KILLED THE 'POSSUM

But Also Shot Lot of Chickens—President Hears Story With Application

A friend who talked with the President recently, in an effort to persuade him to lay off sniping the big boys, told him the story of the farmer who found something was wrong with his chickens. They kept disappearing.

Finally he spied a big fat 'possum leave the chicken coop, and the next night he sat in wait with a shotgun. He heard the 'possum in the chicken coop and opened fire.

"He killed the 'possum, all right,"

The President was told, "but he also killed a lot of the chickens."

The friend was trying to persuade Roosevelt that in the process of restricting and legislating against big business, he also was killing a lot of small, but important, innocent business.—Miami Herald.

Liked Adam Walsh

Kiwanians and P. T. A. Folk Talked Football With Famous Coach

The second official visit of Adam Walsh, famous football mentor of Bowdoin College, was an unqualified success. At 6.15 Mr. Walsh was honor guest of the Kiwanis Club luncheon and spoke briefly following the exercises. Next he adjourned to Community Building which received his pleased approval and finally he addressed the year's largest crowd at the April meeting of the Rockland Parent-Teacher association and presented several reels of amazingly good football action pictures, including the "rather dark" Bowdoin-Maine game of '37.

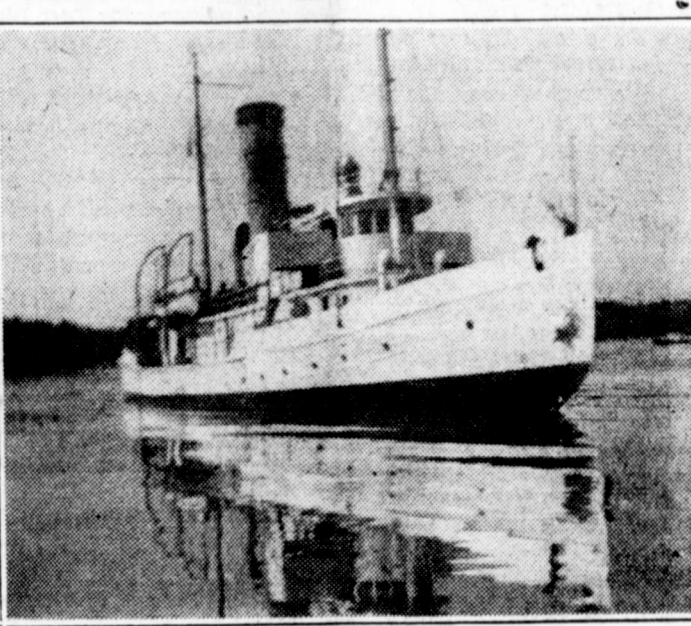

At the Kiwanis meeting he spoke strongly for mass participation in athletics and every out-door games or pursuits to combat the "essens and isms" which now harass the world. He feels that through meeting ones responsibilities in sports one learns that only thus may one earn his rewards. He strongly commended the trend toward six man football in the smaller schools but said that for more important than any other feature was the absolute necessity for careful medical supervision of all players.

Coach Walsh looks for little change in football this fall practically none in the defense but some forced changes in the offense. His statement that the 5-man defense would not stay evoked lively discussion in the forum period. He said the huddle was a permanent adjunct and that to his mind the quarterback would never again give the signals alone, due to the fact that all the eyes in the huddle have seen more than the one pair could have seen.

Albert McCarty handled the meeting with his usual aplomb and Don Matheson presented the speaker. The May 9 meeting of the club will be held in the quarters of the Home Economics Department, McLean School. Bob Russell was appointed stunt chairman for the C. of C. Easter Monday ball. Guests included Principal Blaisdell, coach Matheson, C. F. Joy, Bill Cummings and John M. Richardson.

The evening session at the High School followed the general line of the Kiwanis session with the pictures serving to illustrate the points. Mr. Walsh spoke informally and again a most interesting forum followed the talk. A fine program was presented by the Warren Street pupils under Miss Esther French.

AGAIN GOODBYE TO KICKAPOO

"Say au revoir, but not goodbye"

The ice breaker Kickapoo left port yesterday afternoon for Baltimore, Md., where the craft will be decommissioned for the summer. The "Kick" has been here since last Christmas, but the Weather Bureau made it a sort of winter vacation for her, as there was comparatively little ice to smash, her principal assignments being on the upper Penobscot River, and the Kennebec River near Richmond.

With the Kickapoo on her present voyage are Capt. A. Van de Venter, Bos'n Alfred M. Haynes and Chief Engineer Howard E. Watts. Capt. Van de Venter, who made many friends here, and whose popularity was increased by his highly interesting lectures, will again be assigned to an Alaskan port for the summer, on duty as inspector for the whaling industry.

The 28 members of the Kickapoo's crew will be assigned to their permanent stations.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Gurdy Observe It a Day In Advance, But It's a Happy Affair

Yesterday marked the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Gurdy, but as some of the relatives could not then be present the observance was set ahead to the Sunday preceding and really had its beginning with the recognition accorded this highly esteemed couple when they attended the Sunday morning service at the Church of Immanuel, Universalist.

Also in attendance at the church services were the following directors and their wives: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Jameson, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bird, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Spear, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Thurston, Mr. and Mrs. William Brawn, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Knight, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Glover, Judge and Mrs. E. K. Gould, Dr. William Ellingwood, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Conley of Camden, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Duff, and Mrs. Evelyn McKusic of the office staff. A bouquet of 50 roses graced the altar. In Mr. Gurdy's pew were Mr. and Mrs. Gurdy, the daughters, Mrs. Ruth Gurdy Bird and Mrs. Wilson B. Keene, of Montclair, N. J., the grandchildren, Janet Keene and Christopher Bird and Mrs. Edward Gilmore.

The luncheon hour was followed by an informal reception at the Gurdy home, 86 Masonic street, the cosy interior of which had been made doubly beautiful by spring flowers, most tastefully arranged. Here in the course of the day and evening came many friends—the guest book showed close to 100—who spoke from the heart words of felicitation and congratulation. Supplementing these oral expressions of good will were many cards and letters bearing similar sentiments, together with those other gifts to which the golden wedding of well known couples always gives rise.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Emma Bird and Mrs. Lester Sherman intimate friends of many years.

Mr. Gurdy, who is a native of Duxbury, Mass., came to this city at the age of 10 and was later associated for 13 years with his father, Samuel H. Gurdy in the lime manufacturing business at the corner of Main and Cedar streets.

He was one of the original directors of the Rockland Loan & Building Association which is also about to observe its 50th anniversary. His position as secretary and treasurer of that important organization covers a long period of faithful and valuable service. Since 1895 to be exact.

Mr. Gurdy was clerk of the Universalist board of trustees 30 years, and has been a deacon of the church the past 10 years.

An active Democrat for many years, he has served in the Board of Aldermen, and was once the party's nominee for mayor. Continued service seems to have been one of his striking characteristics, for he was treasurer of Knox Hospital 35 years. He is a Scottish Rite Mason and a member of the Rockland Rotary Club.

Mrs. Gurdy, whose maiden name was Julia Smith, was born in Brooklyn. She is active in social circles (including the Charity Club) and also belongs to the Universalist Church and Mission Circle.

Coast Guard Bill

Back From Egypt Senator White Is Strongly Behind the Measure

Senator Wallace H. White has been working for the amended bill of Senator Reynolds of North Carolina which would establish a Coast Guard Reserve similar to the Fleet Naval Reserve.

Originally, Reynolds' bill would have permitted Coast Guard men to enter the Fleet Naval Reserve. The Navy objected to receiving them and the Treasury objected to having the men go out from under Coast Guard jurisdiction. Last August Reynolds offered an amendment which would establish an independent Coast Guard Reserve. The amendments lay on the table with adoption. Several times the bill came up, on the regular calendar call, and each time objection was made, since the bill was still in the original form.

