

LOYAL LEGION TO BE ORGANIZED

Miss Gilman Gives Interesting Temperance Talk.

Miss Esther Gilman, a graduate from the Emerson School of Orator Boston, and who came under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. as advertised last week, was listened Methodist church last Monday even-to by a good sized audience at the ing.

Miss Gilman gave a few selections in reading, but the principal feature was along the lines of the W. C. T. U. and the organizing of a Loyal Temperance Legion in Phillips.

Much enthusiasm was shown among the young people present to have this organization and Miss Bessie Crowell, pastor of the Methodist church, Mrs. Zernie Webber, Miss Zara Bachelder and Master Richard Wing were appointed to select the officers for the same and the first meeting will be held on

SALE OF SERVICE CLUB SUCCESSFUL

The sale of the Social Service club held in the rooms over Edgar R. Tothaker's store last Friday afternoon and evening was very successful, the club netting some over $43. The room proved to be just the right place for the sale, as the shelves formerly used for the library books showed the canned fruits, pickles, jellies, etc., off to good advantage and made a most tempting display.

Mrs. W. V. Larrabee, Mrs. Charles Gould and Miss Albertine Butterfield were the committee in charge and planned the decorations and display, which certainly did justice to the hard work put into the affair. Strings of cranberries, mingling with the greens, were everywhere and made a very pretty effect. A little innovation was to have all kinds of vegetables on sale, and one could almost taste the good old-fashioned boiled dinner as he took a survey of the fresh, nice vegetables under the charge of Mrs. Larrabee.

The ladies assisting in the sale of the food, etc., were Mrs. M. S. Hutchins and Mrs. A. B. Grover for the cake; Mrs. Rose Campbell, Mrs. Mary Field, Mrs. George True, for pickles, bread, pudding; Mrs. Fremont Scamman, Mrs. C. E. Gould, and Mrs. F. B. Pillsbury helped with the lunches which were served, consisting of sandwiches, salads, coffee; Mrs. Harlan White and Miss Dallas Voter sold the potted plants and homemade candies.

The ladies of the Social Service club are to be congratulated on their first venture and they are already at work on fancy articles, as they plan to have an Easter sale.

YOU CAN HELP

To fight tuberculosis with the Red Cross Seal. These seals sell for only one cent each and are decorative seals in Christmas colors to use on Holiday letters and packages. Within a few days Red Cross seals will be put on sale in Phillips by a local agent, who hopes to sell 5000 before Christmas, thus netting $50.00 to send as Phillips' contribution to the Maine Anti-Tuberculosis Association, a society that, in connection with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis is doing much to alleviate the contagion and suffering from this terrible disease. Every one is able to do something to help in this work by buying his Christmas seals from a Red Cross agent.

Thursday afternoon, December 4, at 4 o'clock at the Methodist church to complete the organization.

On Tuesday evening Miss Gilman read at the Union church. The officers at the present time of the W. C. T. U. are: Mrs. Veta Barden, president; Mrs. Lizzie Crockett, Mrs. M. S. Hutchins, Miss Cora Wheeler, vice president; Mrs. Lewis Reed, secretary; Mrs. E. H. Whitney, corresponding secretary; Miss Luette Timberlake, treasurer.

OLD-SHAD FISHING DAYS

Big Catches Brought Money.

Can you imagine going down to the banks of the Connecticut river, say at the foot of Elm street, dropping a line into the water and the next minute pulling out a big juicy four-pound shad? They don't do these things now, chiefly because the shad have departed in disgust at having their homes invaded by noisy power boats, factory oils and refuse and the like, and because the down-the-river authorities of the previous generation were short-sighted in their fisheries policy. But half a century or more ago it was eminently possible to get the principal feature of a good square meal at the cost of only 10 minutes with a rod and line. Those were the days when people did not talk so much about the cost of living, although even then there was a great deal of bitterness between the people of western Massachusetts and those of Connecticut, the former claiming that the Nutmeggers monopolized the lower reaches of the river with their fish nets all too completely, thereby cutting off much of the supply of the north.

Today a survey of the river as far as Hartford would reveal only perhaps a couple of youthful followers of Izaak Walton fishing. Small boys cast lines occasionally in the vicinity of the Longmeadow border. This signifies nothing because it is well known that there are crowds of fishermen every day on the banks of the Seine in Paris, although it is not on record that anything ever comes out of either river except a few empty tin cans or maybe a set of false teeth. As a fishing resort the Connecticut in the vicinity of this city is barren, and only the almost hopeless efforts of a few youngsters survive as a sort of tombstone for what was once a profitable and popular sport and business.

Between 1845 and 1850 river fishing was at its height in Springfield, and the stretch of water from Holyoke to Thompsonville, Ct., was well populated with large and small craft containing men busy in laying nets. Shad was the great catch and their succulent, sweet meat was as typical of Springfield as baked beans are of Boston, or cod-fish balls of Salem and Gloucester. There was not a family in the city, or the town as it then was, which was not accustomed to delicious planked shad as an almost daily viand. The fish were there to be taken, and people saw little use in helping to support meat markets when the small boy of the family could step down to the river bank and in 15 minutes return with the family dinner flopping at the end of a forked stick.

Then people began to see the commercial value of the river as a fishing resort. Orders flowed in from New York where the patrons of the big hotels were demanding Connecticut shad in preference to those of the Delaware. Enterprising persons began buying up fish rights on the river, usually 100 rods in length, and about half the width of the river, and before 1855 the amateur anglers' day was done. If he went out on the river at night in his private boat he was liable to be treated with a dose of buckshot for this was poaching in the strictest sense of the word, and the proprietors of river rights hired men to watch their property jealously. These fish wardens led a happy life, drifting lazily over their 100 rods or so of river, but woe betide them if they drifted too far and got on to the next preserve, for then they were likely to be treated with a dose of the same medicine by their neighbors.

Fishing rights came to be sold as high as $500 for 100 rods of river, although some were inherited and passed from generation to generation like so much real estate. For commercial purposes the work with rod and line was too slow. Consequently, nets were used almost exclusively, this causing much perturbation to the real sporting men of the old days who could see little enjoyment in this method of angling. The net was about 33 rods long with a sweep of 18 or 20 feet, and with a line of rope along the top and the bottom. The top was kept afloat by big pieces of cork while the bottom was weighted with lead sinkers.

The boat was a large flat scow which would hold two or three tons. Two nets were usually worked together with five men on each, four in the boat and one on the bank. About the time of the incorporation of Springfield as a city, commercialized fishing, by which is meant the catching of fish for sale to markets and hotels, was at its height. At this time the river bank below and above the city was daily a scene that was picturesque indeed. Swinging out from the bank in their boat the four men who were to draw the net went about 20 rods, then swung almost at right angles and went down stream about 10 rods, then swinging in toward shore. During this time the current of the river had been carrying the net, and the fish who were going to the upper reaches found themselves suddenly fenced in.

By this time the net has taken the form of a large U and within it are hundreds of silvery-sided shad, leading vainly against the sides and doubtless wondering at their sudden imprisonment. The other net is taken out into the stream in back while the crew who have just completed their catch drag their net in shore to dump the fish on the banks before going out again. Hundreds of spectators used to line the banks during the fishing season and many of them made their purchases on the spot, selecting one of the finny prey before he had fairly quit squirming. There was little demand for cold storage plants for preserving fish in those days in Springfield.

Fishing by Night Once Common

At one time there was considerable done in the way of fishing by night, but this was later given up, for, despite the added picturesqueness, it was found not to be so efficacious. The female shad, which were more desired than the males on account of their roe, were apt to lose much of it before morning if taken by night. The flesh of the males was solid and sweeter than that of the females, but the delicacy of the roe more than made up for this in the judgment of the fishermen and the purchasers. The shad began to come up the river the second week in May, and returned down the river early in September. These were the most profitable times for the Connecticut river fishermen, although almost any time in the summer months was good for a substantial haul.

These golden days of shad fishing could not last forever, though. Soon Springfield began to lose its identity as the center of a farming section and became more and more engrossed in manufacturing. Big factories were established along the banks of the river, and these emptied into the stream thousands of gallons of oil and refuse, which acted as a strong deterrent to the coming of the shad. Then the Enfield dam came into existence, making shad strangers in these waters and fishing came to an abrupt end. River rights that had formerly profited a neat fortune were now sold for a song or dropped out of sight altogether. The fishing tackle rotted hanging in barns or was cut up and sold for purposes for which it had never been intended. One man sold a section of his to a neighbor who wished to use it for covering a strawberry bed, and then offered to sell all the rest of his equipment and his rights for what five years before he would have considered a pittance. Incidentally, the offer was declined.

Many big "fish stories" passed the rounds in the palmy days of the sport, and the ingenuity of some of them has caused their authors to go down in history as distinguished persons. One old character, known to the whole city as "Uncle Selah," used to solemnly aver that he could walk out to the middle of the river on the backs of the scaly shad and pick them up as easily as one would walk into a berry patch and stoop to pick huckleberries. This story was never verified, but it marked "Uncle Selah" as a great man and one worthy of respect and admiration of the entire water front. "Uncle Selah" was also sure that he had once seen two shad jump out of the river and climb on the bank to get out of the crush.

Practically all of the big fishermen of the olden days have passed away, but there are a few of the oldest residents who can remember the departed glories of this city as a fishing center in their early youth. Among the men who amassed large sums from their river rights and gained enviable reputations were Capt. C. C. Smith of Holyoke, Alonzo Converse and his son, Frank Converse, Seth Green, Barney Cooley, Edwin Bodurtha and Augustine Hills of West Springfield, Frank Parker, "Mike" Harrigan and John King.

Fishing to some extent lasted until well into the '80's. Alonzo Converse was probably the veteran of the old Connecticut river fishermen. He began in 1827 at the age of 14, when the river had not yet been exploited from a commercial piscatorial standpoint, and continued until 1885, fishing the river for 58 consecutive seasons. Mr. Converse saw the rise, decline and fading away of the sport, and for many years kept a record of the numbers of fish he took out of the river. The rapid decline of fishing is shown by the figures he kept for the last three years that he cast his nets. In 1882 he took but 450, in 1883 only 200, and in 1884 just 72 shad were caught in his nets. The palmy days of 1845 were the best, and in one spring he cleared $500 from his sale of fish, and then did no better than his neighbors. Capt. Smith of Holyoke found an easy matter to take in 2500 fish during a season, and there were other fishermen all up and down the river who equalled this.

Distinguished names were given to the rights along the river, and in some cases these have stuck, while in others they have been forgotten. A half-century ago a man would have been ignorant indeed who could not have told at once the location of "Sucker point," "Spawn hole," "the Langton place" and "Red Gill," all of which were near the South-end bridge, or "Hardscrabble," "Double ditch," "Rock-rimmon," "Shad harbor," "Black point," and "the Allen place." They were as familiar to the citizens of those days as are the municipal group or the union station to the men of 1913.—Springfield Republican.

