STRATTON'S FUR FARM

Company Expect to Do Large Business a Little Later—One Pair of Black Ones.

(Special to Maine Woods.)

Stratton, May 11.—In the fall of 1913 some gentlemen in town decided to start a new industry, viz., a fox farm. The company consists of the following: A. B. Sargent, Oramandel Blanchard, Wm. Hanscom, H. H. Landers. The amount invested is $12,500. They have two acres of land at the present time, which is fenced in. They dug down into the ground and set the fence several feet into the ground and eight feet above the ground. It is fenced in for several pens.

At present they have only one pair of black foxes, young ones, that came from Pennsylvania. They seem perfectly contented as they were born in captivity. They lost two pairs of old ones last winter, or this early spring by their eating through the fence. Others will be added, as the company propose to make it a success if possible.

At one time last fall Mr. Hanscom had between 20 and 30 red foxes alive that were caught without injuring their legs. He kept them until their fur was prime.

GOOD REPUBLICAN MEETING

Nearly One Hundred Republicans at Tables.

Nearly one hundred Republicans sat at the bountifully laden tables at the Grange hall last night representing nearly all sections of Franklin county as guests of the Republican town committee of Phillips. The supper was served by the ladies of North Franklin Grange and it was the unanimous opinion of those present that it was one of the finest suppers of the kind ever furnished by these ladies whose fame as cooks and hostesses is State wide.

Excellent music was furnished by Dyer's orchestra throughout the evening and this feature added greatly to the pleasure of those present.

From far away Penobscot county came Colonel Frederick H. Parkhurst, Chairman of the Republican State Committee. From the great ship building community on the coast came Hon. Harold M. Sewall, the Republican candidate for Congress in this district, and from the neighboring county of Kennebec came the Governor of the State. Other guests were Hon. W. W. Norcross, C. F. Oliver, Fred Saunders, C. F. Hooper, Frank Bailey of New Sharon, Hon. Frank N. Blanchard and Hon. Geo. H. Bass of Wilton, Hon. W. L. Butler, and Wallace Fellows of Farmington, Philip H. Stubbs, esq., C. V. Starbird, Bradford Beal, William McKeene, Raymond Starbird, of Strong, Hon. Joel Wilbur, J. A. Norton, and others of Avon.

When the cigars had been lighted D. F. Field, esq., Chairman of the Republican Town Committee, who acted as toast master extended a greeting to the guests in a very happy and graceful way and introduced as the first speaker Hon. N. P. Noble of Phillips, who opened with an entertaining story of Robert Ingersoll, who was ever proud of his party and who in his usual pleasing manner set forth his reasons for being glad that he was still a Republican.

Hon. Geo. H. Bass, who is a candidate for Representative from the Wilton, Jay District was the next speaker. Mr. Bass said that he came to listen not to talk, that he came to Phillips as he knew that the Republicans of Phillips whenever they set out to do anything usually went about it right and furthermore accomplished it, so he came to get inspiration and we venture to say that he was not disappointed in his effort.

Rev. M. S. Hutchins of Phillips was the next speaker, who set forth his reasons for being a Republican very clearly and forcibly saying, that in the campaign two years ago the clergymen of this State were made to believe from the promises of those seeking new things in Government that the millennium was at hand but to-day they find that this condition has not come about in the Nation and they have asked in vain of the Progressive party for a platform upon which the ministers of Maine could stand. He closed with a ringing appeal not as a preacher but as a man and a citizen for support of those great questions to the settlement of which Gov. Haines has fallen heir and for the upholding of the Governor's hands in his great struggle for civic betterment and law enforcement.

Hon. W. W. Norcross of New Sharon candidate for Representative to the Legislature in this district made a short but witty and forcible little speech, introducing several

PHILLIPS HAS A NEW INDUSTRY

Largest Area in the World to be Devoted to Raising Fur Bearing Animals.

The Northwestern Fur Reservation, situated in West Phillips, is a new fur farming enterprise which promises to be one of the great fur conservation industries in the world.

The Northland Fur Company, or Reservation, as it is called, is a western concern with western capital and expert Northern animal breeders. They having purchased the William Calden farm of 235 acres possess the largest area to be devoted to raising fur bearing animals in the world. It is proposed that every species of fur bearing animals native to North America be raised and marketed on this farm,—black foxes, and all kinds of foxes, mink, skunk, beaver, otter, wildcat and bear—all of our fur folk are to be reared there by the latest scientific methods and equipment. The place is to be known as the Northland Park, Phillips, Me.

This company announces—in another column in this issue—that it is in the market for young breeding stock for which it pays liberally. Already animals assigned to them have begun to arrive at Phillips.

The company will be incorporated for $100,000. Fred M. Berry is the founder, A. B. Mill, general superintendent; Ray P. Beal, secretary and treasurer.

There will soon be quite a colony as several families will arrive later.

The company plan to build bungalows of peeled logs, shellaced. They will also have an electric light plant and the burglar alarms will also be run by electricity.

Mr. Berry informs us that he is meeting with cordial reception here and everyone seems to be trying to help along the good work. Phillips is certainly to be congratulated on being the selected location for the enterprise which bids fair to be one of importance and profit to the town as well as to the company.

Mr. and Mrs. Berry and little child were guests at F. N. Beal's on their arrival, and later at W. S. Hodges, but are now occupying the house on the Calden farm.

HEARINGS TO BE HELD

Increase on Bills Would Raise Pay Roll from $500,000 to $780,000.

At the last session of the Legislature over fifty bills for increase of salary were introduced. The first bill passed was returned by the Governor unsigned setting forth reasons why he was loth to approve of any particular bill when so many bills were pending, also expressing the opinion that the Legislature would be unable to cope with the matter of salaries and fees at one session, and thereby a bill in the House was taken from the table and passed in concurrence with the Senate appointing a special committee to act during the recess of the Legislature and give all parties a full and impartial hearing. This was in accordance with a Resolve introduced in the Senate by Wing of Franklin which had already received favorable

IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN STATE MUSEUM.

Curator Thomas A. James of the State museum is greatly pleased with the splendid improvements and additions being made in that department says the Bangor News. Much more interest than formerly has been shown in the museum recently by residents of various sections of Maine who have donated many articles in the shape of curios of fine specimens of the wild life of the Pine Tree State forests. This interest is by no means confined to objects of natural life or history, as was shown in the most recent addition to the museum. This is a relic of war times, a watch charm bearing on one side the likeness in miniature of Abraham Lincoln and on the other that of Andrew Johnson. The charm is a relic of the presidential campaign when Lincoln was candidate for president and Johnson for vice-president. The pictures are set in gold and ornamented by the insignia of the Union. The relic of that notable crisis in the country's history was presented to the museum by O. H. Small of Farmingdale. Curator James has just completed an exhibit which, although not of a rare nature, is of peculiar interest as illustrative of the typical bird life of the Maine lake regions. The exhibit is that of a family of loons in their native haunts. In the background is a beautiful painting on canvas of a lake and shore scene depicting of the wild regions chosen by these birds for home building. In the painting is also shown a first year fledgling loon, gray in color. In the foreground the mounted parent birds are surrounded by their young. A nest with eggs taken from the Dead River region increases the realism of the entire exhibit. In this particular work Curator James has followed the ideas now being carried out in the large museums of the country, in showing by family groups the life of the wild creatures. The painting was done by Curator James, himself, and is in reality a wonderfully realistic piece of work and a revelation to those who are not familiar with the Curator's ability as an artist. The complete exhibit will be encased in glass. Two calf caribou have just been added to the family group of this animal, an exhibit upon which Curator James has spent considerable time.

CROSS-BREEDING SALMON

Pacific cross-breeding of salmon has been accomplished by Dr. E. Victor Smith, assistant professor in the department of zoology in the University of Washington at Seattle. Hundreds of the new breed are developing from fry to fish at the state hatchery at Auburn. It is a cross between the king and silver salmon.

The experiments started last October. The king eggs treated with silver sperm developed fry that died in great numbers, many of them showing strange malformations. On the other hand, the silver eggs treated with king sperm developed a hardy breed having characteristics of both the original varieties. It is hoped that it will possess the canning qualities of the silver and the pink tint of the king; but this is matter which cannot be decided for months to come.

Dr. Smith will now turn his attention to cross-breeding the hump, dog and sockeye salmon with the king and silver varieties, and with one another. He lays stress at present upon the purely scientific results of his experiments but admits that they may have great economic value.

"Cross-breeding of fish has been tried before," said Dr. Smith. "European scientists a few years ago developed crosses between different species of trout. No general definite results have ever been published. It is possible that the great number of species of trout may be due to successive periods of cross-breeding. If so, I believe the experiments now under way will be successful."

