FISHING IN MAINE
OFFICIAL INFORMATION SERVICE

FOR 33 YEARS the State of Maine Publicity Bureau has been providing a free, complete and personalized information service about the Pine Tree State, its resources, facilities and accommodations. It is the pioneer among State-wide publicity and promotional agencies and has been of valuable service to millions of people during those years.

You, too, are cordially invited to make full use of our facilities—free at all times—when planning your visit, and after you arrive in Maine. Our primary goal is to make your visit to Maine as enjoyable as possible.

Our home office, pictured above, is at the traffic circle (Gateway Circle) at the southern highway entrance to Portland; you will find branch and allied information offices located at more than 40 strategic points throughout the State of Maine; and you will find our New York Office in the R. C. A. Building at 30 Rockefeller Plaza.

By John C. Page, Jr.

The vast expanses of forest lands and waterways within the boundaries of the State of Maine are regarded by many sportsmen as one of the last frontiers remaining on the American Continent.

Despite the gradual encroachment of civilization upon her woods and waters, Maine, through a carefully planned conservation and stocking program, has worked with nature to maintain a favorable balance, assuring an abundance of game for any and all who wish to partake of the bountiful goodness of a peaceful vacation amidst the surroundings of nature's own greenery.

Proof of 'good fishing' in the Pine Tree State is in the records of Maine's unique organization, "THE ONE THAT DIDN'T GET AWAY CLUB." The only qualification for membership is to take a trophy-size fish from Maine waters. (Weight qualifications for the various species listed on inside back cover.) The requirements are stiff and the competition keen but to wear the shoulder patch of Maine's One That Didn't Get Away Club is the ambition of every angler in the country.

The club was started in 1939 and had a total of only forty-five qualified members up until 1945. From that year on the membership roster shows a rapid climb. Sixty-four were registered in '49 and sixty-seven in '50.

During 1951 the impressive number of one hundred and three fish was reached. Although '52 saw a drop to ninety-one, this past season, 1953, a new record was set with one hundred and seven trophy fish registered. These year to year records prove one thing—Maine fishing gets better every year.

Heaviest fish of each species of the "Club" fish caught in 1953 were: Bass, 7 lb. 4 oz.; Landlocked Salmon, 11 lb. 8 oz.; Togue (Lake Trout), 23 lb. 4 oz.; Atlantic Salmon, 19 lb. 10 oz.; Brook Trout, 6 lb. 15½ oz.; Brown Trout, 16 lb. 8 oz. and Rainbow Trout, 8 lb.

Due to the unpredictables that make the sport what it is, big fish catches vary from year to year but Maine fish are either at, or near the top in national honors every year. Just within the past five seasons Maine fish have captured nation-wide ‘firsts’ for four different species: LANDLOCKED SALMON, EASTERN BROOK TROUT, WHITE PERCH and ATLANTIC SALMON.

Here is the record of the leading fish entered in the One That Didn’t Get Away Club over this period:

ATLANTIC SALMON: 22 pounds, 6¾ ounces, measuring 39½ inches.

TOGUE: 23 pounds, 4 ounces. (Taken in 1953.)

BLACK BASS: 7 pounds, 4 ounces. (Taken in 1953.)

WHITE PERCH: 4 pounds, 9 ounces, measuring 19½ inches.

EASTERN BROOK TROUT: 7 pounds, 9 ounces.

RAINBOW TROUT: 9 pounds, 8½ ounces.

BROWN TROUT: 19 pounds.

Don’t forget to look over the qualifications for membership in Maine’s “ONE THAT DIDN’T GET AWAY CLUB” on the inside back cover. You may come home with a trophy fish and a membership certificate in 1954.

Fishing Everywhere—and In Variety

In these days of increased interest in fishing and other forms of outdoor recreation, as more and more demands are made upon natural resources all over the Nation, Maine stands in an enviable position. In many states and areas only the members of private clubs who pay substantial sums of money to maintain privately owned fishing waters can expect to enjoy real fishing.

Here in Maine, this practice is almost unknown. Any man, woman or child, whether resident or non-resident, may, after being licensed at a moderate fee (children under ten need no license), try his luck in the crystal-clear waters of an unspoiled area nearly as large as all the rest of New England combined!

Not only can he try his luck, but with any reasonable degree of skill he can be pretty sure of results to make him proud. In fact, Lady Luck usually smiles on even the most inexperienced of fishermen if he'll take the time to expose himself properly to the fish in these Maine waters.