Last week it came up and was passed. Then Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, asked reconsideration and objected, so the bill remained on the calendar. Walsh said he would have no objection to a bill establishing an independent Coast Guard Reserve. On April 5, Reynolds asked that the amendments to that end be submitted and printed, so they might be considered when the bill came up again.

Senator King of Utah, however, who objected to the bill in original form, is still understood to be inimical to the separate Reserve because of the cost.

The Senate committee reported the bill favorably despite unfavorable comments from government departments. The Treasury also objects to the bill. Senator White returned from Egypt this week and is conferring with Reynolds in an effort to remove objections to the bill and get it passed at this session.

NAMED COUNTY TICKET

Knox County Democrats Express Choice, With a Few Vacancies To Fill

Knox County Democrats who attended the State convention in Augusta either in the capacity of delegates or alternates, met in this city last night and discussed the matter of a county ticket.

County Chairman Rodney E. Feyer of Thomaston presided over the meeting and John J. Perry of Rockland was secretary.

The choice of the gathering was the following ticket:

State Senator—J. Crosby Hobbs of Camden.

Sheriff—Almon P. Richardson of Rockland.

County Commissioner—D. Robert McCarty of Rockland.

County Attorney—Selection deferred.

Register of Probate—Miss Edna Payson of Rockland.

Register of Deeds—Albert Winslow of Rockland (endorsed).

County Treasurer—Alfred Morton of Friendship.

Representatives to Legislature from Rockland—Dr. James C. Kent and Leforest A. Thurston.

In the Thomaston class three candidates are seeking the nomination—Clifton Felt and Frank Linkin of Thomaston and Nelson Spear of Cushing.

No action was taken regarding the other Legislative classes.

Much enthusiasm was expressed during the meeting.

"The Black Cat"

By The Roving Reporter

Alden Hayden of 44 Emery street, Medford Hills, Mass., also answered Miss Josephine Thorndike's queries concerning the bark Golden Era and confirms the statement in Eaton's history that the date of construction was 1850 and that the craft was built by George Thorndike. The Golden Era, according to Mr. Hayden was a sister ship to the bark Pathfinder mentioned in The Courier-Gazette March 8, the working model of which is in Mr. Hayden's possession. In the sunset of life, and a long time absent from his home city, Mr. Hayden nevertheless maintains a keen interest in Knox County, and The Black Cat hopes to receive from him some further recollections concerning the days when Rockland was a real seaport.

Alligator, or crocodile? That's the big problem at the corner of Lincoln and Summer streets, where neighbors gather at the home of Neil S. Perry to see the critter recently sent to this paper from St. Petersburg, Fla. Various encyclopedias have been consulted without the answer being fully determined. Meantime the all-dile persists in maintaining a hunger strike. All-diles are supposed to have a penchant for flies and meats. Flies are scarce and high-priced at the present time, and the animal spews out tenderloin steak as fast as it is offered to him. Maybe it's just homesickness and the all-dile misses St. Pete's green benches.

Members of The Courier-Gazette staff read yesterday with consuming interest the letter from their co-worker, Miss Katherine McDonald, written "somewhere at sea" on the steamship St. John. "Kay" indicates that if The Courier-Gazette ever gets fed up with her services (which it never will) she is going to join the Navy and be a sailor. Emboldened perhaps by the fact that she had not, up to the time of writing experienced the distressing pangs of mal de mer.

Mrs. Edwin Rollins of West Somerville, Mass., a former resident of Rockland, and an unfailing summer visitor here, writes to a Rockland friend that she has a copy of the Thomaston Register issued May 5, 1830, sent originally to her great grandfather, H. Ingraham, at the Shore Village—which same used to be Rockland. The newspaper was published by Edwin Moody, and sold for $2 a year (or $2.25 if not paid up within a year).

The shipping news in the Thomaston Register pertained to the ports of Thomaston, Shore Harbor and Owl's Head. "Shore Harbor" it is fair to assume, meant Rockland. In the advertising columns was this notice:

"Mrs. N. Fuller requests all persons indebted to her to make immediate payment as she is about going to Boston and will be in want of all aid."

On another page will be found R. Waldo Tyler's explanation of how his short wave set "busted in" on Station WOR the other night. To the layman it will doubtless sound rather complex but there's no mistaking the sincerity of Tyler's version of the affair.

Places I miss. The old depot, which stood at the junction of Park street and the New County road. It consisted of two buildings—a passenger station on the southern side and a freight station on the northern side—both covered. At first there were two main tracks and a turn-table, located very near the present one. Later a side-track was built to the southward of the present passenger track. I recall that the late ex-Mayor John Lovejoy was agent at one time and that a Mr. Stahl kept a small candy store in the passenger station. When the conflagration destroyed the old depot I slept through the excitement, and was exceedingly wroth next morning to find what had occurred without anybody calling me. The fire took place late at night just as the crowd was leaving a polo game.

TOTED WATER A LONG WAY

Fire At The Meadows Fought With Mack Pumper and 2500 Feet of Hose

Rockland firemen celebrated Palm Sunday by pouring water four hours on blazing property at The Meadows.

The scene of the conflagration was the old Sherer place on the Old County road near the head of Rankin street. The property is now owned by the Cowan Engineering Co. of Chicago, and under lease by Frank A. Kimball is tenanted by three families. Frank Hallowell, Clyde Mosher and Frank Collins.

The fire caught in the large barn which stood near the house, and which was a roaring furnace when the apparatus reached the scene shortly before 11 a. m.

Hose was connected with the nearest hydrant, 600 feet away, but the water was not percolating to suit the firefighters so Chief Engineer Van Russell ordered that the hose be laid instead to another hydrant, which was 2500 feet distant near the Bird & Hart store. The big Mack pump was hooked on, and the firemen soon had all the water they wanted.

Meantime the flames had communicated with the long shed which adjoined the house. The latter structure seemed in imminent danger of going, and Chief Russell advised the removal of the furniture which was promptly done.

But the wrecking truck pulled down the connecting building and the house was saved. Dewey Tripp emerges from the picture in the light of a hero, for he it was who found a barrel of oil and removed it from the shed before the flames reached it. Had this not been done it would have been good-bye to the Isle of Capri.

Mr. Kimball lost a truck and five tons of baled straw.

The loss on the buildings was about $1500.

The mid-day fire drew a large crowd.

AND NOW—"ON TO WARWICK"

R. H. S. One Act Play Earns Right To Compete In New England Finals

Rockland High School's 1938 One Act Play delegation will enter the New England finals April 28 at Warwick, R. I. as Maine's alternate contender, having won second honors in the most grueling State contest yet seen in the history of the Bowdoin one-act play association.

The local school entered the final contests at Memorial hall, Bowdoin College Saturday by virtue of having defeated the Bangor High group. Eight other High Schools and academies had won their way to the finals and the plays presented were by far the finest and most finished yet seen in the series. Brunswick High School took first place with the rollicking comedy, "Rich Man, Poor Man." Rockland's "Gloria Mundi" was second and South Portland's splendid interpretation of the famous court scene from "The Merchant of Venice" was awarded honorable mention. So close were the three allied that it took the judges over a half hour to arrive at a decision.

The local players have presented the exceedingly difficult "Gloria Mundi" four times and all that needs be said is that the Brunswick interpretation was by far the best, and that the highly critical audience applauded the weird play to the echo. The South Portland group was exceedingly stiff competition, for the cast was beautifully dressed in the colorful apparel of the era and their Shylock was little short of inspired, yet it lacked the uniform all-cast excellence and superior direction which won for Brunswick and Rockland.

The R.H.S. players: Virginia Wood, Gordon Richardson, Milton Rollins, Maxine Perry, Katherine Rice and Ruth Seabury, will go to Warwick if the necessary financial arrangements can be made. This is the last play of the year presented by Rockland High School's talented coach, Miss Dorothy Parker, and it seems almost imperative that the funds for the trip be procured in order to give the play its chance in Rhode Island.