BLACK FOX RANCHES SOURCES OF WEALTH

Montreal, Nov. 12.—Robert Cotton of Charlottetown, P. E. I., and president of the recently formed Maritime Province division of the Canadian Press Association, when here, was asked about the black fox boom on the island, and made the following statement:

"The highest price ever paid in the world for silver black fox pelt at a fur sale was between $2500 and $300," said Mr. Cotton. That fox was bred in captivity in Prince Edward Island. And one small shipment of black fox pelts sent to the London sales from one island ranch netted its owner over $40,000. That was before the boom—before breeding stock was bought and sold; before the world had learned that two or three enterprising Prince Edward Islanders had successfully domesticated the exceptionally rare and highly prized silver black fox.

"I haven't," he said, "the statistics exactly at my finger ends. But the present stock of breeders—aged foxes—is valued at something over $6,000,000, and the Provincial Government has already collected taxes on last season's pups, valued for taxation purposes at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000."

"Most of the black foxes are now held by joint stock companies, proved breeders being capitalized at from $20,000 to $30,000 a pair, and most of the pups at from $10,000 to $15,000 the pair, though some range higher. Of the companies which have been in operation for over a year all, with the exception of several smaller ones, which owned only one or two pairs that this year had no offspring, have paid dividends this autumn ranging from 20 per cent. upward.

"One company which bought its breeders several years ago, and before prices reached their present level, this autumn distributed to its shareholders 500 per cent. in cash and in addition handed them a 500 per cent. stock bonus. One young lady of whom I know put a thousand dollars into foxes a couple of years ago and this amount netted $10,000 as representing her profits to date.

"Several of our fox ranches who ten years ago, if not as poor as church mice, at least were no better off than hundreds of their associate farmers, who had no access to capital, who made no lucky strikes in stocks, who have not employed more than one or two men as keepers, to-day are worth at least a million dollars, and there seems to be every promise that a number of others will have amassed quite as much when one or two more harvests have been gathered.

"And is this going to last?" "Well, there does not appear to be a doubt that fur-farming as an industry has come to stay. It is hardly to be expected that present values will always be maintained. The demand for high class breeding stock is now very great and Prince Edward Island more or less controls the market. (Bangor Daily News, Nov. 13, 1913.)

Dover has been made somewhat famous by its fox ranches which have made good money for their owners.

Mr. E. Norton of Dover is one of the pioneers in this business, but is not at the present time actively engaged in it.

Mr. Maurice F. Stevens of Dover has been profitably engaged in the black fox business for the past ten years, and is still largely interested in the industry, having large interests in ranches in Prince Edward Island as well as owning a profitable ranch here.

Mr. Stevens is a stockholder and director in the R. J. McNeill Black & Silver Fox Company of Prince Edward Island. Several other well known citizens of this state are officers and directors also. This company now have in its ranch six pairs of beautiful thoroughbred black foxes all of which are paid for. They have an option on four additional pairs, and the company is offering for public subscription a small amount of its capital stock to aid in paying for these four additional pairs. The stock is sold at $50.00 per share, and applications can be made to Mr. Stevens of Dover.

The company has just issued a most interesting booklet on Silver Black Foxes and Fur Farming. It will be sent FREE upon application to Mr. Maurice F. Stevens, Dover, Maine.

THE WONDERS OF A SALMON RUN.

The world's greatest salmon runs are to be found along the shores of the North Pacific ocean, in the States of Washington, Oregon and California, the Province of British Columbia, and Alaska, on the American side, and Siberia and Japan on the Asiatic side. So far, however, but few salmon have been canned on the Asiatic side.

To one who has never witnessed these annual runs it is almost an impression of the countless numbers of fish that swim in from the sea in the spring and summer, all imbued with the same desire—to gain suitable grounds in the upper reaches of the rivers, some of which are from fifteen hundred to two thousand five hundred miles in length, where they may perpetuate the species. No obstacle appears to be too great to be surrounded in this feverish rush. Jumping falls, shooting rapids, dodging nets, bears, birds, mink, otter, and other enemies, fighting with other males, whom the near approach of the breeding season renders especially savage—all these are taken as a matter of course. And yet one sometimes wonders if the heroic struggle is worthily repaid, for the moment of victory is also the moment of death, as, sad to relate these valiant voyagers can breed but once and then must die, their wasted bodies, which have received no nourishment since leaving salt water, becoming the prey of any prowling bear or carrion bird who may chance upon them. Why these fish should all die after spawning still remains one of the great unsolved mysteries of the scientific world.—From "The Salmon Fisheries of the Pacific" in the December Wide World Magazine.

TO TEST FISHING LAWS

Eight Japanese living in Hawaii have brought to the Supreme court a case to test the constitutionality of Hawaiian fishing laws prohibiting the catching of certain fish with seines.

The Japanese claim that Congress reserved to itself the right to regulate the taking of sea fish within the territorial government is without power to make regulations.

The Hawaiian Supreme court held that the real government could act until Congress acted.

MR. CAMP OWNER

It is rumored over the state that no hunters are coming to Maine this fall on account of the new license law. Do you believe this? Do you believe that true sportsmen who love to place a good gun on their shoulders can find such a variety of hunting in any other state in the Union? We do not believe they can, and we also believe that Maine will have a good big bunch of hunters this fall.

IT IS NOW TIME TO ADVERTISE

for them, and Maine Woods offers publicity that is more valuable, to Maine camp owners, than that of any other publication.

The Last Pipeful of Sickle Is as Fresh as the First

Because you slice Sickle off the plug as you use it, and all the original flavor and moisture are pressed into the plug and kept there by the natural leaf wrapper—so that every piece of Sickle Plug is bound to be fresh when it goes into your pipe. You are sure of a slow-burning, cool, sweet smoke always.

Ground-up tobacco keeps getting drier all the time—so dry that it clogs in the bottom of the package and has to be dug out. No wonder it burns fast, smokes hot and bites the tongue.

When you buy Sickle you get more tobacco—because you don't pay for a package—and you smoke all you get, because there's no tobacco spilled and wasted. Just try Sickle today—your dealer sells it.

HUNTERS LOSE THEIR DEER

Willard G. Kirk and Ferdinand Russell of Dexter were convicted of larceny in the Piscataquis municipal court at Bangor Thursday afternoon of last week and Judge Hiram Gerrish sentenced them to pay a fine of $10 in each case while the costs were equally divided. Kirk and Russell stole a deer belonging to Harry Cooley who was a member of a party of Dexter men hunting in Shirley. The deer was stolen last Sunday night a week.

When arraigned to answer to the charge, both Kirk and Russell entered pleas of not guilty. Cooley and other members of his party related to the court the circumstances leading up to the disappearance of Cooley's buck. It seems that Kirk and Russell had come to the camp occupied by the other Dexter men and had been taken in and entertained for a time, they being without a camping outfit. Sunday evening they left the camp at midnight and when the others arose in the morning the buck belonging to Cooley was missing. They suspected that Kirk and Russell had taken it and, therefore, had a warrant sworn out for their arrest. The arrest was made in Dexter Wednesday by Deputy Sheriff James B. Stevens of Guilford, who also secured the deer's hide containing the bullet holes.

Russell in his own defence denied having taken the deer, claiming that it belonged to Kirk and himself. He became rather twisted in his story when cross-examined by County Atty Hudson. Later a consultation was held and Kirk and Russell admitted to P. A. Hasty, Esq., of Dexter, who acted as their attorney, and to County Atty Hudson that they had taken Cooley's deer. They then retraced their pleas of not guilty and one of guilty was entered.

HUNTERS RETURN TO OLD TOW

Selden G. McPheters and Charles W. Goodale arrived in Old Town from their annual hunting trip to Sebobeis Bridge, with their game all right so far as deer were concerned, says the Commercial, but full of regrets that the only good bull moose they sighted on the trip got away with a bit of Mr. Goodale's lead in its body.

It was Mr. Goodale's ambition to secure a nice moose head to add to the collection of trophies that have fallen before his aim and his first plans included a trip to Hound lake, near the Canadian line. Deciding to change his location, he went to his old stamping ground about Sebobeis Bridge, 20 odd miles above Patten. There he ran across what he thought was his moose, but the bullet struck a bit high and spreading blood in every direction the animal dashed off into the forest, with the two hunters in hot pursuit.

Although they followed the wounded king of the forest for a long distance, the animal failed to show any weakness but gathered strength as it went farther on and after a while stopped bleeding altogether, so that they were forced to abandon the chase.

Mr. Goodale was Mr. McPheters' guest over night and left, with his deer, for his home in York village, Friday morning.

Mrs. Maud Mersey has cut another notch on the butt of the Greenfield rifle handled by the fair sex, having added her name to the list of lucky women in that town. She brought her deer in and hung it in the Mills market.

SUMMER SCHOOL AT WILTON

Blue Mountain Camps on the shore of Wilson lake, which were under the management of the late W. E. Bacheller and Mrs. Bacheller for several years and conducted as a public resort, have just been bought by a corporation of Wilton people. Hereafter, they will be operated in two parts, one as a summer school with a Kindergarten department; the other as a summer home for parents, who thus may accompany their children to the summer school. The officers and incorporators are: President, George E. Clark; clerk, C. H. Dascombe; treasurer, Irving G. McColt; George H. Bass, Willard S. Bass, John R. Bass, R. C. Fuller, Dr. W. J. Trefethen, Ernest P. Parlin and Cyrus N. Blanchard.

ARE TWO HALVES EQUAL TO A WHOLE—DEER?

If two men shoot half a deer a piece, is either entitled to kill another of the animals? This question is puzzling Massachusetts hunters as a result of a ruling of the State Fish and Game Commissioners.

Eleazar L. Dupine, of Worcester reporter to the commissioners that he wounded a deer, trailed it for a long distance and was within a few feet of the animal when another hunter fired and killed the deer. Each hunter claimed sole ownership of the venison. To settle the dispute they referred the matter to the commissioners, who replied that the only law applicable was the unwritten law of the woods, that the game should be divided between the two.

Under the law a man may kill only one deer during the open season and Dupine and the other hunter are trying to find out which, if either, may legally bring the score up to one and a half.

WON'T BE ANXIOUS TO EVADE THE LAW.

Game Commissioner Neal states that the shipment of game through the other inspection points throughout the state are fully up to those of past years. He thinks that the decrease in Bangor inspection station may be due partially to the use of automobiles and other local causes. As this seems to be the only station which is easily accessible to the woods by that means the reason seems a plausible one. It also may be that a good many deer that used to come through this station may be now that new railroads have been built are going through other inspection stations.

