AS UPSHAW SEES IT

Georgia Statesman Thinks Justice Black Had Right To Join Klan

William D. Upshaw, former Congressman and candidate for President on the national Prohibition ticket in 1932, declared Saturday that Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black had a "right" to belong to the Ku Klux Klan.

Upshaw, who once represented the Atlanta, Ga., district in Congress, said in an interview that Justice Black "has as much right to join the secret Klan as U. S. Senator David I. Walsh (D-Mass.) has to belong to the secret order of the Knights of Columbus."

"I will say that it is nobody's business what secret lodge anybody belongs to so long as they are loyal American citizens."

Ex-Congressman Upshaw had visited Rockland on two occasions, speaking once in the Universalist Church. His fiery views on most subjects have been widely quoted throughout the country.

A Special Session

Legislature To Convene Oct. 26, Seeking New Money For Old Age Pensions

Gov. Lewis O. Barrows has set Oct. 26 the date he planned to call Maine legislators to the capital for a special session to consider ways and means of raising "new money" to continue old age pensions and to consider legislation relating to "economies in the cost of operation of state government."

The Chief Executive, who is the only one invested with the power to call the legislators into special session, said the purpose of reconvening the lawmakers was to provide for old age assistance, to "consider legislation relating to economies in the cost of operation of state government," and "to act upon any legislation to promote the welfare of the state."

The Governor's proclamation follows:

"Whereas, it appears advisable that the legislature of this state should meet in special session for the following purposes:

"To consider legislation relating to old age assistance and to provide revenue necessary therefor.

"To consider legislation relating to economies in the cost of operation of state government.

"To act upon any legislation to promote the welfare of the state.

"I, therefore, by virtue of the power vested in me as Governor, convene the legislature of this state, hereby requiring the Senators and representatives to assemble in their respective chambers at the capitol, at Augusta, on Tuesday, the twenty-sixth day of October, 1937, at three o'clock in the afternoon, in order to receive such communication as may then be made to them and to consider and determine on such measures as in their judgment will best promote the welfare of the state."

Asked if he planned to confer with legislative leaders in an effort to formulate a program for submission to the legislators before the group reconvened, the chief executive replied:

"I don't know yet."

Previously he had said he intended to call in several of the leaders for a conference on proposals for raising money for the continuance of old age assistance.

The Governor, however, indicated he had no definite program ready at present.

With no funds available for old age assistance, the Governor said, the final old age pension payments were made recently for the month of August. Approximately 3700 persons were on the eligible list for old age assistance. The federal government matched state funds used to pay pensions, and the pension to each averaged about $20 a month.

No more payments will be possible until "new money" has been raised for old age assistance, according to health and welfare commissioner George W. Leadbetter, who has charge of old age assistance in Maine.

After issuing his proclamation, the Governor said it had not been determined how much "new money" the legislature would be required to raise to continue old age pensions. Legislators last winter estimated $1,500,000 would be needed for old age assistance for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938 and $2,000,000 for the 1938 fiscal year, with $600,000 annually for education.

Although the proposed sales tax, enacted by the legislature last winter, also provided for the raising of funds to improve Maine's educational facilities, the Governor's proclamation tonight made no reference to the legislators being called into special session to enact legislation providing money for education.

Dr. Everett Flood

Retired Nerve Specialist, Long Prominent, Dies At His Friendship Home

Dr. Everett Flood, 82, widely known retired psychiatrist and nerve specialist died Saturday in his home near Friendship. He had retired 16 years ago after serving 23 years as superintendent of the Monson State Hospital for Epileptics at Palmer, Mass.

Prior to his work at Palmer, Dr. Flood had been superintendent of the hospital cottages for children at Baldwinville, Mass., 12 years, and assistant physician at the Worcester State Hospital for six years.

He was born at Clinton, Feb. 10, 1855, and received his A. B. degree from Colby College in 1879. He was graduated from Bowdoin Medical School in 1881 and received his A. M. degree at Colby two years later. He subsequently studied six months at the University College in London, England, and at the University of Berlin, Germany, and the Post Graduate School, New York.

Long prominent in medical circles and the treatment of nerve disorders, Dr. Flood was president of the Boston Society of Psychiatry and Neurology, the Hampden District Medical Society, and the National Society for the Study of Epileptics; vice president of the American Academy of Medicine; and a member of the American Medical Association, the American Psychiatric Association, the Massachusetts Medical Society, the New England Society of Psychiatry, and the Rhode Island Medical Society.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon.

Struck A Ledge

Striking on a ledge extending 200 or 300 feet from Rock Island, a mile off Stonington, Saturday afternoon, the handsome power yacht Sista, owned by a Bangor attorney and valued at several thousands of dollars, lay on her side under water at high tide, all efforts to pull her off during the afternoon having been in vain. It was reported that the craft had a hole in her side and is damaged considerably otherwise.

The Sista went into Stonington with a party of five men aboard for a deep sea fishing trip, and all got ashore without difficulty, as the sea was smooth at the time.

The Saturday sale of carnations, conducted by Ralph Ulmer Auxiliary, for the relief fund, was a decided success. A group of 10 girls from High School, did such efficient work, that the "sold out" sign was displayed at 11 a. m. To Mrs. Ruth Spear goes the credit of securing this able corps, while Mrs. Laura Ranlett was general chairman. Those assisting were Misses Vivian Johnson, Jeanette and Janet Withery, Barbara Seamon, Dorothy and Lucille Melvin, Madeline Munro, Beverly Harmon, Priscilla McAslin and Gilberta Moir.

Rockland Mayoralty Race

Son of Former Chief Executive Latest Entrant—Friends Boost E. F. Glover

A fourth candidate for the Rockland mayoralty nomination stepped into the picture yesterday in the per-

His hat is in the ring, and he doesn't mean political ring son of Albert C. Jones, whose father, the late Arnold H. Jones was the city's chief executive 30 years ago. Mr. Jones represents no particular clique, and says that his backing will come solely from those who wish to support him for personal reasons. If defeated he will have no regrets to offer, and will work loyally for the Republican candidate who does receive the nomination.

He is a past exalted ruler of Rockland Lodge, B.P.O.E. a past district deputy of that fraternity and a past president of the State Elks Association. He also belongs to the local Masonic bodies, and the Rockland Lions Club.

Mr. Jones is a resident of Ward 3. He is married and has one daughter, Miss Nathalie, who holds a government position in Washington.

Glover In Demand
It was learned yesterday that a strong effort is being made to draft Edward F. Glover, president of the W. H. Glover Co., as a candidate for the Republican nomination. Mr. Glover has been familiar with municipal affairs, and served with distinction in the City Government when it had a Common Council as well as a Board of Aldermen. Friends claim that his nomination would be very pleasing to business interests at a time when clear business judgment is vitally necessary.

A BAD EGG IS CYR

Biddeford Man, With Long Crime Record, Had His Hideout In Rockland

Henry Cyr of Biddeford who is said to have told the officers of that city that he stole a Buick car from C. W. Hopkins' garage in this city; also a Packard automobile in this city, is in custody at Biddeford where on Saturday he was closely questioned by Sheriff C. Earle Ludwick and Lieut. Leon P. Shepherd of the State Highway Police in Augusta.