Laroy Brown filled the all important niche of stage manager and Miss Dorothy Frost was properties manager. Plays were presented by South Portland, Houlton, Brunswick, Rockland, Farmington, Gardiner, N. H. Fay High of Dexter, Garrett Schenk High of Millinocket and Calais Academy.

The judges were Harrison C. Lyseth of the State Department of Education, Mrs. Athern P. Daggett, of Brunswick and Robert D. Morse Jr. president of the Masque and Gown.

In order to make possible the trip of the local players to the New England contest a committee of supporters will seek to raise the necessary $150 the present week. Sheriff C. Earl Ludwick heads the group and associated with him are Clerk of Courts M. M. Griffin, School Committee Chairman C. F. Joy, Gilman Seabury and John M. Richardson. Any person wishing to aid the boys and girls in any way, large or small, needs merely contact any member of the committee and their contribution will be most gratefully received.

Air Mail Notes

More Than Half of World Connected By Service Out of Boston

The first official air mail route was inaugurated 20 years ago May 15 between New York and Washington, D. C., a distance of 213 miles. One pilot flew to Philadelphia a distance of 90 miles and another continued on to Washington 128 miles.

Air mail time to the West Coast has been cut from 35 hours in 1926 to 20 hours at the present time. Today continuous flight day and night is maintained in the United States, Canada, and 29 countries in Central and South America.

Direct Trans-Pacific route to Hawaii, Philippines and Hong Kong China. Rates per half ounce 20c 50c and 70c respectively. Air mail rate to Mexico 10c per half ounce.

Bermuda included in the air mail schedule March 16 and like the Bahamas the rate is 10c per half ounce. The plane embarks from Baltimore and reaches Bermuda in 9½ hours, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The 6c rate applies to letters to Canada as well as this country.

Today more than half of the world now directly connected by the air mail service out of Boston.

FREED AT HIGH WATER

The Canadian schooner Reine Marie Stewart, refloated Saturday after running aground at the Vineyard Harbor entrance Saturday night, waited for fair winds before proceeding on her voyage to Boston.

The schooner was northbound from Turks Island, B. W. I., with a cargo of salt when she grounded on the sandy edge of the harbor channel. The Coast Guard Cutter Faunce pulled her free at high water.

The schooner was built in Thomaston in 1919, and recently was purchased and reconditioned by Captain R. A. MacLean of Chatham, N. B.

GRANGE NON PARTISAN

Taking cognizance of impending political campaigns, F. Ardine Richardson of Strong, master of the State Grange, told Cape Elizabeth Grangers the organization was "not involved in partisan politics and is not controlled by any political party or faction. The small portion of our members having no interest in agriculture or in rural affairs, who are not in sympathy with the Grange program," he said, "will render a distinct service, in the event they make a public address or statement, if they clearly specify that their views are personal, rather than of the organization."

Two Kinds Of Paper

E. H. Crie Says It's a Revival of the Old Colonial Style

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

Apropos of the discussion in regard to using two kinds of wall-paper in one room. This is merely a revival of an old Colonial style of decoration which was used more in the South than in New England. The more important side of the room usually the one with the fireplace was decorated with a scenic paper (which at that time was imported from France and came in sheets instead of rolls) and the other three sides of the room were done in a plain effect. In some cases the figured paper was used on three walls the fireplace side being wood paneling. The present revival calls for the plain walls to be of a color which will blend perfectly with the background of the figured paper.

In my early days of decorating about 25 years ago the vogue for using a figured paper for the lower two-thirds of the wall and plain paper above with a moulding between came in. Sometimes this was reversed. I presume this is the style referred to by your Rockport correspondent. Edwin H. Crie

A Welcome Visitor

Washington Woman Thinks Black Cat Should Be Kept In C.-G. Family

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

The Courier-Gazette is a very welcome visitor. The Black Cat brings many items of interest, so I think the Cat should be kept in The Courier-Gazette family. There are several Knox County people who eat at the same place I do, and in turn eagerly read each issue as it comes.

The help project is interesting reading, and I trust it may bring honest employment to many who so much need it. I'm glad the 17-inch fall of snow didn't come to Maine, as we need less mud instead of more. With the birds in quantities it seems as if there should be warmer weather to go with the length of days.

Politics are waking up here in the Capital City and last Sunday I had the pleasure of shaking the hand of a former governor, Hon. Carl E. Milliken, during a brief visit to the town and the church he formerly attended. I attend the same church, the Penney Memorial Baptist, which is a great privilege. Last night I visited Rose of Sharon Chapter, O.E.S., where old-timers' night was held, with plenty of entertainment for oldtimers, a large number being present.

I read with interest about the periwinkle factory. Let us hope it is a success as any thing that makes our county more prosperous, and the citizens more independent should be fostered. I hope to see more news from Washington, while I am waiting here for return of good health and warmer weather. With good wishes for our Knox County paper, I remain

WHY THE FISHERMEN OBJECT

Full Text of Com'r Arthur Greenleaf's Speech Before the Reciprocity Commission

Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen:

One eloquent eye witness of the conditions among our Maine toilers of the ocean has characterized them as "the share-croppers of the sea."

Maine, at the extreme northeast of the nation, is happily situated to be the playground of America but not fortunate, geographically, from some considerations of commerce and industry. Our farms are small and grow a diversity of crops, none of which benefits by the crop control programs and the benefit payments pertaining thereto.

Our lumber interests, once very important, have gone into decline and of late a change in the tariff on certain varieties, in the interest of the consumer and of other lumber sections, has called for sacrifice on our part. Busy shippers once sent an enormous tonnage of wood-ships to the ocean; this has disappeared as iron bottoms have come to carry the commerce of the world. And this hearing concerns our oldest, and at one time our largest, industry—shore and deep sea fisheries. In view of the sacrifices and unfortunate trends here mentioned, we feel that further sacrifice should not be asked.

Due to lower wages, lower living standards and long hours, many of our industries have migrated to the South. We feel that this change, broadly considered, is not for the country's good; we know it is not best for the worker, and are sadly aware of its disaster to us.

Our fishermen are a hardy race. They expect to work long hours, face some dangers, and endure real hardships, but it is unjust to them and not in the public interests to have them driven to living and labor standards that exist in the provinces, a condition which is inevitable of tariff protection is further reduced.

It is certainly pertinent to this question to mention that a relief agency of the Federal Government has invested a quarter million dollars, in an attempt to relieve the plight of the Maine fishermen. This investment will be rendered fruitless and the tax-payers money wholly lost if an unfavorable change is now made in our protective duties on sea products.

In Maine, we not only come into competition with the lower standards of the province fishermen but bounties and subsidies, granted by the Dominion, have complicated the matter to the disadvantage of the Maine fisherman. The Canadian Government pays each fisherman $5.70 per year. This is not so important but he also receives two cents bonus on every pollock and 20 cents per hundred on hake. American capital has been moving into Newfoundland and the Maritime provinces, seeking the lower operating costs to be found there and knowing that it will have a low tariff, or no tariff at all, to pay when it brings its products to the United States market.

In discussing trade treaties, with possible tariff reductions, it should not be overlooked that we have many ocean products already on the free list, lobsters, for example. Canada has taken advantage of this to increase her catch and importations into the states. Last year's importations of Canadian lobster is said to be the largest in our history. Argument is not needed to show that every pound of lobster, or any other ocean product brought in from abroad, displaces domestic production, leaves the Maine fisherman idle, and makes unprofitable the investment of Maine capital.

There are over 75,000 Maine people dependent on the fishing industry. Their prosperity effects about every community on our 2,500 miles of coast.

The value of boats, plants and equipment runs into millions of dollars. Over a hundred million pounds of fish, valued at two and a half million dollars, were landed in 1937. This shows the importance of the fishing industry in the State of Maine.