A foreigner the other day thought he could put one over on the game department. He claimed to live in the state and to own a house and some other real estate. He was told that under those circumstances he would not be obliged to take out a license. He went into the woods and with other game secured two deer. He was all too incautious enough in the woods to brag of the way he got ahead of the game commissioners. The story came to the attention of the department at Augusta and was investigated and the results were that as the story was found true, he was obliged to pay a fine of $50. Next time he goes hunting he will not be so anxious to evade the payment of a hunter's license.

CHESTNUT DISEASE INVADES MAINE.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The chestnut bark disease has forced its way into Maine, according to reports to the Department of Agriculture. The disease was discovered at two points—Temple and Auburn—the farthest north that the disease has been found in this country, except one isolated chestnut orchard in British Columbia.

The department announced today that the discovery should cause little alarm, as there is not much chestnut timber in Maine.

was rescued only when another hunter killed the animal.

After following the animal for several hours Rider got a shot at the buck and missed. The deer was in an open space, and charged. Rider did not dare run, and stood for the buck, which rushed head down at him.

To keep from being gored, Rider seized the enraged animal by the antlers, and the deer's head in rising threw the hunter astride the back. Locking his feet under the stomach of the buck, Rider held on to the antlers.

The buck plunged into the forest, and as Rider could not let go his hold he was carried, as near as he could estimate, about nine miles. The infuriated animal tried to throw the unwelcome rider, and brushed against trees and rocks. Rider's clothes were torn to shreds, but he held fast.

Peter B. Markle, an old hunter, saw the deer coming with Rider and he fired a heavy ball through the animal's fore shoulder. The buck fell, and Rider landed in the branches of a spruce tree. He was badly bruised.

The buck was old and savage, had four prongs on the antlers and weighed more than 200 pounds.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

Two victims of accidental shooting are at the Webber Hospital at Biddeford for treatment. Robert Fecteau, aged 17, the son of Peter Fecteau of the Pool road, while gunning in the lower part of the city near Westbrook, accidentally discharged the shotgun he carried and was wounded in his left hand and side. Shortly after the accident Rev. Charles Pittman, pastor of the Foss street Methodist church and Scout Thomas Richards of the Foss street Boy Scouts, came along in a carriage and took the boy to the hospital. He will recover unless there are unforeseen developments. Miss Georgia Boucher, aged 20, was out in the woods off West street with a party of friends. They were shooting at a mark when a partridge flew up and one of the young men became excited and fired at the bird. The shot lodged in the leg of Miss Boucher. She was taken to the hospital, where she will be obliged to remain several days. The wound is not dangerous.

NILE CONTAINS GREATEST VARIETY OF FISH.

It is probable that the Nile contains a greater variety of fish than any other river in the world. An expedition sent by the British Museum brought back 2000.

HUNTERS AND HUNTING

The large coon recently shot by Edward Bellen, has been purchased by "Billy" Farr, and is to occupy a prominent position on the Thanksgiving menu at the Hallowell House.

Benjamin Sweet of South Paris rejoices in his luck but at the same time wonders what charm he holds to attract the bull moose. The Lewiston Journal says that Ben has gone into the woods hunting for the past three years and each time has got his moose. Possibly Ben wears a Roosevelt button.

and Mrs. Oscar Hersey on Thanksgiving day.

OUR TWO MINUTE SERMON

By Rev. M. S. Hutchins.

This sermon, and others to follow, will not occupy over two minutes of your time in reading. Although miniature in size they will be real sermons. They will be based on timely topics of the day.

THANKING GOD FOR HIMSELF

It always helps us to be thankful for the common gifts of life. It is especially appropriate that at Thanksgiving we attempt to enumerate the many blessings we enjoy. But we ought to remember that after all the greatest gift for which we can be thankful is God Himself and His Fatherly love and care. The Sunday School Times well says:

"There is one blessing which is never taken away from those who want it. It is worthier of our thanksgiving than all other blessings combined. And the more we give thanks for it, the more we shall see in it to give thanks for.
This blessing is God himself. Have we learned the joy of thanking God for himself? Have we practised this form of thanksgiving daily?"

To pour out our thanksgiving to God for what he is has a remarkable result. It means that in the very act of such thanksgiving we receive more of him to be thankful for. It is as though, when we thanked a friend for a generous gift of money, with every word of our thanks that friend poured money into our hands. The outgoing of our praise to God means the incoming of God. Let us take time apart on this Thanksgiving Day, alone with God, to praise him and thank him for what he is. A half-hour spent thus with him, with perhaps the book of Psalms open before us, can make the day memorable in God's own life; for the praise of his children rejoices God's heart. Shall we not make it a day of thanksgiving in heaven because of our thanksgiving on earth?"

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Jones Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Emery and daughter Martha spent the Sabbath at W. H. S. Rickland's.

Chas. Gatchell and Alle Cleveland are threshing the grain here with their gasoline machine.

Wm. Buchey of North Anson accompanied by a friend were in town Sunday.

Several from this place attended the box supper and school entertainment at the North Saturday night.

Scott Knowles is making some repairs on his house.

Ernest Luce's horse got hooked quite badly Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Luce have returned home from Eustis where they have been employed in sporting camps the past five months.

Miss Marion Luce is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tenny Luce.

Dwight Boynton who is attending school at Pittsfield is spending two weeks' vacation with his mother, Mrs. Flora Boynton.

Mrs. Sarah Parsons visited her brother Mr. Oscar Butts at New Portland last week.

Hastings Hoyt goes to Muskeget Friday next where he will be employed for the winter in a garage.

Mr. and Mrs. Russel Nutting spent Saturday night and Sunday at Kingfield the guests of Mr. and Mrs.
Frank Tufts.

Fred McKeeney passed through the place Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hoyt entertained a party of 12 Saturday evening. Games of sixty-three were played. A treat of candy, popcorn and apples were passed and a pleasant evening spent by those present.
The next gathering will be with

Mr. and Mrs. Russel Nutting next Saturday evening.

Luther Quint visited his daughter Mrs. Louise Jones a few days the past week.

Mrs. Beulah Walker began the winter term of school Tuesday last, having had two weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Williams will hold their wedding reception Tuesday evening of this week at the home of the bride's parents,
Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge Williamson.

Fred Cole has been in town on business the past few days.

EAST MADRID

Nov. 24.

The Oberton League met as adjourned with Mrs. J. H. Welts last Thursday. Two new members joined, Mrs. George Barnum and Mrs. George Gould. The next meeting will be in two weeks with Mrs.
Cora Wheeler.

James McKeene of Biddeford was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Solon Mecham.

Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas.
Peary, cut his knee quite badly
last week.

Mrs. Dana Durrill of Rangeley visited her brother, M. G. Bubier
last week.

H. W. Worthley saw a flying squirrel one day recently. The writer would inquire if any of the readers see any of the odd little animals.

W. H. Bubier is building over his chimneys. Emery Moores is doing the work.

The old theory that snow turns the rabbits white certainly is not true this year. The writer shot three one day recently and they were as white as snow.

NERVOUS AND SICK HEADACHES.

Torpid liver, constipated bowels and disordered stomach are the causes of these headaches. Take Dr. King's New Life Pills, you will be surprised how quickly you will get relief. They stimulate the different organs to do their work properly. No better regulator for liver and bowels. Take 25c and invest in a box today. At all druggists or by mail, H. E. Bucklen & Co., Philadelphia and St. Louis.

EUSTIS

Nov. 24.

It has been nearly as warm as summer for the past few days, but is much colder at this writing.

George Ricker and Warren Dyer have returned home from Eustis where they have been guiding two men from Philadelphia. Dr. Yoder got two doe deer. George Ricker guided him and Willis Willett got two buck deer. Warren Dyer was the guide. They also carried some birds home with them.

Miss Georgia Smart spent Saturday and Sunday at Stratton with Miss Olive Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. George Douglass are going to Jim pond Monday, November 24, to cook for Tom Tague.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Norton of Farmington are stopping at J. P. Sylvester's for a few days. Mr. Norton has recently put a piano in George Ricker's home.

George Hennings' children are all better of tonsillitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Dyer and child visited at Charles Ricker's in Flagstaff Saturday, November 22.

SERVICES HELDThe Harvest Supper of the Ladies' Aid a Successful Affair--Grange Observes Ceres Night.

(Special to Maine Woods.)

Rangeley, Nov. 24.

Mr. Cross, who is connected with Salvation Army work at Portland, was in town the past week soliciting funds for the army work. During his stay in town he stopped at Mrs. Clara Rector's.

H. O. Huntoon was in Strong Thursday on business.

H. A. Furbish and E. I. Herrick have returned from their recent trip to Lewiston and Boston.

The Misses Mabel and Hannah Pease and Miss Beatrice Jones entertained the lady teachers Friday evening. Refreshments of cake, cocoa, candy and apples were served and a fine time was the verdict of those present.

Frank Stewart, who has been at Birch Point for the past few weeks, returned home Saturday night.

Merritt Gould while at work for Austin Hinkley had the misfortune to saw his wrist quite badly. Dr. F. B. Colby dressed the wound and it is now healing as well as can be expected.

Harry Nelson has moved his family into the lower part of the Sabra Guild house and Mr. and Mrs. Guild will occupy the upper part.

Cecil Bennett, who has been visiting relatives and friends, has returned to his home. He was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. George Toothaker, who will remain with her parents this winter. Mr. Toothaker will work in the woods.

Mrs. Ada Duffeney of Portland is the guest of her father, F. H. Philbrick.

Chicken pox has been quite prevalent in the schools but nearly all are back at work again.

Mrs. Lyman Kempton returned last Wednesday from an extended visit with relatives and friends in Boston and vicinity.

Mrs. Bedford Corey and daughter of Upton, Me., arrived Saturday night to join Mr. Corey who has employment at Long pond as scaler. Mrs. Corey will teach at Greenvale the coming term and will board with Mrs. Eileen Lowell.

Mr. and Mrs. James Mathieson were guests of Mrs. F. B. Burns Thursday.

Rev. H. A. Childs made a trip to Dixfield the past week returning Friday. He reports the walking as fine, circumstances being such that he walked a good part of the way.

Dr. Colby was called to Whitewood Friday night to attend a man by the name of McDougal who had broken his leg. McDougal was at work on the yard when a log rolled on him which caused the injury. The injured man was brought to Rangeley Saturday morning and after the limb was set started for Lewiston to enter the hospital.

At the church yesterday Thanksgiving services were held. In the morning Rev. H. A. Childs used as his subject "Rich Robes, Rags and Responsibilities." Special music was furnished by a quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Rowe, Miss Muriel Hoar and H. O. Huntoon with Mrs. Childs at the organ. A specially prepared order of service was used for the congregational reading. In the evening a symposium on the Immigrant was presented.

Mrs. Phil Tibbetts and little daughter have returned from a visit with relatives at Oquossoc.

Mrs. Etta Dill has been entertaining Miss Cornelia Crosby the past week.

