

MR. AND MRS. BERRY ENTERTAIN

Last Saturday evening a party of friends were entertained at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Berry a few miles from the village. Besides the good cheer that is always so manifest at this home, there is always the bountiful laden table with its delectable viand. The party had been promised nothing but bulled corn and milk, but as this was not their first visit to Mr. and Mrs. Berry they were sure that "there was more to follow" and they were not disappointed. The frosted cakes were as pleasing to the palate as they had been to the eyes of the diners. The deep plate pumpkin and custard pies were delicious as was everything served. After a few hands of whist the company were served ice cream and cake.

The night was one of the darkest ever, but with lanterns and flashlights the party landed safely. Mr. Frank Haley and Mrs. E. V. Holt started with a single team alone, but did not realize the darkness of the night, until they reached Cottle Brook hill when the oak driven by Mrs. Haley absolutely refused to go any further, and tried to turn around in the road with them. Finally they started toward home but met the other members of the party and resumed their journey with them. In addition to the above ladies those in the party were Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Graffam, Mrs. Fred Morton, Mrs. J. W. Brackett.

All voted it a most enjoyable evening and were most grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Berry for their generous hospitality.

DOCTOR HIGGINS GETS A DEER

Doctor Higgins returned to Phillips from Redington last Tuesday bringing with him a spike horn. He went to Redington on a professional trip Monday, not expecting to put in any time hunting, but on starting out to some of the camps it was suggested to him to take along a rifle. He did so and secured a rabbit or two on the way back.

He was accompanied by Messrs. R. H. Preble and Orris Vose, and they were full of suggestions as to how he could secure the deer which they had sighted. Whether the Doctor followed these to the letter or not, he was successful in getting his deer.

The Doctor is a model man and does not take all of the credit to himself for he says "Preble" scared the deer out of the bushes for him, "Orris" stood on the railroad track and gave orders as to the direction the deer was taking, and he did the shooting. At any rate it was a successful trio of hunters.

LADIES' AID HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Ghosts, Witches and Pie Eaters Were Very Much in Evidence.

(Special to Maine Woods.) Rangeley, November 3—The most exciting Halloween diversion was held at the Grange Hall Friday evening under the auspices of the Ladies Aid. The committee in charge being Mrs. H. B. McCard, Mrs. H. A. Childs, Mrs. A. H. Sprague.

The lower part of the hall was in darkness and inhabited by a ghostly crowd. Each ghost in turn had some weird stunt to offer. First came the ghost hand, Mrs. E. P. McCard; the ghost eye, Mrs. F. H. Kempton, the liquid charm, Mrs. Geo. Kempton. After these thrilling experiences the guests were permitted to pass upstairs. This room was handsomely decorated in black and yellow, pumpkins and bats forming the decorations.

Mrs. Ada Sprague in typical Halloween costume took tickets at the door. Ghosts and witches also ruled here. Miss Winifred Hinkley compelled each guest to bow three times. Mrs. H. A. Childs exacted seven musical groans. The gentlemen of the party were blindfolded and required to kiss the magic book, in care of Velma Tomlinson.

The witches, Miss Alice Sweetser and Miss Thalia Hour had charge of the candy and fortunes respectively.

Mrs. H. B. McCard disposed of cobwebs for the small price of ten cents. Mrs. Herbert Spiller presided over the apron table. The ushers, all in ghost costumes, were Irene Kempton, Bertha Russell, Phyllis Robertson and Mildred Huntoon.

Various stunts were performed during the evening, suitable prizes being given the successful contestants.

First came the ghost parade and unmasking. The swinging apples caused much fun, Arno Spiller, Richard Wilbur, Richard Herrick, Arno Spiller being the prize winner. Drawing cat blindfolded, Eddie Philbrick, prize.

The following noted pie eaters were present: H. B. McCard, Hayden Huntoon, Vance Oakes, Don Pillsbury, Ray Oakes and Eddie Philbrick. Don Pillsbury proved to have the best mouth for pie.

String pumpkin seed; Lucy Herrick, Alice Herrick, Marion Tibbetts, Velma Tomlinson. Marion Tibbetts proved the greatest adept at this.

In the bean guessing contest Mr. Childs guessed within two of the correct number.

The magic candy bag was secured by Carl Jones.

Nearly $20 was realized from the affair and everyone voted it a grand good time.

SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS FOR 1914

Will Renew the Bonds at a Rate Not to Exceed Four Per Cent.

The annual meeting of the North Franklin Agricultural Society was held at the Grange Hall, Nov. 1. The report showed that the receipts of the society for the past year were $1,457.12, and the expenditures had been $1,449.75, showing a balance good for the society of $7.37, but $300 in back bills have been paid this year. The following officers were elected for the ensuing

STUDENTS GIVE HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Artistic Decorations and Unique Costumes.

(Special to Maine Woods.) Kingfield, Nov. 4—The third annual masquerade Halloween party and dance, given by the students of the Kingfield High school, Friday evening, from 8 to 2 o'clock, was largely patronized by the townspeople. About four hundred people were present. The great variety of the costumes was highly appreciated by the spectators. Among the men, there were Indians, clowns, spooks, Negroes, college students, etc. Of the ladies and girls those attracting much attention were, Indian girls, Japanese girls, ghosts, witches, auto maids, flower girls in pink and blue, clown, shepherd girls, Red-Riding-Hoods, flag girls in red white and blue crepe paper, one negro s, yellow costumes trimmed with black cats and witches and white costumes with red hearts.

The Halloween decorations were pleasing and appropriate. Across the ceiling were draped with bands of variously colored crepe paper, the lights were covered with yellow paper and the foot lights exhibited a row of grinning jack-o-lanterns. Placards were placed from the entrance entirely around the hall directing to the "witches tower" at the opposite corner where a ghost, Mrs. Happy Simmons, told fortunes to the curious.

The placards were made by the young ladies and decorated in water colors. In addition to these there were four booths arranged about the hall, the ice cream and candy booth in charge of Mrs. F. O. Merchant, food booth in charge of Miss Mable Hutchins, candy booth presided over by Mrs. A. G. Winter and box ticket booth in charge of Principal Emmors. Tufts. These booths were covered with crepe paper in various colors and with evergreen, in an artistic manner, by the pupils. The order of dances included 16 dances.

Music was furnished by Peerless orchestra. R. L. Kimball was the floor director. Box supper was served at intermission. The receipts of the evening were fifty-five dollars.

year: President, Elbridge Dill; vice president, Ira Davenport; but as Mr. Davenport declined the office George L. Lakim was elected in his place; secretary, J. Indice Harnden; treasurer and collector, A. W. Davenport; trustee for five years, A. R. Sedgely. It was voted to renew the bonds of the society, and the officers were instructed to renew them at a rate of interest not to exceed 4 per cent.

LADIES CAPTURE THE DEER

The ladies were the lucky hunters in the party who went to Sandy River pond last Saturday and are justly proud of their exploit.

While Messrs. D. F. Field and S. G. Haley were out on a business trip, Mrs. Field and Mrs. Eva Bradbury thought they would improve the time by a little hunting.

They were out but a very short time when they saw and shot a deer, both ladies having a part in the shooting, one bullet hitting the deer in the neck and the other in the hind quarter.

The animal was a doe and not very large but it is enough to show the skill of the ladies. The animal was shot quite near Mr. Haley's camp, out on the Beech Hill road.

The gentlemen were somewhat surprised on their return to find a deer lying on the piazza, as the ladies had succeeded in getting the deer to camp.

WISHES FOR CORRECTION

A Kingfield correspondent wishes to make a correction in regard to the report of the accident on the railroad recently on account of the washout. She states that Engineer Cushman was not pinned down in his cab and unable to extricate himself, and that he was not dug out by the train men. He was in the cab when it went over but he immediately climbed out over the tender without aid of any kind.