There is great opportunity for expansion but this is checked by the present lack of protection and the menace of reduction on the moderate duties we now have, with the following results:

Imports 1934, 251,600,000 pounds; 1936, 333,000,000 pounds while the same Tariff Commission reports: Exports 1934, 103,000,000 pounds; 1936, 95,000,000 pounds. These figures exclude shell fish.

I have visited thousands of fishermen in the last few months, and can say from actual observation that they are not earning a fair return on the exceptionally long hours and hard work they have to put in.

Their dismay at the proposed tariff changes has been evidenced by thousands of protests, sent to the office of Maine Commissioner, and to the Maine delegation in Congress.

It is the earnest hope of every citizen of Maine that sympathetic consideration will be given the peculiar needs of our State and that our fishermen and fishing industry will not be further sacrificed.

Something for the two Franks,

John, Michael, Roy and Vance to shoot at.

NEW CHAMPION

There was a champ named Gardner. But now his name is Mike. How did he grab the title? Just a spare upon a strike.

Two weeks ago Friday evening, they started on the twenty. Frank thought he had another fish. I'm sure that he got plenty.

Everyone knows our new champion. At the Paramount Lunch at night. Mike also can toss the sandwiches. He will always treat you right.

Frank couldn't seem to get started. Mr. Arico no doubt had his number. Somebody suggested using a saw. Even then he missed the lumber.

Now that the battle is over, Mike will take a rest. Unless someone challenges next Friday night.

When of course he will do his best. Charlie Chan

Full Speed Ahead

New York Contractors Want Deer Isle Bridge Done In the Fall

A despatch dated New York says:

"With spring came the 'full speed ahead' order of Supt. William Denry, in charge of Merritt-Chapman & Scott Corporation's substructure work on the new $1,000,000 double-decked cable suspension Deer Isle-Sedgwick bridge so that it may be opened for traffic late in the fall.

"As fast as possible equipment is being assembled. Lighter Admiral with 60-ton hoisting capacity, is already at work. Tug Resolute and lighter No. 47 with cofferdam barges, floating concrete mixing plants reported in. Derrick Boat Monarch, another unit of the Merritt-Chapman & Scott fleet, and the largest floating derrick in the United States, will leave New York Harbor for the Deer Isle in the next few days. Divers are measuring and checking the floor of Penobscot Bay, at the Bridge site preparatory to the installation of foundation forms more than 80 feet below water level.

"The new Deer Isle-Sedgwick Bridge will have a clearance for navigation 85 feet above mean high tide, will add 125 square miles of territory to the mainland, and will give approximately 6000 winter and 25,000 summer inhabitants adequate transportation facilities. The bridge will be 2000 feet long, 1080 feet between towers, and the upper roadway will be used for pleasure, the lower for trucks. The bridge was designed by Robinson & Steinman."

Turkeys In Maine

A Goal of 100,000 a Year Is What the Association Is Seeking Declaring that the outlook for the turkey business in Maine was "excellent" E. N. Jacques of Manchester, president of the Maine Turkey Growers Association, said that the organization had entered its new fiscal year with a definite plan for promotion of the industry.

An attempt will be made to increase the number of turkey raisers, to enlarge and improve existing flocks and to educate farmers on modern production and sales methods. A goal to increase the annual yield from 40,000 to 100,000 over a five-year period has been set. Jacques said that a recent meeting of prominent growers at Orono

Recent reports of the Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics show that Maine has a "16% higher hatchability" than any other State in the Union he said and added that "this is certainly good news." The report also revealed that New England has the lowest percentage of disease.

Oxford county raises practically half of Maine's total crop, Association records show.

Mr. Jacques has been re-elected president for the new year, Mrs. Jacques is secretary-treasurer and Mrs. Adelaide Young of Norway has been selected as committee woman in charge of 4-H Club work. An association meeting is scheduled to be held in a few weeks and is tentatively slated for South Paris.

THE WEATHER

Folks awoke yesterday morning with a decidedly shivery feeling, and understood the cause of it a little better when they heard that the mercury had touched the zero mark in the village of Rockville. The prize package went to Captain N. S. Brown.

Two weeks ago Al Sinnibaldi of Berlin, N. H., gave Butch Wooster a beating at Portland, but the latter was so sure he could not do it again, that the men were rematched, and will be seen in the main bout at the Potato Bowl tomorrow night. The semi-final will find two vigorous contestants in Ponzi Cochran of Rockland and Roland Agnes of Berlin, N. H., who has a notion that he can step away from those vicious upstarts of the Rockland boys. H., while the curtain raiser will introduce young Perkins of Belfast and George Boardman of Rockland.

Miss Virginia Flint, who has been undergoing a course of training in telegraphy at the Western Union office has been selected by Manager Gardner as a permanent summer operator. Miss Flint is a daughter of the late Carl O. Flint, one-time manager of the local office and later was an assistant district superintendent.

Odd Fellows' anniversary Sunday will be observed in Portland April 24 with the famous 13 Class. The services will be preceded by a parade with all branches of the order in line with the Canton branch doing escort duty. Anyone interested in attending this meeting should communicate with Nestor S. Brown, telephone 695-W, at once as there are plans for filling a bus for this trip, leaving Rockland in time to participate in the parade. Members should call for reservation now as the bus will only accommodate a few more.

These "red wagon" days of waiting sirens and thundering motors turn the public mind strongly to matters of fire protection. On Wednesday night at 7 p. m. the intensely interesting fire prevention and instruction picture "Approved by the Underwriters" will be presented in the tower room at Community Building with the public invited, even urged, to attend. There is of course no admission charge to this intensely interesting picture. It is shown here for the first time in Maine and will be followed by a question period with William E. Armstrong, one of the Underwriters' engineers, on the receiving end.

In the several meetings conducted Sunday in The Salvation Army, the life of William Booth, the founder, was portrayed. Sunday evening service being especially devoted to this purpose, at which time songs written by the founder, were sung, best known of which was "O Boundless Salvation." The poem "William Booth," by Owen Seaman, was read. A duet, "I Bring Thee All," written by the daughter of the founder, the present General Evangeline Booth, was sung by Captain and Mrs. Bowness. Suspended from the pulpit was one of the most familiar pictures of William Booth, beneath which was a beautiful floral piece in the form of a cross, which was composed of red carnations. This cross being the generous gift of the General Knox Chapter of Rose Croix was used as a memorial of the life of service rendered humanity by the founder.

Crossing Equator

King Neptune Climbs Flaring Bow of Normandie In Traditional Way

The enormous, flaring bow of the Normandie, the largest ship ever to enter the Southern Hemisphere, did not prevent Neptune from climbing aboard in traditional fashion when the ship recently crossed the Equator. With his court of "shellbacks" (those who have crossed the Equator before), the king of the sea put the "polliwogs," or novices, through the usual penalties for their first equatorial trespass.

Ceremonies Revert to Vikings

"Equator-crossing ceremony is so old that its origin has been completely lost," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "The Vikings celebrated the crossing of certain parallels with acts of good will, such as throwing a young bull overboard to appease Neptune."

"Equator celebrations usually begin the night before the ship crosses the imaginary line. A seaman, dressed as Davy Jones, appears with a message for the captain from Neptune. It states the time the ship is to stop to receive the Royal Party, and includes a summons for certain persons on board to appear before Neptune's court."

"Next morning King Neptune, accompanied by Amphitrite, his queen, climbs over the bow, and the 'heaving' resolves into a series of bumpings, duckings, latherings, and other methods of hazing of 'polliwogs.' The initiations vary somewhat on different ships and under different flags. The court consists of the Royal Scribe, Doctor, Barber, Devil, and Bears, all costumed. The Bears are commissioned to round up all the 'polliwogs' for initiation. Often the Bears are in the minority and have a terrific struggle."

Salt Water Chaser

"When the 'polliwogs' are finally corralled, the Scribe calls off a name and the 'guilty one' steps forward to hear fictitious charges brought against him. Immediately seized by the Doctor for a physical examination, the patient may suffer anything from electric shocks to having huge soap pills stuffed in his mouth with a concentrated solution of salt water for chaser."

