Dear Miss Hutchinson:

The story of a starfish, by a Maine writer, illustrated by a Maine artist, is thoroughly appropriate; and we congratulate you and Miss Laws and also on the disposition of royalties.

It is entirely possible that under the circumstances, you have no copies for any kind of disposition, and yet we feel that we should write to you about the Maine Author Collection, which is a permanent exhibit of books by Maine authors, or books pertaining to the state. About two thousand volumes make up the collection, most of them inscribed presentation copies. They are valuable and fascinating, distinguished by the varied and original inscriptions; and visitors and students are constant. We should love to have TINY TIMID'S CHRISTMAS WISH among these Maine books. Do you agree with us that is should be there?

We also try to accumulate all possible information about our authors, biographical sketches, reviews, and similar material. Would you be so kind as to help us by letting us have a brief biographical paragraph or two, at your convenience?

Good luck to the charming starfish story, and may there be more.

Sincerely yours

hmj

Dear Mrs. Jacob,

It is with a great deal of pleasure and warm feeling that I send you this copy of Tiny Timid's Christmas Wish for the Maine Author Collection.

I am more than delighted to enclose a brief history or background (as you wish) and do trust that it is enough material for your needs.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Janet Hutchinson:

Thank you very much for your friendly response, and the biographical sketch, and above all, of course, for the opportunity to add TINY TIMID'S CHRISTMAS WISH to the Maine Author Collection.

It is an appealing story in an attractive form, and we are delighted to be able to welcome the little starfish to the Maine exhibit, and we appreciate your interest and generosity.

A happy Christmas to you.

Sincerely yours

hmj