Variety is but one of the rare pleasures Maine has in store for all fishermen. Whether it’s the silvery, lightning-like acrobatics of a Landlocked Salmon “tail-walking” at the end of your line, the powerful, deep-fighting surge of a heavy Squaretail or the explosive smashing tactics of a fighting Black Bass—it’s all here—and much, much more!

The Brown Trout, the Rainbow and the scrappy little White Perch frequent countless lakes, streams and rivers. From the Atlantic Salmon in Maine’s Eastern coastal rivers to the wary Brook Trout in thousands of rushing streams and wilderness ponds, or the hungry Pickerel waiting under lily pads at the water’s edge—there’s action to please every taste in fresh water fishing.

Well-worth bearing in mind, also, is the fact that Maine with her 2,500 miles of rugged coastline and sandy beaches, offers some of the best saltwater fishing on the North Atlantic Coast. Whether it’s fishing for giant Tuna weighing up to 1,200 pounds, Striped Bass, Mackerel, Halibut, Swordfish, Cod, Haddock, Pollock, Flounders or just plain pole and handline fishing from the wharves or rugged shoreline, everyone can enjoy saltwater fishing anywhere along the spacious Maine Coast.
WHEN TO COME—WHAT TO USE

Landlocked Salmon

Maine's Landlocked Salmon are ready for action the minute the ice leaves lakes and ponds in the Spring. This ice break-up usually occurs between the first of April and the middle of May each year, depending upon weather conditions. Maine regulations allow fishing in several southern counties starting April 1, or any time thereafter that the ice is officially declared "out." In other counties to the north, "opening day" comes on April 15. Full particulars on these and all other fresh-water fishing regulations are prepared in booklet form and will be gladly supplied upon request by the Maine Publicity Bureau.

In the early part of the fishing season, millions of fresh-water smelts, a favorite food of the Landlocked Salmon, move toward the mouths of tributary streams and over shallow sand bars in their annual Spring spawning run. At this time the salmon crowd in close to shore to feed on these silvery little fish. During this period streamer flies, sewed-on smelts, wobbling artificial minnows and, in fact, almost any small lure that closely resembles a smelt will produce results.

Fly fishing with wet flies of the conventional type as well as many patterns of streamer fly design also work exceptionally well at this time. Later, as the season progresses and temperatures rise, the salmon move back, seeking cooler areas in the deep water. From the hot days of late June until the crisp frosty mornings of early September, trolling with deep-going revolving spoons and live bait usually accounts for excellent catches. Smelts, shiners, angle worms and large night crawlers are the choice of many successful fishermen.

Cooler surface temperatures during September again bring these silversided battlers near the surface and once more fly fishing close to the mouths of incoming streams is at its best, with both wet and dry flies productive as the Salmon congregate for their own fall spawning run.

ahead of a minnow six or seven inches long is the recommended procedure for taking the big ones.

Most important to remember in Togue fishing is to troll very slowly with a heavily weighted line in the deepest part of the lake you intend to fish. Togue are found in many of Maine’s lakes and deeper ponds from one end of the State to the other. There are none however in the Rangeley Lakes, where stocking has been confined to Trout and Salmon. Don’t forget to bring a gaff when Togue fishing if you’re really after a big one. Many of these “Old Lunkers” longer than a rubber boot, are far too large to fit in any conventional landing net.

Brown Trout

For the past few years, Maine’s Inland Fish and Game Department has been gradually introducing Brown Trout in waters all over the Pine Tree State particularly adapted to these sporty game-fish. In 1953, one of these stubborn fighters weighing sixteen and a half pounds came to the net of a very surprised angler. The average weight of Brown Trout taken in Maine, however, usually runs between one and one-half and seven or eight pounds, with some specimens much larger.

Rainbow Trout also have been introduced in a number of Maine waters and a substantial number of these beautiful fish have been caught. Among others, one weighing eight pounds showed up in a fisherman’s creel last Summer.

Brown Trout are fished much the same as Landlocked Salmon. The Browns, however, frequent many of the so-called warmer waters and more shallow ponds and rivers. Although often caught while trolling or plug casting, they are, however, particularly susceptible to flies in both the wet and dry types here in Maine.

White Perch

White Perch, cousin of the Black Bass, is one of the easiest of all Maine’s fish to catch. Rated as one of the very best panfish, these snappy little dark-colored hustlers are found in great numbers and furnish plenty of action. ever fails to get results. Don’t underestimate white perch when it comes to fly fishing or trolling either. Almost any of the baits mentioned above trolled just behind one or two small gold or silver colored spinners will help to fill the frying pan. White Perch are an “all season fish,” but afford the best fishing of all during the warmer days of mid-Summer.