"While the culprit gulps, the Barber may lather him with a dirty mixture of thick soap suds and coal soot, or even black paint, before shaving him with a wooden razor the size of a butcher's knife. On long voyages the Barber may hack away hair with coarse shears, or apply black grease to give the head that well-groomed effect. Mercurochrome or red dyes are popular after-shaving lotions."

"At this point the victim may be passed along to the Devil who breaks an egg over his head, and shoves him backward into a tank of water. The Bears duck him several times before he is freed."

"It is usually a matter of days before 'polliwogs' regain their composure. Many cans of soap, gasoline, and numerous cleaning compounds are used to remove paints, varnishes, grease, and stains from the ship."

"Once a 'polliwog' is duly initiated he receives a certificate signed by Neptune and addressed to all mermaids, sea serpents, whales, sharks, porpoises, dolphins, kates, eels, suckers, lobsters, crabs, and other living things of the sea, admitting him to the superior order of 'shellbacks.'"

"Although initiations are not unduly rough, they are seldom inflicted upon women aboard. If a woman is adventurous enough to travel across the Equator, it is felt that this alone warrants her a certificate."

"Discipline once made 'polliwog' ships' officers somewhat hesitant about entering into the ceremonies. Officers of the Navy formerly 'bought off' Neptune with bottles of beer. The younger officers, however, usually participated in the initiations."

"Even in an airplane today there are Equator-crossing formalities. Neptune Rex cannot climb aboard, but Jupiter Rex demands recognition. As king of the heavens, lord of the sun, moon, planets, stars, and nebulae, ruler of the winds and weather, master of lightning and thunder, supreme potentate of all things above the surface of the earth, he issues a certificate to winged 'polliwogs' entering his realm."

CONG. SMITH'S PROTEST

Representative Clyde H. Smith a minority member of the House Labor Sub-Committee which recommended a revised wage-hour bill, protested Thursday that enactment of the measure would "result in taking the balance of Northern industries to the South." He added that the proposed legislation "means nothing more nor less than a continuation of the lower wages and longer hours of the South."

Principal Earle Spear spoke of the benefits already felt from the provision of the directed study course and the training for greater reading efficiency. Sumner O. Hancock, head of the social studies course, explained how the study

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts! The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat hearty, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or overworked, your stomach cannot do its job. Your food does not digest and you get gas, heartburn, nausea, pain in your stomach. You feel sick, sick and upset all over. Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes three little black tablets called Bell-Lax for indigestion to make the excess stomach acids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Bell-Lax is so quick it is amazing and one 50¢ package proves it. Ask for Bell-Lax for Indigestion.

Replied To Wells

Fernald's Side of Controversy With Damariscotta Man Here Given

In its issue of March 31 The Courier-Gazette published a communication from Joseph H. Wells of Damariscotta, under the caption "Fernald Is Smart." A reply to that letter appeared in the Press Herald and is here republished by request.

That "Fools' Letter"
Editor of The Press Herald:

Mr. Wells would lead us to believe that Floor-leader Fernald, with one vote in the Senate, had more power and influence over legislation than the Governor in the matter of making laws or passing upon them. Still we all learned in grammar school that the governor has the power of veto over all acts of the legislature and that his veto can only be overridden by a two-thirds vote in both branches of our Legislature. At no time last Winter did a majority of the elected membership, or 17 Senators, favor a sales tax. If Governor Barrows had vetoed the sales tax that Senator Fernald opposed on all occasions, certainly 22 Senators or two-thirds of the membership would never have voted to override his veto. Mr. Wells says, "Mr. Brann's Legislature had also left the 'contingent fund' of the state entirely depleted." Governor Brann, a Democrat, never had the control of our Republican legislature, and furthermore, the Governor's Council continued the "contingent fund" and not the legislature under our present set-up.

Mr. Wells says it was "Floor Leader Fernald's duty to the voters of the state to make every effort to leave no stone unturned in seeing that his Senate reached a solution agreeable to the House." Apparently, under Mr. Wells' notion of our bicameral legislature, it is the duty of the Floor-leader of the Senate to make the Senate agree with the House. Mr. Wells says, "Mr. Fernald did not do this." That is correct. Mr. Wells says, "Fernald took no position for or against any tax measure that was proposed." Please permit me to point out that on April 24, 1937, on the floor of the Senate Mr. Fernald said:

"Mr. President, at this time I wish to go on record as opposing a one percent general sales tax or a sales tax of any kind, which is carrying out my attitude that I held in 1933 and 1935 and those of us who still feel the same way about it will carry the fight to the people with the hope that in August we will be more successful than we have been in April." (1937 Maine Legislative Record—pages 1289-90).

On April 24, 1937, Senator Fernald also opposed on the floor of the Senate, the repeal of the Chain Store Tax. (See Maine Legislative Record—pages 1282-6.)

On April 22, 1937, Senator Fernald voted against a tax on the consumer of electric power and on the same day he voted against a $4 poll tax on men and women. (See Legislative Record—pages 1223-3.) And on the same day Senator Fernald voted against the Amusement Tax.

On April 21, 1937, Senator Fernald on the floor of the Senate successfully moved the indefinite postponement of House Amendment "A" which was a one percent sales tax and a two percent income tax regardless of your income. (See Legislative Record—page 1170.) On the same day Senator Fernald successfully moved the indefinite postponement of report "B"—a sales tax. (See Legislative Record—pages 1165-7.)

In fact, Senator Fernald's position, as I observed it, during the entire session of the Legislature was one of no new taxes—economy and efficiency in state government and if Mr. Wells will read the record he could see that.

Mr. Wells says "Fernald shouts in a loud voice, 'economy.' Does anyone know of a single instance where he has told the people how he could run the State for less money and still keep it efficient?" The answer is "Yes, Mr. Wells," for example: (1) See Portland Press Herald March 17, 1938, where "Roy Fernald declares $125,000 could be saved," before Portland Pine Tree Fish and Game Protective Ass'n; (2) See Portland Press Herald Jan. 14, 1938, where "Fernald offers to stop waste and petty larceny in State government" before the 13 Class at Portland.

Misses Lucy and Ruth Moody entertained at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Moody in honor of Miss Chrystal L. Stanley of Bangor and formerly of this town with a miscellaneous shower.

About 40 guests gathered to help make this a very happy occasion. The first part of the evening was spent by singing the old hymns and songs with Mrs. W. M. Newbert at the piano. The guest of honor sang a solo "Saved by Grace." Beatrice and Lloyd Hustus rendered a duet. At 9.30 Chrysalis was asked to come to the dining room, where she found in the center of the dining room table an immense basket, attractively decorated in green and white overflowing with numerous gifts, while the larger parcels were placed around the basket. Much pleasure was expressed by the guest of honor for her lovely gifts.

Refreshments consisting of coffee, assorted sandwiches and cake were served. After this enjoyable part of the evening, the younger guests adjourned to the living room, where several of the old games were played. Forfeits had to be paid and they caused much merriment for all.

Albert E. Jones, 81, Versatile Musician, Millman, Is Planning For 1939

A pleasant event broke the even tenor of the everyday life of one of Washington's "young" men when school mates, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Albert E. Jones of Stickney's Corner to help celebrate his 81st birthday on March 22. Mr. Jones received many presents, among them five birthday cakes, and the evening was pleasantly spent with music, dancing and story telling. Refreshments were served, also fruit and cigars.

Mr. Jones lives on and cultivates the 80-acre farm which was bought by his father 75 years ago, and has made many improvements on the old farm in the past 40 years. He has built a large mill and installed much modern machinery, including a hydraulic cider press, two large gristmills, a threshing machine, band saw, rip saw, emery wheel, tool grinding and saw gumming outfit, grain cleaner, green bone grinder, power grindstone, wood-sawing machine and other necessary machinery; the mill is powered by 12 and 2-horsepower gas engines.

