Knox, Lincoln And Waldo Business Men Form Mortgage Loan Service Promoting New Home Building And Remodeling In Coastal Area

FHA AND GI LOANS TO BE MADE AVAILABLE LOCALLY TO COMBAT DEFICIENCY IN AREA HOUSING; "TRADE-INS" A NEW FEATURE

The financing of homes, new and old, and the remodeling of existing homes may be a much easier process in the Coastal Area in the very near future.

A new financing firm, composed of several business men in this region, is to offer services in F. H. A. and G. I. financing, processing of details locally — and even "Trade-ins" as a new feature of home buying.

The organization incorporated as the K-L-W Mortgage Loan Service, has arranged with leading Maine lending institutions to have ample funds available for use in the Knox, Lincoln, Waldo County region in the coming year.

This company is enthusiastic over the prospects of new home building and financing in the area. It is pointed out that lack of ready funds on the scale that K-L-W is to offer has many times blocked the coming of new industry to the area.

Officers All Local Business Men

Officers and board members of the K-L-W Mortgage Loan Service are in either building supply, real estate, insurance or related fields. All are residents and business men in the three county area which the firm will serve.

President of the firm is Vernon L. Packard, Camden building supply dealer and area agent for the U. S. Steel Gunnison Homes which created such a stir in building circles last fall.

Franklin H. Wood of Rockland, real estate broker and civil engineer, is a vice president. Albert Elliot of Thomaston, who is a real estate broker and insurance agent is also a vice president.

Treasurer of the firm is Paul Hurlburt, Camden real estate and insurance dealer. Secretary of the firm is Robert W. Hudson, of Rockland, power company executive.

In addition to the officers the board of directors of the firm are William A. Brown of Camden, operator of the Knox Lumber Products Company of Camden and Zurbach Steel Company of Somerville, Mass.; Donald C. Carrigan of Damariscotta, real estate broker; Joseph C. Robinson, Jr., St. George, lumber dealer; Arthur B. Clark, Belfast, real estate and insurance dealer; John C. Creighton of Union, retired general store operator and appliance dealer and now a real estate operator; Willard Wright of the fuel firm of P. G. Willey & Co. in Camden and A. D. Gray, Waldoboro real estate man. Samuel W. Collins, Jr., Rockland attorney, is clerk of the corporation.

Purpose Is Home Ownership

A basic purpose of this new organization is to foster home ownership by spreading the benefits of terms which are being encouraged throughout the country by Federal Housing policy.

Many financial institutions have indicated that they welcome government guaranteed mortgages, but lack the personnel or contacts to negotiate and service such loans. Many of these loans are on a 20 year payment plan and require relatively low down payments on the original purchase.

Remodeling Loans Too

K-L-W intends to handle mortgage loans on all types of homes and for remodeling of homes, both urban and rural. However, homes or projected remodeling must meet F. H. A. specifications. One type of loan concerns remodeling and runs for a term of three years. Another type has to do with the 20 year mortgage loan for building new homes or the purchase of existing property.

"Trade-Ins" New Feature

One of the results which the company expects because of the service offered is the process known as "trade-ins" in homes. Naturally there are more details to this process than trading in a car. The company will arrange financing for the old home and its purchaser and for the new home which a couple is seeking. Mortgage money for the buyers of the old house will be available, and the same for the couple building the new place. The prospective home owner can then proceed with his future plans with his builder, real estate agent, plumber, or businessmen of his choice.

Borrowers Free To Choose Builders

The "trade-in" feature, long familiar to automobile buyers, is new in this section at least, to home buyers. It is not as simple a process as trading in for a new car, but is one which offers possibilities to families who otherwise might have to wait years to dispose of a home which they have outgrown before they could start one the family needs, to live in comfort.

Sound Government Financing

Mr. Packard observed that it is the intention of the group to bring to the people of the area a sound, government guaranteed, financing plan for home ownership.

Desperate Need For Housing

These business men believe, and others who have knowledge of this announcement have concurred, that the area needs new housing desperately. It is known that prospective industry has more than once turned away from the section because of the lack of modern homes for executives and workers.

Can Attract Industry

The old question as to which came first, the hen or the egg, has plagued the Coastal Area for years, relative to housing or industry. Is it industry which is needed to promote new housing; or is it new housing to attract new industry? The K-L-W Mortgage Loan Service plans to do something concrete along that line.

The temporary office location of the firm is at 67 High Street, Camden, telephone 2851.

BIRDSEYE WORKERS REMAIN AT TASKS WHILE NEGOTIATIONS FOR NEW CONTRACT CONTINUE

Negotiations between General Foods Birdseye Division fillet plant and the Atlantic Fishermen's Union continue.

Thursday, a meeting was held in Rockland with Harry Smith of Durham, N. H., a mediator of the National Labor Board, present. Appearing for the company were James Brazier, fillet plant manager and Harold Leach, personnel director or manager for Birdseye operations locally. The union was represented by Attorney Ruben Goodman of Boston and Henry Nare, agent for the union.

Headquarters of the General

Foods firm was represented by Ernest Gavin of New York and Richard Wagner, both personnel men of the company.

It is expected that a review of union demands will continue next Thursday. It is understood that certain items have been tentatively agreed upon, but are so entwined with others yet unsettled, that it is the opinion that no definite decisions have been made.

Workers in the plant, which employs approximately 150 persons, are remaining at their tasks even though the contract of the past year expired on Jan. 16.

Edward F. Prescott, Camden, Honored By A & P Stores

Edward F. Prescott of 3 Norwood avenue, Camden, recently celebrated his 25th anniversary with A&P Food Stores and joined more than 500 New England Division employees in the company's 25-year club.

Mr. Prescott, who is employed as manager of the A&P store at 37 Elm street Camden, joined the company on Jan. 1, 1929.

On his 25th anniversary he received a cash award from the company and congratulatory messages from Lawrence M. Cazayoux, divisional president, and C. M. Gannon, in charge of operations throughout this area.

Mr. Prescott is married. He served for 2½ years in the Quartermaster Corps during World War II.

He is a member of several organizations, including the Masons, Odd Fellows, American Legion, Eastern Star, Chamber of Commerce, YMCA, Businessmen's Association and the Megunticook Fish & Game Association.

Barker Building New Lobster Wholesale Plant

The Independent Lobster Company, owned by Gilbert Barker, is constructing a 60 by 50 foot, two story wholesale lobster plant on Tillson Avenue. The plant is on land purchased from the Thurston Oil Company by Barker a year or more ago.

The structure will have a second story 25 by 60 feet, which will house

Mothers' March Total May Equal Last Year

Mothers marched for polio Thursday despite snow and zero cold, and the result was most gratifying to campaign leaders.

Friday morning, there was an estimated $3700 credited to collections made by the mothers, with but two of the seven communities involved having their reports completed. The indications are that the fund will equal that of last year.

Promptly at 7 o'clock, the fire alarms signaled the start of the one hour house to house canvass. Just as promptly, mothers started the rounds of their neighborhoods, warmly dressed against the biting cold and heavy snow.

Within an hour, they were turning in funds to collection centers in the towns and other volunteers were recording the donations. In Rockland, the Knox County court house offices of the clerk of courts and the register of probate were thrown open for workers. Also, sandwiches and coffee were ready in the grand jury room for workers as they came in.

Mothers' Marches were conducted in Camden, Warren, Owl's Head, South Thomaston, Rockland, Thomaston and Rockport.

In many of the towns, fathers turned out too, to help mother in her rounds, due to the bad weather.

Directing the marches was Mrs. Constance MacPhail of Owl's Head, Women's Division chairman for the county, and Nathan C. Fuller of Rockland, county campaign chairman.

offices and storage rooms.

