Order U.M.C. Ammunition

"This Fall"

Sportsmen have been told this is a dangerous time to order "A good twelve gauge shot gun" or a "set of 12-ga. cartridges." So they call for U.M.C. and get the best in the market all the time.

A BEAVER TALE

William, of Madison, was hunting near the residence of Henry Jackson, in the town of Belgrade, on Tuesday, when he crossed the track of a large buck. Will grabbed his gun and took careful aim. But just before he was ready to fire, the buck made a jump, and caught the gun. The buck escaped with his life, but left his tail. It is said the deer was killed by the leap, and that Will had done all he could for him.

Two blast hunters told from the main building that they had been shooting near the place where the deer had been seen. The smoke from the smokestacks of the hotel had attracted their attention. They immediately took their rifles and went out to investigate. When they reached the area where the deer had been spotted, they found a trail leading away from the hotel. They followed the trail for several hundred yards until they came upon a clearing surrounded by trees. The deer was standing in the center of the clearing, looking around in all directions.

One of the hunters, a man named John, took a careful aim and fired his rifle. The shot was heard throughout the woods. The deer bolted, running in the opposite direction from the hotel. The other hunter, a man named Jim, also took aim and fired his rifle. The deer fell to the ground, dead.

The hunters quickly approached the deer and examined it. It was a fine buck, with a large set of antlers and a thick coat of hair. They took measurements of the deer and marked the location for later use.

The hunters then returned to the hotel, where they were greeted by the other hunters who had been out hunting. They congratulated John and Jim on their successful hunt.

Meanwhile, the other hunters continued their search for more deer. They split up into smaller groups and went off in different directions. Eventually, they all met back at the hotel and shared their stories of the day.

The day ended with a hearty meal and a discussion of the day's events. The hunters all felt satisfied with their day's work and were looking forward to the next opportunity to hunt.
This page contains a variety of articles and advertisements. The main articles discuss the Quaker Range Contest for Maine Woods subscribers, a call for donations to support the contest, and a notice about the Maine Woods Quaker Range. There are also several advertisements for Hall's Family Pills, a story about a dog named Sandy River Railroad Co., and a notice about the Sandy River and Rangeley Lakes Steamboat Co.

The page also includes a list of subscribers for the Maine Woods, along with their names and addresses, and a section titled "Rules of the Contest," which outlines the conditions and procedures for participating in the contest.

The overall layout of the page is typical of a late 19th-century newspaper, with columns of text and advertisements interspersed with dates and names.

WILD CATTLE DEFEY EFFORTS OF INHABITANTS TO CEPURE THEM. KENLOCK, NOV. 60, 1901.

This morning a herd of wild cattle which has been reported, and now proves to be the most serious of the fleet that has occurred in this county during the past week for the lovers of outdoor life. These animals are said to be in the vicinity of the woods near the farm of Mr. John Winter, and are said to be causing considerable alarm to the farmers who live in the vicinity. Many efforts have been made to drive them away, but they seem to be quite determined to remain where they are.

The only service to be held here will be that of the3rd of December, which will be conducted by the minister of the church. The service will be attended by a large number of people, and will be a great success.

The engine house of the Franklin & Megantic Railroad company is nearly completed, and now provides a fine structure for the town. The company has been engaged for the winter term of the line, and will complete the work as soon as possible.

The New Portland Grange gave a successful meeting, with Aurora Grange at Strong Thursday. There were many coming up from Farmington.

Mr. Lewis Hewey of East Pittston went to the Annual Meeting of the New Portland Grange, which was held here on Tuesday. He was accompanied from this town by Mr. John Winter, and Mr. John Gray, who are both members of the Grange.

When the Hair Falls Out
Out of the heart of the Maine woods comes this remarkable story of the hair falling out from the head. The patient is a young man, and the cause is unknown. He has been suffering from this ailment for some time, and has consulted several physicians, but without any result. The only hope of a cure seems to be a change of environment.