At the request of the United States Fish Commissioner, and with his aid, Dr. Smith is making a study, in connection with the breeding experiments, of the food of salmon. "Before the Government can take any intelligent steps in the conservation and care of this great resource," he said, "it is imperative that we know the life history of the fish. We know a great deal about the salmon, but we haven't been able yet to trace its feeding habits when young."

"Salmon when young eat small crustaceans. We have found that these minute arthropods form the principal diet of young herring. The herring, which occur in great numbers in the Northern Pacific, eat up the food supply of the salmon. But then we have found that, a little later, the salmon eat the small herring. So it is to determine whether any useless fish in the sea eat the same feed as fish that are useful to us, and of great economic importance that these experiments are being conducted. The number of any kind of fish is determined largely by the food supply. If it is determined that useless fish are reducing the food supply of the salmon, it will next be in order to plan for its conservation or the killing of the invading fish."—Bangor Commercial.

KENNEBAGO LETTERS

A Chronicle of the Adventures of Two Young People in the Woods of Maine.

By H. V. Schieren

LETTER NO. 6.

From Thomas Caywood at Kennebago Lake, Maine, to Miss Dora Wood, Bar Harbor, Maine.

Kennebago Lake, Sept. 27, 19—

My dear Dora:—

Before Peter and I started on our trip north you asked me to write you a letter from the first outpost of civilization that we struck, and tell you all the thrilling things that happen to a true backwoodsman. I am now, therefore, going to satisfy your curiosity and keep my promise by relating how a wanderer (he being none other than your most humble servant) felt when he came, so to speak, back into the arms of the civilized world after having lived next to mother nature for quite a long spell.

As you no doubt remember, it was I who was scheduled to be the tenderfoot of our party of two, even before our route had been fully laid out or a single bit of camp equipment purchased. Peter, of course, was the logical leader of the expedition, partly I suppose on account of his greater age (which by the way is surely no fault of mine), and partly because of his advertised experience and knowledge of woods life in general, gained, let us say, by the Correspondence School route. Mind you I'm not trying to knock him; I simply want it understood that while I may have acquired all the knowledge of woodcraft that I possess, through experience gained on this trip, Peter has now stored up in his brain ready for instant reference, quite a bit more of learning as to the whys and wherefores of various things connected with a wilderness journey, than he had the day we pulled out of old Grand Discharge, Province of Quebec. It has certainly been a wonderful trip any way you look at it and I would not exchange the experience for anything else that I can think of, but if I were to try and tell you of all the adventures that befell us it would take more paper than there is in this out of the way corner of the world, and more ink than there is in the bottle I'm using.

What you were particularly interested in, I believe, was not so much to learn the details of happenings on the journey itself, as to hear from me my impressions when first we beheld a roof and a human face again. You'll be greatly disappointed when I tell you what my first impression was, because I know that you had a sneaking suspicion that little tenderfoot would lay down and weep for joy at the sight of comforts of home and somebody to wait on him; but the truth of the matter is he did no such thing at all, in fact he felt rather sorry than otherwise that the long projected trip was over. From the foregoing you will no doubt glean that I'm a somewhat changed man, and that is just the fact. I've heard the call of the wild and the savage in me has responded, so that now I really feel as though civilization, after all, is not by any means, everything, and my heart is full of pity for you poor boys and girls dressed up like young popinjays, when you could be here in nature's wonderland living as you were intended to live, instead of dancing your little toes off over at the Casino until the wee small hours of the morning.

Last night Peter and I thought of you all. We went over to a pond not far from here to take some flash-light pictures of deer. On the trip through Canada we did not get any wild game photographs, although Peter had all his apparatus with him. You see what we lacked was the energy, for when evening came we were always so dead tired, that the prospect of spending half the night out in a canoe did not appeal to us, and the only thing we wanted to do after sunset was crawl under the blankets. Here, of course, it is quite different, and living in this comfortable hotel just loafing all day, we are full of enthusiasm for night prowlings. Perhaps you'll be interested in hearing of our expedition of last night so I'll tell you about it.

It was about ten o'clock when we reached the pond and the moon was just setting. You know it must be totally dark to go flashing deer as they can see you pretty plain on a moonlight night. Talk about silence. It was so still that the scraping of a paddle on the side of the canoe as we slid her into the water, awoke the echoes and caused Peter to mention a place that is warmer than New York on a noon day in July. I was paddling, and had to be very careful as the slightest ripple from the blade passing through the water would have been fatal to our plans. We slipped silently out on the black water until we reached about the center of the pond and then we just lay still and waited. How the time did drag and what fearful noises the most trivial things made.

After a long interval when I was just beginning to think that it must be near morning Peter's repeater tingled out the hour. (Don't you think it funny for a man who prides himself on being a woodsman to carry a watch like that out in the wilderness?) It was just eleven o'clock and I imagined you and the rest, whirling around in the stuffy Casino, at that very minute, under the blazing lights. I wondered what you would have said if I had popped in among you dressed as I was in flannel shirt, old trousers and moccasins, and begged a dance from the prettiest girl in the room. Peter's thoughts were evidently running in the same channel for he whispered "eleven o'clock, Tom. Why the theatres are just letting out on old Broadway."

For at least another hour we did not speak a single word. Gradually it grew colder until I felt as if the blood in my veins must surely be frozen stiff. Then, all at once, we heard a splashing among the lily pads over on our right and I swung the canoe cautiously around and headed for the shore. In another minute Peter opened the light, but I could not see a thing at first on account of the white mist that hung over the water. As we drew nearer, however, I made out the outlines of a whooping big buck, standing motionless and looking dead at us, not fifty feet from the bow of the canoe. I gave one last twist to the paddle and as we shot forward, shut my eyes, for I felt sure that the flash was about due to go off. It did go, too, with a roar that sounded as if the end of the world had surely come. You never saw such a frightened animal as that deer was. He made off through the woods like an express train. Then he stopped and whistled and snorted with fright. I was tickled to think that everything had turned out so well. I asked Peter how he liked the way I had handled the canoe.

"Let's go home, Tom," he answered in a most dejected way, "we have spent about half the night here, and to tell you the truth, I was so sound asleep when that deer first came in that I guess I didn't fully wake up, because I set off the flash all right but forgot to pull the slide."

We did not exchange one word on the two mile tramp back here and poor Peter has not regained his spirits yet. I've never seen him so cut up about a thing in my life. If I was not afraid he'd murder me, I would tease him about it, but he has blood in his eye so I'm laying low.

We have met a couple of very interesting people up here, an old gentleman and his niece from Richmond, Virginia. Peter had a rather romantic experience with the young lady the day we got here. He rescued something that she dropped overboard and upon fishing it out of the water, it proved to be an engagement ring. For the gallant deed, and because he looked so very much like a pauper, with his ragged clothes and scrubby beard, she handed him a quarter.

That evening the old gentleman and the girl sat at our table and we were officially introduced. She was surprised to find in Peter her tramp friend of the afternoon. I've told him about the incident a lot, but he takes it all in good part, and really he and the lady have hit it off so wonderfully well together, that if it wasn't for the fact of her being engaged, I'd half believe that this little jaunt of ours might end in a romance for him.

It is awful to contemplate, but I will be forced to leave here day after to-morrow. Dad writes that he will need me at the office on Monday. Peter thinks he will stay for a little while yet as he does not expect anything very large to loom up in the city just now. Lucky beggar to be sure.

Now I'm going to close this long letter and hope that it has not bored you to death.

Say a little silent prayer for me when the awful grind begins on Monday, there's a nice girl.

Yours sincerely,
Tom.

LETTER NO. 7.

From Mrs. Joseph Raymond, Richmond, Va., to Miss Diana Morgan, Kennebago Lake, Maine.

The Oakes,

Richmond, Va.,

September 26, 19—

My dear Diana:—

That was indeed a nice long letter that I received from you by early post yesterday. Your glowing accounts of the wonderful wilderness country, in which you and your Uncle seem to be having such a glorious time, have interested us all greatly. I read your last letter to some of our old friends who came to call in the evening, and they all voted me a splendid correspondent, and your epistle a fine piece of descriptive writing.

We, here at home, have been passing a quiet but most enjoyable time. For the past few days, the weather has been very mild and balmy with wonderful sunshine all the time. Austin has been reading us a most fascinating book and the time has passed swiftly enough.

You are surely your Uncle's pet niece so far as your prowess at fishing goes, and from the brief letters that Jo sends me, I judge that he is indulging himself in his passion for angling to his heart's content. I have had to depend entirely on you, though, for real news, because his letters are full of terms half of which are as so much Greek to me. He writes reams about the merits of Royal Coachman as against Silver Doctor, (I think I have it correct) and seems to feel that he is getting an enormous amount of knowledge as to the habits of about all the kinds of fish there are in the world, I should say. I'm very anxious to have you tell me more about how he likes the wooden mittens which I knit for him. You said, at last accounts, that he had not worn them at all, which seems to me to be a mistake, as he suffers terribly from chapped hands when the weather gets at all cold and he certainly ought to use them. Tell Bob, please, to see that they are put in the boat whenever he goes out, then he will be sure to have them handy when needed.