The above correction was sent us without any signature and it is not our custom to publish items without the signature of the sender, but presume it is all right in the present case, but we hope that persons sending items to the paper will please bear this in mind and sign their names not necessarily for publication but for our own information.

CAPTAIN CLARK HAS THRILLING BATTLE WITH SCHOOL OF SHARKS AND ROUTS THEM.

Just wait a minute, you fellows who are coming back from your vacation with stories about fish that you caught—or almost caught. Just wait until you hear this story of Captain James S. Clarke about the fish that almost caught him.

Captain Clarke, who reached New York recently on the Panama liner Advance, from Cristobal, the Government town in the Canal Zone adjoining Colon, would like to have a little chat with those students of natural history who claim that a shark will not attack a man.

It was three weeks ago last Friday when Captain Clarke, whose ship was lying at the Government dock at Cristobal having a little spare time on his hands, determined on a sail in Limon Bay. He got a small boat and put out from Cristobal, heading for the new breakwater which is to protect the Atlantic entrance to the Panama Canal.

There was a stiff breeze and a heavy swell. The wind died down momentarily, and Captain Clarke allowed his attention to be diverted from the sail. Along came a squall, and the boat slid down a wave and capsized, and Captain Clarke was thrown into the water.

Limon Bay is full of sharks. Across the ocean side of the bathing pool at the new Washington Hotel at Colon is a concrete shark trap. Workmen on dredge in the canal entrance have seen sharks many times close about them, and numerous are the tales of big sharks caught with salt pork bait and stout hooks by sailors in the harbor. Captain Clarke knew all this, and the minute he struck the water he started for the overturned boat.

Naturally he made a lot of noise as he splashed in the water, and this attracted the attention of the sharks. The first thing he knew he saw the fins of the sharks cutting the surface of the water in all directions, and they were all coming his way.

"I was a mile from the shore," said Captain Clarke, "and there were no other sailboats near. My clothes were light and didn't bother me much. The boat had drifted out of my reach and there was nothing to do but try for shore by swimming. And the sharks were closing in."

"Attached to the leather strap around my waist was a sheath knife with a six inch blade, which I had used that afternoon for scraping paint out of some stiff rowlocks. I got this knife out while treading water. By this time I could see sharks close by, and concluded it would be best for me to stay right there and fight them. Had I kept on swimming toward shore a shark might have come up behind and underneath me and nipped off my leg, and then it would have been a question of only a few minutes when I would have been food for the whole school."

"One of the sharks passed so close he almost collided with me. He was half turned over. I reached out and slit him with my big knife as he went by. The water turned red and the shark with a terrific swish of his tail, made off, leaving a gory streak behind him and pursued by others."

"Another shark came at me on his back, ready to bite. I dodged that one and stabbed him. I'll tell you there was a lot of excitement there about that time. This last shark was immediately attacked by his companions. They thrashed the water into a foam all around me, and one foxy fellow took advantage of the confusion to make a sneak at me. He was a big shark, and maybe he had had experience. At any rate, he was maneuvering around for a dash when I got sight of him, and instead of giving him a chance to come at me I went at him in a headlong dive, with my knife straight out in front."

"By rare good fortune I got him. He was in motion, and I just ripped him open. The sea was gory by that time, and I thought that all the sharks in the Caribbean were in my immediate vicinity. I kept slashing out with my knife, and I think I must have stabbed three or four more—maybe half a dozen. I just struck, away and didn't pay much attention to where I was striking after I had killed the third shark, but I could tell when I struck something."

"Those dead and wounded sharks were my salvation. The other sharks turned on them and began to fight over the feast. With my knife in my teeth I struck out for shore."

"Fortunately, an Indian in a cayuca, or dugout canoe, who was fishing about half a mile off shore, had seen my sailboat go over and had paddled toward me. I sighted him when I got clear of the sharks and he came alongside."

"Those cayucas are about as stable in the water as a round log. I weighed 200 pounds, and I knew I would upset the craft if I tried to climb aboard. The Indian didn't want me to try either. There is a theory down there that a shark won't bite a negro or an Indian, but this Indian didn't believe in theories. He was in his canoe and he wanted to stay there."

"I hitched on a stern with one hand and he started to tow me ashore. We were almost in, when some of the sharks, probably having been unable to get in on the feast outside, took up my trail and came after me. The Indian was badly scared and worked harder than he'll ever work again. We ran up on the beach, with the sharks right behind us."

"The Indian helped me ashore, and I just flopped down and blew like a porpoise for about 15 minutes. I was close to all in and it was all I could do to get back to Cristobal. This was my first experience with sharks, and I hope my last. In conclusion, if anybody tells you that there are no man-eating sharks and that sharks won't attack a man, just invite that party to go down to Limon Bay, sail off shore about a mile and jump into the water."

Captain Clark wished to go before a notary and make affidavit to the truth of his fish story in the presence of the Tribune man, but the Tribune man wouldn't accompany the mariner, being afraid it would involve him somehow in perjury, in personally vouching for the big fish story.

Which he doesn't.—Chicago Tribune

DON'T FIDE IN THE RUTS.

"Don't ruin the road by riding in ruts," should be the motto of every automobilist. Rut riding is one of the greatest causes of poor roads to-day and is something that everyone should strive to avoid. We cry for good roads, but we do little on our part to help maintain, and keep them good, after once we get them. Rut riding is the result of ignorance or the rankest kind of thoughtlessness; 99 cases out of 100, the latter. Newly constructed roads develop ruts much more quickly than old pieces of highway, and for this reason automobilists should use greater care to ride all over the road rather than to follow in the tracks of the man who has gone ahead of him. Even after deep ruts have developed, there is no excuse for riding in them, and in the majority of cases, it is far easier to ride with one wheel in the center and one wheel on the extreme edge of the road. The riding is far smoother and in addition it is very much safer. Every city and town can show many examples of where rut riding has ruined an excellent piece of road in a comparatively short time. If automobilists on these same stretches of highway had traveled all over the road instead of following in the tracks of the man ahead, they would have been improved instead of ruined."

HANDSOME BLACK FOX

O. E. Johnson and L. E. Hollis were ploughing in Mr. Johnson's field opposite Ed Conant's place at North Auburn last Friday says the Lewiston Sun when they noticed what they first took to be a black dog playing in one corner of the field at a distance and not more than a dozen rods away. A second look, however, convinced them that the animal was no dog, but a handsome black fox which appeared to be busy "mousing."

They watched the fox for several minutes as he hunted about the field near the wall for mice. He was a large specimen and had a glossy black coat with tail to match. After a while the reynard paused in his search for mice, took a good look at the ploughmen and then turned and trotted away finally leaping over the wall and disappearing from sight.

Both Messrs. Johnson and Hollis say it was a large and handsome specimen of the black fox. While they make no pretensions of being panther experts, they do claim to know something about foxes.

NOW YOU CAN GET YOUR BULL MOOSE.

All that is needed now is a light snow, by which the game can be followed in order to obtain ideal conditions in the Maine woods.

The open season on moose is now only a month, instead of a month and a half, as formerly. The extra season of rest for the moose must have helped in the growth of the game and no doubt the shorter season will not lessen the kill of the big game animals.

There are many reasons advanced for the smaller number of deer received this year compared with last year but no one will seriously contend that the deer are not in the woods in large numbers. All the hunters who have returned whether successful or not have brought the same story of an unlimited number of big game animals in the woods.

For those who may be in doubt we are putting in a few statements of the game laws for this year which may prove of some interest to the hunter say the Commercial. There is a fine of $200 and costs for shooting cow moose, for each offense. It is also against the law to shoot a calf moose or caribou. A calf moose is a calf moose until at least one year old and has at least two prongs or tines not less than three inches long, to each of their horns, according to the game laws.

The close time on all fur bearing animals with the exception of beavers also expired at 12 o'clock Friday night, Oct. 31. It will be lawful to shoot them until next March, and muskrat may be shot until next May.