The story of Cyr's arrest is thus told by the Biddeford Journal:

"Henry Cyr, a much sought after alleged forger and thief, and former State Prison inmate, who was captured Wednesday after shots from the revolver of Traffic Officer Richard Moore had halted his flight, was arraigned in municipal court Saturday morning on four counts, alleged breaking, entry and larceny. In each instance, following the reading of the warrant by Judge Lausier, Cyr pleaded guilty, probable cause was found, and he was ordered to recognize in the sum of $3,000 for his appearance at the January term of superior court."

Cyr also pleaded guilty to a warrant alleging that he obtained money by false pretenses from John B. Beauchemin local jeweler. Probable cause was found, and he was ordered to recognize in the sum of $3,000 for his appearance at the February term of superior court. At the Biddeford Motor Mart, the warrant alleges that he stole a DeSoto sedan valued at $965, after forcing an entrance to the building on Elm street. This car was later recovered in Springfield, Mass.

A LaSalle sedan, valued at $1,350, was taken from the Center garage, after entrance had been forced, according to the second warrant. This vehicle was later recovered in Hartford, Conn. A bankbook, fountain pens and miscellaneous articles were taken in the break at the Biddeford Box Co. according to listings in the warrant to which he pleaded guilty. In the break at the Morin pharmacy, a camera, valued at $15, and field glasses, valued at $5, and numerous other articles, were taken, according to police officials.

"During his conversations with members of the local police department, Cyr confessed to uttering and passing worthless checks drawn on Benoit-Dunn company, Ernest Drouin and Louis Gendron, police stated. He also admitted breaking into the garage of Lucien Huot on Main street, this city, and he confessed to committing four breaks at Sanford and two at Rockland, where he stole a Buick automobile, later recovered in this city and a Packard automobile, which police have no further record of. [This is believed to be the car stolen from Phil Thomas' garage on Park street].

"He admitted entering the Cutter Renewal Co. plant at Malden, Mass., and the harness shop of W. J. Hooper at East Hartford, Conn., a building in which he was once employed, the police stated today.

"With the arrest of Cyr, after a lengthy search by local police, the police blotter which lists all breaking and entering cases is wiped clean of such crimes. Police believe that he started on his present career of crime soon after he was released from serving a five-year sentence for automobile theft, early in May. He has been using the city of Rockland as a base to work from and as a hide-out, it was learned by local police officials today.

"Police said Cyr had a memorandum book in which he kept a detailed expense account of his travels from St. Petersburg to Rockland, hotel bills and all other incidental expenses of his trips being recorded.

"Cyr told a reporter that he was not sorry; that he had a good time while it lasted, and that this wouldn't change him any. He told police that he went past three officers busy directing traffic, walking close enough to touch some of them, with his hat pulled down on his face to cover identity.

"According to the police, Cyr informed Special Officer Oscar Cloutier last night after his arraignment, that it may be 40 years from now, but he would come back and shoot him. Cloutier made possible the capture of Cyr after seeing him on the Alfred road, summoning the officers from the police station to make the capture."

BEFORE THE SUPREME BENCH

Rockland Attorney Is Admitted To Practice There—He Praises Moran

Last Thursday at high noon Alan L. Bird of the Knox Bar was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States. A huge crowd was in attendance, not drawn, of course, by the Rockland man's advent, but with interest at its height.

Took oath before "The Nine Old Men"

In Justice Black's appearance on the Bench.

Leading impressiveness to the scene was the splendor of the $20,000,000 building which is devoted to the uses of the country's highest tribunal having the best equipped library in the United States.

Mr. Bird's admission to the Bar was moved by Dwight Taylor, representing the firm of Covington, Burlingame, Rublee, Achison & Shorb, which included in its membership Paul Shorb of Washington, D. C., who spends his summers in Martinsville, and who extended many courtesies to Mr. Bird on the occasion of his Washington visit.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, following the time-honored custom, asked one question of the attorney who had moved Mr. Bird's admission:

"You really believe he is qualified?"

Receiving an affirmative reply Mr. Bird was sworn in before the full bench, now facetiously alluded to by the press and public speakers as "The Nine Old Men."

During his stay in Washington Mr. Bird paid a visit to the office of former Congressman Edward C. Moran Jr.—now of the U. S. Maritime Commission—and was immediately impressed by the great volume of business which comes to the Rockland member's desk and the importance of the duties assigned to him. On the day of Mr. Bird's call Moran had scarcely left his desk for lunch when he was called back for a conference with Chairman Kennedy. The facilities of his office were placed at Mr. Bird's disposal, and a business contact was established which otherwise might have kept him in Washington a day or two longer. "I don't believe there are many persons here at home who appreciate Moran's prominence and influence in the National Capital," said Mr. Bird.

The Rockland man also visited the Court of Common Pleas in Philadelphia for the purpose of seeing Curtis Bok in action as a presiding justice. He was impressed with Justice Bok's dignity, impartiality and quick grasp of matters legal. Attorneys told Mr. Bird that if Justice Bok continues his career they believe he will be one of the ablest men on the bench.

He possesses the same artistic temperament as his mother, Mrs. Mary Louise Bok, and one of his first acts after being elevated to the bench was to have the court room refurnished and decorated, all of the expense being borne by him personally. The place is immaculate and the acoustic properties are excellent.

PRISON WAS SUMMER RESORT

So Charges Warden Welch Who Says That Convicts Came To Town On Sprees

Steps taken by the new administration of the Maine State Prison to "clamp down on about 25 privileged inmates, including three murderers, who had the run of the grounds and the town" and to "straighten out things generally" were divulged Saturday by Warden John H. Welch.

Welch said in an interview that "things have been straightened out here in the prison, there is absolutely no trouble now, everything is serene, and everybody is satisfied with the new setup."

E. P. Johnson, the retiring warden, had charged his ousting to "politics." Meanwhile in Augusta, Commissioner of Health and Welfare George W. Leadbetter, who has direct supervision of the prison, said his several visits to the institution indicated that "everything is going along very nicely."

"No more do we have those 25 privileged inmates, including three murderers who used to have the run of the prison grounds and also the run of the town and other places," Welch said.

"And no more do we have prisoners who used to defy guards, go swimming on hot summer afternoons in the Georges river as they left their work benches in droves, and then went out on spees outside the prison in the evening if they felt like it. In years past there was absolutely no discipline."

"But all of those former practices have been done away with now, and things have been straightened out."

"For instance, we know where every inmate is at all times. And at 5 o'clock each night every inmate, except the farm help of about 30 men, is securely locked in his cell and stays there behind locked doors until 6 o'clock the next morning. And all the kitchen help is included under this supervision, too."

Warden Welch said he had been informed by ministers and others that "the people of Thomaston were gratified because of the absence of inmates running up and down the streets at all times of day and night, feeling free now to leave their homes at night to visit neighbors without fear of being confronted by murderers."

"When I came down here to take over the duties of prison warden," Welch said, "I found out that many of the prisoners had had the run of the grounds and the town for considerable time, but all of that has been stopped.

"I also found out that one inmate a 'lifer', had been going to Rockland every Saturday night, using a State car to take his friends on a spree and returning to the prison late-in fact, whenever he felt like getting back. But, this too, happens no more. The prison was a regular summer resort."