On the ground floor, there will be tanks to accommodate 20,000 pounds of lobsters, set up with a pumping system extending into the harbor.

A 10-foot wharf extension will be built out from the face of the 60 foot length of the building. Also planned is an 80 foot wharf with a 60 foot expansion to form an "L" shaped pier. The 80 foot section will extend along Tillson Avenue and the 60 foot section extend from it, parallel to the new building.

Completion of the building is expected in April.

Some men seem to think their brains are to be used only if their brass falls to work.

BOY SCOUT WEEK STARTS FEB. 8; COASTAL AREA QUOTA IS $4,930.72

Boy Scout Week comes up on a nationwide scale next week, the formal observation beginning on Feb. 8.

Plans for the observance of the week in the Coastal Area are ironed out by the area committee of which Kennedy Crane, Jr., is the chairman. In his efforts to bring Scouting to the renewed attention of the residents of Knox and Lincoln Counties he has the assistance of the area staff, consisting of Edgar M. Farnsworth as finance committee chairman, Major Elmer E. Barde, as public relations chairman and Lendon C. Jackson as auditor.

This committee will meet Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, at the C-D Headquarters in the basement of Knox County Court House, to plan for the financial campaign which will get underway immediately after the conclusion of Scout Week. The goal set for the Coastal Area has been set at $4930.72; the odd amount resulting from a per capita division of the goal set for the entire State of Maine by Pine Tree Council.

For Rockland, William Bicknell has assumed chairmanship of the activities. Captain Nathan Bard, U.S. (Ret.) is chairman for special gifts.

Another retired service man, Lt. Cmdr. Leroy McChuskey of the Coast Guard, has assumed chairmanship for the area encompassing Thomaston, South Thomaston, Port Clyde, Tenants Harbor, St. George, Warren, Hope, Appleton and Union.

Local chairman for Waldoboro is Max Fox; for Damariscotta, Robert Remy, and for Wiscasset, Donald Brackett.

The area around Boothbay Harbor, including that town as well as Boothbay and East Boothbay is looked after by Ralph Scott, as area chairman while Kenneth March shall have assumed charge of the local effort in Boothbay Harbor.

Other local chairmen named by Crane are for Camden, Mort Quatrell; Rockport, Leonard Ames; Vinalhaven, Edwin Maddox, and North Haven, Collin Winslow.

Rockport In One Sided Win Over Vinalhaven Five

Vinalhaven proved no match for the coastal class S powerhouse, Rockport, and went down to a one sided defeat to the Beavers 82-34 in a game played at Rockport Wednesday night. It was the second defeat in as many nights for the visitors from the island, having lost to Camden J.V.'s the night before.

The game was split up for Rockport with the first team playing the first half and the reserves playing the last. The starters managed to outscore the Wildcats 49-13, and the second stringers had to be content with a 33-21 point spread.

Ted Sullivan was high man for the Beavers with 14 points, but he had to take second place for individual scoring honors as Ira Peterson of Vinalhaven garnered one more point.

In the first game the Vinalhaven lasses went down to a 56-26 defeat at the hands of Bill Judkin's classy Rockport sextet.

EDITORIAL

DEDICATED TO AIDING HOME BUILDERS

The appearance of a well-financed new firm on the local scene with the announced purpose of making the owning of new homes or the modernizing of old ones much easier, may have a most beneficial effect on the area. It is an admitted fact that this community has suffered the loss of several excellent potential industries due to its dearth of modern homes. With the new firm dedicated to remedying this unhappy condition, the situation, industry-wise, should also be improved.

Vernon L. Packard of Camden, successful builder of new homes in his own right, heads the group of well-known business men from Knox, Lincoln and Waldo Counties who are leaders in the new venture. They promise co-operation with all existing loan interests in F. H. A. financing and other loan services, in making possible the erection and improvement of homes on a scale unrealized heretofore in this section of Maine.

"OPPORTUNITY" IS THE IMPORTANT WORD

When we first read of President Eisenhower's new home plan we were frankly surprised. The "forty years to pay" seemed like a leaf which had fallen out of the planning book of the Roosevelt era, but as the details unfolded, the broad thinking behind it and the eminently practical details bound to accrue, gave it a typical Eisenhower touch.

The word "Opportunity" peculiarly Eisenhower in its implications of hard work and prudent living, lent strength to his words: "It is properly a concern of this government to insure that opportunities are provided every American family to have a good home." It shows the innate humanity of the Chief Executive.

He views the problem of housing in the wider sense as well, the rehabilitation of properties salvageable and fit for human habitation, and the ending of slum areas too far delayed to be reclaimed. The rehabilitation of salvageable properties presents a real opportunity where the replacement of the vast number of these borderline habitations with new construction would bankrupt the nation.

Opportunity through government aid to the millions in the low income bracket, self-respecting and honest, to create decent homes is the answer.

CAMDEN Y.M.C.A. ALONE CARRIES THE TORCH

This week the Camden Y.M.C.A. is observing National Y.M.C.A. Week with a period of crowded activity programs demonstrating the splendid work carried on by this institution. It serves a real need in Camden—provides her young people with a clean, wholly respectable recreation area and carries forward a well-balanced program of building clean minds and strong bodies while laying a solid foundation of Christian citizenship.

The Camden Y.M.C.A. came into being in 1911 as a branch of the Rockport Y.M.C.A. at the instigation of a group of Camden clergymen. In 1916 the present fine home of the "Y" was completed, and it has served the community well ever since. The Y.M.C.A. at Rockport, and that at Rockland have passed from existence, more's the pity.

Camden "Y" alone carries the torch.

FEW HOME BABIES THESE DAYS

If one chooses to make even a brief study of the birth section of the vital statistics department of The Courier-Gazette, he or she will come up with a little thought of fact.

The day of the home-born baby has passed. A great majority of the recorded births note the fact that the child first saw the light of day in a hospital maternity ward, or in one of the several excellent maternity homes found in this area.

This is not an isolated condition but one which obtains over the nation and is one of the many factors of modern life and practice which has lowered infant mortality to its present satisfactory rate.

The average home is unfitted in many ways for the highly important business of ushering a new life into the world, where hospitals and maternity homes have every modern facility and personnel trained in such matters.

The modern practice is far the better.

Phil Davis received a telephone call from a California paper a few days ago. This is one of the ever winding circles, made by the "Nail Keg TV Group".

The Tuesday club met this week with Mrs. Harvey Lunden. Next week Mrs. Elmer Merrifield will be the hostess. The question has been asked, "What do you do at the Tuesday Club?"

The original purpose was for the group of young matrons to meet for a social evening, to chat, sew, mend, do fancy work or just relax and enjoy each others company. Of course there were refreshments. (Ask any of the early members what happened when we once took a vote concerning this item). We have held quite true to the original purpose but sometimes the work-baskets are conspicuous by their absence. Current events and problems are often discussed informally of course sometimes an interesting article from a magazine read, and favorite recipe exchanged.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Mank of North Waldo were supper guests Saturday of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Counce.

Norma Lermond has been confined to the house by the mumps.

Mrs. Maude Brown and son Charles and grandchildren, Jack and Jerry spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Willard Brown.

Fred Ladd who has been stationed in New Mexico has been visiting his family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lane, Sr. He will spend the weekend with his parents in New Jersey enroute to his new assignment, at Ft. Monmouth, N. J. The family plan to join him later.

Harold Colbeth
C.M.P. Manager
Of Bath Division

Harold I. Colbeth, Jr., former lighting engineer with Central Maine Power Company in the Eastern Division, has been assigned as district manager for the company at Bath. His appointment becomes effective Monday.

While in Rockland, from 1946 to 1950, he was active in community affairs. In 1950, he was transferred to Livermore Falls where he has since served as manager.