For shooting beaver there is a fine of $100 and costs for each offense.

Any person may lawfully kill any wild animal except beaver, or any wild bird found destroying his property.

Thirty deer came through Bangor station last Friday which is a good number for this season.

Warden John E. Bowden was in Bangor last Friday, with 5,000 salmon fingerlings, for F. A. McPhail at Perry. This is the last salmon consignment to be sent from the North Belgrade hatchery this fall. A shipment of salmon will be taken from the Lake Auburn hatchery in the near future. The Lake Auburn hatchery is considered to be one of the best in Maine. Mr. Bowden was also in Bangor, Saturday, on his way to Bar Harbor with 20 cans of salmon for Bar Harbor and other places on Mount Desert Island.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Lewsen of Portland, formerly of Bangor, were successful on their hunting trip up river, each securing one deer.

GAME HUNT AT NO. NEW PORTLAND

Chipman's Side Wins by 325 Points and Is Furnished Supper.

(Special to Maine Woods.)

East New Portland, Nov. 1.—Saturday Oct. 25, was the day of the game hunt at North New Portland. The captains were J. B. Hutchins and Harry Chipman. Both sides succeeded in securing a good amount of game though it was very rainy and many came home from the hunt with feet wet.

The count was made at 8 p. m. Chipman defeating Hutchins by 325 point. At nine o'clock a bountiful supper was served in banquet hall consisting of oyster stew, assorted cakes and coffee. The side that got defeated had to furnish supper for their opponents. Following the supper was a social dance. Music by Corson's orchestra of Madison.

DEER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Frank Latham of Jay while sitting at breakfast the other morning heard the dog barking in the pasture back of his house, and taking a shot gun went out just in time to see a handsome buck spring out of the underbrush in front of him. He brought him down with the first charge using B. B. shot, passing straight through his body.

CAT CATCHES PARTRIDGE

An Owl's Head correspondent of the Rockland Courier Gazette writes The old black cat at Rose Hill Farm has a litter of nearly full grown kittens, seven of them, and she searches the barn, the fields and the woods for rats and mice, birds and squirrels to feed them. Recently she came from the woods dragging a plump partridge. Her progeny gathered around her, anxious to get a bite of the fat bird. But the cat kindly gave up the partridge to the cook, who dragged it and it formed an important part of the family's Sunday dinner.

SQUIRREL BLOCKS TRAFFIC

One little squirrel, possibly the same one that has done the same thing a number of times before, blocked traffic yesterday afternoon on Congress street, says Saturday's Press. The little animal issued forth from the big yard at the corner of Elm and Congress and skipped directly across the street, where there is a little store at which peanuts are sold. Now peanuts are to a squirrel what sauer kraut is to a Dutchman, and it is small wonder that the little fellow sat directly in the car track and munched away to his heart's content at some nuts that had evidently escaped the eye of the storekeeper. Quite a crowd collected to watch the little fellow consume his 3 o'clock feed, and after he had done this he nonchalantly departed when he came, utterly ignoring his audience.

MR. CAMP OWNER

It is rumored over the state that no hunters are coming to Maine this fall on account of the new license law. Do you believe this? We do not believe they can, and we also believe that Maine will have a good big bunch of hunters this fall.

Nature's Own Wrapping Keeps Tobacco Best

No artificial package—tin, bag, or tin-foil and paper—can keep tobacco as well as the natural leaf wrapper that holds all the original flavor and moisture in the Sickle plug. When you whittle off a pipeful, you always get fresh tobacco, that burns slowly, and smokes cool and sweet.

Chopped-up, "package" tobacco loses much of its moisture before it goes into the package, and keeps getting drier all the time. And the drier it gets, the faster it burns in your pipe, and the more it bites your tongue. Only fresh tobacco gives real pipe-satisfaction—and only tobacco you cut off the Sickle plug as you use it, can be fresh.

Economical, too—no waste—no package to pay for—more tobacco. Get a Sickle plug from your dealer today.

A COON HUNT.

When I was a boy I owned a couple of fine coon dogs; they were fast hound and cur. They knew when to go by themselves—always at a dark rainy night they would go hunting, would find a coon and stay until the sun was a couple of days high. If no one went to them they would come home.

One night the dogs treed on a creek that ran through the farm. A cousin who lived at our house and I were sleeping up stairs; father called us one night about 1 o'clock, told us to get up and go with him to the dogs—they had treed on the branch about 300 yards from the house. They had a couple of large spoons up a small hackberry tree. Several trees were standing 15 or 18 feet apart—a large grapevine was on the tree the coons were up and had extended to another tree. My father climbed the tree and one of the coons went out on a vine to another tree.

Father said, "Boys, they are big ones and I want you to help get them."

To me he said: "Rufus, go to the root of that other tree and keep the coon from coming down, for when I shake this coon out and he and the dogs get to fighting, the other coon will come down. I want you to keep him up the tree. Are you there?"

I said, "Yes, father, I am on the spot."

To my cousin he said, "Now, Dick when the dogs get the coon about dead, you take them off. I want the hide. Boys, do you understand what to do?"

We both said, "Yes, sir."

"All right, here he comes," and sure enough he did come.

Such a fight as was going on was enough to excite any boy. I was at the root of the tree where I was told to stay. Right in the middle of the fight I looked up and saw my coon coming down. To me he looked as large as a bear, so I left the tree and went to Dick. My father got tangled in the vines and was a long time getting down. When he did get down the dogs had killed the coon and still were fighting at it. Dick and I were seated on a log. Father got angry. I had never heard him use a bad word in my life until then.

Said he, "Rufus, why didn't you stay at that tree as I told you to do?"

I said, "Well, he started down and I went away."

"Then father said to Dick, 'What in the—were you going, Dick, that you didn't do what I told you to do?'"

Dick said, "Uncle Siah, they are fighting." Father then said, "I have a good notion to wear you both out. Cross that creek and get the dogs on trail of the coon that you let get away."

Right now we crossed, the dogs soon had him up a very large elm which was hollow at the top.

We then started home and just before we entered a lane leading to the house, the dogs opened on a trail. After running it a couple of minutes they bayed. The varmint was in a hollow maple. The hole it had gone in was about two feet from the ground. Father thought it a rabbit—he was fretted anyway—he ran his hand and arm up the hollow. A large opossum was up there and he took father's hand in his mouth, and such another howl as father set up was never heard before and the opossum held on. Dick and I were standing about eight feet away from the tree when father set up such a complaint.

Dick slapped me on the shoulder and whispered, "Bully, Rufe, it has got him."

The opossum then turned loose. After father had tied a handkerchief around his hand, we got a withe and twisted the opossum out; it was a very large one.

The next morning I said to my mother, "You never saw a man do as bad as father did last night on that coon hunt, he got mad at Dick and me and cursed us for everything he could think of."

Mother said, "Certainly he did not do that."

I said, "You ask Dick."

I went out in the hall and pretty soon father came in and mother said to him, "Josiah, the boys say you got mad last night and cursed them; you didn't do that, did you?"

I heard father say, "Cynthia, did they say that? I will whip those boys the very first time they cross my path, and I shall make one for them to cross."

We were good boys for several weeks after that.

R. B. Williams in Fur News Magazine.

WAS "JOE KNOWLES"

Clifford F. Farrington, president of the sophomore class at Harvard, was the Joe Knowles at the initiation festivities. He wore skin tight and had oak leaves and furs for his body covering. A pair of whiskers half a yard long dropped from his chin.

As Joe Knowles, Farrington wandered and ran about Harvard square in his primeval garb, utterly disregarding passing trolley cars and automobiles and the hundreds of students who surrounded him. He was all alone so far as his own status of mind went, and he was searching for blueberries on the cold marble columns of the Harvard square subway station.

