Crane are celebrating their 60th wedding anniversary today at the home of their daughter, Mrs. William F. Scholze, Jr., at New Milford, Conn.

Getting along in years, but hale and happy - awaiting that diamond wedding

The celebration will be a quiet informal, family affair, the relatives being too widely scattered to permit many to be present.

It was while a young pastor at Waterville that Mr. Crane met his future bride, daughter of Dr. H. H. Campbell, and nearly all of their married life has been spent in Maine, where Mr. Crane has been prominent in his own denomination, and as State President, and also Field Secretary, of the Maine Christian Endeavor Union.

A bountiful anniversary dinner will be served, after which letters will be read from Miss Fannie P. Crane of Hollywood, Calif., Mrs. Mary Stark of Waterville and Dr. George R. Campbell of Augusta the only one now living who were present at the wedding in 1877.

Mr. Crane will give from memory, James Whitcomb Riley's "An Old Sweetheart of Mine." Toward the close of the poem at the proper moment, Mrs. Crane appears as the "Living Presence" of the sweetheart of long ago, of whom the poet has been singing, and is greeted with "eagerness and rapture."

Relatives and friends had been requested by Mr. and Mrs. Crane to kindly postpone sending gifts until the 70th, or diamond anniversary, when perhaps diamonds will be cheaper than they are now.

Many cards of greeting and congratulation are being received.

Mrs. Eliza Cousins suffered a paralytic shock at her home on McLeod street last Saturday. She is being cared for by her daughter, Mrs. Abbie Odiam.

Mrs. David Rubenstein returned last night from New York, accompanied by her daughter, Helen, who arrived Tuesday on the Aquitania, after traveling in Europe for nine weeks.

Brooks Cousins of Northeast Harbor is in the city, called by the illness of his mother, Mrs. Eliza Cousins.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Russell returned today from a week's visit at Weld Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Buffum are spending the holiday weekend at Bethel Inn.

Mrs. Henry E. Edwards was hostess to a picnic supper party Thursday at her Ash Point cottage. Dr. and Mrs. Everett C. Herrick of Newton Andover Theological School were guests.

Mrs. Frank W. Fuller returned this morning from Newcastle where she has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wyman Foster, through the week.

Mrs. Rodney Weeks and son James have gone by motor to Detroit where James enters school. Mrs. Weeks is returning next week for the month.

Miss Charlotte Buffum and Mr. and Mrs. Albert T. Thurston are at the Hall cottage, Spruce Head, over the holiday. They will entertain a large picnic party Monday.

Among the many bookings for the holiday weekend and Labor Day celebration at the Poland Spring Hotel are Mr. and Mrs. H. Nelson McDougall and family, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Hay and Mr. and Mrs. John H. McLoon.

Miss Madeline Bird returns to her teaching duties in Trenton, N. J., High School Monday, motoring there.

Capt. George W. Snow arrived in Rockland early in the week from Miami for a month's stay with his family.

Mrs. Arthur S. Littlefield with Mrs. Mary Newell, Mrs. Jane Bird and Mrs. W. O. Fuller were luncheon guests Thursday at Poland Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wheaton and Miss Mildred Gillette of Lexington, Mass., are occupying a cottage at Holiday Beach for a week.

REALM OF MUSIC

by Gladys St. Clair Heistad

The winter radio season will soon be in full swing. Already the foremost broadcasting seasons have announced some of their most outstanding offerings. For example, we note from the Columbia System that the 1937-38 season of the "Ford Sunday Evening Hour" reopens its weekly broadcasts on Sept. 12, from 9 to 10. For the initial concert, Jose Iturbi, noted pianist-conductor, will direct the 75-piece orchestra and the chorus and John Charles Thomas has been chosen to be the first guest soloist as he was last year. Iturbi will conduct for the first eight weeks, then Eugene Ormandy will wield the baton for the next eight weeks, up to Dec. 26. Alexander Smallens and Fritz Reiner follow, with Iturbi and Ormandy closing the series next April and May.