Friday evening Wm. Tomlinson was called upon to go to Haines Landing to settle a little difficulty caused by too joyous a celebration. Officer Tomlinson accompanied by Herbert Spiller experienced a little difficulty in procuring a vehicle which could make the trip but finally succeeded. The two principals in the quarrel they found considerably bruised but no arrests were made.

The Harvest Supper Friday night proved to be one of the most successful in its history. Much praise is due the ladies who had it in charge; Mrs. H. A. Furbish, Mrs. E. B. Herrick, Mrs. Wm. Tibbetts, Mrs. Alvah Sprague, Mrs. Chas. Cushman, Mrs. H. B. McCord. The menu included corned beef, potatoes, cabbage, turnips, beets, carrots, onions, apple and pumpkin pies, baked Indian pudding, sugar and molasses doughnuts, tea, coffee, apples. After the supper a sociable was enjoyed. Over $20 were cleared which was very gratifying.

Saturday night was observed as Ceres Night. An interesting program was enjoyed which included a discussion on the subject "Raising corn in Maine. Charlie Berry, Wm. Tomlinson, Thayer Ellis and Ray Smith were among the speakers. A reading, also two papers, "How to cook corn. At the roll call each lady responded with a quotation from Longfellow, each man responded to his name with a current event. Refreshments of pop corn, corn balls, peanut sandwiches and cookies were enjoyed.

According to custom the schools will enjoy the Friday following Thanksgiving also as a holiday.

Miss Elizabeth Oakes was given a post card shower last Wednesday by 26 of her school friends in honor of her 11th birthday.

Leo Tyler is the guest of his mother, Mrs. Everett Hoar at Spotted Mountain for the Thanksgiving recess.

L. D. Nile made a business trip to Farmington Monday.

Ansel Soule is having city water put in.

Thursday being Thanksgiving the Pythian Sisters will not hold their regular meeting until the following Thursday, December 4.

At the Odd Fellows' meeting Friday night work was done at the close of which supper was served.

HIGH LICENSE NOT LIKED A LITTLE BIT

To the Editor of Maine Woods:

Wakefield, Mass., Nov. 17.

Someone has said, "If you must get mad, get mad gracefully." A great many sportsmen around here are gently mad over the high priced hunter's license in Maine. My eldest son took the money he usually spends in the fall in Maine, and with his wife and a few friends from Saco, went by auto through the White Mountains. He is only one of many who will not pay $25.00 for a hunter's license.

An acquaintance of mine once said, "I am glad of the high fee as, in my opinion, it will keep a lot of cheap sportsmen out of Maine and make it better hunting for the rest of us."

Not long afterward he wanted to go to New Brunswick for moose, but when he learned that the license fee had been fixed at $50.00 he raved and ranted about legislation for rich men only. The boat was then on the other leg. It makes a difference whose ore is good, doesn't it? In short the high license fee is regretted on all sides, and gives rise to the suspicion that other than economic reasons are at the bottom of recent legislation, touching sports and sportsmen in Maine.

For one, I would like to see a reasonable fee for all alike, resident and non-resident, both for fishing and for hunting.

STANLEY TESTS NEW KEROSENE BURNER.

F. E. Stanley of Newton, Mass., who was in Lewiston and Auburn this week with one of his Stanley cars, was given an opportunity on the trip from Newton to Auburn to test the efficiency of the new kerosene burner which is likely to become a fixture of the Stanley. Hitherto, no inquiry as to the efficiency of the burner could be entertained by the Stanley Motor Co., and indeed at the present time it is not considered a fixture or a certainty. Kerosene burners are in use on the Stanley cars in the several centres where their car is handled, such as Chicago, Denver, New York, Philadelphia, etc., and in all cases it is successful and not one person owning it has signified a wish to go back to the burning of gasoline. However, Mr. Stanley considers it still in process of perfection, with confidence in the outcome. His record of the run from Boston to Auburn and return is remarkable, showing a large reduction in cost, through an increased mileage per gallon of kerosene over gasoline. There is no odor and no caking or obstruction of the burner. Everything points to a complete success, which means practically a revolution in the style of burner, and an enormous saving in cost of fuel.—Lewiston Journal.

AUBURN PANTHER MAY HAVE DIED AT CARRABASSET.

G. W. Alexander of Sabattus recently shot a large bobcat at Carrabasset, which is near Kingfield, says the Lewiston Sun. The animal was brought down Tuesday and placed in the hands of E. J. Boucher, Main street, Auburn, to mount whole. The animal will be on display in about three weeks.

Mr. Boucher said last night that the animal which is 56 inches long and weighs 40 pounds, is an unusually large specimen. It is beautifully colored and when mounted will be a valuable trophy.

It will be remembered that when the Auburn panther was about, Joe Dignard, of Sabattus like Mr. Alexander, went out to hunt it. Mr. Dignard failed to get the creature but claimed that when he, Dignard, quit the trail, the animal was going in the direction of Kingfield.

Another noted hunter, "Gramp" Morse, took exception to Joe Dignard's theory and said that as it was coming winter the natural tendency of the animal would be to go south.

Whoever of these theories was correct, Joe should now be satisfied that this animal which was recently shot is of the same variety of tiger as the one seen last year. In support of the latter claim, Mr. Dignard's estimate of the size of the Auburn animal is recalled. He said that the panther was about five feet long, and now if this animal is found to measure just 56 inches, the discrepancy is so slight as to be of no value.

WEST MILLS.

Nov. 25.

The weather continues beautiful with just a little flit of snow.

Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Bigelow went to Frammingham, Mass., Monday to spend Thanksgiving with his mother.

Elbridge Rand, who was operated on for appendicitis at the Central Maine General hospital, is gaining we are glad to hear.

Mrs. Hattie Leeman Rand, who accompanied her husband, Elbridge Rand to Lewiston, passed a few days there and called on Mrs. L. A. Wentworth.

Mr. Warren Fish and Mr. Devio of Worcester, Mass., went hunting up river and shot three deer which they sent on to Massachusetts.

There will be a grand Thanksgiving at the Johnson homestead with many relatives invited.

Mrs. Kate J. Chapman will pass Thanksgiving with her mother at Madam. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bearor are coming to West Mills to pass Thanksgiving with the Chapmans.

There will be a grand masquerade ball at the Grange hall, Wednesday evening the 26th. Town's orchestra will furnish the music. Also a good chicken supper will be served.

DANCES FOR THE PARENTS

Hurdy-Gurdies With Old Peasant Tunes Cause Delight in New York's East Side.

Not long ago a picturesque experiment was made by a number of men and women who are interested in the welfare of the lower east side. As folk dancing has proved so popular with the children of the foreign residents of the city, as shown by the eagerness with which they have taken up the dancing lessons given in the public schools, the interested men and women decided that their parents might also be pleased with the opportunity of joining in some of the peasant dances with which they were familiar in their youth in the fatherland. With this idea in mind, a number of hurdy-gurdy players were persuaded to put into their machines records of the old native dance tunes to which the residents of the east side had been accustomed to dance at home.

Of course the records had first to be made, but this was done and a number of the hurdy-gurdies equipped in this manner were started on a triumphant career.

And were they successful? Well, it wasn't a question as to that. With the first sound of the well known strains the men, women and children of the east side came tripping out of their houses mad with delight and breaking into their native steps the minute they reached the sidewalk.

"It was the greatest success in the world," declared one of the promoters of the project. "The only trouble was that it was too successful. They blocked the streets and the sidewalks and impeded traffic so that the policemen had difficulty in getting things started again. It was perfectly idyllic in theory, but, after all, Grand street isn't a village green and it didn't really do—it wasn't possible.

PENOBSCOT'S SALMON KING BELIEVES FISH CAN THINK

Can fish reason? Decatur Bridges of Verona says they do. They also have the power to convey information to one another, he believes, says the Bangor Commercial.

Mr. Bridges, who is known the length of the river as the salmon king of the Penobscot, is not a new comer to the business. He is 58 years of age and for the past 40 years has been engaged in weir fishing on the Penobscot. He has caught and handled more salmon and alewives than any other man to-day engaged in fishing between Fort Point and Bangor. From the first day that he went to work around a weir he has made a study of the fish and their habits. But it is not this study which leads him to the conclusion stated above. He reaches that opinion largely from his profound belief in a supreme ruler of the universe.

"I can't help feeling," says he, "that the same power which gave to fish the sense which guides them back year after year, to the same waters, also supplied them with an ability to realize where they were misused and to impart their information and knowledge to each other. If I am right, then, when they find they are not being treated in a manner satisfactory to them, they cease visiting that particular locality and go elsewhere. That is what I believe has taken place on the Penobscot. I don't think that the salmon like the way in which they have been treated on this river and have gone elsewhere; that is why our catch has fallen off in recent years."

The question of the falling off in the catch is not a debatable one. On that point none can dispute the Verona fisherman. All records show it. Neither is the catch in point of numbers of fish taken or in combined weight, to-day, as it was 35 years ago. This establishes Mr. Bridges' contention that the business has declined though his solution of the problem may be debatable.

It is the firm conviction of Mr. Bridges that artificial propagation of fish, so far as it applies to sea salmon, is a failure. He contends that the fishing interests of the river have not received a single benefit from the constant stocking of its waters with salmon from the East Orland or Craig's brook hatchery. In his judgment scarcely a one of the small fish which are annually placed in the waters of the river in the vicinity of Norecross ever reach the sea. It is his opinion that they furnish food for bigger fish, eels, perch, pickerel and bass.

The mistreatment of the salmon to which Mr. Bridges refers is the taking in weirs and sending female fish to the hatchery to be stripped of their eggs. This, he holds, is contrary to nature and is resented by the fish.

"When the fish are replaced in the river," says Mr. Bridges, "they are angry at the treatment received. On their way back to the sea I feel sure they meet other salmon. To them they tell what has occurred to them and the schools turn and go to other waters. It does not seem to me that there is any other way to account for the decline in the salmon catch on this river.

"If there wasn't something of this sort would they not have recaptured some of the fish which have been sent to the hatchery? So far as I can find out, there has never been one of these fish taken a second time in the weirs of the river. This seems very conclusive that once a salmon has been taken to the hatchery and used, as they are used there, it will not come back to the Penobscot water."

"I'm not scientific, but am talking from experience and observation—practical knowledge. I don't question the sincerity of those who believe in the hatchery method. My idea is that they are mistaken."

"When they first began to take salmon around Verona island for the hatchery they began in May. For a number of years now, there hasn't been a May run of fish which they wanted. They have had to get their fish in the June run. This is another reason why I feel sure that the taking of fish for the hatchery has been an injury rather than a benefit to the fishery."