Suddenly appeared a bear. R. Norris Williams, who fought with Maurice McLaughlin for the tennis championship of the United States last summer, was inside the skin, for he, too, is a Dickey initiate. The bear sprang on the pseudo Joe Knowles, and the primitive man was up against it, in as much as he couldn't very well dig a pit with his fingers in the asphalt surface of Harvard square. So they compromised and did a turkey trot instead. Man and beast were united in the dance.

Then the Harvard Joe Knowles made a speech. "As you all know," he said to the watchers, "I spent a month in the woods—one week in the forest and the other three in a neighboring farmhouse. I gained 150 pounds in 10 days, and believe me, I had some time."

Besides the imitation of Knowles, which was easily the hit of the first Dickey initiation, William J. Bingham of Lawrence, a Harvard varsity track man, appeared as William Jennings Bryan. "I am up against it, my friends," said W. J. B. "I get only $12,000 a year and I have to buy grape juice with the most of it. Some day, though, I'll appear on the big time circuits and then I hope to see you all again—at the usual box office rates."

The other Dickey men who finished their week of initiation with the public performers were Wells Blanchard of Milton, who explained how Harvard won the game last year; Theodore Sizer of New York, who, as Theodore Roosevelt, introduced William Jennings Bryant to the crowd, and Samuel M. Felton, Jr., of Chicago and David P. Morgan of New York, as a small sized German band.

LIBERATES HUNGARIAN PARTRIDGES.

Dr. George J. Phillips of Bar Harbor, who has a farm on Branch pond in North Ellsworth has liberated 16 pairs of Hungarian partridge. These partridge are the only ones of their kind in the state as far as is known. For a number of years past several attempts have been made to introduce this bird of the world into Maine without success. Bird hunters have been endeavoring to increase the variety of winged birds, but without success. A few years ago a large number of these Hungarian partridges were liberated in Maine, but after the first winter, the pairs became broke up and the breed died out. Although the native climate of the birds, is nearly the same as that of Maine, the feed is of a different nature, and the birds do not thrive well in this state.

The Hungarian partridge is not as good a breed as that of the native partridge nor as fine looking, being smaller in size, but it is thought that a cross between the two might result in a fine bird.

Four Portland men, who have been enjoying a hunting trip in the Maine woods, brought down from Enfield eight deer, getting two each. They were L. E. Rankin, W. E. Dow, W. H. Bentley and Fred Mason.

John Evans of Boston brought down a handsome buck, and Mrs. L. M. Seeds of Ellsworth, brought down a deer. Perley E. Brooks, a Bangor man, was successful, bringing home a fine deer.

BIRDS LET US LIVE.

Make Existence Possible by Destroying the Insects.

Birds live to eat. It is lucky for men they do, for if the birds did not breakfast men would not dine. Some years ago a French scientist told the world that if all the birds should suddenly die man would have only a year's life left to him. The Frenchman proved his point to the satisfaction of other scientists, but laymen laughed and the usual proportion of them kept on killing.

It has always been my belief that the sin of bird prosecution had its beginning with the other sin in the Garden. Adam probably saw a rob in picking away at a cherry and instantly said, "The bird is a thief." And Eve very likely saw a scarlet tanager sunning itself, and straightway coveted its plumage. So it is that the hand of man and the head of woman have been raised against the bird ever since.

Why should not a robin or a cedar bird or a catbird or any other bird eat an occasional cherry? Their dinner of cutworms, caterpillars and other things noxious make cherry dessert their due.

How much does a bird eat? Take the robin as an example. It eats at certain seasons of the year about double its weight in insects and worms every day. A man in order to satisfy an equally well developed appetite would have to eat about 300 pounds of food all told at his three daily meals. To do this he would need to be 30 feet tall, 10 feet thick from front to back and about five feet across the shoulders.

The bird's dinner hour begins at sunrise and ends an hour after sunset. Any legislation looking to the shortening of its hours of labor, which are coincident with its hours of eating, would bring famine. All the song birds and all the silent birds give their service to man and they ask no pay for it except to be let alone.—Country Gentleman.

That Maine spruce gum is unsurpassed by any gum in the country is shown in the many orders from the western states to druggists in Skowhegan. The demand is so great from these states by individuals that it is hard to fill the demand.

Tribute to the Late Mrs. Ina
Holman.

The following obituary of Mrs.
W. P. Holman was published in the Somersworth Free Press, written by a South Berwick correspondent,
where they had their first pastorate for five years:

The news of the death of Mrs. Ina
Holman, wife of Rev. Weston P.
Holman, which took place on Thursday at her home in Strong, Me., was received here with much regret, Mrs. Holman having won many friends during her husband's pastorate here in the Methodist church. Mrs. Holman was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J.
Ward of Wilton and a graduate of Wilton academy and taught successfully in the Wilton Intermediate school. Her married life was begun in Friendship, where Mr. Holman taught before taking up the work of the ministry in the church here. She was a woman of cultur-ed mind and earnest Christian life, a member of the W. O. T. U., and a skilled elocutionist, training a class of young girls while here in what was pronounced the best medical contest the judges had ever attended. Two children were born to her, one in South Berwick and one in Strong, both dying in infancy. Mrs. Holman was in delicate health while here, heart and nerves being affected. For the past two years she has been in very poor health, but died suddenly from apoplexy. She leaves an aged grandfather, Augustus Chandler, besides her parents and husband. The funeral took place Saturday, Rev. J. M.
Frost of Auburn, Rev. A. T. Craig of Fairfield and Rev. J. R. Clifford of Wilton officiating. Interment was at Lakeview cemetery, Wilton.

DISCOVERY COMES AFTER 3000 YEARS.

Buffalo House Takes the Taste Out of Castor Oil.

Since the earliest days of medicine chemists have been trying to take the taste out of castor oil.

The secret has at last been discovered by Spencer Kellogg & Sons of Buffalo, who are among the large-est producers and refiners of vegetable oils in the world. They have removed the castor oil taste, and smell, top, purifying the oil and making it better and more effective. Nothing is added to it, nothing good taken out of it.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil is tasteless in the true sense. Even children take it easily, for all the nauseating effect is removed.

Sold now at all drug stores in 25c and 50c sizes. Ask for Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil by name, for there are several preparations of castor oil, mixed and flavored, which are not tasteless and do not act as well.

The public is protected by the trade mark, a green castor leaf, bearing the signature, Kellogg's.

Made only by Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., refiners of vegetable oils.

IN AND ABOUT PHILLIPS

L. C. Reed returned Tuesday from a week of hunting in Madrid and reports that he did not see a deer for the whole time and only a few signs.

At Mt. Saddleback lodge, I. O.
O. F. next Tuesday evening, November 11, the initiatory degree will be given.

Miss Evelyn Calden, who has been visiting Mrs. L. C. Donnell in Portland also friends and relatives in Woodfords, has returned home.

L. G. Voter has been grading and placing a foundation for a monument on his lot in Elvargreen cemetery. Charles Dunham had charge of the grading; also of the cement work.

Miss Dallas Voter, who is teaching at Belgrade depot, attended the Teachers' Convention at Bangor.
She also visited her sister, Mrs.
Amo Salisbury of Brewer over Sunday, returning to her school Monday morning.

A pleasing feature in connection with Adjutant General Dill's retirement occurred Friday afternoon when the clerks in his department presented him with a beautiful mahogany clock. Needless to say, General Dill was delighted with the gift which was but a tangible expression of the well known fact that the retiring adjutant general has been exceptionally popular with his entire force of assistants. Indeed, it is safe to say that General Dill has been one of the most universally liked officials ever at the state house. In connection with the gift of the clock it is of interest to note that the entire personnel of the clerical force in the adjutant general's department has not changed during General Dill's term of office, a fact at which he expressed particular pleasure.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Marble of the Rangeley Lake House have gone to Dixfield where they will occupy J. S. Harlow's house for the winter.