"But all this has been corrected. In fact, things are running so smoothly now that we have found it possible to do away with the well-known old 'dog hole', which had been used for years in cases where extreme punishment was found necessary. There is no necessity for the 'dog hole' any more."

"In cases where extreme punishment is necessary, the law provides for solitary confinement, with only bread and water for the disobedient inmates for about 10 days. This form of punishment is still employed when necessary."

Warden Welch added, however, that the approximately 325 inmates "are still being treated as humans."

"But," he said, "they are being given to understand that they must obey the prison rules and regulations to the letter—and that is just what they are doing now."

Welch said he has a "personal interview" with every person who is sentenced to the prison, and maintains a "personal contact with each one."

The warden said the prison shops were "functioning 100 percent, and are way ahead on production, with much more activity here than before."

The gathering was featured by a candlelight procession in which the young pilgrims marched around the campus on Institution Hill, after which they presented a lecture to the school's new auditorium. Among those to receive this distinctive honor are noted Lina F. Carroll and S. Heien Paladino, of Miriam Rebekah Lodge of Rockland.

LUCIE F. WINSLOW

After an illness of only one week, but which had its origin in the development of an acute heart attack during the latter part of the summer, Miss Lucie F. Winslow died at her home on Claremont street Sunday afternoon. She had been a sufferer from physical afflictions over a period of years, but had steadfastly refused to consider herself an invalid, and pursued the even tenor of her busy career.

The funeral services will be held at the residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock, with Rev. J. Charles MacDonald as the officiating clergyman, and John M. Richardson, William J. Sullivan, Milton M. Griffin and Harry D. Phillips acting as bearers. The interment will be in Achorn cemetery.

The deceased was born in Rockland 75 years ago, daughter of David Winslow, a well known linerock superintendent; and Sarah (Benner) Winslow. She learned the millinery trade in local establishments, developing such exceptional skill that she was later employed as head milliner in shops in Concord, N. H., Spencer, Lowell and Worcester in Massachusetts. The offer of a similar position in Pasadena, Calif., carried with it an attractiveness which was not to be overlooked, and to the West Coast she went in 1920 for a stay of eight years, coming back to her home city to make her home with her brother Frank. Her life was one of self-effacement and self-sacrifice, her paramount desire being to add to the comfort and pleasure of others. To the younger members of the family, which numbered 14 children she was both a mother and a sister and the memory she leaves will not be dimmed by the passing years.

Bath Times: We read frequently of gangsters of today shooting police officers and say we wonder what the world is coming to. Yet it was a half century or so ago in Bath that a burglar, Daniel Wilkinson, was frightened while at night trying to force entrance to a Commercial street store and in his flight encountered a Broad and Front streets, near the present shoe store of William A. Fall, police officer William Lawrence and shot him down when the officer ordered him to halt. Wilkinson was later arrested, convicted of murdering the Bath policeman and was hanged at the State Prison in Thomaston being the last man legally hanged in Maine, capital punishment in the State having been abolished shortly after.

WHAT'S DOING AT THE BUILDING

The long looked forward to return engagement of the widely heralded W.P.A. Vaudeville troupe has been definitely set at next Tuesday night and the place, Community Building. The troupe will be greatly changed and enlarged since its appearance here last December. At that time it made an amazing hit and a far stronger cast is now to be seen. The hour is eight o'clock. Donald L. Kelsey is chairman of the affair and with his efficient committee is doing all possible to make the affair a huge success. Under arrangement whereby the proceeds go to the building a charge of 40 cents is made with student tickets at 25 cents. Those who saw the show before join with the writer in saying it is too good to miss.

A gift of a number of standard novels forms the nucleus of the book shelves destined to be a popular part of the reading-social rooms.

Turkey beans will be an important feature of Winslow-Holbrook Post's Armistice Day Ball at The Building, Nov. 11. Young's 11-piece orchestra is to provide music.

It is hoped that all groups young and old, who visit the tower room will see its possibilities for group gatherings, clubs, dances, social affairs, etc. The charge is very modest.

Word comes to the furnishing committee that a fourth pool table is to be donated this week. This table is in excellent condition.

The executive board meets tonight with a heavy schedule, completing its organization. The place Water Company office, time 7:15.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

AUTUMN SNAPSHOTTING

WE MAY sing of the flowers that bloom in the spring—tra-la—but a song cannot adequately describe the wonderful colorings that Mother Nature bestows upon the trees and shrubs in the fall. The woods are ablaze with color and new colorful fall flowers appear. Lakes, rivers, and the well known babbling brook seems to reflect these bright colors.

Now, let's consider the type of film to use for fall colors. For example, suppose you are taking a picture of a bed of fall flowers—some deep orange or red and others dark blue. Ordinary film, not the chrome type, would yield a print in which the brighter colored flowers would appear darker than the blue ones, though to the eye the orange and red flowers appeared lighter. It would not, in other words, give true color brightness values in black and white print. However, with what is known as panchromatic film the true tonal values in monochrome rendering will be obtained.

Renderings of color and cloud effects are further improved by the use of proper color filters with any type film, including the chrome and panchromatic.

A filter is a specially prepared disc of colored gelatine, glass, which is slipped over the camera lens. Its function is to hold back certain rays of light and let others pass through. Although there are several kinds, I believe the beginner who has never used a filter might choose

Remember, the word is "Welcome" at Community Building. Drop in any time 9 to 4.

The frost has done its work on the temporary planting utilized this summer to relieve the bareness of the exterior and next year a permanent program will be started under direction of the Rockland Garden Club.

The Farm Bureau folk have been busy at The Building planning exhibits and program for their annual meeting of Thursday.

The question is frequently asked "How is Community Building being run?" Answered simply it is thus: Community Building, Inc. composed of representatives of the old Y. M. C. A., groups and representatives of the municipality are in absolute control of the building, determining all policies, paying all bills and receiving all revenue. Mayor Thurston is president of this corporation and it operates through an executive board of eight members. The city has title to the property and maintains the plant as far as repairs, etc., are concerned. Co-operating with the Community Building, Inc. is the furnishing committee (Rockland Community and School Improvement Association) whose job is to equip the building, but having nothing whatever to do with its operation. These groups are interlocking and operate in close harmony, with the welfare of the building as a common object. It is the furnishing committee which runs Community Fair and as proof of its unselfish interest, the Fair committee has voted to allot the proceeds of the approaching Fair to the all-important purpose of keeping the building open.

A MATTER OF INCHES

Or Was It a Matter Of Refereeing Eyesight That Kept Rockland From Scoring

Featuring a spectacular passing attack that kept their adversaries at bay throughout the afternoon, the Indians of Oldtown High School squeezed out a 6 to 0 gridiron victory over Rockland High at Community Park Saturday afternoon before an exceptionally large gathering. The defeat was the fourth in succession suffered by the locals this season and came as a bitter disappointment to its many followers who were on hand expecting a Rockland victory, inasmuch as the visitors had not been too highly rated in schoolboy football circles this fall.

Victory came to the visitors by virtue of a completed forward pass that caught the locals napping late in the second period. With the ball in Oldtown's possession on the Rockland 32-yard line, fourth down and eight yards to go, Rockland apparently expected a punt, but Crocker, Oldtown left half back, after taking the ball from his center, faded back some 10 yards and fired a 25 yard pass to his left end Hamilton, who picked the leather out of the air and had little difficulty outracing the Rockland secondary to the goal-line.