The imposing list of guest artists who will follow Thomas on successive Sunday nights reads like a "Who's Who" of music. In their order of appearance these include:

Sept. 19: Amparo Iturbi, pianist. Sept. 26: Richard Crooks, tenor. Oct. 3: Kirsten Flagstad, soprano. Oct. 10: Luciezia Bori, soprano; Oct. 17: Lauritz Melchior, tenor; Oct. 24: Lotte Lehmann, soprano. Oct. 31: Bidu Sayao, soprano. Nov. 7: Jascha Heifetz, violinist. Without naming dates, the remaining artists will be: Betty Jaynes, soprano; Gladys Swarthout, mezzo-soprano; Lawrence Tibbett, baritone; Nino Martini, tenor; Hepzibah and Yehudi Menuhin, pianist and violinist; Ezio Pinza, baritone; Sigrid Onegin, contralto; Robert Cassadesu, pianist; Richard Crooks, tenor; Elizabeth Rethberg, soprano; Jascha Heifetz again; Melchior again; Flagstad again; Richard Bonelli, baritone; Jose Iturbi as pianist; Lily Pons, coloratura soprano; Nelson Eddy, baritone; and John Charles Thomas again.

It will be the fourth season for the Ford Sunday Evening Hour which last year was voted the "best musical program" on the air by the Women's National Radio Committee and awarded the blue ribbon in the nation-wide radio editors' polls conducted by the Scripps-Howard and Hearst newspapers.

Beginning on Wednesday, Sept. 29, and continuing weekly, the Chesterfield Hour (Columbia) will present a galaxy of stars chosen from the cream of vocal and instrumental artists of the world. Andre Kostelanetz will conduct the orchestra of more than 45 pieces. On the first broadcast will be John Charles Thomas, with Deems Taylor, music critic and composer, serving as commentator and master of ceremonies for the new series. The programs will be classical, in nature and emphasis will be placed on the performance of American works. A large chorus will be added to the program from time to time to supplement the musical activities of the guest stars and orchestra.

Artists signed for the series include Jose Iturbi Nino Martini, Elizabeth Rethberg, Albert Spalding (violin), Luciezia Bori, Bidu Sayao, Jascha Heifetz, Lotte Lehmann, Ezio Pinza, Kirsten Flagstad, Rose Bampton (soprano), Lily Pons.

Those who heard Ezra Rachlin, young American pianist, at the recent Rockport Town Hall concert, will be interested to learn that he scored a triumph in Portland City hall where he appeared as soloist during the Kotschmar Organ anniversary celebration last week. The reviewer said the pianist played with unusual brilliance and technique, and that in his final group, composed of Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in G sharp minor," Debussy's "Andaluzia," and Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12," he displayed marked interpretative ability. Recalled enthusiastically, Mr. Rachlin responded with "Diabolic Suggestion," a modern from the pen of Prokofiev.

It will be interesting to watch Mr. Rachlin's progress in the pianistic field. Hardly in his 20th year, he has already attracted wide attention by his great promise, and has also produced some composition of worth. This coming season he will make an European tour followed by an extensive American tour. The Curtis Institute has shown confidence in Mr. Rachlin's ability in many ways.

The Curtis String Quartet and the Trio Classico also won high acclaim in their Portland appearances.

Through the kind thought of Orlando Cole, cellist of the Curtis String Quartet, my husband and I were invited to the Camden Yacht Club Tuesday evening to hear the program given in conjunction with Ladies night of the combined Rotary Clubs of Belfast, Rockland and Camden. It was a great delight as well as a privilege. Few organizations can get together such a grand group of people as the Rotary Club,

There is such a fine fraternal spirit. This was manifest in its full form Tuesday night, with spirited singing led by Dr. Harold Jameson, witty remarks by Camden's president, Rev. Winfield Witham, and general good humor on all sides. Mrs. Mary Louise Curtis Bok, who was honor guest, offered brief but most charming remarks, the entire company rising to pay tribute to this gracious lady. I might add, too, that the attractive gowns of the feminine contingent added gay color to the scene.