On Tuesday of last week, James McGregor, who has the contract to construct the big reservoir at Mt.
Zircon suspended operation, paid off the crew and they returned home. Mr. Osgood, chairman of the board states that the rainy weather was the cause for suspension, but that Mr. McGregor will be held strictly to the terms of the contract.

C. A. Hardy and Floyd Hardie of Weld, mother, Mrs. Minnie Hackett and Mr. Cora Carlton went last Monday on a hunting trip and are stopping at Willard Chandler's camp for a week.

At the meeting of the Ladies'
Social Union with Mrs. H. B. Austin last Tuesday afternoon it was decided to have a sale of food and fancy articles instead of the regular fair which they have had for several years past. The sale will probably be held the first week in December.

A crew of men for the Pejepscot
Paper Company arrived from Boston last week and went to Redington where they will be employed.

F. J. D. Barnum of Lynnfield
Center was in town last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Horeysek returned from their wedding trip last week and in company with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Voter, are enjoying camp life at Gu-pond for a short time.

George P. Ramsdell of Weld was in town last Thursday and spent the night with his sister, Mrs. A.
W. Bean. Mrs. Hattie Farmer who has been the guest of Mrs. G. B.
Dennison and Mrs. Charles Sweetser for a week or two returned home with him and will return to Rum-ford when Mrs. Ramsdell, who has been with the family there during Mrs. Farmer's absence will return home.

Mrs. Lena Trask of east Dix-field died Wednesday morning. Her remains will be brought to Phillips Friday noon and prayers will be held at the grave. Mrs. Trask was formerly Miss Lena Ramsdell and resided in this town. She is a cousin of Mrs. A. W. Bean.

Ralph Hennings of Waterville has been in town the past week.

This office was gladdened last Tuesday by a visit from our venable townsman, Mr. Obed W. Russell. He was right on time as usual with his subscription for the Maine Woods which he always pays on his birthday. This year he is celebrating his 88th, and is in better health and more active than he was last year. He walked to the office as spry as a man of half his years and without the aid of even a cane. He has been in the woods this fall and cut the boughs for hanging his house. Two or three weeks ago he walked to the home of Fred Elsworth on the Mile Square, a distance of a mile or more, and made a call; also called on A. W. Bean, who lives on the outskirts of the village. Mr.
Russell is certainly a remarkable man and we hope that when his 89th birthday rolls around he will be enjoying the same good health that is his to-day.

A quiet home wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence in Weld, Saturday evening
when their youngest daughter, Lura Belle, was united in marriage with Chester A. Fairbanks of Phillips.
The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. L. Woodworth in the presence of the immediate relatives of the family. The newly-weds will reside in Madrid for the present.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Miss Luette Timberlake Friday at 2.30 o'clock. Two weeks ago a special meeting was held, fifteen members being present. Several new members were received. Miss Timberlake served refreshments.

The 1913 club was entertained by Mrs. C. E. Parker last Friday. This week Mrs. O. H. Hersey will entertain.

R. H. Preble returned from Redington Tuesday where he has been on a hunting trip for the past few days.

Miss Cornelia T. Crosby will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. M.
Pierce in Farmington over Sunday.
Mr. and Mrs. Pierce closed their camps at King and Bartlett saturdays ago and will be in Farmington for the winter as usual.

Miss Miriam Brackett will visit her brother, J. Scott Brackett at Bowdoin Saturday and attend the foot-ball game in the afternoon and dance of the Delta Upsilon fraternity in the evening.

The Ladies' Social Union will meet next week on Tuesday, November 11, with Mr. F. A. Lawton at 2 o'clock. Members will please note the change in the hour. The meetings will now be held weekly until after the sale in December.

Mrs. E. V. Holt will go to Portland Friday to visit her son, Hollis Holt, who is attending Gray's Business college.

A stated meeting of Sherburne
Chapter O. E. S. was held Wednesday evening. After the business was over, cake and coffee and after dinner mints were served by Mrs. O. H. Hersey and Mrs. F. N.
Beal, the committee.

John Russell shot a deer on his recent hunting trip. We stated last week that Mr. and Mrs. Russell and Mr. and Mrs. George Hunter were at the Russell cottage, near Mt. Blue, but this was an error as they were at Hunter's camp above Phillips near the old Bang's farm, for about 10 days.

The Social Service club will meet with Mrs. N. E. Wells next Tuesday at 2.30 p. m. The members are requested to bring needles and thimbles for sewing. At the last meeting held with Mrs. C.
E. Gould there was a large attendance and a most enjoyable afternoon passed.

Rev. Charles Harbutt, who was expected to be present at the Union church last Sunday was obliged at the last moment to cancel his engagement, but it is expected that he will be present and speak next Sunday morning.

A business meeting of the Federated church will be held this Thursday evening at 7.30. There are several important matters to be considered and it is hoped there will be a good attendance of the members.

Messrs. R. H. Preble and Ralph Trecartin will attend the foot-ball game at Brunswick Saturday. Mr.
George Kent of Madison will come and have charge of the drug store in their absence.

Several snow squalls have visited us this week.

OUR TWO MINUTE SERMON

By Rev. M. S. Hutchins.

This sermon, and others to follow, will not occupy over two minutes of your time in reading. Although miniature in size they will be real sermons. They will be based on timely topics of the day.

THE PURPOSE OF JESUS

By common consent Jesus of Nazareth lived a life that was peerless, that was altogether pure and true, beautiful and good. Yet he was tempted as we are. How then did he succeed in living a life that was stainless, what principal of action guided him, what was the central purpose of His life? Was His purpose to become a good and honored teacher, was it to be a leader whom the world would gladly follow, was it to win a name for goodness that should cause His fame to go sounding down the centuries, was it to please Himself?
Was it even the loftier purpose to help others, to bind up the broken hearted, rescue the lost and uplift humanity by sympathizing service, was it to please others? In a sense we are right when we say that Jesus lived for others, but the central purpose of His life went deeper still, for it was nothing less than to do the will of God. It was because He was doing the will of an All-loving tender Father of infinite mercy and compassion that He spent his life for needy, suffering human kind.

Let His own words teach us His central purpose. When his disciples rebuked Him for spending the moon rest hour not in eating needed food, but in instructing the Samaritans about God, He answered, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of, my meat is to do the will of Him that sent me." Later He told them, "I came from Heaven not to do mine own will,
but the will of Him that sent me," and at the last when facing the horrors of the cross He prayed to God "Not my will but Thine be done."

Doing God's will made the life of Jesus altogether beautiful and good, and it is the central purpose that must govern our lives before they can become at all like His life.

Guard Children Against Worms

There is really very little excuse for sickness if proper care is taken to guard against disease. Worms are one of the most dreaded diseases of children.

Signs of worms are: Deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, offensive breath, hard and full belly with occasional grip-

DISCOVERY OF A TASTELESS CASTOR OIL.

It will be good news to every family in America that a method has been discovered of taking the taste and odor out of castor oil. This almost indispensable household remedy, hitherto feared, detested, and avoided because of its indescribable taste, now has no taste at all.

This feat has been accomplished after repeated and tedious experiment by a persistent firm of oil refiners in Buffalo, and the tasteless castor oil is now being supplied everywhere.

It is announced that the remarkable feature of the process is that it neither adds to, nor takes anything away but the taste. The other characteristics and the value of the castor oil remain unchanged.—Adv.

HOW TO KEEP GAME FROM SPOILING.

It is, I take it, an admitted axiom that all game, big or small, that is killed afield should be used, even though no wild game ought to be sold to-day. To the decent sportsman it is a big moral wrong to shoot game that is not going to be used to the full extent of its food value.