He is married to the former Dorothy Sherman of Rockland. The power company's magazine, The Exciter has the following to say about Colbeth and his promotion.

"Harold has been with CMP since October 1946 when he first reported for work in the Rockland Meter Department. After working there and in the Belfast office for a short time, he was sent to Boothbay Harbor where he served as utility man. In September 1947 he was assigned to the Lighting Department. Since 1950 Harold has been manager of the Livermore Falls District. He succeeds recently retired Ralph Braag as district manager in the important ship building city of Bath.

"Before joining CMP, Harold graduated from Andover Academy and Harvard University, after which he ran his own insurance business in Falmouth, Mass. In 1942 he joined the Army Air Force with which he served until 1946.

"There is a coincidence worth recording in the fact that Harold was selected to replace Ralph Braag, for other members of the families have worked together before. When the old Eastern Steamship Line was in its heyday Ralph's grandfather, Commodore Braag, directed the fleet's operation. One of his trusted captains was Harold's father, Captain Colbeth, who saw a great deal of service on the Boston-New York run commanding such noted coastwise steamers as the Harvard, Yale and Bunker Hill.

A GMC six-ton truck went off US 1 at the Camden-Lincolnville town line about 8:30 p. m. Friday to cause an estimated $1000 damage to the right side of the truck. The truck, according to State Police, was operated by Valentin Chiradonna of Lynn, Mass., who was uninjured. As near as could be determined, the driver, unfamiliar with the road, drove on to the soft shoulder and lost control of the vehicle which cut off two utility poles before it tipped over. It was righted and returned to the road about noon.

A car operated by William Leppanen of St. George collided with a deer on Route 131 in the late afternoon Thursday. There was considerable damage to the car but Leppanen escaped injury.

Word was received Thursday by General and Mrs. Kenneth P. Lord of the birth of a new grandson. The parents are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Lord 2nd of Riverside, Conn.

ROCKLAND JUNIOR HIGH SET IN BUS LINE THRONE BY CAMDEN WIN

Rockland Junior High clinched the Bus Line League title Tuesday afternoon by overpowering Camden Junior High 47-15 at the spacious Camden High Gymnasium. Height and experience of the Rockland squad proved too much for the charges of "Dool" Dalley to overcome.

With Clayton Vose and Charlie Mahoney doing the brunt of the scoring, Rockland jumped off to a 11-2 lead at the end of the first period and increased this to 21-5 at the half. Camden sank only one field goal in this first 12 minutes of play, that by Talbot, Camden guard.

Camden had its most productive period in the third quarter as they came up with seven points, but this was to no avail as Rockland lengthened their lead by netting nine points. The score at the end of the third stood 32-12.

Rockland added to its point spread in the fourth period and coasted home a 47-15 winner.

Vose and Mahoney used their height to its best advantage and through it dominated the Rockland offense, scoring all but 10 of the Junior Tiger total. Vose had 18 and Mahoney 19 points.

This game left Rockland with but two games to play in the league schedule and a three game lead on South School and Rockport, which now makes them officially the Bus Line pennant winners.

Rockland (47): Brown Lf. (1); Dorr Lf. Vose Rf. 9; Miller Rf. Mahoney C. 9 (1); Bird C. LaCroix Lg. Coakley Lg. 3 (1); Glover Rg. 1 (1); Rundlett Rg.

Camden (15): Benner Lf. 1 (2); Milliken Lf. Litchfield Rf. (2); Barry Rf. Carr C.; Dinsmore Lg. 2 (1); Roper Lg. Talbot Rg. 2; Jackson Rg.

Referee: Leach.

Southie In Second Spot

Using their starting five less than half of the game, South School rolled to an easy 37-14 triumph over hapless Owl's Head at Rockland High School Thursday afternoon.

This win enables Southie to remain in the running for second place in the Bus Line League with first place already having been nailed down by Rockland Junior High.

Russ Lunt and Gerald McCloskey got South School off to a 4-0 start, and with Russ scoring all of his 12 points in the first half, Coach Fred Verrill's quintet built up leads of Verrill used the reserves on his 13-man squad and they showed as well as the starters. This last half lineup outscored the boys from Owl's Head by a 16-5 margin to wait away with the contest 37-14.

Rockport still has a game left with the Junior High, so South

School can very well sneak in as undisputed owners of second place.

The big worry on the remaining South School schedule is a game with a puzzling Camden team. Their easy victory over Rockport proved that "Dool" Dalley's Camden five have more up their sleeve than they have shown in some games.

South School (37): DeMass 1

1 (1); Carr Lf.; Poulin Lf. 2; M

Cuskey Rf. 2; Johnson Rf. 2; Lu

C. 5 (2); Watling C.; R. Smith L

Owl's Head (14): W. Montgon

Referee: Johnson.

Rockport-Thomaston Cancel

The Bus Line League game between Rockport and Thomaston slated for Thomaston Thursday afternoon was postponed because of inclement weather conditions. The game will be played at Thomaston next Tuesday afternoon.

This is a big one for Rockport as they need a win or else they will fall one full game behind South School. South School crept a half game in front of the Young Bears as a result of their victory over Owl's Head Thursday. This is the first time that Rockport has been as low in the standings.

This Rockport aggregation of Ted Richards are playing the poorest brand of ball for the season, suffering two straight defeats. Unable to make a comeback from a loss to South School, Rockport took in on the chin from Camden in a big upset a week later. In order to get straightened out for the Bus Line tournament, they need to get back in their winning ways

Union High School ended its Bulwer League campaign by posting a 68-19 victory over Warren at Warren Wednesday night. The win left Union's league record at four and two while for Warren it was their fifth straight loss.

In the preliminary game, Gerry Tolman scored 36 points to lead the Union lasses to an 85-55 victory. Phyllis Driscoll set some sort of a record for a Warren hoopster by dunking 35 points through the net for the Tiger lasses. The 35 points has not been topped by anybody from Warren in many months.

From the opening whistle the boys game was never much of a contest as Ronnie Barker had one of his hottest nights of the year and wound up with 18 points, despite the fact that he only played about half of the 32 minutes.

Union jumped off to a 20-2 lead in the first period, increased this to 45-10 and 53-13 by the end of the next two quarters, and walked off the floor at the final buzzer ahead 68-19. Every Union player but one entered the scoring column.

THOMASTON SCRAP BOOK DEALS WITH ROMANCE OF LIME—A CHAMPION KILN

This picture portrays an abandoned kiln and kiln shed on the land of Dunn and Elliot. This was one of the abandoned kilns, the best of Burgess O'Brien and Company. It held the record of burning the most lime from any wood-burning kiln in a stated time hereabouts. The lime from such kilns has never been surpassed. Grand old kiln with its 1896 record still recorded in big letters on a beam in the kiln shed. The shed is now used by Dunn and Elliot as a garage for their large trucks.

By F. L. S. Morse

In the early days all the rock was burned in the old-fashioned kilns, as the so-called patent kilns of today did not exist.

There are no truly old-fashioned kilns today that I know about. The last one was built and owned by S. Fessenden Allen. (Known as Fez). This was not far from the western bank of Mill River near the end of Fish street. It was in use after 1890 and after the last kiln of lime had been burned, Allen's grounds the Ralph and Frank Richards cut the road for another burning but this wood rotted where it lay down by the river.

The kiln shed was blown down on Nov. 9, 1930. A sudden gust of wind took it the same or a similar breeze to that which blew down the barn of John and Walter Stackpole on the same day. Chimneys were blown down and a lot of damage done in the town on that day.