Alewife King, Too

Not only is Decatur Bridges the salmon king of the Penobscot, but he is the alewife king. He operates four large weirs on the east shore of Verona Island, and buys the fish from 60 others. He has a fleet of power boats which visit all these weirs daily, collecting the catch of alewives and take them to his place on the east shore, where in two smoke houses, having a combined capacity of 100,000 fish, they are prepared for market. Each year he smokes from 150,000 to 200,000 alewives in these houses. These are shipped to Bangor and Belfast jobbers from where they are distributed throughout the country.

It takes from two to seven days to properly smoke an alewife, says he. It sometimes occurs that fish will be placed in a smoke house of a morning and 48 hours later removed and sent to market. This is exceptional, rather than usual.

The fuel used in smoking the alewives is hard wood and sawdust. A hard wood fire is built and covered with sawdust for the purpose of producing a smoke. Contrary to the general understanding it is not the smoke which smokes the fish, declares Mr. Bridges. Smoked alewives are not really smoked; they are cooked. It is the heat which causes them to turn to the splendid brown color which gains for them the name "smoked alewives." This heat cooks them. The smoke, or smudge, caused by the sawdust imparts a flavor to the fish.

When Mr. Bridges first began alewife smoking, 40 years ago, the usual output of a year was from 400,000 to 500,000 smoked fish. These times it is about 150,000 to 200,000. Each year, in addition to those which are cured in the smoke house, he at his plants pickles from 5000 to 1,000 alewives.

It is a peculiar thing that the price for which the smoked alewives are sold by the smokers is substantially the same as it was when Mr. Bridges first started in the business, $1.25 a hundred. It varies, of course, from year to year, but that is the average price, as it was 40 years ago.

War Hurt Business

The first year he was in the business Mr. Bridges got over a million alewives. A large number of these were salted, or pickled. These were put up for the Haytian market, which is the big market for this fish. He paid 50 cents a hundred for the fish. About the time he was ready to sell his year's product a revolution started in Hayti. This knocked the bottom from beneath the market. The price of pickled alewives went down to 40 cents a hundred. At that price Mr. Bridges sold to Capt. Tom Nicholson of Bucksport.

The Captain held the fish in his ware houses until the revolution was over, when the price again rose and he sold at a big advance over what Mr. Bridges originally paid for the fish.

The largest catch of alewives in a single weir on Penobscot waters which ever came under Mr. Bridges' attention was made a year ago at one of his trips. On a single tide that weir got 5,000 fish.

The first year that salmon were taken at the Verona weirs for the Orland Hatchery, Mr. Bridges states, Avery Whittemore got 50 of the big fish in one tide from two weirs at the southern end of the island. This was about 35 years ago. The same year Uriah Heath got 25 salmon from two weirs in a single tide. These are the largest catches which he has ever known around the Penobscot.

Each day, Mr. Bridges makes a trip around the weirs to secure their alewives and salmon. The alewives he buys outright. The salmon he takes to Bangor and sells them upon commission. He receives so much per pound for doing this work. It saves the fishermen the bother of taking their catch to market and assures them of receiving the highest possible price for their fish.

While the price of salmon in the market during the early days of the season frequently reaches $1.25 and sometimes $1.50 per pound, the salmon king says that the average price which the fishermen receive for their salmon throughout the season is 25 cents.

Last year the salmon taken in the Penobscot weirs below Bucksport were all small, very few fish being secured. This year the catch has been the reverse. It has been all large fish, with scarcely a little one taken. Asked how he accounted for it, Mr. Bridges answered, "I dunno."

THIS BEAR GOT AWAY

Horace Jennings of Industry had a shot at one of the bears which have been infesting that town, but although he wounded the animal severely the bear escaped and a careful and continued hunt has failed to locate it. Jennings was out hunting one day last week and was armed with a repeating rifle. While between the farms of Ruel Wat on and Elmer Robbins, he caught sight of the bear and opened fire. The bear at once began to run and Jennings kept shooting at the fleeing animal, firing five shots in all at the brute. The bear headed up Boardman mountain and made its escape, but Jennings found some hair and hide where at least one of the bullets had taken effect.

HAS NOTHING ON STATE OF MAINE YARNS.

The Boston Post admits that a young man from the "up-woods" section of Maine has a "little something on" even the crowd of youngsters always to be found sitting around T wharf. Says the Post:

Captain Jack Sullivan had just stated that he thought the fellow who "pulled" the story about catching a fish with a diamond in it ought to be shot dead at moon rise. "There never was a yarn that came from the interior, or fresh water fishermen yet that sounded sane," said Captain Jack.

It was at this juncture that the countrified young man from Maine had his say. The gathering of old salts listened to the fish yarn from Maine. It was as follows: "You fish story tellers at T wharf are a lot of pikers. Up in the Dead River region in Maine we do not have to lie to make people believe the queer things fish will do. Every day in the week some very unusual thing happens up there. If it happened down here at T wharf you think you are fishermen would go on the stage to lecture about fishology or some other fishing subject. Last Wednesday I went fishing for trout. I have lived near the brook all my life, and believe me every fish that swims there has got a line on me and knows I know how to fish and keeps away from me. I have not been able to catch a fish for four years unless I put a mask over my face or fish at night so that they cannot see me. Last week when I went I wore a veil so that the pesky old trout would not recognize me when they looked out onto the banks of the stream. I had just heaved my line over when this happened. A few minutes after I had put my line out I saw three big trout come along and look up at where I was standing. I kept my eye on them, and what do you suppose happened? One of the critters swam over to the side of the brook and, using his nose, rolled a head of cabbage that had been thrown overboard, over toward the hook on my line. I looked and saw these fish work like Trojans to push my hook against the old cabbage head until it caught it up tight. Yanking in my line there was the big head of cabbage hanging on it. If this is not the work of brainy fish then I am, and not you, in the pikers' class."

NOT ANOTHER STATE TO COMPARE WITH IT.

The following item was clipped from the Kennebec Journal several weeks ago, and it is only one instance of where we hear the praises of our state sung by out of town visitors:

"An annual visitor to Maine—or rather a semi-annual visitor, for he both hunts and fishes in this state to the exclusion of all other greatly lauded happy sporting grounds—called at the K. J. office, yesterday, to tell us what he thought of this little corner of the Union. Incidentally, he renewed his subscription, declaring the Journal reached him quicker and with more real news and readable matter than he could secure in any other way. "The only trouble with you New Englanders," he averred frankly, "is that you don't know how to boost your wonderful advantages over the rest of the world. I had to find 'em out for myself—and I've been coming ever since. This year I'm so bubbling over with admiration that I've got to cut loose. I've tackled every region possible in eight years and I want to declare unequivocally that I haven't yet found the smallest spot that didn't have it all over any other section I know—and I've traveled some in the past four decades. It's great. It's immense. It's grand. All of that and then some. You could honestly take the most laudatory booklets put out by your leading camp and hotel owners and railroad officials; appropriate their most flowery phrases, and apply them to any of our forests or waters. You couldn't make it any too strong. There isn't another state in our two score and a half that can compare for woods or lakes and streams, or for hunting and fishing—or looking. For the love of Pete, get busy and tell people about it." Jimminy, but we hated to have him go. Spring weather like this gives us the same kind of a feeling, only more so. What did we do with that rod and reel last August, anyway?"

VICTIM OF OWN BEAR TRAP

Caught in his own bear trap while on a shooting trip in the mountains near Embudo, N. Y., Henry Severson, aged 65, formerly of Denver, Col., for several days fought a futile fight against death by starvation and thirst or being killed by wild animals.

News of the finding of his body, torn into shreds by the claws of mountain lions and wildcats, has just been received in Denver by friends. His identification is made complete by papers found in a pocket of his coat.

Mr. Severson was wealthy and had many friends in Denver, especially among the mining men and the earlier settlers. He was an eccentric character, living more the life of a hermit than any man here. About 18 months ago, unable to withstand the call of the wild, he went into the hills from Embudo, and often returned to that point for supplies. The last seen of him was on one of his trips to Embudo more than two months ago.

A few days ago a party of sportsmen stumbled across the body of a man in the woods, stripped of the flesh to the bones. Closer inspection showed that his two arms were caught in a bear trap and that he had been unable to extricate himself.

The ground immediately surrounding the spot where the body was found tells a pitiful story. While it is felt certain that he carried some food in his clothing which he was unable to reach with the tips of the fingers, the persons who discovered the body believe that he was forced to eat the bait he had brought along for the traps.

Shrubbery for several feet around the trap had been gnawed almost to the ground and there were indications that Mr. Severson attempted to chew the bark from a nearby tree which he was able to reach only after a desperate struggle in moving the trap and the heavy chain.

CHRONICLES OF THE WILLIAM TELL CLUB

Their Hunting Grounds Are in the Moosehead Region.

That's about all there is to the 1913 trip of the William Tell Club. The club that has made Moosehead famous. They went; and the wetness dampened the contiguous country. Brooks bubbled and rivers rose. Even Moosehead lifted its back eleven inches. Snow came and tinkled down through the silent trees and buried the leaves. Winter reigned and rained. Far as eye could see in all the land over which William Tell roamed in 1913 were low-banked gray clouds that leaked unceasingly. The only mistake the club made in 1913 was in not taking a plumber with them. To be sure, they had Walter Plummer of Lisbon Falls, but he wasn't the right kind. They needed a cloud plumber and an umbrella factory. Even the moose and deer, as indicated in our illustrations were likely customers.

For instance, a cow-moose came up to the door of the camp one rainy night; knocked, and in as clear a manner as is possible for a cow-moose to express herself, put up a pathetic appeal for an umbrella and a pair of rubber boots for her calf trotting by her side. Since Joe Knowles went in to the woods and began to catch buck deer by the hind legs you may expect our wily game to do these things. The club had no rubber boots or umbrellas to give away to our protected game. The very best it could do was to give her a salt codfish to keep her dry and a bear skin to keep her warm—the bear having been caught by the hind-leg the previous day by President Wilson of the club and skinned by him with a sharp stone and a piece of Portland cement. And it kept on raining.