And consequently, a big factor with many a sportsman is the question of transportation facilities for shipping out his kill from camp. While there are some few—very few—regions where it is feasible to ship home game every few days, where the party has 'gone in' perhaps many miles from steel, the question assumes a more serious aspect. There are three courses open to the sport man in this latter case. He may, first, sit down and eat his kill in camp (this procedure does not appeal beyond a limited extent); he may, perhaps, in some few instances, succeed in obtaining more or less ice, or, third, he may resort to the only remaining means of keeping game from spoiling. Of course, the big game hunter usually has cold weather, so that it is an easy matter for him to keep his meat. The bird hunter of the early fall, however, may be shooting duck, and partridge, or shore birds when the weather is frequently as hot during the sunshine as in summer. Many thousands of black, mallard, teal and wood duck have spoiled during the first few days of the open season, through heat and flies.

How best can it be kept from boards on top of all. Do not in any case, place newly killed birds on ice—first drawing and wiping out and leaving hanging up over night to cool. If you have no ice, keep them hanging by their heads in the shade, plugged with dry hay as above indicated, and keep them well protected with netting or cheese-cloth.

And now comes the matter of shipment home. Many times has game been kept safely by the writer and left the camp in good condition, only to spoil en route. Best of all is one of the game-baskets, lined with zinc and arranged with ice-compartments separate. Most of these baskets are badly made, the ice sections being altogether too small. The best basket is one that has ice sections of good size in either end, with the game compartment in the center. In any case always remember to keep the game both dry and cold. Arrived home, get your birds at once into the refrigerator or ice box (again remembering to keep them dry). If you have taken good care of your kill, your family or friends may now eat birds killed a week or ten or twelve days before, that are really fit to eat. At your hotel you may eat a grouse or duck that was possibly killed a year ago and which has been kept frozen after being treated chemically in a manner that would cause Dr. Wiley to shiver in horror; but it is not the same fresh or food by any means that it was when originally killed, and the less eaten the better.

Tainted Birds

If your duck or grouse should have a slightly stronger odor than it should, do not throw it away. It is most apt to be wrong either along the incision or the thigh—first skin the bird—do not pluck it—open it along the back and wash it at the cold water tap. Perhaps even this treatment will not remove the odor. Any good chef will tell you what to do—what he very likely does with 60 per cent. of the game he serves. Take a kettle of boiling water, large enough to immerse the bird entirely; throw into it a handful of salt, making a strong boiling brine; add a teaspoonful of baking soda. Now dip your bird, well cleaned, for a moment or two into this boiling solution; take it out and rinse under the cold water again and place away, in the ice-box. It will be good for several days more. If magnum has still any suspicion, have her cook it with a big quon inside, which will remove the last of the suspicious odor and leave the bird fresh and sweet. Of course not all game requires this special treatment, especially if it has the proper care in camp.

About Big Game

It is always well, as a friend used to put it, to in any emergency "have something up your sleeve." A big game sportsman should know something about keeping moose, bear, caribou or deer from spoiling. If, for instance, you have killed you deer and are intent on getting him into camp the same night—and not equal to packing it on your back, which I may remark, is a very wearisome performance—you can make a sort of drag out of a small evergreen which will at least serve to help move Mr. Buck part of the way in the desired direction. The more common practice, however, is to have a companion help in the transport, tying the buck's four feet together and swinging him on a stout pole, each man carrying one end. Once in camp, the usual procedure is to put a sharp stick through the gambrels and swing up in a sapling. Some sportsmen and guides claim a deer hangs and keeps better if hung by the head. Of course the bigger game animals, such as moose and bear are usually transported to camp by husky guides or in canoes and out to the steel by canoe or wagon. Primarily—more's the pity—the head is the trophy sought when moose or caribou is the game hunted, and the meat in many instances rots on the carcass. In fact a moose that has a big 'spread' is not usually very tender eating, while the same is true of an old caribou or even of a really old buck deer. The Rock Mountain goat is mighty bad eat-

BEST MAN WITH OLD WHITEWASH PAIL

"Southpaw" Plank of the Athletics.

Edward Plank is the "boss of the whitewash brigade"—the expert wielder of the brush. The chap who has distributed goose eggs with a free and open hand, exceeding all records in this line in the history of the American league.

By placing a shut-out game to his credit this season Edward Plank has surprised the mark set by "Iron Man" Walsh, of the White Sox. Mr. Plank has 59 of these games to his credit—all nine-inning games or better.

The wonderful left-hander framed up his first runless game in 1901 against the Milwaukee club, then a member of the American league, and every season since the expert exponent of the cross-fire delivery has placed a goodly number of these games on record.

Ed Walsh, the former holder of the honor, lost the cunning or otherwise out of his arm before the veteran Plank did, so it put him out of the running. No doubt if the "Iron Man" could have held this season he would still be king of the whitewash brigade.

Dr. White is another gentleman who proved a clever distributor of goose eggs. The dentist has had the extreme pleasure of applying the brush 59 times. Other hurlers who have proved handy in holding the opposition runless in Mr. Ban Johnson's circuit are, or were, Cy Young, the much-lamented Addie Joss, the never-to-be-forgotten G. Edward (Rube) Waddell, and the latest aspirant for honors in that line is W. Johnson, the holder of many records. Plank is liable to add a few more scalps to the many that now dangle from his belt before the season closes.

But the lead of six games will hold him as champion for another year at least. Here is the list of those who made a record of 40 or more runless games in the American league since its organization:

Name.	Years.	Games.
Plank .....	13	59
Walsh .....	9	54
White .....	13	53
Joss .....	10	44
Young .....	11	44
Waddell .....	10	44
Johnson .....	7	40

ing when old, but a young kid is not too bad at a pinch.

The general way of cooking all these meats is usually in the frying pan with bacon. Even bear's meat, thus cooked, seems hardly worth eating, unless one is hungry enough to eat sole leather. The best method, where feasible, for all these meats, is to roast in large cuts. Probably the best eating meat of any of the native big game of Canada is the Mountain Sheep; the rib chops are excellent eating, while a side or ribs, cut free of the back-bone and cooked slowly and thoroughly, forms a really appetizing meal.

In summing up the chief factors in the preserving of game in camp, I would say it is primarily important to first let the animal heat cook off, (this of course requiring immediate opening of both bird and big game and drawing); thoroughly drying off all blood and then keeping the game dry; protection from flies in warm weather by either cheese cloth or netting and where possible, the putting next ice, but not on it save as described in the case of cracked ice in a zinc-lined box. A combination of heat, moisture and flies will spoil any game in a very short period of time, each and all being enemies to preservation that one must vigilantly eliminate.—S. E. Sangster in Rod and Gun.

Nothing Too Good For American Hunters Abroad.

Americans are still dominating the Scottish shootings, a sport that exceeds in cost any other. A host easily spends $50,000 in two months and the canny Scotch landowners are profiting largely by the American interest in grouse shooting on the moors. They are renting famous properties at fantastic prices.

Equally heavy expenses fall on the guests who must pay enormous tips to gamekeepers and "gillies" and all values have risen north of Carlisle, owing to the American influence.

In the olden days, grouse shooting was a simple diversion, with lunch taken to the moors in laborer fashion; under the American system, lunch is now a magnificent past spread at tables, with champagne, salmon, game and other delicacies on the menu while fleet motor cars are essential for every last shooting party.

GRIZZLY BEAR HUNTING—GOATS NOT EASILY CAPTURED.

This is something about grizzly bear hunting in Jasper park, west of Edmonton, as narrated by R. C. W. Lett, who accompanied Dr. C. D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D. C., and his party on an expedition, the work in hand being that of locating fossils and fauna.

"We were camped at the forks of Moose river, 12 miles or so from the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway," Mr. Lett said in telling the story. "There the trail strikes in at a point about 17 miles west of the summit of the Canadian Rockies, beyond the Yellowhead pass."

"During the first days of our hitting the trail little or no time was devoted to bear hunting, but on small specimens such as marmots, mink, squirrel and other animals were hunted and trapped, and the hours around the campfire were devoted to the skinning and the tedious work of cleaning the skulls of these small animals. The party was anxious to secure a large black bear from the district, and the day after we made our camp a trip was planned which would lead us up through the magnificent Resplendent valley, where the glories of the Rockies are unfolded in a great panoramic view."