Rockland missed a scoring opportunity in the first few minutes of play when Billings set up a potential touchdown with a 30 yard toss to Karl, the latter carrying 20 yards to the Oldtown 8-yard stripe. Rockland tried four smashes into the line but were stopped six inches from pay dirt, although many close observers were of the opinion that the locals had scored a touchdown. However, His Majesty the Referee, ruled "no," and no it was. Both teams threatened to score again in the final period, Rockland being stopped on the 11-yard line while Oldtown was halted on the 3-yard ribbon.

Spearheading the attack of the up-river outfit was a lad named Crocker, who possessed an ability to throw forward passes with remarkable accuracy. Hurling the leather to all corners of the field, the pitcher completed 10 out of 19 attempts for a better than 500 average. It was one of Crocker's passes to Spencer in the last quarter that gave Oldtown another scoring chance after the receiver had dashed some 50 yards up the field where he was run out of bounds deep in Rockland territory.

The spectators were somewhat mystified by the Rockland tactics when the locals continued to punt on the first down after they were a touchdown behind rather than attempt to get their offensive underway. The action was undoubtedly part of some well meaning strategy that failed to materialize, and as a result Rockland rooters were at loss to fathom the meaning of that type of play. Despite the mediocre showing of the locals there were a couple of bright spots from a Rockland viewpoint chief among them being the all around play of Billings, who, with a little blocking, should develop into a classy ball carrier. His defensive work along with that of Karl's was also impressive.

The summary:
Old Town—Collamore re, Stevens re, Thibodeau rf, Ouellette c, Stone lf, Cunningham, Abbott lg, Hamilton, King le, Nelson, Spencer qb, Fields rdb, Crocker lrb, Greenan, Buchard fb.

LINDBERGH'S ALLEGIANCE

Not To Become Citizen Of A Foreign Country, It Would Appear

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has accepted a five-year renewal of his commission in the Army Air Corps Reserve, quieting rumors that he planned to become a British subject. Such reports have been current, since he unexpectedly left the country with his wife and son, Jon, and took up his residence in England two years ago.

Army officers expressed the belief privately he would not have renewed his Air Corps tie if he intended changing his allegiance. Should he relinquish his American citizenship, his commission would terminate automatically, they said.

News Camera Previews 1938 New Car Features

LONGER, LOWER CARS with more pleasing streamlining appear to be the vogue for 1938. Flowing beauty lines, such as revealed in this new Nash, are featured by designers this year.

"AUTOMATIC DRIVING"—It's close to that with this new vacuum gear shifter on the dash, plus the automatic cruising gear in this 1938 Nash. A flick of the fingers shifts gears, and the cruising gear cuts in automatically above 40 miles an hour so the engine can "loaf" at high speeds. Beneath the instrument panel is the new conditioned air unit for winter driving.

FIRST CONDITIONED AIR AUTOS for winter driving make their bow. This compact unit—an introduction of Nash Motors Division of Nash-Kelvinator Corporation—purifies, warms and circulates the air in the car, ends chilling drafts and prevents window fogging, it is reported.

NEW MOTOR which is said to have many less parts and longer life and to deliver 10 per cent more power and 12 per cent more gas mileage is one of the big developments for 1938. The men behind the development of the new engine are Charles W. Nash (right), chairman of the board, Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, and George W. Mason, president.

"SEA LEGS"—Engineers took a tip from the Navy for this new feature. Giant skyliner type shock absorbers set at a scientific angle take up the "pitch" as well as the "roll," or side-sway as well as jolts and bumps. Increased riding comfort, easier steering and safer driving on curves result, it is said.

AT PARK THEATRE WEDNESDAY

"Your work's been pretty sloppy," or something to that effect, seems to be the gist of what the Coach (Minor Watson) is saying to his star player (Van Heflin, number 12) in this locker-room scene from RKO Radio's stirring football screen drama, "Saturday's Heroes." Marian Marsh shares featured honors with Van Heflin in the picture, which deals with the college's attitude toward professionalism in the ranks of its football squad.—adv.

THURSDAY

Naval aviators represent the highest type of trained stunt flyers in the world. In the opinion of Wallace Berry, who is co-starred with Clark Gable in "Hell Divers"

In the thrilling Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama of the air, Berry, himself a full licensed transport pilot, flew practically every type of ship and was present at every evolution in the great fleet maneuvers.

"These fellows do power dives, hurtling themselves downward, two miles in less than half a minute," says Berry. "They fly in formations, almost wing to wing and loop, wheel, dive, peel off, with the certainty of a precision instrument."

HONOLULU, TOO, HAD ITS SACRED GESE

Like Rome, Its "Honkers" Gave Warning of Danger.

Honolulu. — Ancient Hawaiians probably never heard of Rome. They were separated by half the distance around the world at a time when transportation and communication were confined to their own front yards, as it were. Yet history tells us that both had something in common—"Watch dog geese."

Every schoolboy remembers the story of how the sacred geese saved Rome at the time of the Gaul invasion in the year 388 B. C.

Even as the "divine" honkers in Jupiter's temple yard announced the approach of the barbarians, so Hawaiian geese warned their owners of the intrusion of strangers. In fact, these winged watch dogs of Hawaii were so adept at their trade that the islanders commonly employed them as sentinels.

Even today natives tell of how their ancestors domesticated the wild Hawaiian goose and kept them about their homes in the role of animated burglar alarms.

The Hawaiian goose, "nene," as the natives call it, is a rare and little known species of the United States and is rapidly vanishing. The nene's nearest relative is thought by some to be the Canadian goose which probably migrated from the islands years ago.

Recently the nene have become increasingly scarce. For the first time, a few weeks ago, the territorial government took steps in co-operation with various ranch owners, to preserve the rapidly vanishing bird by the setting aside of large ranch areas as breeding grounds.

Unless these plans prove successful the nene will be extinct within a few years, bird experts declare. If, however, the attempts meet with success, the nene will not become extinct and America will still have a rare species of goose whose past is one of unsolved mystery.

Tons of Dog License Tags

Used in New York State

Albany, N. Y.—Four tons of dog licenses and tags are being distributed among the city, town and county clerks of New York state by the state dog licensing bureau.

Besides tabbing every dog in the state, the bureau also serves as a "missing person" bureau for dogs.

Its success in restoring missing pets to their owners has established an interstate reputation for the bureau. Recently a pedigreed terrier, found injured in Detroit, was restored to its owner in Buffalo through the medium of the bureau.

One of the ace cases of the bureau concerns a dog found swimming in the Atlantic ocean off the Maine coast. The dog was identified and returned to its New York state owner.

Excepting the cities of New York and Buffalo, there are 407,000 tagged and identified dogs in the state. New York and Buffalo license their dogs independently.

Haskell Indians Design Mats for U. S. Building

Washington. — Gayly-colored rubber mats designed by Indians at Haskell Institute, of Lawrence, Kan., will adorn the nine entrances to the new Interior Department building.

The designs were chosen by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, from sixty-four submitted by students in five schools of the education division of the Indian service.

By coincidence, Ickes chose only designs of Haskell students, representing eight tribes—Sioux, Blackfeet, Chickasaw, Seneca, Cheyenne, Kickapoo, Cherokee and Potawatomi. The mats will be typical of the decorative art of those tribes.