Mr. Bok made it possible for the Curtis String Quartet to offer a group. The artists playing from an impromptu platform made by placing tables together were at their best in Haydn's Quartet in D Major, Opus 20, No. 4-Allegro di molto, Poco adagio con variazione, Menuetto alla ginevrina, Presto scherzoso; the Largo sostenuto movement of Smetana's Quartet "From My Life;" and arrangements of two English folk songs, "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes" and "Molly on the Shore." The Haydn Quartet is one of the great composer's happiest and brightest, even in the Adagio movement which shines in exquisite beauty as the variations revolve around the theme. That portion of the Smetana Quartet stands out as one of the finest bits of playing the Quartet has done this summer, and it was delightful to hear the familiar English folk songs—the former with its beautiful singing tones (can one forget that lovely passage with the viola carrying the air and the violins and cello softly supporting?), and the latter with its jolly, dancing rhythm and muted close—and do you know, "Molly on the Shore" is not the easiest thing to play. The Quartet had a most appreciative audience putting to rest the old belief many cling to that the stern business man has no place for good music in his program of life.

Another high light of the gathering was Wilbert Snow, giving readings from his own poems, which he interspersed with his own original and entertaining remarks. To make an impression, quoting his own words, Mr. Snow opened his readings with "Taking Away the Banking," said to be his best poem thus far and one that is found in leading anthologies. It is one of which we never tire. Following were "The Unknown Soldier," a trifle gruesome, "Country Dance" which is truly rural Maine, some children's poems written for his own five sons—"The Shark" in which the audience lustily joined with these words: "And under the place where he had no chin, The shark was a-tuckin' of his napkin in," and "The Giant and The Whale." There were others, too, speaking to us of Maine, Mr. Snow's native State which he loves with a real love.

A glimpse from one of Mr. Snow's poems—"made gooseflesh on my spirit stand." Isn't that grand? Fascinating me at the last Sunday's concert at the Captain Bell's Boat Barn was Mrs. Oakley, a talented artist, who, sitting next to me, drew thumbnail sketches of the Curtis String Quartet members and Felix Salmond who was collaborating on the program. The cleverest sketches, too—expression, posture, truly life bits. She did them so swiftly, so quietly, too. One of the Quartet members told me that Mrs. Oakley afterward combined them as the group, making a vivid picture of the players "in action."

I have to close on a sad note—I speak of the passing of Mrs. Mary Planagan who held in her heart a true love and appreciation of music. I first remember Mrs. Planagan as belonging to the Wight Philharmonic Society and attending the Maine Music Festivals—that was many years ago when her children were small. I remember I marveled at her courage and idealism and recall that I caught the feeling that these musical interludes made merry and light many a household task that fell to her. Mrs. Planagan always took a keen interest in music, especially that of the best type; always gave loyal support and interest to local musicians who were struggling to get somewhere. But wasn't her own life like music—rich and full and vibrant? A minor note now and then, to be sure, but who can recall that she saddened anyone during her living days? Always like rich music she showered happiness, goodness, sympathy and compassion on those around her. A brave woman, a gallant woman, a beautiful soul—it was a privilege to know her, and our lives have been enriched by having her in our midst.

THREE GREAT MASTERS

Barrere, Salzedo and Britt Names To Conjure With At Camden Concert

(By Gladys St. Clair Heistad)

Music devotees of this section of Maine whether resident or from the summer colonies, were privileged to sit at the feet of three great masters in music Wednesday night when Georges Barrere, Carlos Salzedo, and Horace Britt were presented at the Camden Opera House in joint recital for flute, harp and cello. There were unusual features. For example, the combination of flute, harp and cello is unusual, the program was extremely unhackneyed in content, and every number was imbued with artistry of the most exquisite nature. The quiet, yet gracious dignity of Barrere, Salzedo and Britt made its own appeal; one recognized at once that they are great artists, devoted to their art.