"Lunch over, our horses were saddled and we set off with a suitable outfit for packing big game, should we be lucky enough to bag any. The sky gradually thickened and a heavy drizzle started, but our party, having become accustomed to such vi-clivities in the field, were not daunted in the slightest, and the start was made, all the horses trudging along in single file. It was interesting to notice with what almost human sense the leading horse, named Pathfinder, sought out the shallow fords along the valley, over which the river crossed back and forth many times. The trail was entirely new to us and we entered Resplendent valley with our eyes and ears on the alert."

"Rounding the great wide cliffs, where the remains of an old hunter's cabin stood, we almost trampled on a big fat porcupine, which waddled slowly from the trail with quills all on end, and here we met our first unpleasant experience. Mr. Porcupine, when he saw the dogs, folded himself closely together, and the Airedales, with more pluck than sense, pounced on him before we could jump from our horses and in less than no time had Mr. Porcupine killed."

"Our work then began, for the dogs looked as much like a porcupine as the porcupine did himself. We lost no time in getting to work with tweezers on the unfortunate dogs and after a half-hour's work pulled the last quills from the tongues. It is a strange thing that, no matter how often a dog gets punctured with porcupine quills he never seems to profit by the cruel experience but will immediately go for Porky on sight. At 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon we reached the prettiest part of the valley and skirted along the base of the mountain on our left where green slopes gave the promise that we might locate a bear."

"With our glasses we scanned the mountain side up and down and finally a call went up, 'There's a bear,' and, although we were at least a mile distant, we avoided as much as possible making any noise. Unslung our rifles and leaving the horses just where we stopped we ran in a crouched position to within what we considered fair shooting range."

"Evidently the bear had not seen us, as he continued to nose around through the raspberry bushes and pick out what green roots he was fond of. Careful stalking became our next move. There being four of us, we decided we would string out along the little stream at the foot of the slope, so as not to let Bruin reach the heavy timber on either side of the open space."

"As luck would have it, I was offered the first shot, and, running my sights up to 300 yards, I took careful aim and pulled the trigger. Instantly the bear let out a roar, resembling that of a cow with a severe cold more than anything else, doubled up and rolled like a ball down the mountain side. I had ample time to get a couple more shots if I had wanted to, but I judged that when Bruin stopped he would stop for keeps. Not so, however; for like a flash he regained his feet as he approached some fairly heavy scrub and plunged into the undergrowth, where he was immediately lost to sight."

"The fun began then, for every instant there would be a shot where the bushes were seen to move, although the animal was never once in plain view. Down the shore my three companions raced, popping a shot at him every once in a while, but not until he broke into the opening near the heavy timber did a shot reach him which finished his career."

"The dogs, of course, had really no time to get in touch with the bear while the shooting was going on, but almost as soon as he collapsed one of them reached up and grabbed him by the back and held on until we approached."

"After dragging our quarry out to the gravel river bed, we set about the work of skinning, saving the skull and cutting nearly all the best portion of the meat away which we afterward consumed, in camp. Bear meat, when properly treated, is, to my mind, as good as the best roast beef. The ordinary discussion of course arose as to who hit the bear, and as the proof of the pudding is in the chewing of the string we easily located my bullet and that of one of the boys who shoots a rifle of different make."

"After a week's travel we made the Mount Robson district and in the rear of this mass if we located what I have named Goat Land, owing to the fact that in one day we saw more than 50 Rocky mountain goats, some 1,500 to 1,800 feet above the location of our camp. Here we were able to secure a few good specimens for the institution, and as we had run completely out of meat the variation in our food was most acceptable."

"Goats are not easily captured, as one must be prepared to scale some of the highest peaks and at times run the risk of slipping on the slide, rock or in other ways take chances of bodily harm. This of course, only lends excitement to the game, and in the long hours around the campfire, the hunting is gone through step by step and each man's experience and sensations of the day related."

"The day previous to the goat hunt, we camped near the Valley of Flowers, close to the Great Divide, which separates the flow of water to the Arctic from that to the Pacific, and our guide, who was always on the look-out, shouted out 'There's a grizzly.' Sure enough, away, over to the extreme north was a large grizzly, running over the ice, as though he were being chased by something."

"Three or four of us scrambled down the bank of the Smoky river, and running along its shore, finally came to a ready made bridge which consisted of a large spruce tree, and over this we soon crossed, running chances of slipping off into the turbulent waters beneath. Then up the mountain side we clambered, all out of breath, only to find that beyond us raced another stream to join the main branch."

"Over this we could find no crossing. This meant that we had to work our way right up to the tongue of the glacier high above, and then a good deal more climbing on the far side, where Mr. Grizzly was last seen. Reaching a point lifted above the surroundings we were just in time to see the huge monster enter the thick spruce grove on the side of the mountain. Night closed in on us and we gave up the chase."

"Next day we crossed over to the same glacier to satisfy our curiosity; that is, to find out why the grizzly seemed in such a hurry to cross the glacier the day before, but, on reaching the height of land, we found that as far as the eye could see there was nothing but millions of tons of ice in sight and mountain peaks whose bases were buried among the glaciers, and we came to the conclusion that the grizzly was so disgusted at the prospects for food in that locality that he had quickly taken his departure for greener fields."

"All along the whole route from Rainbow Falls, near the railroad, green slopes, which are the first feeding grounds of the grizzly in the springtime, were met with, and I believe that for spring hunting this should afford the sportsman who is not afraid to attack the grizzly an excellent hunting ground."

HUNTING NOTES

C. C. Wilson and H. E. Monroe of Auburn, returned Friday morning from Spencer mountain, where they have been with the William Tell Club on its annual outing. They were called home because of the death, Wednesday, of Dr. W. J. Penneil.

A hunting party from some place down the line attracted much attention at the Dexter station the other morning, both by their togery and their actions, according to the Eastern Gazette. Evidently they were proceeding upon the theory that dressing in bright colors was a safeguard against being mistaken for a deer, for all were attired in bright red and yellow clothing, including headgear. The leader of the party wore a comical cap, terminating in a bunch of feathers, while the remainder of the party were as grotesquely attired. All were loudly and monotonously chanting, 'There's a Hole in the Bottom of the Sea.' To all appearances they were better safeguarded against getting shot than they were against becoming half shot.

An Ellsworth girl visiting in North Hancock last week—it would be almost too bad to tell her name—made one of a hunting party, says the Ellsworth American. She was looking for big game, and as luck will have it in such cases, she saw it. Creeping along in advance of the others of the party, suddenly she turned, held up a cautioning finger, and whispered, 'It's a moose.' Then she raised her rifle to fire. At this most inopportune moment she was seized with an uncontrollable desire to sneeze. And she sneezed. At this startling sound the animal raised its head. A bell jangled, and the cow walked off in safety.

Club House May Be Kept Open.

It is now thought that the clubhouse of the Augusta Yacht Club may be kept open, during the winter months, instead of being closed, as it was, last winter, and while the matter has not as yet been definitely decided, it is considered probable that it will be at the November meeting of the club, which will be held, next Wednesday evening, Nov. 5. The clubhouse provides a good place for recreation for quite a number of members who are not regularly employed during the winter months, and there is a feeling, this fall, that there is sufficient interest to keep the clubhouse open for at least a portion of the cold weather.

Tip to Prospective Moose Hunters.

A tip to prospective moose hunters: Look before shooting. Be sure it is a bull moose. There is a fine of $200 and costs for shooting cow moose, for each offense. It is also against the law to shoot a calf moose or caribou. A calf moose is a calf moose until at least one year old and has at least two prongs or tines not less than three inches long, to each of their horns, according to the game laws.

The close time on all fur bearing animals with the exception of beavers, also expires at 12 o'clock, Friday night. It will be lawful to shoot them until next March, and muskrat may be shot until next May.