Blacksmith and Spouse

Keep Abreast Progress

Hayward, Cal. — Edgar Hizer, local blacksmith, is one man who has never allowed modern progress or changes of conceptions to get the better of him. When the automobile began to replace the horse he became as good an auto repair mechanic as he was a horseshoer. When woman emancipated herself and took over all of men's jobs and professions, he took his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Hizer, into partnership with him. Now she can shoe a horse as well as repair an automobile and she can do both as well as he can.

Send False Teeth as Gift to Hospital

London.—Donations are thankfully received by hospitals, but sometimes they are very puzzling for the hospital.

One London hospital gratefully received twelve scrubbing brushes but not so thankfully acknowledged the receipt of one large brass bedstead and 250 chipped dinner plates.

University College hospital received a cruet of hair oil, now being erected in the children's ward, a sewing machine, haunch of venison, truckloads of firewood, camp beds and carcasses of frozen lamb from Australia.

Charing Cross hospital received old spectacles and false teeth.

"No," John replied, "but I will pay you much more if you leave me the way you got me."—London News.

KITCHEN AIDS

By Janet Houston

THERE'S a better way that's a better way of cooking tender young vegetables—those small succulent ones. The next time you find small beets in market, buy them. Peel and slice fairly thin and place in a saucepan with two tablespoons of butter and one-fourth to one-third cup hot water to a cup of beets, cover and adjust the burner of your modern gas range to simmer. The beets will cook gently to tenderness in 30 minutes. Should the beets be larger and coarser in texture, they will require from 35 to 40 minutes. This same method may be used for small young carrots.

Pep Up! Be Popular!

People with "go" are always the most popular. Yet the secret of abounding energy is often merely a matter of keeping regular. For tiredness, headaches, sleeplessness, loss of appetite, mental depression can all be caused by constipation.

Truly, proper elimination is all-important to your well-being. So if more than one day goes by without it, assist Nature. Use Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. This laxative is extremely mild. And Olive Tablets are marvelously effective because they stimulate the liver's secretion of bile without the discomfort of drastic, irritating drugs.

Let Olive Tablets help safeguard your welfare and pep. 15c, 30c and 60c at all druggists, everywhere.

HOLLYWOOD STAR-LITES

(By Chuck Cochard)

Hollywood—As I look back after 25 years in show business, I realize there have been some truly great moments—and my heart still skips a beat when I think of the first one.

I was a kid of 16. Discouraged, broke and hungry, I decided to make the first dollar in many weeks by appearing at Miner's Broadway Theatre on an amateur program. This really took nerve, because in those days a Bowery audience was more likely to holler, "Give 'im the hook," than to shout, "bravo."

I, too, am a spectator now as I watch young Edward Cantor step for the first time on a regular stage in 1908. His face was pinched to a tight green, his eyes fairly popped with fright.

Edward begged: "I'm going to give a few first hand impersonations of leading stars without makeup." Most of the actors he had never seen, but he had seen their impersonators.

Then followed several impersonations, topped by one of Julie McCree, a famous comedian of the day. This last bit of business brought the house down. There was a rumble of stamping feet, shrill whistling and a thin shower of coins that pelted the backdrop. Young Cantor has scored and was on his way.

I skip a few years to the next big moment—a thrill that can come to any man.

I had been courting Ida for many months, but had never known for sure how she felt about me. Finally, came the great day when I asked her to marry me, and she answered with "Oee, Eddie. I think you're the nicest fellow in all New York."

Believe me, it's tough to find a topper for that anywhere along the line.

Of course, there's one thing that follows close. It's the unequalled sensation when the doctor says, "Congratulations, young man—you're the father of a little girl." But after the third or fourth time that announcement becomes a habit, and as the song writer puts it, "The Thrill Is Gone."

The opening night of any Zeigfeld show always was something of a thrill because of its color, glamour and the roster of big name personalities out front.

Strangely enough, two of my outstanding thrills are associated with England and the British people. There was the time in 1935 when the Prince of Wales, now Duke of Windsor sent for me to entertain him one night during his stay on Long Island. I met the Prince and sang for him until the wee, sma' hours of the morning. Thrilled? I practically tingled, and you can mark this down as a highlight event in any man's life.

The other incident concerning England was when I arrived at the Victoria station on a visit to London. The station was literally packed with people. It was incredible that this tremendous crowd would gather to see a skinny guy with pop eyes who grew up on the sidewalks of New York. Maybe I'm going overboard with my confession when I tell you that tears streamed down my face as the cry from the mob went up, "Welcome, Eddie!"

Still another big moment was the time when a national radio survey announced that one out of every four people in the United States and Canada tuned to hear our broadcast—the largest listening audience on the air. Was I thrilled!

But now I come to the supreme thrill. It happened back in 1921 and concerns a man who was one of my greatest friends—Will Rogers. Will was one of the most beloved of all actors, as well as the most popular.

His fee to act as master of ceremonies for a single evening was $5000.

When he heard I was to be given a dinner by the Friar's Club, he toasted from California, "May I be the toast-master," and flew across country to attend.

Island Bowlers

Coach Heeza Heluva Blowhard Discusses the Prospects of the Skippers

A representative of The Courier-Gazette, puzzled by the apparent quietness and calm in the Vinalhaven bowling situation, took a day off one day last week and visited the tight little isle in search of authentic information as to the true state of affairs. After some search he was directed to the waterfront where he found Coach Blowhard busily engaged in "tarring his gear," the gear consisting of some 75 fathom pot warps the venerable Skipper expects to put into deep water soon.

On being queried as to the probable lineup and prospects of the famous "Skippers" bowling team, Coach Blowhard who has seen many a Noth Easter become a Sou' Wester, after taking a fresh quid of Gold Rope chewing tobacco opined—"Well, mister seein's you asked for it I'll give it to yer. As everybuddy knows, at the end of the season last year the Skippers warn't doin' so well, so Cap'n Doni Poole fore he went up to college this fall, as me to kinder take charge of he team till he was able to be back with 'em. And if I do say it as hadn't order, I think them Skippers is goin' to clean up the field this year same's rat poison cleans up a rat hole. Ye see, we have almost the same team as last year, with the exception of Cap'n Poole, but I understand Skipper "Skip" Arey is coming out of retirement and will be available for all the big games. If so, I don't see how those Ganders have got a chanst. Here Coach Blowhard squirted a dark stream into the tar kettle and put a little more lard on his hands. "Ye see, besides Skipper Skip there is Skipper Peterson, who has made rapid strides lately in bowling and being bowled. Why jest the other day he bowled himself for a ten strike up on the State road, and when he got up all he said was 'set 'em up on the other alley'."

"And we still got Skipper Drew, the P. M. who has licked so many stamps lately that he figgers he can lick the stuffin' out of any Gander they might put up agin him."

In course, the P. M. is summat like Babe Ruth in that he puts on some extra flesh in the winter time, but as soon as he gets down to work and has several good hot matches he will sweat those pounds off and should be in tip-top shape. Here the Coach took off his 'sow'ester and scratched his head. "In course, the P. M. ain't as young as he uster be, and he's got a touch of charley horse, and his blood pressure runs a little high, but just let him smell the tobacco smoke of battle, and he'll snap out of it all right."