I think that Silver misses you a

PITTSFIELD SPORTSMEN

Delight in Outdoor Life and Put Forth Efforts to Keep Fishing and Hunting Good.

Pittsfield has an organization, who was one of the pioneers of its kind in the state. It is the Pittsfield anglers' club, a sportsmen's organization given over to the promotion of good sport on land and in water in Berkshire county, although its efforts are confined more particularly to the territory within a five-mile radius of the city of Pittsfield. The benefit that this club has been to Berkshire county and to its own city is remarkable. The club members contend that it is of interest to the citizens to make fishing so good in Berkshire county that the railroads will put the fact in their advertising matter. They believe it a good thing for any community to keep its streams well stocked, for good fishing brings visitors and "an angler is generally a good spender to our midst." Only last season a single party of 30 men came to Pittsfield from Boston during the trout fishing season and whipped the streams of the country for nearly a week. They left considerable coin of the realm nestling in the pockets of the sporting goods man, the hotel keeper and proprietors of other places. So it can be seen that the Pittsfield anglers' club, while organized to make of Berkshire county a paradise for all kinds of sport, especially angling, has about it the features of business that tend to boost Pittsfield and Berkshire county.

Prior to its organization, it had been the custom for several years for a few individuals to get together and to make applications for trout fry and fingerlings which were planted in the streams about the county, but this method was irregular and meant an output of a score or more dollars each year, so the Pittsfield Anglers' club was organized for the purpose of reducing the individual cost and to care for the lakes as well as the streams in a systematic manner. The first meeting of the club was held about February 1, 1909, in Shipton hall in Pittsfield. Edward J. Spall was chosen president, H. B. Sees secretary, and Edson Bonney treasurer. These men and Lyndon Coleman, Robert Kent and Joseph Shearer were the prime movers in bringing about the club's organization, and with Clement R. St. James, the present president, have worked hard to bring about the things for which the club was organized. At the meeting besides these men there were about 25 others. The dues were fixed at $1 a year. Through efforts of the club members and the agitation brought about by its organization, close to 400 were enrolled the first year, but organization developed a great many fishermen and during the next two years the streams were whipped more strenuously than they had ever been in the past. While the club has not been able to maintain its original membership, it has been able to hold 100 to 150 members in good standing, which enables them to carry on the work for which the club was organized.

Few people realize what an interest there is in angling. If they were in position to know the number of questions that the club officers answer over the telephone, especially when the trout season opens, they would realize the vast interest taken and the great number of people who enjoy this sport. Since the first of April one of the officers estimates that he has answered not less than 100 telephone calls and advised people who wanted to know the best streams for fishing. Some streams are earlier than others, and a few anglers realize this, but only those in close touch with the local situation are so fortunately learned.

It has been the club's effort to stock every lake and stream within a radius of five miles of the city—sometimes farther—each year. The members are not sure, at present, whether it pays to stock the streams with trout fry. They are devoting more efforts to obtaining and stocking the lakes and streams with trout fingerlings, and in some instances matured fish. An example of the club's activities may be obtained from the following figures, showing the number of fish planted since its organization: Trout fry, 260,000; trout fingerlings, 67,000; pike perch fry, 250,000; black bass fry, 75,000; matured trout, 1 to 1½ pounds, 600; white perch, five to six inches in length, 1000; yellow perch fry, 600,000; black bass fingerlings, 300. The club has also liberated 102 Mongolian pheasants in covers about the county, and these birds have thrived and multiplied to several times the original number.

The question has been asked, "How many fish have been taken out of our lakes in a single season?" One member, well versed in the situation, says he feels safe in estimating that at least one ton of fish a month is taken out of Pontoosuc lake alone, on the average. If this was allowed to continue without restocking, it would be but a comparatively short time when the lakes about Pittsfield would be depleted. The Pittsfield club is very much interested in Congressman Allan T. Treadway's efforts to have a fish culture station located in Berkshire county, Pittsfield preferred. It is now interested in looking up a suitable place for locating such a station, that it may be able to recommend such a place, or places, if necessary, to the government in event that Mr. Treadway's efforts are successful.

When the state fish and game commissioners were in Pittsfield last month and spoke at the annual meeting of the club, Mr. Graham mentioned that the commission would probably, sooner or later, recommend a feeding station for Pittsfield. A feeding station is established by the state government and when there are more fry than can be handled or developed into fingerlings at the present hatcheries, it is the commissioner's intent to locate these feeding stations in different parts of the state, where the surplus fry can be sent and raised to fingerlings and then distributed in the fall from these stations. The first year that the Pittsfield club was organized it tried out a similar idea; rented a pond to develop its allotment of fry to fingerlings, but through lack of experience, funds and a properly constituted pond the efforts were not wholly a success. This year the club has applied only for fingerlings, believing that better results can be obtained.

As has been stated, the club movement was started in 1909, a few local sportsmen believing it was the only way to develop angling in Berkshire county. The organization was made as much with the idea of aiding the state commissioners and local fish and game wardens as to antagonize hogfishness, snares, traps and pothunting. It developed soon after organization of the club, which had members in almost every city and town in the country, that better results were organized in these respective cities and towns. The result has been the organization of such clubs in North Adams, Dalton, Lee and Becket, and clubs to be organized in Great Barrington and Hancock next season. The Pittsfield organization is the father club of them all and is always glad to lend all assistance possible to the different clubs to help them in their efforts to better conditions in their respective districts.

The present officers are: President, C. R. St. James; secretary, Lyndon Coleman, and treasurer, Edson Bonney, who has held this office since the club's organization. These men and a few more live wires form the real club, the others being of the kind that contribute and sit around and watch others do the work, not because they are not welcome, for the live ones gladly welcome co-operation of the true and sincere kind, but because they do not see fit to devote extra time to the work. The live ones have not contented themselves with fish stocking, despite the club's name. Mongolian pheasants have been loosed, and it is not an uncommon occurrence to flush these birds when in the woods. Canadian rabbits are also receiving their attention, and it is the intent of the club to secure some of these species from Maine and let them loose in suitable places with an idea of having an animal that stays above ground when the hounds take to its trail.

Deer are given protection as far as advocacy of protecting laws may be helpful. The club hopes to increase its membership in years to come so that when it sends a request to a legislator at Boston or at Washington it can rest secure that that legislator will take into consideration that he has 400 or 500 voters interested in that request, in his district, and the granting of it will be beneficial to him.

The underlying motive of the club is true sportsmanship. "Fish and hunt each day so that you can look any game warden in the eye and tell him to search you." That is what the Pittsfield anglers' club means to each and every member of it, and living up to this idea means that no member's conscience will ever be troubled for having kept a short trout, for having bagged more squirrels or partridges than the law allows, and for having fished or hunted out of season. It means that fish and game are given a chance to propagate, and it all leads to the same thing—making a fish and game paradise of Berkshire county.—Springfield Republican.

FUR FARMING

Many people hereabouts are becoming interested in the announcements of the Maine Fur Ranching Co., whose address is West Rockport. The story of the industry of fox raising has been interestingly told in these columns.

"So far as the climate of Maine is concerned there can be no doubt of its suitability for fox raising," writes J. L. McPherson, secretary of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, and he adds: "Your average winter temperature is somewhat above zero, and is certainly colder than Middleton Island, off the south coast of Alaska, in mid-ocean, and the Prybiloff Islands in Behring Sea, where the industry has been successfully pursued for years."

It is interesting to know that the Maine climate is so much like that of Alaska. It is another convincing argument in favor of the spot at West Rockport which the management have selected for their Knox county farm. They are receiving many inquiries from people who have read their announcements.—Courier Gazette.

great deal. Austin has ridden him once or twice, but has not seemed to extract much pleasure therefrom. He says that Silver's gait is not exactly suited to a man of his years, and the last time he came home from a ride, vowed he would not get on the horse again, so I have had to ask Robert to take him out for a daily canter since then.

Just the other day I received a most interesting letter from Mrs. Woodhouse. You know, dear, you've often heard me speak of her. She tells me that her son, Peter, is up somewhere in Canada on a canoe trip and that he expects to come through into the States by way of Kennebecago. It would be nice if you and Uncle should meet him.