To learn what I could about these old fashioned kilns, I paid a short visit to Ralph Richards in his cottage at the foot of a little valley in Cushing, not far from Hathorne's Point. The gully is shut in on two sides by hills and opens on the water of an almost landlocked cove. A stream, crystal clear, and not more than a yard wide runs past the house into the water. In this romantic spot Ralph and his brother both boyhood friends of mine talked about the last old-fashioned kiln.

Later I talked with Harvey Butler, one of a few surviving rock teamsters. I knew of only six. He told me that his first rock-hauling was to an old fashioned kiln.

As I understand it, these, there were three arches one at the front end, and a smaller arch on either side. These were bricked or stoned over at the entrance. Sometimes there would be a smaller arch built up within the big arch and taken out at each burning. Wood was put in through these arches after the fires were started. First a lot of wood was piled up for the fire. Then the rock was piled upon and over the wood as the wood burned out, the new wood was put in from the entrances. After the kiln had burned a week or more the fires were allowed to burn out, and the lime was taken out. This was called "Drawing the kiln." A number of men and considerable liquor were supposed to be a necessity for this work in the old days. It must have been very hot, hard work. The most primitive type was nearly always built on a hill side.

It would be impossible to obtain a complete list of the old-fashioned kilns even of all that existed at any one time. Cyrus Eaton writes that there were 35 in 1794. There were many kiln owners. The majority of owners had one kiln. Some had two, three or four. Later as the so-called patent kilns, which had grates and were in permanent square or circular walls, the business came into the hands of a few firms. It was this way in the Nineties as I first remember.

The first kilns that I know of in my part of the town were those of William Daves on the present Harvey Butler's home site. In 1817 these were sold with the Daves farm to my great grandfather, James Morse, Sr., and later he had a partner Joshua Allen. John Stackpole of South Thomaston an ancestor of Dr. Lucy Spear had kilns on his land where the Rifle Range is seen. Later Luther Hersey had these. Hersey has no descendants in town. He was an ancestor of Mrs. Jane Wall of Roosevelt, N. Y., a daughter of the late Carrie Morse Thomas.

Arunah Robbins had several large kilns at Morse's Corner on the lot of my childhood home. This was in 1813 and thereafter. I have been told that Boaz Brown burned lime but where I do not know. To this day the remains of old kilns may be found in fields and pastures of which nothing is known.

Dexter S. Morse of Dexter street, who attained the greatest age of any of his clan in Thomaston, once told me that when his father, the first John Dexter Morse burned a kiln of lime, he would allow Henry or Daniel or Dexter, his boys to have little old-fashioned kilns of their own and to send their lime with their father's by schooner to Boston or elsewhere.

David Gay, who lived on the Old Thomaston Road or the Marsh Road as it had been called and east of Buttermill Lane was the first to send lime from the Shore Village. (The ancient name for Rockland) to New York. This was while he lived at the Village. He later moved back to the Marsh.

Capt. John Dexter, a brother of Lavinia Wheaton and Freeborn Morse, was the first to carry regular cargoes from the Shore to Boston. Those cargoes must have consisted mostly of lime. In those days the captains of the schooners would sell the lime after the schooners arrived at the destined port, either as owner or agent. Sometimes the owner accompanied the captain.

All of our townsmen have heard how Capt. Simon Shibles once took a cargo of lime to Washington a new and untold market. Not being able to sell it in expected channels he went up to the White House and sold it to President Andrew Jackson by sheer force of eloquence. Anybody who could sell old Hickory something he didn't want was certainly some salesman.

The lime business, like all others, had its ups and downs. About 1821, when there were kilns from one end of the town to the other, from Woodcocks near Pumpkin Hill to Ulmer and Gays, at the Shore besides those at Owl's Head and the "Gig" lime prices became low and the bad conditions were made worse by underselling by some overzealous burner. So a project was formed to keep prices up to moderate the dangers from competition. To quote from Cyrus Eaton; "mutual obligation was entered by the producers not to undersell each other nor have more than one kiln of it (lime) on hand at one time—each kiln as soon as put in casks and inspected. The scheme worked well for a time and brought the price up to $150 and even $1.75 but like all plans for sustaining artificial prices it was evaded in one way or another and soon abandoned." On page 322 of his history Eaton quotes John Bird Esq., in the above statements.

By the year 1828 there were 160 kilns according to a statement of Hezekiah Prince and an article in the Thomaston Register, which was quoted to some length by Eaton. Of these 160 kilns 12 were on the Western side of Mill River below the bridge five on St. Georges below Mill River, three above between the bridge and Tillsons, five at Port Wharf.

Three at Foster's Wharf, three at Gleason's, one back of Eaton's, six on Green's Wharf, three at Woodcocks. There were also kilns in Rockland both at the Meadows and at the shore.

The Thomaston map of 1855 showed that Peles and Vose had two kilns at Beechwoods. I believe the Vose was grandfather of Alexander Mayo. The kilns were not far from the Mayo home. J. Levenseller had two kilns by the ice dam. Robinson and Co., had two kilns to the North East of the Beechwoods quarry. East of Mill River, Dodge Healey had one kiln, J. C. Linscott one kiln, William Stackpole, two kilns, James Morse, one kiln, Washington Robbins, one kiln, Barnabas Webb three kilns.

West of Mill River, Rowland Jacobs had two kilns, Merritt Austen one kiln, Morse and Farrand two kilns, (Daniel Morse and Franklin Farrand, father of the late Austen Farrand, whom many remember.)

At the foot of Knox street, E. Robinson had three kilns. Near Brown's shipyard were three kilns, probably Brown's (The Watson's Point Browns) O'Brien and Watts had four kilns. This makes 32 kilns shown on this map.

It is not probable that these various sources show a very accurate picture of the lime industry in the old days of rugged individualism. Old sheds show evidence of still other kilns. Doctors, lawyers, tavern keepers and farmers by the score had old fashioned kilns as a side line.

Perez Tilson had kilns on Fish street near the town landing at an early date.

My boyhood recollections of kilns were all of the patent kilns, which came to burn coal later. J. A. Creighton and Co., did continue to burn wood after the others had changed and continued to produce a superior quality of lime. In my house are some original ceilings put up when the house was built in 1823, while later ceilings have been jarred loose by the blasting in lime quarries. An artesian well in the neighborhood is said to enter the ledge 45 feet below the surface, but we certainly get the jar from the quarry blasts.

The kilns that I remember best are those of Burgess and O'Brien and Co., where I often went with my father who owned part of a quarry with the firm, or rather it was owned by Grandmother Morse, and the J. O. Cushing Co's, where I sometimes went with my great-uncle, who operated quarries for that firm. He was Lathley R. Nichols, an one-armed man who drove old Puss a sorrel mare. Uncle always spoke of going down to At's store, because Atwood Levenseller was a member of the firm. We all remember the J. A. Creighton company, John and Charles, sons of Capt. James A. Creighton carried on the business long after the other firms had sold to the "Syndicate," as we called the Rockland, Rockport Lime Company.

I can remember the high platforms around the kilns and how the rock wagons, drawn by two or four horses were drawn up over a bridge or ramp in the good old days.

A Free Dinner
In the old days before 1825 when my grandfather and Joshua Allen had old fashioned kilns, down the road which kilns had been built by William Mears Dawes years before, the partners were busy one day drawing a kiln. This was an elaborate process as the kiln had to be practically taken down and a goodly number of men assembled. To fortify themselves for this hot task, the men demanded a lot of liquor on the job. Great grandfather was the one and only total abstainer in the community, but he had to provide the booze, if he was to have his kiln drawn. On this day it was planned for the partners and crew to have a chicken dinner with the Morses.

Great grandmother had the tables set and the chickens well cooked but the men were late. She had already begun to fret when an old wanderer, one Hatevil C. who was generally referred to as "Old Hate" appeared at the door. "Well, Miss Morse," he said, "I smell a fine dinner."