At this point proceedings were held up while the Coach lighted his pipe, and blew a few whiffs of poison gas out in the direction of the harbor. "Bout the only unknown quantity I've got on this year's team is Skipper Erickson. He bein' young and flighty, there ain't no tellin' what he may take into his head to do. If he will buckle down an' tend ter business, he can make any of them Ganders step, but if he gits ter thinking of some skit he is going ter meet at the next Town hall dance, he's liable to bowl around 50 or forget to show up at all."

Suddenly the grizzled old coach slapped his olskin pants a thunderous slap and exclaimed, "Why, ol' my innards, if I didn't most ferget to say sumpin' about my Anchor Man 'Igger,' he continued, "we Skippers have got about the brainiest, capgiest, toughest and oldest anchor man now doin' bizness in this or any other bowling league. Gene Hall was doin' plain and fancy bowling when the most of these bowlers was in dummies. In course, his scores don't run as high as they might, but there is many a way for an anchor man to earn his salary besides averaging 90 or better. Sometimes a wise crack from Gene will strike home quicker than a strike on the alley. An' then agin, when it comes to some question of strategy of policy or play, say fer instance, jest where to hit a deadwood to make a spare, there is no one on whose judgment I would bank, quicker'n Gene's."

Here the coach cast a weather eye toward the southern horizon and continued, "Looks like it might soften up a bit." "Guess I'll go off board the good ship 'Tenpin' and pump out her bilges. I got a hundred pots to put into deep water tomorrow."

So saying Coach Blowhard jumped into his peapod and while resting on his oars preparatory to shoving off delivered his last oration.

"With Skipper Skip to carry the ball and Skipper Gene Hall the conversation and parteeer, our team will have a fine balance. With Skipper Peterson's new spinner and turnover play perfected we expect to gain many more yards and send the pins spinning in all directions. With Skipper Drew to carry the mails and Skipper Erickson the females we should have a team with the greatest sex appeal ever to step on the boards or before the footlights, and one that should kill off the Goose's Ganders as easily as spin a thread."

"You can tell them Ganders for me through the columns of The Courier-Gazette, that we consider we have a team as can't be licked this season. While we don't expect to win every game, we figger our artillery, heavy enough to win most of our battles. If we can't, I'll give up coaching the Skippers and go to diggin' claims for a living."

[Editor's note: At great expense and infinite patience this paper has secured an exclusive interview with Head Coach Blowhard Cauliflower of Punkin Ridge, Vinalhaven, who will enlighten the readers of this paper with the Ganders' side of the story, in an early issue. Coach Cauliflower was last year with Southwestern Phosphate Institute and for three years before that was associated with Spuds Preparatory School. If he has a successful year with the Ganders it is rumored he may land a fat contract with Cornhusk Classical.]

AID TO RELIEF OF PSORIASIS SYMPTOMS

The itching and irritation of psoriasis is readily relieved by Resinol Ointment, an old formula containing ingredients well known to physicians for their effectiveness.

To get best results, wash off the scales with a pure, mild soap. Resinol Soap is gently medicated and free from excess alkali. Use it with warm water, then rinse and pat dry.

Spread Resinol Ointment evenly over the surface, letting it remain for several hours during the day and over night. Note how quickly its oily base enables the Resinol medication to soothe the angry skin.

Even when the rash begins to fade, do not stop using Resinol too soon. The eruptions of psoriasis have a tendency to recur. Therefore, continue Resinol applications as long as there is any trace of irritation.

Mobilize Now for Wildlife Restoration Week

(Field & Stream, Harris & Bang and James Loraood Photos)

Danger of extinction facing America's wildlife will be emphasized during the first National Wildlife Restoration Week, announced to start March 20th. These pictures show:

(1) Hundreds of thousands of animals perishing in Midwest drought. (2) Bear cub. (3) Scene in Erskine Lakes Preserve, New Jersey. (4) A fine fellow, this deer. (5) Ducks on wing. (Inset) Frederick F. Jordan, Director, National Wildlife Restoration Week. (6) Salmon leaping falls. Organization is now under way.

Mobilization of millions of Americans under the banner of wildlife restoration has begun, and their unity of interests will be demonstrated in the first National Wildlife Restoration Week, which has been set to start March 20th.

Program Has Wide Appeal
Every man, woman and child who loves an animal, a bird, a tree, a flower or a stream will be found in the ranks of this dramatic movement to bring out the peril that is facing the great outdoors.

The wisest of old men, who scatter bread crumbs to the birds on a wintry morning in New York's last refuge for wildlife—Central Park—will enlist in this legion of nature lovers.

So will the farmer whose crops have been protected by insect-destroying birds, or who has seen the havoc created by dust bowls and soil erosion.

The fisherman, who has gone to his favorite river or lake and discovered that pollution had killed off his bass or trout, will be on hand to do his part.

So, too, will the hunter from farmland or metropolis who has gone into the woods and discovered the forests had been decimated, the game driven away.

Women Will Give Support

Members of the women's club garden clubs, ardent devotees of wildlife who have banded to save the rich foliage of the countryside, will be found taking an active interest.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Isaac Walton

League and hunting and fishing clubs all have pledged their support.

The youth of America will not neglect its share, for upon the school children, the Boy and Girl Scouts, and the 4-H clubs rests a great measure of the responsibility of preserving wildlife for future generations.

The strength of the American Legion—composed of the heroes of 1917-18—was thrown firmly behind wildlife restoration and this new program at its great National Convention held in New York.

Behind the mobilization of all wildlife forces for National Wildlife Week is Frederick F. Jordan, conservationist and economist who originated the plan for the observance and who is directing

Calls for Volunteers

In an appeal to wildlife lovers, Mr. Jordan said: "We need volunteers. We need women and men who will take up arms for this cause that has so long been neglected. We must fight against stream pollution, forest destruction, dust bowls, erosion and those other natural elements which are killing off our wildlife. To accomplish these aims, wildlife lovers must show their strength, their unity during 'Wildlife Week.'"

CREOLES TELL HOW DIXIE WAS NAMED

Have Their Own Version of Disputed Origin.

New Orleans, La.—Philologists are still trying to trace the origin of the name Dixie. They have gathered much data on it and come to all very confusing, but the New Orleans Creole knows where it originated and he will tell you all about it and even show you the building in the Vieux Carre where Dixie was born.

Many explanations have been offered. One is that a man named Dixey owned some slaves on Manhattan island and due to northern sentiment was forced to bring his slaves south. The negroes grew homesick and pleaded with their master to carry them back to Dixey's land.

Another explanation is that Dixie is derived from the name of "Dixon" of the engineering firm of Mason & Dixon that ran the famous line known all over the world. But button-hole an old French Creole some day in the crumbling Latin quarter and over his demi-tasse and cognac he'll tell the real story.

Old Building as Symbol.

He'll take you out on the "banquette" (sidewalk) and point to its birthplace—a magnificent looking building at the corner of Blue Royal and Rue d'Iberville. The edifice isn't in such fine shape now. It's crumbling and time-worn, but it reflects a dignity of bygone days.

"Mon ami," you will be told "the story goes back to a century ago when Nouvelle Orleans was third largest city in the union and the edifice housed the prosperous Banque des Citoyens de la Louisiane—the Citizens bank."