Mr. Jones is a very active man for his age and operates his mill with very little hired help. He is also an expert saw filer and watch repairer.

Mr. Jones is a talented musician and still plays the violin and saxophone for his own amusement. In the musical line he is best remembered by older residents as organizer and instructor of the A. E. Jones Cornet Band of Globe (South Washington) which was organized in the early 80's and was very popular during its years of existence, playing at many political rallies, entertainments, etc. in this section of the State, among them the celebration of the opening of the Georges Valley Railroad when it was completed, and the Big Fourth of July celebration at Union Common in 1888.

Of the 14 members who comprised the band, only six are now living, A. E. Jones, Chester Overlock, Elmer Daggett, U. S. Wincapaw, Orris Weaver and Charles Finn.

Mr. Jones being of a mechanical mind has built many useful articles, among them a phonograph which plays both disc and cylinder records. He is proud of the fact that he is the third oldest man in town, the others being Edward Light, a Civil War veteran, aged 93, and Martin Leigher, aged 83. Although Mr. Jones says he is living on "borrowed time" he also says he plans to borrow still more, and is now making plans to entertain his friends on March 22, 1939.

MAINE VILLAGE
Lovers of lakes touch here their heaven,
Lovers of hills will climb to see—
Near pond and woods, the timeless neighbors—
A quiet village, Liberty.

Pause on the hills, and store your heart with
A wilderness where peace upwells
In pine and spruce, in fir and hemlock—
A harbor of rest where solace dwells
Undisturbed in a green darkness.
Take faith, take courage, you that see
High in the hills, serene, unaltered,
A true Maine village, Liberty.

Kents Hill Club

"Old Grads" Had Interesting Talkfest — Principal Hinks a Speaker

Last Friday night the Knox and Lincoln Kent's Hill Club met at the tower room of the Community Building, for their first meeting of the year.

All of the officers of the club were present: Harry Wilbur, president; Wesley Comstock, vice president; Ethel Holbrook, secretary and treasurer.

President Wilbur called upon our visiting guests from the school for remarks. Principal Hinks told of school activities and the plans for the present and the possibilities for the future. A fund of $30,000 is the aim of the school right now to make needed repairs and improvements. The water system needs attention and repairs on Sampson and Bearce Hall.

We have 35,000 living graduates of the school. Mr. Hinks stressed the point and cited our Rockland Mite Club as a living example of what can be done by small gifts. This club made up of eight women meeting the last two winters, every other week, and giving 10 cents per person at each meeting has earned $31.42, and turned into the treasury $27.57 towards refurnishing a room which costs approximately $75. Principal Hinks stated that toward the raising of the $30,000 we might reasonably count on five individuals giving $1,000 each, then a certain number so situated giving $500, $200, $100, and finally smaller gifts from $1 to $5. It would seem quite possible that with 35,000 living graduates the sum of $30,000 could be easily raised without very many difficulties.

At present Kent's Hill has a most outstanding Junior College Secretarial and Business Course which is constantly growing, graduates being placed in good business openings. Miss Cole established this department about three years ago and much of the success of this business administrative course is due to this splendid teacher.

There is every reason to believe and to hope for a Junior College Course in home economics, as there seems to be a crying need for a two years' college course in our preparatory schools. Westbrook in Maine, Tilton, Stoneleigh and Colby Junior in New Hampshire, have two years of college, and it would seem the logical thing for our Maine Schools to provide a course. Formerly the rural schools were not up to the standards, young people were sent to the preparatory schools for four years. Today with our splendid school system, this is not necessary, so instead of four years it is, as a rule, one year to prepare for certain necessary credits for college. With young people graduating from high school at about 17, it seems too young for them to be sent away from home to the larger colleges, hence the demand for two years of junior college and then matriculating the last two years at one of our well known larger institutions of learning.

We have a splendid building at Kent's Hill, Ricker Hall, designed for the music department. In former years this was one of the outstanding courses in the school. Times and school conditions change, in recent years the demand has not been so great for such a course, now, however, there is a call for a music department and it is the hope and aspiration of Mr. Hinks and those associated with him and interested in the school to establish once again a Maine Conservatory of Music at Kent's Hill, a diploma of recognized standing to be granted upon graduation.

J. O. Newton, who is this year celebrating his 50th anniversary connected with Kent's Hill, told of his association with the school, "first as student, then teacher of science, principle, field worker" and still teacher and going strong. A man to be admired whether as teacher at Kent's Hill, or friend of youth and age, or as one of the outstanding figures at Augusta where he has been connected with the legislature for some years always standing for what is right in the making of our Maine laws.

Mrs. Newton, Dean of Girls, spoke in her inimitable witty way. We now expect certain "slams" from J. O. and Mrs. J. O. directed toward each other which always produce a laugh. This couple work together hand in hand for the good of the school—splendid teamwork. May they continue going strong in the hope of all old and new Kent's Hillites.

Miss Babcock, teacher of Latin, made a few brief remarks telling us though Latin is a dead language, it is taught now in such a way to make it most interesting. Miss Babcock is a new teacher and one of the younger ones but has already the old school spirit in her work, that is, to give her best.

James Cousins of Rockland, proved an excellent cheer leader in the singing of our school songs. A box social, beano and games, helped us spend a very pleasant evening.

Winners in the food contest (whereby we turned into the treasury the amount of $4) were, Miss Babcock, pie; Jean McConchie, brownies; Polly Bartlett, eggs, and J. O. Newton, candy and candied fruit peel.

There were 24 present, a goodly number, but considering there are about 50 old Kent's Hill students in the immediate vicinity of Rockland, we must do better next time and make our attendance 100 percent.

It is the wish of the club members to express our thanks to The Courier-Gazette for the many times they have helped us through the medium of the press to notify the members of our meetings and for the many articles that have been published in the interest of Kent's Hill School. We do appreciate such co-operation.

REALM OF MUSIC

by Gladys St. Clair Heistad

The world marvels with increasing awe the productivity of the great masters. Franz Schubert lived scarcely 31 years, but the edition of his complete works fills 40 large volumes, and we know that his songs alone number around 600. Besides this, symphonies, chamber music, piano sonatas, compositions for several voices, masses, and a whole series of operas (perhaps the least familiar of all his works). And yet now and then new finds are still being added. Justly the university professor, Alfred Orel, at a Schubert Festival of the Viennese Schubert-League (what is its fate today?) called notice to a series of early Schubert works which were performed, receiving the rapt attention of all present. Thus another significant contribution to the total number of such finds is added. In the catalogue of Schubert's works which his brother Ferdinand compiled 10 years after Franz' death, there appeared a string quartet in C Minor.

When Schubert died the musical world, and even his most intimate circle, knew only a small fraction of what he had composed. With the carelessness of genius he gave away manuscripts, as gifts, all his life, lent them, or threw them away for a song. In recent years Prof. Otto Erich Deutsch in Vienna, to whom Schubert research owes much, has been able to make some especially valuable discoveries. Of this string quartet in C Minor, which was unknown until now, Prof. Orel has discovered at least the first movement among the papers of the Society of the Friends of Music. It, too, is a fragment, and bears the date, April 23, 1814, written in Schubert's own hand—the composer was thus 17 years old at the time. Six months after this quartet movement, his first Mass was performed, and three days later, on Oct. 19, this young man, going on 18 composed his first great song, "Gretchen at the Spinning Wheel."

A hitherto unknown "Rumanian Rhapsody" by Franz Liszt was discovered recently in Vienna among the manuscripts in the archives of the Friends of Music by Dr. Octavian Beu, Rumanian diplomat and musicologist. The rhapsody which is a concert piece for the piano, not only employs two themes used by Liszt in the sixth and twelfth "Hungarian" rhapsodies respectively, but also makes use of a number of old Rumanian folk songs and dance tunes, including the opening phrases of what is now the Rumanian royal hymn. These melodies were gathered by the composer during his concert tour of 1846, when he visited many parts of Rumania. The new find was given its first performance at a concert of the Ravag radio station of Vienna early in the year.