For shooting beaver, there is a fine of $100 and costs for each offense.

Any person may lawfully kill any wild animal, except beaver, or any wild bird found destroying his property.

ONE MOOSE ARRIVES

Game Warden Bennett of Newport seized a half carcass of a deer at Northern Maine Junction Saturday. It was addressed to a woman who formerly resided there, and had been shipped from Larange. The carcass was not accompanied by a license tag, and the warden considered the shipment illegal, so reporting to Chief Game Warden Perkins at the Bangor station. The matter will be reported to the commission at Augusta.

Whenever you write to one of our advertisers, don't forget to mention Maine Woods. It is important to you to do so; important to us and the advertiser naturally wants to know where you found his name.

Mr. Bennett is the first game warden seen in Bangor wearing the new uniform for the game wardens of the state. It is an attractive blue suit, much like that worn by train conductors, with brass buttons and a military cap with the words 'Game Insp.' upon it. Hunters will find it much easier to recognize the wardens with this fine uniform. The buttons bear a design of an elk head, with powder horn and gun, twined among the antlers.

One moose from the Canadian provinces arrived in Bangor on the way to Massachusetts.

CAPTURES LARGE CANADIAN LYNX

Phillips, Maine, Oct. 31—Mr. Calvin Gray of Madrid who is doing some trapping in that town, went to visit one of his bear traps recently and found a large Canadian Lynx in his trap which measured 41 inches from tip to tip and stood 26 inches tall in his lowest place which was at his shoulders.

Mrs. Grant also of Madrid, had the good fortune of shooting a fine buck deer recently.

MAGNIFICENT SUMMER HOME TO BE BUILT ON HOPE ISLAND.

George W. Elkins of Philadelphia intends to erect during the coming winter a magnificent and large summer home on Hope Island in Casco bay, which island he purchased outright a few weeks ago. According to the present plans of the owner, the new summer home will be the finest finished and most luxuriously fitted of any house on the Maine coast and will not be excelled by any of the summer homes of the multi-millionaires of New York, who have beautiful buildings and grounds at Bar Harbor.

Last Thursday Mr. Elkins, together with his secretary and architect, arrived in Portland from Philadelphia, and chartered the local towboat Startle to carry them to Hope Island, where an examination of the island was conducted and a beautiful site decided upon where it is supposed to build the new house. The piece of land picked out is one of the most sightly in the entire Casco bay, as it faces Cliff Island and the broad Atlantic ocean on the south side, the eastern end of Long Island on the western end and the western end of Little Chebeague Island on the north side.

HATCHERY AT GREEN LAKE ENLARGED

The United States fish hatchery at Green lake has been enlarged by the addition of a shed on the eastern side, 41x23 feet, in which hatching troughs are installed. Larger troughs have been installed in the southern room of the hatchery, and an outside run ery will be provided with over 100 more troughs. Supt. E. E. Race and his crew, which has been increased, have been having very busy time preparing for the additional eggs.

The eggs received last week came from the Washington coast by one of the regular fish commission cars, and were in excellent condition in spite of the 3,000-mile trip. These eggs are of the humpback salmon. A similar shipment has been received at the Craig Brook hatchery in East Orland.

Unlike the native salmon or the Quinnet salmon of the Pacific coast, of which an experimental hatching was made here some years ago, the humpback salmon spawn near the headwaters of the streams. They will spawn in brackish water.

It is proposed to plant the fry in the spring in the waters of Atlantic coast rivers. It is unfortunate that in Union river, often pronounced one of the best natural salmon rivers in Maine, the big dam of the Bar Harbor & Union River Power Co is not provided with a fishway. This will probably prevent the planting of any of these fish in Union river.

THINKS DEATH MAY HAVE RESULTED FROM HUNTING TRIP.

Dr. William J. Pennell of Auburn was stricken with a shock and died very soon after on October 23. He had made a specialty of the ear and throat for 20 years.

It is said that Dr. Pennell's death is due to the exertion of a hunting trip from which he returned last week. The trip extended over many miles up in Quebec and the doctor had complained of the distances which were being traveled. He had been on a similar trip about six years ago and the effects of it had troubled him for some time after.

COULDN'T GO AFTER BIRD, SO BIRD CAME TO HIM.

Stephen Hayward of Pittford, N. Y., was strongly reminded of the old fairy stories of his childhood days recently, when a perfect specimen of a cock pheasant flew into his house after he had been trying all day to get time to go to the city to purchase some shells so that he could go hunting. Unlike the fairy stories though, the pheasant will cost Mr. Lusk in the neighborhood of $10 for the window which it broke in coming to him.

Lusk started out with his dog to hunt for the beautiful birds, but before he met with success his supply of ammunition was exhausted. He returned home before contemplating to take the trolley to Rochester to purchase the shells that he wanted, but kept one thing and then another detained him until it was too late.

When he went to his home he found the neighborhood all in excitement owing to a terrific crash of glass which they had heard in his direction and a large window, a feature of the den in Mr. Lusk's bungalow, was shattered into bits. What caused the crash was unknown to anyone until Mr. Lusk started an investigation and found the pheasant on the seat in front of the window beside his dog.

The dog, which was a hunter, was watching for his master on the window seat when the bird unexpectedly appears and he knew what to do with it. The pheasant weighed two and one-quarter pounds after it was dressed. It is probable that the bird, frightened by hunters, was seeking a refuge.

Utterly Wretched

Nervous Prostration Long Endured Before Remedy was Found.

Miss Minerva Reminger, Upper Bern, Pa., writes: "For several years I had nervous prostration, and was utterly wretched. I lived on bread and beef tea because my stomach would not retain anything else. I took many remedies, but obtained no relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, when I began to gain at once. Am now cured." Pure, rich blood makes good, strong nerves, and this is why Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies and enriches the blood, cures so many nervous diseases. Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolate tablets called Sarsatabs.

AN ENGLISH AUTHOR WROTE:
"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves—November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

Never in the history of this store said Mr. Preble to a representative of a wholesale drug house, "has there been so great a demand for any remedy as there is just now for Hamilton's Old English Black Oil. Phillips people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we will sell Hamilton's Old English Black Oil with the understanding that it will do all that is claimed of it or pay back the money." WORK THAT TELLS

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Phillips.

To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate its work. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Phillips. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now give confirmed testimony—declare the results have lasted. How can any Phillips sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Elbridge Dill, farmer, Phillips, Me., says: "I appreciate what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I am glad to confirm my former public endorsement. Doan's Kidney Pills, produced from Cragin's Drug store, (now Preble's Drug store), have kept my kidneys in good working order and have relieved me of the dull ache across the small of my back and trouble with the kidney secretions."

LOOK for this triangle before you buy any heater.

It is the trademark of the latest model of the Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater.

It is the sign of the greatest improvements ever made in oil heating devices.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

The Perfection Heater, as now made, gives more heat, holds more oil, is better made and works better than any other heater on the market.

It has a wide, shallow oil font, which allows the oil to pass readily up the wick and insures reliable, unchanging flame and heat, whether the font is full or nearly empty.

The Perfection is smokeless, because the patent locking flame-spreader prevents the wick being turned up high enough to smoke. It is easy to re-wick, because the carrier and wick are combined—just turn out the old and slip in the new.

Indicator tells how much oil is in the font. Filler plug is pushed in like a cork—no screw, no thread to wear. Attractive latticed window frame.

BACK TO SCHOOL.

The children are trudging the time worn path, just as other children have done for generations. But the modern children should have watches. Twice a day they should be on time but they will waste time if they have to guess. One of the great lessons of life is to learn to spend time carefully. Give the child a watch—it will teach punctuality while the mind is still plastic.

Boys' watches, $1.00, $2.00 and $5.00.
Girls' watches $2.00 and up.

Good enough for grown-ups at that.