At the time of the Creole's story, bank notes were much in disfavor among frontiersmen and cattle drovers who came down on barges with their furs to New Orleans. Because of the fact that counterfeiting was at its height, banks in different states discounted other banks' notes because of the risk taken, and the drover or trapper lost money.

The Citizens bank suffered less than others because of the fact that it employed a teller who was an expert at catching "phony" notes. Steamboat men would bring their freight bills in and rivermen would bring in their receipts. The Citizens teller would pay them off in bright green notes which had the word "dix" (ten, in French) printed boldly across the entire length of the bill.

"Dixie" Paper Was Tops.

Most of this money was taken north and out to the frontier, and little of it ever was counterfeited. The frontiersmen didn't have to worry about the fact that perhaps when he got back up the river the Citizens bank would have closed its doors and his greenbacks would be only valuable as wall paper. "Dixie" paper was tops and at a premium. To show a man that you were in earnest was to slap a handful of the notes on the tables and say "I'll bet you 10 Dixies." That was showing real money.

Frequently, in the Creole's grand pere's day, the rivermen were heard saying: "I'm going down the river for some Dixies," or "These cows will bring 50 Dixies," or else, "I can't pronounce this French word Dix, but I mean the Dixie bank."

As a result, the phrase "Dixie Land" soon began to apply to all the territory from which the Dixie notes came and the name was confused with the name of the line which designated the South and many believed that it was a corruption of the name Dixie.

"Non, non mon ami, jamais dans la vie—no, my friend, never on your life," says our proud Creole, "the word Dixie belongs to La Rue Royale and the Vieux Carre."

Blind in Ontario School Read Nights While in Bed

Brantford, Ont.—Without the knowledge of school officials, children at the Ontario school for the blind here sometimes read in bed at night a book they have slipped in with them, Principal H. J. Vallentyne said recently.

They read with their fingers the raised Braille type, and if it is chilly they simply pull the covers up over their hands and the book, and continue with the story.

Because they read only Braille type, there are no "Dixie" books or other "pulp" books for them to read. Since it costs so much to print them, all Braille books are those "worth reading" and for that reason officials wink at the children's custom of taking books to bed with them.

Flaws in Yarn Shown by Use of Polarized Light

Cambridge, Mass.—Extensive research by Prof. Edward R. Schwarz, head of the textile laboratory at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has shown that weaknesses and flaws in spinning yarn can be discovered by tiny rainbows caused by polarized light.

From these rainbows, or some of these shades of the same color, it is possible to determine the age and to discover imperfections in the yarn.

It is possible to tell positively the exact age of the cotton when picked in the fields. Cotton picked before it is "ripe," according to Schwarz, is useless for weaving because of its weakness.

Mrs. F. G. Olson has German measles.

Miss Orpha Killarner was at home from Lewiston to attend the funeral of her uncle Leland Killarner, Sunday.

Same cold weather the past week thermometer run low and ice froze several nights.

Automobile Color Preference a Matter of Geography

Another indication of how thoroughly every phase of the automobile business must be analyzed is shown in the posting of "color preference" on this large scale map of the United States. The entire country is divided into seven zones or groups of states. Every week reports of customer preference for various colors of cars are posted, so that trends may be seen at a glance. Strangely enough, these trends do not vary greatly by season, but they do vary by geographical location. Black is by far the preferred color in the eastern and southeastern sections of the country, but the far west prefers the lighter grays, browns, greens and blues. In the photograph two men of the General Motors and Color Section are posting color preference reports from 47 Chevrolet sales zones throughout the country.

Checking Woodcock

Uncle Sam's Men Trying To Ascertain If a Closed Season Is Necessary

An investigation of woodcock population in the states where these tiny game birds are most abundant, to determine whether or not a closed season is necessary, is underway. It was revealed Thursday by H. S. Peters, member of the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey who is checking the status of the birds in Maine.

Requests for a closed season have been made by conservationists and a few bird hunters. Peters stated, adding that no change was made this year because the Biological Bureau did not possess sufficient facts on which to base an intelligent opinion of the woodcock situation.

The Federal man has already checked the population of the birds in Pennsylvania, New York, Vermont and New Hampshire, and plans to spend a week in Maine talking with hunters, wardens and others who are in a position to observe the number of woodcock in this State and the apparent trend in population.

From Maine Peters will go to Ohio and then to New Jersey. During the winter he expects to continue the investigation in Louisiana and Alabama, the two states that have the heaviest concentration in the South.

Queried as to the source of the requests for a closed season, the Biological Survey man said they had come from every section where the birds were found but that they had not found an alarming shortage to cause the bureau to invoke a closed season without conducting its own investigation.

In his investigations thus far, covering four states, Peters said he had not found an alarming shortage of birds. Those with whom he had talked seemed to feel that if there was a decrease it was slight, he reported.

The Biological Survey he admitted, knew very little about the status of woodcock in this country. The bureau's efforts in the past, he said, had been devoted largely to increasing the waterfowl population, and the woodcock, although a migratory bird under the control of the survey, had been neglected.

The Federal man said he also recognized the difficulty in getting an accurate picture of the woodcock population since it was necessary to depend almost entirely on the experience and memories of bird hunters. A check from personal observation was out of the question, he admitted, since the birds are found over such a wide area.

Many other conditions enter into the problem, also. Flights may be early or late, depending on weather. Native birds may be concentrated or scattered and hunters may not get accurate checks on the population except in a few of their favorite covers.

Peters expressed himself as vitally interested in whether the heaviest kill of woodcock consisted of native or flight birds and what the flight movements had been in Maine during past years. These, he said, would play an important part in the decision regarding a shooting season next year.

His investigation was not connected with the research work done in Maine last year by Oustav A. Swanson, University of Maine biologist, but Peters said he hoped that Swanson's work would prove of some value in the Maine situation. The present investigation is concerned only with population and not with habits, food requirements and other studies in which the former U. of M. man specialized.

Swanson's work threw considerable light on the status of the species in Maine and his report at the end of the first year indicated that the birds had held their own in Maine during the past several years. He attributed this to the fact that relatively few hunters are interested in woodcock shooting and also because there were thousands of isolated covers in the State where the birds were never disturbed.

Since Maine has no system of keeping records of the bird kill each year the annual bag is not known. It has been estimated, however, that it runs close to 20,000 a year. Pennsylvania has reported from 27,000 to 46,000 woodcock killed annually for the past six years. New York kills about 18,000 and Wisconsin approximately 4,000.

Scientific Family Gains Boy Recruit

Dr. Charles W. Brabbe, former professor of heating and air conditioning at the University of Berlin-Charlottenburg, with the Thermal Boy which he designed to show that you cool to heat for the new showrooms of 14 companies of American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation.

COMPLETING a family of scientific models, the world-famous Dresden man and the Glass Woman have now been supplemented by the Thermal Boy who has just been installed in the world's largest showroom of building equipment recently opened at 40 West 40th Street in New York City by 14 companies of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation.

Designed by Dr. Charles W. Brabbe, former professor of heating and air conditioning at the University of Berlin-Charlottenburg, the boy, a life-size model, demonstrates the little known fact that it is impossible to supply heat externally to the human body.

Through flashing lights, rushing air currents, and changes in the appearance of the boy himself, the elaborate heat mechanism of the human body upon which life itself depends is demonstrated.