"Yes," said Great grandmother, "Mr. Allen and all the men are coming to eat with my husband. They are drawing the kiln today."

"Oh, there is some mistake said Hate," "I saw them all going in to Mr. Allen's, Mr. Morse and all of them" and he named them all over without a mistake as he was able to do, having stopped at the kiln a short time before.

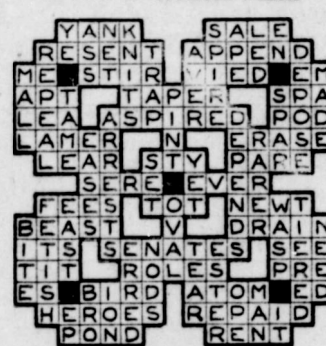

The lady didn't know whether to believe this or not, but as time passed, and nobody came, and with Hate's unedifying conversation the time may have seemed even longer than it otherwise would have, seemed, she weakened. Finally, convinced that he had spoken truly she brought out a chicken and served him a generous portion with all the fixings and left the room.

Hearing the outside door open a few minutes later, she came into the room to meet her husband and his guests. Hate had not only eaten his serving, but had been at work on the chicken and left it in a condition such that nobody would care for it. Great grandmother explained what had happened and wept.

Great grandfather did not weep, but when Hate looked up with a grin and made the inelegant remark, "There's no ripping of guts Mr. Morse" he seized the old scoundrel by the shoulders, and with a reply equally laconic and only a shade less quotable, assisted him out the door with the toe of his boot. While this was not altogether polite, it was more humane for him to administer the punishment than to have left him to deal with the younger and larger fellows whose spirits had been buoyed up by liberal potations of New England rum.

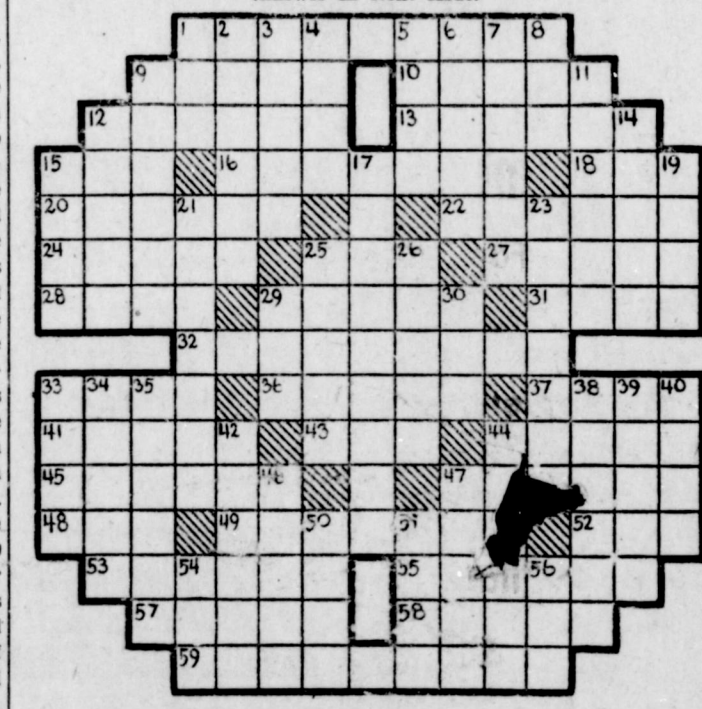

In regard to the destruction of Fey and Mrs. Edgar Lemke, and Mrs. Allen kilnshed in Thomaston, The Courier Gazette of a preceding week stated that some boys were playing there a few minutes before the shed was blown down. Ernest Gray, former deputy sheriff, was one. I believe he said that Jam Allen and one of his brothers and one of the Shaw boys, either Maynard or Clarence, had been there as well.

Is This Your Farm Or Your Neighbor's Place?

Number 15 in the series of Coastal Area farms published last Saturday, was that of Mrs. Parker Young whose farm is on Route 137 between Lincolnville Center and Belfast, a short distance from the Center.

The establishment shown above is number 16 in the series. While there are three homes shown in the picture, it is the poultry farm which is the picture subject. An 11 x 14 picture of the place is waiting for the owner, just as soon as he identifies it at the office of The Courier-Gazette.

Mrs. Young's farm is operated by her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Cedric Holloway, who have been on the place about 12 years.

The farm has been in the Young family about 50 years, but was settled upwards of 200 years ago by Nathan Knight, whose first home was a log cabin. A great grandson of the original settler, Arne Knight, lives on the adjoining farm.

There are 22 head of cattle on the farm, divided between Guernseys and Holsteins with their product going to Hood. In addition, Mrs. Young and the young couple operate a flock of 2,370 Rhode Island Red layers.

Mrs. Young is a member of Tranquillity Grange and the Extension Association while Mr. Holloway is active in Extension Association affairs.

FOOD VALUE OF MILK IS OUTLINED BY HOME DEMONSTRATION AGENT

Dear Homemaker:

Milk has been called "Nature's food," "the perfect food," "the complete food," and you'll notice in all these names for milk, it's called a food, not a drink or a beverage. And that's because milk does contain all the nutritive quality of food, and then some. You receive protein, fat, large amounts of calcium and riboflavin, more in milk than in some of the more solid items we consider as food.

So, here we have increasing supplies and lower prices coming of a food that is good for the whole family.

Consumers consider milk a year-round commodity, and they're right. Milk is available in all seasons of the year. But milk still has a season—a season when it's more plentiful and therefore less expensive.

This doesn't mean that milk isn't always a good buy, for it is. Milk supplies so many nutrients that it would be difficult to find an excuse for not serving it. You get an inexpensive source of protein and calcium when you buy milk, and large seasonal supplies or not, you need to keep milk on your shopping list at all times of the year.

When you think of babies and young children you often think of milk as one of their main foods. When you think of grandmother, do you think of milk as an important food for her? You should, you know, because milk is one of those foods that is needed by the body for the whole of life. As people grow older, their bones become more brittle and milk is food that can help those brittle bones become less so. Broken bones heal readily in a young child, and drinking milk in maturity can help bones heal more rapidly than, too.

The nutrients in milk help other functions of the body, too. Their value in tooth formation needs no description, but did you know that the calcium in milk aids the clotting ability of the blood? Calcium also helps to keep the muscles and nerves in good condition.

Another nutrient in milk that helps the whole family's health is riboflavin. This member of the B-vitamin family is necessary for general good health and for good functioning of nerve tissue. The butterfat in milk contains vitamin A, the eye vitamin, and if you serve homogenized milk, this vitamin is distributed throughout the milk in equal amounts. Thiamine and vitamin D are also present in milk.

And of course milk is a good source of protein. Nutritionists list milk with meat as a protein source. To give you an idea of its rating for this nutrient, here are the important food values found in milk, quite an impressive array, and you needn't wonder about its value for the whole family, because it's plain. You can find few foods that give you the same return in food value for the money spent. Whether your family is large or small, young, or old, milk is a necessary item for the shopping list.

Milk is available in many forms, the most familiar form is pasteurized, homogenized milk—milk that has been heated to destroy harmful bacteria and then treated to break up the particles of cream so they are evenly distributed through the milk. Homogenized milk has a richer flavor than plain pasteurized milk because of this even distribution of the cream globules and the vitamin A that these globules contain is available in the last glass of milk in the quart just as much as the first.

Other forms of fresh milk available are vitamin D milk, which is produced and distributed under standards set up by the American Association of Medical Milk Commissioners.

For those members of the family who object to the flavor of plain milk, you might look into flavored milk. The most familiar flavoring added to milk is chocolate. But you can find other types of flavored milk on the market, or you may make up your own flavorings for milk in your home.