Of course, you have never met any of the Woodhouse family, but Kate Woodhouse was one of my best friends in my girlhood days here before the war. I have corresponded with her regularly for years and it would be a great pleasure to me if you could meet her boy. I have never seen him but his mother tells me that he is the image of his father in looks and disposition, and that is enough recommendation for me. You know John Woodhouse, Peter's father, was quartered here during the war of the Rebellion, and he endeared himself to us all, rabid Yankee though he was. It was an awful wrench for me when Kate fell in love with him, because the thought of her marrying and leaving Richmond was something that none of us could bring ourselves to think about. We all felt, though, that we would rather have her marry John Woodhouse than any other Northerner we knew, so it was not as bad as folks made it out to be, but any Union between the North and South in those troublous times was cause for high feeling. When they were married, I was her maid of honor, and right after the wedding, John's regiment was ordered away and I never saw either of them again. Soon after Peter was born, his father died and Kate brought the boy up in the North as she felt his father would have wanted him brought up. He's a young man now, almost thirty years of age I believe and it would be a strange and pleasant coincidence if you should run across him up there in the woods of Maine.

If you see him Diana, please give him my compliments and tell him that I hope to see him here in Richmond some day before I die. His mother has always shunned this place on account of a sentiment about it I suppose, and though I've urged her time and again to come and visit us, she has always refused. See if you cannot get young Peter to prevail upon her to come.

Austin is calling me and says that they want to start a new chapter, so I must close this letter. We all wish you lots and lots of good luck at fishing and do be careful of yourself up in that wild country.

Your devoted aunt,
"Agatha."

R. H. Preble of Phillips, Maine, has entered into the Merchants' and Manufacturers' campaign in the Portland
Press and has named North Franklin Grange of Phillips as the organization to be benefitted by the votes which he will receive individually. If the Grange wins first prize it will receive $1,000 cash; second prize $500; third $300. For example, a label from a can of the brand of tomatoes featured in the campaign that retails for 15 cents is good for 150 votes. Everyone begin to save labels and help the Grange.

Friends in Franklin county as well as all over the world are pained to learn of the death of Madame Lillian Nordica, which occurred at Batavia on the Island of Java, Sunday even-

amusing stories and pledging to the Republican party which had always been his party not only his best efforts during the campaign but his best services to his constituency
if elected.

D. R. Ross, esq., of Phillips responded to the call of the party in his usual forceful and graceful way setting forth the well known fact that the Roosevelt vote of 1912 was largely cast by Republicans who were voting for their political ideal, Republicans who did not give up their allegiance or their belief in, the principles of Republicanism and that notwithstanding the claim of the Progressive leaders, experience in other communities of State and Nation is daily showing that the strength of the Roosevelt vote in 1912 would be no gauge of the size of the Progressive vote in the coming election.

Whiting L. Butler, esq., of Farmington, one of the candidates for Senator spoke briefly of the political conditions prevailing to-day and called attention to the fact that Republican stock was daily going higher and told of an incident which happened on a train last week upon which were two of the prominent Progressive leaders in the State.
Their conversation was overheard and so we were enabled to get a line on what these leaders actually believed to be the condition when talking to each other, namely, that the third party was losing ground every day and had come to the point where even the hope of turning the State over to the Democrats was being wiped out.

Harry F. Beedy, esq., of Phillips expressed his sympathy for the Democratic party not only on account of its many blunders of the past but because of the blundering policy of their national administration. He said he could see no reason for men of sound sense leaving a party with the great record of accomplishment behind it and a party whose prospects for the future were so brilliant, for a party based solely on high sounding theories but which never had accomplished anything yet except to cause a breach in the only party which stood for sound political principles in State and Nation.

Hon. Joel Wilbur of Avon one of the old war horses of the party made one of his vigorous and characteristic speeches in which he said that at his age he only asked peace and comfort, that he still found it within the ranks of his party and that the only way for the people at large to have peace and comfort was by putting the Republican party in charge both in State and Nation.

J. Blaine Morrison, esq., Republican candidate for county attorney made a rattling good speech in which he set forth the soundness of his party's principles and the hollowness of many protestations of those who had formerly been Republicans and he closed by prophecying that the grave which the third party boasts of having dug for their former Republican friends would in September be filled with Bull Moose horns and Asses' collars.

Hon. H. B. Austin was the last of the local speakers. He expressed the appreciation which the town committee and the Republicans of Phillips felt towards those guests of the evening who had traveled from distant parts of the state and who, though busy men of affairs, had taken nearly two days' time to come to us, bearing messages of encouragement
and inspiration in this campaign.
He also expressed the thanks of the committee to the ladies of the Grange who had furnished and well served the excellent supper, for while a baked bean supper had been ordered, in the goodness of their hearts these ladies had furnished a banquet. Among other things he called attention to the claim that the Republican party has stolen the principles of the Progressive party, setting forth the fact that the platform of the Republican State convention at Bangor in 1912 was one of the most progressive platforms ever written and that this platform adopted as it was before the advent of the Progressive party not only could be, but was used, as the basis of the Progressive party's platform in this State to-day, that the only noticeable addition which has been made to that platform was the principle of the recall of judicial decisions concerning which the Progressive Statesmen of to-day in Maine have very little to say. He closed with a personal appeal to each Republican present to constitute himself a committee of one to go out among his neighbors and talk Republicanism to them, in as much as there was no possible doubt but that the sound common sense of the people in Maine would prompt them to put the administration of affairs in the hands of that party which not only stands for civic betterment to-day, but which has a most brilliant record for sound and progressive legislation in the past.

The Chairman next introduced Hon.
Harold M. Sewall of Bath, who, he said needed no introduction to the people of North Franklin, many of his boyhood days having been past on the rugged foothills of Mt. Blue.
We very much regret that lack of space prevents us at this late hour from giving an extended synopsis of Mr. Sewall's eloquent speech, a speech which held the large audience spell bound for nearly an hour and which dealt very largely in the issues which are confronting the nation to-day. We venture to say that no person left the hall last night who was not fully convinced that in Mr. Sewall the second district of Maine has a candidate to represent them in Washington whose thorough and intelligent knowledge of these vexing questions and whose eloquent and forceful manner would place him at once among the leaders in Congress.

That live wire from Bangor, Col.
Parkhurst, then made one of the best, if not the best, short speeches ever listened to here. He convinced the audience at the very opening, of his intelligence, his energy and his enthusiasm and all regretted that the lateness of the hour prevented him from talking for a much longer time. It is a matter of deep congratulation that the affairs of the State committee are in the hands of a man who brings to his work so much enthusiasm, energy and systematic effort.

Gov. Haines closed the speaking of the evening and not withstanding the lateness of the hour the Governor held the strict attention of his audience throughout. As is usual with all of Governor Haines' addresses it was plainly spoken, frank and convincing, dealing mainly with state issues. He explained at length some of the important legislation he had promised to recommend if elected two years ago, he showed fully how well these promises had been carried out, explained the public utilities act, the high way law in a manner which could not help making the purposes of these laws understood by every voter, and he appealed to the voters not personally but setting forth the fact clearly and forcibly that he was simply an agent elected to carry out the provisions of the constitution and the statutes of Maine and if re-elected he proposed, notwithstanding the complaints of any class or community, to see that these laws were carried out by the officers of the state and county to the best of his ability. The general opinion was that Governor Haines' address was one of the fairest and most convincing political arguments ever delivered here.

It was a great meeting.

MISS SARAH HODGE

From the Revere (Mass) Journal, we copy the following regarding Miss Hodge whose death we mentioned last week:

"The funeral of Miss Sarah Hodge was held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Burton A. Hodge, 76 Arlington avenue, Revere, on Sunday, April 26, the burial being at Woodlawn cemetery.

Miss Hodge was born in Lowell, May 6, 1897, but, coming to Revere at an early age, she attended the public schools here, her last attendance being at the Wolcott schools a late as last November, when she became ill. She was especially interested in the study of music for which she possessed decided talent and which was being carefully cultivated.

Possessed of a singularly beautiful yet strong character, endowed with a love for the finer, better things of life, gentle, modest, always thoughtful for the comfort and happiness of others, she early endeared herself to a great circle of friends, as was shown by their solicitude during her illness, the large numbers at the funeral, and their many floral tributes. Among the relatives assembled were those from Washington, D. C., Montreal, Canada, from the State Normal School, Plymouth, N. H., from Maine and from many other places at a distance, all of which attest the high esteem in which this loved one was held.

The father, mother and brothers mourn the loss of the gentle spirit from their home but find comfort in the thought that her suffering is over and she is peacefully at rest."

action in that body. On the part of the Senate there were appointed, Herbert S. Wing of Franklin, chairman; Leslie Boynton, Lincoln; Charles M. Conant, Waldo; and Representatives Lauren M. Sanborn, Portland; secretary, Martin L. Durgin, Milo; Aaron A. Putnam, Houlton; Wm. H. Mitchell, Newport. The following hearings by the committee have now been appointed: Portland May 12; Alfred May 14; Auburn May 26; Bath May 28; South Paris June 2; Farmington June 4. The committee is non partisan and its findings in all particulars will be reported to the succeeding Legislature where they will form a basis for action in adopting a uniform and equitable schedule for all fees and salaries governed by that body. It was shown by Gov. Haines in his veto message to the bill fixing the salary of the judge of the Superior Court of Kennebec County that a per cent. of increase on all officers' at the rate asked for in that bill would raise the state pay roll from $500,000 to $780,000. Thus was seen the importance of fullest information which this Committee is expected to provide.