Pickerel

For real honest-to-goodness everyday outdoor sport, don’t overlook the countless hours of fun to be had PICKEREL FISHING. Shallow water ponds, slow moving streams and deep bays heavy with lily pads and other vegetation are the home of this hungry feeder. Frowned upon by some but ready to charge at almost any moving object, the Pickerel is among the easiest of all fish to land. Live bait, flies, plugs, popping-bugs or trolling spoons, whether manipulated by an expensive rod or an old cane pole, bring equally good results in Pickerel waters. Here’s a rough and ready fish, a challenge to the beginner, the expert, the old folks or the kids. He’s what might be called a dependable fish. He’ll strike almost anything and he’ll almost always strike!

Atlantic Salmon

Maine’s Penobscot County, boasting the famed Bangor Salmon Pool and Washington County with its Narraguagus, Dennys, Pleasant, Machias, East Machias and Orange Rivers are now the major spots in the United States where sport-fishermen can take that king of all gamefish, the ATLANTIC SALMON. Bangor’s Salmon Pool is open to fishing from April 1 to July 15 annually. Each year, the first salmon caught there is sent to the President of the United States.

The Narraguagus River, offering about 20 miles of excellent Salmon water, produces 400 or more of these fish each year. It may be fished starting May 1 until September 15. Part of the river is open until September 30. The Narraguagus, Dennys and the other rivers mentioned above are increasing their yield each year under the careful supervision of the Atlantic Sea Run Salmon Commission. Slightly different regulations apply when fishing each and a prepared booklet describing these rules will be furnished upon request by the Maine Publicity Bureau.

Atlantic Salmon in these rivers vary from eight to nearly thirty pounds in weight. Probably the fishing is the "hottest," as Maine natives say, between May 15 and the end of June. FLY FISHING ONLY is the order of the day with these king-size fish. A standard salmon rod weighing from seven to ten ounces, and a large capacity reel with regular tapered fly line, plus plenty of backing, should be part of your equipment. Salmon flies of either the conventional or English type and a fairly heavy test leader also should be included. Your guide or local informant will, however, very likely be able to supply you with “on-the-spot” information and the actual flies that they are taking well at the particular time you arrive. You can trust your Maine Guide. He usually knows what he is talking about.

Tuna

TUNA FISHING along the Maine Coast has become a major sport during the last few years. Between the first of July and the end of August, thousands of these gigantic bluefins move into Maine coastal waters. Top-weight tuna to be taken on rod and reel so far, chalked up an official mark of 874 pounds. These mammoth silvery fish may also be caught by handline fishing or harpooning.

Special heavy-duty equipment is needed to go after tuna, but it’s not at all necessary to own your own to try this thrilling sport in Maine. Charter boats manned by competent “Down-east” skippers are ready not only to serve you but to furnish all necessary tackle, gear and bait at moderate cost. Don’t miss the thrill of a lifetime! Expose yourself to some real big game fishing in Maine this year!
Striped Bass

STRIPED BASS FISHING in coastal rivers and inlets or surf-casting for these fish along Southern Maine beaches is becoming increasingly popular each year. “Stripers,” ranging from two to ten pounds are common, with some tipping the scales at nearly twenty pounds. Probably more are taken by trolling than by any other method. A standard “salt-water rod” weighing 10 or 12 ounces, 30-lb. test line and reel of ample capacity should make up the backbone of your equipment.

Use of regular striped bass lures as manufactured by several well-known companies, to which live bait has been added is the next step. Sandworms, bloodworms, small eels, small herring and occasionally shrimps make good bait to troll with both standard freshwater spoons or regular striped bass lures. Careful attention to water currents and the fishing of “the rips” during an incoming tide often make the difference between failure and success. Once connected with even a fair-sized striper, you’ll be spending lots of time in those waters again.

The salt-water angler in Maine isn’t forced to confine his activities to tuna and striped bass fishing—not by a long shot!

I know of no better vacation for the city dweller than a canoe trip in the remote places, completely out of touch with civilization, self-sufficient as to food, shelter, and transportation.

FISHING IN MAINE

School Fish

Mackerel and Pollock run in tremendous schools along the Maine Coast during summer months. Spinners, flies or even a piece of red or white cloth attached to a hook will often do the trick. This sketchy equipment, trolled either through or near these schools will almost always take fish as fast as they can be removed from the hook. This may sound surprising, but it works—and there’s action a-plenty to be had with the use of either a handline or a light rod and reel!