In view of the international renown the three artists justifiably enjoy, it was amazing that the Opera House was not packed to the doors. However, the enthusiasm and admiration of those present made up to some degree for the empty seats, far too many. The program was:

I. Trio-Sonata. Pietro Locatelli. Andante-Siciliano-Allegro. Pieces en concert. Jean-Philippe Rameau. La Timide-L'Indescrete-Tambourins. Barrere-Salzedo-Britt. II. Adagio and Allegro from Sonata No. 6, in A major. Luigi Boccherini. (with harp accompaniment). III. The Harmonious Blacksmith (Air with Variations). George Friedrich Handel. Iridescence. Carlos Salzedo. Idyllic Poem. Carlos Salzedo. Whirlwind. Carlos Salzedo. IV. Fantaisie. Georges Barrere. V. Prelude to Olf Boim. Breaking into the New Year. (by request—Carlos Salzedo). VI. Children's Corner. Claude Debussy. (Transcribed by Carlos Salzedo for harp, flute and cello, from the Piano Suite). Doctor Gradus ad Parnassum—Jumb's Lullaby—Serenade for the Doll. The Snow is Dancing—The Little Shepherd. Golliwog's Cake-walk. Barrere-Salzedo-Britt.

The program had no one high light—every number was a high light, a unique occurrence in itself. The Trio played as one, so perfect were shading, attack, nuances and tonal balance. Never once did any one instrument obtrude itself unduly. It may be said that their work embraces almost every phase of musicianship—flowing legato, sparkling staccato, admirable velocity, a sense of humor, delicacy of line, atmospheric color, sensitive interpretation. The opening selections demonstrated their amazing equipment in a noble manner.

The projection of the Rameau pieces was most happy and eloquent, and the Debussy Suite, expertly transcribed by Salzedo from the piano suite, presented pieces of fascinating contrast, with the delicacy of The Little Shepherd topped off with the fantastic and intriguing Golliwog's Cake-walk, a veritable picture of prancing grotesque figures of imagination. Recalled many times, one of their encores was a subtle arrangement of the beautiful Negro spiritual, "Deep River."

Britt, born of Belgian parents at Antwerp, had the benefit of a musical background furthered by advanced study, graduating from the Paris Conservatory with signal honors including the premier prix. He joined Salzedo and Britt in joint recitals in 1932, following brilliant solo appearances in many parts of the world. His playing displays great beauty of tone, free from forcing, and eloquent in shading. The Boccherini selection, brought forth from the days of the 1700's, was ideal with harp accompaniment, as were the encores of an oriental and atmospheric style.

Salzedo, a resident of Camden for the past seven years and one of the most distinguished figures in the music colony, is from the southern part of France. He too, is a product of the Paris Conservatory, a student in two major instruments, harp and piano, and carrying off highest honors in both, an unheard of record and one that has never been broken in the years which have elapsed. His musical gifts are many-sided, for he excels not only as a harpist, but as a pianist, composer, transcriber, and teacher. Wednesday's concert afforded the people of this part of Maine their first opportunity to hear Salzedo play, and it was an experience never to be forgotten. Excellent harpists have been heard in Camden before but their work, fine as it was, fades into insignificance when one hears Salzedo play. His grasp of technique tonal shading, and style are beyond expression. The Handel number was imbued with such flowing grace, his own compositions such gems of description. Called back over and over, the audience would not let him go until he had given three encores—

"Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," and two small bits from his own pen, a tantalizing glimpse and a lively march.