DEATH OF CAMP OWNER

James Henry Harlow died at his home in Dead River Monday, May 4, aged 80 years, having been in failing health for two years. He was a native of Embden. At Lincoln's first call for 75000 volunteers he was one of the first to enlist in the 2nd Maine Regiment which did more actual fighting than any other state regiment. He was in every engagement the regiment was in except the first Bull Run fight. He was with Sheridan in the Shenandoah valley and went through the Wilderness campaign with Grant. He was twice wounded and came North on furloughs, speedily returning. Served during the whole four years of the war and was under arms when Lee surrendered at Appomattox. About ten years after the close of the war he settled on Dead River on the homestead known in recent years as the Ledge House. Mr. Harlow's record as a citizen has been an honorable one, truth and integrity have characterized his relations with his fellow men. Of the immediate family he leaves a widow, Mrs. M. M. Harlow, three sons, James of Lewiston, Hervey proprietor of the Ledge House, and Herman of Dead River, and two daughters, Mrs. George Woodcock of Carabasset and Mrs. George Bemis of Woodstock, New Hampshire. The funeral services occurred Wednesday, May 6, at 1 o'clock a. m., Rev. Anna P. Bailey of Kingfield officiating. Mrs. Bailey paid a handsome and just tribute to Mr. Harlow as a citizen and as a soldier. Mr. Harlow was buried in the family lot at Flagstaff. By a singular coincidence the funeral occurred on the fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of the Wilderness in which Mr. Harlow served. The stars and stripes were draped across the casket which was covered with many beautiful flowers. D. C. Durrell was funeral director. All the relatives were present excepting one son from Lewiston.

HELPING BIRDS BUILD NESTS

Little Bits of Material Left in Convenient Places Often Prove Great Aid.

People who have had experience in house building know that it is as much trouble and worry to gather the building material as it is to construct the house. So it is in nest building. Birds spend as much time hunting for nesting materials as they do in constructing the nest. The rapidity with which birds build their nests depends first upon whether both birds work; second, the energy of the workmen; third, the abundance and proximity of the nesting material to the nest site, and, fourth, the kind of a nest to be built. With some species of birds both male and female work. The various species of orioles and vireos, that make hanging nests, are much longer in building than are robins, chipping sparrows and song sparrows. The former require from 10 days to two weeks, while the latter can finish a nest in a week or 10 days, and even in less time if they are thrifty birds, says Outdoor World and Recreation.

The wrens as a family are very energetic. The male house wren, which arrives from the South several days prior to its mate, begins building immediately, so by the time she has arrived he has the outside bulky part completed, and the two finish the nest in short time. Even after the nest is completed and the female has laid the eggs and is incubating them, her mate will busy himself by building one or two extra nests in near-by trees. For several years my sister has been supplying the birds with nesting material and we find that the birds to take advantage of the opportunity are robins, orioles, phoebes, wood pewees, house wrens, least flycatchers, red-eyed vireos, warbling vireos, yellow-throated vireos, song sparrows, chipping sparrows and yellow warblers.

In order to lessen the danger of the birds hanging themselves, which they sometimes do, by tangling their feet in a bit of twine or cloth and then catching it in the limbs, my sister cuts the twine and narrow strips of cloth into lengths of five inches, and spreads them over the ground. Robins use strips of cloth for the outside of the nest, and one that built in an apple tree, near our house, would fly to the ground and crowd her beak so full of rags that on facing about her head could not be seen, and one wondered that she could see to fly.

A Baltimore oriole returned at intervals of about five minutes to pull horse hairs from a bundle that had been tied to the limbs of a lilac bush, and during its absence chipping sparrows, song sparrows and a phoebe were busy carrying them away to be used for the lining of their nests. Song sparrows and chipping sparrows are more likely to find horse hair if it is spread out on the walk where they can see it, for being more or less ground birds naturally they look on the ground for nesting material.

Downy chicken feathers scattered on the ground will be taken by many species of birds, and a bunch of cotton tied to a clothes line or placed in the branches of a tree or bush is a great treat. Vireos, wood pewees, and least flycatchers use it in limited quantities, but yellow warblers are very partial to it. A yellow warbler's nest I know was constructed almost entirely of cotton furnished in this way. After once discovering the cotton, the bird visited it at the rate of four trips each five minutes and in four days had completed the nest, although only the female worked. The following year the same warbler returned from the South and commenced building a nest within a foot of where the other one had been located.

FISH AND GAME COMMISSIONERS PLACING MANY PERCH AND OTHER FISH IN PONDS AT PRESENT.

The Massachusetts State commissioners of fisheries and game have begun carrying out an extensive program of stocking streams and lakes with food fish, and a large number of the places to receive these fish are located in Western Massachusetts. Already 8,000,000 yellow perch have been sent out from the Palmer hatchery and distributed in numerous ponds, and 15,000,000 wall-eyed pike are now being hatched and will be sent out as soon as they are ready.

One of the most interesting plans the commissioners have in mind is the placing of salmon in some of the lakes that seem well suited to their development. As a preliminary it will be necessary to put in a quantity of smelt, which breed very rapidly and would furnish an adequate food supply for salmon. There are great quantities of smelt in Onota lake at Pittsfield which have recently been running up the streams from the lake in such schools as are rarely encountered even by those familiar with this fish. A number of cans of these have during the past week been transferred to the Belchertown ponds, and in the fall it is probable that a number of salmon will be placed in these ponds. The salmon put in will be of sufficient size to care for themselves, so that there will be little danger of pickeral and other fish eating them up. It is necessary in whatever ponds salmon are placed to place a screen at the outlet, otherwise the salmon would soon start for the sea. The commissioners will give attention to some other Western Massachusetts ponds with the idea of locating ponds where a trail can be made of stocking with these fish.

The commissioners will soon have about 20,000,000 white perch hatched, and these also will be taken to various ponds in all parts of the state. A number of the wall-eyed pike will be placed in the Connecticut river. Some of these fish are already being caught in the river near Turners Falls, where some of them were planted several years ago, and it is expected to produce good fishing in the lower river by placing these fish there.

FSHERMEN WERE REWARDED

From reports received recently it is evident that those fishermen who cast their luck, and incidentally their lines, at Maranacook, were rewarded. Among the successful Augusta fishermen were Henry Thyng, who landed three beauties, and Nat Johnson, who landed one. At Cobosseecontee Charles P. Kinsman had his usual good luck and captured a fine trout, while Mrs. Don A. H. Powers of Houlton captured a trout which weighed five pounds, which is said to have been the largest trout taken from the lake by a lady this spring.

MAINE CRACK SHOT TO APPEAR

William G. Hill, of Portland, Hits Peas in Midair and Sighting Through Mirrors Breaks Moving Targets.

In the State of Maine, where every third man is a hunter and a marksman, crowds always throng to the shoots at which Wm. G. Hill of Portland is to appear. The Maine "crack shot" has built up this reputation by his wonderful feats with firearms of every description. In all exhibitions Mr. Hill uses Remington-UMC arms and ammunition, believing that this combination insures best results in his work. In the swift handling called for in many of his "stunts," Mr. Hill is unequalled by any shot in the land.

Firing a .22 Remington Repeating rifle he will hit, before they reach the ground, empty cartridges ejected from the same rifle—thrown objects as small as beans, peas, No. 4 or 5 shot; in fact, any target that can be seen in the air.

Using a .35 cal. H. P. Remington Autoloading rifle he shoots at five oranges flung into the air at one time, and before they reach the ground, smashes them all.

Shooting a Remington pump gun he ejects from it two empty shells and after hitting a target thrown at the same time, drives both empties out of sight before they reach the ground. Mr. Hill's remarkable deftness and the easily handled action of the Remington pump gun make an ideal combination for this feat.

Three objects thrown at once are broken with the same gun turned upside down. And the trick is repeated with the high power Remington Autoloading rifle held similarly. Shooting the Remington high power slide action rifle, four eggs thrown at the same time are broken in mid-air. He performs, too, all sorts of double mirror feats with rifle and pistol.

Mr. Hill, who is shortly to give the sportsmen of this section an opportunity to see him in action, has written to friends here that he will then try out some new and hitherto unperformed feats for the benefit of the local shooting enthusiasts.

ABOUT LICENSING THE CAT.