From "Men, Women and Tenors," by Frances Alda (autobiography): "I had been engaged to sing several concerts in Paris during the autumn before I had to leave for New York for the opening of the Metropolitan Opera. One of these concerts was at the home of the Marquise de Brou at Versailles. I was to sing with Pol Plancon, the famous bass who had sung several seasons with Nordica, Sembrich, Calve, the two Reszkes, in New York. The audience, I remember, was very smart, and all of them very good friends. There was a persistent buzz-buzz of greetings, conversations, compliments of how well this one or that looked after taking the cure at Vichy or Marienbad, whose daughter had recently been engaged to whose son, and so on. Nor did any of this die down when I stood up to sing. The accompanist played the opening bars of the first of my group of songs, then paused on a note, expecting me to open my mouth and begin. But I did not. He threw me an anxious glance, started off again, and again paused for me. Nothing happened. The Marquise, a darling old lady, rose from her chair and came toward me. "Mais, ma chere, qu'est-ce-qu'il ya?"

In good full voice I replied: "I know I am supposed to have a very strong voice, but even so it would be impossible for me to make myself heard all this tohu-bohu."

Magnificent silence. A pin dropping in it would have sounded like a cannon shot. The accompanist did not trust himself to look at me. But he played for the third time the opening of the song, and this time I sang it with him. And so through the three songs of the group. There was gratifying applause; I bowed and stepped through the curtains into the hall.

And bang into Plancon! He threw up his arms, then threw them around me.

"Mon Dieu!" he exploded. "To have the courage to do a thing like that!"

Which recalls an incident of my early singing days. I was engaged to sing at a reception in another town, a rather elaborate affair in a beautiful house. Other musicians preceding me performed before a chattering audience who paid not the slightest attention. I recall particularly one artist a pianist who has since become very well known in a large New England city—he played with so much vim and style, but no one listened. Just as my number drew near, the hostess with an imperious gesture motioned for silence, and how well I can remember the thought that flashed into my mind: "How sweet of her—she realizes how difficult it is to perform amid so much din." But my pleasure soon had a jolt, for her words folling the gesture for silence were: "While Miss Jones is singing, we will go into the dining room for refreshments." And so—I not only sang to an empty room but with an off-stage obligato of voices and dishes that beat all that had gone before. It seems funny now, but then it stuck in my young mind as rank discourtesy to all concerned in projecting that program on which we had worked diligently.

Recalling Alice Fiske Sturgis' admiration of Emmy Destinn, I was most interested to not what Frances Alda had to say of her:

"No one in my time ever sang an Aida to compare with that of Emmy Destinn. Especially in the Third Act she was magnificent. Hers was one of the greatest voices, and she was one of the greatest singers I ever heard."

"There was the feud between Emmy Destinn and Geraldine Farrar. Nobody knew exactly where or why it began. Possibly in Berlin, where both had been members of the opera company. But for all the years that she was with the Metropolitan, Destinn steadfastly refused to appear on the stage with Farrar. I remember when Gatti wanted to produce La Donna Curiosa. He and Toscanini spent half a day at Destinn's apartment trying to persuade her to forget her vow and to sing in the opera with Farrar. But she would not. She had the fanatic tenacity of her people, the Czechs. During the War, she was interned for a time in Austria, where she suffered great privations. And ever afterward she vowed she would never speak the German language. From this sort of difficulties arose at the opera house, where practically no one spoke Czech, and Destinn's Italian was not very fluent. I had heard her first and met her, when I sang at Covent Garden. Destinn was singing there, too, that season, and I remember the first time I heard her voice was at a rehearsal of Madame Butterfly. She was magnificent. Nobody ever sang Butterfly as Destinn did. Of course she was stout and far from looking the part of the little Japanese lady. But her manner of singing was so perfect, her voice so divine—like drops of water—and the pathos she put into the role—all these made her unforgettable."

WANTED THE TRUTH

And Harry Hopkins Got It, Though Perhaps Not What He Expected

While vacationing in Florida recently, Attorney General Cummings and Harry Hopkins, slated to be secretary of public welfare, had dinner together at a swanky hotel and fell into a conversation with the head waiter.

"Do you have many New Dealers stopping with you?" asked Hopkins, looking around at the ornate furnishings.

"Do you want a pleasant answer," replied the head waiter, "or the truth?"

"The truth," said Hopkins.

"All the New Dealers we have down here," opined the head waiter, "are the highest New Dealers. I could count on the finger of one finger."

"That so?" countered the amused Mr. Cummings. "Well, we'll have to get after some of these concentrations of wealth."

To which the head waiter shot back: "Why don't you get busy on the Roosevelt's? They're certainly raking in the money."—Miami Herald.

Mr. Tyler Explains

About That Short Wave Interference—Technical But Courteous

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:

In answer to "The Black Cat" regarding interference in the broadcast band from local amateur short-wave stations. The reason cannot with proper consideration to both sides be given in a "simple explanation," and the actual data from which the writer will attempt to keep this article as brief as possible contains several pages of figures, decimal points, image, harmonic and kilocycle calculations which would have little meaning to the average reader.

Most radio listeners know or care very little about the fundamentals of radio. He knows a program transmitted from Boston is received in Rockland with entire satisfaction. He knows that his favorite network station in New York carries a program from Los Angeles into his house as "clear as a bell," and aside from occasional static and the local noise level of man-made disturbance his radio causes him little concern.

If the radio is not over five years old it is probably "super-hot" capable of satisfactory separation of stations operating in the broadcast band, but one day he suddenly hears voices from a local amateur station riding in with unusual volume at one or more points on his dial and he can't be blamed for pondering the legality of such interference.

Generally he broods over the incipient communication or shuts off his radio and works himself into a fine rage, seldom taking the pains to get the identifying call letter of the interfering station and the amateur operator is usually the last one to hear that he is interfering with Mr. "so and so's" reception.

Here is an all important fact to remember. No amateur wishes to interfere with any reception in the broadcast band.

It would seem therefore that a person hearing an amateur station in the broadcast band should at once confer with its operator who is obliged by law to identify his station by announcing his call letters at the beginning and ending of each transmission, and also to make a written record in his station log book of the date, time of day, type of emission, frequency of transmission, call letters of the station to whom he is talking and the driving power input to his transmitting tubes.

This record is subject to the inspection by any officer of the Federal Communications Commission at any time without notification, and it also serves as a verification of the station's activity for the protection of its operator against interference complaints not originating in his station.

The broadcast band is located only a few hundred kilocycles below the lowest allocated amateur band and interference from 160 meter phone stations does get into some broadcast receivers. Notice that I say some broadcast receivers. It might be a revelation to the listener who is experiencing such interference on his "pet" radio to check with his neighbor next door. What is he going to say when he finds that his neighbor does not even know that there is an amateur operator in Rockland, even though he plays his receiver almost constantly, and the neighbors radio is an antique compared with your nice super-hot? Here's something to think about that presents embarrassing possibilities to say the least. It stands to reason that if the majority or even a fair fraction of radios picked up amateur stations in the broadcast band the F.C.C. would "crack-down" on the amateurs, or the radio engineers would design a radio that would keep amateur stations out of that band. (The latter being entirely possible.)

Now, why do amateur phone stations on 160 meters interfere with broadcast reception? There are most always two sides to every question and this one is no exception, i.e.; by the combination of the tuning components that make your receiver efficient, and their effect on the carrier wave of the amateur station, because the harmonics of the oscillator in your radio set beat with the local amateur station. It is an old problem and many remedies have been attempted with more and mostly less effect as a cure.

An amateur station is not necessarily operating illegally because it interferes with radio programs. Out of fairness to the amateur the owner of the radio should reflect a moment on the possibility that the trouble could be with his radio after all. The offending (?) amateur will then be the obliging amateur, glad to co-operate in putting him to rights if approached in the proper spirit, and will be glad to meet him half way in any case.