Barrere too, has had a notable career. Born in Bordeaux, France, he was graduated from the Paris Conservatory, still in his teens, having won the premier prix in flute. He has had outstanding success in his various appearances and associations, as soloist, teacher and composer. He made a distinct contribution to the music of this country when he founded the Barrere Little Symphony Orchestra, the first of its kind. His playing has ethereal beauty, yet does not lack body. In its scope, it is velvety, luscious, smooth, glowing, ingratiating, with remarkable tone control. His manner of projection has a gracious appeal in its ease. The Faure number showed to advantage his wide grasp of the flute and its technique, and recalled many times his encores continued to demonstrate his prowess.

It was a vivid experience to hear Salzedo in the role of pianist, although a glimpse of his talent in this line was given in his impeccable accompaniments for Barrere. Salzedo gave a remarkable rendition of his own compositions, extremely modern in structure. The former with its strong dissonances and warring harmonies left one rather bewildered, yet fascinated. The second number was one of the grandest bits of descriptive writing that could possibly be done. The burst of sound signalling the advent of the New York followed by the sound of chimes and ringing of bells—it was all there, and more.

In the audience which contained many representative musicians from Camden, Rockland and other adjacent towns as well as notable figures from the summer music colony, was noted Mrs. Calvin Coolidge who is visiting friends at Saturday Cove. While the concert is history now, the memory of it will linger long with those privileged to hear it, and the hope is strong to have the group back another summer. The proceeds will go for the benefit of Camden charities and the Knox County Alumni U. of M. Fund.

AUTO TRAGEDIES

Maine's Good Showing Last Month — Some Timely Advice

The month of August showed a remarkable increase in automobile fatalities in the State of Maine. Fifteen lives were saved over the same month last year when 29 human lives were snuffed out by automobiles.

To date exactly 100 lives have been taken on our streets and highways. People who, in all probability never dreamed of being killed in an automobile accident at the beginning of the year. Before this year is over many more lives are to be sacrificed. At the present time no one knows who it will be but the public should realize that unless they take caution while driving and use extreme care when they are walking on the highways, they may be the next victims.

Motorists are displaying a great deal more care when driving in the daytime, but night driving accidents have increased because of the fact that people are over-driving their headlights and taking undue risks at night. Figures show that 79 percent of the people killed in motor vehicle accidents this month were killed in the late afternoon and early evening hours. Thus, we see fatal accidents at the peak, the worst hours being between 4 p. m. and 8 p. m. Motorists should use great care during these hours to insure their safety and the safety of others.

In view of the fact that during the present month, vast numbers of our children will be returning to school, accident prevention measures are being taken to insure their safety. Cross-walks are being painted on the highways to allow the children to cross safely. Better safety rules and regulations regarding school buses carrying children have been formulated. Warning signs are also being placed near schools in order that motorists may be warned to slow down as they are about to pass a school building.

Teachers should inform their pupils of the dangers of unsafe practices as hitching rides, standing on the sides of automobiles, playing in roads, riding bicycles and the like in order that they may become safety conscious to the accident problem and refrain from placing themselves in a position whereby they may become the victims of "sudden death." The exceptionally fine work that has been done by the schoolboy patrols it is hoped will continue and do more good and I would urge that school boy patrols be set up in every school in the State of Maine, both in city and rural areas.

The general public believes that the most callous motorist would not claim the right to take chances with the lives of our little children, yet, attention must be drawn to the fact that 5000 little boys and girls of school age were killed in automobile accidents last year and one-half of the people killed during this past month in motor vehicle accidents here in the State of Maine were children of school age. This brutal fact must stab at the heart of every mother and father reading this column today. Now that children are going back to school, motorists should take every possible precaution when driving in school zones and obey "School Zone" laws, lest one of those innocent little lives be marked up against them.

RADIO MUSICAL TREATS

Five Famous Compositions To Be Heard Beginning Sunday

The world premieres of five musical works will be performed for the radio audience this month in a series of concerts beginning Sunday. The compositions are:

"Tryptich" written for soprano and strings by Vittorio Giannini. "Lucrice Suite" by Deems Taylor. "Movement For Strings," by Charles Naginski. "Unfoldment," by John Warren Erb. "Concerto For Piano and Orchestra," by Anis Fuleihan.