The fight that is being carried on in the Legislature in Massachusetts, to pass a bill providing that all cats must be licensed has more than a little in its favor. The primary object of the movement is of course to protect the birds. As far as the side of bird protection goes, there is nothing to be argued. Everyone who thinks at all believes that the birds should be protected to the utmost. There are a thousand reasons why. There is the reason of song, the reason of beauty, the utilitarian reason that sees in our birds the greatest antidote for insect pests of every sort, and then there is the humanitarian reason, the greatest of all. Having the birds in the existing order of things it is decidedly a duty for the human section of the animal world to do what it can to help them thrive. What right man has to exterminate animals disagreeable to him is hard to determine. For him to damage or destroy forms of animal life which are quite the opposite of disagreeable is somewhat more than criminal.

One may ask where the cat comes in, and wonder why the cat is not entitled to the same consideration as the man. The answer to this is that the cat of our cities is not a natural creature, but a result of the tastes and whims of man. Man domesticated the cat and are responsible for it. If any family wants a cat there is nothing to be said against it. Keep the cat by all means, but assume the responsibility for it. If your cat is not worth a petty annual license fee it is certainly not equal in value to the one or six or a dozen song birds it may claw down in the course of a summer. There is no disrespect to the cat intended, but it must not have the privilege of killing the birds for the sake of the meal he could get just as easily, off the home saucer or just for the satisfaction of giving vent to some unsuppressed instinct that has come down to him from old saber tooth and his kindred.

BROWN TAILS DYING OUT

A well-known lumberman of Massachusetts, who often visits Bath was here to-day and informs the Times that he has made all through the winter a study of the brown tail moth nests in the woods of Maine between Brunswick and Bath and has decided that the brown-tail moths are actually dying out.

The ordinary nest at this time of year should contain about 500 worms and in the nests he has examined in this vicinity, he has found most of the worms dead and an average of only 25 to the nest. At his home within 15 miles of Boston, he has not a single nest on his trees. In Eastern Massachusetts the pest has practically disappeared.

The forester stated that either the parasite or a fungus growth had killed and was killing the brown-tails. Last year the parasites were found by investigators to be getting in their work. This year the probabilities are that the parasites have so greatly increased that they will overcome the pest.

In the section examined by them two men on the trees between Brunswick and Wiscasset, at any rate the nests are filled with dead worms in almost every case. Burning of the nests destroys both the pest and the parasite.—Portland Press.

The same conditions as noted above have come under the observation of several in Phillips. Arthur Shepard has found several large nests and on examination found that the worms were all dead.

RALPH L. SPOTTS WINS AMATEUR TRAP SHOOTING CHAMPIONSHIP OF U. S.

Mr. Spotts not only won the championship, but broke the record for the shoot with 18 out of a possible 200 targets, shooting 100 shells throughout. Mr. Spotts won the Preliminary shoot on Monday. This was another record, as it was the first time in the history of the event that the same gunner had won both shoots.

The new champion has been shooting for about six years and this is the third year that he has tried for national honors. In 1913, Mr. Spotts, who was a member of the American Olympic Team in 1912, captured the preliminary shoot and finished third in the championship event.

THAT "TIRED FEELING"

Is Often Unnatural.

An extra hard day's work may tire you. But if the close of every day finds you worn and weary—your system needs a TONIC.

"L. F." Atwood's Medicine taken daily, drives away that "tired feeling." It has helped New England folks earn the name of being "tireless workers," and Mrs. Brown's letter tells why it has become their favorite tonic. West Farmington, Me.:

"As my mother, Mrs. Smith, is writing in praise of your 'L. F.' Atwood's Medicine, I, too, would like to tell you that I think it one of the best household remedies. I consider it one of the best tonics on the market."

"FUR FARMING"

THE REARING OF VALUABLE FUR BEARING ANIMALS IN CAPTIVITY
Introduction of a New Industry that will mean Increased Revenue for the State of Maine an Industry in which Nature Pays the dividends.

A "BACK TO THE SOIL" PROPOSITION

Which has been brought to perfection in the Maritime Provinces, yielding Five Millions in dividends last year---the lowest dividend of any Fur Farm being Twenty Per Cent---From Govt. Statistics.

An enterprise for which the climate, soil and water supply of Maine is particularly well adapted---An enterprise which once firmly established here, will bring more outside capital to Maine than any other single enterprise.

N.B.---In the past two years Twelve Million Dollars have been added to the wealth of P. E. Island, Canada, money for investment in its Fur Farming enterprises coming from all over North America, England and even Japan.

Prediction is freely made by high authorities that, wonderful as have been the results of Fur Farming in P. E. Island, they will be exceeded in Maine.

Answers to Questions concerning the MAINE FUR RANCHING COMPANY at West Rockport, which have been asked as a result of the Company's recent announcements in Maine Woods.

A Litter of Four Silver Black Foxes Valued at Thirty Thousand Dollars

SOURCE OF REVENUE

Ques. What are the sources of revenue of a Fur Farm or Silver Black Fox Ranch?

Ans. The profits are derived from two sources: 1st---the sale of the Silver fox pelts, which bring from fifteen hundred to twenty-five hundred dollars per pelt, the demand being greatly in excess of the supply. 2nd---The sale of the Silver Black Foxes for breeding purposes at twelve thousand dollars per pair for pups, twenty thousand per pair for full grown, choice stock, and thirty thousand per pair for prize breeders. So great is the demand for five Silver Black Foxes that this year's yield of young foxes from the fur farms was eagerly bought up months before they were born.

Ques. Since the business of fur farming has proven so profitable, won't it soon be overdone?

Ans. The total yearly production of raw fur pelts is valued at above one hundred millions and the users pay about three hundred and fifty millions yearly for manufactured furs. The supply of furs taken from the wilds is rapidly and permanently diminishing and the demand is rapidly and permanently increasing---having advanced for an average of all fur bearers more than two hundred per cent in the last decade.

THE HAZARD

Ques. What risks do investors in fur farms run? Is the business hazardous or speculative?

Ans. With five pairs of Silver Black Foxes the risk is reduced to a minimum. The fox is a particularly hardy animal and his health improves in captivity. Although the industry now involves many millions of dollars any serious losses have yet to be recorded.

A FREAK OR NOT

Ques. I am interested from an investment standpoint in fur farming but have been told that the Silver Black Fox is a freak of nature, and that its young may not be black. Is this true?

Ans. No. The Black or Silver Fox may have been a freak or "sport" originally but the animals in question are the product of the years of breeding in captivity and by selection and elimination a distinct type of Silver Black Fox has been evolved which always produces black progeny.

Mirror Lake, West Rockport, Where New Fur Farm is Located

PROBABLE DIVIDENDS

Ques. What dividends will the Maine Fur Ranching Co., probably pay?

Ans. The Maine Fur Ranching Co., will have at Mirror Lake five pairs of the highest grade Silver Black Foxes and should each pair raise a litter of three which is a conservative average indeed, the company would have fifteen young Silver Foxes for sale. At this writing these young foxes can be optioned at twelve thousand dollars a pair or ninety thousand dollars for the fifteen.

This would enable the company to pay a dividend of about ninety per cent, which large dividends are not at all uncommon among the Provincial fur farming. In the opinion of those who have made the subject a study there will be a demand for the breeding animals for the next ten years at present or even higher prices.

FUR FARMING PUBLICATIONS

Ques. Are there any publications on

Fur Farming that I can obtain?

Ans. Yes, several.

1. "Fur Farming in Canada," by Prof. J. Walter Jones, Government expert on Furs at Ottawa, Canada, formerly of United States Department of Agriculture.
2. "Silver Fox Raising," Bulletin No. 28, Farmers' Series, Division of Publications, Washington, D. C.

The Ranch Maine an Ideal Location

The Maine Fur Ranching Company has selected a location for its ranch at Mirror Lake, West Rockport, Maine, and has contracted for five pairs of the highest grade silver black foxes. The six acre ranch is covered with a fine growth of birch, maple and pine and is a natural habitat for foxes. Although the fur-bearers will be reared in wire pens, conditions practically approaching the natural state of the animals will prevail.

Every possible contrivance, convenience and safety device known will be incorporated in this property. The site selected is most sanitary from every standpoint, the arrangements and construction most modern, and all the latest safety alarms, burglar and thief proof devices known will be installed.

The Hon. Charles Dalton, Pioneer Rancher of the Dominion of Canada, states emphatically that the silver black fox ranch which he has conducted in Maine for several years has produced results that rival the widely heralded results of his Canadian ranches.

The Managing Director of the Company who has spent the past year upon the most famous ranches of the United States and Canada, learning the business in all its details, will be in charge of the Ranch.

FLY ROD'S NOTE BOOK

By Fly Rod

St. Anthony's Cottage, Phillips, Me. May 5, 1914.

While the Maine Woods readers are waiting for the ice to go out, and letters are coming from many old friends asking for people as well as facts I'll copy from some of the letters that have added much to the pleasure of life during the past week. My mail that was waiting my home coming told me that a wedding of interest occurred at "The Little Church Around the Corner" in New York on Saturday, March 28, when two well known, popular young people, guests of the Mountain View House were married and we copy the following from the New York Sunday Times of March 29.