Some of you who are watching your weight might be interested in fat-free milk. This milk has most of the butterfat removed, and usually has added amounts of vitamin A and D so that the nutritive quality of the milk is the same as whole milk, but the butterfat is missing.

Buttermilk is a by-product of butter, the churning of sour cream into this table fat. It has a distinctive flavor and again a low-calorie content because so much of the butterfat is removed.

Other processed forms of milk are the evaporated and condensed milks that are so handy for cooking, and require no refrigeration to store, canned. Evaporated milk is regular whole milk which has had half the water removed. When you mix it with an equal amount of water, you have a liquid which has about the same food value as

JEFFERSON AND ALNA GIRLS WIN 4-H PUREBRED HEIFERS; EIGHT BOYS ALSO RECEIVE ANIMALS

and Mrs. Ernest Smith of Jefferson and Ann Carleton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carleton of Alna are the two girls selected by the 4-H Dairy Foundation committee in Knox-County Counties to receive their purebred heifers this spring.

Eight boys were also selected as follows: Lincoln Hawes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler Hawes of Union; Arnold Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hill of Warren; Irvin Wright brother of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hill of Union.

Robert Spear, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Spear of North Nobleboro; David Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Walker of Alna; E. Thomas Albee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Albee of Alna.

Kendall Moody, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Moody of Appleton and Roger Pierce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pierce of North Whitefield.

Marjorie is a member of the Jefferson Luckettes 4-H club and Ann is a member of the Alna Goal Seekers.

Lincoln Hawes and Irvin Wright are members of Coggan's Hill 4-H club in Union; David Walker and E. Thomas Albee are in the Alna Sod Busters club.

Kendall Moody belongs to the George's Valley Hustlers of Appleton; Robert Spear is a member of North Nobleboro Busy Farmers; Roger Pierce belongs to North Whitefield Jolly Workers and Arnold Hill is a member of George's Valley 4-H Club of Warren.

Purebred dairy animals will be purchased for these 4-H club members by the 4-H Dairy Foundation committee. Each member pays for full coverage insurance on their animal and returns the first heifer calf to the 4-H Foundation. This calf will be given to another 4-H member under the same plan.

fresh, whole milk. Condensed milk is processed the same as evaporated milk, except that it has had 40 per cent sugar added to it and is much higher in calorie content.

Dry milk is made from milk which has had all the water removed. It needs no refrigeration when in its dry form, but as soon as it's reconstituted, it requires coldness to keep it good. Dry milk is available as non-fat milk, whole dry milk, and you can also buy dried cream.

These are the forms in which milk is available. They are many and you can make your choice depending on the use you want to make of the milk and your pocketbook. All are nutritious and good for the family.

County Agent's Corner

Dear Farmer:

It's been a long time since you have seen one of these columns. Hope that they will again be regular and thanks for several of you noting their absence.

In recent days, I've come across two people who have been injured while working in the woods. Farm accidents are all too common and I hope that you will each do your bit to cut them down.

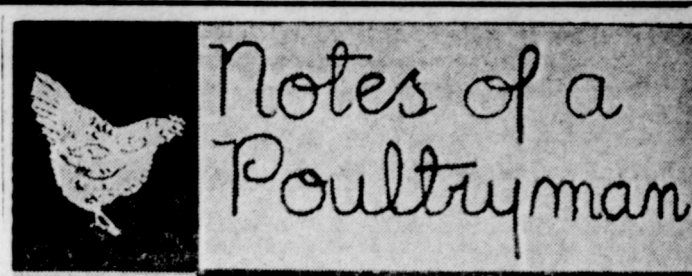

Both of these accidents had a bit of the foolishness about them as both men will willingly admit. One went into the woods alone and could have been seriously hurt without aid near him. The other just pulled a quick trick without stopping to think.

Let's make sure that our equipment is in A-1 shape, so that it wouldn't let us down; our farms are cleaned up so we won't trip, stumble, or jumble. Now, while winter is here is the time to do this work.

Sure enjoyed the Christmas tree meetings. Had a lot of fun besides learning a lot how to manage Christmas tree stands. Still think Dan Ames came all the way from Alna more to see the Herefords than the Christmas trees.

Winter meetings are well under way. Watch the papers and your mail to see when meetings will be held that may interest you.

Sincerely,
Gilbert Jaeger,
County Agent

By Henry Teague

When broiler prices hold steady at a profit making level over two or three flocks and contact raises figure how much they would have made if they had been raising on their own, there is a definite shift to independent raising. The result is sometimes disastrous as some growers have found during the low market of the past several weeks.

There is little question but that some dressing plant operators feel the squeeze too, but they handle large numbers of flocks and are often skilled in riding a crisis.

One of the big pitfalls that can trap an operator is the idea that it is smart to hold a flock for a rise in price. It is somewhat like outguessing the stock market, and the real student of trends is most often the winner. I hear the remark that it is safe to hold because the market has hit bottom. One time I was offered 28 cents for roasters. I told the buyer that I thought the market had hit bottom and the only way was up. Two days later I sold at 26 and in a week the market was 24.

I came into Thanksgiving week this past year with roasters ready to go but no market at any price. They were heading for six pounds and I mulled over the idea of caponetting them so as to hold until the Christmas market. As far as I could figure, my only chance of winning was a rising market. I sold the next day after Thanksgiving at 28 and I have been happy ever since. I have heard of some instances where caponetting was tried and proved a very expensive idea.

One sad story on a falling market is that you can't always sell when you want to. The market of the day may be 25 but if that market is weak you may get 21 by the time you can get any one to move your birds. Buyers are friendly souls on the whole, but they do not intend to share your losses.

The man who goes independent in broiler raising has got to be prepared to take his losses. It is wonderful to make a nice profit on the first flock. It gets you away to a good start. But there is nothing sure about the market. Those who broke away from contract raising this fall were really asking for it. If they were to start on their own now, I will venture the opinion that their chances would be much better. The slack off in chick sales is an indication of better prices sometime this spring.

Once a man gets started he needs to build up a financial backlog to tide over the low markets. One can get awful hungry if he hits a low market with nothing in the bank. The grain dealer may be willing to go along on credit but he is not going to feed the family.

Perhaps the safest way to run as an independent is to operate on a schedule with chicks ordered way ahead. This means that birds go to market at say 11 weeks and a new flock of chicks goes under the brooders a week or two later. This method enables one to take advantage of the law of averages.

Apparently the overall profit will give the grower a fair profit if he raises enough birds, generally more than the penny a week. This is assuming that management is O. K. Like any rule there can be exceptions. It is possible to have an unavoidable disease outbreak coupled with a low market and that is a bad combination, the kind that can put a man right out of business. But one can have a similar combination in any kind of a business and if he works for hire misfortune can strike him too.

Let's forget the idea that the broiler business is just a big gamble. The boys who are staying with it year after year and show every sign of being prosperous are not just the lucky ones. To be sure they have the right combination. They know how to handle their birds and they make a study of market conditions. They do not try to squeeze out an extra penny a pound by holding their birds on a weak market. But they often make an extra penny or two on quality. When the market is poor their birds go at the best prices possible, while buyers tell the others that they will have to wait and waiting on a bad market generally means a lower price.

No one likes to work for three or four months for nothing, but nothing is a lot better than less than nothing. Many thousands of dollars have been lost by broiler growers during this low market. Some will not be with us any longer because they held their birds too long. A lot of those lost dollars were unnecessary and perhaps some of us will benefit by lessons learned. Those who did not learn and still can try again will probably go out in the next crash. And one does not have to be smart to predict that there will be another very low market in the future.

Materials needed in Maine is time. Many soils will require four or more tons of lime per acre. Others need only one ton and a few do not need any.