The works will be performed by an orchestra made up of men from the New York Philharmonic Symphony. The program will be sponsored by the Saratoga Springs authority of the State of New York, and will be played as part of the Saratoga Spa Music Festival. They will be broadcast over WPZ-NBC.

Giannini's "Tryptich" will be played at 5 p. m. Sunday. The compositions by Taylor, Naginski and Erb will be played at 9:30 p. m. Sept. 7 and at 10 o'clock Sept. 11. Fuleihan's work will be played with the composer at the piano.

Trees Are Scarce

It was great fun that Saturday morning along the upper shores of Lake Ontario, with the sun breaking through the clouds, and ample chance to drink in the scenery. We noted the absence of groves, woodlands and forests. The only trees which we saw lined the highways or furnished shade for the residences. I spoke of this feature to Mr. Olds. "If you had gone inland 100 miles you would have seen plenty of forests," he said.

Passing through Bowmanville we saw a cemetery which had many fine monuments, and gold leaf was liberally used. Apple orchards were scarce, and it was rare to see apples offered for sale on the wayside stands. Newtonville has an elaborate soldiers' monument. Peterborough is an industrial center.

Walk To The Left

The highways in Ontario are plainly marked, and it did me good to read a sign which said: "Walk to the left and face traffic." I have tried to stress that campaign for a number of years, but right here in Knox County there are many citizens who continue to disregard their own safety, and the rules of the road. I hope their families never have occasion to regret it.

At Port Hope, a town of 5000 population we were interested to see that the Lions Club was holding a street fair. This service club is evidently strong in Canada.

They have picnics up there to the northward and we saw one happy group thus engaged. A few rods away an overheated motorist was repairing a tire. That was not a picnic.

Marie Dressler's Birthplace

At Cobourg a Rotary carnival was in progress, but what especially caught my eye was a roadside sign which said: "Birthplace of Marie Dressler." The house is now occupied as a tea room—a place of much refinement. Not that we were hungry, but because we wanted to visit the house where my favorite motion picture comedienne first saw light of day, we entered and ordered a light repast.

Near our dining table stood a life-sized picture of the late actress. I looked with covetous eyes upon several souvenirs, but the proprietress and the waiter looked with suspicious eyes upon me, so the souvenirs are still there. We were shown through several rooms and would not have missed the visit for the world.

SAFETY OF CHILDREN

Parents Should Carefully Consider It With School Soon To Open

With school re-opening soon, parents should be prepared to give every consideration to the safety of their children, according to a statement issued recently by the Safety Educational Department of The Aetna Casualty and Surety Company.

After a summer of play and recreation, children in their formative years are apt to grow careless of the safety lessons learned from the previous school term, and each parent should do his part toward refreshing their minds and impressing them with the proper safety measures to be employed in crossing streets, using playground equipment, playing strenuous school games and other activities in which injuries or accidents are likely to occur.

It is pointed out by Aetna's Safety Educational Dept. that while most schools now have organized safety instruction for children, it is only through the proper co-operation of parents that such instruction can achieve its fullest benefit. "Safety lessons well learned during school years will not only help children to look out for themselves while attending school, but will also help them to safeguard against accidental injury in later life," this Department advises.

The imperative need for adequate safety instruction among school children is stressed by the following figures: Approximately 8500 school children between the ages of five and 14 lost their lives through accidents during the past year. Of this total, 18 percent of the accidents occurred within school buildings, 17 percent on school grounds, 7 percent on the way to or from school, and the remaining 58 percent elsewhere. Figures indicate that the most dangerous places within school buildings are vocational shops, stairways and corridors, and gymnasiums, while football is a leading cause of playground accidents.