"The wedding of Miss Ethel E. Curtis, daughter of Mrs. Charles Prentice Curtis and the late Mr. Curtis, of Trenton, N. J., to William Lilly, of Lambertville, N. J., took place yesterday at the Church of the Transfiguration. Rev. Hamilton Schuyler, rector of Trinity Church, Trenton, officiated, assisted by the Rev. Dr. George C. Houghton.

Miss Beth Curtis was her sister's only attendant. Horace Griggs Prall was Mr. Lilly's best man. Owing to the recent death of the bride's father, the wedding was quiet.

The couple had known each other since they were children, and their marriage was the result of a romance that began when they were playmate at school.

The bride is a graduate of both the State Model and Normal Schools at Trenton, and is a member of the Philamathian Society and the Contemporary Club of that city, and of the association opposed to woman suffrage. Her father was a well known railroad man.

Mr. Lilly's father is a retired lawyer. His grandfather, the late Dr. Samuel Lilly, was Consul General to British India under President Buchanan, and was the first Mayor of Lambertville. He was also a member of the Thirty-third Congress, and for several years prior to his death was one of the lay Judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals in New Jersey. Mr. Lilly is a graduate of Harvard University, class of 1907, and the Harvard Law School, class of 1910. He belongs to the Sons of the Revolution, being a descendant of Thomas Dey, for whose family Dey street in New York took its name.

Mr. Lilly and his bride are now on their honeymoon and spending some time at the Chalfont, Atlantic City. They will make their home at 357 Sterling Place, Brooklyn."

The best wishes of a host of friends who come to the Rangeleys, and congratulations are extended for a long and happy married life.

From Palace Hotel, Rome a letter has just reached me from Mr. E. Ledelley of New York, who with his wife has spent many summers at the Rangeley Lake House, where they added much to the social life and Mr. Ledelley distinguished himself as an angler, and his name telling of the record fish caught was often on the hotel "Fish Record" and the fish as big as any other fisherman recorded. Mrs. Ledelley sent me a gift that I prize very much, a rosary, blessed by the Pope. Mr. Ledelley wrote: "We will not be in Rangeley this summer as we will be travelling on the continent until October. We have been in Rome seven weeks and we certainly have done some sightseeing. Mrs. Ledelley has visited every church here and I can assure you that that is a few.

We leave here in a few days for Florence, and from there we go to Milan, Venice, Paris, London and then a trip through Holland to Vienna, Berlin and then to Switzerland, to spend the summer in the Alps (to eat snow balls). We hope the summer at Rangeley will be a prosperous one and as a P. S. he adds "very important. See that the correct weight of the big ones is O. K., as nothing worries me more than false reports. Tell my friend Adams to keep his eye open, 'who watched him?' (Not Adams) but the fish!"

A delightful summer to Mr. and Mrs. Ledelley and may they be among the happy guests at Rangeley Lake House in 1915.

Another letter that recalled happy days and dear old friends long since passed away, was from the leading maker of artificial flies in America, George H. Burtis of Worcester, Mass. All the anglers know of the Burtis rods and flies, and many a gamy trout and salmon has been lured from his home by these beautiful feathered hooks cast for him.

Mr. Burtis wrote: "I have snatched a few moments during the call from labor and opened the window and set free a fly of many colors. If he lights on your outing hat or on the lapel of your coat I trust you will not refuse to let him stay." That is why I wear a gold fish hook so skillfully tied with brilliant bits of plumage from the most beautiful birds that live in the tropics, and I'll take care no salmon sees this tempting fly, but hope the maker will this year come to the Rangeleys for the June fishing.

A letter from my friend Mrs. Eugene Atwood, written from the sunny south where Mr. and Mrs. Atwood spent Easter brought glad news.

Mr. Atwood who for several years has been a great sufferer and nearly blind has recently had a most successful operation on his eyes and now can enjoy all the beauty of Kennebec.

They plan to come as soon as the ice goes out and open their charming home in the wilderness and pass the summer there, and may the days be crowded with happiness for all who have the good fortune to be at "Forestholme."

NEW OFFICE OF CHAIRMAN WILSON

Named as U. S. Marshal—Austin Expected to Fill Former Position of Commissioner.

Hon. John S. P. H. Wilson of Auburn was Monday nominated by President Wilson to be United States Marshal for the district of Maine as successor to Marshal Henry W. Mayo of Hampden. It is understood that Mr. Wilson will take up his new duties as soon as his appointment has been confirmed.

Mr. Wilson has twice been mayor of Auburn, member of the Turner school board, served as Representative in the 75th Maine Legislature, member of the State Democratic committee for six years being chairman four years, served on the Democratic city committee of Auburn and on the town committee of Turner, also on the Androscoggin county Democratic committee and held other offices of trust.

He is also prominent in secret orders including both Masonic and Odd Fellow Lodges. He is a past noble grand of Blake lodge I. O. O. F. of Turner; past district deputy noble grand of the I. O. O. F.; past master of Tranquil Lodge F. and A. M. Auburn; member of Bradford Royal Arch chapter; member of Dunlap Council the Scottish Rites and Lewiston Commandery Knights Templar. He is a 32d degree Mason.

Mr. Wilson, who is now chairman of the Maine Inland Fisheries and Game Commission, is well known in all parts of the State. For many years he has held a prominent place in Maine politics and only a few weeks ago retired as chairman of the Democratic State Committee. During the campaign of 1910 he took the stump for Gov. Plaisted and otherwise gave substantial aid during the campaign.

He has given a splendid administration in his present office and has accomplished much in the right direction, say those who are in a position to know.

It is hoped and expected that Governor Haines will appoint Hon. H. B. Austin of Phillips for chairman of the Inland Fisheries and Game. Mr. Austin is a candidate for the office and has a large following throughout the state and is acknowledged to be well qualified for that position. Chairman Wilson's term will expire in July 1914, but his appointment as U. S. Marshal will undoubtedly be confirmed before that time and the appointment of the chairman of Inland Fisheries and Game be made.

ENTHUSIASTIC CONVENTION

life of the people of these United States. The so-called Republican convention in Chicago, in June, 1912, is history. Voters throughout the country, no matter what their past political affiliations, are waiting to be assured that we mean business and are not engaged solely in a political game.

Our party duty in Maine rises much above and extends far beyond the election of any set of men in this state.

The recall of elective executive officials has a direct bearing on the prohibitory law and its enforcement. The control of party policy and public officials under the old party system being in the hands of political organization, which system the Progressive party oppose, has given rise in a large degree to the enforcement of the prohibitory law on the basis only of its political expediency. If we had today recall of elective executive officials the state would not be facing the necessity of turmoil during a session of the Legislature, or the need of a special session of the Legislature at present in order that state-wide, uniform enforcement might be a fact.

Now I am not opposed to or hostile to big business. I want the railroad companies in this State to have fair treatment. Their prosperity and development goes hand in hand with the prosperity of our State, but I always have been and am now earnestly opposed to the proposition that any creation of the State, of whatever size, is superior to its creator, the State Government.

The Maine Central Railroad in this State in particular is demanding a radical increase in freight and passenger rates. They insist it is necessary in order that the corporation may be guaranteed the ability to pay at least six per cent dividends. I contend, if this is to be considered, that before being permitted by the people of the State to increase charges, railroads must openly, honestly and fully disclose their past and present business methods.

Summed up, our contention is that neither management of a public service corporation nor its stockholders are entitled to be considered first or wholly in an adjustment of freight or passenger charges.

The real issue in the whole country is, shall the people control our government? The Progressive party offers the only national solution of this question and is the instrumentality through which privilege and class control will be overcome.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, the all wise Ruler has seen fit to remove from James E. Cushman Post No. 87, G. A. R. a valued member and Comrade, F. B. Sweetser, Therefore, Resolved, that in the death of Comrade F. B. Sweetser the Post has lost an active member, the community a loyal citizen and the family of the deceased a kind husband and father.

Resolved, that in token of our respect for the memory of our Comrade our Charter be draped in mourning for thirty days, these Resolutions spread upon the records of the Post, inserted in the Maine Woods and a copy forwarded to the family of our Comrade.

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM H. H. SMALL

William H. H. Small was born in Fayette, Maine, June 28, 1840, and died in Kingfield, May 7, 1914. He was the seventh child in a family of ten children born to James and Elvira Latham Small. These parents were of the sturdy English and Scotch-Irish stock whose ancestry has been traced through the Smalls back to King John of England and through the Lathams to the House of Douglas one of the old Scottish tribes or clans.

At the age of nine his parents moved to E township, now a part of Madrid, where they "took up" land and built a house comparatively in the wilderness. Schools were scarce and when a boy could read, write, and cipher to the rule of three, his education was completed and he took a man's place at clearing land and other hard work as was necessary for the early pioneers. Such was the early training of Mr. Small.