Mosher says the only accurate method of determining the amount of lime and fertilizer needed is by soil testing. A record of the soil tests needs to be kept to get the most from them.

County Agent Gil Jaeger has soil fertility record books available. He has information on soil testing, liming, and fertilization. All of these subjects are being discussed at soil fertility meetings. Farmers who are interested in improving the soil fertility on their farms can get many helpful ideas at the Extension meetings, Mosher concludes.

Corbett reported that the breeding efficiency of 75 per cent in 1953 was very satisfactory and a little higher than it was in 1952. Leading the 28 Maine Breeding Co-operative units in the state was the Skowhegan unit with 3022 services. Each of the 28 MBC units is staffed with a breeding technician who serves the dairy herds of the area.

Corbett pointed out that this artificial breeding work ties in very closely with the Extension Service project on breeding better dairy cattle. The project is carried on by all county agents in Maine.

Red Cross Will Conduct Home Nursing Course

What are Knox County citizens doing to co-ordinate efforts towards preparedness in case of disaster be it large or small? In war, or when a disaster is declared an Emergency by the governor of the State of Maine Civil Defense and The American Red Cross work together in many ways, one is Home Nursing and this is the responsibility of Red Cross. Since 1908 one of its important services, in times of peace or war, has been the training of instructors in order that they may teach this course free of charge to thousands of women every year. In war there is no lack of volunteers to take Home Nursing. In peace time people overlook the fact that the home care of the sick is an every day occurrence, which, with training they could meet with greater ease and efficiency.

At the present time, living under a constant threat of attack, citizens must prepare themselves for any emergency. Therefore, in Knox County beginning Feb. 1, Mrs. Esther Long, R. N. former Eastern Area Representative, and since 1944 an authorized Trainer of Instructors, will conduct a five day class in the Bok Nurses Home, Rockland on Mondays and Thursdays from 9:30 until 4:30. Those eligible for this course are Registered and Graduate Nurses and Home Economics Teachers only. Registration must be made before Feb. 1 at the Red Cross office, telephone Rockland 1340.

These instructors will in turn have classes (for anyone interested in Rockland, Camden and other towns in the county during March (date to be set later). Those wishing to take it may call either Rockland 1340 or Camden 2881.

In this Home Nursing Course there is a wealth of practical up-to-date information covering all the basic needs of a sick person. With understanding and training to meet these needs, to carry out the doctor's orders with ability and confidence, so many things can be avoided. A sick person is happier at home when conditions are favorable. Lack of money, scarcity of Registered Nurses, over-crowded hospitals make it often a necessity to care for them there. It prepares the young mother with her first baby to care for him intelligently, making a happier and healthier child, and a more satisfactory mother because she has been taught the right way and does not have to learn by trial and error. Competent, gentle handling of the elderly sick person makes life so much more bearable for them. Prompt recovery of any patient may rest upon the nursing care. It helps to

Ruth Slenczynska, who is remembered as a child prodigy of the piano and who has returned to the concert field during the past year or so after an absence of several years, did not come off too well in her recent New York recital. One reviewer said in part: "Miss Slenczynska was not in very good form. Neither intellectually nor technically was she mistress of the lengthy Schumann work, which contained a variety of effects that sounded extremely artificial. Her ideas about the work involved a funeral march rather than a quiet, lyric statement, and throughout the piece there were abrupt rhythmic changes, a lack of tension, and an inability to hold the music together."

"Perhaps Miss Slenczynska was trying to be original, but it was difficult to find much validity in her musical ideas. Here and there she played a phrase with real artistry, only to follow it with something that disturbed the effect. She has a talent that conceivably could be developed, but she will have to work very hard to overcome the liabilities imposed by what would appear to be years of bad technical and musical training."

If memory serves me correctly, the greater part if not all of Miss Slenczynska's training has come from her father. I recall that when she was hailed as a child prodigy, articles pertaining to her home life and training at the piano always gave me the feeling that she was driven constantly—I always pictured her as sitting at the piano in practice day in and day out, with no break for recreation or pleasure. Doubtless that was an exaggerated idea, yet the feeling persists that she was driven far beyond what her talent justified.

Jan Peerce, tenor, is a radio favorite so his many over-the-air admirers will be interested to hear about his appearance with the NBC Symphony. Arturo Toscanini conducting, last Sunday afternoon. The first act of Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" was given and Mr. Peerce replaced Jussi Björling who was taken ill. Mr. Peerce, because of other commitments and because he had not sung the role in several seasons, was reluctant to undertake the performance at such short notice. However, at Toscanini's telephone request he agreed to do so. The conductor, who will be 87 years old on March 25, pointed out that this and next Sunday's broadcast (the second and third acts of the opera) may be his last appearances as an opera conductor. It was then that Mr. Peerce agreed to undertake the broadcast.

Incidentally the Sunday afternoon broadcast was Mr. Peerce's 15th appearance with Toscanini and the NBC Symphony. Earlier performances have included "Fidelio," "La Bohème," "La Traviata," and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The last three performances were recorded by RCA Victor. Victor is also expected to record "Un Ballo in Maschera" with a view toward future release on disks. It will be Mr. Peerce's first authorized "Ballo in Maschera."

And here is something about Lily Pons, another radio favorite. On January 3, 1951, the coloratura soprano, a trifle more diminutive than she is now, stepped on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera to make her debut as the hapless heroine in Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor." That was 23 years and also 99 Lucias ago. At least that is what the statisticians claim, and it is not always easy to argue with statisticians. But Miss Pons who was about to embark on her 100th performance as Lucia was disturbed by the diminutive size of the number, and said so, in this manner: "I have sung Lucia all the time since 1931. At the Metropolitan in San Francisco, in South America, in Europe." She did not know exactly the number of Lucias "hanging on her belt," but she estimated a number far exceeding a hundred. "After all, I made my career with Lucia," said Miss Pons, in conclusion.

Many times I have spoken of Zara Nelsova, the renowned cellist, and I note from a program sent me by Lillian Whitmore from Boston that Mme. Nelsova is to be the artist at the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum on Sunday, Feb. 7.

I have wondered just what was happening to the Cimblelock Quartet (remember their fine performance at the Rubinstein Club's spring concert last year?) since Mr. Elder, the cellist had moved to Rhode Island, so wrote to Richard Dyer, Director of Public Relations, Colby College, for information. Here is what he writes me:

"Regarding the Cimblelock Quartet, it had been our hope that it would function as the Colby String Quartet this year. Arrangements were completed but since Mr. Elder moved to Rhode Island, the group has become inactive. I have no information as to whether, when another cellist is available, it will be re-formed."

Colby College has some excellent musical events scheduled beginning in March and as soon as more detail is available, Mr. Dyer promises to advise me.

According to the record I have, Community Concerts for February are

Feb. 4, Constance Keene, pianist, Rockland, at the Community Building, at 8.15 p. m.

Feb. 12, Janice Moudry, contralto, Belfast High School Auditorium, at 8.15 p. m. (Miss Moudry is also to appear in August on Feb. 15, but there is no reciprocity in August.)

Another of the youthful musicians who used to be at Rockport and who is emerging in the musical world with success, is Jacob Lateiner, who appeared with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony on Jan. 2. It interests me tremendously as Jacob back in the Rockport days, now perhaps ten years ago, was a very precocious lad, not too prepossessing or engaging. His brother, Isaac was with him, and I remember him as even less prepossessing or engaging. But time sometimes works wonders! The boys were quite on the intellectual side, reading " hefty " volumes on philosophy and the like, and they played chess with intensity and devotion. Jacob that summer was working with Efram Zimballast for whom he was accompanist in 1945. I think Isaac was studying violin at this time but am not too sure.