NO LICENSE is needed for saltwater fishing along the Maine Coast, whether from the docks, mainland, islands or boats.

Handline and pole fishing from wharves, bridges and the shore for flounders, cunners, mackerel and rock-cod are enjoyed by thousands of men, women and children all through the Summer and Fall. Many “partyboats” lie ready at Maine harbors and ports to take out fishing parties seeking cod, haddock, pollock and other fish, or just for a cooling day’s cruise along the shore among the hundreds of green-studded islands that dot the rugged coast between mainland and the open sea. Fishing lines, bait and all tackle are furnished if desired. Arrangements may easily be made for a picnic lunch or a famous Maine Clambake on the shore of some nearby wooded island.

If you’ve never tasted lobsters, clams and roasted corn, cooked outdoors — Maine Clambake Style — then DON’T MISS IT THIS YEAR! Once you’ve had a taste, we know you’ll be back again and again!

Tackle Available

Many inland sporting camps, hotels and resorts furnish fishing tackle for guests. Practically all of them will arrange for guides, outboard motors, boats and bait if desired. Your own tackle is probably adaptable to many kinds of Maine fishing. If you think it isn’t, don’t worry. Supplies of all types, including the latest lures and equipment are available on the spot in nearly all Maine communities.

For early Spring fishing and Fall fishing in Maine, plenty of warm but light clothing should be worn. A waterproof rain slicker with hood or hat are welcome assets when the fish start to hit during a shower. Wool socks of knee length and waterproof footwear also are recommended and, of course, waders or hip boots for stream fishing.

Lightweight, washable informal summer clothing of sports design is appropriate at all Maine spots where fishing is in vogue. Even during the warmer days of Summer, Maine nights are cool. It is therefore an excellent idea to bring along an extra sweater or a couple of wool shirts to enjoy the greatest comfort at all times.

Maine Invites You

All reports indicate that Maine will have a record increase in visitors this year. It is the wise fisherman who has his reservations in hand long before the start of his trip. On the pages of this booklet are listed accommodations in almost all sections of Maine. In the text, we have attempted to tell you a little of the many varieties of fighting gamefish found in Maine and how to catch them. The individual camp and hotel advertisements on these pages do more—they tell you where it can be done!

Maine camp and hotel proprietors are famous for their food as well as their hospitality. They all INVITE YOU TO COME and want you to FEEL YOU BELONG IN MAINE!

In a world beset by countless trying problems and the complex life of an atomic age, Maine stands out among other areas as a sanctuary for outdoor lovers, still rugged, beautiful and unspoiled. Her 17,000,000 acres of forest land, 2,465 lakes and ponds, 5,500 rippling brooks, streams and rivers and her 913,000 friendly people INVITE YOU!

Whether you are a novice or an expert in the art of fishing, bring your camera as well as your rod. YOU'LL BE PROUD OF YOUR RECORD IN MAINE THIS YEAR!

THE ONE THAT DIDN'T GET AWAY CLUB

Maine invites you to become a member of the most exclusive fishing organization in the world. There is no initiation fee, no dues, and no possible way to “buy” your way in,—yet, its membership is open to anyone and everyone, regardless of race, creed or previous fishing experience. Truly, a unique organization.

THE ONE THAT DIDN'T GET AWAY CLUB was organized in 1939 by the Maine Development Commission “to honor the angler who lands an extraordinarily large fish” in Maine. Its membership, at the close of the 1953 season included 107 new enthusiastic Maine and out-of-State anglers.

All you must do to join this exclusive group and receive a certificate of membership signed by the Governor of Maine is to catch a big fish in accordance with the following rules and file a formal application for membership with the Maine Development Commission, State House, Augusta, Maine.

RULES

1. Membership open to anyone holding a Maine fishing license who catches a LANDLOCKED SALMON weighing ten or more pounds, a TROUT weighing six or more pounds, a BLACK BASS weighing five or more pounds, a TOGUE (lake trout) weighing fifteen or more pounds, an ATLANTIC SALMON weighing fifteen or more pounds, or a WHITE PERCH weighing three pounds.

2. Entries are limited to fish taken in the State of Maine in accordance with the state fishing laws.

3. Fish taken from a state, club, or private hatchery or pool, or taken through the ice, will not be eligible.

4. Weight of fish and other pertinent information must be certified by a Warden of the Inland Fisheries and Game Department. (There are more than one hundred of these men on duty in the State. Your camp owner or guide will gladly put you in touch with one.)