The William Tell Club left Lewiston at 8:15 Friday morning, Oct. 24th. By reason of various augmentations of distinguished members from Augusta and elsewhere, together with guides and helpers, its members swelled from 15 at starting to 36 persons who toiled and sweated under their packs along the rough road from Sid Youngs' wagon on the shores of Spencer Bay to the "Knoll in the wildwoods" whereon sit the lovely camps of William Tell. The personnel of this club is too well known to readers of the Lewiston Journal to require repeating. We doubt if there is a reader who cannot picture the procession "sploshing" along the devious pathway of the blazed trail in the deep woods at the close of this sombre autumn day. It is led by the Board of Directors of the Manufacturers National Bank of Lewiston. Its centre is loosely constructed of Byron Boyd, Wilbur Emerson of Augusta, Harry B. Austin of Phillips and Henry McCusker of Wap-pingers Falls. The rear section is made up of charter members of the club, formed in a hollow square around President Wilson and Treasurer Hodgson, carrying the club-funds. The club flag is borne aloft in this section by Constable Lowell, assisted by Dr. E. H. White and George R. Hall of Lewiston. The flankers thereto were a couple of dead-shots Billy Hill of Portland and George M. Parks of Providence, assisted by H. M. Sewall of Bath, armed with his deadly 28 gauge double-barrelled chipmunk gun. The third section was made up of the band, which included D. S. Waite of Lewiston, carrying a Victrola, and Billy Fiske of Providence with a flute. In the rear was the board of medical examiners, Dr. Journeay of Boston, Dr. J. W. Scannell and Dr. R. N. Randall of Lewiston, carrying medicine cases. It was almost an inspiration to see this procession wend its way around the stately trees and to note the agility with which the Board of Bank Directors leaped the brooks; the compactness with which the charter-members maintained the integrity of their hollow-square; the dignity with which the Constable and his posse held aloft the colors of the club; the bravery with which the flankers protected the line from onslaughts of savage beast and the alert watchfulness of the medical profession in the rear and it need not be said that it was a comfort to hear high above the soughing of the winds and patter of the rain, the brave and splendid music of the band ringing through the forest aisles. That night it rained.

It rained Saturday and Sunday. Friday night, the storm simply howled around our cabin home—keeping the club-members awake. Saturday night was also very stormy and so was Monday night—the occasion of the annual meeting. Some persons hunt deer in rain storms—some do not. Probably the most persistent and tireless hunters were Boyd, Emerson, Austin, Sewall and Waite. They came in every night at dusk loaded with wet deer.

The rest of us for the most part, lay about in camp, reading Schopenhauer, listening to the rain on the roof and watching the deer go by the windows. As Joe Knowles says, we saw white deer come up to our spring and drink from it. We saw not only two bull moose fighting in deadly conflict but we saw a well-conducted moose-tournament, in which there were eight separate battles and a finish fight between the final champions. We also saw a large trout come up from the pool and bite a moose in the throat until the moose died. We made birch-bark drawings of those scenes. Hence these three days of enforced rest were not without their compensation in the way of sight seeing. Some of the members played old sledge, some played the graphophone. Nights and days were full of music flavored with the smoke of the wood-fires and the Orinoco. Men who hadn't rested for twelve months curled up in bed and with fearless disregard of all insurance-regulations lighted their pipes and went to sleep smoking 'em. We now have a library of 13 volumes. They are the kind of books you can read over and over without damage to your morals or rebuke to your literary taste. Every little while you wake up long enough to eat. One can hardly conceive of a greater luxury to a tired man than going hunting with William Tell, when it rains.

Among the treasures carried into camp in 1913, was an American flag, reinforced by the patient stitching of one of the wives of the club. Its edges were heavily bound and every seam strengthened. This flag was to be raised on top of Spencer mountain to stand there perchance, until another year should roll around.

Monday was fairly clear. By 9 o'clock the low-lying clouds that had obscured the peak had rolled away and there were patches of sunlight occasionally upon its battlements. At about this hour two canoes set out for the foot of the mountain. The mountain-climbers started the ascent about 1 o'clock and though accounts of the ascent are scant because those who climbed the peak had no breath left to talk for about three days, there is proof that they reached there some time in the early afternoon and raised the flag. That it was a fearful climb goes without saying; for the clouds surrounded them again and again, and the tumbling cataracts and loosened soil impeded their footsteps. One or two of them were nearly overcome by the toil and the altitude. To cap their discomfort, the clouds surrounded them when they reached the top and the wind blew so that they could hardly keep a footing on the crest, the winds swirling the clouds in their faces. They cut a big spruce for a flag pole and wired the flag to it. They then planted it in a deep cairn of stone, six feet high. Then there being nothing to look at but clouds and nothing to do but return, they fired a salute with their rifles.

To their surprise and in proof of the oft-assertion that explosives clear the air, the clouds lifted in an instant and they had for about three minutes, a full view of the panorama of lake and mountain from this height—one of the greatest in Maine. They could see Chesuncook and Lobster and Lucky and all the distant ponds and peaks. For a breathless interval it was like a dream then the clouds formed again and the show was over—nothing left but to toil home again.

The flag stood that night and the next day and if we remember aright the next morning after that it was still there. That night came a hurricane of snow and rain and the next day when the top cleared the flag was down. Discussion arose as to the height of Spencer Mountain. It has been said often around the campfires of William Tell that the mountain he was matched to meet a certain that overshadows it and which the members all love so well is the highest, save Katahdin, in Maine. We have been appealed to discover if possible, the truth. We regret to say that this is not so. On the authority of the Maine State Topographical Survey, there are seven mountains in Maine with an elevation of 3000 or over. These are as follows: Katahdin situated in Township 3 Range 9 W. E. L. S. 5237 ft; Saddleback Mt. in Madrid 4000 ft; Mt. Bigelow in Bigelow 3600 ft; Mt. Abraham, Township 4 Range 1, B. K. P. W. K. R., 3388 ft; Mt. Blue in Avon 3200 ft, Spencer Mt. Middlesex canal grant, 3135 ft; East Royce Mt., Bachelders Grant, 3125; Mt. Kineo's elevation is 1956. Spencer Mt. is however much more inaccessible than such civilized declivities as Mts. Blue and Bigelow for it is through a forest and over a trail that is inconceivably wild, torrential and precipitous. It is not to be taken lightly in a spirit of sport as witnessed the recumbent forms of the mountaineers for two days subsequent.

That day we went duck hunting. As the canoes came gaily across the pond bearing the mountain climbers we could hear their voices afar off, commenting on the trivial nature of our sport.

For decoys we had six wooden ducks—one minus a head—and three live drakes of the barnyard variety. In our party were Bill Hill and Dr. Journeay besides yours truly. Both of the above-named gentlemen are experienced sportsmen and dead shots. I am not. I had never before seen a barn-yard duck disposed of as a lure to the wild bird of the ponds and lakes. It was gray dawn 7 a. m. when we set forth, intent on murder. Our domestic fowl had not been dry for a week. One of them had either gout or rheumatism. We paddled softly across the silent bosom of the pond disturbing the flocks of sheldrake as we moved.

It rained later. The three barn-yard ducks got wetter and wetter as they swam about in the icy water. You could almost hear their joints creak as they swam. Finally one of them began to show signs of drowning. It seemed as though the water had leaked into his insides.

In the meantime, every now and then flights of birds came into the decoys. It's an exhilarating sport. Afar off you see them circling. "Here they come," whispers the man on the out-look. You drop behind the blind until you hear the beating-whirr of swift wings. Then up and at 'em. "Bang! Bang! Bang!" You miss 'em.

Up pops Billy Hill with his Remington automatic shot gun, three puffs of white feathers floating on the air and then down out of the sky come hurtling to the lake one bird, two birds, three birds and away the flock! the dead birds floating to the shore.

And our "barnyards!" One of them seemed sound asleep, bill in the water. The others seemed to be sinking lower and lower in the lake. We pulled them out. One of them keeled over dead—drowned! Two of them we resuscitated and they now dwell with Mrs. Mose Duty on the shore of the pond. I say We—with a desire to be inclusive. It is not a thing to be accomplished in one lesson—shooting duck, on the wing, travelling ninety miles a second, against a strong wind on a cold and rainy day, you shooting from behind a thicket.

That day a very remarkable thing happened. I think it was about 1 p. m. The barnyard drakes were coming to life in the end of the boat. All was still when suddenly—the sun came out and shone for over six minutes. That night it snowed three inches and the pond froze over.

Tuesday, after the annual meeting had been concluded by the re-election of the entire board of officers, including Constable Lowell, chief of the Fire Commissioners and Police, Byron Boyd left camp accompanied by Harry Austin and one or two other members. Thursday another party left camp for home. Friday, President Wilson and Horace Munroe were called out by the sag and untimely death of their business associate in Auburn, Dr. W. J. Pennell. The departure of President Wilson was unfortunate for the club night out was admirable. Ara Cushman of the club in a wrestling-match on the top of Spencer Mt. as soon as it cleared. President Wilson doubtless escaped a crushing defeat, a thing to be desired, though the Wm. Tell Club unanimously regretted the occasion of his departure, in the death of so true a sportsman as Dr. Pennell. It would have been a calamity in one sense of the word to have seen President Wilson defeated in his match. Had such a thing happened, it might, however, have been properly ascribed to his serious error in choice of a trainer. It is impossible in these days to oppose speed by mere strength.

At the end of the week some twelve or fourteen sportsmen and six or eight guides were still in camp. Mr. Parks had gone to Providence. Mr. Sewall, Mr. Estes, Mr. Googin, Mr. Waite, Dr. Scannell and others had gone home, according to their original plans to go out Thursday. Billy Hill was called home by telegram Friday.

Saturday was a bright day. The deep woods were full of snow. Above the winds blew a terrific gale. It is said that the sea was never higher on Moosehead Lake than it was on that day. Dr. White and I went hunting. We saw trees full before the wind and could hear the distant roar overhead like that of an express train. Down on the floor of the woods, however, all is still. Winds do not reach here any more than they reach the deeps of the ocean. Indeed, the analogy goes farther than this. Down here below the turmoil of the tossing tree tops it is silent save the monotone of the pine and spruce or the occasional creek of a tree crotched against a half-fallen neighbor. You feel buoyant, submerged, mystic. The lights are in semitones. There is no exhilaration to surpass walking in the deep forests on a day of high winds. The soft snow is no inconvenience save in sitting, when it is not at all desirable. We tramped all day, seeing no deer. Fat brown rabbits hopped across our pathway and went their way. There were signs of deer all around. We built a fire at noon and sat about it warmth and dined frugally. The walk home—which took four hours—was all too short. Sunset—the sun did set that day—came golden through the pillared woods. The snow was of pink and smoked gold. We walked in silence. If we stopped to rest there were no words. It was like speaking in church. I constantly thought of the pillared gothic aisles of Milan's incomparable cathedral. With regret we neared home. The lights twinkled from the camps down the road. We stopped and said: "It's worth while! This day alone pays for the trip. It isn't the deer you shoot; it's the deer you don't shoot that makes these trips with William Tell unforgettable."

The efforts of Chief Cuddy, maitre d'hotel and then some for the camp of Wm. Tell should be sung in verse. He is a perfect wonder. His kitchen was like a hotel, yielding new wonders every meal. Today it was homely camp fare deliciously cooked. tomorrow it was some marvel of cookery fit for the Ritz-Carleton. One evening—to commemorate the birthday of the dearest beloved member of the club, he brought into the camp living room a decorated dish that has been photographed. Its construction was pyramidal—the base two feet in diameter and the top two feet high. Along the terraces, reposed twenty-six fat young squab, browned deliciously and imbedded in a bower of flowers, cut from beets, carrots and other vegetables, the whole garnished with the service of edibles that accompany squab.