A brief biography of Jacob which appeared in the New York Philharmonic-Symphony program says that he was born in Cuba in 1928 of Polish parents, and received his early musical training in Havana. He gave his first student recital at the age of six. Later he came to Philadelphia to study at the Curtis Institute of Music with Mme. Venigova—he was eleven years old at that time, and in December of 1945 he made his debut with the Philadelphia Orchestra as winner of their Youth Competition. He has appeared with several of the major orchestras, one summer he played in a Beethoven Festival at Tanglewood under Koussevitzky. He has just completed three years' service in the U. S. Army, during which time he has not been heard professionally, although he appeared as piano soloist with the U. S. Army Field Band both on tour in this country and in Europe. His appearance with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony really marked his return to the professional concert stage. The picture accompanying this thumbnail biography shows him much improved in looks. Didn't I say that time works wonders—(sometimes).

Do you remember when Doriot Anthony was engaged as first flutist with the Boston Symphony that Rudolph Elie was right in the "front row" of those opposed largely on the ground that the chair of the first flutist had never been occupied by a woman? He had quite a lot to say at the time, so I am interested to note that he does not fail to give her praise even if he still may cherish a little of the feeling he displayed at the time Miss Anthony came to the Boston Symphony—perhaps he no longer has any feeling of opposition. Be that as it may, in his review of the concert of the Boston Symphony on Jan. 8, in which Miss Anthony was flute soloist in Ibert's "Concerto for Flute," Mr. Elie said: "Doriot Anthony, whose flute playing has long since captivated the city (Boston), stepped forward in the second half of the concert to play Ibert's Flute Concerto in a stunning fashion. Her tone is of a rich and glowing quality, at once firm and expressive, and she displayed an exceptional technique in the fast passages in an instrument where lightning technique is commonplace, negotiating runs and ascending octaves at breathtaking speed while achieving perfect articulation. Present always—was her remarkable feeling for the music."

STEAMBOAT YARNS of Ships and Men

John M. Richardson

Capt. Look Turns To "Steam"

The first installment dealt with the experiences of Capt. H. L. Look in "sail." Today's account lists his commands in steam following his rise to master. The next installment will recount some of the high adventures met through his colorful career during and after the war years.

Above appears the celebrated S. S. Susquehanna which Capt. Look took into Germany—the first ship to enter after the war.

Captain Look as a Lieutenant-Commander in World War I

Once his mind was made up to give up his career in sail and turn his career to steam, Captain Look acted promptly upon leaving the schooner Evie B. Hall.

He started serving his time leading toward master in steam on steamship Coanna, followed by Carolyn, Washington, Dakotan, Pennsylvanian, Californian, the Chioan, Julia Luckenbach, Fred's Luckenbach, Commanche and Mohawk, covering the period from 1910 to 1919 when he was ready for high responsibilities. His service as master in sail speeded his rise in steam, shortening his climb to the top and this was given further impetus by the advent of World War I pressures. The war found him in the Navy, as Lieutenant, Senior Grade, on USS Mercury, Naval Transport and USS K. Luckenbach, then Executive Officer on the Luckenbach, then Lieut. Commander in command of USS Lake Placid, North Atlantic mine layer for eight months until the war's end. During 1920 and 1921 he served as master of SS Fred's Luckenbach, Coquilt, West Quebec and was Chief Officer on the U.S. Mail Line's great Susquehanna, first American passenger vessel into Germany after the war.

With the slump in 1921 he was made port captain and paymaster in charge of the huge fleet of laid-up passenger and freight liners owned by the government. This was the New London group with a value in excess of $50,000,000. Captain Look laid out and supervised all work of maintenance with an accounting of over a million dollars.

In 1927 Captain Look was master of a number of huge passenger liners including President Garfield, President Adams, President Monroe and American Farmer, all of the United States Lines New York-London service. He then took command of the great S.S. Pan America of the Pan American Line in the New York-Buenos Aires service. This became the Munson Line before Captain Look resigned. With the depression 1927-1931, Captain Look was master of several large yachts, among them that of Mrs. E. H. Harriman. Through 1933 he served as instructor in navigation for metropolitan vocational School with brush up courses for sailors to enter maritime schools, a licensed instructor in New York and in 1940 resigned this post to become Inspector of Ships with the Maritime Commission where he continued until 1943.

At the time the Commission requested him to go back to sea and back he went as master of the new ship Anna H. Shaw, making her first voyage. Bad luck caught up with him off Halifax where he sustained a serious injury and was taken by the Navy to Halifax for three months hospitalization. During his convalescence he was made Inspector U.S.A.T.S. at the Staten Island Army Piers. He returned to sea eight months later in command of S.S. Medina and later S.S. Cable Eye, these Agwilne-operated ships being turned back to the government in 1947.

Captain Look then took the famous Shepherd liner Theodore S. Foster and operated her over 75,000 miles in 10 months when he was again hospitalized with food poisoning resulting in major surgery.

Making a good recovery, he was at sea again later in '47 in command of the Isbrandtsen liner George Walton and later took command of the Newberry Victory of the same line operating in the North Atlantic coal and grain trade until Aug. 24, 1949 when ordered "Through with engines" for the last time and stepped ashore for a richly earned retirement.

Another Captain Look yarn next week.

Civil War Memorial Association Annual Meeting On Feb. 2

The annual meeting of the Civil War Association, will be held in G.A.R. Hall Tuesday evening, Feb. 2, presided over by Mrs. Eliza Plummer. The Association officers are composed of vice president, Millie Thomas, clerk, Velma Marsh, treasurer, Mae Cross and auditor, Bessie Sullivan. Trustees are elected members of the four Allied G.A.R. Orders, and are: Mrs. Plummer, Corps; Mrs. Smith, Tent; Mrs. Hatch, Auxiliary and Mr. Winchenbaugh, Camp.

The term of office of other elected members expires automatically and successors are nominated in December by their respective organizations. The Corps committee are: Gertrude Salo, '53, Lucy Sawyer, '55, Eliza Plummer, '54, Millie Thomas, '54, Mildred Condon, '53, Adelle Kaler, '53. In the Auxiliary are Bernice Hatch, '55, Alice Smalley, '55, Velma Marsh.

Odd items picked up here and there: The Philharmonic Hall in Los Angeles is closed to jazz concerts—officials say audiences tear up too much upholstery.

A few years ago Benney Goodman's small daughter was sorting through boxes in a closet and found a pile of her father's early records. They had been cut privately in 1938 by the original Goodman band. Reissued these forgotten tunes have now sold more than 100,000 albums.

Do you know who made the most money on a short concert tour of this country? It was Paderewski, in 1891, when he grossed $180,000 in a tour of 26 cities. His financial success in America as a pianist has never been duplicated.

'54, Mae Cross, '54, Bessie Sullivan, '53 and Ruth Thompson, '53. Camp: Herman Winchenbaugh, Arthur Marsh, Mr. Willis and Ed. Mullen, permanently elected. The Daughters' committee are: Lizzie French, '55, Lina Carroll, '55, Carrie House, '53, Inez Packard, '53, Priscilla Smith, '54 and Jennie Pietroski, '54.

The C.W.M. Association was incorporated Feb. 26, 1924 and by-laws adopted Feb. 26 '24. The object is to carefully preserve the building known as the Grand Army Hall as a memorial to the soldiers and sailors of Rockland, who served honorably in the Union Army, Navy or Marine Corps during the Civil War of 1861-1865.

Members receiving their written notices of the annual meeting should make a special effort to attend, feeling honored to be a part of this association, who are maintaining the home obtained by the G.A.R. by careful planning and long hours given to their labor of love, a fitting home for their children to enjoy these many years.
