Sketch of Library.

The Zadoc Long Free Library is a gift of love to Buckfield from her most famous son, John Davis Long, and a fitting memorial to his father and mother, Zadoc Long and Julia Temple Davis. Its history reflects a happy unity of public sentiment with the kindly motives of its donor, and is of deep and abiding interest to the townspeople, who had long been desirous, though slightly expectant, of the enjoyment of such an institution.

For several years Mr. Long had cherished thoughts of providing a library for his native town, and in the summer of 1900 he formulated definite plans for the realization of his contemplated project. He asked no pledges and exacted no conditions from the community, but the people met his liberality with hearty appreciation and coöperation. The old historic Parris lot was generously given for a building site by Mrs. Josephine Thomes. The town, at a meeting of its voters, held October 3, 1900, appropriated five hundred dollars for grading and foundations, and work on the same was begun that fall. The following year the building was erected and Mr. Long and his relatives liberally supplied it with books. The library was dedicated at the "Old Church on the Hill" on Buckfield's Old Home Week day, August 17, 1901, the occasion being a happy reunion of old friends and associations and a red letter day in the annals of the town.

The building occupies an elevated site between converging streets, overlooking the village square, and, with its architectual simplicity, its terraced, elm-shaded lawn and historic associations, is the most attractive feature of the village to all home-comers and visiting strangers. It is a one-story wooden building, with porch, the whole resting on a massive foundation of native granite and underpinning of rubble stones from the fields. Its interior is a model of neatness and convenience for a village library, and its reading room, with its soft, harmonizing tints, its pictures and tablets, its open fireplace and bright, cheery outlook, is pleasing in its quiet simplicity and home-like atmosphere.

The cost of the library, above the foundation, with its books and furniture, as presented by Mr. Long, was about five thousand dollars, and the value of the lot, foundation and other appurtenances, would bring the total value to six thousand dollars. But this library, with the personality of its associations and memorial significance, means infinitely more to the people of Buckfield than its mere measure of value in dollars and cents. It is a sort of a family affair in which the sons and daughters of the town have home-loving pride, many of whom have supplemented the donor's noble gift with ornamental and useful accessories. Besides the gifts of land and books elsewhere mentioned, the following have been gladly bestowed:

Pictures for the reading room from Mrs. John Calvin Stevens.

Heating apparatus from the sons of Thomas Chase.

Lamps and fixtures from the Ladies' Dramatic Club.

Reference book case and dictionary holder from the Nezinscot History Club.

Fireplace fixtures from William C. Spaulding.

Fire screen from Mrs. Augusta Prince Stearns.

Book supports from C. M. and H. A. Irish.

Picture of the Zadoc Long family from Percival White.

Oil portrait of the donor of the library from John Davis Long.

Several other smaller gifts of utility from various friends.

The library now contains 3,000 well selected books in excellent editions, and, through the kindness of its various friends and the constant good offices of Mr. Long, the number of its volumes is steadily increasing.

From the first it has been well patronized, and its elevating and broad educational influences have become so fixed in the community that its future growth and prosperity are assured.

7. Any book retained ten days beyond the time specified, shall be sent for by the librarian, and the expenses incurred in obtaining the same (which in no case shall be less than twenty-five cents) shall be paid by the person retaining it, and any book not returned within one week after demand, shall be regarded as lost, and the librarian shall proceed to collect the value of the same, with accrued fees and other charges to date of payment. If the book lost be one of a set, the borrower shall pay the librarian the full value of the set, if the volume cannot be replaced, and may thereupon receive the remaining volumes as his property.

8. Any person defacing a book with marks or injuries beyond reasonable wear, shall pay all damages thereto, or replace it by a new volume or set, if it belongs to a set, as provided in Rule 7 in case of a book being lost.

14. The librarian shall not have the power to remit or suspend any fine or forfeiture herein provided, but shall proceed to enforce and collect the same when incurred or due, and for a failure in this respect shall be held accountable by the Trustees.