DEMOCRATS HAD THEIR SAY

Brann Faction Comes Home Jubilant Over Moran Squelching—Outburst For Dubord

Unlimited oratory and enthusiasm marked the Democratic State Convention in Augusta Saturday.

Contrary to the announcement made by the Moran faction that they were going to carry their contested delegation fight to the floor of the convention, in an effort to reverse the decision of the State committee, to seat the Brann delegation, it was called off. In an effort to conciliate the warring factions the State committee offered to seat both delegations allowing each half a vote. The offer was rejected by the Moran group.

The rival factions were headed by Charles M. Richards, who carried the burden of the Brann fight; and Attorney James E. Connellan, who hangs up his hat in the Moran insurance office.

The jubilant Brannites blew back into town Saturday night and Sunday wearing broad smiles and looking ahead to "der tag" when they would be naming the generalissimo of the various W.P.A. battalions.

The Associated Press thus summarized the convention doings, with special reference to the platform.

Pledged to a program of fealty to New Deal objectives, Maine Democrats rode into the campaign wars behind the third-term banner of former Gov. Louis J. Brann. Dominant figure in the party's fervent biennial convention Saturday, Brann found in the party platform quick echo of some of his expressed recommendations.

They included a plank favoring abolition of the Executive Council, which Brann labeled "the patronage committee of the State." Another Brann-approved plank commended the Social Security Act. The council-nulification plank carried a demand that the Legislature submit the question to the electorate in a constitutional amendment.

Thus, Brann ranged himself beside State Senator Roy L. Pernal, opponent of incumbent Gov. Lewis O. Barrows for the G.O.P. gubernatorial nomination, in advocating council demise.

Brann's promise to nearly 1700 delegates to "take the State Police out of politics when I'm elected" was given support in another plank.

He referred directly to Barrows' removal of former State Police Chief Wilbur F. Towle in the course of his investigation of the still unsolved Auburn Motor Vehicle Registry burglary, then added, "I know that in my administration they didn't pick the pockets of the State of $40,000."

Platform builders acceded to Brann's assertion "I want no endorsement from this convention."

The people should choose nominees "as they are entitled to under the primary law," Brann said.

Republicans, in their Bangor platform, "unreservedly commended" the Barrows administration.

Another constitutional amendment suggested by Brann would extend a gubernatorial term from two years to four and provide against reelection.

The platform bristled with liberal labor views.

It favored a State wage-hour act, but recorded opposition to a geographical differential in the projected national law. It advised creation of a State Labor Relations Board; advocated amendment to the Workmen's Compensation Act to make occupational diseases compensable; recommended legislation prohibiting use of injunctions in labor disputes; urged that labor representatives should be given more consideration in filling State posts concerning labor, and recommended one member of the Industrial Accident Commission be chosen "from some bona fide trade or labor union."

The platform condemned "the present Maine law which disenfranchises unfortunate persons who are obliged to seek relief; opposed 'definitely and absolutely' any sales tax; advocated State co-operation with the Federal government in the interest of Maine agriculture; scored the State's system of depositing funds outside the State treasury, and urged such funds be handled by "safe and businesslike methods."

Above all, it gave hearty reaffirmation of loyalty to "that great humanitarian, President Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Other planks recognized "our imperative duty to make available sufficient revenue for educational purposes" and the "duty of the State to provide for social welfare of its citizens."

For an uproarious 15 minutes, banner-toting delegates staged a demonstration through the aisles of the City Hall Auditorium in an effort to "draft" F. Harold Dubord, national committeeman, as candidate for the Second District Congressional race.

The Waterville lawyer, previously unsuccessful in seeking the gubernatorial and U. S. Senatorial seats, said he would "give the matter more consideration and finally decide within 48 hours."

Privately, however, party leaders gave indication that business and family ties would not permit Dubord to run.

New Deal benevolence and concern for the commonwealth provided the motif of convention addresses by U. S. Representative Jennings Randolph (D-W. Va.) and Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, national women's division leader.

In his station. Keeping his license depends on strict adherence to the rules and he knows the penalty of not doing so. His station is subject to inspection by a government officer at any moment, and the Federal Communications Commission stands firmly behind the amateur who conducts his station properly.

This article is written in behalf of local amateur operators who have phone stations operating in the 160 meter band. Comments are solicited and will be answered through the columns of The Courier-Gazette or direct.

New Roses Bring Erin to Flower Lovers of America

"McGredy's Triumph" Blossoms

Bringing with them a dash of old Erin, five new Irish roses will be found in many American gardens this year. All are products of the famous McGredy family of hybridizers at Portadown, Ireland. Tests show them ideally adapted to weather conditions in all parts of the United States.

New this year, these Irish roses are characterized by handsome blossoms, vigorous foliage and strong, robust plants. All are continuous bloomers. Horticulturists predict these new "McGredy" roses will be popular with American flower lovers, stating that about 25 per cent of the commonly known hybrid teas in the United States today are of Irish origin. Many of them were developed by the McGredys who have a long line of famous roses to their credit. The 1938 Irish rose varieties are named "McGredy's Triumph," "McGredy's Rex Anderson," "McGredy's Pride," "Dorothy McGredy," and "McGredy's Pink." The bloom of "McGredy's Triumph" is of brilliant strawberry, blushed scarlet and orange. The "Rex Anderson" rose is white with an overcast of ivory, slightly deeper at the center. "McGredy's Pride" has orange and salmon-pink blossoms, veined with saffron-yellow. The outside of the "Dorothy McGredy" petals is sunflower-yellow, while the inner side is intense vermillion with a saffron-yellow base. "McGredy's Pink" is a bright rose. As the flower opens, the outer petals shade to a pearly cream and pink with a saffron-yellow base.

Unusual Response

Man Who Had Been Dunned Tells Why He Didn't Send a Check

My dear sir:

In reply to your request to send a check, I wish to inform you that the present condition of my bank account makes it almost impossible. My shattered financial condition is due to Federal laws, State laws, County laws, City laws, Corporation laws, liquor laws, Mother-in-laws, Brother-in-laws, Sister-in-laws and Outlaws.

Through these laws I am compelled to pay a business tax, amusement tax, head tax, school tax, gas tax, light tax, sales tax, liquor tax, carpet tax, income tax, food tax, furniture tax and excise tax. Even my brains are taxed. I am required to get a business license, car license, hunting and fishing license, truck license, not to mention a marriage license and dog license.

I am also required to contribute to every society and organization which the genius of man is capable of bringing to life: to women's relief, the unemployed relief and the gold digger's relief. Also to every hospital and curable institution in the city, including the Red Cross, the black cross, the purple cross and the double cross.

For my own safety I am required to carry life insurance, property insurance, liability insurance, burglar insurance, accident insurance, business insurance, earthquake insurance, tornado insurance, unemployment insurance, old age and fire insurance.

My business is so governed that it is no easy matter for me to find out who owns it. I am inspected, expected, suspected, disrespected, rejected, defected, examined, re-examined, informed, required, summoned, fined, commanded, and compelled until I provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need of the human race.

Simply because I refuse to donate to something or other I am boycotted, talked about, lied about, held up, held down and robbed until I am almost ruined.

I can tell you honestly that except for the miracle that happened I could not enclose this check. The wolf that comes to many doors nowadays, just had pups in my kitchen. I sold them and here is the money.

Yours faithfully

ROYALTY PAYS A VISIT

Thousands of jobless (Welch miners, their wives and children stood in a cold grey rain to greet Queen Mother Mary, the first royal visitor to the bleak Lannvi Valley since Edward II 600 years ago. Along the 25-mile route from Fagan's castle, the queen mother saw the black cavities of worn out coal pits and the rotting buildings of workings abandoned a decade ago. But flags and welcome banners inscribed in Welsh were everywhere. About 30 percent of the valley still is jobless. The special constables who controlled the crowds were unemployed miners.