The supplies that accompany the Wm. Tell club includes all that the market affords. It eats no venison in camp. Nearly every member secures one deer. The club carries in sides of beef, lamb and mutton; crates of oysters, celery, oranges, grapefruit, etc.

Finally, and this is what we wish to make emphatic, it enjoys the incomparable delicacy of perfect bread made from William Tell flour. No other flour will ever do for this club.

Doc Randall of Lewiston was a new guest of the club this year. He is a "recitationist." His reading of Edward Peple's story of the Persian cat's man of Auburn was also a new guest—a good hunter and good campmate.

Billy Fiske's extemporaneous tale of Joe Laflamme's experiences in the woods a la Joe Knowles should be put on by Keith.

In the evening of the annual meeting remarkable feats of legerdemain were given by Billy Hill and hypnotic stunts by one of the leading members of the club who hypnotized a subject and like Faust made him young again.

George M. Parks killed his quota of deer first. Dr. Randall, Dr. White and George Hill got good sized bucks.

Saturday was observed in camp very religiously. Game Warden Brown made his annual visit into camp this day and stayed over night. He is always welcome. He remarked that if he saw anyone shoot game on Sunday he should arrest him. Such is the law.

One night we were surprised to see standing by the path leading to the camp a young man drenched to the skin and seemingly completely exhausted. He was given welcome; a change of clothing; a supper; bed, hospitality; breakfast; dinner when his friends came. He proved to be a prominent young New Jersey sportsman well known to some of the members, especially to Mr. Cadmus. He had been hunting from the Buckingham camp.

Members of William Tell are to a man opposed to the $25 license fee for non-residents and in favor of a nominal fee for resident hunters. This subject was a constantly recurring topic in camp. William Tell is a representative club—the largest and oldest active hunting club in Maine. It observes the laws; takes the smallest average per cent. of game out of the woods of any company of hunters—never reaching a deer apiece, spends annually upward of $1500 on its trip; has the good will of guides and other hunters and represents a considerable amount of influence and friendliness to Maine and her welfare. The summary of its conclusions for 1913 are an increased number of deer and a smaller number of moose.

The club broke camp Friday, Nov. 7th. The writer and Mr. Plummer of Lisbon Falls left camp Monday, Nov. 3d. It was a very chilly morning. Our plans were to come out in Mose Duty's motor boat. Mose, his wife and his dog were to be our traveling companions. Our start was to be at 7 a. m. The little boat was anchored off shore. She refused to start. Ice had gathered in her intake. We waited in the zero weather until 9. The train left Kineo at 9:20—last train for the day. Let us draw a veil over the trip. It was 5:20 p. m. when we reached Kineo station and the day had been passed in waiting on the shore at Spencer Narrows camps; unloading grain and hay; eating cold grub in the lee of a camp; toting heavy bags long distances and giving up an extra case-note for a last lap by another motor boat across the bay.

That night we stayed at Hotel Rockwood and Tuesday, after 36 hours on the road, we reached home in Auburn—the trip of 1913 over.

It was the best—because the last is ever the best save that which is yet to be.—A. G. S. in Lewiston Journal.

HUNTERS AND HUNTING

Henry Lane, a well known hunter, trapper and guide of Eliotville plantation, had on exhibition in Monson, Wednesday night a bob cat, which he caught in a fox trap. The animal weighed 25 pounds and was in fine shape.

Forty-five deer were received at the Bangor Union station, Thursday, making the total receipts 1,317. This is slightly less than the receipts at this time last year. Deer are coming down at an average of about 50 a day at present, which shows a falling off compared with the first of the week, when over 100 a day came down.

ful good nature of a child. He cut the ministerial allowance for the late emperor's funeral 25 per cent. because he did not believe in display when there was poverty and distress in his land, and arranged to defray a part of the cost from his own palace fund.

It is related that he does not take very kindly to the oriental idea of being ever surrounded by bowing, humble courtiers and attendants, and that when on a drive from the palace through the streets of Tokyo he was so annoyed to see that the royal cavalcade was fenced by a saluting crowd and that traffic was entirely blocked that he ordered that in the future his drive should be along the less crowded streets.

When verging on manhood he went hunting and shot a deer. The cries of other deer, which he believed to be the children of the one he had killed, sickened him, and in his grief he wrote a poem regretting his act and has since declined to hunt.

He is democratic and is even said to have stolen away from the palace disguised as a workman and associated with his fellow toilers on terms of absolute equality.

DOESN'T ROOT FOR MISCHIEF

Hog Is Looking for Alkali Found in Soil to Aid in Digestion—Tankage is Excellent.

A great many think a hog roots just for mischief. That is not the case. The animal roots for alkali, which it finds in the soil and which aids him in digestion. Nature helps him out in this way when man is foolish enough to neglect him.

In the amount of carbonaceous feed that we feed the hogs there is too little phosphate for them.

Anything that we throw to the pigs, whether lime, bones or oysted shells, seem to be greatly relished and seems to be a great help to them in digesting their other feed and promoting their general health.

Tankage is an excellent feed to prevent the sows and pigs from having an apparent craving for uncommon feeds like bones, old leather and also killing chickens.

It also aids them in getting more nutriment out of their other feed by keeping them in a healthy condition.

BIG POTATO CROP IN TEXAS

one part of the field where the soil was in high condition 266 bushels were obtained. Still American farmers ought to do better than that. German growers produce 350 to 400 bushels per acre.

Hereford as Beef Breed. The Hereford derives its name from its native district in England.

The most popular color and markings are dark claret or cherry, white face, throat, chest, legs, belly and small strip of white on neck and before the shoulders. The horns are medium to long, white and generally turning outward.

This breed represents the type that is suitable for the largest production of beef as it is low set and broad, heavy in forequarters; full, deep chest, level, wide back, wide thick loin and quarters. The form represents that which is associated with a strong constitution, vigor and prepotency, and one of the strong points of the breed is their grazing attributes. The Hereford probably has no superior on the range. The cows of this breed give only milk enough to raise a very thrifty calf.

SEED SELECTED EARLY

Farmer May Be Reasonably Sure of Corn Stand Next Year.

Consideration of Strength and Character of Corn Stalk, Height of Ear From Ground and Size of Shank Should Be Noted.

(By C. P. BULL.)

One of the main reasons why seed corn should be selected early is to be reasonably sure it will grow the following year when planted. Early selected seed corn is the corn that usually gives the best stand. Without a good stand it is impossible to get a maximum yield, and it costs no more to raise a field of corn with a perfect stand than it does to raise a field with a 60 to 70 per cent. stand.

Every good kernel of seed corn has in it a live, though very small, corn plant. This plant is tender and easily injured, unless kept under favorable conditions. Seed corn that is not thoroughly dry before cold weather, will in the northern climates, freeze, which will cause the kernel to expand, thus injuring the germ or little plant, lowering its vitality and often destroying it, so the kernel will not germinate.

Few farmers save enough seed corn. One bushel of shelled corn will plant from seven to eight acres. One hundred to one hundred and twenty selected ears will make a bushel of shelled corn. At this rate it will take from twelve to fifteen ears to plant one acre. It should be remembered, however, that the first selection is not always perfect; and oftentimes upon second selection and germination test, half of the first selection will be thrown out. Thus it is seen that there should always be selected in the fall at least twice as much seed as the farmer expects to plant. There is little danger of getting too much seed corn. Any surplus, if the seed is good, can usually be sold at a fair price.

In case one has no "special seed plot" in which his best and earliest maturing ears were planted, it is then necessary that his seed be selected from the field. The most practical method to do this is to go through the field with a sack tied across one's shoulder and select the choicest and best matured ears. Two rows of corn may easily be examined at once. During the process of selection, consideration of the strength and character of the stalk, the height of the ear from the ground, and the size of the shank, should be noted.

A stalk does not necessarily have to be large to be a big producer. A tall spindling plant lodges very easily. The stalk should be of good size and strong at the base, gradually tapering, and not necessarily tall. Strong, vigorous stalks of medium height, usually produce the best and earliest matured ears. The ear should be attached to the stalk by a medium-sized shank, which is long enough to allow the tip of the ear to hang down.

All ears in a cornfield will not mature at the same time. A variation of fifteen days in maturing of ears in a field is not uncommon. One of the reasons why a good selection of corn cannot be made from the shock or from the field late in the fall, is that one is unable to tell the time the ear matured.

Profit in Bees.

The expense of keeping a few colonies of bees is but little. They pay a good profit on the money outlay. Bees may be kept in most any neighborhood, as they gather their food by the wayside, often flying several miles for their daily food.

LOCAL NOTES

Mr. Augustus Vining has been in for a week or two past.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Heisey gave a little musical at their home last Saturday evening to the following friends: Hon. J. Blane Morrison and Mrs. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Horeybeck, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Knapp, Mr. and Mrs. George Parker, Mr. W. M. Payson, Miss Estelle Barker. Miss Cora Wheeler assisted Mrs. Heisey in serving refreshments.

As we go to press this (Wednesday) we learn that Mrs. Clementina Tooker is very low. Mrs. Jennie M. McLean is caring for her.

Mrs. E. B. Carrier, Mrs. F. S. Hall and Miss Algie Pratt were the committee for the Thanksgiving work. They met Tuesday evening to make the boxes for distribution.

J. C. Tirrell had a few cans of fish from the Oquossoc hatchery distributed in Harvey pond.

A CONSUMPTIVE COUGH.

A cough that bothers you continually is one of the danger signals which warns of consumption. Dr. King's New Discovery stops the cough, loosens the chest, banish fever and let you sleep peacefully. The first dose checks the symptoms and gives prompt relief. Mrs. A. F. Mertz, of Glen Ellyn, Iowa, writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery cured a stubborn cough after six weeks' doctoring failed to help." Try it, as it will do the same for you. Best medicine for coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles. Money back if it fails. Price 50c and $1.00. All druggists, by mail. H. E. FLY ROD'S NOTE BOOK

By Fly Rod

Rangeley, Nov. 20—There is snow in the air this morning and a thin coat of ice is over Haley pond which promises skating for the young folks by Thanksgiving if cold weather comes but as yet there are not many signs of winter days and not snow enough to track the deer here at the Rangeleys.

I met All Sprague this morning and when I asked him "what about hunting," his answer was, "Have not been after a deer yet, waiting for colder weather, but I tell you one thing, Fly Rod, I never knew such good bird hunting as we have had this fall. Just now I am busy housekeeping, going hunting later."

Harry Pickford of Pickford camps was in town this morning and told me "after the best summer's business I have ever had, a crew of workmen have been rushing work for six weeks, building a new pier 75 feet out into the lake then extending it out the same distance below forming a bay, where the motor boats can anchor and no matter how

Worms Make Children Peevish

Some symptoms of worms are: De-ranged stomach, swollen upper lip, sour tongue, offensive breath, hard and full belly, with occasional gripings and pains about the navel, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose, itching of the rectum, short, dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red spots sticking out on tongue, starting during Trade Mark sleep, slow fever.