Operated by the spectator, the boy travels through a complete cycle showing how heat is supplied to the body only internally through the combustion of food and demonstrating how to get rid of this heat on the hottest days.

Even when the seasons change and the coldest winter approaches, the body must lose heat, and artificial heating merely keeps it from losing too much heat to the air and surrounding objects. He warns that heat can be lost in more than one way and even the most exact regulation of air temperature alone will not keep a person comfortable.

A human being, the boy shows, loses heat to cooler air and is uncomfortable because he cannot lose it to warmer air, but at the same time, a mysterious action is going on where heat is lost by radiation or other waves, similar to the ether waves of radio, and science is just beginning to discover the importance of this second action.

A minimum of 400 heat units must be lost every hour to maintain the body temperature of 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, and when the first two methods fail, science utilizes a safety valve in the form of perspiration which draws heat from the body as it evaporates. In the same way that water takes heat from a stove to boil, it is explained.

The new science of conditioning, it is demonstrated, provides for a heat balance both winter and summer by controlling the temperature of surrounding air, the capacity of that air to absorb evaporated moisture, and the amount of heat that the radiations can carry through the ether to surrounding objects, supplying counter radiations when the loss becomes too great.

BEAR TALES FROM MAINE

Strange tales come from the Maine woods. Bears figure in many of them. There was the story of the bear that caught turtles, climbed a mountain, and threw the turtles over a cliff to break the shells. That was fiction, but truth about the bears, if not stranger than fiction, has interest to rival it.

Latest of the stories told as true is that from Kennebec Lake. There a bear invaded the storehouse of the camp of a New York lawyer, and took from a refrigerator a sixty-pound loin of beef and several pounds of bacon, leaving untouched a string of sausages. Twice before bears have invaded the storehouse. The Maine bears are apparently inveterate thieves when given the chance. Maine newspapers may yet contain advertisements of bear-proof refrigerators.

But the Maine bear, while not scrupulous in the observance of property rights, is in general a harmless creature as far as humans are concerned. There are those observers of life in the wilds who say that a bear if provoked will never attack a man. Stories to the contrary constitute exceptions to the general rule. So the bear stories from the woods of Maine are much more likely to relate to raids on refrigerators than raids on human kind. They present an interesting question. Just how does a bear learn to open a refrigerator?—Boston Transcript.

Com'r Murray Tells

Of Important Changes Which Are To Be Made On the Atlantic Highway

One of the most perplexing problems confronting the State Highway Commission in planning improvements on Route No. 1 from Bangor to Rockland, was connected with the work which must be done in the town of Frankfort, where very dangerous curves and narrow roadways place motorists in peril.

There has been much agitation recently on the part of residents all along Route 1 below Bangor and members of the Commission have looked over the situation very carefully.

Charles Murray of Bangor, distinguished member, has apparently solved the problem connected with the road along Frankfort marsh.

The solution is a very simple and effective one, now that it is brought to public attention. He plans to build a bridge across the marsh stream from the first curve northeast of the Mt. Waldo Granite Co. plant, extending to the shore at the east of the stream, then to the present roadway which leads from the main highway to houses on the point of land on the upriver side of the junction of Frankfort stream and the Penobscot river.

In an interview with a Bangor Commercial representative on Friday afternoon, Mr. Murray outlined his plan somewhat fully.

He stated that the high embankments to the west of the road along Frankfort marsh make it impossible to widen the road at those points where danger exists. In consequence he plans to make a straight road from the first curve this side of the granite plant by erection of a bridge, which will be much less expensive than any other form of project which seems possible.

Proceeding on the east, or northeast side of the stream which flows through the village of Frankfort will also eliminate the sharp and dangerous curve in the heart of the village and sharp curves beyond to Malcolm's curve, so called, which is the first one generally east of the granite plant.

Mr. Murray does not feel that the cost of the new project will be excessive.

The construction of a bridge will not compare with the expenditure which will be necessary with other forms of plans for doing away with the danger spots and there will be but a comparatively short stretch of roadway to be built to reach the present road mentioned, which extends to the main highway before reaching the concrete bridge over the stream in the heart of Frankfort village from the northeast.

This proposition means the elimination of a part of the town of Frankfort from the main highway. Mr. Murray was of the opinion that if Maine is to look for a continuation of summer tourist traffic, it must be willing to do its share in building good roads with the least possible number of hazards. Each town must be willing to make its share of the sacrifice involved in making the main highways as straight as possible. This, he believed, would be well worth while as the result of increased tourist business, in which all of Maine shares directly or indirectly.

In course of discussion with the Commercial representative it was learned that much needed improvements will be made on the road between Bangor and Old Town one of the busiest thoroughfares out of Bangor.

The concrete roadway was built many years ago by federal aid before the vast increase in the use of automobiles and what was deemed an adequate road then is now distinctly inadequate, the concrete roadway being only 18 feet in width.

Mr. Murray stated that the commission plans to widen the road two feet on each side and to resurface the entire road. Several dangerous curves will also be eliminated, the chief one of which is that at Stillwater corner, so called.

The commission has in mind that the Bangor Hydro Elec. Co. will in the not too distant future, remove the trolley tracks which run to Old Town beside the highway. The removal of the tracks would enable the commission to build a third traffic lane, which is badly needed. The turn at Stillwater corner is a sharp one and the road is narrow in approaching from Orono. The store building which formerly stood at the corner to obstruct the view was removed to the back part of the lot to construct a filling station, thereby providing a better view around the corner, but the roadway is still narrow.

Mr. Murray stated that the work of surveying on route No. 1 nearer Rockland is now in progress, but nothing definite concerning plans there was mentioned by him. However, he did state that there will be a general improvement of that section of the road.

Annie Grassie, "Only Woman Lobster Fisherman," Makes a Prediction

Pretty, sun-tanned Anna Grassie, 22, who bashfully claims the title "Only Lobster Fisherman woman in New England" predicts that the day is near when there will not be any lobster fishers in New England waters.

"There are too many people engaged in the lobster fishing business and unless something is done about it soon there just won't be any more lobsters" was the way this smiling Miss expressed it as she continued her task of unloading gear from her father's skiff of Cohasset, Mass.

"You know, most of the girls today like to stay in bed mornings but I like to get up at 3 o'clock and be out on the harbor with dad before dawn. It's healthy work and a lot of fun," Miss Grassie explained.

How long has she been in the business? How long does she intend to stay in it? Isn't there anything else she'd rather do?

"Well," continued Miss Grassie, displaying behind her smile rows of even white teeth, their whiteness accentuated by a background of nut-brown cheeks. "I've been helping dad (dad is Anthony Grassie, 76-year-old lobster fisherman) for four years. I intend to keep right on helping him every day just as long as he needs me. We have 100 lobster pots to take care of any they keep us plenty busy. Yes, there's something else I'd like to get into and that's aviation. I think women who fly are very brave and modern."

"Dad," she said, "is probably the oldest active lobster fisherman on the New England coast."

"What's more, dad is the only fisherman who ever brought a white lobster into this harbor and only last year he caught a pink lobster in one of his traps."

White and pink lobsters, fishing authorities agree, are rare. Miss Grassie and her dad are constant companions. Their success the girl attributes to her dad's "sense of locating."