He bought the last years of his minority of his father and came to Kingfield, where he married Mary Ellen Dolber, daughter of the late Col. William Dolber. To them were born seven sons, five of whom grew to manhood. They are W. W. Small, trustee at the Franklin County jail; Fred O. Small, attorney-at-law, Springfield, Missouri; W. B. Small, Sheriff of Franklin County; Dr. Harry L. Small who died several years ago; and Guy O. Small, electrical engineer with the General Electric Company of Lynn, Mass.

Mr. Small settled on a farm in Kingfield where his eldest son was born. He lived on the farm until he went into the army when he moved his family to the village where they remained till the war was over. He was drafted July 15, 1863 and left for Washington August 14. He joined Company B of the 19th Maine regiment and October 14 he engaged in his first battle at Bristoe Station where he was wounded in his right leg. One cord was severed and the bone grazed. From lack of care and exposure the wound became infected so there was danger of losing the limb. After gangrene had eaten out the flesh so the cords and bone were exposed it healed but has always bothered him especially in unsettled weather. He was taken to the Lincoln hospital in Washington, afterward transferred to New Haven, Conn., with others to make room for the newly wounded in the coming campaign. He was given a furlough home for thirty days, when he returned to his regiment. He was soon after stricken with typhoid pneumonia. The surgeon (?) would not excuse him from roll call till he was too sick to stand. At this time Captain David Parsons afterward Major Parsons returned from his furlough home. The writer has been told that that was the only time he was ever known to swear, but when he learned of the treatment of Mr. Small the attending doctor was called to account in strong terms. The Captain had Mr. Small sent to the Emory hospital in Washington where he recovered and joined his Company for the summer campaign following the battle of the Wilderness which was fought while he was in the hospital.

He was in some of the hardest fought battles at the close of the war including Bristoe Station, Po River, North Anna, Totopotomoy, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Deep Bottom, Strawberry Plain, Steam's Station, Boynton Road, Hatcher's Run, Crow House, Weldon Railroad, and Appomattox, besides the smaller battles and skirmishes. At Cold Harbor his blouse was perforated with five bullets, two bullets went through his cap, and after retreat was ordered the straps of his canteen were shot off. He jumped back and secured that as it was necessary to preserve his life.

Letters received by his wife during his life in the army show that he was one of the few men who was selected for dangerous journeys when occasion called for such men.

Near the close of the war Mr. Small was transferred to the first Maine heavy artillery from which he was discharged in September 1865, at Fort Baker near Washington.

He was commissioned corporal but rejected several promotions that were tendered him for valiant conduct. Of the privations and hunger he endured with others is illustrated by the following: On one raid of three days' duration when they were cut off from supplies they lived on corn the mules had left which they washed and parched. Another time for several days all they had was mouldy hardtack and salt fish that was inhabited by worms in large numbers.

At the time of Lee's surrender his brigade marched thirty-five miles at double-quick without rations. Mr. Small buckled his belt up an inch at a time till he reduced his waist line nine inches. When they were halted a half mile from headquarters thrown into line ready to charge, they heard news of the final victory, which came like a tidal wave, increasing as they went down the line.

When Mr. Small arrived home in September 1865 he was very ill from exposure, malaria and other maladies which have always afflicted him and several times during the past years he has thought to be near the end, from these old army troubles. After recovering his health to some extent he moved to Madrid where he was engaged in farming and lumbering. He removed to Kingfield twenty years ago this spring.

He always felt the defect of his education and did all he could to have his children well educated. He was of a pleasant temperament and always had a word of cheer and never complained when he was able to be on his feet. He always had high ideals of life and set an example for a better life for those with whom he associated. He was a member of James E. Cushman Post, G. A. R. of Phillips and of Grace Universalist church of Kingfield.

He was a kind husband and father, a good neighbor and a brave soldier who has answered to the last great roll call and been gathered home where sickness, pain and suffering are a tan end.

The funeral services were held from Grace Universalist church Sunday afternoon, May 10, at 2 o'clock, the pastor Rev. Anna P. Bailey officiating. All of the sons and their wives were present except Fred Small. Five Grand Army veterans, all there are left in town, were present. They are, G. A. Page, Charles French, Albert Perry, Isaac Durrell, James Wilber. The bearers were Frank Hutchins, Elmer Davis, G. K. Richards, G. A. Page. Music was furnished by the choir, Mrs. Herbert Walker, H. A. Tufts, Mrs. O. W. Simmons, Philip Porter. E. C. Williamson was funeral director. The James E. Cushman Post of which Mr. Small was a member sent a silk flag which was draped across the body. Among the flowers was a pillow of pinks and roses with the word "Father," from the children. Interment was in the family lot in Sunnyside cemetery.

LEVI FARNUM JONES

Phillips, May 11, 1914.

Just beyond the hills on the other side of Mt. Blue, lies our neighboring town of Weld, and on Center Hill, overlooking the sparkling waters of Lake Webb, gleaming shafts of marble and granite mark the site of the "silent city of the dead." A more beautiful spot could not have been selected combining, as it does, the beauty of the water with the majesty of the mountains beyond. Whether summer's sun is gilding Or the snows of winter crown, There's a glory and a grandeur O'er the peaks of Tumbledown.

One feels like quoting from Whit-tier's poem.

"The Grave by the Lake."
"Then the warm sun stooped to make Double sunset in the lake;
While above, I saw with it,
Range on range, the mountains lit;
And the calm and splendor stole,
Like an answer to my soul."

Carved upon the stones in this cemetery are names of many of the pioneer families of Weld.

On Thursday, May 7, another member of one of these old pioneer families was laid to rest in the "churchyard of his native town."

One of his brothers, a namesake of the father settled in Andover, Mass., where he spent a long and useful life.

Three of the brothers served in the Civil War and later, two of these, Gustavus W., and Albert N., entered the ministry.

Two other brothers, Gorham and Thurston after living in Weld for many years moved, one to Massachusetts and the other to Pittsfield, Me. The sister Susan, married Eliab Jones of Weld.

For many years, the subject of this article was engaged in lumbering on Mt. Blue, using the old time heavy ox team to haul the lumber from the place where it was felled to a steep ledge, down which the logs would slide with such force, that the rumble and crash could be heard for miles, oftentimes breaking the logs into pieces.

As a genuine sportsman, a hunter in the true sense of the word he had few equals, and woe unto the Reynard that came within the range of his vision!

When comparatively a young man, he stated as a fact, that he had already slain more foxes than were used by Samson when he destroyed the cornfields and vineyards of the Philistines. His physical endurance was remarkable, and he could probably cover more miles on snow shoes, in a given time, than any

Mr. Jones had a happy, hopeful disposition, ever ready to see the silver lining in every cloud, and to extend the hand of friendship to his fellowmen.

He married Sarah Jane Scamman, daughter of Freeman and Caroline Moore Scamman, who died some thirty or more years ago. To them were born two children, Anna Bell and Mabel Lena. Anna married Warren F. Scamman of Nahant, Mass. She died in 1892 leaving one son, Charles Freemont Scamman.

The other daughter, Mabel is private secretary for the Principal of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.

Quite a number of years ago, Mr. Jones moved from Weld to China, Maine, but at the time of his death he was at the home of Mrs. Georgia Foye, Winslow, where, for several years he had been confined to his bed.

The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Sarah Robinson of Weld. The only grandchild, Charles F. Scamman of Nahant, Mass., was present at the burial services in "God's Acre" on Center Hill.

"I like that ancient Saxon phrase, which calls,
The burial ground God's Acre;
It is just:
It consecrates each grave within
its walls,
And breathes a benison o'er the sleeping dust."

Mrs. Ralph Starbird, Mrs. Charles B. Luce and Mrs. Charles Richards were in Farmington last Friday and attended the May Fair there.

A host of friends of Mrs. Charles Shaw were greatly saddened last week to learn that she had passed away at her home in Middletown, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw lived many years here and were loved and respected by all who knew them. About four years ago they moved to Middletown, where they have since resided. Last fall they made a short visit here with their friends, and although Mrs. Shaw was in poor health her death was a great shock to her many friends. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Shaw and son Harold, who is also very pleasantly remembered by his friends here.

WORK THAT TELLS

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Phillips.

To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate its work. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Phillips. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now give confirmed testimony—declare the results have lasted. How can any Phillips sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Elbridge Dill, farmer, Phillips, Me., says: "I appreciate what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I am glad to confirm my former public endorsement. Doan's Kidney Pills, produced from Cragin's Drug store, (now Preble's Drug store), have kept my kidneys in good working order and have relieved me of the dull ache across the small of my back and trouble with the kidney secretions."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

When you place your order for a piano with a city piano dealer you may make up your mind to this fact that you are paying him from $50 to $100 above the wholesale price of the piano to cover his "SELLING EXPENSE" and they charge you their profit on top of that.