If you have the least suspicion that your child is troubled with stomach worms or pinworms, don't hesitate—get a bottle of Dr. True's Elixir. This remedy has been on the market since my father discovered it over 60 years ago. Put your child on the way to good health by using Dr. True's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller. Good for adults also. At all dealers', 35c, 50c and $1. Advice free.

hard the wind blows they are safe and out of rough water. Then I have put up that large place for the guests to sit on the wharf, a real summer house.

The new winter camp is now completed and I am living there. The new gravel walks all about the place are finished and soon after Thanksgiving I am going to New York for the holidays," and as the most of the attractive and comfortable camps at Pickford's on the lake shore are already engaged for the season of 1914 next year will find the place as popular as ever.

All the guides who trap in winter are setting their traps and John Ross has already caught four foxes and one of them he has alive that someone can have for their fox farm. He has also got four skunks and a coon and trapping has not commenced yet.

Way up on the side of Spotted Mountain several years ago H. H. Chandler of Boston built a cozy little camp in the woods and with Frank C. Porter for guide, cook and company, Mr. Chandler is now as happy as a king spending a number of weeks in the forest and no doubt will have a pair of big deer to take home later.

with his family came here this summer, was so much pleased with this region he has recently purchased of the late Abel S. Proctor estate Hillside and Spruce camps. These are on the lake shore below Gilman cottage and have a long shore line.

Mr. Allen is expected in a few days and Harry Quimby, who has charge of the place told me many improvements would be made this fall. A large new wharf will first be built and with Harry Quimby, Frank Stewart, Wallace Ham, Bert Herrick and other workmen the work will be rushed as far as possible before winter.

It is very pleasing to the Rangeley people to have Mr. Allen and family make this their summer home and all wish them many happy summers on the shore of Rangeley lake.

Up on the shore of Kemankeag pond Harry Quimby has a fine little camp and there he and Mrs. Quimby have been for several weeks. They entertained Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Garland of Westley Hills, Mass., for ten days in October. Alex Blanchard was also guide. Dr. Garland was very proud of the big 8-point buck he shot and partridges, all they wanted to eat and the limit 10 birds, to take home with him.

Miss Ruth Hamlin from Mountain View was their guest for several days and the big buck at which she fired four times is still in the forest.

Messrs. Chas. H. Hubbard of Boston and friends, Mr. Rogers of Beverly, Mass., who with Harry Quimby and Frank Porter spent two weeks in camp on Little Kenne-bago had one of the best hunting

MORE BOTTLES SOLD EACH YEAR
It is easy to understand why an increasing number of bottles of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is sold yearly. Thos. Verran, 286 Edward Street, Houghton, Mich., gives an excellent reason when he writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has always proven an effective remedy, quickly relieving tickling in the throat, and stopping the cough with no bad effects."

trips they ever enjoyed in the Maine woods. They had four deer, one buck and three does and the limit of partridges to take home with them, "were fine birds sure."

As usual Mr. Hubbard plans to be among the early fishermen at Rangeley another season.

"Forestholme" on Kennebago lake, the elegant summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Atwood of Stonington, Conn., was closed Wednesday of this week, Mr. Atwood returning home this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert A. Furbish who have been in their employ for the season are in town to-day en route for Malden, Mass., where they are to spend the winter.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Atwood hope to see the flag unfurled at their camp and welcome them back early next season.

The hunting accidents have not been as many as some falls thus far but Wedne day afternoon there came near being a serious one at Kennebago. George Robinson of East Sumner, one of the section men who works on the end of the line near Kennebago, with his younger brother was out with his rifle after a deer, when they saw a big buck running in the woods and both men started after him and fired, George was about 45 feet away and the bullet from his brother's rifle glanced and hit him in the right arm below the elbow and came out near the wrist making a bad flesh wound. The men who were near Little Kennebago walked to the station and from there telephoned Dr. Colby at Rangeley, who with his automobile reached Oquossoc nearly as soon as the men on the hand car and the wound was dressed. Mr. Robinson the next morning returned to his home in East Sumner to remain until able to again attend to his work.

This is a quiet village, no hotel is open this winter and the fur travelers have to find a lodging in the homes of the citizens.

A crew of workmen are still busy over to the Rangeley Lake House, making improvements. Mr. and Mrs. John B. Marble and family are to spend the winter in Boston. Mr. and Mrs. William Marble and family have taken a furnished house at Dixfield for the winter.

Mrs. F. B. Burns and little sons of Mooselookmeguntic House are now at their home here in the village.

I expect soon to go down to the Mountain View and Bald Mountain Camps and from there will try and find interesting notes for the readers of Maine woods.

ROTATE OR FAILURE, WHICH?

Weeds and Insects, Too Numerous to Mention, All Accumulate Under the One-Crop System.

The accumulation of noxious weeds, diseases, and insects on the farm is one of the most serious sources of loss. This results as a rule from the constant growth or too long continued culture of the same crop or class of crops on the same land. Wilt in various crops, bacterial diseases, grain rusts, and weeds and insects too numerous to mention all accumulate in the soil under the one-crop system.

These pests often multiply to such an extent that ultimately it becomes impossible to secure profitable returns from land thus infested. Resistant varieties must then be secured or crops cultivated on land not subject to these pests. All these troubles can be avoided and the fertility of the

DON'T DOPE A PUNY CHILD

Parents—don't give that puffy, ailing, under-weight child any of those so-called "tonics" containing alcohol or dangerous drugs; such stuff won't give relief and health to grown people, let alone children. Its purpose is to stimulate for a short time after each dose, just as whiskey or morphine does, thus making you believe it is doing real good.

Give that child something that will really build it up—replenish the wasted tissues—feed the stunted, dwarfed, puny muscles—make it lively, strong, well—full of the animal spirits children are meant by nature to have. Give it REXALL Olive Oil Emulsion

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is wholesome, nourishing, free from alcohol and dangerous drugs. It's the ideal nerve, blood and body builder. It does the work it is planned to do better than any other medicine we know of, and our faith in it is so great that we not only urge you to use it and give it to your children—but we guarantee that it will do all we say it will, or cost you nothing.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion should be given to children who catch cold easily. Begin right now, and use it to build up the child's system to such strong health that it can resist colds, croup, grippe, bronchitis, catarrh, pneumonia, and other cold weather diseases. You who are weak and run down, and you who are well now, but are liable to suffer from various cold weather ailments, use Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion to get and keep well and strong. For the tired-out, run down, nervous, emaciated or debilitated—the convalescing—growing children—aged people—it is a sensible aid to renewed strength, better spirits, glowing health.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion—king of the celebrated Rexall Remedies—is for freedom from sickness of you and your family. You'll be as enthusiastic about it as we are when you have noted its pleasant taste, its strengthening, invigorating, building-up, disease-preventing effects. If it does not help you, your money will be given back to you without argument. Castor Oil is Tasteless now.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil, is Pure, Yet Without Taste or SMELL.

Now that castor oil is tasteless, a perfect laxative has arrived.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil, a new product of the Kellogg oil mills, is so absolutely without taste or smell that even the children do not object to it.

Good bye, drugs and pills. Castor Oil has come into its own again. Doctors have always recommended it.

The Kellogg way of making it does not take a single bit of good out of castor oil; rather it purifies the oil and makes it more effective.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil does even better work than the old-fashioned kind. Sold at all drug stores in 25c and 50c bottles, not in bulk. Ask for it by name or you may be given the old kind, mixed or flavored.

The signature, Kellogg's, is on every bottle, in a green castor leaf trade mark.

Made only by Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., refiners of vegetable oils.

OH! YOU HAVE SUCH BEAUTIFUL HAIR!

What a pleasant thing to have said to you! And why shouldn't it be? You who envy others their lovely hair, and are ashamed of the dull, lifeless, stringy appearance of your own—use Harmony Hair Beautifier, and let others envy you.

This delightful liquid seems to polish and brighten the hair, giving it that burnished, lustrous look you have so often wished it might have, adding to its softness, making it easier to put up and "stay put"—making it more attractive and beautiful in every way. It overcomes the unpleasant, oily smell of your hair, leaving a dainty, rich rose perfume that will delight you and those around you. Very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing. Contains no oil; will not change the color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Can't harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of the more than 7,000 leading drug stores of the United States, Canada and Great Britain, which own the big Harmony laboratories in Boston, where the many celebrated Harmony Perfumes and Toilet Preparations are made. Read this Phillips case:

Henry W. True, tailor, Main St., Phillips, Me. says: "I never use any other kidney medicine but Doan's Kidney Pills. They answer my purpose. You may continue publishing my former endorsement of this remedy. I have procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Cragin's drug store (now Preble's Drug store) and they have never failed to give me relief from kidney disorders. I am only too willing to recommend them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The many friends of M. W. Harde who has been confined to his home for five weeks past, will be glad to know he is much improved, being able to sit up now. He enjoys having his friends call and a good number have been to see him during this illness.

F. N. Beal was in Kingfield on a business trip Monday. Mrs. Beal accompanied him.

F. G. MacKenzie has been able to have several auto rides the past week given him by his brother, who has recently purchased an auto. Dr. Higgins removed the cast from his leg last Friday and he will be able to be about on crutches for the present.

Mrs. Clementina Toothaker, who has been in very poor health for several months past, we are sorry to report is very ill this week. She has been with her daughter, Mrs. N. H. Harnden for some time past.

Mrs. Mary Field spent Saturday and Sunday with her brother, G. H. Hamlin and family in Avon.

Mrs. Charlie McLaughlin of Turme and little son Ronald are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred McLaughlin and other relatives.

Frank Haley is somewhat improved from his recent illness.

At our Grange meeting Saturday afternoon there were 60 members present. The candidates were unable to be present so there was plenty of time for the program which consisted of readings, songs, quotations, story, question—Resolved that women are more extravagant than men. Resolved—That the sisters work harder and longer hours than the brothers. Lively discussions followed. Date of next meeting, Saturday afternoon, December 13, three weeks between the meetings; also election of officers.

A MAKER OF HEALTH

A good honest medicine like Foley Kidney Pills gives health to many families. Mrs. O. Palmer, 385 Wilow St., Green Bay, Wis., was seriously ill with kidney and bladder trouble. Mr. Palmer writes: "My wife is rapidly recovering her health and strength due solely to the use of Foley Kidney Pills."

BACK TO SCHOOL.

The children are trudging the worn path, just as other children have done for generations. But the modern children should have watches. Twice a day they should be on time but they will waste time if they have to guess. One of the great lessons of life is to learn to spend time carefully. Give the child a watch—it will teach punctuality while the mind is still plastic.

Boys' watches, $1.00, $2.00 and $5.00.
Girls' watches $2.00 and up.
Good enough for grown-ups at that.
