MAINE AUTUMN ...
COLOR IT WOW!

Only to see the treescape is reason enough to visit Maine in Autumn—and for this spectacular we invite you—but there is more in Maine's autumn! Lakes and ponds still offer good fishing through September 30. Small game and bird hunting begins October 1. Some of the scenic canoeing and boating waters are at their beautiful best. Can there be a better time for mountain climbing, and hiking, or riding horses? Golfing in the crisp fall air is exhilarating, and the scenic golf courses are --- more scenic!

Revel in the color! Bring your camera so you can capture some to keep for momento or to share with others when the season is gone. And while you're here visit some roadside stands of farm produce. Some of the displays make good color photos--better still, take home some of the apples, squash, pumpkins, jams or jellies, and have the fun of eating them, too!

But stay long enough to really enjoy it; there are plenty of motels, hotels, tourist homes, and sporting camps for accommodations. Most of the State Parks with camping facilities and many privately operated campgrounds are open thru mid-October or after.

The following ski areas have chair lifts... Some of them use their lifts for viewing fall foliage. To see if one will be operating in the area you want to visit, contact: Bald Mt.-Dedham; Eaton Mt.-Skowhegan; Enchanted Mt.-Jackman; Lost Valley-Auburn; Mt. Agamenticus-York; Pleasant Mt.-Bridgton; Saddleback Mt.-Rangely; Squaw Mt.-Greenville; Sugarloaf Mt.-Kingfield (Gondola).

LEAP COLOR ... AND HOW!

Mountainsides aflame with color in autumn sunshine—foliage reflected in lakes and ponds—the coastline accent by autumn's gift of color ...

What causes the leaves to change? some to flaming scarlet, others deeper crimson, burnt orange or xanthophyll yellow — all blending in a profusion of color. Frosts are not the primary cause. Yellow and orange pigments are present in the leaves during the summer but are masked by the predominant green chlorophyll, the substance which enables the foliage to derive energy from sunlight. At the end of the growing season the chlorophyll is destroyed faster than it is produced, and the other pigments, which have been accumulating over the summer, become predominant. Leafage colors are formed in part from sugar manufactured by the leaves and left after the growing season. Other chemical substances such as tannin and accumulated toxins either act on the sugars or, in themselves, give variations to the coloring. While frosts are not necessary for the turning of the leaves they accentuate and hasten the fall coloration.

Each tree plays its part in this symphony of color. Fine-toned yellows of poplars, birches, and beeches in concord with the coloring of the maples, working into a crescendo of brilliants. The somber oaks and ash provide rich bass tones with deep red, mahogany and browns. Muted, the oaks linger—an echo after the maple leaves have fallen.

THIS VACATION PLANNER

suggests only a few of the many, many good places to view fall foliage in Maine. To say we've listed the best spots would only display our limited outlook -- there are just too many viewpoints! The purpose is to help you find some of the better ones. We tried!

One in a series of Vacation Planners programmed by the Maine Department of Economic Development, available: 78 Gateway Circle, Portland, Maine 04102. Prospective visitors to Maine are interested in the "facts", and these brochures are designed with this in mind. We would appreciate receiving your comments.

VACATION PLANNER 12
SCENIC TRIPS

Some of the better view spots are grouped here into sequences for trips—some quite short, some more extensive—in the different sections of the state. Suggestions are made for specific places for good viewing. You can readily adapt variations in these trips, starting at different towns, or traveling in opposite directions, or combining two or more trips, or parts of them. This small map may be helpful for visualizing these trips, or variants of them but we suggest using a regular size map for your actual planning and travel. See the Official State Highway Map of Maine, which also indicates Rest Areas with picnic facilities. Necessarily brief, abbreviations and word omissions are frequent. -- are used instead of "to" * indicates places or sections which our experience or reporters affirm to be very good. Other sections may have beauty spots along the way, but are listed primarily to help you plan a connected trip.

Northwestern Maine: has great views but is difficult to reach by road, and requires special permit.

Canoeing enthusiasts may want to tackle the Allagash or some of the lesser known streams—but we suggest a careful inquiry about water levels of the streams at this time of year. Many are too low for canoeing in the fall.

Flights may be arranged through most major airports, and float plane bases located at Brewer, Old Town, Milinocket, Shell-Pond, Portage, Sebeo Lake, Lake Parlin, Jackman, Greenville, Rangeley, Turner, Meddybumps, Naples, Sebago Lake, China, Storington.

Mid-Northwest:

ACCOMMODATIONS

Plenty of accommodations are available in Maine during Fall Foliage time. Motels, hotels, inns, often are year-round operations, yet, because the height of the tourist season over at Labor Day, some facilities close shortly thereafter, so vacationers are urged to contact Chambers of Commerce or the Maine Publicity Bureau for reservations information. Many sporting camps in Maine are open for fall fishing and upland hunting during fall color. Combination visits are popular.
